BSU accepts invitation to join Mountain West

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Boise State on Friday accepted an invitation to join the Mountain West Conference as the two-time Fiesta Bowl winner seeks out a league that's a better launching pad into lucrative bowl games.

Boise State, now with the Western Athletic Conference, would become the Mountain West Conference's 10th member. The move would be effective July 1, 2011.

"Boise State scored — big time," Boise State president Bob Kustra said at a celebratory news conference.

"Your reputation, your prestige, the growth of programs, how people perceive you — we take another step up."

— BSU athletic director Gene Bleymaier, saying he expects all 17 of his school's athletic disciplines to benefit

The announcement was part of an ongoing conference shuffle nationwide, where leagues like the Pac-10 have lured Colorado and Nebraska is seeking membership in the Big Ten.

sioner Craig Thompson said his league is boosting its strength by adding a football program that's captured the nation's imagination, and prime-time television exposure. The league's main goal is to make a better case to become the seventh college football conference awarded an automatic BCS post-season berth.

"It's my No. 1 goal, and I think I share it with members," Thompson said during a conference call. "We are going to try to challenge, and try to position ourselves as the seventh automatic qualifying conference."

Storm settles in as new regional captain for ISP

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Robert Storm loved serving as the Idaho State Police patrol lieutenant for Region IV, south-central Idaho.

But, he said, he's enjoying his new role as the region's captain even more.

Storm, 49, a 23-year ISP veteran, was promoted to the post two weeks ago after former Capt. Kedrick Wills became the major overseeing ISP's Police Services Division in Meridian.

Storm oversees 41 employees and is responsible for all branch operations, including officer conduct, training, expenses, assignments, policy and budget. His leadership style, he said, is influenced by the "greatest leadership book ever written, the Bible," and "the greatest legal document ever drafted, the U.S. Constitution."

He's settling into a new routine, he said while sitting in his new office, where pictures of conquered mountain peaks and his family, including Tami, his wife of 21 years, adorn the walls.

"It's been exciting," he said.

But sometimes he still misses his patrol car.

"Your car is your office," he said.

"It's where you do your business and where you operate from. Your car is also your safe place, in the event of a shooting or something."

Having been based out of the Jerome office for several years likely gave Storm an advantage when seeking the job.

Library to upgrade heating/cooling system

By Rebecca De Leon
Times-News writer

Soon, Twin Falls residents will have no excuse to leave the city's library to read in the comfort of home.

The Twin Falls Public Library's heating, ventilating, and air conditioning (HVAC) system will get a makeover this summer.

The new HVAC system will allow for better control of the temperature throughout the library. Susan Ash, the library's director, said the new system is a long time coming.

"There are four units on the roof," Ash said. "And one of them, the one specific to the Idaho Room, is practically gone. It doesn't work at all."

The Idaho Room is where many historical books, pamphlets, photographs and other materials are located. Ash told the Times-News that at this time, the room is too warm for "optimal preservation."

"The room needs to be at 68 degrees," Ash said. "Right now, it's always too hot. It's usually in the high 70s or 80s."

Josie Reyes, a library staff member of 14 years, is looking forward to the new system's completion.

"I die with the heat in here," Reyes said. "I am very excited about this. I will be able to wear normal clothes to work."

Inspectors from the Idaho Historical Society surveyed the library recently and gave it high marks on everything except temperature control.

Ash said even though she and library staff were aware of the temperature problem, the society's disapproval propelled them into action.

The original HVAC system was installed in the library when it was built during the late 1930s, Ash said. Since then, there have been two major additions to the building and few minor changes to the HVAC system.

The city of Twin Falls approved a budget of $160,000 for the replacement project, she said.

The library won't close during construction, which is set to begin within the next two weeks and end in October.

"It will be quite noisy," Ash said. "But some of the work will be done after hours, especially if it's going to inconvenience patrons for a long time."

During construction, a temporary air conditioning unit will take place of the HVAC system, but it will not have controls to fine-tune the temperature. In a written statement, Ash lamented the potential discomfort to patrons, but added, "We know that you will be happy with the outcome!"

"Right now, even with fans, it gets really hot in here," said library employee Keri Crider.

The library will have a display board in plain view with construction updates.

The Sun Valley area sports more than 500 miles of single-track bike trails, including this one in Adams Gulch near Ketchum.

Group launches drive to make Wood River a bicyclist's heaven

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Skiing put Sun Valley on the map. Now, there's a new drive to spotlight its pedal-pushing as well.

"We have some of the best biking in the world. And we need to let people know that," said Ketchum's Rebecca Rusch, a prominent mountain biker.

To that end, area bicycling enthusiasts have formed the Wood River Bicycle Coalition to champion new bike trails, maintain existing trails, educate riders about safety and organize races and festivals.

Already they've helped to build 15 miles of new single-track west of Hailey, backed the construction of bicycle pump parks in Ketchum and Hailey, and helped organize the Sun Valley Rhythm and Ride

Boycott oil? Better give up your lifestyle first

By Seth Borenstein

WASHINGTON — Has the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico got you so mad you're ready to quit Big Oil?

Ready to park the car and take up bike-riding or walking? Well, your bike and your sneakers have petroleum products in them. ## BSU

Boise State has dominated the WAC, compiling a 49-4 record and winning three WAC titles in four years under Bronco coach Chris Petersen.

Thompson said Colorado's Pac-10 jump on Thursday was the catalyst for the Mountain West to move quickly to grab Boise State.

He added there's still discussion among Mountain West university presidents on whether the league should remain at 10 schools, or expand to 12 or even 16, to boost its BCS chances.

"This is a game of musical chairs," Thompson said. "People want to have a seat when the music stops."

He expects to readjust his conference's television package with CBS Sports and Versus to reflect BSU's inclusion starting in 2011. The conference is midway through a 10-year, $120 million deal with the networks, and Boise State athletic director Gene Bleymaier said he expects all 17 of his school's athletic disciplines to benefit.

For instance, 16 to 18 basketball games could be televised in 2011, compared to just a single game during the 2009-10 season, he said.

"Your reputation, your prestige, the growth of programs, how people perceive you — we take another step up," Bleymaier said.

Karl Benson, the WAC commissioner and a former collegiate baseball player at Boise State, said he was disappointed in his alma mater's departure but aimed to pick up the pieces and rebound.

"It's not the first time a school has left the WAC and each time it has happened, a school or group of schools have stepped up and performed at a level that brings the WAC national credibility," Benson said.

Kustra said the invitation, backed unanimously by Mountain West university presidents, shows Boise State has improved in both athletics and academic achievement, which he said is now on par with other schools in the conference.

Another advantage for Boise State will be travel time. In the WAC, the team travels to Hawaii and Louisiana.

The Mountain West Conference is more concentrated. Boise State joins the Air Force Academy, Brigham Young, Colorado State, New Mexico, San Diego State, TCU, UNLV, Utah and Wyoming.

and metals, it recorded 212 different compounds. More than 180 of them are products that started as natural gas or oil.

"It's the material basis of our society essentially," said Michael Wilson, a research scientist at the University of California Berkeley. "This is the Petrochemical Age."

Louisiana State University environmental sciences professor Ed Overton, who works with the government on oil spill chemistry, said: "There's nothing that we do on a daily basis that isn't touched by petrochemicals."

When in the movie "The Graduate" young Benjamin is given advice about the future, it comes in one word: plastics. About 93 percent of American plastics start with natural gas or oil.

"Just about anything that's not iron or steel or metal of some sort has some petrochemical component. And that's just because of what we've been able to do with it," said West Virginia University chemistry professor Dady Dadyburjor.

Nothing shows how pervasive and malleable petrochemicals are better than shampoo, said Kevin Swift, director of economics and statistics for the American Chemistry Council, the chemical industry's trade association. The bottle is plastic. The cap is plastic. The seal and the label, too. The ink comes from petrochemicals and even the glue that holds the label to the bottle comes from oil or gas.

"The shampoo — it's all derived from petrochemicals," Swift said. "A bottle of shampoo is about 100 percent chemistry."

Just add a bit of natural fragrance.

Bike and Music Festival, which will pair biking with music June 23 through 27.

"The Sun Valley area is not known for its biking. But we have some of the best amenities in the United States," said Jim Keating, director of the Blaine County Recreation District.

The Wood River Valley recently earned a silver designation from the Washington, D.C.-based League of American Bicyclists for its 500 miles of single-track trails and several thousand more miles on nearby National Forest lands. The valley also has the most active Safe Routes to School program in Idaho, the league said, and police officers have received training helping them target motorists who don't yield the right of way.

It's one of 25 communities to attain silver nationwide and the only one in Idaho.

"We have room for improvement in the south valley where the population is," said Sean McLaughlin, who helped found the Wood River

Sun Summit's Chip Deffe hands out bike lubricant to Chris Pilaro and other bicyclists participating in Bike to Work Day. The Wood River Valley has seen some of its largest numbers of bicyclists ever this spring despite inclement weather, said a spokesman for Mountain Rides.

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

Bicycle Coalition. "We know this is a good area. There are just a lot of things that are not connected yet."

The coalition has already begun to address the lack of mountain bike trails near Hailey and Bellevue. It's finishing up 15 miles of gravity-based trails out of Croy Canyon with berms and rises that resemble a stretched-out version of the pump parks.

It also hopes to complete a dirt path along a section of Croy Creek Road that bikers can follow so they don't have to share pavement with motorists driving 45 miles per hour.

The group is also working to complete the Toe of the Hill Trail from Hailey's Wood River High School to Bellevue, and a partnership with the Ketchum Ranger District will upgrade the steep Eve Gulch trail in Adams Gulch near Ketchum that was damaged in the Castle Rock Fire. The coalition is also working to preserve existing trails such as Curly's, behind Easley Hot Springs.

The inaugural bike and music festival will feature five days of activities, including a Ketchum Cruiser Criterium, a Sheep Town Fat Tire Rally, a Poker Ride, Idaho Pump Track State Championship, a Sawtooth Century Ride and a chance to learn stunt jumping and other biking skills at Bike Ranch in the Smoky Mountains.

Putting on events is challenging, especially on public lands, said Martin.

"But other places have figured out a way around it so we can, too," he said, adding he'd like to see larger competitions and stage races. "That would bring a lot of business to the area."

Storm

"This was a natural evolution," he said. "I've been here so I already know everyone here in the office and out in the various communities we serve."

Other ISP troopers welcomed the news. ISP Sgt. Kevin Haight said Storm "has been a terrific supervisor, peer and friend," and applauded Storm's "compassion for people in need."

Storm is juggling both his new and old jobs until he hires a new patrol lieutenant. But he's managed to break free from the office long enough to meet area lawmakers, an important aspect of his duties.

Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, said he's long known Storm and called him "a natural candidate" for the position.

"We need to be aware of any issues at ISP so that when we go vote ... we'll have that perspective, insight into how policy and funding could affect their operations," Hartgen said.

Like many agencies, Storm said, one of ISP's biggest current challenges is funding.

Training budgets have shrunk and new-vehicle purchases are suspended, among other cuts. The long-term implications worry Storm.

He doesn't have an easy answer, but said finding efficiencies and ways to save money will be a priority for years to come.

It's part of the responsibility that comes with reaching a professional goal.

He said he's approached his career like he does climbing a mountain: setting a goal, overcoming obstacles along the way and never giving up. That philosophy has taken him to the heights of Mount Borah and California's Mount Whitney, the highest peak in America's lower 48 states.

"You end up standing on top," Storm said. As a captain.

Idaho teen killer’s ex-boyfriend charged

Police say Santos sold meth, cocaine

KETCHUM (AP) — The former boyfriend of an Idaho teen convicted of murdering her parents in 2003 has been charged with three felony drug counts after being indicted by a central Idaho grand jury.

Bruno Antonio Santos-Dominguez, 26, was charged Thursday in 5th District Court with trafficking in methamphetamine, trafficking in cocaine and delivery of cocaine.

Each charge carries a possible life sentence.

Police said Santos sold a half-pound of methamphetamine to an undercover Idaho State Police detective in Hailey on May 14.

Santos was then arrested with his cousin, 27-year-old Jose Benitez-Diez of Ogden, Utah. Benitez-Diez has been charged with conspiracy to trafficking in methamphetamine.

Police also say Santos sold cocaine in Ketchum on April 25 and 30 in the alley behind the Cellar Pub, where he worked.

Santos was once a suspect in the 2003 slayings of Alan and Diane Johnson but was cleared.

Sarah Johnson, 16 at the time, was subsequently convicted of two counts of first-degree murder and is serving two life prison sentences without parole.

The federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement agency says Santos and Benitez-Diez are in the United States illegally.

Santos was allowed to be in the United States during Johnson’s 2005 trial under the supervision of local law enforcement but was deported to Mexico shortly after the trial.

During that trial, prosecutors said Johnson shot and killed her parents after fighting with them over her relationship with Santos, who at the time of the slaying was a 19-year-old undocumented Mexican immigrant living in the region.

They had forbidden her to see Santos and planned to pursue the filing of statutory rape charges against him.

Former Idaho prison heads transferred to federal prisons

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A private prison company being sued by the American Civil Liberties Union amid allegations of extreme violence at an Idaho lockup has shuffled Idaho’s ousted warden and assistant warden to top posts at federal prisons in Kansas and Nevada.

Phillip Valdez, the former warden at the 2,104-bed Idaho Correctional Center near Boise, has been named assistant warden at the Leavenworth Detention Center, a prison CCA runs for the U.S. Marshals Service in Leavenworth, Kan.

The company didn’t have any open warden positions, so Valdez opted to take the assistant warden spot at the 1,033-bed Kansas prison rather than leave the company, said Corrections Corporation of America spokesman Steve Owens.

ICC’s former assistant warden, Dan Prado, has been named assistant warden at the new Nevada Southern Detention Center, a 1,072-bed facility currently being built at Pahrump, Nev., for the Office of Federal Detention Trustee, an agency under the U.S.

Department of Justice.

Neither Valdez nor Prado could be reached by The Associated Press.

CCA announced that Valdez and Prado would no longer be leading the Idaho prison after the $155 million lawsuit was filed earlier this year.

The ACLU and inmates at the prison are asking for class-action status, contending the prison is so violent that it’s been dubbed “gladiator school” by prisoners and that guards expose inmates to beatings from other prisoners as a management tool. The lawsuit also contends CCA has denied adequate medical care to injured inmates as a way to reduce the appearance of injuries.

Chief Deputy U.S. Marshal Daryl Ingermanson in Topeka, Kansas, had not yet learned of Valdez’ appointment when contacted by The Associated Press. But he said the contract between the U.S. Marshals Service and CCA doesn’t give the federal agency any control over who CCA hires to run the Leavenworth Detention Center, as long as that person passes a full background check.

Ingermanson also said the agency has not had any problems with the way CCA runs the Leavenworth lockup.

“It has always been a very professional facility here. We’ve not had any issues that have been unresolved so far — we just have the typical complaints from the inmates, but we’ve gone up and done our own independent investigations and everything we’ve found, other than just some minor stuff, is unfounded,” Ingermanson said. “Any issues I’ve ever had and addressed with them up there, they’ve answered them right away.”

Idaho soldier denied clemency for Iraq killing

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — Clemency has been denied for an Idaho soldier convicted of killing an unarmed Iraqi and he will next focus on an August parole hearing, his family and legal team said.

Sgt. Evan Vela’s wife, Alyssa Carnahan, said Vela told her Wednesday that the U.S. Army Clemency and Parole Board denied clemency following a June 3 hearing.

“It was basically what we were expecting,” said Carnahan, who lives in St. Anthony with the couple’s two children. “I’m hoping that he will be granted parole.”

Vela, a U.S. Army sniper, is serving a 10-year sentence in military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., after being convicted in 2008 of killing an Iraqi citizen and planting an AK-47 rifle on the dead man’s body.

Vela admitted to the killing, though he said he was following orders issued by his superiors.

Dan Conway, Vela’s attorney, said he believes Vela has a better chance of being released on parole than being granted clemency.

“It’s his newest opportunity, and we feel it’s his best opportunity,” Conway told the Post Register. “We’ve felt that he’s a good candidate for parole.”

Conway said Vela has overwhelming community support and several standing job offers, factors Conway said improve Vela’s chances of being paroled.

EPA orders Simplot to stop discharges

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has ordered the largest privately owned company in Idaho to stop discharging fecal bacteria into Snake River tributaries.

The EPA says inspections found that the Simplot Co. feedlot near Grand View was discharging pollutants, including nitrogen and phosphorus from animal manure, into the streams in violation of their permit.

Simplot has 10 days to notify the EPA on whether they can comply with the order.

