Army: Mix-up at Arlington Cemetery

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Army investigation has found that potentially hundreds of remains at Arlington National Cemetery have been misidentified or misplaced, in a scandal marring the reputation of the nation's pre-eminent burial ground for its honored dead since the Civil War.

Army Secretary John McHugh announced Thursday that the cemetery's two civilian leaders would be forced to step aside, and he appointed a new chief to conduct a more thorough investigation to examine the graves and sort out the mix-up.

BLAZING THROUGH FIRE SCHOOL

FAIRFIELD — The smoke started to filter through the valley, twisting over the trees and creeping toward the hill where a lone firefighter stood guard.

Her yellow shirt was tucked into fire-resistant green pants. A bright helmet hid her long hair. The large pack around her waist held water, a first-aid kit, a fire shelter and flares. She nodded toward the fires and the rookies hidden in the trees.

"I was nervous my first time out on a fire," said U.S. Bureau of Land Management firefighter Katie Rice. "But I think they are all excited to get some hands-on experience."

Small piles of what Rice called "dead and down stuff" crackled and burned against the strain of the wind. The crew of rookies would move Thursday from the burn piles to two more scenarios set up around the Soldier Mountain Ski Resort north of Fairfield.

It was practice for the real thing. It was a challenge. It was hard.

"Firefighting is truly an arduous job," said Tony Davis, the U.S. Forest Service's coordinator for the rookie firefighter school. "If you are not in shape, you won't make it."

This week's five-day fire school for the Forest Service and BLM is taking place at the Methodist Camp in Fairfield, with 43 rookie firefighters working to join the elites. Thursday's field day included hands-on simulations of a pump station, structure protection training and burning piles.

Earlier, the rookies completed a physical fitness challenge and a pack test to get them ready to hike miles into the forest and wrestle with flames. Each day includes an hour of physical training to keep the staff in shape.

"The hardest part of this whole week has been getting up at 6 a.m. and going for a three-mile run," said Nathan Ormond, an 18-year-old rookie firefighter. "But it helps give us mental awareness as well as keep in shape so we can be safe on the job. It's important to be able to depend on your truck and hand crew."

Down the mountain near the ski lodge, Ormond worked with a crew to learn how to handle the hoses and engine pump for structure protection, a skill imperative to fire operations.

"Alright! Who wants to start?" BLM engine boss Serrah Kibler said while looking at the new crew expectantly.

Ormond stepped up to the line and turned the pump on. The rumble of the engine broke the otherwise quiet of the mountain. A valve opened and water surged through the hose, shooting out of the end like a geyser. The firefighters then watched as the water drenched the trees, waiting for their turn on the hose.

The fire school is broken up into classroom and field experience. "We try to get them out and into the field, as well as get them through the classroom situations," said Ryan Yates, a Forest Service helitack and fire school teacher. "It's a wake-up call for some people but they work really hard."

Communication and teamwork are integral parts of the job. Debriefings and information sessions are held on a regular basis.

"It's a good job. Several hundred people apply for these firefighting spots," BLM fire information officer Brock Astle said. "They look for physical fitness, a strong character, dependability and professionalism."

Astle has been with the BLM for six years. "The excitement brings people back," he said. "That is one thing I like about this job, you get to see these hidden places that you didn't even know existed. It gives you an appreciation for the land."

Inspection site stops boat infested by zebra mussels

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

The power washer hummed as a jet of hot water hit the back of the boat.

Its target: unwelcome visitors to the state of Idaho, namely zebra mussels. These tiny creatures, not native to Idaho, could cause big problems if they get a foothold in the state's waters.

For the first time this year, a boat contaminated with the mussels was stopped at an inspection station on U.S. Highway 93 in southern Twin Falls County north of the Nevada state line, said Staff Sgt. Matthew Eden with the county sheriff's office. The 20-foot pontoon boat was impounded by deputies and brought to a parking lot at the rear of the county courthouse. The Idaho State Department of Agriculture was alerted and its contractor, Power Wash Plus of Boise, responded to clean the boat.

The mussels, along with other creatures and plants, are on the state's invasive species most-wanted list. They can threaten fisheries, waterways, recreation and agriculture in Idaho if they invade and spread, according to ISDA.

A SCHOOL THAT SCORCHES

We see 'em like we call 'em here in Idaho

Think you're a real Idahoan? Not unless you've been to all the places listed below:

1. Fighting Creek. In 1902, when the Coeur d'Alene Indian Reservation was first opened for homesteading, the settlers had a big dance. Two of the women at the dance got into a hair-pulling, face-clawing set-to. The next day during a discussion about a suitable name for the settlement, a man — of course — suggested Fighting Creek.

Guys love chick fights.

2. Bugtown. A derogatory name for a railroad camp on the Oregon Short Line Railroad in Canyon County, so-called for obvious reasons. You might know the place as Caldwell.

3. Sleeping Lady. A series of peaks located on the Continental Divide northeast of Salmon, said to look like a woman — gosh, how to put this in a family newspaper? — lying on her back. You should know that at the time, Salmon was 98 percent male.

4. Whoop-um-up Creek, located in Boise County south of Lowman. Named by Moses Kempner, a stage-coach driver who settled nearby. The stage road passed near a creek, and Kempner had to whoop and yell at his horses to get them over the nearby hill.

5. Democrat Gulch, located two miles southwest of Hailey. What can I say? It's in Blaine County.

6. Distillery Bay, on Priest Lake in north Idaho. Let's put it this way: A farmer lived there and grew potatoes, but could find no market for them.

You want to guess what he wound up doing with the spuds?

7. Egypt, a farming community near the southeastern Idaho hamlet of Franklin, which gets fewer than 15 inches of precipitation a year. Early Mormon settlers, for some reason, saw similarities between the lands drained and watered by the Bear River and those of Egypt, which is drained by the Nile.

And these folks didn't even drink.

YOU DON'T SAY
Steve Crump

8. Governors Punchbowl, a lake in northwestern Blaine County and a classic example of the folly of kissing up.

The waterway was named by explorer Alexander Ross, who in 1824 was in the employ of the all-powerful Hudson's Bay Company. Ross called it after Gov. Sir George Simpson, who ran the vast, Toronto-based trading empire. But when Ross returned to Canada from his scouting trip in the American West, he was demoted for failure to provide the information the company wanted.

9. Notus, a Canyon County hamlet of 458 souls. It was named by the Oregon Short Line Railroad, after an incident on the Oregon Trail years before.

Seems a group of Oregon-bound travelers decided stay on and homestead near the Snake River crossing. When asked if they were ready for the last leg of their trip west, they purportedly proclaimed, "Not us."

Admirable, but have you ever been to Notus?

10. Tensed, a wide spot on U.S. Highway 95 near St. Maries. The place was originally named DeSmet after a Jesuit Roman Catholic missionary, at least until residents applied for a post office. The Postal Service turned them down because there was already another DeSmet, so the townsfolk reapplied for a post office named Tensed (DeSmet spelled backwards). Lamentably, a clerical error transformed the place to Tensed.

That's what you get for not writing legibly on the envelope.

With thanks to historian Lalia Booth, whose 1988 book "Idaho Place Names: A Geographical Dictionary," is an Idaho treasure.

The hearing held prior to the board's vote.

"I feel like it's time," Hendricks said, citing the district's continued growth. "If growth justifies that it's manned 24/7 ... it's a fine thing to do right now."

Battalion Chief Jason Keller said call volume has increased 65 percent in the last three years.

Hayden attorney Larry Beck, representing the district and appearing by phone, went through the resolution and reason for building a new 15,500-square-foot station, providing housing space, more training room and more vehicle docks for an expanded employee base.

"A new fire station is simply required," Beck said.

Fire Chief Mike Hendricks said moving forward with construction would "help the local people," as the funds would benefit contractors and others involved in the project.

"The building's scope is a little big, but it will be well-utilized and now is a good time to start," Hendricks said.

The resolution outlines the district's plan to enter into the lease agreement, with the option to purchase the facility at the end of the 15-year term for $1.

According to Beck, the district has a commitment letter with Panhandle State Bank and subsidiary Magic Valley Bank, locking in interest rates at a fixed-rate, 3.5 to 5.5 percent.

The board indicated that tax rates for the district would not increase for the project. Lease payments will be no more than $149,438 a year.

The district has been awarded a $350,000 Community Development Block Grant, originally sought to help pay for the building. But that money will instead be applied toward the purchase of a new fire engine.

Filer School Board hears construction update

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Construction on an $11 million intermediate school in the Filer School District continues to proceed on schedule.

Construction supervisor Joe Reams told the Filer School Board Wednesday that work will be completed by the beginning of the school year in September. Furniture will be moved in and the fourth- through sixth-grade facility will receive a final cleaning during the summer months. Reams suggested the district might save money by allowing custodians or teachers — who recently received 5.5 percent pay cuts — to take on that work.

“I’ve budgeted $12,000 for cleaning, and the bids I have right now are between $8,000 to $10,000,” Reams said, detailing the outside bids he’s received and then the process the district would use to pay its existing employees if it uses them. “You’ll be in good shape and easily have money left over but instead of putting them on my payroll, everything would have to go through the district office.”

Also expected to wrap up this summer is about $200,000 in construction work at Hollister Elementary School, including roof repairs, restrooms and other interior work.

In other business, the school board voted to postpone an estimated $57,000 to resurfacing of the Filer High School track but approved using $24,000 in construction-bond funds to improve the grass and soil conditions at both the high school football and soccer fields.

“We’re not neglecting needs on the track but if we can get by one more year, I’m all for waiting,” Filer School Board Chairwoman Shirley Gailey said. “We’ve been hearing about the football field as well as softball and baseball, but I believe we need to put some money into soccer and that’s the way I’m going to vote.”

The board will hold a public meeting on the district budget at 7 p.m. June 30 in the Filer Elementary School library.

Voters approve Valley school levy

Times-News

Valley School District residents on Thursday approved a two-year, $300,000 supplemental levy for the district by a healthy margin, with 72.5 percent voting in favor of the tax.

According to the district, 219 of the 302 voters who turned out supported the levy, which only needed a simple majority. It will kick in after July 1 and provide money for the 2011 and 2012 fiscal years.

The levy is for “the purpose of paying all lawful expenses of maintaining and operating the schools of the District,” according to a legal notice printed June 1 in the Times-News.

ground who may now question the care afforded to their loved ones,” McHugh told a Pentagon news conference.

Arlington National Cemetery is considered among the nation’s most hallowed burial sites, with more than 300,000 people buried there with military honors. An average of 30 funerals are conducted there every day.

Among those buried at the cemetery are troops killed in Iraq and Afghanistan, as well service members from past conflicts dating back to the Civil War.

Famous presidents and their spouses, including members of the Kennedy family, also have been buried there.

An Army investigation was launched last year after reports of employee misconduct, first reported by the Web site Salon.com.

Led by the service’s inspector general, Lt. Gen. Steven Whitcomb, the investigation found lax management of the cemetery, where employees relied on paper records to manage the dozens of burials each week and maintain the thousands of existing gravesites.

Whitcomb said at least 211 remains were identified as potentially mislabeled or misplaced and that there could be more.

“We found nothing that was intentional, criminal intent or intended sloppiness that caused this. ... But of all the things in the world, we see this as a zero defect operation,” he told reporters Thursday.

Mussels

This is the second year of the inspection program, which is partly funded by fees from a $10 sticker that boat owners are required to purchase. All boats are also required to stop for inspection at sites overseen by ISDA.

“The purpose of the inspection is to catch the ones that are coming in,” Eden said.

The boat, owned by a Donnelly resident, was heading to Cascade from Lake Havasu, Nev., said Chuck Dearman, president of Power Wash Plus. The mussels, mostly younger ones that had not yet developed shells, were found on the anchor and elsewhere under the boat.

In addition to using water heated to 140 degrees to remove the mussels, Dearman’s company also tested the use of small pellets of dry ice. When the pellets are blasted out by compressed air, they strike the surface and blow off the offenders, but don’t damage the boat, Dearman said. When the pellets return to gas form, that process blows apart the shells of the zebra mussels.

The cleanup took about an hour and half at no cost to the boat owners.

This was the first zebra-mussel cleanup in southern Idaho by Dearman’s company and the first use of the dry ice. He said he was pleased with the results.

The inspection program snagged just two confirmed mussel-infested boats last year. Out of 18,450 total boat inspections, there was one confirmed case of quagga mussels (another invasive species), one confirmed case of zebra mussels and one unconfirmed report of a boat infested with one of the two. All three cases were at stations in north Idaho, according to figures obtained from ISDA last fall.

Buhl hires construction manager for wastewater treatment facility

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — With the hiring of a construction manager, the city of Buhl is one step closer to starting construction of its wastewater treatment facility.

The city has contracted with the Boise-based McAlvain Group of Companies to provide oversight of the $15 million project, mandated by the Environmental Protection Agency to meet Clean Water Act requirements and improve water quality.

The contract, signed in mid-May, provides McAlvain with $2.1 million for its services. The company won’t provide any construction services directly, but will manage all aspects of the project from designing bid packages to hiring contractors and subcontractors and seeing to the day-to-day management.

McAlvain Project Manager D.J. Potter said the company is excited to work with Buhl.

“As the owner’s representative, we’re here to watch the interests of the city,” Potter said.

McAlvain is currently putting together bid packages. Potter said he expects those to go out within the next two months, with groundbreaking on the mechanical treatment facility taking place soon after.

Although the contract with McAlvain is fairly fresh, the city has been working with the company for months to iron out contract parameters.

“We’ve met with them six to eight times, going back and forth, to define just what their scope of the project will be,” said City Engineer Scott Bybee.

He said McAlvain’s experience was a big factor in the city’s decision to bring them on board.

McAlvain projects include the Ada County Courthouse, Bronco Stadium turf replacement and the Idaho State Capitol wings expansion, to name a few.

“One of the big reasons we went with McAlvain is that they seem to be real go-getters,” said Mayor Tom McCauley.

The city is confident the $2.1 million will be money well spent. The contract amount was negotiated by the company and city as the value of the expected services and not submitted as a bid. The city did follow requirements laid out in state code in selecting McAlvain, based on expectations and experience, Bybee said.

In the long run, going with a construction manager instead of a general contractor could save the city money because McAlvain will oversee every bid, invoice and change order submitted to the city.

“We’ll be able to verify everything and understand any unforeseen expense in making sure all invoices are accurate and verifiable,” said Potter. “We really are watching out to make sure the project is done correctly and the city’s interests are met.”

The city expects facility construction to be complete by summer 2012.

Rival hits McCain over fundraiser's Ponzi scheme

By Jonathan J. Cooper
Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — A now-disbarred Florida lawyer who admitted to orchestrating a huge Ponzi scheme gave more than $180,000 to Arizona Sen. John McCain's presidential campaign, contributions that McCain's Senate rival is now making an issue in their competitive primary.

Scott Rothstein was sentenced Wednesday to 50 years in prison after he confessed to running a $1.2 billion fraud using faked legal settlements.

Rothstein also was a key contributor and fundraiser who bundled more than $500,000 in campaign contributions for McCain's 2008 race, according to the campaign finance watchdog Center for Responsive Politics.

The exact amount he raised from others is unknown, but Rothstein boasted to the Wall Street Journal in 2008 that he raised as much as $1.1 million for McCain.

The campaign of former U.S. Rep. J.D. Hayworth, who is challenging McCain in Arizona's Aug. 24 Republican primary, demanded that the four-term senator account for and donate all of the money connected to Rothstein.

"McCain can't have it both ways. He can't be the champion of campaign finance reform one day and then take more than a million dollars from a convicted felon the next day," Hayworth spokesman Mark Sanders said.

Federal Election Commission records show that Rothstein and his wife gave $9,200 directly to McCain's 2008 campaign accounts and another $177,500 to his joint fundraising committee, which distributed it to various state Republican parties for use on McCain's behalf.

McCain spokesman Brian Rogers said the $9,200 under McCain's control was given to four Arizona charities in November. The rest of the money was out of the campaign's control and was distributed to state GOP committees for the 2008 race, he said.

Rothstein's fraud didn't come to light until a year after the presidential race, and Rogers said it was ridiculous for the Hayworth campaign to try to link McCain to a Ponzi scheme through the shenanigans of one former fundraiser.

"This is absurd, but not surprising given Congressman Hayworth's warped view of reality," Rogers said.

McCain's campaign has attacked Hayworth's ties to disgraced lobbyist Jack Abramoff, who was sentenced in September 2008 to four years in prison on charges of mail fraud, conspiracy and tax evasion.

In his unsuccessful 2006 bid for a seventh term in the U.S. House, Hayworth donated to charity the $2,250 he received directly from Abramoff but declined to donate thousands more that he received from Abramoff's lobbying clients.

Idaho jury hears arguments in parents' rights case

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The Mueller family had taken pains to avoid any unnecessary medical interventions.

They hired a midwife for the birth of young Taige and felt relieved when they learned the baby wouldn't need the routine antibiotics some infants require after birth. They turned to a naturopathic physician for medical care.

When they took her to a hospital with a fever about five weeks later, their objection to a spinal tap to check for meningitis led to a federal lawsuit that now forces a jury to balance parents' rights to determine a child's medical care against the requirements doctors face when they believe a child may be in imminent danger.

The low-grade fever concerned Corissa Mueller enough to take her daughter to the local hospital for an exam when the family's naturopathic doctor couldn't examine the child right away.

When an emergency room physician asked to perform a battery of tests and treatments, Mueller approved some but rejected others. "Yes" to blood and urine tests, she told workers at St. Luke's Medical Center in Boise. "Yes" to intravenous fluids. "No" to a spinal tap — the standard test to check for a life-threatening meningitis infection and other major infections — and "no" to a preventive dose of full-spectrum antibiotics.

A few hours later, police officers and state officials seized custody of Taige, and doctors performed a spinal tap against Corissa Mueller's wishes. For a time, police barred the distraught mom from calling another doctor or her husband, threatening her with handcuffs and jail. The Muellers were ordered to attend a court hearing for medical neglect. And when all the tests and treatments were done, the diagnosis came in: Taige had a virus, perhaps the same cold that the rest of her family had been battling that week.

"No doctor, no police department can take your child away from you in a violation of your constitutional rights," the Mueller's attorney, Jon Steele, told jurors in U.S. District Court in opening statements Thursday.

In a few weeks, Taige will be 8 years old. She wasn't harmed by the spinal tap, nor did the test find any indication of spinal meningitis or other potentially fatal infections.

“He is irascible. He has no self-control.”

EDITORIAL

With BID disappearing, it’s now up to downtown stakeholders

Now comes the tricky part. The lightly lamented Twin Falls downtown Business Improvement District was killed by the Twin Falls City Council in April — it’s scheduled to officially go out of business on Sept. 30 — but its legacy is some sticky house-keeping details.

Does, for example, the city still belong in the downtown parking business?

The council on Monday approved refunding the final half of the fiscal year 2010 BID fees, a total of $50,778, but will hold off on returning excess fees from the 2009 fiscal year to make sure the city can pay for maintenance and upkeep of downtown Twin Falls. The city will continue to fund downtown maintenance through fiscal year 2011 with money earned from parking meters downtown.