The company confines between 30,000 and 65,000 cattle year round at the complex, which encompasses nearly 700 acres in southern Idaho.

Smart kidnap suspect wants venue change

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Attorneys for the man charged in the 2002 abduction of Elizabeth Smart say he can’t get a fair trial in Utah.

Brian David Mitchell is scheduled for a November trial in Salt Lake City’s U.S. District Court.

On Friday Mitchell’s public defenders asked a judge to move the trial elsewhere.

In court papers, they contend Mitchell has a constitutional right to trial by jurors who cannot be influenced by public passions or prejudice.

The kidnapping of Smart, then 14, and her recovery in March 2003 drew heavy local and national media attention.

The 56-year-old Mitchell is facing federal charges of kidnapping and unlawful transportation of a minor across state lines.

His estranged wife, Wanda Barzee, already has pleaded guilty to charges in both state and federal court.

New oil spill estimates are bad news for BP, wildlife

By Brian Skoloff and Harry R. Weber
Associated Press writers

GRAND ISLE, La. — The astonishing news that the oil leak at the bottom of the sea may be twice as big as previously thought could have major repercussions for both the environment and BP's financial health, killing more marine life and dramatically increasing the amount the company must pay in fines and damages.

Scientists now say the blown-out well could have been spewing as much as 2 million gallons of crude before a cut-and-cap maneuver started capturing some of the flow, meaning more than 100 million gallons may have leaked into the Gulf of Mexico since the start of the disaster in April. That is more than nine times the size of the 1989 Exxon Valdez disaster, previously the worst oil spill in U.S. history.

The larger estimates, while still preliminary and considered a worst-case scenario, could contribute to breathing liabilities against BP. Penalties can be levied against the company under a variety of environmental protection laws, including fines of up to $1,100 under the Clean Water Act for each barrel of oil spilled.

Based on the maximum amount of oil possibly spilled to date, that would translate to a potential civil fine for simple discharge alone of $2.8 billion. If BP were found to have committed gross negligence or willful misconduct, the civil fine could be up to $4,300 per barrel, or up to $11.1 billion.

"It's going to blow the record books up," said Eric Schaeffer, who led the Environmental Protection Agency's enforcement office from 1997 to 2002.

A larger spill also could lead to increased environmental hazards, with shrimp, crabs and fish such as marlin and swordfish especially hard hit.

"Certainly if there are greater volumes of oil than were originally estimated, that doesn't bode well," said Jim Franks, a fisheries biologist at the University of Southern Mississippi Gulf Coast Research Laboratory. "Do we expect twice the impact? I don't know how to judge that, but that much more oil could not be good at all for fish and wildlife resources. I would anticipate far-reaching impacts."

Days after the spill began, government officials told the public that the ruptured well a mile below the Gulf was leaking 42,000 gallons a day. Then, officials said it was actually five times bigger. That estimate didn't last long either. The new estimates are based on spillcam video as well as such things as satellite, sonar and pressure readings.

The lead scientist in the effort said the most credible range at the moment is between 840,000 gallons and 1.68 million gallons a day.

Another part of the equation is how much more oil started to leak last week after the riser pipe was cut, a step that BP and government officials said could increase the flow by 20 percent. The pipe cut was necessary to install a cap over the well; the cap has captured an estimated 4 million gallons so far.

If the higher-end estimates prove accurate, the leak amounts to an Exxon Valdez every five days or so. At that rate, in just over three weeks from now it will eclipse the worst oil spill in peacetime history, the 1979 Ixtoc disaster in Mexico, which took 10 months to belch out 140 million gallons of oil into the Gulf.

And there's more bad news. The oil gushing from the Gulf contains large amounts of natural gas. Samantha Joye, a professor of marine sciences at the University of Georgia, said that can contribute significantly to oxygen levels plummeting in the water as microbes eat the methane clouds.

BP's failures on the Gulf made worse by PR woes

By Harry R. Weber and Erin McClam
Associated Press writers

HOUSTON — BP is already fighting an oil gusher it can't contain and watching its mighty market value wither away. Its own bumbling public-relations efforts are making a big mess worse.

Not only has it made a series of gaffes — none greater than the CEO's complaint that "I'd like my life back" — the company hasn't even followed its own internal guidelines for damage control after a spill. Executives have quibbled about the existence of undersea plumes of oil, downplayed the potential damage early in the crisis and made far-too-optimistic predictions for when the spill could be stopped. BP's steadiest public presence has been the ever-present live TV shot of the untamed gusher.

What BP has lacked, crisis management experts say, has been much of a show of human compassion.

"All crises are personal," said Richard Levick, who runs a public relations firm, Levick Strategic Communications, that advises companies. "Action and sacrifice is absolutely critical."

The best move for BP's image, of course, would be to stop the leak. That has proved difficult enough, with one fix after another failing and estimates of the severity of the spill growing by the week.

Failing a solution, Daniel Keeney, president of a Dallas-based PR firm, suggested putting CEO Tony Hayward in a hard hat and life vest, helping crews contain and clean up the spill.

"You want to get him right in the thick of things, even if he looks somewhat uncomfortable doing it," Keeney said.

Levick suggested BP could have cut gas prices at its stations along the Gulf Coast — a show of financial solidarity.

BP has taken a stab at soothing angry Americans, airing a slick, multimillion-dollar national TV spot this week in which Hayward pledges: "We will make this right." Hayward also promised BP would clean up every drop of oil and "restore the shoreline to its original state." President Obama said the money spent on the ads should have gone to cleanup and compensating devastated fisherman and small business owners.

And even those efforts violate the company's own prescription for damage control. Its own spill plan, filed last year with the federal government, says of public relations: "No statement shall be made containing any of the following: promises that property, ecology or anything else will be restored to normal."

Who needs the Legislature? T.F. moves on texting ban

CHEERS: To the city of Twin Falls, for pressing ahead with its own ban on texting while driving.

The Twin Falls Traffic Safety Commission this week backed a proposed ordinance, and it will be considered by the City Council within the next few weeks. A public hearing is planned.

The city had been hoping the Legislature would pass a statewide texting ban during the session that adjourned in March. The Senate twice voted to proscribe texting while driving, but conservatives in the House of Representatives killed the legislation at the last minute.

That was foolish, in our judgment.

If the Twin Falls texting ban is approved, look for similar laws in other Idaho cities.

Coeur d’Alene, like Twin Falls, had an prospective ordinance drafted, but its City Council shelved the proposal pending state action.

It’s a shame that Idaho cities have to deal with this problem piecemeal. This issue is about public safety statewide, and it should be a state law.

JEERS: For a state whose elected leaders complain endlessly that they can’t abide federal meddling, Idaho is remarkably beholden to Washington.

The latest evidence of that comes from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which reported last week that Idaho’s 43 percent increase in federal food stamp use during past year was the largest in the United States.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare is processing 9,000 new food stamp applications each month, said Tom Shanahan, the agency’s spokesman. More than 176,600 people are enrolled in the program, and that’s more than double the 2007 level.

“We’re setting records every month,” Shanahan told the Idaho Statesman. “Food stamps are a good indicator of the number of people living near poverty. We’re seeing the effects of layoffs and high unemployment.”

Historically in Idaho, Health and Welfare sees dips in food stamp demand in the summer because employment numbers go up, but the last couple of recession years have been an exception. The food stamp case load hasn’t dropped in Idaho since fall 2007.

Idaho has a robust coalition of private-sector agencies combating hunger, but few resources from those government apart from those it passes along from the feds.

CHEERS: To Idaho Democratic Congressman Walt Minnick, for proposing legislation that would go a long way toward giving the president an effective line-item veto.

According to the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash., and Obama administration has embraced Minnick’s approach.

It would let the president pick out a list of items from a bill and send it back to Congress for a fast-track, up-or-down vote. It’s a step toward a line-item veto, but one that’s been declared constitutional by the House legislative counsel; an actual line-item veto that Congress passed in 1996 was overturned as unconstitutional two years later.

Forty-three states — including Idaho — give governors the power to nullify or cancel specific provisions of a bill, usually budget appropriations, without vetoing the entire legislative package. The states’ experience has shown that the line-item veto can be an effective tool for stanching spending.

And when it comes to reigning in federal spending, deficit hawks can use all the help they can get.

How to add by subtracting

Sixteen months ago, Congress passed a stimulus package that will end up costing each average taxpayer $7,798. Economists were divided then about whether this spending was worth it, and they are just as divided now.

David Brooks

The president’s economists ran the numbers through their model and predicted that the stimulus package would create or save at least 3 million jobs. John F. Cogan and John B. Taylor of Stanford and Tobias Cwik and Volker Wieland of the Goethe-University of Frankfurt argue that the White House methodology is archaic. Their model suggests the stimulus will create about a half-million jobs.

Edward L. Glaeser of Harvard compared the change in employment in each state to the amount of stimulus money it has received. He found a slight relationship between stimulus dollars and job creation, but none at all if you set aside three states: Alaska and the Dakotas.

Over all, most economists seem to think the stimulus was a good idea, but there’s a general acknowledgment that we know relatively little about the relationship between fiscal policy and job creation.

If the economists are divided about what just happened, the rest of the world is not divided about what should come next. Voters, business leaders and political leaders do not seem to think that the stimulus was such a smashing success that we should do it again, even with today’s high unemployment.

They seem to see the fiscal floodgates wide open and that the private sector still only created a measly 41,000 jobs last month. That doesn’t inspire confidence. Furthermore, they understand something that is hard to quantify: Deficit spending in the middle of a debt crisis has different psychological effects than deficit spending at other times.

In times like these, deficit spending to pump up the economy doesn’t make consumers feel more confident; it makes them feel more insecure because they see a political system out of control. Deficit spending doesn’t induce small business people to hire and expand. It scares them because they conclude the growth isn’t real and they know big tax increases are on the horizon.

So we are exiting a period of fiscal stimulus and entering a period of fiscal consolidation. Last year, the finance ministers of the G-20 were all for pumping up economic activity. This year, they called on their members to reduce debt. In this country, deficits are now the top concern.

Some theorists will tell you that if governments shift their emphasis to deficit cutting, they risk sending the world back into recession. There are some reasons to think this is so, but events tell a more complicated story.

Alberto Alesina of Harvard has surveyed the history of debt reduction. He’s found that, in many cases, large and decisive deficit reduction policies were followed by increases in growth, not recessions. Countries that reduced debt viewed the future with more confidence. The political leaders who ordered the painful cuts were often returned to office.

This was true in Europe and the U.S. in the 1990s, and in many other cases before. In a separate study, Italian economists Francesco Giavazzi and Marco Pagano looked at the way Ireland and Denmark sharply cut debt in the 1980s. Once again, lower deficits led to higher growth.

So the challenge for the U.S. in the years ahead is to consolidate intelligently. That means reducing deficits while at the same time making the welfare state more efficient, boosting innovation in areas like energy, and spending more money on growth-enhancing sectors like infrastructure.

That’s a tough balancing act.

The biggest task will be to reduce middle-class entitlement spending. Alesina found that spending cuts are a more effective way to stabilize debt than tax increases, though we’ll need both.

The second biggest task is to consolidate while addressing another problem: labor market polarization. According to a Hamilton Project/Center for American Progress study by David Autor, high-skill sectors saw no net loss of jobs during the recession. Middle-skill sectors like sales saw an 8 percent employment decline. Blue-collar jobs fell by 16 percent.

In other words, the recession exacerbated the inequalities we’ve been seeing for decades. Somehow government has to cut total spending while directing more money to address the trends that threaten to hollow out the middle class.

During the period of consolidation, in other words, the government will have to spend less, but target better. That will require enormous dexterity and intelligence from a political system that has recently shown neither.

Retail sales drop 1.2 percent in May

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A big drop in May retail sales has raised new concerns about the durability of the economic recovery.

Retail sales plunged 1.2 percent last month, the Commerce Department said Friday. It was the largest decline in eight months.

Americans slashed spending on everything from cars to clothing to building materials. Auto sales fell 1.7 percent. Excluding autos, sales fell 1.1 percent.

Economists are worried that households will start trimming outlays as they continue to be battered by high unemployment and uncertainty in the stock market. Consumer spending accounts for 70 percent of total economic activity.

There's also concern that spending will freeze up as Americans see their wealth shrink. Investors have sold off stocks for more than a month because of concerns that Europe's sovereign debt crisis will slow a worldwide economic rebound. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 7.9 percent last month, the worst May for the blue chip index since 1940.

A separate Commerce report Friday said business inventories rose 0.4 percent in April for the fourth consecutive month of gains. Business sales climbed

As Clinton counsel, Kagan defended religious rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a counsel to former President Bill Clinton, Supreme Court nominee Elena Kagan blasted a California court for rejecting a landlady's claim that a state anti-discrimination law violated her religious freedom.

In a 1996 memo, Kagan suggested that the case should be taken by the Supreme Court and that the justices should side with the landlady, who refused to rent to unmarried couples. The memo is part of a roughly 40,000-page trove of documents released Friday that shed more light on what kind of justice Kagan might be.

The papers also reveal that Kagan helped draft an executive order detailing federal employees' rights to express their religion in the workplace.

Kagan's allies are virtually certain to cite the papers to counter Republican suggestions that Kagan takes a cramped view of religious liberty. The files were made public by the William J. Clinton Presidential Library in Little Rock, Ark.

In her memo on the California case, Kagan criticized as "quite outrageous" a finding by the state Supreme Court that the anti-discrimination statute didn't stifle the landlady's religion because she could make a living another way.

Kagan said that reasoning was "almost as if a court were to hold that a state law doesn't impose a substantial burden on religion because the complainant is free to move to another state."

She questioned the decision by then-Solicitor General Walter Dellinger not to weigh in on the case, Smith v. Fair Employment Housing Commission, after the landlady appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court. Kagan wrote that "there is an argument to be made for urging the court to review and reverse" the California ruling against the landlady. The Supreme Court eventually declined to take up the case.

That same year, Kagan helped draft a proposed executive order that she said "recognizes constraints" on religious expression but "tries to show ... that within these constraints, there is substantial room for discussion of religious matters."

Senators are mining Kagan's work as a Clinton aide for clues about her opinions and legal approach.

Friday's release — the second installment in a 160,000-page cache of records — includes files from Kagan's stint as a White House counsel in the mid-1990s, and also regarding her failed nomination to the federal bench.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, which is to begin Kagan's confirmation hearings June 28, has requested all documents from her tenure in the Clinton White House. Still to come are about 80,000 pages of e-mail correspondence, including 11,000 pages written by Kagan.

Republicans say they are increasingly concerned they won't get the documents soon enough to learn important information about Kagan and to draft questions before the hearings.

Sen. Jeff Sessions of Alabama, the top Judiciary Republican, had said he wanted all the records by week's end.

"If it all gets delayed, we could have a real problem. I'm getting very worried about it," Sessions said Thursday.

SEA OF CRITICISM FOR YOUNG SAILOR'S PARENTS

Were they irresponsible in allowing teen to sail globe alone?

By John Rogers
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — What were her parents thinking? Many people were asking that question as a 16-year-old girl sat adrift and alone in the frigid southern Indian Ocean, her ship's mast dashed along with her around-the-world sailing effort.

Abby Sunderland's ship was rolling in 20- to 30-foot waves as she waited to be rescued by a boat that was expected to arrive late last night Mountain time.

She set off a distress signal Thursday after rough seas disabled her ship and her satellite phone reception. There were 20 hours of tense silence before a search plane launched from Australia's west coast made brief radio contact with Sunderland and found her alive and well Friday morning.

"The aircraft (crew) spoke to her. They told her help was on the way and she sounds like she's in good health," said Mick Kinley, acting chief of the Australia Maritime Safety Authority, which chartered a commercial jet for the search.

"She's going to hang in there until a vessel can get to her," Kinley told reporters in Canberra.

Many people criticized Sunderland's parents for allowing the high-risk adventure, one of several by young people looking to make the record books. Some veteran sailors said it's all but irresponsible to send a teenager off alone in a small boat, knowing it will be tossed about like a toy for 30 or more hours at a time by the giant waves that rake the Southern Hemisphere's oceans this time of year.

"In Abby's case she was lucky," said Derrick Fries, a world sailing champion and author of the standard instruction manual "Learn to Sail." "It's only a matter of time until we end up with a tragedy on our hands."

Laurence Sunderland reacts to the news of his daughter Abby's impending rescue at his home Friday in Thousand Oaks, Calif. Abby Sunderland had been attempting a solo sailing voyage around the world when her boat became disabled in the Indian Ocean. Rescuers were on the way to her location.

Sunderland's family defends her trek, saying that as a lifelong sailor she was as well prepared for the journey as anyone could be. Her brother successfully circled the globe last year when he was about the same age.