But as Twin Falls City Councilman David Johnson put it, the question of whether the city should perform downtown upkeep is suspect.

“I think that’s a conversation the city needs to have in the long term,” he said.

Johnson’s right. Implicit in the decision to disband the BID is a commitment by downtown stakeholders to pay the freight.

Councilman Will Kezele wants downtown businesses to organize and present a unified plan if they want to keep city services. That’s more than just a suggestion; it’s a necessity.

The rest of the city’s taxpayers aren’t willing anymore to indemnify downtown retailers against the responsibility of paying their fair share.

And that’s particularly the case with parking. We — and much of the rest of the community — are deeply skeptical of the wisdom for continuing to charge folks to shop downtown. But if the downtown merchants’ desire is to maintain that practice, they must step up.

And not after Sept. 30. Now.

Simply put, downtown Twin Falls will soon be flying solo. So downtown stakeholders better be thinking hard about how to take care of their own.

Our view: If downtown Twin Falls wants the services that the Business Improvement District — and the city of Twin Falls — once provided, it will have to pay for them itself.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Nevada GOP does Harry Reid a huge favor

Harry Reid is as happy as a man in his position could be, given that the Republican Party views him as its most delectable prey.

Nevadans just chose the most extreme candidate on the GOP ballot to run against Reid, the Democratic leader in the Senate. And no, it’s not the chicken-barter lady, Sue Lowden.

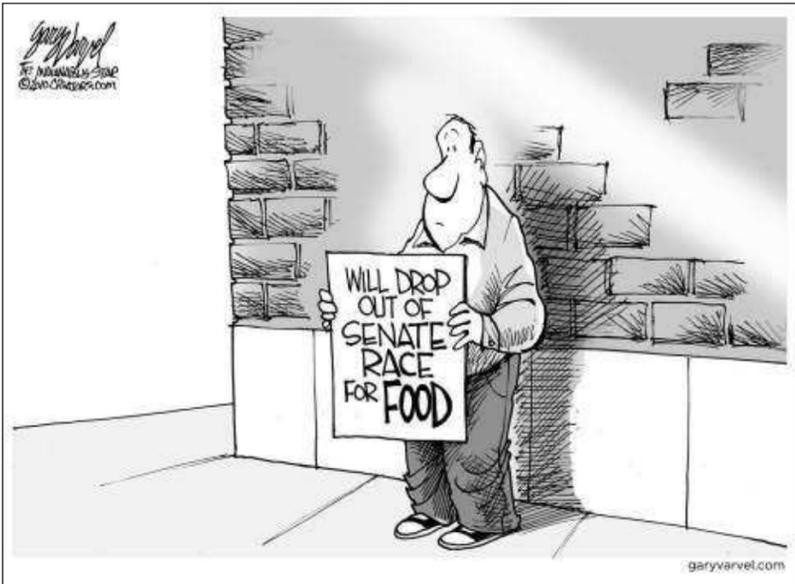

Margaret Carlson

Lowden in fact was Reid’s nightmare, the Republican with the best chance of defeating him, at least until her tirade against Obamacare. She tried to argue that mandatory, universal health insurance was unnecessary because anyone in need of a flu shot or prostate test could, as in the old days, offer the doctor a piece of fowl — she didn’t specify broiled, roasted or fried — instead of an insurance card. As if Nevadans kept henhouses in their backyards.

Lowden’s goose was cooked. Sharron Angle, a former state legislator and favorite of the Tea Party movement, surged at her expense and now is the Republican nominee for Senate.

She will be an easier candidate for Reid to beat, a far more troublesome candidate for Republicans to drag across the finish line. Her views on downsizing government, including calls to “transition out” Social Security and abolish the Education Department, make a chicken-based economy look reasonable by comparison.

Angle’s victory exposed the fault line among Republicans as they try to make big gains in the midterm elections. Yes, the Tea Party provides energy and focus for the disaffected who are determined to throw secular, “socialist” Democratic incumbents out of office. But if Tea Party candidates have their way in the primaries against more mainstream Republicans, as Rand Paul did in Kentucky before Angle’s victory in Nevada, they’re going to have a tough go of it in November.

Promoting your own state as the nuclear energy capital of reprocessing spent fuels’ is akin to volunteering to stand in for New York City as host of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed’s trial.

As with Paul, most voters didn’t know about Angle’s marginal views before electing her.

It’s unlikely Paul would have pulled off his upset victory over Kentucky Secretary of State Trey Grayson had he emphasized his support for re-segregating lunch counters or defended BP on the grounds that “accidents happen.” Similarly, Angle would have had a much harder time had voters focused on her desire to downsize government in ways even the angriest Nevadan might question.

For instance, no matter how sick and tired they might be of Reid, Nevadans might pause before abolishing the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Energy, especially in the midst of the catastrophic oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico. And the current economy is a hard one in which to push phasing out Social Security. Even in a state where the casino is king, people worried about their shrinking 401(k)s may not be anxious, with the market taking a dramatic drop this month, to gamble away Social Security’s sure thing.

If you live outside Nevada, there’s a case to be made for stashing nuclear trash there rather than in your own backyard. Inside Nevada, letting Yucca Mountain become the country’s nuclear dump is decidedly less popular. Angle couched her support for the idea in economic-development terms. But promoting your own state as “the nuclear energy capital of reprocessing spent fuels” is akin to volunteering to stand in for New York City as host of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed’s trial.

The Tea Party movement also had a good showing in South Carolina, in a race that saw the craziest behavior of this primary season. Republican gubernatorial candidate Nikki Haley, backed by Sarah Palin, had all kinds of fights on her hand.

“We’ve got a raghead in Washington; we don’t need a raghead in the Statehouse,” spewed Jake Knotts, a Republican state senator — presumably, and bewilderingly, referring to Haley’s Indian heritage and the false notion that Barack Obama is a Muslim. Even before that slur, two men had claimed they had adulterous affairs with Haley, a married mother of two.

Untrue, said Haley, and Palin recorded telephone messages urging voters to disregard “made-up nonsense.” In a fit of maturity, Palmetto State Republicans disregarded the sideshow and gave Haley a big win, though not quite big enough to avert a June 22 runoff.

In California’s Republican primary, meanwhile, former eBay Chief Executive Officer Meg Whitman won the gubernatorial nomination and former Hewlett-Packard CEO Carly Fiorina won the party’s backing for Senate.

Tuesday’s election results may show something of a pattern to Tea Party wins — the movement works better in small states than in large ones — as well as a pattern to Palin’s endorsements: she’s good at sniffing out a winner.

And perhaps, under the radar in this tumultuous year of the Tea Party, we are finally in the midst of a real Year of the Woman.

The reasons why Obama can’t show anger

When was the last time you saw your black male colleague, especially if you’re in a white-collar profession, show anger or rage in public? My hunch is never. The reason? African American men are taught at very young ages (or learn the hard way) to keep our emotions in check, to not lose our cool, lest we be perceived as dangerous or menacing or give someone a reason to doubt our ability to handle our jobs. Think of the emotional corset women in leadership positions are expected to maintain to ensure they never cry in public or show TOO much compassion for fear of raising doubt and seeming weak. Over the past two weeks, I have watched with increasing frustration the criticism that President Obama hasn’t shown enough emotion — read: outrage — over the flow of BP oil choking the Gulf Coast. Sure, I, too, have asked the president to connect more with the American people over this disaster. But I would never advise Obama to do what movie director Spike Lee suggested last week: “One

“If Obama were to display anger he runs the risk of . . . becoming too scary or threatening to the public, immediately non-presidential!”

time, go off!”

We all know one reason Obama won’t “go off.” He’s just not wired that way. Overt expressions of rage (or any overheated emotion) are not in his personality.

But there are other reasons he can’t “go off.” Consider the Angry Black Man. That bogeyman who haunts many African American men, particularly professionals, who scares us into zen-like tranquility when fury is warranted, whether or not we are prone to it. The 2009 arrest of Harvard professor Henry Louis Gates in his own home after he mouthed off to police investigating reports of a break-in is a prime example of what can go wrong. As a Facebook friend wrote after my post on Obama’s third trip to Louisiana last Friday, “If Obama were to display anger he runs the risk of . . . becoming too scary or threatening to the public, immediately non-presidential!”

In truth, Clarence

Thomas’ controlled-burn response to allegations of sexual harassment during his 1991 Supreme Court confirmation hearings — which he called a “high-tech lynching for uppity blacks who in any way deign to think for themselves” — was the closest we’ve come to seeing rage from a black man on such a prominent stage.

Americans expect their presidents to be calm in a crisis. But we have to recognize that Obama already has this manner (or skill) mastered because it attaches to any black professional, especially those in positions of authority.

There are a number of questions to be considered here: whether there are certain ways it is acceptable for black men (as opposed to others) to behave, whether it is fair or appropriate to define Obama or his presidency in terms of his being a black man, and whether Obama should emote just to please the media or anyone else. As one Democratic strategist told me: “I don’t need my president to feel my pain. I need my president to take on problems and solve them.” This is where I and the American people are in agreement.

CAUTION: THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM CONTAINS FORMER CHILD STARS WHO HAVE REALLY LET THEMSELVES GO...

Love conquers all, except religion

When Joseph Reyes and Rebecca Shapiro got married in 2004, they had a Jewish wedding ceremony. He was Catholic but converted to Judaism after they married, and they agreed to raise any children in the Jewish faith. However, after their daughter Ela was born, Reyes began to worry about the fact that she had not been baptized. "If, God forbid, something happened to her, she wouldn't be in heaven," he told me.

Today, two years after the Illinois couple's bitter divorce battle began, the fight over Ela's religious upbringing involves criminal charges.

The fight escalated in November, when Reyes had Ela baptized in a Catholic church and e-mailed his estranged wife a photo. She filed a complaint, and a judge barred Reyes from exposing his daughter to "any other religion other than the Jewish religion." In January, Reyes violated the judge's order and brought Ela to church again, with a camera crew in tow.

The divorce was settled in April. Reyes is once again allowed to take his daughter to church. But he faces up to six months in jail.

The Reyes-Shapiro divorce is about as ugly as the end of a marriage can get. Some of the sparring is an example of the bad ways people act when a union unravels. But the fight over Ela's religion illustrates the particular hardships and poor track record of interfaith marriages: They fail at higher rates than same-faith marriages. But couples don't want to hear that, and no one really wants to tell them.

Figuring out how to raise the kids in a mixed-faith household is difficult. Religions, if taken seriously, are often mutually exclusive.

Naomi Schaefer Riley

Most families work things out, peacefully deciding on one religion, both or neither. But the fact is that conflicts such as the one between Reyes and Shapiro will probably become more common.

According to the General Social Survey, 15 percent of U.S. households were mixed-faith in 1988. That number rose to 25 percent by 2006, and the increase shows no signs of slowing. The American Religious Identification Survey of 2001 reported that 27 percent of Jews, 23 percent of Catholics, 39 percent of Buddhists, 18 percent of Baptists, 21 percent of Muslims and 12 percent of Mormons were then married to a spouse with a different religious identification. If you want to see what the future holds, note this: Less than a quarter of the 18- to 23-year-old respondents in the National Study of Youth and Religion think it's important to marry someone of the same faith. In some ways, more interfaith marriage is good for civic life. Such unions bring extended families from diverse backgrounds into close contact. There is nothing like marriage between different groups to make society more integrated and more tolerant. As recent research by Harvard professor Robert Putnam has shown, the more Americans get to know people of other faiths, the more they seem to like them.

But the effects on the marriages themselves can be tragic — it is an open secret among academics that tsk-tsking grandmothers may be right. According to calculations based on the American Religious Identification Survey of 2001, people who had been in mixed-religion marriages were three times more likely to be divorced or separated than those who were in same-religion marriages.

A religiously tolerant society does not a happy marriage make.

Remember the famous counsel, the family that prays together, stays together? It's not just a come-on from preachers looking to fill pews. There is sociological research to back it up.

Modern couples seem blind to this, however, especially because they are getting married later in life. And the period between when children leave their parents' home and when they start a family is a religious downturn. Young people move around, date, drop in and out of school, try different jobs. They have few institutional ties, religious or otherwise.

Today, the median age of marriage for American men is 27, and for women, it's 26 — by the time wedding bells ring, many young people don't think of themselves as religious. On top of that, the country has embraced a more ecumenical spirit. While faith-based online dating sites, such as JDate and CatholicSingles.com, are hugely popular, a growing number of people don't consider religion to be a key factor in choosing a date or a spouse.

Is it any surprise that, according to psychologists, a lot of couples don't even talk about religion before tying the knot?

Gun-studded rallies are safest places in America

Besides a police station, the safest place in America on April 19 would likely have been any of the numerous Patriot's Day rallies held around the country where thousands of people, many carrying firearms, celebrated the opening shots in America's war for independence.

Some of the rallies had a strong Tea Party presence, others were filled with gun rights folks with no particular political affiliation.

This was Patriot's Day — a holiday recognized by too few and celebrated by even fewer — and the one common theme was that the freedom fought for 235 years ago was worth winning, even at the cost of blood and lives. It was a battle fought over guns.

The mainstream media and liberal bloggers were nearly apologetic that some dared to bear arms at these rallies. Why? No crimes were reported. No one was shot. If a shooting had occurred, with the multitude of anti-gun journalists in this country's major media outlets, you would have heard about it.

Indeed, while visibly packing firearms at political events has to some degree come into vogue this past year or so, at none of these events has any crime been reported or occurred.

This should not really surprise anyone. After all, millions of people openly bare firearms in public in hunting fields, at firing ranges and at gun shows every week, and except for exceedingly rare accidents, few if any injuries result. Criminals don't rob gun shows and mass murderers don't target shooting ranges.

H. Sterling Burnett

By contrast, mass shootings have become all too commonplace at locations where guns are explicitly banned. And, sadly, assaults have almost come to be expected at various protests and events organized by groups who claim to be progressive, and who usually ally themselves with organizations that favor national or international gun control.

Windows are smashed, stores and cars are set ablaze, and police, onlookers and counter-protestors are regularly attacked or assaulted.

For instance, almost every gathering to protest free trade agreements or meetings of the World Trade Organization erupts in violence.

Anarchists, radical union organizers and other self-proclaimed leftists don't kerchief to hide their faces as they smash windows in storefronts and cars, toss Molotov cocktails and generally go wild on anyone not sharing their views or trying to contain the violence.

Most recently, for example, thousands of people in the San Francisco Bay Area marched to protest Arizona's new immigration laws. The marches resulted in more than $100,000 in damage and several counter-protestors were assaulted.

Evidently, those who support violating America's immigration laws don't support the First Amendment's right to free speech if you disagree with their views.

A story in The Christian Science Monitor noted that rallies and events hosted by various Tea Party and pro-gun groups are so orderly, and participants so law-abiding and peaceful, the police presence is less noticeable than at various liberal political protests.

In the end, this really shouldn't be an issue. People have a fundamental natural right to defend themselves. In keeping with that, and in order to best ensure continued political liberty, the founders of this country amended the Constitution to prevent the government from violating the people's right to keep and bear arms in defense of themselves and their country.

People who now exercise this right may be doing so not out of fear, but rather as a form of political speech — another constitutional right.

Thus, since people publicly carrying guns are only exercising constitutionally protected rights, and since they have never evidenced violence toward the public, government or political opponents, we should be questioning the motives of those who would restrict the free exercise of this liberty, rather than the other way around. Perhaps, in the words of the bumper sticker, those who would ban the carrying of firearms at political rallies would "prefer unarmed peasants" rather than free people.

H. Sterling Burnett is a senior fellow at the National Center for Policy Analysis, a conservative public policy research organization.

New grocery store proposed in Ketchum industrial area

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

Some residents, officials raise concerns over planned market

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A new grocery store in Ketchum could mean cheaper tomatoes and easier parking. But at what cost?

That's the dilemma Ketchum residents and business people wrestled with Wednesday night as they discussed a proposal by a Washington store owner to open a "value-driven" store on a 2.5-acre lot that was the former home of Stock Building Supply lumberyard and hardware store.

The owner, a longtime second-homeowner in Ketchum, owns Valmark, Inc., which operates several Kings markets in Washington. It's based in the resort town of Friday Harbor where two grocery stores within walking distance of each other "operate successfully," said Valmark's attorney Jim Laski. Valmark opened Valley Market in Bellevue in 1996 but sold it to Atkinsons' in 2003.

Atkinsons' has been the sole grocer in Ketchum since 2005 when Williams Market closed after a dozen years.

Atkinsons' has been the sole grocer in Ketchum since 2005 when Williams Market closed after a dozen years.

The problem is that Valmark wants to build the store at the intersection of Warm Springs Road and Tenth Street in the city's light-industrial zone, home to such businesses as a bakery, bio-research lab and paint shop.

The city must amend the zoning code to create an Employment Enterprise Zone in order to permit a grocer to operate there. The change would require new businesses opening under that change to employ at least 25 full-time workers and meet Ketchum's community housing obligations, which require community housing equal to 20 percent of the project's gross floor area.

About 60 people, including Atkinsons' Market co-owner Chip Atkinson, crowded into the back room of The Roosevelt Tavern and Grille to hear what the city's special projects planner Mark Goodman and grocer's attorney had to say during a meeting arranged by the Wood River Economic Partnership.

The proposed project entails a 31,500-square feet with a stand-alone 3,155-square foot drugstore.

The store would be smaller than the Albertsons in Hailey but larger than Atkinsons' 18,000 square foot Ketchum store and its 30,000 square foot Hailey store, said Laski.

Neil Bradshaw, a Ketchum Community Development Corporation board member, voiced the longest list of concerns. Allowing a supermarket in the area would violate the 2001 Ketchum comprehensive plan, which advocates retaining retail in the

Lawmakers may extend tax credit

Realtors group pushes Congress to continue homebuyer incentive

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Homebuyers may get an extra three months to finish qualifying for federal tax incentives that boosted home sales this spring.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said Thursday he wants to give buyers until Sept. 30 to complete their purchases and qualify for tax credits of up to $8,000. Under the current terms, buyers had until April 30 to get a signed sales contract and until June 30 to complete the sale.

The proposal would only allow people who already have signed contracts to finish at the later date. The National Association of Realtors estimates that about 180,000 homebuyers who already signed purchase agreements are likely to miss the deadline.

Reid introduced the proposal as an amendment to a bill that would extend jobless benefits through the end of November. Joining him were Sen. Johnny Isakson, R-Ga., and Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.

The Senate is expected to take up the amendment next week. Senate Democratic leaders hope to finish work on the jobless benefits bill next week, but they have yet to secure enough votes.

Reid, who faces perhaps the toughest re-election campaign of his political career, represents a state that has the nation's highest foreclosure rate.

The Realtors group has been pushing hard in Congress for the extension. Mortgage lenders, the trade group says, have been swamped with borrowers trying to get approved by the end of the month. Many potential borrowers are unlikely to make the deadline.

"Time is of the essence," said Lucien Salvant, a spokesman for the group. "It's important for Congress to get this done, because there's whole bunch of loans that aren't going to close on time."