"Sailing and life in general is dangerous," her father, Laurence, told The Associated Press. "Teenagers drive cars. Does that mean teenagers shouldn't drive a car? I think people who hold that opinion have lost their zeal for life. They're living in a cotton-wool tunnel to make everything safe."

The driving analogy didn't impress many parents who lit up Internet message boards with criticism. One, Tammy Davis of Makanda, Ill., said in a subsequent interview there's no comparison between a car breaking down in a city and a person being trapped alone in the ocean.

"My 21-year-old son runs triathlons for the University of Illinois," Davis said. "Would I want him to run triathlons alone? No."

Abby Sunderland set sail from Los Angeles County's Marina del Rey in her boat, Wild Eyes, on Jan. 23, trying to become the youngest person to circumnavigate the globe solo. Her brother, Zac, held the record for a little more than a month last year until Briton Mike Perham completed his own journey. The record changed hands again last month, when 16-year-old Australian Jessica Watson completed her own around-the-world sail.

Sunderland, whose father is a shipwright and has a yacht management company, ran into equipment problems and had to stop for repairs soon after beginning her journey. She gave up the goal of setting the record in April, but continued, hoping to complete the journey.

Laurence Sunderland said Friday that he "gave her the option" of bowing out at that point in her trek.

"I said, 'This isn't about media. It's about a passion and a love for the sport of sailing,'" he said. "Her words to me was, 'Dad, I know what I'm capable of. I know what this vessel is capable of and I'd like to continue.'"

In the Indian Ocean, Sunderland had made several broken calls to her family in Thousand Oaks, reporting her yacht was being tossed by 30-foot waves — as tall as a 3-story building. An hour after her last call ended Thursday, her emergency beacons began signaling.

She was contacted by rescuers in a chartered Qantas Airbus A330 jet that made a 4,700-mile round trip from Perth to Sunderland's boat, which is near the limit of its range.

They spotted Sunderland on the back deck of her boat. Its mast had been broken, knocking out satellite communications. Its sail was dragging in the water but Sunderland appeared to be in good shape.

Ban peanuts on planes? It's not nutty to allergics

By Russ Bynum

SAVANNAH, Ga. — Federal regulators are considering a snack attack on the nation's airlines that would restrict or even completely ban serving peanuts on commercial flights.

Advocates say the move would ease fears and potential harm to an estimated 1.8 million Americans who suffer from peanut allergies. Peanut farmers and food packagers, however, see it as overreaching and unfair to their legume.

"The peanut is such a great snack and such an American snack," says Martin Kanan, CEO of the King Nut Companies, an Ohio company that packages the peanuts served by most U.S. airlines. "What's next? Is it banning peanuts in ballparks?"

Twelve years after Congress ordered it to back off peanuts, the U.S. Transportation Department gave notice last week that it's gathering feedback from allergy sufferers, medical experts, the food industry and the public on whether to ban or restrict in-flight peanuts.

The peanut proposals were listed in an 84-page document including several other proposed consumer protections for air travelers. Three options were given: banning serving of peanuts on all planes; prohibiting peanuts only when an allergic passenger requests it in advance; or requiring an undefined "peanut-free zone" flight when a passenger asks for one.

While those options only pertain to peanuts served by flight crews, the document also states "we are particularly interested in hearing views on how peanuts and peanut products brought on board aircraft by passengers should be handled."

Spokesman Bill Mosely said the department is responding to concerns from travelers who either suffer from peanut allergies or have allergic children, "some of whom do not fly" because they're afraid of exposure.

"We're just asking for comment on whether we should do any of these three things," Mosely said. "We may not do any of them."

Peanut allergy can cause life-threatening reactions in people ingesting even trace amounts. Just breathing peanut dust in the air can cause problems — though usually minor ones — such as itching, sneezing and coughing.

A few limited studies on airline passengers with peanut allergies found a number of people reporting symptoms while flying, but few were severe or life-threatening, said Dr. Scott Sicherer, who studies food allergies at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York.

"But there's discomfort," Sicherer said. "It's sort of like if you were allergic to dogs and all of a sudden they brought 50 dogs onto the plane."

Why worry about peanuts on airplanes, as opposed to other public spaces?

Advocates with the Food Allergy and Anaphylaxis Network say the answer's simple: planes are confined spaces where the air and dust particles get re-circulated. And there's no way to stop and get off during a severe reaction during flight.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Addressing the clerical abuse scandal from the heart of the Roman Catholic Church, Pope Benedict XVI begged forgiveness Friday from victims and promised at a Mass to "do everything possible" to protect children.

While symbolic, Benedict's pledge failed to satisfy victims groups who said promises were useless without a clear-cut action plan to root out pedophile priests, expose the bishops who protected them and change the Vatican policies and culture that allowed abuse to continue.

His comments came during a Mass celebrated by 15,000 priests at St. Peter's Square marking the Vatican's Year of the Priest — a year marred by revelations of hundreds of new cases of clerical abuse in Europe, Latin America and elsewhere, as well as cover-ups by bishops and evidence of long-standing Vatican inaction.

It was the first time Benedict had spoken of the crisis from St. Peter's Basilica, the center of the church.

Benedict implied the devil was behind the timing of the scandal, saying the Year of the Priest was supposed to have been a year in celebration of the priesthood and encouragement for new vocations.

"It was to be expected that this new radiance of the priesthood would not be pleasing to the 'enemy'"; he would have rather preferred to see it disappear, so that God would ultimately be driven from the world," Benedict said in his homily, to applause from the gathered priests.

"And so it happened that in this very year of joy for the sacrament of the priesthood, the sins of priests came to light — particularly the abuse of little ones," he said.

"We, too, insistently beg forgiveness from God and from the persons involved, while promising to do everything possible to ensure that such abuse will never occur again," he said.

Benedict's comments were similar to those reported by the Vatican during his private meeting with abuse victims in Malta in April, during which the pontiff had tears in his eyes as he heard the stories of men molested by priests as children.

The pope also made similar statements last month en route to Portugal, in which he acknowledged that the "sins from within the church" were responsible for the scandal, not the media or some outside anti-Catholic lobby.

The pope also begged forgiveness from victims in his March letter to the Irish faithful.

However, Friday's homily seemed to wrap up those points in a single message — directed at priests who came to Rome from around the world to support the pontiff and the priesthood itself amid the scandal.

Vatican officials and the priests themselves said they had never seen such a large gathering of clergymen, who all donned white vestments to concelebrate the Mass from their seats in the piazza and renew their ordination vows.

Kids learn about Christian faith at Vacation Bible School

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Some 12 year olds may cope with the divorce of their parents or family illness by zoning out in front of the television or engaging in negative behavior, but Brad Whitesell made it through his parents' split and his father's liver transplant by leaning on God.

God's word is powerful, true and "when you need it most, comforting," Whitesell said. "Depending on the word of God has got me through some tough times. Had I not known that or learned anything about God ... I'm not sure where I would be. It probably wouldn't be good."

Having faith and a relationship with Christ is something Whitesell is helping other youngsters to develop, at the same place he learned a lot of what he knows: Vacation Bible School.

"This is my fourth year here," Whitesell said about the Gooding Christian Church's annual week-long event. "I like how all these kids are learning Bible stories and having fun."

The church's VBS Coordinator Christine Celaya said 65 kids attend on any given night. She said the church's focus is to give kids an opportunity to learn about the Christian faith in a jovial atmosphere.

This year's theme is "High Seas Expedition: Exploring the Mighty Love of God."

"We like our program to appeal to all kids," Celaya said.

By giving kids a chance to forge friendships while doing an array of crafts, learning new songs and playing games, the program helps break down long-held stereotypes about church in general, said Pastor Andy Morris.

"The stereotype of church is that it is stuffy and rigid ... kids are supposed to sit and be silent and that it's boring," Morris said. "When that's the only experience a kid has of church, then nothing taught really applies to their life. VBS is a great entry point for kids to know God and to grow closer to God."

Congregants are supportive of the program and many clamor to volunteer, whether its serving the participants and their families dinner, helping youngsters cut out paper during craft time or fostering an understanding of the day's Bible verse.

"Our congregation is encouraging of the program and I think that kids see that," Morris said. "Hopefully, they'll leave here feeling connected to their peers and that they are not only loved just by us but, most

Christian singles group plans retreat

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Being single is not so fun but being part of a singles group is — especially when common Christian values are shared, according to Gail Lindsey, organizer of the Magic Valley Christian singles.

The fun will be bumped up a notch come June 25, when the one-year-old group will host its first two-night, three-day camping retreat.

Between 10 and 15 singles are currently scheduled to attend the camp out, held at the Sawtooth Campground north of Ketchum, but Lindsey said any Christian single interested in attending may contact the group to sign up. They meet at 6 p.m. Thursdays at Wok'n Grill Restaurant in Twin Falls.

"It's for fellowship and learning experiences," Lindsey said about the camp.

Besides learning more about each other, two speakers will address four topics pertinent to singles, she said, including thinking outside the box and celebrating differences. Each topic will include games.

The group, including the retreat, is not to encourage courtship, Lindsey said, but to promote companionship.

"We don't have families to go to, so it's wonderful to have a date night to go to every week," she said. "We support each other."

James Dalos, who has a mild form of cerebral palsy, said the group has accepted him for who he is, without judging.

"It really helps me out when I'm going through a rough time," said Dalos, who's been a member of the group since it formed last year. "There's really nothing for singles in this town, so we help each other"

The group is non-denominational, he said, and any Christian single may join. Group numbers fluctuate, but there's always a showing on Thursday nights, when there's also Bible study.

The group also participates in ministry projects, makes visits to area hospitals, and donates to the Pregnancy Crisis Center.

"It's been a very successful year," Lindsey said. "I'm hoping (the camp out) will allow us to get to know each other on a deeper level by spending that weekend together."

Andrew Weeks may be reached at 735-3233 or aweeks@magicvalley.com.

If you're single

Magic Valley Christian singles will host its first camping retreat June 25-27. Cost is $20. To find out more about the retreat or the singles group, stop by 6 p.m. Thursdays at Wok'n Grill Restaurant, 1188 Blue Lakes Blvd N., Twin Falls, or call Gail Lindsey at 320-3245.

Churches paying attention to bond between humans and animals

By Lisa Black
Chicago Tribune

In Genesis, the Lord created animals, said they were good and then gave man permission to eat them.

While not a universal belief, many Christians traditionally have embraced a biblical stance on animals as a source of companionship, food and labor, but not much else.

"We know from the Bible that God created animals, he cares about them intimately and he wants us to care about them," said Ben DeVries, 30, of Kenosha, Wis., who started a blog, "Not One Sparrow," to encourage his conservative Christian brethren to become more like shepherds than hunters.

During a time when people increasingly treat pets as family members, animal advocates are gaining ground in religious circles. DeVries is among a growing number of people of faith who have joined the appeal for help in promoting causes such as relocating homeless pets, preventing animal cruelty and investigating factory farming practices.

The Humane Society of the United States has started a faith outreach program that, within the past two years, has distributed 7,500 DVDs at church and college campuses on "Eating Mercifully." The DVD and booklets draw on Scripture to remind Christians of their duty to be good stewards of all God's creatures.

But defining what it means to treat animals with compassion ranges wildly across faiths and within denominations. For some, it means trying to end animal abuse, volunteering at an animal shelter, having their pet blessed or pushing for vegetarian diets.

Others seek to fulfill spiritual needs that go beyond a simple desire to treat animals with dignity and kindness. Some religious leaders welcome pets to worship services, memorialize them at death and discuss them as spiritual beings without distinction from humanity — the most controversial ideology and one that is not accepted by mainstream religious faiths.

Emerson Theological Institute, a "new thought" college based in Oakland, Calif., has started to ordain animal chaplains who tend to humans and their kindred pets. In Phoenix, a new, animal-centric church service for people and their (well-behaved) pets recently began.

Some Jewish rabbis celebrate a dog's coming of age with a "bark mitzvah."

"I think it's ridiculous," said Rabbi Byron Sherwin, distinguished service professor with the Spertus Institute in Chicago. "Judaism makes a very clear distinction between animals and human beings. Human beings are not really a kind of animal like any other kind of animal."

He joins Christian leaders who fear that these practices blur a line that sets humans and animals apart.

But Kris Lecakes Haley of Phoenix, an ordained animal chaplain, doesn't think there is a line to blur.

"I think they are all expressions of the divine," she said. "We all have a divine spark within us. Because of that, there is an irrefutable connectedness of all life."

E. David Cook, a Wheaton College professor who has participated in animal rights discussions at Oxford University, said he believes that the green movement has raised Christian awareness about the environment and animal welfare.

Still, "evangelicals care deeply for the way animals are treated but that doesn't mean we worship animals or put them in front of human beings," Cook said. "If it's a choice between saving Granny and saving my poodle in the fire, Granny wins every time."

Catholic tradition has historically taken a warm view of animals, with pet blessings offered at many churches every October to honor St. Francis of Assisi, the patron saint of animals and ecology.

Humans still remain top dog, but are not allowed to abuse or exploit animals.

"When we see these horrific things like the mass-produced pork or chickens, where the animal can't be free-ranging, that really does become abusive," said Sister Dawn Nothwehr, a nun and ethics professor at the Catholic Theological Union.

"We have to stop and ask a question — is that a legitimate way to deal with animals?"

Harvard University addresses some of those questions in a course on religion and animals, in which it refers to the intersection between man and beast as an emerging academic field.

"We are made in God's image and are supposed to model his care," said DeVries, a vegetarian who said he does not push his dietary choice on others.

He hopes to be reunited with his pets in heaven but stops short of taking a firm position because he cannot find any scriptural support for his desire.

"The rest I leave in God's hands," he said.

Mormon Tabernacle Choir marks recording milestone

By Jennifer Dobner

SALT LAKE CITY — In the decades since 1910, the all-volunteer Mormon Tabernacle choir — which today has 360 members — has recorded 175 albums, earned five gold records, two platinum records and a Grammy award.

Music lovers can now hear some of those earliest recordings on a new 32-track, three-disc combination CD/DVD. The project includes digitally reworked versions of early recordings and rarely-seen video of choir performances. It also includes the songs most-requested by choir audiences worldwide, Music Director Mack Wilberg said.

“It’s interesting, listening to those recordings, I think the essence of the choir is very much the same as it was 100 years ago,” said the 55-year-old who is in his third year as director. “The makeup of the choir is much the same ... the finest singers from throughout the region still come together and it’s still totally volunteer.”

Some of the choir’s unique and consistent sound may be derived from its 143-year-old Tabernacle venue, which is renowned for its sensitive acoustics, Wilberg said.

The choir also continues to sing the same genre of music selections, including hymns, music of the masters and popular inspirational tunes.

Modern digital technology is making it possible for the choir’s first recorded songs — “Let the Mountains Shout for Joy” from 1910 and “Worthy is the Lamb” from 1927 — to be heard today, Wilberg said.

“When I first heard those old recordings, they were pretty scratchy and hard to hear,” he said. “But it’s kind of a miracle what they are able to do to clean them up.”

Singing the old standbys performed and recorded by previous incarnations of the choir never gets old, said Natalie Blackwell, 52, a soprano who is in her third year on the choir roster.

“It’s interesting, you wouldn’t think singing ‘America the Beautiful’ or some of the songs we’ve sung since we were in elementary school can move you, but they really can,”

the former vocal teacher said.

Being a part of the choir also stirs Blackwell’s sense of history.

“I had a piece of music in my folder that was published in 1929,” said Blackwell, of Cedar Hills. “It was so yellowed and crumbing and I had to wonder, how many people had held this piece of music before I did. It’s pretty cool.”

The choir was formed in 1847 as Latter-day Saints trekked across the plains to settle Utah. The group may be best-known for its weekly program, “Music and the Spoken Word.” The 30-minute Sunday morning program has been airing for more than 80 years and is the longest-running continuous broadcast in America. It is carried by more than 2,000 radio and television stations and cable systems.

While trying to glue together the parts to a small wooden treasure trunk, Malana Vincent reflected on what she’s learned at the church’s VBS. She’s been attending for two years.

The 11-year-old may not quite get the metaphor of the trunk, that it represents God’s overflowing love and the treasures of faith, but she does understand basic tenants of Christian belief.

“I’ve learned that Jesus died and rose again, for us, and that he never sinned,” Vincent said.

She doesn’t really ponder over the bite-sized morsels of information fed to her over the week, but the seeds are being planted.

God will do the rest, Celaya said.

“Their faith and understanding of God’s word will grow over time,” Celaya said. “This is just the beginning.”

VBS may be an entry point, but for the Whitesell family it has already given back so much, said Jill Whitesell, Brad’s mother. His ability to anchor his life with prayer has helped her faith as well.

“To see the positive influence and God’s working in my son’s life is so powerful,” she said. “It’s definitely affirmed my faith.”

Multimedia Bible aims for digital generation

By Jeff Kuerth
The Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO, Fla. — For a generation growing up with digital media, the written word printed on paper has little appeal — even if it’s the word of God.

It’s for them that an Orlando, Fla., company came up with the multimedia digital Glo Bible.

“You have entire generations of people that don’t engage paper very well,” said Nelson Saba, founder of Immersion Digital. “If you look at Bible literacy among younger generations, it’s dismal. This is designed to be a digital alternative to the paper Bible.”

A Gallup poll in 2000 found that about a quarter of young people ages 18-29 read the Bible weekly — about half the rate of those 65 or older. Part of that, Saba contends, is the younger generation’s aversion to the printed word.

“There is nothing wrong with paper. I have lots of paper Bibles, but it’s just not the media they engage,” Saba said.

The Glo, released in October, recently won Bible of the Year award from the Evangelical Christian Publishers Association. It’s the first digital Bible to receive the distinction in the 32 years of the awards.

The company is now working on an application that will allow Glo to go mobile. By the end of the year, Glo software will be available on iPhones and iPads, Nelson said.

“The paper Bible, you have to carry it with you,” Saba said. “The biggest advantage of Glo is you can access the Bible through whatever device you have in your hands.”

Currently, Glo is available only for personal computers and laptops, but the intent from its inception was that it would be applicable to mobile devices, Saba said.

Saba said he experienced a religious conversion in 1994. Two years later, he left his corporate career as a

A screen view from Glo, an interactive Bible by Immersion Digital LLC, is displayed May 18. The Glo Bible was recently honored as the first non-paper Bible to win the Bible of the year award by the Evangelical Christian Publishers Association.

Nelson Saba, founder and CEO of Immersion Digital LLC., is reflected on his computer as he talks about Glo, an interactive digital Bible.

technology executive for a financial institution to join a company that conceived the Glo’s predecessor, the iLumina. The iLumina, released in 2002, has many of the same features as the Glo but was aimed at families as biblical-reference material, serving more as an encyclopedia than an interactive Bible, said Saba who started Immersion Digital in 2008.

The Glo includes a series of interactive buttons that allow users to explore the Bible through text, a biblical timeline, an atlas and specific topics. Users can select a topic such as “parenting,” and the software will produce all Scripture referring to parenting. They can click on the atlas button, see an aerial map of Jerusalem, zoom down to a specific spot, such as the Dome of the Rock, and take a virtual tour inside the shrine.

The Glo contains 7,000 articles, 2,000 high-definition images and more than 500 virtual tours.

“I think the appeal is in this Internet society people need to see things visually,” said Skip Brown, customerservice representative for Long’s Christian Book and Outlet store in Altamonte Springs. “You can get a feeling for what it was like in Christ’s time, what Jerusalem looked like, what the streets looked like.”

The Glo sells for $80, about the same price as a leather-bound Bible or an illustrated study Bible. The downside of the Glo, Brown said, is that it takes a more powerful computer with a faster processor and the visual-memory capacity of a video-game system. In the Bible store’s older demonstration computer, Brown said, it took four hours to download the software.

At the same time, Brown believes a mobile digital Bible that can be accessed by computer, phone and tablet computer devices is the high-tech future of Christianity.

Technology has always been a means of bringing the word of God to people. The first use of the printing press was to publish the Bible. The goal of the Glo all along was to bring the Bible to where people are in today’s digital age and in a form they find captivating and easy to use, Saba said.

Judge dismisses Ten Commandments monument lawsuit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit against the city of Pleasant Grove, Utah, over a monument displaying the Ten Commandments.

A religious sect called Summum wanted to erect a display of its Seven Aphorisms in the park where the Ten Commandments monument stands.

U.S. District Judge Dale Kimball ruled that Pleasant

Grove did not violate the U.S. Constitution by accepting a Ten Commandments monument in a city park and denying a Summum monument. The Establishment Clause of the First Amendment prohibits the government from establishing an official religion or favoring one religion over another.

Kimball says the city displayed the monument for historical purposes, not religious, and did not use Summum’s beliefs when denying the group.

“There is no evidence that anyone in Pleasant Grove government had any idea what Summum’s religious beliefs were,” Kimball wrote in his decision.

Summum, a Latin word meaning highest or greatest, is rooted in Gnostic Christianity. The group believes Moses received the Seven Aphorisms along with the Ten Commandments on Mount Sinai. According to the group, Moses destroyed the tablet containing the aphorisms because he saw the Israelites weren’t ready for them.

The Ten Commandments marker has stood in the Pleasant Grove park for nearly 50 years. It was erected by the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

A Summum attorney said the group is considering its options to appeal.

The best medicine

Nobody asked me, but I think I have the answer to the Gulf of Mexico oil problem.

I know — I'm a klutz with a hammer, or any other tool, for that matter. I have no concept of engineering. And I've never fixed anything more complicated than — well, I've never really fixed anything.

But I do occasionally have a good idea. Like marrying Anita. That was a good idea. And — well — there was the time I — um — you know — the time —

OK, I did say "occasionally," didn't I?

So here's what I was thinking: a few years ago we had a fairly beastly van. It was a great car for our family — when it ran. But it had a little problem with the fuel line. It kept clogging. I don't know how many times we took it in to the shop to have that fuel line unplugged — always for around $300. It would run great for a while, and then it would clog up and we'd head back into the shop for another $300 unclogging.

So I say we find whoever it was who made that fuel line. He'll get this thing clogged for sure — and it'll only cost $300!

I know, I know — this is a time of crisis. A national emergency. This isn't the time to make feeble jokes — or even good jokes, for that matter. This is a time to be serious. This isn't a time for laughter.

Or is it?

In 1966, Capt. Gerald Coffee, a U.S. Air Force pilot, was shot down while flying a reconnaissance mission over North Vietnam. Although he managed to safely parachute from his plane, he was captured immediately and became one of the American prisoners of war held at the infamous Hanoi Hilton.

For prisoners, the Hanoi Hilton represented the greatest possible personal crisis. Not only were they separated from their families and comrades but they had to live in the most primitive and unsanitary conditions imaginable while being subject to constant torture and interrogation. According to one source, the objective of the torture was not really to get military information — I mean, after a few weeks, how accurate could their information be anyway? The objective was to break them — to break their spirits, to break their will, to break their souls.

SPEAK

Joseph Walker

And at least to some degree, it worked. "Every man has his breaking point," said Sen. John McCain, another Hanoi Hilton resident. "I reached mine."

But that didn't stop the prisoners from doing everything they could to cope with crisis, including using humor to make light of their situation.

"Humor," said Capt. Coffee, "is integral to our peace of mind and ability to go beyond survival."

For example, Capt. Coffee, who is now a well-known motivational speaker, said his first shower at the prison was "in a dank converted cell with water dripping down from a rusty pipe. Totally dejected, I looked up to let the water splash on my face and saw scratched on the wall: 'Smile! You're on Candid Camera!'"

Such shared humor between prisoners during the greatest adversity of their lives became a life-line that bonded them to each other and gave them a spark of courage and resilience. It was so important to their mental and emotional endurance that they would risk beatings and additional torture to share a joke or a funny story.

Said Capt. Coffee: "Laughter sets the spirit free to move through even the most tragic circumstances."

Which reminds me, did you hear about the easiest way to make a small fortune during the current economic crisis? Start out with a large one.

Go ahead — laugh. It won't hurt. And it just might help.

Sister to take time out for fun

By Marci Hummel
The Bryan Times

BRYAN, Ohio — It was tough when Father Charlie Ritter left, but members of St. Patrick Church knew they could look forward to welcoming a new pastor.

However, when Sister Regina Smith leaves St. Pat's on June 24, no one is coming to take her place. And her exit will leave a gaping hole in parish responsibilities.

Of course, everyone is entitled to retirement, especially a hard-working Ursuline like Sister Regina, who has devoted her life to helping others.

"It's time," said Sister. "I can make choices. I can volunteer for hospice, which I plan to do, and then maybe some other things that my gifts (will suit)."

Sister's gifts include an ability to teach — she taught elementary school for many years, including two years in Puerto Rico — an ability to comfort the sick and the dying, and an ability to take charge of obligations many prefer to avoid and dealing with oh-so-important details.

However, such duties don't usually fall in the category of retirement.

"It depends on how you define 'retire,'" Sister said. "I think it's about making choices, doing fun things and not having to be someplace at a certain time every day. And if somebody asks you to do something, you can say no — or yes."

Although Sister said retirement does not mean lounging in a La-Z-Boy, it must include having fun. And she said she doesn't plan to work until September. "If somebody calls and says, 'Do you want to do something?' my question is, is it going to be fun? If it's going to be work, no thank you. If it's going to be fun, I'll be there."

Sister said she will begin volunteer work in September with Hospice of Northwest Ohio in Perrysburg.

When asked if she finds such work depressing, Sister said, "No, I think you learn a lot from those people ... You learn how they face death, their patience. You learn a lot about their lives, especially if they're in (their own) home."

She said hospice teaches the patient and the family how to prepare for death. It also teaches them how to live their remaining life to the fullest.

Sister Regina has been at St. Patrick for 13 years, the longest of her assignments. Before coming to Bryan she served at St. Mary's Church in Vermilion for nine years.

Sister said her career has been split between teaching and parish work. At St. Patrick, Sister said her work has been with the homebound, the hospitalized and those in nursing homes as well as seeing that they can receive Communion every weekend.

William R. Kelly

BUCKEYE, Ariz. — William R. Kelly, who was known for his sharp wit, charm and love of adventure and the outdoors, passed away peacefully at home in Buckeye, Ariz., on Thursday, June 10, 2010, after a lengthy illness.

Bill was born May 5, 1928, in Shoshone, Idaho. He was the son of the late Emmett and Audra Kelly of Gooding, Idaho. He attended schools in Shoshone and Gooding, Idaho, where he was active in the sports and music programs. He attended the universities of Idaho and Utah and graduated with a political science degree from the University of Utah. He loved music and, while at the university, he became a member of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity, where he was part of a musical quartet that used to serenade the women in the sororities. After graduating from the University of Utah, he moved to San Francisco, where he met his future wife, Betty Lou “Happy” David, who was an airline stewardess at the time.

While in San Francisco, he worked at the Mills Law Library by day and attended the Golden Gate Night Law School at night. After he graduated with his Juris Doctorate degree in 1962, he became the head librarian of the Mills Law Library, where he worked for many years. Because of his love of skiing and hiking the outdoors, he and Happy moved to South Lake Tahoe, where he opened his private law practice on the California side of the lake. He practiced law for more than 30 years. While in Tahoe, he was awarded the Presidential Award by the Kiwanis Club and also twice received the Nate Blank Award for Volunteer Lawyer of the Year Award.

Bill loved being around people, and everywhere he went he made many friends. Because of that, he and Happy have very dear and lifelong friendships with people from all over the world. Bill used to say the two most important things that he enjoyed the most in life were wine and his wife, but after that it was his friends and family that meant the most to him. People knew that if they ever needed help of any kind Bill would be there. Bill will be missed greatly by all who loved him.

He is survived by his wife, Betty Lou “Happy” Kelly; three nieces, Susan Westendorf of Gooding, Nancy Kelly of Twin Falls and Becky Schoettger of Gooding; and a nephew, Steve Kelly of Boise.

A celebration of Bill’s life will be held at a later date.

Clyde J. Davis

WENDELL — Clyde J. Davis, 87, of Wendell, passed on Tuesday, June 8, 2010, at this home of an extended illness.

He was born March 1, 1923, in Preston, Idaho, the son of Heber Gregory Davis and Laura Jensen Davis. After one year in Preston, the family moved to the Wendell area and later to the Jerome area and raised sheep. When he was 14, they moved to Pocatello area. At the age of 16, he joined the Idaho National Guard in 1939 and moved to active duty in 1940, where he served in the Southwest Pacific, Korea and during Vietnam.

On Feb. 8, 1941, he married Doris May Amos, his high school sweetheart. They had four children, Larry, Clydette, Gregory and Arada. He retired from the U.S. Army in 1963. He then was a correctional facility guard for 10 years in California and then returned to Idaho in the Magic Valley area.

He was very proud to have fought for his country and proudly flew the American flag. He won several medals for valor in combat. He was very active in the IOOF and held several offices, including grand patriarch in 1988-89. He enjoyed all the tasks he was involved in and especially the friends and acquaintances he met over the years.

Doris May passed on Oct. 5, 2003. He then remarried Joanne S. Davis on Nov. 18, 2004, and lived in Wendell until the time of his death.

He was preceded in death by his parents; eight brothers; three sisters; and his first wife, Doris May; also his children, Larry deMonte, Gregory Thomas and Arada Lorraine Novak. Surviving is one brother, Lyle J. Davis of Pocatello; his daughter, Clydette Dee (Dale Davis) Willingham of Seaside, Calif.; his wife, Joanne of Wendell; stepchildren, Cherie (Randy) Wright, Brian (Elaine) Davis, Gayla (Garry) Lee, Jeff (Shirley) Davis, Brad (Billie) Davis and Michael (Lana) Davis; his grandchildren, John (Sheila) Davis, Dana (Darren) Dickison, Woody Willingham, Ron (Nancy) Willingham, Kevin Novak and Rachel (Dusty) Buhler; daughter-in-law, Cindy Davis; three step-grandchildren; and numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

He was dearly loved and will be greatly missed.

The funeral will be at 1 p.m. Tuesday, June 15, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome. Burial will follow at the Hazelton Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the IOOF in Jerome.

We would like to extend our thanks to Dr. Lohmann and his nurse, Becky; and St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center ICU and Second Floor staff. Special thanks to Visions Group staff for the wonderful care that was given to Clyde.

DRAPER, Utah — A Utah man set to die by firing squad next week made his final appeal for clemency Friday, with his attorneys saying he’s a changed man and asking the state parole board to reduce his sentence to life in prison.

Ronnie Lee Gardner has taken responsibility for the crimes — including two murders — committed some 25 years ago, attorney Andrew Parnes told the five-member panel during closing arguments of a two-day commutation hearing.

“He’s acknowledged the harm that he’s caused. He’s expressed to you the remorse that he feels,” Parnes said Friday.

Gardner said for most of his life he was an impulsive, unapologetic person who looked for trouble.

That began to change in 1999 as he met with psychologists and understood the damages wrought by his dysfunctional family life, Gardner said on Thursday.

“I’m really remorseful,” he said, acknowledging that he had no reasons for killing.

The Utah Board of Pardons and Parole will announce its decision on Monday. A majority of the board must vote for clemency for the sentence to be changed before his June 18 execution.

Gardner, 49, was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death in 1985 for the fatal shooting of attorney Michael Burdell in a botched courthouse escape attempt earlier that year. Gardner shot Burdell while trying to escape from custody at a Salt Lake City courthouse; he was at the courthouse for a hearing on charges that he murdered bartender Melvyn Otterstrom the previous year.

Utah law allowed him to chose a firing squad rather than lethal injection because he was sentenced before 2004, when lethal injection became the state’s default execution method.

Assistant Utah Attorney General Thomas Brunker opposed the commutation petition.

The two murders, along with a string of other violent crimes including several escapes, support Gardner’s death sentence, he said.

As an adult, Gardner has spent nearly 30 years in prison on various criminal convictions.

“Even if he has made some changes, the board has to weigh this late change against a lengthy history of criminality and his refusal to obey the rules in prison and in the community,” Brunker said.

Earlier this week, attorneys for Gardner asked the Utah Supreme Court to vacate his sentence and order a new sentencing hearing so that a jury could consider mitigating evidence from Gardner’s troubled life — early drug addiction, physical and sexual abuse and possible brain damage — uncovered during a federal appeal in 1999. Parnes said he believes a jury’s knowledge of that information could have produced a different sentence.

It’s unclear when the high court will rule.

Parnes made a similar argument to the pardons board and submitted four affidavits from four jurors in the 1985 trial that said such evidence might have resulted in a lesser sentence.

Embroided charter school fights to stay open

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A public charter school that tried to sue Idaho officials for barring the use of the Bible as a historical text in the classroom is now fighting the state to stay open.

The Idaho Public Charter School Commission moved to shutter Nampa Classical Academy citing a lack of stability in the school’s finances, which were laid out during a public hearing Friday.

Ken Mallea, a Meridian attorney the state contracted as a hearing officer for the proceeding, is expected to give his recommendation next week to the commission, which will then decide whether to revoke the academy’s charter.