Idaho businesses lobby Crapo on card-fee reforms

Times-News

With U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo on the committee set to decide the fate of the Wall Street banking industry overhaul, some Idaho businesses are now pressing him to make sure curbs on credit and debit card fees are in the final bill.

The Republican voted against the banking reforms last month, but did support an amendment to lower so-called "swipe fees."

But it's in the Senate version of the overhaul, not the House's.

Crapo is on the panel that will negotiate a compromise, likely before July 4.

Four Idaho residents will join a business-lobbying group in Washington, D.C., next week

3-D printers go beyond paper and ink

By Nathan Olivarez-Giles
Los Angeles Times writer

Home computer printers gave people the ability to produce bank statements, concert tickets, holiday cards and party invitations at the touch of a button.

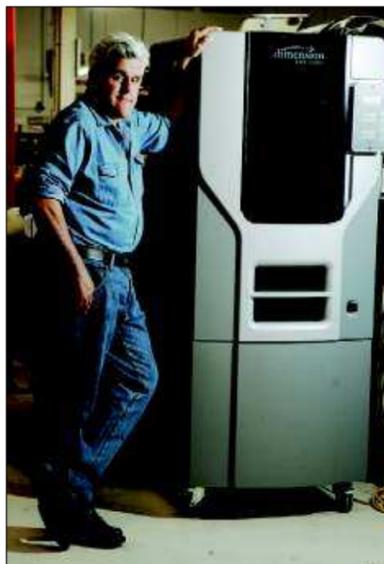

But what if you wanted to "print out" a dinner plate, the leg of an armchair or an eyeglass frame? It may sound far-fetched and futuristic, but plastic extrusion machines that can do this — popularly known as 3-D printers — are poised to enter the home electronics market.

"Tonight Show" host Jay Leno has an industrial version in the warehouse-sized Burbank, Calif., garage that houses his collection of more than 200 cars and motorcycles. His mechanics design hard-to-find parts on a laptop computer and then use the machine to make them real.

Federal budget deficit grows at slower pace in May

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The budget deficit through the first eight months of the government's budget year is running slightly below last year's record-setting pace.

In its monthly budget report, the Treasury Department said Thursday that the deficit in May totaled $135.9 billion. That's down 28.3 percent from May 2009. Much of that improvement reflected calendar differences which boosted receipts and lowered government benefit payments for the month.

While it is an improvement, it still puts the country on track to record another $1 trillion-plus deficit.

Many private economists are forecasting that the deficit for this year will come in around $1.3 trillion, which would still be the second highest deficit in history.

The Obama administration is forecasting that the deficit for the 2011 budget year, which begins Oct. 1, will remain above $1 trillion at $1.27 trillion. And it predicts the imbalances over the next decade will total $8.5 trillion.

The deficits have been driven higher by massive government spending to stabilize the financial system and counteract the impacts of the worst recession in decades. The Obama administration insists that the spending was necessary to keep the Great Recession from becoming a replay of the Great Depression of the 1930s.

However, the tide of red ink has sparked a political backlash. Surveys show rising unhappiness with the $13 trillion debt. That has put incumbent lawmakers on the defensive ahead of the midterm elections.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke has also sounded the alarm.

This week he told a congressional panel that lawmakers must develop a credible deficit-reduction plan.

Idaho geothermal company closer to $102M loan

By John Miller
Associated Press Writer

BOISE - An Idaho-based geothermal energy developer said Thursday it's closer to getting a federal loan worth up to $102.2 million to build a 22-megawatt power plant in the eastern Oregon desert.

U.S. Geothermal Inc. of Boise still must fulfill U.S. Department of Energy conditions before tapping the loan for its $120 million Neal Hot Springs project in Malheur County, 90 miles west of Boise. The loan would come from the Department of Treasury and has a lower interest rate than if the company had sought the cash from private lenders.

CEO Daniel Kunz said access to traditional capital from skittish investors and lenders for small, renewable-energy projects like his remains difficult even two years after the 2008 financial

SEC puts in new 'circuit breakers' for Wall Street

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators on Thursday put in place new rules aimed at preventing a repeat of last month's harrowing "flash crash" in the stock market.

Members of the Securities and Exchange Commission approved the rules, which call for U.S. stock exchanges to briefly halt trading of some stocks that make big swings.

The major exchanges will start putting the trading breaks into effect as early as today for six months. The New York Stock Exchange will begin today's trading session with five stocks: EOG Resources Inc., Genuine Parts Co., Harley Davidson Inc., Ryder System Inc. and Zimmer Holdings Inc. The exchange will gradually add other stocks early next week, expecting to reach by Wednesday the full number that will be covered.

The Nasdaq stock market plans to have the new program fully in place on Monday.

The plan for the "circuit breakers" was worked out by the SEC and the major exchanges following the May 6 market plunge, which saw the Dow Jones industrials lose nearly 1,000 points in less than a half-hour.

Under the new rules, trading of any Standard & Poor's 500 stock that rises or falls 10 percent or more in a five-minute period will be halted for five minutes. The "circuit breakers" would be applied if the price swing occurs between 9:45 a.m. and 3:35 p.m. Eastern time. That's almost the entire trading day. But it leaves out the final 25 minutes before the close — a period that often sees raging price swings, especially in recent weeks as the kind of volatility that marked the 2008 financial crisis returned.

The idea is for the trading pause to draw attention to an affected stock, establish a reasonable market price and resume trading "in a fair and orderly fashion," the SEC said.

On May 6, about 30 stocks listed in the S&P 500 index fell at least 10 percent within five minutes. The drop briefly wiped out $1 trillion in market value as some stocks traded as low as a penny.

The disruption "illustrated a sudden, but temporary, breakdown in the market's price-setting function when a number of stocks and (exchange-traded funds) were executed at clearly irrational prices," SEC

Chairman Mary Schapiro

At a glance

NEW RULES IN RESPONSE TO 'FLASH CRASH': The Securities and Exchange Commission has put in new "circuit breaker" rules aimed at preventing a repeat of the May 6 stock market plunge, when the Dow industrials lost nearly 1,000 points in less than a half-hour.

HOW IT WORKS: U.S. stock exchanges will briefly halt trading of some stocks that mark big swings. Trading of any Standard & Poor's 500 stock that rises or falls 10 percent or more in a five-minute period will be halted for five minutes.

POSSIBLE EXPANSION: The rules will apply for six months. Afterward, their scope could be expanded to securities beyond the S&P 500, including exchange-traded funds.

said in a statement. "By establishing a set of circuit breakers that uniformly pauses trading in a given security across all venues, these new rules will ensure that all markets pause simultaneously and provide time for buyers and sellers to trade at rational prices."

Exchange-traded funds are increasingly popular investments that often track a market index such as the S&P 500 and can be traded throughout the day, unlike mutual funds. ETFs as a group were affected by the May 6 plunge more than any other category of securities.

The markets will use the six-month pilot period, ending on Dec. 10, to make needed adjustments based on how the new rules work, the SEC said. The scope of the rules could be expanded to securities beyond the S&P 500, including ETFs.

Schapiro said she wanted to see the program expanded quickly to cover thousands of public companies beyond the S&P 500.

The new circuit breakers should help prevent disruptions caused either by extreme volatility as happened on May 6 or by an errant trade, said Maier Tarlow, an NYSE floor trader with Raven Securities. "We've always been in favor of this type of concept, so to have it across all markets is a no-brainer for us," he said. "It's helping protect the investing public."

GENERATION NEXT

Marketers targeting new crop of consumers at an earlier age

By Martha Irvine
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO (AP) — They aren't even out of grade school. But already, people are trying to name the youngest up-and-coming generation, and figure out who they might be and how they might be different from their predecessors.

At a loss for something more original, many call them Generation Z, because they follow Generations X and Y.

They've also been referred to as Generation Net or "iGen," since they've never known a world without the Internet.

That's the one point most everyone can agree on — that they are the tech-savviest generation of all time, so much so that even toddlers can maneuver their way through YouTube and some first-graders are able to put together a PowerPoint presentation for class.

But beyond that, who are they, really?

Most people agree it's just too early to know for sure. But that hasn't stopped marketers from trying to figure out this young crowd of consumers. Or employers from attempting to prepare for them in the workplace.

Parents, too — many of them Gen Xers — are weighing in, saying they are raising a different brand of kid than baby boomers did.

"I would like to think that ideally, and this might be a bit naive, Gen Xers are a bit more freethinking and not necessarily as compelled to keep up with the Joneses," says Kris Sonnenberg, a teacher in Chicago and 38-year-old mother of three children, ages 8, 12 and 17.

Many parents also think the recession will play a role in shaping who their kids are, and perhaps make them less "entitled," a label that — fair or not — has been slapped frequently on Generation Y, also known as the "millennials."

"We're not afraid to say money's tight, so I feel like our kids are going to have that sense long-term," says Andrew Egbert, a 41-year-old dad who works in manufacturing in Greensboro, N.C. He has a son in fifth grade and a daughter who's a first-grader.

OK, so, let's take a look at the picture that's emerging of Gen Z, for what it's worth. They're young — roughly age 12 or younger.

Generational expert Neil Howe says determining who these youngsters are still is very much a work in progress.

"But there are hints from history," he says.

Howe, who coined the term "millennials," says 2008 may turn out to be one year with a big influence on this generation, due to both the recession and the election of the nation's first black president.

He is calling them the "homelanders" because they are growing up in a time of "greater public urgency and emergency, both at home and around the world."

For that reason, he speculates they could be a new version of the so-called Silent Generation, the group that grew up in the Depression era, who saw the country through World War II and who birthed the baby boomers.

That elder generation was pegged as hardworking and anything but entitled.

Janet Reid, who also has spent time looking at this latest generation, thinks that's a pretty fair appraisal.

"It won't be taken for granted that prosperity is guaranteed," says Reid, a managing partner at Global Novations, a firm that helps corporations develop and attract workers and understand generational differences.

Because they're so hooked into screens of all kinds at a such a young age, she sees Gen Z as more conscious of world events. "They're not just out playing hopscotch," she says.

She also thinks this generation will take characteristics already affiliated with Gen Y to a new level — be that multitasking or a comfort level with different races, ethnicities and cultures.

Seven-year-old Ryan Cook's parents have noticed many of these traits in him.

Asked what a recession is, he's able to tell you that it has to do with the economy and the fact that his parents can't always buy him the things he wants, like video games. "But I think that's fair," he says.

He can tell you that President Obama is the nation's first black president, but — as one whose elementary classroom in suburban Chicago is much more diverse than his parents' — that doesn't seem to phase him much. "Well, the president is the president," he says nonchalantly. "They don't really change much, except for different speeches."

Like a lot of kids his age, he gets frustrated when he has to sit through TV commercials. He uses his dad's laptop by himself with ease. And though he doesn't have a cell phone, he wants one (partly because his 12-year-old brother has one).

That fits with the notion that, recession or no recession, this generation has a big expectation when it comes to technological gadgets, whether that be cell phones, laptops or the latest version of the iPod or other music players.

And in many instances, their parents are getting them those gadgets, says Nicole Williams, a 39-year-old mom of three who's also a fifth-grade teacher in Seattle.

"They have quick fingers, good muscle strength in those fingers," Williams says, laughing as she refers to the many technological devices her students use in and outside class.

GM puts brakes on memo nixing 'Chevy'

By Jeff Karoub
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — Relax, Chevrolet fanatics. Turns out you can take your "Chevy to the levee" or any other darn place you please.

General Motors Co. on Thursday backed off what it called a "poorly worded" internal memo that asked employees to refer to the brand only as "Chevrolet" instead of its long-standing and well-known nickname.

GM said in a statement that it "in no way" is discouraging anybody from using the name Chevy. The internal memo was part of an effort to develop a consistent brand name as it tries to broaden its global presence.

"We hope people around the world will continue to fall in love with Chevrolets and smile when they call their favorite car, truck or crossover 'Chevy,'" the statement said.

GM spokesman Tom Wilkinson said the statement was meant to make clear that the company is "honored and flattered" that the brand is so popular, regardless of what people call it.

The original memo, he said, "made it look like maybe we were telling other people other people not to use 'Chevy'."

"Mostly this was just trying to train (employees)," he said. "Historically, especially recently, we've tended to use the two interchangeably."

Burley students head to national debate tourney

By Judy Albertson
Times News Reporter

Two Burley High School speech team students have qualified to attend this year's National Forensic League national tournament in Kansas City, Mo.

Ansley Winkles and Makena Greener will compete in the Duet Interpretation event with their piece, "How to Survive a Horror Movie" by Seth Grahme Smith. They qualified by placing second in the state competition at Skyline High School in Pocatello.

Burley High School has been a member of the National Forensic League for about 14 years and has sent many qualifiers to national tournaments throughout the country, including Mike Ramsey, a former student and founder of the website GoBurley.com.

"In this competition, two individuals find a published piece of literature and perform it through character development and memorization," said Richard Call, their coach. "One of the most important things is that students need to find a certain amount of ownership in the piece they use."

Call said Winkles and Greener managed to do that with their comedy selection.

"This is a weeklong, grueling contest. If they make it to the final round, they will have performed it over 30 times," said Call.

The National Forensic League was founded in 1925 by Bruno E. Jacob and is the nation's oldest and largest high school debate and speech honor society. Some of the league's past members are Lyndon B. Johnson, Oprah Winfrey, Ted Turner, Patricia Neal, Renee Zellweger and Chris Colfer of "Glee." The league promotes the "highest standard of integrity, humility, respect, leadership and service in the pursuit of excellence," according to its oath. National qualifiers have the opportunity to earn more than $153,000 in college scholarships.

Winkles and Greener have been working to raise money for the trip, which they'll leave for on Saturday. They have performed for local clubs and hosted a children's drama camp, as well as promoted the BHS drama department's recent productions of "Issun Boshi" and "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown."

To donate to their trip, contact Richard Call at 878-1729.

Community Action thanks O'Leary Middle School students

The South Central Community Action Partnership of Twin Falls would like to thank Mrs. Hall's sixth- and seventh-grade math classes at Vera C. O'Leary Middle School, who recently assisted the nonprofit agency.

On May 21, the students planted flowers, bagged food for food boxes and organized hardware for the weatherization department. Community Action sincerely appreciates the help that these young people provided; it demonstrates their involvement in the community and serves as a model for others to admire and follow.

Information wanted about Paget's disease of the bone

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am an 83-year-old woman. One of my many health problems is bone Paget's disease. When I was 72, my left thigh bent so bad that it fractured. My left leg was also shorter, and I had to have a rod put in from my knee to my hip. That did not stop the disease, but it helped a lot with the pain. Then my leg got shorter again, and I was told my hipbone was bending as the left thigh did.

I went to a new doctor, who put me on Actonel for 30 days. He said he was sure that I would be rid of the Paget's, which I really could not believe.

For the past two years, every blood test I have taken for alk phos has been below normal. I think normal is 119, and my last test was 84. My hip is still bent, but has not gotten any worse. I recommend anyone with Paget's see an endocrinologist, and I hope they will get the same results as I did.

DEAR READER: Paget's disease of the bone commonly affects people as they age. It is seen in the skull, spine, pelvis, legs and arms and can be relatively isolated or widespread. We commonly think that once we reach our full height, bones stop growing. This is incorrect. Bone is in a constant state of renewing itself throughout our lives. Paget's is a distortion of that normal breakdown and rebuilding pattern. In the early stages of the disease, bone breaks down faster than it can rebuild. As the disease progresses, the body generates new bone at a faster-than-normal rate. This results in pain, tingling, weakness and misshapen bones that can fracture easily. Fortunately, Paget's is slow in progression.

Diagnosis can be made through X-rays, bone scan or lab testing. Because many people don't have any symptoms in the early stages, a physician might choose to order an alka-

Dr. Gott

Continued from Business 4 line-phosphatase test (the alk phos to which you refer) periodically on patients 40 and older.

X-rays will indicate deformities, bone enlargement and areas of bone reabsorption with bowing — all characteristic of Paget's.

A bone scan can determine which bones are affected. This test can identify Paget's even before it can be seen by simple X-ray.

Treatment, if indicated, might include oral or intravenous prescription medications. Oral forms appear well tolerated but carry the unwanted side effect of gastrointestinal irritation. In this instance, intravenous medications may be used but are generally not prescribed for more than six months because of resistance to one brand name over time. Switching to another drug in the same category is then recommended.

Intolerance to bisphosphonates might be handled through calcitonin. This naturally occurring hormone works to regulate bone metabolism and is commonly administered via self-injection. Side effects can include irritation at the site of the injection, nausea, facial flushing and more.

My recommendation is to eat well and supplement your diet with 1,000 to 1,500 milligrams of calcium and between 600 and 800 IU of vitamin D daily. Take all precautions to avoid falls, such as removing scatter rugs and relocating electrical cords that may run across a floor, making you susceptible to a fall. And stick with your endocrinologist who can guide you along the way.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Osteoporosis." Rescue launched for Calif. girl on solo world sail

By John Antczak
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — A 16-year-old Southern California girl attempting a solo sail around the world was feared in trouble Thursday thousands of miles from land in the frigid, heaving southern Indian Ocean after her emergency beacons began signaling and communication was lost.

An international effort to rescue young Abby Sunderland began, but the vast distances meant long hours of waiting for her family and support team, which expressed confidence that she was alive because the beacons were deliberately turned on rather than set off automatically.

"She's got all the skills she needs to take care of what she has to take care of, she has all the equipment as well," said brother Zac, himself a veteran of a solo sail around the world at age 17.

Australian Maritime Safety Authority spokeswoman Carly Lusk said three vessels were sent from the French territory of Reunion Island and an aircraft was to depart from Perth on a four-hour flight to Abby's location more than 2,000 miles from both Africa and Australia.

It was not clear when the vessels left, but it would take a day for the nearest ship to reach the area. Reunion Island is off Madagascar, the very large island along the east coast of Africa.

Support team member Jeff Casher said the two emergency beacons were continuing to broadcast and GPS location data showed they were together and drifting at 1 mph. He believed the beacons were on Abby's boat but said they could be with her on a raft.

Casher offered several scenarios: The boat may have flipped over and Abby could still be inside; the boat's mast may have been damaged; or she was injured and could not pilot the boat. He said that if the boat flipped, the hull would prevent her from calling from her satellite phone.

Conditions can quickly become perilous for any sailor exposed to the elements in that part of the world.

"We've got to get a plane out there quick," said family spokesman Christian Pinkston, adding that the teen's family in Thousand Oaks was asking for prayers for her safety.

Her brother said Abby was prepared and mentally tough. "I really wish I could see her and hope she gets through this one," he told reporters outside the family home.

Abby last communicated with her family at 5 a.m. MDT Thursday and reported 30-foot swells but was not in distress, Pinkston said.

An hour later the family was notified that her emergency beacons had been activated, and there was no further communication.

Her brother said the boat was most likely not completely submerged because another beacon would be triggered at a depth of 15 feet.

Derrick Fries, a U.S. sailing instruction and safety expert, said Abby's circumstances were very unclear.

"It's hard to determine if she's rolled over, swamped, or washed overboard. She has to have a dry suit on to have any chance," he said. "To be capsized in the middle of the ocean with waves crashing relentlessly down, not just for hours, but days, I can't tell you how difficult those conditions are."

A lifelong sailor whose father is a shipwright and has a yacht management company, Abby set sail from Los Angeles County's Marina del Rey in her 40-foot boat, Wild Eyes, on Jan. 23 in an attempt to become the youngest person to sail around the world alone without stopping. Her brother briefly held the record in 2009.

Before Abby's voyage began, her brother described her as having more skill and experience than most sailors in their 20s and 30s. Her father said she had more solo sailing experience than Zac did before he started out.

"He totally thinks that I'm ready to do it, so that does help," she said at the time.

Abby soon ran into equipment problems and had to stop for repairs. She gave up the goal of setting the record in April, but continued on.

On May 15, Australian 16-year-old Jessica Watson claimed the record after completing a 23,000-mile circumnavigation in 210 days.

Abby left Cape Town, South Africa, on May 21 and on Monday reached the halfway point of her voyage.

On Wednesday, she wrote in her log that it had been a rough few days with huge seas that had her boat "rolling around like crazy!"

"I've been in some rough weather for awhile with winds steady at 40-45 knots with higher gusts," she wrote. "With that front passing, the conditions were lighter today. It was a nice day today with some lighter winds which gave me a chance to patch everything up. Wild Eyes was great through everything but after a day with over 50 knots at times, I had quite a bit of work to do?"

Greenhouse gas rules survive Senate vote

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In a boost for the president on global warming, the Senate on Thursday rejected a challenge to Obama administration rules aimed at cutting greenhouse gas emissions from power plants and other big polluters.

The defeated resolution would have denied the Environmental Protection Agency the authority to move ahead with the rules, crafted under the federal Clean Air Act. With President Obama's broader clean energy legislation struggling to gain a foothold in the Senate, the vote took on greater significance as a signal of where lawmakers stand on dealing with climate change.

"If ever there was a vote to find out whose side you are on, this is it," said Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee.

The vote was 53-47 to stop the Senate from moving forward on the Republican-led effort to restrain the EPA.

Sen. Joe Lieberman, I-Conn., predicted the vote would "increase momentum to adopt comprehensive energy and climate legislation this year."

But Obama still needs 60 votes to advance his energy agenda, and Democrats don't have them yet. Sen. James Inhofe, R-Okla., said the vote made clear that a majority in the Senate back either a delay or an outright ban on "the Obama EPA's job-killing, global warming agenda."

Republicans, and the six

IDAHO SENATORS OPPOSE RULES

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch joined with a bipartisan group of senators in support of a resolution to stop the Environmental Protection Agency from regulating greenhouse gases, according to a news release from the two Idaho lawmakers.

"Allowing any federal agency to unilaterally move forward on issues of this magnitude not only allows politics to drive policy decisions; it locks out the voices of Idahoans, Americans and their elected representatives in Congress," Crapo said.

Risch said, "The merits of global warming and how to address it should be debated in the legislative bodies of Congress, not decided by an unelected bureaucratic agency of the federal government."

Democrats who voted with them to advance the resolution, said Congress, not bureaucrats, should be in charge of writing climate change policy. They said the EPA rules would drive up energy costs and kill jobs.

But Democrats, referring frequently to the Gulf oil spill, said it made no sense to undermine efforts to curtail greenhouse gas emissions and reduce dependence on oil and other fossil fuels.

The effort to block the rules "is an attempt to bury our heads in the sand and ignore reality," said Sen. Tom Udall, D-N.M.

Louisiana leaders rush to oil companies' defense, want Gulf drilling to resume

By Alan Sayre and Chris Kahn
Associated Press writers

NEW ORLEANS — At the same time they are venting their fury on BP over the Gulf of Mexico spill and its calamitous environmental effects, Louisiana politicians are rushing to the defense of the oil-and-gas industry and pleading with Washington to bring back offshore drilling — now.

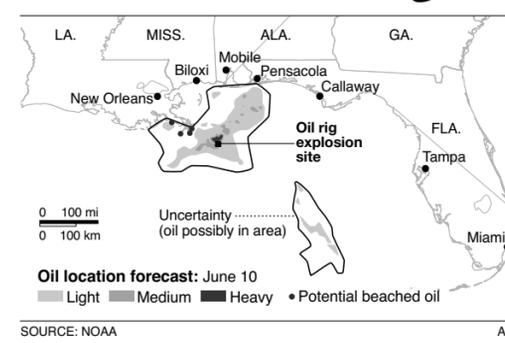

As angry as they are over the disaster, state officials warn that the Obama administration's temporary ban on drilling in the Gulf has sent Louisiana's most lucrative industry into a death spiral.

They contend that drilling is safe overall and that the moratorium is a knee-jerk reaction, akin to grounding every airplane in America because of a single crash. They worry, too, that the moratorium comes at a time when another major Louisiana industry — fishing — has been brought to a standstill by the mess in the Gulf.

"Mr. President, you were looking for someone's butt to kick. You're kicking ours," Lafourche Parish President Charlotte Randolph said in pleading for the moratorium to end.

Meanwhile, a government task force of scientists said that before BP cut and capped the blown-out well a week ago, it may have been spewing as much as 2.1 million gallons of oil per day — or twice as much as the government's previous worst-case estimate. The bigger number is just an estimate, and scientific teams are still coming up with more complete numbers.

The oil-and-gas industry is the backbone of the Louisiana economy, bringing in billions of dollars in revenue for the government and accounting for nearly one-third of the nation's domestic crude production.

SOURCE: NOAA

It took a heavy blow when the government imposed a six-month offshore drilling moratorium in the wake of the spill that has sent tens of millions of gallons of oil into the Gulf in the biggest environmental disaster in U.S. history. The government imposed the ban while it reviews the safety of deep-water drilling in light of the BP disaster.

Louisiana lawmakers have rallied against the moratorium, saying it could put more than 100,000 people out of work, shutter businesses and destroy livelihoods. A bill asking the administration to shorten the moratorium passed the Legislature unanimously.

But persuading the administration to take such action could prove to be extraordinarily difficult at a time when globs of oil are fouling marshes and beaches, images of oil-soaked birds are a fixture in the news and no apparent end to the spill is in sight.

Interior Secretary Ken Salazar has acknowledged the potential damage to energy companies and their employees and promised a Louisiana senator the administration would demand that BP compensate businesses for their losses.

The moratorium put a halt to the 33 deepwater exploratory rigs in operation in the Gulf in addition to all new deep-sea drilling permits. Platforms that are already producing oil along with rigs in shallow waters are allowed to remain in operation.

"Every one of these deep-water wells employs directly hundreds of people and indirectly thousands," said Sen. Mary Landrieu of Louisiana. "This is one company. This is one well. It's a terrible situation and no one is making light of it, but what I'm saying, as strongly as I can, to this president is the economic analysis is devastating to many companies, thousands of companies."

George Lloyd Pickup

HEYBURN — George Lloyd Pickup, 88, of Heyburn, Idaho, peacefully departed this earthly existence in his sleep on Wednesday, June 9, 2010, of natural causes.

George was born at home on Dec. 18, 1921, in Roosevelt, Utah, the fourth of seven children (five sons and two daughters) born to Alton and Ada Belle Weight Pickup. He spent his youth in and around the Uintah Basin in eastern Utah, where his family farmed and raised cattle and horses. He graduated from Union High School, where he was successful in FFA and warmed the bench of the basketball team. He was drafted into the United States Army in March of 1944. George held the rank of corporal in the infantry, where he fought the German army in France and Belgium. Wounded in the Battle of the Bulge, he was taken prisoner and held in a German prison camp until liberated on Easter Sunday 1945. His post-war medical care was given at Bushnell General Hospital in Brigham City, Utah.

It was while traveling on a bus back to the Basin on leave that he met his future wife, Louise Earl, who was visiting common friends in Roosevelt. One year later, they were sealed in the Salt Lake Temple of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They returned to the Uintah Basin to live until George's name was drawn to receive a homestead in the Tulelake Basin near Klamath Falls, Ore., in 1949. They were one of many young, veteran couples drawn that year who became known as the "49ers." They "camped out" for one full year in a makeshift house rebuilt from a Japanese Internment Camp barracks as was required to obtain ownership of their new farm.

One daughter and four sons were eventually born into the family. Each one became part of George's farm crew as he developed their homestead into a productive farm. After an attempt at raising potatoes, George turned to alfalfa and grain. His sons eventually grew into useful farmhands that contributed to successfully hauling tons of hay by hand using old trucks and new elevators which George also sold to neighbors as a side business.

However, his real love was his cattle and horses, and he was known to always have several horses around to help with his small herd of cattle. He always appreciated a good horse. Later in his life, he helped neighbors work their cattle whenever he could. He loved to be on a horse out in the brush and junipers, roping, branding and working cattle.

Always a hard worker, he instilled a solid work ethic in his children. Seldom could one find him idle. Service in the church began early in his life serving as the president of a young branch of the church for 19 years followed by several years on the high council and later as clerk. As long as his health would permit, he was a diligent home teacher — a responsibility he took very seriously.

George took great pride in the success of his children and grandchildren. He was very supportive of their athletic and scholastic achievements. He was able to contribute to their successes while serving as a 4-H leader for nearly 30 years. George was able to attend most of the high school games that his children participated in by driving the team bus to the away games. It was not uncommon to find George behind the wheel on the team bus and Louise driving the rooters' bus. They both loved to watch their family members participate in any endeavor.

George's life became extremely lonely in 1999 when his beloved Louise passed away. He was also preceded in death by his parents and his three older brothers. Survivors include a younger brother, Quint (Norma) Pickup of Price, Utah; sisters, Thora O'Neil of Price, Utah, and Leah Chandler of Salt Lake City, Utah; his only daughter, Susan Batson of Rupert, Idaho; and sons, Reed (Coleen) of Burley, Idaho, Ray (Lynette) of Vancouver, Wash., David (Jill) of Roy, Utah, and Scott (Susan) of Heyburn, Idaho; 32 grandchildren; and 39 great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, June 14, at the Heyburn LDS 1st and 2nd Ward Church, 530 Villa Drive, with Bishop Bruce Burtenshaw officiating. Burial will be in the Pleasant View Cemetery in Burley, with military rites provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization.

Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday, June 13, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St., in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Monday at the church.

Rare photograph of slave children found in NC attic

By Nicole Norfleet
Associated Press writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — A haunting 150-year-old photo found in a North Carolina attic shows a young black child named John, barefoot and wearing ragged clothes, perched on a barrel next to another unidentified young boy.

Art historians believe it's an extremely rare Civil War-era photograph of children who were either slaves at the time or recently emancipated.

The photo, which may have been taken in the early 1860s, was a testament to a dark part of American history, said Will Stapp, a photographic historian and founding curator of the National Portrait Gallery's photographs department at the Smithsonian Institution.

"It's a very difficult and poignant piece of American history," he said. "What you are looking at when you look at this photo are two boys who were victims of that history."

In April, the photo was found at a moving sale in Charlotte, accompanied by a document detailing the sale of John for $1,150, not a small sum in 1854.

New York collector Keya Morgan said he paid $30,000 for the photo album including the photo of the young boys and several family pictures and $20,000 for the sale document. Morgan said the deceased owner of the home where the photo was found was thought to be a descendant of John.

A portrait of slave children is rare, Morgan said.

"I buy stuff all the time, but this shocked me," he said.

What makes the picture an even more compelling find is that several art experts said it was created by the photography studio of Mathew Brady, a famous 19th-century photographer known for his portraits of historical figures such as President Abraham Lincoln and Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Stapp said the photo was probably not taken by Brady himself but by one of Brady's apprentices, Timothy O'Sullivan. O'Sullivan took a multitude of photos depicting the carnage of the Civil War.

In 1862, O'Sullivan famously photographed a group of some of the first slaves liberated after Lincoln issued his preliminary Emancipation Proclamation.

Such photos were circulated in the North by abolitionists to garner support for the Union during the Civil War, said Harold Holzer, an author of several books about Lincoln. Holzer works as an administrator at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Most of the photos depicted adult slaves who had been beaten or whipped, he said.

The photo of the two boys is more subtle, Holzer said, which may be why it wasn't widely circulated and remained unpublished for so long.

"To me, it's such a moving and astonishing picture," he said.

Ron Soodalter, an author and member of the board of directors at the Abraham Lincoln Institute in Washington, D.C., said the photo depicts the reality of slavery.

"I think this picture shows that the institution of slavery didn't pick or choose," said Soodalter, who has written several books on historic and modern slavery. "This was a generic horror. It victimized the old, the young."

For now, Morgan said, he is keeping the photo in his personal collection, but he said he has had an inquiry to sell the photo to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He said he is considering participating in the creation of a video documentary about John.

CANYON JAM

offers diverse sounds

From operatic rock to a guitar legend, festival will swing

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Bearfoot

www.bearfootband.com

If you like Uncle Earl or the String Dusters — acoustic American roots tunes featuring three-part vocal harmonies; mandolin, fiddle and guitar solos; and some twin fiddling to get your foot tapping — check out Bearfoot.

The band, which began in Alaska and is now based in Nashville, has been touring nationally for about a decade and splits its sets between covers and original material.

"We pull from genres like bluegrass and old-time music, some country swing and a little bit of jazz influence as well," said Jason Norris, who plays mandolin and fiddle.

Concertgoers to the Festival at Sandpoint might have heard Bearfoot perform in 2008, but since then their lineup has changed, so even fans are in for something new at Canyon Jam. The new performers include Jake Stargell, a guitarist who last played with the Greencards, and Sam Grisham on bass.

Norris mentioned a couple of songs the audience should listen for, "Rock the Cradle Joe" and "Time is No Medicine": "If I'm lucky enough, (listeners) might get to hear Angela (Oudean) and I do a twin fiddle tune together without the rest of the band."

He also said to listen for a ballad with beautiful lyrics, "Oh My Love" by Megan McCormick, often played on the radio.

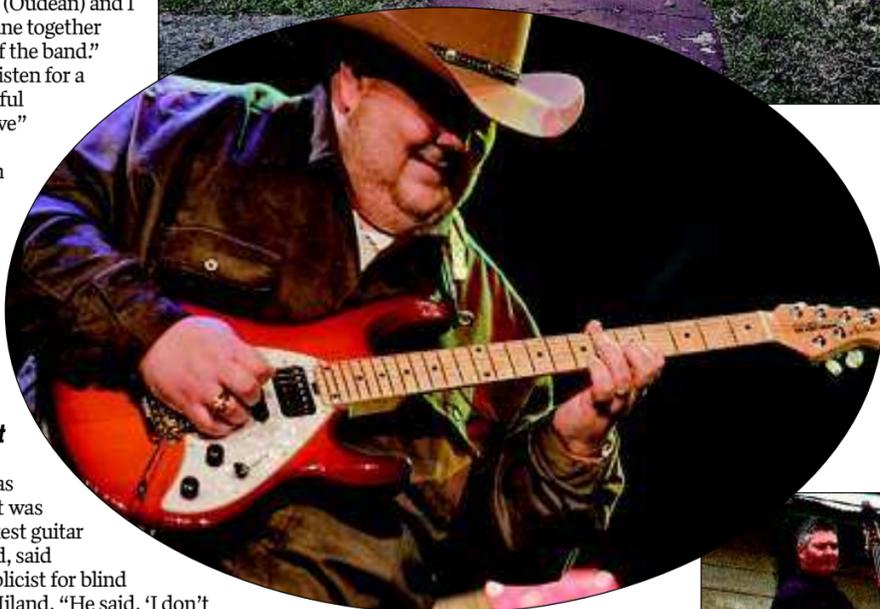

Johnny Hiland

www.johnnyhiland.net

Jimi Hendrix was once asked what it was like to be the greatest guitar player in the world, said Michael Clair, publicist for blind guitarist Johnny Hiland. "He said, 'I don't know, ask Johnny Hiland,'" Clair said. "All the greatest guitar players in the world consider him to be the one they wish they could play like."

Clair said Hiland, who is right-handed but plays left-handed guitar, specializes in what is called "chicken pickin'" which is based on the guitar styles of Jerry Reed and James Burton, who played with Elvis Presley.

"It's been traditionally a country format, but Johnny took it to heavy metal music and rock music in general," Clair said. "He crosses all boundaries."

Although Nashville-based Hiland doesn't plan set lists, instead responding to audience demand and what the crowd feels like on any given day, Clair said "Mercury Blues" and "Orange Blossom Special" are standbys and favorites.

"Once you see him, you just have to see him again and again," Clair said. "His shows are always great, but they're never the same so it's always exciting and fresh."

Red Rock Hot Club

www.redrockhotclub.com

This Salt Lake City band found its seed in Idaho, said Rich Daigle, the group's guitarist.

"This band wouldn't exist if it weren't for the Iconoclast book shop in Ketchum," Daigle said, because that is where he first saw a video of gypsy jazz guitarist Django Reinhardt and modern players in that tradition.

"It has that European sound to it, but it swings like that early vintage jazz did back in the day. We like to say it's the sounds of Paris in the '30s and '40s," Daigle said. "It's pretty infectious; little kids immediately start dancing."

Red Rock Hot Club uses arched-top guitars with specialized silver-plated strings, copies of those Paris-era instruments.

Daigle said the audience will recognize the music, even if they don't know it's gypsy jazz.

"It ranges from sweet and lowdown to really up-tempo hot swing. When they hear us, they'll recognize the sound from TV commercials, radio commercials," he said. There are standards, like "It Had to Be You" and "Sweet Georgia Brown," he said, but also original material like "Gypsy Daydream," the title of their last album.

While listening, audiences should watch for little nods — they signal that a solo is about to be traded, and they happen when Daigle is feeling it.

"We leave this element wide open to what may happen, from song to song," he said. "What you're hearing is something that could happen only that day, that afternoon, that moment."

Foolsbane

www.foolsbane.com

Locals from southern Idaho, Foolsbane formed from the remnants of bands that members Jason Ramsey and Tracey Emery were in during their teen years.

"The band has its origins in us being high school kids who love guitars," Ramsey said. He's hard-pressed to describe exactly what the music sounds like. "There is a heavy element to it, a hard rock element to it, but cinematic is probably the best word. ... It's like a movie for your ears."

Foolsbane plays only original material, from its past album and a planned future album, which tie together to tell the story of a man who is taken to heaven and then returned to Earth a thousand years later.

"It's his journey through this new world, and he's confronted by this really awful, evil stuff, and he has to find his way through it," Ramsey said, comparing the concept to that of Pink Floyd's rock opera "The Wall."

The material the band will play in the canyon features pieces never before played live, including "Kill or Be Killed," which Ramsey describes as the most technically challenging thing the band has attempted.

"Anybody who knows what we do knows that's a big deal," he said, describing fast changes, difficult time signatures and intricate guitar work. "We exhale when we're done, it's like an acrobatics routine."

Ramsey said that if listeners appreciate tight musicianship, they'll like Foolsbane even if harder rock is not their preferred genre.

Ethan Tucker

www.myspace.com/etuckermusic

With his acoustic, folk and reggae chops, Twin Falls performer Ethan Tucker has become a favorite at small venues around southern Idaho, but he is beginning to book bigger concerts, including a recent performance at Sun Valley Pavilion's acoustic weekend.