The commission is scheduled to meet June 24.

While the administrators of the academy complain they’ve been unfairly targeted in the midst of their differences with the state over use of the Bible, the commission insists the revocation efforts are specific to the academy’s finances.

“The question has always been: Are we getting a fair shake?” said Erik Makrush, president of the Nampa Classical Academy Board of Directors.

The academy opened last fall in Nampa with more than 550 students, making it one of the state’s biggest charter schools, and has faced intense state scrutiny in the past year.

The commission voted March to begin the lengthy process of revoking the academy’s charter because financial documents weren’t provided on time. The school delivered 1,700 pages of information to the commission later that month.

The fledgling charter school faced another setback in May, when a federal judge dismissed its lawsuit against the state for prohibiting the Bible and other religious texts from the classroom.

The academy has pointed out that the practice goes unchecked elsewhere in Idaho. A Coeur d’Alene charter school has used the Bible in literature classes since 1999.

Terry LaMasters chairs the academy’s governing board and acknowledged that the charter school had closed earlier than planned this school year after federal funds they planned and budgeted for did not come through.

The school still met the state’s required number of school days and is working toward financial solvency, he said.

The academy has saved roughly $30,000 from ending the academic year about a dozen days earlier and brought in more than $38,000 through fundraising since late May, LaMasters said.

“We’ve made corrections to our budget and making it one of the state’s biggest charter schools, and has faced intense state changes,”

Smoke rises into the air after a small plane crashed into Round Valley High School in Eagar, Ariz. on Friday. Two people died in the crash.

Plane crashes into eastern Arizona school

EAGAR, Ariz. (AP) —

Authorities say a small plane nosedived into a high school in a small eastern Arizona town Friday afternoon and exploded, killing both people aboard.

Authorities say there were no reports of injuries on the ground, with classes out for the summer.

They say the Cessna circled the area two or three times before it suddenly crashed into the main building at Round Valley High School in Eagar at about 2 p.m.

Witnesses say the plane took off from nearby Springerville Airport and experienced some sort of problem before veering into a school building. Authorities had no immediate information on the victims, who the plane was registered to or where it was headed.

The school serves about 500 students in Eagar and nearby Springerville and is about 200 miles east of Phoenix.

EPA monitoring air quality outside school

LAPWAI (AP) — Federal environmental regulators have completed air quality testing around a northcentral Idaho tribal high school that’s among 64 U.S. schools being monitored to determine possible health effects on kids.

Lapwai High School, upstream from Lewiston on the Clearwater River, is the only Idaho school where air quality is being monitored under this Environmental Protection Agency program.

Some pollutants measured near Lapwai High School, located on the Nez Perce Indian Reservation, make up emissions from the paper mill in Lewiston.

Initial samples from Lapwai indicate that pollutants found near the school fall well below levels that would merit concern for people exposed to them for short periods.

EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson indicated Thursday her agency will proceed with analyzing possible long-term exposure impacts.

This may result in follow-up actions to address health concerns, should they emerge.

Hollister aide uses FLAGS for life lesson

Times-News

Jamie E. Hale’s students at Hollister Elementary School made flags around Memorial Day this spring and hung them in the school’s windows.

Hale, an English Language Learner aide whose teaching covers language and vocabulary items with a little bit of culture, said he was inspired to do the project after receiving an e-mail about a March 2006 incident where students turned a California high school’s U.S. flag upside down and put a Mexican flag above it. He talked with some of his students about that situation and explained how disrespectful the Californian students were, contrasting them with neighbors of the Hollister school who politely fly a Canadian flag under their U.S. flag.

Together, Hale’s students made the three extra-large U.S. flags, and he taught them to consider whether the actions they take in life will help them or hurt them. It only takes a few people to make many look bad, he said.

“I would never expect them to forget their own rich culture,” Hale wrote of his students in an e-mail, “but want them to be respectful of the culture in which they choose to live. When I pull up to the school and look up at those flags I feel a sense of pride that we finished off the school year working on something unforgettable and worthwhile.”

It’s not just crash etiquette, it’s the law

Q : I was involved in a crash last week where the other person backed into my car in a parking lot. The guy that hit my car left a note with his name and a phone number on it. I called the number but the message said the number was disconnected. Can I file a police report even though the crash happened on private property and happened more than a week ago?

A : You can and should file a police report. I’m hoping that you got the license plate number of the vehicle that backed into you. Idaho Code 49-1302 states that it is the duty of the person striking any vehicle to give his or her name, address, proof of registration and certificate or proof of current liability insurance. The person shall also show his or her driver’s license to the person struck or to the driver or person attending any vehicle collided with. If the guy gave a false name along with the fake phone number he could be charged under this same section, which is a misdemeanor.

If a cop would have been called to the scene, even on private property, he or she could have facilitated the exchange of information that was to be provided by law. The officer would not be able to cite the responsible party for any infraction on private property, unless it involved parking in a handicap spot.

I might add that for a crash involving an unattended vehicle, the responsible party needs to leave, in a place easily seen or on the vehicle struck, a written notice giving the name and address of the driver and of the owner of the vehicle doing the striking, along with a statement of the circumstance. This would be only after an unsuccessful attempt to find the owner of the struck vehicle.

Q : I bought a car and it broke down on my way home the day I bought it. I went and got help four hours later but when we returned to where it had been, it was gone. I thought it had been stolen, but I was advised that my car had been towed. Can I make the police pay my impound fees since the law says that vehicles can’t be towed until 48 hours later?

POLICEMAN DAN

A : I would suggest that you read the law a little closer and all the way through, assuming that you mean Idaho Code 49-1804. The last sentence reads that a vehicle can be towed immediately if there are no license plates or the registration is expired.

The problem might have also been that you had not registered the vehicle and you as the owner could not be located. If the car was a traffic hazard, that could have been another reason for getting towed. I would suggest that if you or anybody out there in reading land runs into this situation, that you make a call to the local police informing us about what is going on so that an impound bill does not get added to the repair bill.

Officer down

Please put these officers, killed in the line of duty, and their families in your prayers. God bless these heroes.

- Trooper Marc Castellano, New Jersey State Police
- Officer Joshua Yazzie, U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs Division of Law Enforcement

Although not in the line of duty, I would like to pass on my condolences to the family of former Cassia Deputy and Heyburn Police Chief Michael (Mike) Green whose life was claimed too soon this past week.

Be safe, I’ll talk to you next week. Email your questions to policemandan@yahoo.com.

Registration open for animal therapy workshop

Intermountain Therapy Animals is offering an introductory workshop from 8:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. June 19, taught by Connie Sharkey, a licensed R.E.A.D. instructor, at her home. The cost of $95 includes all training materials and lunch.

The Reading Education Assistance Dogs program improves children’s reading and communication skills by employing a method of reading to a dog. The workshop is open to anyone interested in becoming a volunteer doing animal-assisted therapy or animal-assisted activities.

Information: Connie Sharkey, 733-2733 or CShark@hotmail.com.

Bible School begins at Zion Lutheran

Zion Lutheran Church will conduct Vacation Bible School Day Camp daily from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. June 21 to 25 at 2410 Miller Ave. in Burley.

Camp counselors from Lutheran Camp Perkins will lead the children in Scripture, songs, games and crafts. All children in kindergarten (5 years) through sixth grade are invited and will need to bring a sack lunch daily. Parents must register their children and provide health and immunization information at camp registration, set for 9 a.m. June 21. The camp is free.

A family barbeque will be held one evening during the week. Information: Gayle, 678-3671 or Julie, 878-1096.

Schwabedissen earns Eagle Scout

Derek Schwabedissen, 18, son of Douglas and Teddi Schwabedissen of Kimberly, was honored April 24 at his home for his Eagle Scout award.

He has completed 25 merit badges.

For his Eagle Scout project, Schwabedissen built three ticket booths for the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. He is part of Troop No. 288 sponsored by the Kimberly 5th Ward. The troop leader is Bob Erickson.

Schwabedissen is a graduate of Kimberly High School, valedictorian, member of National Honor Society for three years and a FFA member.

A ray of hope for patients with Behcet’s disease

DEAR DR. GOTT: This letter is in regards to your recent article concerning the woman with Behcet’s disease.

I was diagnosed with Behcet’s in 1990 and saw 27 doctors before being diagnosed and finding my way to remission. The woman in your article is suffering from one of the worst parts of Behcet’s: the inability to eat due to mouth and throat lesions. She is starving to death, and at this point, food is the medicine that she needs more than anything.

This, too, happened to me. I lost 80 pounds and was in bed for months, waiting to die. Finally, a doctor prescribed Costanzi’s solution, a compound used for those with mouth cancer, etc. I know you cannot prescribe medication, but this woman needs to know that Costanzi’s will allow her to swallow again. It kills the pain long enough to take those much-needed bites of food. All she needs to do is swish and swallow, wait a few moments, and then eat or drink.

Behcet’s is a lonely disease. I wish I could impart to this woman and her family that they must never lose hope, and that remission is an absolute possibility. The average remission for a person with Behcet’s is eight years. I have more than doubled that.

Very often, doctors over-prescribe. The overload of medications and the side effects are what keep a patient bedridden. In their quest to “cure” me, my doctors went so far as to try chemotherapy and did abdominal surgery, thinking I might have an undetected tumor. I did not.

Please know, I do appreciate those efforts and understand them. A great many doctors are not educated about Behcet’s. So people are left to reading medical journals and joining associations. They are left to focus on the symptoms they are either experiencing or are waiting to

Carey High School senior wins state math competition

The Idaho Society of Professional Land Surveyors named Brad Peck state champion of the 2010 Trig-Star competition held this past winter across Idaho.

A 2010 graduate of Carey High School, Peck outscored all other competitors from across the state. A total of 79 students from Camas County, Carey, Deary, Lewiston, Orofino and Timberline high schools competed this year for local prizes at their respective locations. The winner at each high school was entered into the state competition based on accuracy and time.

Peck scored a 90 percent with a time of just less than 39 minutes in the one-hour competition.

Peck was awarded a $500 scholarship from the Idaho Society of Professional Land Surveyors along with a scientific trig-function calculator from Monsen Engineering Supplies of Salt Lake City.

Peck will also compete later this summer in the second level of testing for the national competition with other state champions from across the U.S. for additional scholarships to be awarded by the National Society of Professional Land Surveyors.

Peck is the son of John and Heidi Peck of Carey. He will pursue a medical career after college.

Summit Dental Care shares scholarship winners

Summit Dental Care awarded a scholarship to two applicants on May 21 at the Canyon Ridge High School pep assembly.

Mihreta Kadric is the winner of the $1,000 scholarship. She wants to continue her education at the College of Southern Idaho to become a registered nurse. Kadric has served as a senator in the student council and was the president of Health Occupation Students of America (HOSA), a member of the BPA, and a volunteer at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center and a nursing home in Twin Falls. Along with her service to various organizations, she has maintained a respectable grade-point average and has been an outstanding student.

Edna Topic is the winner of the $500 scholarship. Her dream is to become a pediatrician and return to her birthplace, Bosnia, to open up a pediatric facility. She plans to attend CSI for the 2010-2011 terms to start her undergraduate work. Topic is a volunteer for Hospice Visions in Twin Falls and St. Luke's Magic Valley. She also serves HOSA as the secretary.

Summit Dental Care is a general dental practice in Twin Falls, with a motto of "Smiles that make a difference."

occur and are frightened to death. In any case, these are all my opinions, and I wouldn't want to unduly influence someone else.

My main concern in writing is the Costanzi's solution. It very well might help this poor woman. This compound, first formulated by a hematologist, might bring her a moment of sheer relief. I remember praying for that — 30 seconds of relief! To this day, although I am considered in remission, if my immune system gets knocked or if I get too tired, I might get a lesion, and Costanzi's saves the day (as does lidocaine gel for lesions elsewhere). This might happen once or twice a year, and who couldn't live with that? I know what the future holds but live day-to-day, a life full and busy. I wish the same for this woman and her family.

DEAR READER: I have reprinted your letter in its complete form because of the positive ray of hope in dealing with this complicated disorder.

Costanzi's is an oral remedy developed by Dr. John Costanzi of the University of Texas Medical Branch. Its purpose is to help debilitated patients with conditions such as oral ulcerations related to AIDS, chemotherapy and other conditions. As you pointed out in your attachment, it is comprised of Benadryl elixir, tetracycline liquid, Nystatin oral suspension and Synalar solution. Disclaimers emphatically stress that any healthcare professional who chooses to use this solution does so solely at his or her own risk and the risk of the patient.

Benadryl elixir (diphenhydramine) is an antihistamine and anticholinergic that works by blocking histamine action. Tetracycline is an antibiotic prescribed for fighting bacterial infections. Nystatin treats candidiasis of the mouth; and Synalar (a steroid) treats inflammation. As you can see, this is a whammy of a solution of infection fighters that Costanzi combined successfully to fight oral lesions. It certainly might be a possibility for a Behcet's patient, who should bring it to the attention of his or her diagnosing physician to determine whether it is worth a try. Because I am not an oncologist, nor have I had any experience in dealing with the solution, I cannot do any more than report your findings. I must add that your outlook is positive and promising — exactly what Behcet's sufferers need. Thank you for sharing your positive story.

CSI Refugee Center seeks volunteers and donations

The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center will hold summer school for refugee children in grades K-12 from 9 to 11:30 a.m. each Monday and Thursday from June 28 to Aug. 5. Classes will be held at Lighthouse Christian Fellowship, 960 Eastland Drive in Twin Falls. The center is looking for volunteers and materials to help with the annual project. There is also a volunteer training session from 1 to 2 p.m. June 24 at Lighthouse Christian Fellowship.

Volunteers can choose from several needs, including working under the direction of a lead teacher to assist several children during each session, providing snacks, donating supplies and providing leadership in special activities. To volunteer, contact Jill Lundgren at 944-4075 or jilllundgren@mac.com. To discuss an idea for the summer school, contact Judy Snider at rj\_snider@msn.com or at 410-2539. # Start registering for a teaching degree from CSI

Anyone interested in earning a teaching degree is encouraged to look into the four-year education programs available on the College of Southern Idaho campus. As a result of CSI's partnership with the Idaho State University College of Education, four teaching degrees are available that don't require students to travel to ISU in Pocatello.

The four-year degrees offered on the CSI campus are in Early Childhood Education, in which teachers provide quality care and education for children from birth through third grade; Special Education, which deals with students with mild to moderate disabilities; Elementary Education, for teachers in grades K-8; and Secondary Education-

Mathematics, which prepares teachers to teach math in grades 6-12.

ISU offers grants to undergraduate students who are admitted to the ISU Teacher Education Program. Recipients must agree to teach for at least four years within eight years of earning their teaching degree. Full-time students can receive $2,000 per semester up to a total of $16,000. The grant is not need-based. Eligible candidates must have a cumulative grade-point average of 3.25.

There is still time to register for the fall semester, which begins Aug. 23. Information: Hughes, 732-6549 or jhughes@csi.edu; or Vaage, 732-6449 or vaagchri@isu.edu.

Afeaki completes basic Navy training

Navy Airman Recruit Anthony C. Afeaki, son of Holly Afeaki of Burley and James P. Whitehead of West Jordan, Utah, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

The capstone event of boot camp is "Battle Stations." This exercise gives recruits the skills and confidence they need to succeed in the fleet. "Battle Stations" is designed to galvanize the basic warrior attributes of sacrifice, dedication, teamwork and endurance in each recruit through the practical application of basic Navy skills and the core values of honor, courage and commitment. Its distinctly Navy flavor was designed to take into account what it means to be a sailor.

Afeaki is a 2008 graduate of Burley High School.

Outgoing officers Sandy Goolsby, Linda Henderson, Lori Steadham, Patti Hurd, Mary Gilbert, Marsha McCool and Mary Ann Pappani were thanked by members for a productive and fun year.

Installation of officers took place. New officers are:

- President: Lori Steadham
- Vice president: Marilee King
- Treasurer: Dottie Roberts
- Recording: Mary Ann Pappani
- Corresponding secretary: Mary Gilbert
- Council representative: Marsha McCool

Alpha Phi's annual auction and dinner enabled the chapter to donate to a scholarship for a Jerome High School senior, Relay for Life, the Women's Crisis Center and St. Luke's MSTI Cancer Fund, along with several other charities in the Magic Valley.

Wilder High School seeking classmates

The Wilder High School Class of 1960 will hold its 50 year class reunion Aug. 7 to 8. The graduates would like to have any former class members be included in the festivities.

Classmates sought are Pat Dennis, Russell Loyd, Susan Sharp, Sue Neill and Patricia Stephens.