Muzzie Braun

www.muzziebraun.com

A southern Idaho favorite, Stanley resident Muzzie Braun often plays in Twin Falls, getting audiences up and swinging with his guitar and vocals on both original and cover material.

Mad Max & The Wild Ones

www.myspace.com/madmaxandthewildones

Three boys under 19 years old are the heart of this band, though their dad helps keep them together, said Angela Maxwell — mother of Wyatt, 18, on lead guitar; Cole, 14 on drums; and Duke, 9, on lead vocals, rhythm guitar and harmonica; and husband to Mad Max on upright bass.

"Wyatt was 8 and asked for a guitar for his birthday. When Cole was 5, he asked for drums and got them for Christmas. Duke started singing along, and before too long, they taught their dad how to play bass because he was feeling left out," Maxwell said.

"A lot of people look at it and think it's a novelty because they're kids, that it'll be cute but not very good," she said. "They will be blown away; people are constantly amazed at how great they really are. You have to see it to believe it, I think."

The Springville, Utah, band, which plays primarily covers artists like Johnny Cash, Johnny Burnette and John Lee Hooker, also writes original material.

"Clash of the Titans; it's a battle between the guitar and the drums, which is a lot of fun," Maxwell said. "We always joke that the way they settle arguments is to go to the basement (where the instruments are) and battle it out that way."

Wyatt is the youngest person ever to be sponsored by Gretsch guitars, Maxwell said, and the band is featured on gretsch.com this month. Cole adds stick twirling to his drumming routines.

Five things you don't want to miss during Dairy Days

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Dance under the stars and gamble on a cow pie next weekend during Wendell's Dairy Days.

Organizers for the Wendell Chamber of Commerce-sponsored festival, themed "Magic Valley, Magic Cows," have been hard at work bringing in entertainment and vendors for the three-day event which opens Thursday.

Dan Neal, chamber president and event chairman, said many volunteers are putting in long hours.

"It takes a lot more than one person to get all this together," Neal said.

Here are five events sure to add to the Dairy Days revelry:

Carnival dollar night

Kick off the family fun in an affordable way. The young and young at heart can get their thrills on the carnival rides for just a buck per ride from 6 to 10 p.m. Thursday. The carnival will be set up on Pocatello Street, adjacent to City Park.

Scott Roper, owner of Payette-based Fun Time Carnival, said the company will bring "at least eight rides and a variety of gaming opportunities," including the Sizzler, Rock-O-Plane, Roll-O-Plane and tot-sized cars and motorcycles.

"We have big, major rides and a few new ones we haven't brought to Wendell before," Roper said.

On June 18-19, tickets will cost $1 each, with each ride requiring up to four tickets. Unlimited-ride wristbands cost $17 per day.

Put the finishing touch on creating, or recapturing, your childhood carnival memory with a candied apple or a swirl of cotton candy.

Cut a rug

Join rock band Dirty Johnny, 7-10 p.m. June 18, at the stage in City Park for a night of music and dancing. While live music is nothing new for Dairy Days, a dance floor is.

"We tried the street dance last year and thought that bringing in a special dance floor to set up in front of the stage would be even better," Neal said.

Since no alcohol is offered during Dairy Days, the concert and dance will be family-friendly.

Bring your dancing shoes but leave your wallet at home. This concert is free.

Cow Patty Bingo

Slap down $10 for your chance at winning a large cash prize during this luck-of-the-draw — er, drop — game that supports the Wendell High School FFA.

One lucky Holstein will be brought in to lay down her chips on a large game board, drawn onto Main Street. Who ever bought the square where the cow-pie lands wins half the money collected.

"The other half of the pot will go right back into the local FFA program, helping kids go to the state and national convention," said FFA adviser Holly Church.

The game board's 100 squares go up for sale June 19, after the parade. The cow will be let loose onto the game board at 3:30 p.m. that day.

Show & Shine

You won't have to walk blocks away from the heart of Dairy Days action to check out this year's Show & Shine car show. Instead of the city's soccer field, the show will set up in Veterans Memorial Park, just across Main Street from City Park, where the bulk of entertainment will be.

"I think this will truly make a difference and make the car show a bigger success," said show chairman Louie Bay, who is expecting up to 100 vehicle entries.

In its sixth year, the show includes an impressive lineup. Expect an array of muscle cars, military Jeeps, rock-climbing 4x4s, classic cruisers, sleek speed racers and mud racers.

Even Cliff Lockhart, organizer of the Castleford Classics Motor Jamboree, is getting in on the action.

"We're bringing some of the Jamboree cars, a newer Mustang, a Plymouth coupe and hot rods, but what we're really excited about is the possibility of having some nitrous cars and jeeps to show off," Lockhart said.

The Wendell car show, open 8-6 p.m. June 19, is free to attend.

Community Players

It's been a year since an audience was thrilled with Brad and Jennifer Nebeker's skit as the unforgettable Tevye the milkman and wife Golde, from "Fiddler on the Roof."

The success of their skit, during the Community Players variety show in last year's Dairy Days, prompted the theater company to bring the entire story to the stage, said musical director Kathleen Smith.

"They were so wonderful that the president of the Community Players called them and decided to do the whole thing," Smith said.

The musical, with music by Jerry Bock, lyrics by Sheldon Harnick and book by Joseph Stein, is set in Tsarist Russia in 1905 and based on Tevye and his daughters.

Fittingly, Brad and Jennifer Nebeker of Wendell are cast in the same roles. As word got around, "community members came out of the woodwork to be involved," Smith said. "Everyone has been so excited to be a part of this."

With a cast of 40, including a 10-piece orchestra, this is one of the Community Players' biggest productions. It's set for 7 p.m. June 18-19 and 25-26 at the Wendell High School auditorium. Tickets, available at the door, cost $7 for adults, $5 for seniors and students or $25 for a family.

Dark musical explores societal pressures on the young

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Everyman, that ordinary person all of us are supposed to identify with, becomes “every-teenager” in the version of “Pippin” that’s set to open Thursday at The Community School Theatre in Sun Valley.

And he’s chasing the American dream.

“The musical is ordinarily set in the court of Charlemagne. But the setting is immaterial — it translates very well to the American dream,” said Freddie Harris, who is directing “Pippin” for St. Thomas Playhouse.

“We’re told in America that if we work real hard we can achieve our dreams. In fact, I listened to that over and over at the Wood River High School graduation,” Harris added. “But, in reality, kids are pushed so hard to be all they can be, and then, if things don’t happen like in a Disney movie, they feel like a real failure.”

“Pippin” opened on Broadway in 1972. Under the direction of Bob Fosse, Ben Vereen won a Tony Award for his singing and dancing.

The musical revolves around a young prince who sets out to discover the secret of true happiness and fulfillment. He looks for it first in the glories of the battlefield but comes to realize the “God is on our side, rah-rah imperialism” is a sham.

Next he turns to the temptations of the flesh. And, finally, to the intrigues of political power.

The story features dance numbers and ballads by three-time Oscar-winning composer/lyricist Stephen Schwartz, who wrote the music for “Godspell” and such animated films as “Pocahontas,” “The Hunchback of Notre Dame” and “The Prince of Egypt.”

Dawson Howard, a University of Idaho student, stars as Pippin in the St. Thomas version. Kevin Wade, a Community School alum who just graduated from New York University’s Tisch School of Performing Arts, plays The Leading Player.

“He’s a shadowy figure who manipulates Pippin, almost like a puppet,” Howard said. “It’s sort of a play within a play. It opens with a band of plays put on and then you find out that Pippin’s a real person, not a character in a play.”

The show explores the themes of reality versus illusion and the societal pres-

And two plays for kids

St. Thomas Playhouse Company B Summer Performing Arts Camp will present two children’s plays in June.

“101 Dalmatians Kids” will be at 2 p.m. Thursday and June 19 at The Community School Theatre, 181 Dollar road in Sun Valley. The show is based on the familiar story of the monstrous Cruella de Vil, who is bent on stealing the Dalmatians of London for her new fur coat.

“Dear Edwina Junior” will be at 2 p.m. June 18 and 20 at The Community School Theatre. It revolves around Edwina Spoonapple, who decides that she and her pals will put on a show. When a talent scout visits, she and her quirky friends sing out her musical advice in hopes of landing her a spot in the Kalamazoo Advice-a-palooza Festival.

ures that shape young culture.

In the end, the play offers a transcending message, said Emmett Fortuin, a sophomore at Wood River High.

“It shows this boy who is totally striving to do good and when it doesn’t work as he’d hoped, he falls apart,” he said.

“‘Pippin’ asks us to look at the way we perpetuate the status quo — we’re all complicit,” Harris said.

Hailey commission seeks artists for rodeo park project

Hailey Arts Commission invites Idaho artists to submit their qualifications to design and integrate public art elements for the new Hailey Rodeo Park.

A selection panel will choose up to five artists to work with the project architect as part of the design team.

The rodeo park combines four facilities at one site: a new indoor ice rink, new multi-use event arena, expanded Hailey Skatepark and a welcome/interpretive center. Artists should consider the purpose of the facilities when preparing applications, said organizers.

Interested? Attend an artist workshop at 5:30 p.m. Thursday upstairs at Hailey City Hall. Artists are welcome to review the project drawings at City Hall.

Deadline for submissions is 5 p.m. July 7 (postmarks not acceptable); deliver or mail to City of Hailey, 115 Main St. S., Suite H, Hailey, ID 83333.

A season at Galena

Barbecue, mountain bikes, kid camps and wildflowers

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Galena Lodge will kick off its summer season Saturday with its annual Galena Summer Benefit and Barbecue from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Cost is $15 for barbecue lunch and beverage. Proceeds help fund operation of the lodge, which relies on donations and revenue from cross-country ski passes.

The lodge is best known for its Nordic skiing. But in summer it turns into a popular mountain bike and hiking destination, as well as a laid-back area for weddings and other private parties, said Janelle Connors, trails assistant for Blaine County Recreation District.

Highlights from the upcoming season:

Galena will offer a dinner in conjunction with its free monthly bike skills clinic this summer, said manager Don Shepler. The free mountain bike clinics will begin at 6 p.m. the first Wednesday of every month, with 45 minutes devoted to learning skills and another 45 minutes to riding the trails around the lodge. A barbecue or one-pot meal for $12.50 will be offered at 7:30 p.m.

The lodge will also offer a new lunch menu featuring Wildflower hunters can sometimes find glacier lilies along creeks like Gladiator Creek near Galena Lodge. The flowers emerge in alpine meadows after the snow melts and often last well into August.

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

more local beef, Lava Lake Lamb and local produce from producers associated with Idaho Bounty from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. Some old items like steak wraps and barbecued pulled pork will return to the menu.

Barbecue buffet dinners and wagon rides provided by the Galena Stage Stop Corral will introduce guests to the history of the old mining town of Galena on Thursday evenings.

Ketchum singer-songwriter Bruce Innes will put down his fly-fishing rod and take up his guitar every Sunday to sing "Riding on the City of New Orleans" during the Sunday brunch, which starts at 11 a.m.

The half-day Youth Adventure Camps for youngsters 6-8 years old proved so popular last year that the lodge is offering a second week, said Erin Shepler. June 14-18 and June 21-25 will be reserved for the 6- to 8-year-olds. Cost is $250 a week.

And full-day camps for ages 8-12 will be held Mondays through Fridays, June 28 through Aug. 20. The camps, which include a night in a yurt, cost $395 a week and include rafting, mountain biking, climbing and horseback riding, as well as lessons in first aid and map reading.

The hike to Titus Lake, which takes off across the road from Galena Lodge or from a second trailhead just below Galena Summit, should be exceptionally pretty this year, thanks to the cool, wet spring, Don Shepler said.

"It's going to be gorgeous with full, blue water. And the wildflowers are always stunning along the Harriman Trail, starting at lower elevations and finishing at higher elevations. We should have some beautiful wildflowers in Senate Meadows, as well," he said. Information: 726-4010.

Outdoor concert brings sounds of Cuba to Hailey

Times-News

Hear the Afro-Cuban rhythms of Jose Conde and Nu Latin Groove, at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts' first outdoor concert of the season, 7 p.m. June 18 in Hailey.

Presented in association with the College of Southern Idaho's Sun Valley Summer Spanish Institute, the center's annual "Fandango!" concert on the lawn of its Hailey facility, at 314 S. Second Ave., is an all-ages-welcome event with a distinctly Latin flavor.

This year's headliner, Jose Conde, was born in Chicago and raised in Miami by parents who fled Cuba in the 1960s. Conde likes to tell people, "I feel en Cubano" part, as he takes audiences on a dizzying, rhythmic tour of tropically-influenced styles from Puerto Rican bomba to Haitian compas and New Orleans swamp funk, with his New York-based Nu Latin Groove band.

"I feel a need to preserve much of what is valuable in my culture," Conde said in a press release. "But I also feel that culture is a constantly changing and evolving phenomenon and as an immigrant, I have a responsibility to seek out this new territory and express it in my music."

Tickets are $15 for Sun Valley Center members, $20 for others and $5 for children 12 and younger. Purchase at the door, at sunvalleycenter.org or at 726-9491, ext. 10. One concert ticket is included with registration for the Summer Spanish Institute; call CSI for information at 788-2033.

Picnic baskets and blankets are welcome. Food, beer and wine will be available for purchase. No pets.

Whatever your age, line up your date for Twin Falls' Senior Prom

Times-News

Young, old and in-between are invited to the Twin Falls Community Senior Prom — the first of what organizers hope will become an annual dance. A fundraiser for Twin Falls' senior center, the Senior Prom will start at 6 p.m. June 18 at the senior center, 530 Shoshone St. W.

"With the recession and a general malaise in the economy, the senior center finds itself not unlike other businesses as we face unexpected financial shortfalls," Michael Johnson, president of the center's board, said in a press release. "With Medicaid payments on hold, the senior center is paying for the Meals on Wheels program for qualified recipients, which is just one aspect affecting our ability to stay in the black."

Center Director Phil Kottraba said: "With the recession upon us and the everyday news about the damage to the Gulf Coast, this is a chance to take a moment and be with our favorite person to relax and dance.

"The Senior Prom is an opportunity to support your senior center and rekindle those memories of your prom night whether it was five years ago or 50 years ago," Kottraba said. "Everyone is invited to wash the car, get your dancing outfit out of the closet, escort your favorite person onto the dance floor, and move to the music of Glenn Miller, Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington and other greats of the past and even the early days of rock and roll."

The sounds of those great days of romance will be engineered by Forrest Anderson of Anderson Mobile Music. A donation of $5 per person is suggested.

Secretly long to live the life of a rock star?

Hear Steve Almond read in Ketchum

Times-News

On Tuesday, hear Steve Almond read from his new book, "Rock and Roll Will Save Your Life," which Publishers Weekly called "a hilarious riff on the power of music."

The reading is free and open to the public, at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at Sun Valley Center for the Arts in Ketchum.

Raunchy, opinionated and funny, Almond's book — subtitled "A Book by and for the Fanatics Among Us (with Bitchin' Soundtrack)" — recounts the central role music has played in his relationships, sexual encounters and life transitions, while sprinkling in idiosyncratic lists ("The Official Drooling Fanatic's Desert Island Playlist") bound to annoy rock critics and provoke readers.

Almond drops more than a few f-bombs as he reflects on the delusional power of songs, the awkward mating habits of drooling fanatics and why Depression Songs actually make us feel so much better, the center said in a press release. To find out more about the book and listen to its soundtrack, visit stevealmond.com.

Although his style has been compared to that of David Sedaris, Almond is not strictly a memoirist. A former newspaper reporter, he has published two short story collections, "My Life in Heavy Metal" and "The Evil B.B. Chow," and two nonfiction books, "Candy Freaks" and "(Not That You Asked)," as well as a novel, "Which Brings Me to You," the latter with Julianna Baggott. He was adjunct professor in creative writing at Boston College for five years until he resigned in 2006 to protest the selection of Condoleezza Rice as that year's commencement speaker.

In addition to his reading, Almond will lead a writing workshop for the Sun Valley Center, June 14-18. Workshop students will read from their work at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the center's Hailey facility. The students' free reading is open to the public.

Arritt named Minico High athletic director

Replaces Perrigot

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minico High School has named Kelly Arritt to be its new athletic director.

"The learning curve will be pretty good this first year, but I'm excited to work with the athletics again. I've missed coaching quite a bit," Arritt said.

Arritt, who has been an assistant principal at the school the past six years, has a deep background in athletics, having coached volleyball, softball, girls and boys basketball and golf. Prior to becoming Minico's vice

"He's been a head coach and an assistant coach with the principal, Arritt taught at the school for 13 years.

"He'll be a great A.D.," said former Minico athletic director Tim Perrigot.

"He's done an outstanding job as A.D., so there are some big shoes to fill," Arritt said of Perrigot. "Overall the athletics are in good shape."

Arritt said one of the challenges facing the Minico athletic program is the same one every Idaho school is facing: balancing the program's finances amid a volatile economy.

"Finances are looking pretty tough, when you look ahead the way the economy is. And that's not just athletics, but school-wide,"

Arritt said.

In addition, Arritt said he looks forward to working with Minico's coaches.

"When you look at some of our programs that have been successful, there's stability (in coaching)," Arritt said. "Hopefully we can get that all the way across in all our programs and have that kind of stability."

Cowboys take two to open Donnelley

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

So far, so good. Now comes the real challenge.

After rallying with three late runs to take their opening game of the Donnelley Sports Wood Bat Tournament on Thursday, the host Twin Falls Cowboys pasted Meridian 12-2 in five innings to close the first day of the tournament with two victories.

Jason Byce doubled twice and Damon Jones had a two-run double as Twin Falls scored five times in the second against Meridian to break a 1-1 tie. The Cowboys added three runs in each of the next two innings to invoke the run rule.

John Honhorst scattered four hits to pick up the win.

"Two wins is good for us. We expect a challenge (today) with Blackfoot. They're a good ball club," said Twin Falls coach Mark Schaal.

In the opener, Twin Falls was down 5-3 in the sixth but scored three times to take a 6-5 win over Marsh Falls.

"It was good to see that we can win coming from behind or going ahead," said Marcus Donaldson, whose two-run triple was the backbreaker in the Meridian game. "We saw what happened going behind and we wanted to take it to (Meridian) early!"

The Cowboys expect a stern task in today's opening game against Blackfoot. They'll also play the Boise Capitals later in the day, but that game won't count toward their final seeding for Saturday play.

Blackfoot's team consists of essentially its full Class 4A high school varsity squad, plus a pair of returning collegians. It handled Meridian and Marsh Falls in two games Thursday.

"It's going to be tough," said Donaldson. "We just have to make them earn their runs and hit the ball!"

Minico's Johnson soars to another triple jump title

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Although he excels at it, track and field has always been an afterthought for Minico's Coltin Johnson. It was simply something to fill time when basketball season was over.

Still, Johnson's natural athletic ability allowed him to soar in the triple, high and long jump events, for which he earns the distinction of 2010 Times-News Track and Field Male Athlete of the Year.

"It was worth it. I'm happy with what happened this year," Johnson said. "How much work I put in, I'm proud of the reward I got at the end."

The reward at the end of Johnson's high school career was his second straight Class 4A state title in triple jump after leaping a personal-best 45 feet, 2.75 inches. He was also the Class 4A District IV champ in long jump (21-1.5) and high jump (6-02), events in which he placed third and fifth, respectively, at state.

When he won his first triple jump state title last year as a junior, he had only been training in the event a couple weeks. Like many things athletically for Johnson, it just came easy.

"Ever since I was a little kid I just did stuff without really trying or thinking about it. It was just really easy," Johnson said. "When I got to high school, then it got a little bit harder. I had to practice more and try more than when I was a kid."

Johnson was a kicker and wide receiver for the Spartan football team. Basketball, however, is his first love.

In fact, winning back-to-back state triple jump titles doesn't even rank as his favorite high school memory — that distinction is tied between two moments. The first was kicking the game-winning field goal against Twin Falls as a sophomore, which preserved Minico's first undefeated regular season in school history. The second came during his junior year against rival Burley, when he threw down his first dunk in a varsity game. He scored 21 points and grabbed seven rebounds that night as the Spartans beat Burley for the first time in over four years.

Johnson said he will attend Olympic College in Bremerton, Wash., where he plans to play basketball. With high school in his rearview mirror, Johnson said he learned some good lessons that will serve him going forward.

"You have to work. The higher up you get, the harder you have to work," he

'Big Baby' the big key in Celtics win

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press writer

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics have tied up the NBA finals, and they owe it more to "Big Baby" than the Big Three.

Backup Glen "Big Baby" Davis scored half of his 18 points in the fourth quarter, leading the Celtics bench as Boston pulled away from the Los Angeles Lakers to win 96-89 on Thursday night and even the best-of-seven series at two games apiece.

Game 5 is Sunday night in Boston. The Celtics' win guaranteed them a trip back to Los Angeles and averted a 3-1 deficit that has never been overcome in NBA finals history.

Kobe Bryant scored 33 points and Pau Gasol had 21 for the Lakers.

Paul Pierce scored 19 points, Kevin Garnett had 13 and Ray Allen bounced back from a seven-quarter shooting slump to score 12 points for Boston.

But the new Big Three that led the Celtics to their 17th NBA title in 2008 — beating the Lakers in the finals — was on the bench for much of the fourth-quarter run that gave Boston the lead for good.

"I don't think guys really care and that's why we're here, it really is," Boston coach Doc Rivers said of the extra minutes for the bench. "... It was great, you know."

Colorado flips first card in realignment

Bufs leave Big 12 for Pac-10

By John Marshall
Associated Press writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — College athletics are on the verge of a monumental shift, a realignment that could disintegrate one conference, turn others into 16-school colossals and have huge financial implications on some of the biggest programs in the country.

The first card flipped on Thursday, when Colorado ditched the Big 12 for the Pac-10. Next up appear to be Nebraska and Missouri, both facing decisions that could spark another exodus and the collapse of the Big 12.

"(Now) the first move is made, I think you'll see the dominos start falling," said Joel Maxcey, sports economist at the University of Georgia.

It's already been a wild ride.

The Big Ten started it off by exploring plans to expand, an effort it hoped would add more eyes to its successful cable network and reach the NCAA minimum of 12 teams required to hold a conference championship game in football.

The Big Ten's big grab led to harried calls between rivals, political ploys and behind-the-scenes maneuvering as schools across the country look to make sure they're not standing alone, pockets empty, when the music stops.

Colorado took a pre-emptive strike, deciding to head west to the Pac-10 instead of waiting to see what everyone else was going to do. The next move could come Friday, when Nebraska and Missouri face a stay-or-go ultimatum from the Big 12.

Nebraska seems most likely to go.

The Cornhuskers have long-standing ties with many of the schools in the Big 12's North Division — they've played Kansas and Missouri in football since the 1890s — but Big Ten money might be too much to pass up.

Nebraska's regents are scheduled to meet Friday to discuss realignment. Colorado's choice to bolt early could play a role in the decision, though it might already be a done deal.

"It doesn't say anything," Nebraska athletic director Tom Osborne said of Colorado's announcement. "I really

Brooks, Gaines sign with Grays Harbor

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Dylan Brooks and Cassidy Gaines have played against each other plenty. Soon, they'll be teammates.

Both Brooks and Gaines recently signed letters of intent with Grays Harbor College in Aberdeen, Wash.

A Hagerman graduate who played baseball for Class 3A state champion Buhl, Brooks will be a utility player for the Chokers, while possibly seeing time on the mound.

Gaines, who helped the Twin Falls baseball team tie for third at the 4A state tourney, will be a pitcher.

Both said Grays Harbor coach Shon Schreiber sees them jumping right into the rotation for the Chokers, who compete in the Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges.

"(Schreiber) thinks I'll be able to step right into their program and contribute," said Brooks, a four-year varsity basketball and football player at Hagerman. Brooks played second base at Buhl as a senior after seeing time in left field, and he pitched the opening game of the state tournament in May.

"I love being a utility player," he said. "I love playing anywhere they need me."

Gaines is spending his summer on the Twin Falls Hawks American Legion

Baseball team. He played with the Twin Falls Cowboys in previous summers, but moved to the first-year Hawks program to get more innings on the mound.

It's all part of preparing for what he believes will be a big role with Grays Harbor.

Schreiber learned of Gaines through with his work in a fall league in 2009 and connected with him through his profile on Berecruited.com. Gaines said Schreiber is "ready for me to be in the top four of their rotation."

Brooks connected with Schreiber through Hagerman basketball coach Kevin Cato and initially traveled to Aberdeen to try out for the school's basketball program.

While there, he expressed interest in baseball and impressed the Chokers with his workout. While he also considered walking on at Treasure Valley Community College, Grays Harbor's scholarship offer was too good to pass up.

"I'm really excited to get up there," said Brooks, who will travel to Aberdeen as soon as his American Legion season with the Buhl Tribe concludes.

Gaines said his time at Grays Harbor will be all about preparing for the next level.

"I definitely plan to go and work as hard as I can to get to a four-year school," he said.

Christiansen, Minico get win at RBI

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Before he departed for a Utah State basketball camp in Logan, Utah, on Thursday, Casey Christiansen first took care of Logan's American Legion Baseball team at the RBI Tournament.

Christiansen tossed a one-hit shutout as the Spartans beat Logan 2-0 at Warburton Field.

"Casey threw a gem, and I was most impressed that he was down in the zone all day," said Minico coach Ben Frank.

Christiansen struck out 10 and walked one. His no-hitter was broken up on a bloop single with two outs in the seventh.

"I thought about it, but it wasn't really any big deal," said Christiansen of his near no-no. "I hit my spots for the most part the whole day."

The Minico infield committed three errors, but overall played well considering it consisted of three freshmen — Andrew Frank, Stetzen Wrigley and Shay Chandler.

"They're freshmen, but they're still solid players," Christiansen said. "Defensively, Andrew is about as good as it gets, and Stetzen and Shay are solid, too. They made a lot of plays."

Minico was fortunate that Christiansen was lights-out on the mound because the Spartans couldn't provide much run support, although the opportunities were there. Minico loaded the bases with one out in the fifth, and then loaded them again with two outs in the sixth, but came away with nothing.

"You usually get maybe one chance, but usually not two chances in game where you have the opportunity to end the game and break the team's back," Frank said. "We had that chance, but couldn't get the hits."

Suede Denker scored on a passed ball in the third and Frank had an RBI fielder's choice in the fourth.

In other RBI Tournament action Thursday, Logan bounced back to beat Brigham City 12-9 and the Pocatello Rebels beat Caldwell AA 8-0. Caldwell

CSI's Lively talks about earning Gold Glove honor

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Blake Lively wasn't scared of the transition to third base. Suffice it to say he didn't think it would work out this well this soon.

After playing second base for his high school career and earning sufficient recognition to carry on at the next level, Lively picked up a prestigious honor Wednesday when he was named the NJCAA Division I Rawlings Gold Glove winner for third basemen.

Lively said the honor, which he learned about from a couple of friends perusing the NJCAA's website, was "cool" and reflected the amount of work he put in learning his position.

"I knew that I could play anywhere," the CSI sophomore-to-be from Redmond, Wash., said in a phone interview Thursday. "The main reason why I wanted to go to college was to play baseball. I really wanted to be an infielder, mainly, and whatever position I could play would be done to my fullest."

Lively's continuing to work on what he calls the most important part of defense, the first step, with his hometown summer ball team, the Seattle Bombers.

NCAA hits USC athletics with severe penalties

By Gary Klein and David Wharton
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Citing a history of misdeeds that “strike at the heart” of college amateurism, the NCAA hit USC with a string of penalties Thursday that will keep the powerhouse Trojans football team out of bowl games for the next two seasons and could cost the university millions of dollars.

The sanctions, which also involve men’s basketball and women’s tennis, culminated a four-year investigation that began with separate reports that two star athletes — Heisman Trophy-winning tailback Reggie Bush and basketball forward O.J. Mayo — had accepted improper gifts from outside sports marketers and agents.

As the governing body for college sports, the NCAA’s Committee on Infractions cited USC for a lack of institutional control, extra benefits and unethical conduct by an assistant football coach, among other things.

“The general campus environment surrounding the violations troubled the committee,” according to the NCAA’s public report.

In addition to the postseason ban, the football program will lose 10 scholarships a season for three seasons and face additional restrictions in how and when its coaches may recruit high school prospects. The Trojans must forfeit victories from part of 2004 and all of 2005, which could jeopardize their 2004 national championship.

USC had already self-imposed sanctions on the basketball team earlier this year, agreeing to a one-year postseason ban as well as scholarship and recruiting restrictions. The NCAA took no further action.

USC’s entire athletic program was placed on four years of probation.

Bush and Mayo have repeatedly said they did nothing wrong. USC administrators, who had no immediate comment, can now appeal the decision.

Any penalties to football could affect other sports at the school, if only because football is the athletic department’s cash cow, generating more than $76 million in 2007-08, the most recent season for which figures were available.

Some of the luster that USC has acquired over recent years could be lost, too.

Gone are some of the victories from 2004-05, when the Trojans won the Bowl Championship Series title and finished 13-0. Gone are all the victories from 2005-06, when they finished the regular season undefeated before losing to Texas in the BCS title game.

That 2004-05 championship could be revoked by way of a provision the BCS quietly enacted several years ago.

And Bush’s status as the 2005 Heisman winner could be in jeopardy if the Heisman Trophy Trust decides to take action. Trust officials declined to comment on Thursday.

Thursday’s ruling will certainly reverberate through the Pacific 10 Conference, in the midst of an ambitious expansion. Colorado joined the Pac-10 on Thursday and other high-profile schools, including Texas, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, could soon follow.

“This is an historic moment for the conference,” Commissioner Larry Scott said.

So the NCAA’s announcement could not have come at a worse time.

Another celebrated football program, Alabama, received similar penalties in 2002, when Crimson Tide boosters were found to be paying players. The program received five years’ probation, a two-year bowl ban and the loss of 21 scholarships over three seasons.

In USC’s case, the committee said it also seriously considered imposing a television ban.

The football violations occurred during former coach Pete Carroll’s tenure and centered on Bush, a star for the Trojans from 2003 to 2005.

The former tailback, now playing for the New Orleans Saints, was ruled retroactively ineligible for taking cash and gifts from a pair of would-be sports marketers who hoped to represent him after he turned professional. Bush’s family also lived in a home owned by one of the marketers without paying rent.

The NCAA said that in January 2006, the marketers contacted a USC assistant to complain that Bush was not living up to the deal they had made with him. Investigators said the assistant failed to alert USC compliance officials of the situation and later provided “false and misleading information” to the NCAA.

The football program was also cited for breaking rules by having a hired consultant act as an assistant coach.

The violations in basketball occurred before and during Mayo’s one season with the Trojans in 2007-08, when the team was coached by Tim Floyd.

The NCAA said that from August 2006 through May 2008, Mayo and people close to him took cash, lodging, transportation, a cell phone, a television, watches, shoes and clothing from Rodney Guillory, a representative of a Northern California agent.

As part of its punishment, the NCAA ordered USC to disassociate itself with Bush, Mayo and Guillory, who were described but not named in the report.

Investigators also found that a women’s tennis player used an athletic department long-distance access code to make 123 unauthorized international calls to family members, for a total value of $7,000.

Most of the major figures in this scandal have long since left Southern California.

Bush is in the NFL and Mayo plays for the Memphis Grizzlies of the NBA. Carroll left in January to become coach of the Seattle Seahawks, and Floyd resigned in June 2009, later citing a lack of support from Athletic Director Mike Garrett. He worked as an assistant for the NBA’s New Orleans Hornets before the University of Texas-El Paso hired him as head coach in March.

Bush, in a statement released Thursday morning, said he had “great love” for USC and was “disappointed” and had “much regret” about “the turn this matter has taken.” He added that he would “continue to cooperate with the NCAA and USC,” though the NCAA report indicated that Bush had not fully cooperated.

Twice the e-mails for Wizards owner

WASHINGTON — Ted Leonsis received 130 e-mails from Washington Wizards fans before he had owned the team a full day.

Three came from a fan concerned about the quality of the ketchup at the Verizon Center.

Yes, owning two major sports teams is going to take a lot of work.

“I hoping I’m not going to get 130 e-mails a day for both teams,” said Leonsis, who opened an e-mail address for fans and is going to try to answer them all.

The 53-year-old former AOL executive stood at a podium Thursday to announce that he has formally taken control of a major sports and entertainment empire. The NBA gave its approval Tuesday, and the papers were signed Wednesday to complete the purchase of the Wizards, the Verizon Center and other assets from the estate of the late Abe Pollin.

Leonsis already owned the NHL’s Washington Capitals and WBNA’s Washington Mystics and 44 percent of the Wizards and Verizon Center. His group paid about $310 million for the other 56 percent to create a new entity — called Monumental Sports & Entertainment — whose total value is more than $825 million.

That made Thursday a big day in the nation’s capital. The event drew dignitaries from the worlds of sports, city government and business, including 13 members of Leonsis’ extended, deep-pocketed group.

“This was a big purchase,” Leonsis said. “We needed help.”

TOM IZZO TALKS TO CAVALIERS ABOUT COACHING JOB
CLEVELAND — Tom

Izzo has flirted with the NBA before. He may finally be ready to commit.

Michigan State’s highly respected coach visited the Cleveland Cavaliers on Thursday to get a firsthand inspection of a franchise undergoing a major makeover as it prepares to try and re-sign LeBron James, the free-agent-of-a-generation.

After flying to Cleveland in one of Cavs owner Dan Gilbert’s jets, Izzo spent several hours visiting with members of the front office and coaching staff. He also toured the team’s facilities before returning home late Thursday.

“It won’t go on forever, I can tell you that,” Izzo said at the airport upon his return to Lansing, Mich. “I feel bad that I can’t talk. I feel good that I did what I had to do.”

Izzo, who has been courted by pro and college teams in the past, is believed to be mulling a contract worth up to $6 million a season from the Cavs, who fired Mike Brown last month after they lost in the second round of the playoffs to Boston despite having the league’s best regular-season record for the second straight year.

NETS HAVE AGREEMENT IN PRINCIPLE WITH JOHNSON

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New Jersey Nets have reached an agreement in principle with Avery Johnson to become the coach of the NBA’s worst team.

Nets president Rod Thorn announced the agreement on Thursday, less than 24 hours after Johnson said in a text to The Associated Press that he was taking the job as coach.

The Nets did not disclose financial terms of the three-year agreement.

Mets, Padres split doubleheader

NEW YORK — Jonathon Niese pitched a one-hitter for his first career complete game and the New York Mets overcame a triple play to beat the San Diego Padres 3-0 on Thursday night for a doubleheader split.

Niese (3-2) allowed only Chris Denorfia’s leadoff double in the third inning, his second stellar start since coming off the disabled list Saturday. He faced 28 batters, one more than the minimum, in New York’s first complete game this season. Jon Garland (6-4) took the loss for San Diego.

Mat Latos (6-4) out-pitched Johan Santana (4-3) in the opener, and San Diego stopped New York’s nine-game home winning streak with a 4-2 victory.

Adrian Gonzalez had three hits for the Padres, including a go-ahead single. David Eckstein and Chase Headley added RBI doubles.

MARLINS 2, PHILLIES 0

PHILADELPHIA — Josh Johnson outdueled Roy Halladay in their perfect game rematch, pitching eight dominant innings and leading Florida over Philadelphia.

Johnson and Halladay last met on May 29 in Miami, when the Phillies ace threw the 20th perfect game in major league history in a 1-0 win.

REDS 7, GIANTS 6

CINCINNATI — Brandon Phillips had four hits, including a two-run triple in the eighth inning that rallied the Reds to yet another comeback win.

Phillips’ triple off Guillermo Mota (0-2) tied it at 6. Joey Votto’s single up the middle gave the Reds their 12th win in their final at-bat, the most in the majors.

DENVER — Roy Oswalt struck out nine, Humberto

San Diego Padres second baseman Lance Zawadzki dives to field a ball hit by New York Mets batter Jose Reyes during the fifth inning of the second game of Thursday’s doubleheader in New York.

Quintero homered and Houston won its third straight.

Quintero got three hits and Tommy Manzella drove in a career-high three runs as the Astros won for the ninth time in 12 games.

BREWERS 5, CUBS 4, 10 INNINGS

MILWAUKEE — Carlos Gomez raced home from first base on a sacrifice bunt and throwing error in the 10th inning, giving the Brewers a wild victory over Chicago.

Gomez pinch-hit and drew a leadoff walk from Bob Howry (1-1). Craig Counsell followed with a bunt and the speedy Gomez rounded second base and just kept going. First baseman Xavier Nady’s frantic throw to third sailed wild, allowing Gomez to score.

NATIONALS 4, PIRATES 2

WASHINGTON — Adam Dunn and Josh Willingham homered in the fourth inning, Livan Hernandez made the lead stand up and Washington beat Pittsburgh to become the last team in the majors to sweep a series this season.

BRAVES 11, DIAMONDBACKS 7

PHOENIX — Brooks Conrad scrambled home to break a ninth-inning tie and Atlanta, after blowing a five-run lead, beat Arizona. The speedy Conrad hit for David Ross, who had a double, single and two RBIs. Conrad singled, stole second and made a headfirst slide to score on pinch-hitter Brian McCann’s one-out single off closer Chad Qualls (1-3).

AMERICAN LEAGUE INDIANS 8, RED SOX 7

CLEVELAND — Russell Branyan hit a two-out, two-run single in the ninth inning to win it for the Indians.

Cleveland overcame three errors in one inning by third baseman Andy Marte, a blown save by Kerry Wood and an eighth-inning disruption by two unruly fans.

Adrian Beltre’s two-out, two-run homer in the ninth off Wood (1-2) put Boston ahead 7-6.

ORIOLES 4, YANKEES 3

BALTIMORE — Jake Arrieta pitched six innings of four-hit ball to win his major league debut, and Baltimore ended its 10-game losing streak against New York.