If anyone knows the whereabouts of these former classmates please contact Carol Leavitt (Mills) at 888-4751, 830-4723 or bubble888@msn.com; Anna Everland (Collins) at 466-5942 or 830-9045; or Rick Noe at (425) 391-1866 or lincolnmoe@gmail.com.

Register now for CSI's medical assistant program

Spaces are still left in the College of Southern Idaho's medical assistant program. The application deadline is Aug. 1, and the semester begins Aug. 23.

Medical assistants are allied health professionals who assist physicians with patient care. They perform clinical and administrative functions in physicians' offices, clinics and immediate care centers. Upon completion of the 10-month program, students may sit for the national certification exam to become a certified medical assistant. Medical assisting has been one of the growing health care fields in recent years and demand is expected to remain strong.

For more information, contact Kara Mahannah at 732-6728 or kmahannah@csi.edu. The full program brochure with application requirements can be found on the CSI website at www.csi.edu.

Immigration overhaul advocates seek piecemeal changes

By Laura Litvan
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON — Some groups advocating a broad rewrite of immigration law this year are now seeking a piecemeal approach, conceding a lack of support for a comprehensive measure.

Some of the groups intent on offering citizenship for millions of undocumented workers are pushing Congress to move one or two smaller bills this year. They say November's congressional elections lessen the chances of going further, even when many advocates say Arizona's enactment of its own tough immigration law shows the need for a new federal plan.

"I think it's difficult to get comprehensive immigration reform done before the elections," said Brent Wilkes, national executive director of the League of United Latin American Citizens. "In the meantime, we're supporting what you would call a down payment on comprehensive reform."

This sentiment represents a split among the Hispanic groups and labor unions that united behind demands that the Democrats who control Congress enact an immigration overhaul this year or risk paying a price at the polls. Opponents of relaxed rules for undocumented immigrants say lawmakers could pay another price for a sweeping overhaul.

While immigration is one of President Barack Obama's top priorities, he said in April that Congress may lack the "appetite" to deal with it this year.

The Senate in 2007 blocked lawmakers' last effort to enact the first major rewrite of immigration laws since 1986.

Now, Senate Democratic leaders are drafting a plan to bolster border security before providing a way for some of the 11 million undocumented immigrants now in the country to become citizens.

Sen. Dick Durbin of Illinois, the second-ranking

Democrat, said this week he doesn't want to enact piecemeal immigration laws. Durbin, sponsor of one of the limited bills, said he views such proposals as lures to bring Republicans on board for farther-reaching changes.

"I am loath to even suggest" a piecemeal plan, Durbin said. "I am for comprehensive immigration reform."

Other Democrats question whether any immigration plan, big or small, can be enacted after the long debates over revamping health care and Wall Street rules. No Senate Republicans support immediate changes in immigration law. Democrats control 59 Senate seats, one short of the number needed to force a vote, and Republicans hope to win some of those seats in November.

"It's almost impossible to get consensus on anything," said Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.

Tea party power

Group shaping GOP, fall faceoffs

By Charles Babington
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The tea party movement shows some growing pains, but it still wields remarkable powers to shape the Republican Party and set up a fall election with unconventional candidates and stark choices for voters.

In two high-profile primary elections Tuesday, establishment GOP candidates were stunned by come-from-behind winners backed by tea party activists and other conservatives who don't necessarily associate with that loose-knit group.

National Republican leaders are sifting through the results. Voter fervor on the right encourages them, but some fear their insurgent nominees might stray too far from the mainstream to win in November.

Rep. Nikki Haley, R-Lexington, shown giving her victory speech Tuesday after the South Carolina GOP gubernatorial primary, trailed a congressman, the lieutenant governor and attorney general for months. But a tea party surge and Sarah Palin's endorsement propelled her to an easy first-place finish.

In general, conservative activists are pushing the Republican Party to the right more than liberal activists are pushing the Democratic Party to the left, said Emory University political scientist Alan Abramowitz.

tives' quarrels in a highly competitive House district in Virginia spelled doom for five candidates who claimed tea party ties.

A new Washington Post-ABC News poll found growing discontent with the tea party movement, with half of Americans saying they have an unfavorable impression of it.

But some conservatives see it as sign of maturity, with people paying more attention and recognizing the tea party's clout.

In South Carolina, Barrett, a four-term congressman, and two other GOP gubernatorial hopefuls were better known than Haley. In the primary's closing days, "the big difference was the tea party, the grass roots, the awakening you see across the country gravitated towards Nikki Haley," said Sen. Jim DeMint, R-S.C., a tea party champion.

"That was pretty stunning"

The movement had another victory on Tuesday. In Maine, a tea party favorite, Waterville Mayor Paul LePage, won the GOP nomination for governor.

These events follow the stunning rejection of three-term Sen. Bob Bennett of Utah in a GOP convention, libertarian-conservative Rand Paul's victory over a Republican establishment favorite in Kentucky's Senate primary and Gov. Charlie Crist's forced withdrawal from Florida's GOP Senate primary.

Democratic voters have shown a similar but less virulent impatience with perceived compromisers. Republican-turned-Democratic Sen. Arlen Specter lost his renomination bid in Pennsylvania, but Lincoln narrowly survived in Arkansas.

In general, conservative activists are pushing the Republican Party to the right more than liberal activists are pushing the Democratic Party to the left, said Emory University political scientist Alan Abramowitz.

If either side pushes too far, however, it can end up with nominees unpalatable to centrist and unaffiliated voters who turn out in November but not in primaries.

"The base of the parties are looking for ideological purity. The middle is looking for effective leadership," said Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., who has angered some tea party activists by occasionally working with Democrats on issues such as climate change and immigration.

"The more you have to worry about being challenged by the base," he said, "the less likely you are to engage in solution politics that people are yearning for"

Democrats say that's precisely where the tea party movement is taking the GOP, and they are working overtime to portray Angle, Rand and others as fringe candidates.

The challenge for Republican officials in Nevada, Kentucky and elsewhere is to make peace with their non-establishment nominees and harness the right wing's fervor for the fall campaigns.

Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., who strongly backed Paul's opponent, Trey Grayson, in the Kentucky primary, is taking the first step. He will host a June 24 fundraiser for Paul in Washington, at $1,000 per person.

A local health worker wears a mask as he removes earth contaminated by lead from a family compound in the village of Dareta in Gusau, Nigeria, Thursday. Foreign health workers and local volunteers are working to clean up villages affected by lead poisoning, after 160 people died and hundreds more fell sick.

Environmental damage looms in Nigerian lead crisis

By Jon Gambrell
Associated Press writer

DARETA, Nigeria — As masked Nigerian environmental experts examined a communal well in a village where more than 60 children were killed by lead poisoning, barefoot kids streaked with dust sat on the contaminated ground, running their hands through the silt and sucking on their fingers.

Even as a foreign nonprofit begins training villagers to clean up after illegal gold mining caused the poisoning, children still roam among toxic dirt piles. Livestock freely drink from a pond that kills animals.

Much of the dirt here has lead levels more than 23 times the limit in U.S. standards but villagers don't seem to understand that the earth can kill them. It's just one of the issues facing those hoping to get things under control in Dareta and five other villages. A corrupt federal government and an encroaching rainy season also pose problems, as does the allure of quick profits from digging up gold from the surrounding countryside.

Gold wealth can be seen in the shining metal roofs covering some of mudwalled homes in Dareta, a village of 2,000 in Zamfara state bordering Niger on the edge of the Sahara Desert. Here, women used hammers to beat open rock ore to find gold.

But several months earlier, the ore coming to the village carried high concentrations of lead — a substance that can cause brain damage, blindness, deafness and death in young children. Soon children grew quiet, began convulsing and later died. Government officials say more than 160 people, most of them children, have died across the state in recent months from lead poisoning. Hundreds more are sick and face possible long-term disabilities.

It took time for news of the deaths to reach federal authorities from villages deep in the countryside, beyond the reach of paved roads and electricity. Now, the isolation of the villages makes it difficult for aid workers to reach them. Seasonal rains are making the rutted dirt roads virtually impassable.

Much of the dirt here has lead levels more than 23 times the limit in U.S. standards but villagers don't seem to understand that the earth can kill them.

Iran slams U.S., easy on China's OK on sanctions

SHANGHAI (AP) — President Obama made a "big mistake" in seeking to punish Iran over its nuclear program, Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad said Friday, slamming Washington but glossing over China's decision to back U.N. Security Council sanctions.

Ahmadinejad, visiting China's financial hub to tour the Shanghai World Expo, said the latest United Nations resolution, approved Wednesday, was "a worthless piece of paper" and would have little impact.

The effect, if any, he told reporters at a news conference at the Expo, would be to accelerate Iran's own development.

"The U.S. president thinks by accusing the nation of Iran he can undermine the role of our country in the world. I think President Obama has made a big mistake," Ahmadinejad said, accusing the U.S. of hypocrisy for leading the drive to censure his country.

Obama "came to power by the motto of change. He said he would abandon the bullying of the former administration. Now he is marching on the same path as Bush did," Ahmadinejad said.

Ahmadinejad's visit comes two days after host China yielded to international pressure to back a fourth round of nuclear sanctions targeting Iran's powerful Revolutionary Guard, ballistic missiles and nuclear-related investments in a bid to compel Tehran to cooperate with international inspectors.

The new sanctions seek to punish Iran for rejecting proposals to halt uranium enrichment and take its nuclear fuel from abroad. The West and its allies fear

Iran is developing nuclear weapons, though Iran says it is seeking nuclear power only for peaceful energy and medical research purposes.

As an ally of Iran and permanent member of the Security Council, China could have exercised its veto power to block the sanctions. China's Foreign Ministry said Thursday that its support should not block efforts to coax Iran back into negotiations.

But Ahmadinejad said such talks could happen only in a "friendly atmosphere."

"Having dialogue under a hostile atmosphere has no meaning," he said.

2 US troops, 11 Afghan civilians killed in south

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Three international service members and at least 11 civilians died in violence across southern Afghanistan on Friday, including one attack in which a suicide bomber wearing a burqa blew himself up in a bazaar.

Violence has spiked recently in Afghanistan's volatile south as Taliban insurgents step up attacks ahead of a planned major operation by NATO forces to secure the main city of Kandahar, the birthplace of the Taliban.

Gen. Stanley McChryst-

stal, the U.S. and NATO commander in Afghanistan, said in Brussels on Friday that insurgents have killed 59 Afghans during the past seven days, 54 of them in Kandahar. He told NATO ministers that insurgents also wounded 116, including 94 in Kandahar.

Separately, NATO announced Friday that it has opened an alternate supply route to Afghanistan via Russia and central Asia — a critical development that gives the alliance the ability to bypass the previous ambush-prone main routes through Pakistan.

Flash floods kill at least 16 at Ark. campground

By Jill Zeman Bleed
Associated Press writer

CADDO GAP, Ark. — Floodwaters that rose as swiftly as 8 feet an hour tore through a campground packed with vacationing families early Friday, carrying away tents and overturning RVs as campers slept. At least 16 people were killed, and dozens more missing and feared dead.

Heavy rains caused the normally quiet Caddo and Little Missouri rivers to climb out of their banks during the night. Around dawn, floodwaters barreled into the Albert Pike Recreation Area, a 54-unit campground in the Ouachita National Forest that was packed with vacationing families.

The raging torrent poured through the valley with such force that it peeled asphalt off roads and bark off trees. Cabins dotting the river banks were severely damaged. Mobile homes lay on their sides.

Two dozen people were hospitalized. Authorities rescued 60 others.

Marc and Stacy McNeil of Marshall, Texas, survived by pulling their pickup truck between two trees and standing in the bed in waist-deep water.

“It was just like a boat tied to a tree,” Marc McNeil said, describing how the truck bobbed up and down.

They were on their first night of camping with a group of seven, staying in tents. The rain kept falling, and the water kept rising throughout the night, at one point topping the tool box in the back of the truck.

“We huddled together, and prayed like we’d never prayed before,” Stacy McNeil said. They were able to walk to safety once the rain stopped.

After the water receded,

Mena, Ark., firefighters inspect a large truck that was swept from its parking place by flood waters at Albert Pike campground near Caddo Gap, Ark., Friday.

Joe McBay, right, and Lorraine Smith of Texarkana, Ark., sit with their dog near Caddo Gap, Ark., Friday. They were rescued when the nearby Albert Pike campground they were staying in was flooded.

anguished relatives pleaded with emergency workers for help finding more than 40 missing loved ones.

At one point, Gov. Mike

Beebe said the death had climbed to 20. But Beebe’s office later revised that figure to 16, saying he had relied on an erroneous figure after talking to an emergency worker at the scene.

Still, authorities agreed that the death toll could easily rise. Forecasters warned of the approaching danger during the night, but campers could easily have missed those advisories because the area is isolated.

“There’s not a lot of way to get warning to a place where there’s virtually no communication,” Beebe said. “Right now we’re just trying to find anybody that is still capable of being rescued.”

The governor said damage at the campground was comparable to that caused by a strong tornado. The force of the water carried one body 8 miles downstream.

While the governor spoke, rescuers in canoes and kayaks were on the Little Missouri looking for bodies and survivors who might still be stranded. Crews were initially delayed in their search because a rock slide blocked a road leading to the campsites.

“As that river goes down, you don’t know how many people are under it,” the governor said.

Authorities prepared for a long effort to find other corpses that may have been washed away.

“This is not a one- or two-day thing,” said Gary Fox, a retired emergency medical technician who was helping identify the dead and compile lists of those who were unaccounted for.

“This is going to be a week or two- or three-week recovery.”

The heavily wooded region offers a mix of campgrounds, hunting grounds and private homes. Wilderness buffs can stay at sites with modern facilities or hike and camp off the beaten path.

Air Force nuclear squadron in N.M. passes inspection

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Air Force squadron responsible for maintaining an estimated 2,000 nuclear weapons at a New Mexico base was re-certified Friday after passing a surprise inspection that resulted from the unit’s shortcomings last fall.

Kirtland Air Force Base officials said the 898th Munitions Squadron received a “ready” rating after a team from the Air Force Materiel Command at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio spent the week looking into the unit, which maintains an underground weapons cache.

“It would have been rather embarrassing and problematic if they hadn’t passed,” said Hans Kristensen, who monitors nuclear weapons issues at the Federation of American Scientists in Washington, D.C.

The squadron lost its certification Jan. 27 after failing a November inspection. The commander of the Nuclear Weapons Center at the base, Brig. Gen. Everett Thomas, requested the decertification, but the Air Force said the reliability and accountability of the nuclear stockpile was never affected.

Air Force officials blamed administrative problems, such as the handling of paperwork and documentation. The Air Force reassigned five noncommissioned officers in the fallout from the failed exam.

“You can have good guys out there handling the tools, but if management of the project doesn’t work, that can be a problem,” Kristensen said. “I don’t think this instance was so much a safety issue as much as it was a proficiency issue.”

Russia goes on arms spree

Bloomberg News

MOSCOW — Russia may buy $12 billion of arms from European and Israeli companies over the next five years as the world’s second-biggest arms exporter hunts for higher-quality weapons than domestic companies can provide, according to a Moscow research institute.

The two biggest deals — $1.8 billion each — may be signed within two years, according to a report compiled for Bloomberg News by the Center for Analysis of Strategies and Technologies. Russia plans to acquire four Mistral helicopter carrier ships from Paris-based DCNS, and is in talks with Iveco, a unit of Fiat, for as many as 3,000 light armored vehicles, the report shows.

“Russia has been an exception on military procurement, because no other country in the last 15 years tried to be 100 percent autonomous,” said center Director Ruslan Pukhov. “Now we have recognized that you can’t be competitive in all areas.”

While the military has always purchased some weapons from abroad, the search for overseas suppliers increased after the five-day war with Georgia in 2008 revealed weaknesses in Russian technology, Pukhov said.

19 slain at Mexico drug center; 20 die in another city

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — At least 30 gunmen burst into a drug rehabilitation center in a Mexican border state capital and opened fire, killing 19 men and wounding others, police said. Gunmen also killed 20 people in another drug-plagued northern city.

The killings marked one of the bloodiest weeks ever in Mexico and came just weeks after authorities discovered 55 bodies in an abandoned silver mine, presumably victims of the country’s drug violence.

The bullet-riddled bodies of 18 men and two women were found Friday in five different parts of Ciudad Madero, a city in the north-eastern state of Tamaulipas, where violence has surged this year amid a turf battle between the Gulf cartel and its former ally, the Zetas gang of hit men.

Police had no information on suspects.

It was the deadliest day in Tamaulipas drug violence since 18 gunmen died in clashes with soldiers in April.

Another round of killings occurred late Thursday at the Faith and Life center in Chihuahua city, about 210 miles (350 kilometers) south of Ciudad Juarez and the border with El Paso, Texas, state police spokesman Fidel Banuelos said.

A day earlier unidentified assailants killed one man and wounded another at a rehab center in Ciudad Juarez, which has become one of the world’s most deadly cities because of drug violence.

Bridges riding high on way to CNFR

Numerous area cowboys, cowgirls headed to 62nd annual college rodeo

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

Things worked out pretty good for J2 Bridges.

Following a successful freshman year at Mesalands Community College in Tucumcari, N.M., the Hazelton cowboy grabbed the top spot in the men's all-around standings in the Grand Canyon Region of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association. His teammate Fran Marchand finished a close second and the Mesalands men's team finished its most successful season in program history with the reserve region championship.

A Valley High School graduate, Bridges garnered the year-end championship in bareback riding and finished sixth in the national standings. He also earned a qualification to the College National Finals Rodeo in steer wrestling.

"I made the best decision I could have made going to Mesalands," said Bridges. "It was the right place at the right time for me. I've had to step it up and work hard but I had fun. It was a new experience with a good coach, C.J. Aragon. We got to practice every day with good stock and got a lot of help from the coaches and the kids on the team always pushing you. And we traveled more which will help me get ready for professional rodeo."

Bridges is one of many area cowboys and cowgirls headed for the biggest week of the college rodeo season as the 62nd annual CNFR kicks off Sunday at the Casper Events Center in Casper, Wyo., and continues through June 19. At stake are

Broncos take big step with move to MWC

Boise State completely dominated the Western Athletic Conference since joining in 2000, compiling a 73-4 record against league foes. BSU has yet to lose a WAC game at home.

BSU made a gargantuan leap Friday to the Mountain West Conference, a league built from the original eight teams that bolted the WAC in 1999 – Air Force, Brigham Young, Colorado State, UNLV, New Mexico, San Diego State, Utah and Wyoming – and Texas Christian (remember them?), which joined the MWC in 2005.

The WAC vacancy left by those eight teams opened a door for BSU 10 years ago.

By joining the MWC, BSU reciprocates the favor and opens a new door, possibly one containing an automatic bid to the elusive Bowl Championship Series. Sure, the Broncos have been to the BCS before. Twice, in fact. Utah has been there twice also, and TCU did it last season. But with their records and results combined, the MWC could be awarded automatic qualifying status to the BCS.

This move lifts BSU and its new conference (which is still scanning the FBS landscape and may take up to six more teams) to a new respectability. The Broncos have been bashed for their feeble strength of schedule in the WAC and in nonconference play. But in 2011, bottom feeders like Utah State and New Mexico State won't be on the schedule. BSU repeatedly saw its BCS rating plummet after blowout wins against such teams. The MWC may not be on par with the mega-conferences prowling in the weeds this summer, but there is a significant chance it will have many of the same rights when the BCS readjusts in two years.

Imagine the day when that vile term "mid-major" can't be slapped on Broncos' backs. Sure, BSU will still endure scorn from some. But enduring is what this program does best. It endures criticism, charges its batteries on gridirons of disrespect. The impending seismic shift in college football will reshape conference boundaries, incinerate some, forge others and eradicate rivalries older than BSU itself.

2010 TIMES-NEWS SOFTBALL ATHLETE OF THE YEAR

Nellie Makings led the Kimberly Bulldogs to a second straight Class 3A softball championship this year. It is the program's third title in four seasons. Makings said she is focused on winning another state title for 2011.

Kimberly pitcher leads way to another 3A title

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — It was more of the same in Kimberly, but that's not a bad thing.

The Bulldogs softball team recorded yet another championship season, both in the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference and Class 3A, led by ace pitcher Nellie Makings, the 2010 Times-News Softball Athlete of the Year.

"Things were pretty much like last year," she said.

Head coach Rich Bishop lauded his junior starter, calling her an unselfish player that gives the program all she's got.

"She's the kind of kid that every coach wants to have on the team," he said.

There was no radical change in this year's lineup since most players from the 2009 squad were underclassmen like Makings, who enters her senior year this fall. There was no adjusting her pitches or adding pitches — just that extra three feet from the rubber to the plate, and if anything, she said, that helped.

"I kept my same pitches, but maybe they worked better because of the extra distance," she said.

Her stats even looked similar. In 2009, she recorded a 0.44 ERA with 200 strikeouts. This season she had a 0.67 ERA with 193 strikeouts, earning a 24-1 record with 19 shutouts. She was equally impressive the plate with a .544 batting average and 44 RBIs. If anything was added this year, she said, it was more confidence. It certainly showed on the final day of the state tournament, when the Bulldogs had to play through the elimination bracket and win three games to claim the title after losing to Buhl the previous day. Not only that, they had to beat Fruitland twice, a team that scored a combined 50 runs through the first two days.

None of that apparently mattered as Makings and her teammates shut out the Grizzlies. Twice.

"As the day went on, I became even more relaxed," she said. "We were surprised by the shutouts, especially after knowing that Fruitland hit a lot."

Bishop said that shutouts weren't a stated goal heading into the final games.

"We talked about what to do,"

he said. "I didn't expect to shut them out twice. It was just a bonus."

Makings also set or tied multiple Class 3A state tournament records. She pitched seven games with six wins, which ties a record set by Bear Lake's Kara Kunz in 2000. Makings' 16 RBIs set a new record, while she also deserves credit, along with her teammates, for the record-setting four shutouts. The Bulldogs set the previous record of three in 2008. In addition, she still holds the records for strikeouts (68, 2008).

Despite setting the bar so high with a second consecutive state championship and the program's third in five years, there's still much to accomplish as she's not a complacent figure. What's left? "A third title," she said.

Currently between years as a middle school student, Hannah Newhouse is still a ways off from having that prized teenage possession: a driver's license. But the 13-year-old is already sharpening her skills behind the wheel at Magic Valley Speedway.

Marsh Falls throttles T.F. Hawks at Donnelley

Hawks, Kimberly to vie for spot in title tilt

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

From a Twin Falls Hawks perspective, the good part about Friday's game with Marsh Falls at the Donnelley Sports Wood Bat Tournament was it left them with a chance to play for the tournament championship.

The bad part, in head coach Aaron Bailey's view, was pretty much everything else.

Marsh Falls took advantage of two errors to plate three runs in the third inning to take the lead for good, then scored eight in the fifth as the Hawks simply fell apart. The net result was a 12-2, five inning loss.

"We started out great with two runs in the first, and then we just lost focus on what was going on," said Bailey. "They took advantage of our mistakes ... they ran on us, made us make plays and we failed to do it."

Sayer Conrad started for the Hawks and pitched well heading into the bottom of the third, but the Hawks allowed a run on an over-thrown stolen base attempt at third base and another on a bobble in the outfield. That proved to be too much to overcome as the wheels came flying off the Twin Falls wagon.

The Hawks finished pool play at 2-1 in the tournament, tied with Kimberly and the Twin Falls Cowboys. They are seeded second for today's final way and will play third-seeded Kimberly, which they beat 2-1 Thursday, at 3 p.m., for the right to face top seed Blackfoot for the title at 5:30.

"We're anticipating that they're going to want to get back at us, so it's going to depend on how we get after it," Bailey said. "It's a chance

Blackfoot scored 32 runs in three victories in pool play, yielding just seven.

Sam Bourgeois' pinch-hit sixth-inning double broke a scoreless tie and preserved Kimberly's chance to reach the tournament championship game with a 4-0 win over Meridian.

James Higginbothom's RBI triple in the seventh was the decisive blow, as Clay Mathews scattered five hits in the complete-game shutout.

"Clay threw strikes, and in this tournament that's what you have to do. To get a good pitching performance was what we needed," said Kimberly coach Tom Myers.

The Astros play the Twin Falls Hawks at 3 p.m., today for the right to play Blackfoot for the title.

COWBOYS SPLIT, SEEDED FOURTH

Blackfoot all but sealed passage into the title game with a 9-3 win over the Twin Falls Cowboys that ultimately sent the Cowboys to the fourth-fifth seeding game today.

"I thought Marcus (Donaldson) threw a good ballgame, and if we had cut down on our errors we might have cut down on runs to get into that 2-3 game," said Twin Falls coach Mark Schaal. "But we went 3-1 and we'll have that extra game, and we're learning as we go. We're getting better every game."

The Cowboys defeated the Boise Capitals 7-4 in the late game, a contest that didn't impact seeding purposes for the Cowboys. Trell Dowd's three-run triple keyed a six-run third inning that led them to the win.

Twin Falls plays Marsh Falls at 12:30 p.m., today.

AA Cowboys sweep at Lethbridge tourney

Times-News

Two more pitching gems translated into two more wins.

Eric Harr and Zayne Slotten both posted shutouts Friday as the Twin Falls Cowboys Class AA American Legion Baseball team grabbed a pair of wins over Saskatchewan foes at the Elks Tournament in Lethbridge, Alberta.

The Cowboys (9-1) knocked off Saskatoon 7-0 in the afternoon and defeated Moose Jaw 3-0 in the evening.

Harr scattered three hits against Saskatoon to lift Twin Falls' spirits after a disappointing loss to Lethbridge Thursday night, in which the only run of the game scored on sacrifice fly in the seventh inning.

"I was really impressed with Eric Harr, especially after losing an emotional one last night which they were pretty upset about losing the way they did," said Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir. "It took us a few innings to really get going (offensively). It all started with him on the mound."

Slotten fanned 10 Moose

Jaw batters, getting the best of College of Southern Idaho signee Paul Schaak. Twin Falls roughed him up for eight hits and could have scored more than the three runs if not for stranding several runners in scoring position.

The wins move Twin Falls to 3-1 on the tournament and gives the Cowboys a shot to make Sunday's championship game if they can knock off currently unbeaten Medicine Hat (Alberta) today at 5 p.m. Medicine Hat and Lethbridge play at noon today.

"We've been preaching that if we can throw strikes and make them put the ball in play, we've got a chance," Stadelmeir said. "So far we've had four great starts. We've gotta swing the bats better."

Liriano outshines Hudson in Twins win

MINNEAPOLIS — Francisco Liriano struck out a season-high 11 batters to edge Tim Hudson in a dazzling pitchers' duel as the Minnesota Twins beat the Atlanta Braves 2-1 on Friday night.

Liriano (6-3) allowed five hits in eight innings and Delmon Young's pinch-hit single in the seventh inning gave the Dominican lefty just enough run support. Jon Rauch struck out Jason Heyward, Chipper Jones and Troy Glaus in the ninth for his 16th save.

Hudson (6-2) went the distance for the Braves, allowing two runs on seven hits. Five of those came in the Twins' two-run seventh inning.

NIRA titles and nearly $250,000 in scholarships.

Just completing her freshman year at the University of Montana Western, 2009 Kimberly High School graduate Megan Crist of Twin Falls was the Big Sky Region break-away champion and finished fifth in the all-around standings.

Crist enjoyed the spirit and camaraderie of the college rodeo experience.

"This year was a lot of fun because everyone in the region was there to win, yet everyone cheered each other on making it a good atmosphere," said Crist. "We compete against each other, but we also help each other out. College rodeo was a new experience and quite a step up from high school. Where I was at the top level last year as a senior now I'm back at the bottom as a freshman. After qualifying for high school nationals for three years, the CNFR will be a whole new ballgame."

Several Idaho State University cowboys have earned spots at the CNFR. Freshman Montana Barlow of Eden qualified in bull riding, while Kyle VanBiezen of Filer will go tie down roping and freshman Cy Eames of Gooding will compete in calf roping and team roping with Rob Webb of Weber State.

Webb was the Rocky Mountain Region winner in calf roping and finished second in the nation in the event.

Finishing her senior year at Tarleton State University in Stephenville, Texas, Cassie Vierstra advanced to the CNFR with her third qualification in goat tying.

This is the 12th anniversary of the event's home in Casper. The CNFR features nine rodeo events: bareback riding, saddle bronc riding, bull riding, tie-down roping and steer wrestling for the men, and barrel racing, goat tying and breakaway roping for the women. In addition, team roping is held, which can feature male and female competitors. Along with individual titles, many of the competitors are hoping to be part of the men's or women's team that takes the team championship back to their college or university.

Each contestant has three preliminary rounds of competition prior to the final round on the evening of Saturday, June 19. Scores and times from the three preliminary rounds will be added up and the 12 contestants with the fastest total times or highest total scores will advance to the finals.

way," Newhouse said.

Hannah agreed.

"Let's just say we took the radio from him," she said of her dad, "because Brian would tell me what I needed to do sometimes then my dad will reiterate it six times, so we just kind of let him work on the truck and we let Brian do everything else."

That doesn't mean Hannah is always happy with Helm's directives.

"She was mad at me the first night because I wouldn't let her pass in the heat race," Helm said. "She said, 'This is crazy, we have to take more risks out here. I didn't come out here to follow people around.'"

Sounds like the daughter of a three-time Pro Trucks champion and 2007 Rocky Mountain Challenge Series champion.

"I have been around her racing so much that I trust the decisions she's going to make out on the track," he said. "She is in a full-size V-8 race car of course, and at her age it does make you a little nervous in one aspect. But I probably worry more about someone else doing something. That may sound crazy only being the age that she is but she has a lot of go-kart experience behind her."

As for the future, the youngest upper division driver at MVS is looking forward to racing "anything with a motor," adding that "it would be cool to give Danica Patrick a run for her money."

Rogers (steer wrestling and team roping).

Traci Bailey (goat tying), Paige Yore (goat tying), Kristyn Vasconcelles (breakaway roping) and Chelsi Schvanaveldt (breakaway roping) will represent the women's team.

"They are all talented with lots of experience," said CSI coach Steve Birnie. "The guys have all entered in professional rodeos and are all good at what they do."

By virtue of placing among the top three in each of the six individual men's events, CSI also has three other qualifiers that earned automatic bids to the CNFR. LeeRoy Winward (bull riding), Kade Rogge and Tyrel Jensen (team roping) can all compete for individual event titles.

"They are all positive and ready to go and do well," said Birnie. "They've all been around and the CNFR is just basically another rodeo. For Kip and LeeRoy, the CNFR will be the biggest rodeo they've been in."

Johnson and Hutchison finished one-two in the men's all-around standings in the Rocky Mountain Region. Johnson led the region in saddle bronc, while Hutchison was the leading bareback rider. Rogge and Jensen were the best team ropers, while Elliott led the region and national standings in bull riding. Bailey was second in the women's all-around standings in the region. CSI's team has good balance with individuals in the rough stock and timed events. With a little luck, the Golden Eagles could make some noise in Casper.

"These are all good kids that are at the top of their game," said Birnie. "They just need to go do it."

Court bars vital evidence in perjury case against Barry Bonds

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds won a big legal victory Friday that could put his long-delayed perjury trial back on track.

A divided three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Friday that prosecutors may not present positive urine samples and other vital evidence that the government says shows that the slugger knowingly used steroids.

The appeals court ruling upholds a lower court decision made in February 2009 barring federal prosecutors from showing the jury any evidence collected by Bonds' personal trainer Greg Anderson. Bonds' perjury trial, which was scheduled to start in March 2009, has been delayed pending the outcome of this appeal.

Bonds lead attorney Allen Ruby said the next step depends on what prosecutors do with the ruling, but that the evidence excluded was vital to the case against baseball's home-run king.

"Presumably, the government wouldn't have delayed this case a year and a half unless they thought it was very important," Ruby said.

Lead prosecutors Matt Parrella and Jeff Nedrow didn't return telephone calls. U.S. Department of Justice Spokesman Jack Gillund declined comment.

The government could ask the appeals court to reconsider its decision, ask an 11-judge panel of the court to rehear the case or petition the U.S. Supreme Court to take up the issue. Prosecutors could also accept the decision and go to trial without the evidence or drop the case entirely.

Last year Anderson told the trial court judge that he would rather go to jail on contempt of court charges than testify against Bonds. And the court says evidence tied directly to Anderson is inadmissible "hearsay" evidence unless the trainer testifies to the items' authenticity.

AP source: Hawks to hire Drew

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Hawks were poised to hire Larry Drew as their next head coach, a person familiar with the situation told The Associated Press Friday.

Drew was picked after a search that also included interviews with former Minnesota coach Dwane Casey, the person said, speaking on condition of anonymity because the team was still working out details of the contract. Casey was thought to have inside track because of his ties to Hawks general manager Rick Sund.

Instead, the Hawks went with the lead assistant under former coach Mike Woodson, who was let go last month after six seasons in Atlanta.