Arrieta gave up three runs and outpitched veteran A.J. Burnett (6-4), who came in 11-2 lifetime against Baltimore and 5-0 at Camden Yards.

BLUE JAYS 3, RAYS 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Brett Cecil won his fifth consecutive start, Alex Gonzalez homered and drove in two runs and Toronto beat Tampa Bay.

Cecil (7-2) allowed one run and three hits over 6 2-3 innings. The left-hander has given up six earned runs in 36 1-3 innings over that stretch.

ROYALS 9, TWINS 8

MINNEAPOLIS — Wilson Betemit hit solo home runs from both sides of the plate and Joakim Soria picked up his 14th save in a hairy ninth inning and Kansas City beat Minnesota.

Betemit hit one left-handed in the second inning after Mitch Maier’s two-run shot to help the Royals jump out to an 8-1 lead, then hit one from the right side in the ninth.

WHITE SOX 3, TIGERS 0

CHICAGO — John Danks pitched seven innings of one-hit ball, Omar Vizquel homered and had a suicide-squeeze bunt, and Chicago beat Detroit.

A.J. Pierzynski also homered for the White Sox, who have won two straight games — just their fourth winning streak of any kind this season.

ATHLETICS 6, ANGELS 1

OKLAND, Calif. — Trevor Cahill allowed one run in a career-high eight innings to win his fourth straight start and the Oakland Athletics beat nemesis Ervin Santana and the Los Angeles Angels.

Ryan Sweeney scored three times and Daric Barton drove in one run and scored two for the Athletics.

RANGERS 12, MARINERS 3

ARLINGTON, Texas — Josh Hamilton homered for the fourth time in seven games, Michael Young went 3 for 4 with a homer, and Texas won its third straight over Seattle.

Hamilton got the Rangers’ offense rolling with a two-run homer in a three-run first.

Realignment

have no comment on this. I’m not saying we’re gone or not gone. Until we have a definite decision, I’m not saying anything else.”

Missouri faces a more difficult challenge.

The school has expressed interest in joining the Big Ten and seemed to be a good fit with its proximity and heated rivalry with Illinois. But the Tigers apparently became a less-popular choice for the conference in recent weeks and the university’s curator said Thursday the school had not been invited to join the Big Ten.

Even if Missouri decides to stay in the Big 12, the school could be left to forage amid the scraps of the Big 12 or searching for another, lower-profile, less-profitable conference.

“There’s a lot of concern among alumni about what happens to Mizzou and how this works out,” said Todd McCubbin, executive director of the Missouri Alumni Association.

The next round of movement could be the most volatile.

The Big Ten appears to be interested in adding Notre Dame — as most conferences would — though Fighting Irish athletic director Jack Swarbrick said Thursday that the school’s position hasn’t changed and he wouldn’t comment on realignment. The Big Ten might also be looking east, to pilfer schools from the Big East.

The biggest move could come from the Pac-10.

Now that the conference has

Colorado, it could set its sights on the Big 12’s South Division, reportedly interested in inviting Texas, Texas A&M, Texas Tech, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State to form a 16-team megaconference.

Officials from rival schools Texas and Texas A&M met Thursday to discuss their athletic futures, while Oklahoma and Oklahoma are keeping options open while the Big 12 stays afloat.

The conference realignment could leave five schools on the outside looking in.

The expansion plans are driven by football, by far the biggest earner in college athletics, and schools that don’t have strong gridiron traditions could get ignored.

That means schools like Kansas, despite its storied basketball program, along with Kansas State, Baylor and Iowa State could be looking for places to play. All of them have the added disadvantage of being in sparsely populated areas of the country.

“Hey, the KU brand is pretty good,” Kansas basketball coach Bill Self said.

Still, if the Jayhawks and several other schools are unable to piece together something from the scraps of a ravaged Big 12, they might be forced to join smaller conferences, a demotion that would not only be embarrassing, but potentially devastating financially.

“I think we’ll be in a quality league. I just don’t know which league that will be in,” Self said.

“We are going to be in a BCS league. I’m totally confident of that. If something were to happen and we’re not, we’d adjust.”

A massive realignment could further concentrate the power to the biggest and richest schools. Some schools in BCS conferences will be left out in the cold, longstanding rivalries may be mothballed, traditions cast aside in the name of money.

A lot of change could happen in a short period of time.

“College sports, a lot of it is about traditions and rivalries and things like that, and there’ll definitely be some changes,” Maxcey said. “In general, college sports moves kind of slow and I think some of those changes will disappoint some fans of college sports.”

U.S.-England: soccer's moment in America

IRENE, South Africa (AP) — The bars are stocked across America, and the pubs are getting ready in England. A 70½-foot billboard of Clint Dempsey stands near Penn Station in Manhattan, and there's even a large poster of Landon Donovan in a store along Piccadilly Circus.

American soccer has never been more popular in the United States or its players more well-known across the world. And on Saturday comes the first competitive match between the U.S. and England since the great American upset at the 1950 World Cup. For one afternoon, millions will be watching from California to New York island. Like never before in the United States, this is the sport's moment.

"I don't know what's going to be better, at the bar with my friends back home watching it, or actually playing it, because it's going to be special," goalkeeper Tim Howard said Thursday.

On the first cloudy day since the U.S. team started workouts June 1, the Americans practiced in Pretoria. Then their red-white-and-blue bus with "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Victory!" on the side made the two-hour drive to Rustenburg, where the big game will be played.

Thousands of tickets in refurbished 38,646-capacity Royal Bafokeng Stadium were purchased back in the United States for the match at the foot of the Magaliesberg mountain range in the North West Province. Stevan Galich, a fan from Chicago, organized transportation for 350 American fans from Sandton, a north Johannesburg suburb, to Rustenburg on Saturday. His party plans to meet outside the stadium with Sam's Army and the American Outlaws, two supporters' groups. They hope to offset the roar from English fans who usually travel with their team in large numbers.

Donald Gips, the U.S. ambassador to South Africa, said Sunday that FIFA estimated 132,000 tickets for the 64-game tournament were bought in the United States, the most in any nation outside the host.

"Certainly the water cooler talk, if I can use that expression, is greater than anything I've seen around the World Cup, around the U.S. being in it, and certainly around the U.S.-England game for sure," U.S. Soccer Federation president Sunil Gulati said. "The amount of time we're getting on ESPN. The cover of SI. The cover of ESPN The Magazine. The cover of Time Magazine. Anybody remember when that last happened for soccer?"

The Irish Pub, a few blocks from Carnegie Hall in Manhattan, is packed many weekend mornings for English Premier League games. Last month, it doubled in size in preparation for the World Cup.

Youth soccer teams are planning to meet to watch together, and several Major League Soccer stadiums will open for viewing parties.

Adidas, Nike and Puma have been busy selling World Cup gear. More than 55,000 fans went to Philadelphia's Lincoln Financial Field for the U.S. team's sendoff game on May 29.

Interest ratcheted up last June when the Americans upset Spain in the semifinals of the Confederations Cup, a World Cup warmup tournament in South Africa. The Americans ended the European champion's streaks of 15 wins and 35 unbeaten games.

The December draw boosted it even more when the United States was matched up with England to get things started.

It's far different from 1990, when the U.S. team returned to the World Cup for the first time in 40 years and few American fans made the trek to Italy. There wasn't much to root for, with the U.S. losing three straight games.

"We thought we knew what the World Cup was. And you know what? Reality slapped us right in the face," said Marcelo Balboa, a defender on that U.S. team who is covering this tournament for the radio network Futbol de Primera. "Soccer has just grown so much. Look at where we're at now, and look at where we stood in '90?"

And with growth comes responsibility. When the U.S. went 0-3 at the 1998 World Cup in France and finished last in the 32-nation field, the blowout created turmoil in the American soccer community. But it hardly got a rise out of most U.S. sports fans.

Westwood opens with 7-under 63 for Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Lee Westwood prefers competition the week before a major to tune up his play. The Englishman looks quite ready now for the U.S. Open based on his opening round at the St. Jude Classic.

Westwood took advantage of no wind and a rain-softened course to shoot a 7-under 63 Thursday that equaled his best on the PGA Tour and gave him a one-stroke lead in the suspended first round. The world's No. 3-ranked player tied the course record for the back nine with a 29 with four of his five birdies and an eagle. He parred out his final eight holes.

"Pleased with the start, 63 is always a good start," Westwood said. "I couldn't be disappointed with that. Could have been better, but I'm not going to cry too much about missing from 4 feet on the last."

Not bad for someone who flew from London to San Francisco to play 27 holes Sunday at Pebble Beach with another 18 Monday before heading to Memphis. Westwood played nine holes

Lee Westwood, of England, watches his shot after chipping out of a bunker on the No. 17 hole during the first round of the St. Jude Classic golf tournament Thursday in Memphis, Tenn.

Tuesday and a practice round Wednesday in his first visit to this course, but wound up with near-perfect scoring conditions in the eighth group off the 10th tee Thursday.

"My caddie said normally there's a bit of breeze that blows. You try and score when you get your morning time on the first two days when it's fairly calm, so that's what I tried to do," Westwood said.

Casey Wittenberg shot a 64, Padraig Harrington had a 65 and Tim Petrovic, John Senden and Bob Estes were among eight tied at 66 before a severe thunderstorm stopped play for nearly an hour. The round was suspended with 20 golfers left on the course.

No one teeing off in the afternoon cracked the leaderboard with muggy conditions smothering the course with 100-degree heat, and wind that usually toughens this course staying relatively still before the storms developed.

"It was probably as easy conditions as you will get out here on Southwind," said Garrett Willis, who shot 66 in the morning.

Defending champ Brian Gay, who was under par each round in winning a year ago, opened with a 73. Jordan Spieth, the Texas teen who became the sixth-youngest player to make a PGA cut at the Byron Nelson last month, shot a 73.

FENG BIRDIES WAY TO LPGA CLASSIC LEAD

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Shanshan Feng made five early birdies and shot an 8-under 64 to take a one-stroke lead over Juli Inkster and Na Yeon Choi at the State Farm LPGA Classic.

Meena Lee, Alena Sharp, Anna Nordqvist, M.J. Hur and Song-Hee Kim were two shots back on a crowded leaderboard at Panther Creek Country Club. Seven other players were within three shots of the lead, including Cristie Kerr and Sophie Gustafson.

Feng's round was so clean, her only near-blemish came on the 410-yard, par-4 18th, when she had a poor stance on her second shot. She was forced to pitch out, knocked a three-quarter pitching wedge to 8 feet and made a sidehill putt with a deft touch to save par.

Roethlisberger: 'I was dumb, young and immature'

PITTSBURGH — A contrite Ben Roethlisberger said he got caught up in being a caricature called Big Ben, not the grounded player and person he once was, leading to his off-field problems and affecting his play as the Steelers quarterback.

"Big Ben just kept building up. It ended up coming off the field. It kept taking over. Superman kept taking over Clark Kent and you just never saw who Ben Roethlisberger was any more," Roethlisberger told KDKA-TV. "At the time, I didn't see it. I was gaining everything but I was losing a lot of who I was raised to be. It got so overwhelming, it consumed me."

In his first detailed interviews since a Georgia college student accused him of sexually assaulting her in a nightclub bathroom on March 5, Roethlisberger told two Pittsburgh stations he doesn't have an alcohol problem. Before the alleged assault, Roethlisberger and his party ordered considerable amounts of alcohol.

When the NFL announced Roethlisberger's six-game suspension on April 21, commissioner Roger Goodell said the quarterback was required to undergo evaluation. Neither the league nor Roethlisberger have detailed what was being evaluated or how long the evaluations would last.

While Roethlisberger told KDKA there were drinking issues on his late mother's side of the family, he said his father, Ken, never permitted alcohol in their house, even when the quarterback played at Miami (Ohio).

Roethlisberger didn't promise he wouldn't use alcohol again, but said he must make "smart" decisions.

PALMER WISHES OCHOCINCO WAS IN CINCY

CINCINNATI — Carson Palmer says receiver Chad Ochocinco's decision to skip voluntary offseason workouts is making it tough for the rest of the Cincinnati Bengals to get their offense together.

Ochocinco doesn't want to hear it.

Palmer told reporters after a workout on Thursday that other receivers have to fill Ochocinco's role during the voluntary practices, which throws things out of whack. Cincinnati has a bevy of new receivers this season, including free agent Antonio Bryant.

Ochocinco customarily spends the offseason out of town working out on his own. He's been on "Dancing With the Stars" in Los Angeles and is working on a dating show for cable television. He's required to be in Cincinnati next week for a minicamp.

The Bengals have made changes in the passing game, which struggled last season. They're also trying to figure out where the newcomers fit.

"It would be great to have our No. 1 receiver here and building it around him," Palmer said. "We've tried moving guys around. Maybe they're trying to find a new No. 1 receiver because it's hard to work your offense in without that guy around. We've moved Antonio (Bryant) around, he's been playing some spots."

"It's hard to tell and say because we're looking for a No. 2 and (No.) 3 receiver without a No. 1."

PANTHERS WR MUHAMMAD RETIRES AFTER 14 SEASONS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A cocky Muhsin Muhammad joined a Carolina franchise in 1996 that was beginning only its second season, and over the next two decades the Panthers and Muhammad effectively grew up and matured together.

That's why the former Pro Bowl receiver's retirement announcement was so lengthy. There were a lot of memories to go over and a lot of people to thank.

Carolina's career leader in catches and yards receiving walked away from the game on Thursday after 14 seasons, 11 of which were spent in Charlotte, where Muhammad made a transformation on and off the field.

"I've done everything I could possibly do in an NFL career for 14 years, outside of actually winning a championship ring," Muhammad said. "I've played in two Super Bowls, I have Super Bowl records and I've done a lot of good things throughout my career. I'm full, I'm fulfilled. I'm at peace with my decision."

2 MEN TIED TO DARRETT WILLIAMS TRIAL SENTENCED

DENVER — Two men who refused to testify in the trial of a man convicted in the death of Denver Broncos cornerback Darrett Williams have been sentenced to 12 months each in jail for contempt of court.

Twenty-one-year-old Kaitaina "Markie" Jackson-Keeling and 22-year-old Mario Anderson were also sentenced Thursday to 90 days in jail and four years of probation for being accessories to perjury. The jail sentences will be served concurrently.

The two previously pleaded guilty to the charges. Denver prosecutors accused them of lying to a Denver grand jury investigating Williams' death in a drive-by shooting early New Year's Day 2007.

Stanley Cup a long time coming for Blackhawks

CHICAGO (AP) — From the first day of training camp nine months ago, the Chicago Blackhawks felt the expectations. They were everywhere, generated by championship-hungry fans and by the players themselves.

"We want to win the Stanley Cup. I think that's what a lot of the guys are thinking," Patrick Kane said after that first practice on a steamy September day.

The Blackhawks, led by the 21-year-old Kane and their 22-year-old captain Jonathan Toews, made it happen.

Now they will parade with their teammates on Friday through a city that is giddy because the Blackhawks have seized the Cup for the first time since 1961.

When Kane was taken with the first pick in the draft three years ago, it started the Blackhawks on their way to a remarkable rebirth. A year earlier they had chosen Toews in the first round and now they have become the faces of the franchise both on and off the ice.

At such a young age, they have won the Cup and done so in a short amount of time, accomplishing what some never do throughout their careers.

A United Center that four years ago was half empty now rocks and the Blackhawks are one of the hottest tickets in town, a re-emergence that can be attributed to the efforts of owner Rocky Wirtz and his president John McDonough, who was hired away from the Chicago Cubs.

Kane finally ended the championship drought — the longest active one in the NHL — with a game-winning goal in overtime against the Flyers.

What an end to a whirlwind year for both Kane and Toews, who signed lucrative contract extensions with the Blackhawks in December — five-year deals worth $31.5 million each.

Kane had a difficult summer. In his hometown of Buffalo, he and his cousin were arrested following an altercation with a cab driver.

"It didn't start off very good back in August. But I think sometimes you know you go through those kind of things as a young kid," Kane said. "You can really learn from them and try to better yourself as a person and as an athlete too. Yeah, there was ups and downs."

"As far as hockey-wise, I can be pretty satisfied. I thought I had a really good year as far as, you know, Olympics, obviously, you win the Stanley Cup, it's pretty special too. Just really unbelievable to see how things can go from so bad to so good."

Chicago's depth was the difference in all four series.

The all-around play of Dave Bolland and Kris Versteeg, the speed of Patrick Sharp, the physical presence of 257-pound Dustin Byfuglien, the strong puck control of Marian Hossa, the defense of Duncan Keith and Brent Seabrook and the emergence of first-year goalie Antti Niemi led the way. Keith even sacrificed seven teeth after being hit in the mouth by a puck during a sweep of San Jose in the conference finals.

GOP senators criticize Kagan's work as court clerk

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Two senior Republican senators criticized Supreme Court nominee Elena Kagan Thursday for memos she wrote as a young law clerk to Justice Thurgood Marshall, saying the papers suggest she lets politics dictate her legal decisions.

Sen. Jon Kyl of Arizona and Jeff Sessions of Alabama said the writings show that Kagan was highly opinionated and wanted to use the law to achieve specific policy results, rather than deciding legal questions on their merits.

"It indicates a developing lawyer who has a political bent to their legal work — pretty significantly so," said Sessions, the top Republican on the Judiciary Committee that will hold Kagan's confirmation hearings.

The memos, Sessions added, "show that her background is heavily in political advocacy ... more than the meat-and-potatoes discipline of serious legal work."

The two senators cited notes Kagan wrote to Marshall in which she argued that the Supreme Court shouldn't take certain cases based on her fear that they would give its conservative majority the chance to scale back abortion and criminal rights, among others.

In one, regarding a dispute over abortions for women jail inmates, she advised Marshall to vote to reject an appeal even though she had reservations about a federal appeals court ruling in favor of the inmates.

"This case is likely to become the vehicle this court uses to create some very bad law on abortions' rights," Kagan said in an April 1988 memo.

Kyl called the memos "troubling." "They reveal time and time again an effort to reach a certain result in the case," he said. "There's a disturbing pattern that evolves here when you read these that suggests that she is more interested in taking a case or not taking it based upon how they can advance the law to suit themselves or play defense against a court that she thinks might make bad law."

The publicly available memos have been on file at the Library of Congress since 1993.

Kagan, 27 when she began working for Marshall in 1987, said in Senate testimony last year that she tried to "channel" Marshall in her memos, not express her own views.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said it's no surprise that Kagan would try to apply her boss' legal approach as his clerk.

"It is unsurprising that her evaluation of cases as a law clerk were mindful of Justice Marshall's long-standing jurisprudence, and that her recommendations to him applied the lens through which he viewed cases and the law," Leahy said.

Kyl rejected that explanation, citing the personal terms Kagan often used to articulate her stance on points of law.

"I don't think she's simply channeling a person with whom she disagrees. I think she's complicit in the effort to make law rather than decide law," Kyl said.

An unidentified father comforts his injured son Thursday at a hospital in Kandahar city, Afghanistan, after a bomb ripped through a wedding party in southern Afghanistan late Wednesday.

Suspected suicide bomber kills 40 at Afghan wedding

NADAHAN VILLAGE, Afghanistan — Body parts in trees. Mud walls flattened. Corpses riddled with ball bearings.

NATO and the Afghan government on Thursday blamed a Taliban suicide bomber for the grisly scene at a wedding party where at least 40 people were killed by an intense explosion. But the Taliban claimed they played no role in the blast in the Arghandab district, an insurgent stronghold near the southern city of Kandahar.

Stunned survivors said they suspected a NATO airstrike was responsible, a view that reflects either their deep suspicion of the U.S.-led coalition or fear of Taliban retribution.

Regardless of responsibility, Wednesday night's attack is likely to heighten public concern about a planned NATO military operation in the Kandahar area, the birthplace of the Taliban considered by U.S. commanders as the key to turning back the insurgents.

The top U.S. and NATO commander, Gen. Stanley McChrystal, acknowledged Thursday that the Kandahar operation will take longer than planned because local Afghans do not yet support it.

Interior Ministry spokesman Zemer Bashary said the attack occurred when a suicide bomber entered a rural home where men were celebrating a wedding. The groom was among the 74 wounded. Women guests were in a separate house with the bride.

"This is a crime of massive inhuman proportions against civilians," President Hamid Karzai told a news conference in Kabul.

Taliban spokesman Qari Yousef Ahmadi denied the insurgents carried out the attack, which occurred in a district where the Taliban remain entrenched despite years of NATO military operations.

Nevertheless, suspicion fell on the insurgents because the family included a number of Afghan policemen, who are often targeted by the Taliban. The groom's brother and two of his cousins were in the police force, according to another cousin, Mohammad Alkozay.

Kandahar provincial Gov. Tooryalai Wesa said doctors at the city hospital had recovered ball bearings from the bodies of the dead. Militants often pack ball bearings and other metal into suicide vests to kill more victims.

"The Taliban are doing two things at once," Wesa told reporters. "On one side they target people who are in favor of the government. Then at the same time, they don't want people to know their real face."

In this sun-baked farming village of mud-walled compounds, survivors said they were skeptical that the blast was caused by a suicide bomber because the damage was so extensive. The wall around the compound where the attack occurred was mostly flattened. Blood, human limbs and other body parts — some in the trees — were scattered across the area.

"If it were a suicide attack, there would be some hole in the ground," said Abdul Raziq, a member of the village defense militia.

Mohammad Rassool, a cousin of the groom, said he saw helicopters, including one with guns in the front, flying above the compound before the explosion.

"I was coming toward the wedding and on the way I saw something from a helicopter move toward the village," Rassool said. "After we saw the smoke and fire come up, we knew that a rocket had hit. Why would the Taliban do this when we are not against each other?"

U.S. military spokesman Col. Wayne Shanks denied any coalition airstrike in the area at the time of the attack. Civilian deaths are a sensitive issue in Afghanistan, and the NATO command has acknowledged and apologized for attacks that kill civilians.

Nevertheless, public support for the U.S.-led mission is weakest in the dusty farming communities of southern Afghanistan, where the ethnic Pashtun population provides the Taliban with most of its fighters. It was unclear whether villagers were genuine in their suspicions about NATO or fearful of Taliban reprisals.

Gold - and lead - bring illness and death in Nigeria

By Jon Gambrell
Associated Press writer

YARGALMA, Nigeria — Mound after tiny mound of red clay earth dots the cemetery on the outskirts of this impoverished Nigerian village where grieving parents come to pray.

Children began falling ill months ago here and in a half-dozen other villages in this remote northern region on the cusp of the Sahara Desert. Some could not stand, some went blind or deaf.

Then they began dying. Doctors suspected malaria. But they were wrong — after 160 died and hundreds more were ailing, blood tests revealed the real killer: Lead unearthed by villagers digging for gold.

In a tragedy described by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention as "unprecedented" in its work with lead poisoning worldwide, most victims are children.

Many had played in homes or village common areas contaminated by lead. The level of exposure was so high that most blood samples were off the scale on lead screening machines.

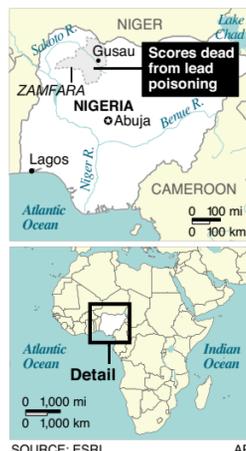

The existence of gold deposits in this area along the Niger border had been long known. But it wasn't until gold prices soared in recent years that villagers began heading into the bush to search for it.

Soon the poor herdsmen in rural Zamfara state could sell gold for more than $23 a gram — a huge sum in a country where most people live on less than $1 a day.

"There is no other business one can do to make that much money," said Haruna Musa, a 70-year-old elder in Yargalma.

The process of extracting gold from the ore is simple and dates back a millennia. Villagers bash the rocks with hammers, then grind the smaller pieces into a powder, these days with the help of a generator-powered machine. The powder is added to a slurry mixture of water and mercury — itself a dangerous substance — to draw the gold particles together.

However, this time the ore brought back to the villages in Zamfara contained extremely high levels of lead. Fathers carried the precious rocks home to store inside their mud-walled compounds, sometimes leaving them on sleeping mats.

The work of breaking the rocks often fell to their wives. The women of the Muslim villages would chisel the rocks into smaller pieces as their young children played nearby. Dust and flakes accumulated in the villages' communal areas, which children run through.

An international team of doctors and hazardous waste experts arrived in Zamfara in mid-May and is racing to treat victims and remove the poison from villages, pastureland and creek beds.

"This is as bad as it gets," said Richard Fuller, president of the Blacksmith Institute, a U.S. group leading cleanup efforts.

On Thursday, crews of local farmers wearing white coveralls, surgical masks and latex gloves used picks and shovels to dig up the floors of a contaminated mud-walled compound in the village of Daret. Ore processing sites lay abandoned, the equipment sitting idle as rainwater washed contaminated soil into a pond.

Cleanup efforts have not even begun in Yargalma.

At the village cemetery on Wednesday, Rabiu Mohammed knelt among the dozens of fresh child-sized graves, grief etched on his face. A son and a daughter are buried here and Mohammed had come to offer Muslim prayers.

Nearby, other fathers, some shielding themselves under umbrellas from the searing sun, walked among the tiny mounds of earth.

Pope defends 'beauty of celibacy' as priests rally at Vatican

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press writer

VATICAN CITY — Pope Benedict XVI strongly defended celibacy for priests as a sign of faith in an increasingly secular world Thursday, insisting on a church tradition that has increasingly come under scrutiny amid the clerical sex abuse scandal.

Benedict didn't directly mention the crisis that has rocked the Catholic Church for months in his comments to some 15,000 priests who massed in St. Peter's Square. But in an apparent reference to the crisis, Benedict spoke about "secondary scandals" that showed "our own insufficiencies and sins."

Benedict's comments came during an evening vigil service to mark the end of the Vatican's year of the priest — a year that has been marred by revelations of hundreds of new cases of clerical abuse, cover-up and Vatican inaction to root out pedophile priests.

There had been speculation that Benedict might again refer to the scandal during the priestly gathering, following his recent comments en route to Portugal during which he acknowledged that it was born of the "sin within the church" and not from outside elements. Previously, Vatican officials, Vatican publications and cardinals had blamed the scandal on the media, the Masons and anti-Catholic lobbies, among others.

But Benedict didn't directly address it Thursday night. He is due to celebrate a final Mass on Friday before the three-day priest rally comes to a close.

The main U.S. clerical abuse victims group, Survivors Network for those Abused by Priests, said Benedict had passed up a perfect opportunity to announce clear steps to protect children and insist that abusive priests be reported to police.

Benedict responded to preselected questions from five priests and none asked for his thoughts about the scandal. One asked him to speak instead about what he called the "beauty of celibacy," which he said was so often criticized in the secular world.

The pope acknowledged that celibacy was itself "a great scandal" in a world where people have no need for God. But he called it "a great sign of faith, of the presence of God in the world."

Against the so-called scandal of such faith "there are also secondary scandals, that of our own insufficiencies and sins that hide the true scandal," he said.

The Vatican has long denied that its celibacy requirement was the root cause of priests who rape and sodomize children. Yet the requirement — which is a tradition in the church but is not part of church doctrine — has come under increasing questioning amid the scandal and even some top prelates have called for an honest examination of it.

While the pope didn't directly address the crisis, priests visiting Rome for the rally spoke openly about it, saying it was painful — even shameful to them since it reflected badly on all of them.

"Well, I think it was really first a matter of pain, of sadness then a bit of shame because in Belgium we had bishops, not priests who had to resign," said Belgian priest the Rev. Jean Pierre Herman.

Angry clowns decry robberies by imposters in San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — About 100 professional clowns who make money by performing on public buses marched through Salvadoran capital Thursday to protest the killing of a passenger by two imposter clowns.

On Monday, a man was shot five times in the face and stomach when he declined to give money to two assailants dressed as clowns who boarded a public bus. No one has been arrested.

The protesters — wearing oversized bow ties, tiny hats and big yellow pants — marched down San Salvador's main street in an effort to both entertain and educate passersby. Several held signs insisting that real clowns are not criminals.

"We are protesting so that people know we are not killers," said professional clown Ana Noelia Ramirez. "The people who did this are not clowns. They unfortunately used our costume and our makeup to commit a monstrous act."

Clown-union leader Carlos Vasquez says he plans to issue IDs to all real clowns and urge police to detain those who do not have them.

About a dozen people are Huge Guatemala sinkhole prompts evacuations, mystifies scientists

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — A massive sinkhole that gulped down a clothing factory and an entire intersection in Guatemala's capital is mystifying geologists who have yet to figure out what caused it.

"It's the million-dollar question," said David Monteroso, a geophysical engineer with the National Disaster Management Agency.

Nearly 100 feet deep and 66 feet wide, the hole formed during a deadly tropical storm in late May. Officials have not confirmed any fatalities, though neighbors say they believe a security guard using a public phone was sucked in and died.

One popular theory that has played widely in Guatemalan media is that flow from broken sewage ducts ate away at the earth until the ground above caved in. Another sinkhole that swallowed several homes and killed three people in the same area in 2007 was blamed on rain and an underground sewage leak.

2010 NISSAN SENTRA SEDAN

SOLID DEPENDABILITY!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

Few automotive names have had as a long continuous run as the Nissan Sentra. Evolving from the Datsun 210/310 ilk of the early 1980's, Sentra has maintained a sterling reputation of consistent quality, value and fuel economy that had been often overshadowed by the more popular Toyota Corolla and Honda Civic.

The Nissan Sentra continues to hone its reputation as a stylish, roomy, fun-to-drive compact sedan with a number of enhancements for the 2010 model year, including revised styling, new interior treatments, refined trim and option package content and newly available technology features such as an advanced Nissan Navigation System with XM NavTraffic® Real-Time Traffic Information (XM® subscription required, sold separately).

Built on Nissan's global "C" platform, Sentra's exterior reflects Nissan design language and offers styling cues found on other distinctive Nissan products. The profile includes a long wheelbase, short front and rear overhangs, crisp character lines and large door openings, while in the rear the high deck accentuates the roomy cabin and cargo area.

Nissan News & Corporate Photos

For the 2010 model year, all Sentras receive revised headlights and taillights, while the 2.0, 2.0 S and 2.0 SL feature new grille and front fascia designs. The 2.0 S and 2.0 SL also feature new fog light covers and new body side moldings with chrome inserts and a new chrome trunk finisher. Three new exterior colors are also offered - Anodized Orange, Espresso Black and Aspen White.

Offered in four trim levels: 2.0, 2.0 S, 2.0 SR, and 2.0 SL, power for the Sentra is generated by the MR20DE 2.0L four-cylinder engine and communicated through the front wheels through a fuel-efficient Nissan Xtronic CVT™ (Continuously Variable Transmission) on all models except the Sentra 2.0, which is offered in a choice of CVT or a six-speed manual transmission.

Sentra's responsive handling consists of control hardware which features an independent strut design for the front suspension with coil springs and a stabilizer bar.

The rear features a torsion beam with integral stabilizer bar, with the rear shock absorbers mounted below the trunk floor for improved trunk roominess. Sentra's ride comfort has been enhanced through use of special "ripple control" shock absorbers, an insulated front cradle-type subframe with pendulum engine mount system, roller-type front strut bearings and large, tuned rear beam isolators.

Inside the cabin, Sentra is available with a range of unexpected amenities - ranging from the luxury of leather-appointed seating to the convenience of Nissan's Intelligent Key™ keyless-entry system. For 2010, the Nissan sedan offers revised seat cloth and door trim while the instrument panel accents and illumination have also been revised.

Other major changes include the separation of leather seating into an optional package on the Sentra 2.0 SL model and the addition of new Technology and Navigation Packages for the SL model. In addition, the Convenience Package is added as an option for the 2.0 SR model and the Sentra 2.0 SL adds standard Vehicle Dynamic Control (VDC) and Traction Control System (TCS). Wheel designs have also been revised for 2010, with new 16-inch wheel covers (2.0 S) and new 16-inch aluminum-alloy wheels (2.0 SL).

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"I am not now in fortune's power: He that is down can fall no lower."

— Samuel Butler

In today's auction South can use the call of three clubs at his second turn as a relay, looking for three-card spade support from his partner. When he hits the jackpot, he knows that a grand slam rates to be out of reach, so he settles for simplicity by bidding what he thinks he can make.

As declarer in six spades, your first thought would be that you have decent play for 13 tricks. You can, you hope, ruff a diamond in dummy and take the club finesse for the overtrick. But the lead of the heart queen sets up some concerns about a defensive ruff in that suit.

You should leave the spade jack in dummy till you have ruffed your diamond loser — just in case. Accordingly, you win the opening heart lead, cash dummy's two top diamonds, come to hand with the spade ace (noting that both hands follow), then ruff a diamond low in dummy. When you lead the spade jack, you observe West's discard, a play that increases the risk of a bad break in hearts against you.

Taking no chances, you lead the club queen from dummy to encourage a cover; but when East plays low, you go up with the ace, draw trumps, and concede a club.

Note that if you had finessed in clubs, West would have taken the club king and given his partner a heart ruff, so your caution was justified.

ANSWER: You have already shown your hearts and your club support. Should you bid three no-trump when your partner asks you for other features? I feel that your club support is good enough for you to repeat the suit. A 5-2 heart fit might be right, but if so, partner can get there by raising you at his next turn.

IF JUNE 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You might feel that the world is your oyster during the next six to eight weeks, but because you too sure of yourself, you might not notice that you are extravagant or wasteful. Your attitude of certainty could appear aggressive to others and you might lose ground in social circles. You achieve better balance during September and October, making those good months to extend your network of friends or to have carefree moments with a special someone. Keep your money in your pocket in November, when you might forget to read the fine print or could get involved with something or someone who will not live up to expectations. February is the best time to make important decisions or start enterprises that involve your money, career or business.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It is risky to be too frisky. You might have a penchant for daredevil feats or speeding down the highway. If you give in to the desire to go too fast or to be competitive, you might offend others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You should be back to speed. You can reassess relationships with a clear head. A partner may have pressing issues that require your unique input. Take the bull by the horns and wrestle thorny problems.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A mind like a steel trap is your most valuable asset. If you harbor suspicions about anyone or anything, you have the ability to ferret out the truth. Balance the checkbook or study the secrets of the universe.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put love and affection back on the menu. Shutting the barn door after the horses have already fled is counter-productive. Leave the door open so loved ones can wander back into the fold on their own.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): First things first. Quit banging your head against a brick wall and reassess your long-term goals. Before you get carried away with plans for weekend fun and games, take a close look at your finances.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It may be difficult to sit still while energetic Mars is in your part of the zodiac. You feel compelled to take action whenever you see something to do. Rational solutions to complex problems may arrive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may feel indecisive or doubtful when it comes to matters of love and romance. The best thing for you to do is brazenly head out to public places and make an effort to connect intimately with others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pressures can cause conflicts. Impress others with your patience and stamina — and refuse to lose your temper. Meet challenges with an air of professionalism and spend quality time with loved ones tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is time to correct nagging problems that cause repetitive rifts between you and a significant other. Scrutinize bank statements and receipts. Errors could have crept into your calculations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The radar is aimed at you. Stop at red lights and obey speed limits. Key people could be picky about the rules, so don't push important issues. Your loving nature will get a chance to shine at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could be caught in the throes of a sticky situation or feel that creative energies have ebbed. Talk things over with trusted friends. You may receive helpful insights that quickly heal problems.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are corralled by circumstances beyond your control. You might not make headway if you buck the system, but you could see light at the end of the tunnel. Look for helpful friends to support your objectives.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 years old and I adore my job and my boss. There is only one problem — I must commute more than an hour each way, and the drive (especially with gas prices these days) is killing me.

I have been with the company for more than a year, and I recently heard that the parent corporation is hiring for a position similar to mine in the town that I live in. I desperately want to apply for the transfer, but I have no idea how to approach the subject with my boss, since I feel I owe her so much. She hired me for the position when I was fresh out of college with absolutely no experience.

Abby, help me! How do I ask to leave a job that I love?

— SATISFIED EMPLOYEE
IN VALDOSTA, GA.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR EMPLOYEE: You are confusing a business relationship with one that is personal. You are also not the first person to want to leave a job because the commute is tiring and expensive.

Go to your boss, tell her you heard a position is opening up close to home, and that you would like to transfer for the reasons you told me. Then ask if she will put in a good word for you. When she hears why you want to be closer to home, I'm sure she'll do it.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Jonah," and I share a loving and fun relationship. Apparently, I am better than average looking. I know this because people constantly ask my boyfriend, "Wow, how did you get her?" or, "Man, you must pay her to date you!"

I always give Jonah hugs and tell him how attracted I am to him, which is true. My problem is the attention I've been receiving has started to affect HIM. Now he makes comments about how fat he is (he's not), or that his skin is bad (everyone gets zits!), or that I should leave him for someone "better" looking.

Abby, I love this man and want to marry him. How do I convince Jonah that he's my hot, sexy boyfriend whom I love to pieces?

— HOT MAMA
IN OREGON

DEAR HOT MAMA: I can't script you, but when Jonah starts putting himself down, try something like this: "You're not giving yourself — or me — enough credit. Life isn't a beauty contest. You appeal to me on MANY levels, and your looks are just part of the reason I'm attracted to you. Those other men are jealous of what we have together, and none of them can hold a candle to you."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for a year. It's my second marriage and his first. Because we were unable to afford a wedding at the time, we married at the courthouse.

We are now having a wedding so we can share this with our family and friends.

Some of our friends and family think we are wasting money or looking for gifts. We have not registered anywhere and have made no gift requests. Are we making a mistake? Should we simply have taken the money we're spending on this special day and put it toward a trip for us?

— BLUSHING BRIDE
IN MICHIGAN

DEAR BLUSHING BRIDE: Your mistake may have been in calling your celebration a "wedding." If you had called it a "renewal of vows with family and friends" it might have been more warmly received. As to whether you should have taken the money you're spending and used it for a honeymoon, I think it's a little late to be second-guessing yourself — don't you?

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.