Woodson had guided the team to an improved record each of the last five seasons, as well as three straight playoff appearances after a nearly decade-long postseason drought. But the Hawks were blown out in the second round by the Orlando Magic, who won four straight by an average of 25.3 points for the most lopsided sweep in NBA history.

Busch captures Michigan pole

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Kurt Busch spent Thursday hanging out at Dodge headquarters in the Detroit suburbs, chatting up the employees and shaking hands.

As the star of the only major NASCAR Sprint Cup team still driving Dodges, there's a special kinship between Penske Racing and the manufacturer, which is still trying to find its way through the rubble left by the economic downturn.

"With the odds stacked up against you, you always feel like you're running an uphill battle," Busch said.

Funny, it doesn't seem that way these days for Busch.

The surging NASCAR veteran took the pole for Sunday's 400-mile race at Michigan International Speedway with an average speed of 189.984 mph, his second pole of the season. Jamie McMurray will start second and Jimmie Johnson third.

"I give all the credit to the crew and Steve

BSU move means hiatus for Idaho rivalry

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Reverberations from the conference realignment shakeup reached the Western Athletic Conference on Friday, and they were most definitely felt at the University of Idaho.

With Boise State scooting off to the Mountain West Conference — a move set to take place on July 1, 2011 — it appears the annual football clash between BSU and Idaho will go on hiatus until at least 2013.

“We are full through 2012,” Idaho athletic director Rob Spear wrote in an e-mail, referring to the Vandals’ nonconference slate. “It will have to be in the future.”

That means the teams’ Nov. 12 meeting in Moscow could be the last for a while.

Spear and Vandals football coach Robb Akey strongly expressed their desire for the in-state rivalry to continue. Akey, in fact, said it should be easier to schedule the Broncos with them not in the WAC.

“We’re both going to have conference schedules that we need to play,” Akey said via cell phone from Seattle. “We’re going to both need to play nonconference games, and that would be one less non-conference game that either of us would need to schedule because we count on the rivalry game every year.

“You’ve got a home game every other year, a road trip every other year — that’s one less game you need to worry about getting added on. In my opinion, that makes things a whole lot easier if you commit to it and count on it.” Boise State’s move ends a brief union of the state’s biggest rivals in the same conference. The Vandals joined the WAC in 2005, and since then the Broncos’ on-the-rise football team has finished first in the league three times and won two BCS games.

Last year, BSU went 14-0 and finished the season ranked fourth, overshadowing the sudden improvement of the long-struggling Vandals.

Spear said he “absolutely” hopes Idaho will continue playing BSU in football and all other sports once the Broncos are in the MWC. “I think it’s good for our state, it’s good for both institutions,” he said.

The rivalry aside, losing Boise

State is a major blow to the WAC. It’s survived substantial membership changes before, but BSU and its Bowl Championship Series bids brought national attention and major revenue to the conference.

“Well, it’s never good to lose any member,” Spear said. “When you lose an institution like Boise State which has had recent BCS success, it’s not a good thing for our league. But one thing about the Western Athletic Conference, it’s been resilient. They’ve been through this many times before and we will find teams possibly to join the WAC. And what’s happened when teams join the WAC is they become better.”

WAC commissioner Karl Benson said in a press release that the league’s Board of Directors will start evaluating replacements for Boise State right away. Reports have mentioned Montana, a member of the Big Sky Conference, as a possible candidate.

Akey said the Grizzlies make sense for the WAC geographically. Yet moving from the Football Championship Subdivision (formerly Division I-AA) to the NCAA’s highest division is “quite an expenditure,” the Idaho coach noted.

Asked about the perception of the WAC now that Boise State is leaving, Akey said, “To really give you an answer on that, we’ve got to see where we are when the dust settles.”

Then he joked: “If Boise is the only team that has left and we replace them with Notre Dame, I think we’re going to be perceived as being a pretty strong conference.”

Nebraska moves on; Big 12 aims to survive

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press writer

Nebraska bolted for the Big Ten, Boise State took a spot in the Mountain West and the Big 12 rallied for a last-ditch attempt to stave off its demise Friday, a tumultuous day that pointed toward a massive reconfiguration of college sports.

Nebraska regents voted to sever the Cornhuskers’ 100-year relationship with the Big 12 and its predecessors and join the Big Ten, which along with the Pac-10 is expanding, possibly to become a 16-team mega-conference.

Meanwhile, regents at Texas prepared for a meeting next Tuesday that figures to be the pivotal moment for the future of the Big 12.

“I don’t think anyone could read all the commentary around the country and not think the Big 12 hasn’t felt under siege the last couple of months,” commissioner Dan Beebe said.

Also on Friday, Colorado regents rubber-stamped the school’s decision to be the first to bail from the Big 12 for the Pac-10.

Seeing a college landscape that might no longer include his conference, Beebe met with the remaining 10 teams, making the case that they are more valuable in their current conference than as add-ons to a different one.

“If it’s about value and money, if that’s the issue, that shouldn’t be part of their equation,” Beebe said. “If it’s about other factors outside of our control, that’s not something I can do anything about.”

Many people think it is, in fact, all about the money, and the decision Texas makes next week will play a huge role in deciding where that money flows.

Top officials at Texas A&M have been meeting with counterparts at UT to jointly discuss the future, while Oklahoma State’s athletic director wrote in an e-mail to a Texas regent that his school simply hopes to end up wherever the Longhorns are “when the dust settles!” Those three, along with Texas Tech and Oklahoma, are considered candidates to turn the Pac-10 into a 16-team conference.

If that happens, it would leave Kansas, Kansas State, Iowa State, Missouri and Baylor scrambling for new homes.

Missouri had been viewed as a strong possibility for the Big Ten, but no official offer had been made as of Friday, leaving the school in limbo.

Kansas, meanwhile, may have the most interesting situation, and one that speaks to which sport really drives the business of college athletics — football. One of America’s basketball stalwarts with a much less successful football program, the Jayhawks have not been linked to either the Pac-10 or Big Ten plans.

The Boise State move from the Western Athletic to the Mountain West Conference gives one of the country’s best small schools — a participant in BCS games two of the last four seasons — an improved platform. Big 12 teams that don’t get snapped up could get offers from the Mountain West, which could expand further and turn out to be a winner — maybe even with an automatic BCS slot.

Lapray

Even if the MWC goes to 16 teams and gets an automatic berth to the BCS, it may still be scoffed at as a lesser conference. The only way to withstand that continual dismissal is through victory on the football field.

BSU has done about all it can in that regard. Head coach Chris Petersen is 49-4 since taking over. BSU won’t breeze through the MWC like it did the WAC. No team in history has ravaged a conference like BSU did the WAC with seven championships in 10 years.

The unsettling part of this, perhaps the only negative in the deal, is an end to rivalries forged in the WAC. Games against Fresno State, Nevada, Hawaii and Idaho will go by the way-side. Idaho hosts BSU Nov. 12, the 40th consecutive installment of Idaho’s big game. That may be the last time BSU travels to Moscow in a long time.

There is talk BSU has grown too big to play in the Kibbie Dome (16,000 seats). I disagree. I still think it behooves the Broncos to take that bus ride to keep the rivalry intact, to remember its roots. The game won’t happen in 2011. Neither team has an empty slot in non-conference play. Beyond that, who knows? It’d be nice to see these teams annually battle for the Governor’s Cup in late November, when their respective conference schedules are complete.

The potential problem? Games against Idaho hurt BSU’s past BCS ratings, so why would BSU wager its worth against Idaho?

Simple: because this is Idaho. There are only two FBS teams in the state. They should play, regardless of the game value tallied by computers.?

This is a new age in college football where in-state rivalries and border wars are less valuable than conference affiliations, television contracts, donor dollars and BCS bonuses. But what is lost in the transaction? How much does the purity of the game cost?

While 2011 issues a new era for BSU football, there is still one WAC season left. That’s eight games against eight jaded teams, all vying to shatter BSU’s vision of a national championship and a return to Glendale, Ariz.

One last WACKY ride for the Broncos.

WORLD CUP ROUNDUP South Africa, Mexico draw in opener

JOHANNESBURG — A joyous day for South Africa. A not quite perfect result.

South Africa gave up the lead on a goal by Mexico’s Rafael Marquez in the 79th minute and settled for a 1-1 draw Friday before 84,000 horn-blarng fans, whose euphoria over the start of the first World Cup on the continent was only slightly dimmed by the tie.

The match followed a day of celebration throughout all of Africa — though the excitement was tempered by the death of Nelson Mandela’s great-granddaughter in a car accident on the eve of the opener.

Beyond the personal heartbreak, the tragedy stole a moment of triumph from the 91-year-old anti-apartheid leader, who campaigned to bring the World Cup to his nation despite skepticism it could be pulled off. Mandela mourned with his family and opted not to attend the match or the colorful opening ceremony that preceded it.

Siphiwe Tshabalala had given the host nation a dream start, finishing off an excellent move in the 55th minute to set off wild celebrations at Soccer City. But the South Africans left defender Marquez open and he collected a left-wing cross to score the tying goal.

“We could easily have won the game,” coach Carlos Alberto Parreira said. “All in all at the end a draw is a fair result. We are still in the competition; this group is very tough.”

As pledged by coach Javier Aguirre, the Mexicans attacked in force from the kickoff and the hosts should have been a goal down within the first two minutes when goalkeeper Itumeleng Khune fumbled a low cross. Giovanni dos Santos had a chance for an easy shot, but South Africa captain Aaron Mokoena blocked it.

The aggressive Mexicans continued to create chances, but lacked accuracy and, when Carlos Vela put the ball in the net from a flicked-on corner, it was called offsides.

The South Africans they went ahead with a superb series of passes and an

Westwood, Willis share 1-stroke lead at St. Jude

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Lee Westwood had heard how challenging the TPC Southwind course is when the wind blows. Now the Englishman knows for himself how true all that talk really is.

Westwood scrambled to birdie his final three holes in grabbing a share of a one-stroke lead Friday with Garrett Willis after the second round of the St. Jude Classic with the winds gusting up to 22 mph. Westwood, making his Memphis debut this week as part of his tuneup for next week’s U.S. Open, said that made it tricky judging shots after seeing no wind Thursday.

“You’ve got to be on the fairway to attack the flags, and I just didn’t hit it close enough to the flag early on,” he said. “So it was a day of patience and battling, and I was rewarded at the end of the round with three birdies for doing that.”

Westwood had a one-stroke lead after his opening 65, and the world’s No. 3-ranked player dropped two strokes off the pace with two bogeys. He rolled in a 26-footer for birdie on No. 17, and then hit a 9-iron within 4 feet for a 68 that tied him with Willis at 9-under 131 total through 36 holes.

Willis, who spent last year on the Nationwide Tour, had five birdies in a bogey-free round to put himself in the final group for Saturday.

Charley Hoffman had the clubhouse lead early with a 65 and was at 132. Robert Karlsson (66) and Robert Garrigus (66) were tied for third at 133. Texas teenager Jordan Spieth, who became the sixth-youngest to make a PGA cut at the Byron Nelson last month, missed this cut at 1 over as he finished 2-over 142.

Hoffman took advantage of his morning tee time with little wind in becoming the first to reach 8 under. His sixth birdie, which he rolled in from 78 feet on the par-3 14th, helped him take the clubhouse lead.

HUR TAKES 1-SHOT LEAD AT LPGA

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — M.J. Hur had two chip-in birdies in a second consecutive 6-under 66 that gave her a one-shot lead over Amy Yang after the second round of the LPGA’s State Farm Classic on Friday.

Yang was at 11-under 133 after a 65 at Panther Creek Country Club. Cristie Kerr shot a 67 and was at 10 under with Inbee Park (67), Alena Sharp (68) and Na Yeon Choi (69).

Michelle Wie shot 69 for the second day in a row and was six shots back.

Hur played her round in a stiff wind during the morning. Yang played in the afternoon, when the wind began to gust, making scoring even more difficult. Yang was one of just three players to post a low number in the afternoon.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17 and have been dating
"Raymond" for two years.
The thing that concerns me is we aren't supposed to be attracted to other people, but I think he is. During arguments he has thrown other girls in my face. That really hurt, and I can't get over it.

I think he's attracted to other girls, but he doesn't want me to be attracted to other guys. Can you please give me some advice? I'd really like to know what's going on inside his head. Are his eyes for me only?

— TEEN IN MERCED, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR TEEN: Probably not. It's normal for men — and women, by the way — of all ages to be attracted to people other than their mate. However, those with good character resist the urge to act on it.

Now for some advice: You became involved with Raymond at a very young age, which has prevented both of you from having the normal kinds of dating experiences that are supposed to happen in high school. If he is restless, it would be better for both of you to date others, at least for a while. If you are meant to be together, your relationship will stand the test of exposure to others.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Russ," and I have been married 13 years.
During that time he has lost more than 15 jobs for various reasons — tardiness, not performing up to par, etc. I finally was able to convince him to get tested when I noticed he was having difficulty paying attention. He was diagnosed with ADHD, and they said he has an IQ of about 80.

I am working on my doctorate. I hold a job with other wives whose husbands have "great jobs," and I sometimes don't know what to say about Russ. He's a good person, very loving and tries his best, but honestly, I do get frustrated and have a little bit of "husband envy."

Russ is 50 and we have no children. How do I come to grips with the fact that he may never be a provider?

— CHALLENGED

IN NEW YORK

DEAR CHALLENGED:
Your marriage has lasted 13 years, so Russ must be doing something right. Not all men are great financial providers, but most manage to make up for it in other ways.

I'll bet the other wives never say a word about their husbands' shortcomings during those chat fests. One way to come to grips with the fact that Russ may "never be a provider" would be to refrain from making comparisons when your co-workers start bragging about their spouses.

DEAR ABBY: Every time I turn on the radio or television, I hear "Call 1-800-
THE-COMPANY." I know advertisers want listeners to remember them by their company name, and they think it's a clever reminder of their telephone number — but it has become silly.

I have poor eyesight, and it's not an easy task trying to decipher those 800 numbers. Why can't they mention the number along with their cute little jingle? It would make contacting them a heck of a lot easier for people like me who happen to be

— BLIND AS A BAT

DEAR BLIND AS A BAT:
You make a good point.
Foolish is the vendor who makes it difficult for prospective customers to make contact. It doesn't make sense to sacrifice the practical for the "cute," even though it's often tempting.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Today is Saturday, June 12, the 163rd day of 2010. There are 202 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 12, 1963, civil rights leader Medgar Evers, 37, was fatally shot in front of his home in Jackson, Miss. (In 1994, Byron De La Beckwith was convicted of murdering Evers and sentenced to life in prison; he died in 2001.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1665, England installed a municipal government in New York, formerly the Dutch settlement of New Amsterdam.

In 1776, Virginia's colonial legislature became the first to adopt a Bill of Rights.

In 1898, Philippine nationalists declared independence from Spain.

In 1920, the Republican national convention, meeting in Chicago, nominated Warren G. Harding for president on the tenth ballot. Calvin Coolidge was nominated for vice president.

In 1929, Holocaust diarist Anne Frank was born in Frankfurt, Germany.

In 1939, the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum was dedicated in Cooperstown, N.Y.

In 1967, the Supreme Court, in Loving v. Virginia, struck down state laws prohibiting interracial marriages.

In 1979, 26-year-old cyclist Bryan Allen flew the man-powered Gossamer Albatross across the English Channel.

In 1987, President Ronald Reagan, during a visit to the divided German city of Berlin, publicly challenged Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to "tear down this wall."

In 1994, Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were slashed to death outside her Los Angeles home. (O.J. Simpson was later acquitted of the killings in a criminal trial, but was eventually held liable in a civil action.)

Ten years ago: The Supreme Court, in a unanimous ruling, said patients cannot use a federal law to sue HMOs for giving doctors a financial incentive to cut treatment costs.

Five years ago: Vice President Dick Cheney, reacting to a growing chorus of calls to close the U.S. prison at Guantanamo Bay, told Fox News Channel there were no plans to do so. American-educated professor and women's rights activist Massouma al-Mubarak was named Kuwait's first female Cabinet minister. At the LPGA Championship, Annika Sorenstam closed with a 1-over 73 for a three-shot victory over Michelle Wie, who shot a 69 to finish second.

One year ago: U.S. television stations ended analog broadcasts in favor of digital transmission. Congress approved legislation banning "light" or candy-flavored cigarettes and requiring tobacco companies to make bigger warning labels and run fewer ads. The U.N. Security Council imposed sanctions on North Korea for its second nuclear test. The Pittsburgh Penguins defeated the Detroit Red Wings 2-1 to win the Stanley Cup in Game 7.
