Jerome Chief of Police Dan Hall peeks out of the department's back door at the parking lot he says is neither secure nor large enough to accommodate his police force. Hall hopes the city will move toward constructing a new facility that would fix issues the department has with its current building. 'It's been in the five-year plan for probably the past 15 years,' Hall said jokingly about the facility upgrades.

Jerome enters early discussions for new police office

JEROME — A faint smell of sewer wafted through the windowless building on Tuesday. Drifting down the hallway, it lingered in cramped offices and washed over those who entered the Jerome Police Department. “We just can’t seem to fix that smell. The whole atmosphere is bad for employee morale,” said Dan Hall, Jerome chief of police. “Obviously that isn’t the primary justification for needing a new building, but it is a factor.” The building that serves as the city’s current police department is thought by city officials to have been constructed in the 1920s. Never intended to provide office space for keepers of the law, the building was first used by police in 1988 after courthouse quarters became too small for their growing needs. While walking throughout the building on Tuesday, Hall pointed out a variety of “safety and security” issues. “Security is a topic of concern, along with safety problems,” Hall said. “It is not uncommon for government buildings to become targets of violence, and we don’t have the protective barriers needed.” Hall swept his hand across the view of the front office, noting the lack of a shatterproof glass barrier for clerks. A reception counter remains the only obstacle between an unauthorized person and front-desk personnel. Behind the reception desk is a small bathroom where records were housed until a few weeks

Jailed illegal immigrants are policy dilemma

By Ken Dilanian
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Mwenda Murithi, the Kenyan-born leader of a notorious Chicago street gang, was arrested 26 times after his student visa was revoked in 2003. Charged with at least four felonies, he served 30 days in the Cook County Jail for a 2007 drug violation. By law, he could have been deported immediately. But Chicago officials did not report him to immigration authorities because city and county ordinances prohibit them from doing so. Not long after he got out of jail, Murithi ordered a gang hit that resulted in the death of 13-year-old Schanna Gayden, struck by a stray bullet as she frolicked at a playground. Murithi, now serving 55 years, is just the sort of person U.S. immigration officials say they want to target under a program known as Secure Communities, which seeks to match the fingerprints of everyone booked into jail against immigration databases. But the program, launched by the Bush administration and continued under President Barack Obama, has become entangled in the suspicions and recriminations that characterize the debate over immigration policy. Critics of the program say that turning illegal immigrants over to federal authorities would undermine the efforts of local law enforcement to win cooperation from immigrant communities. And they worry about providing immigration authorities with the fingerprints of those arrested on petty charges. “I’ll be reporting minor offenders, mis-

Many major city police agencies forbid officers from inquiring into the immigration status of witnesses and suspects, a policy adopted by local officials to shield illegal immigrants from federal authorities. But the Secure Communities program has divided those cities and the politicians within them. Houston and Los Angeles are participating in the fingerprint sharing program despite such rules, and San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom opposes the efforts of the sheriff and some county supervisors to keep his city out of it. The federal program was designed to assuage such cities, Venturella said, because it doesn’t require their active

Area man finds career with Army

U.S. Army turns 235 today

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News Correspondent

Serving in the Army is much like farming or teaching, Magic Valley native Maj. Boyd Bingham said. “You soldier because you love it, not because of the paycheck,” he said. Bingham has served for almost 20 years and seen it from the eyes of an enlisted man trying to pay for college and as an officer with Gen. David Petraeus falling under his command. He is also one of more than half-a-million Army personnel celebrating its 235th birthday today. Bingham enlisted shortly after graduating from Valley High School in Hazleton in 1991 — his only goal was to pay for college. But after one of his sergeants encouraged him to participate in the Green to Gold program, which trains enlisted soldiers as commissioned officers, it became a career. He went on to receive a bachelor’s degree in education from Boise State University. Then, he earned a master’s in human

Millions invested in unproven high-tech in name of school reform

By Stephanie McCrummen
The Washington Post

Under enormous pressure to reform, the nation’s public schools are spending millions of dollars each year on gadgets from text-messaging devices to interactive whiteboards that technology companies promise can raise student performance. Driving the boom is a surge in federal funding for such products, the industry’s aggressive marketing and an idea axiomatic in the world of education reform: that to prepare students kids for the 21st century, schools must embrace the technologies that are the media of modern life. Increasingly, though, another view is emerging: that the money schools spend on instructional gizmos isn’t necessarily making things better, just different. Many academics question industry-backed studies linking improved test scores to their products. And some go further. They argue that the most ubiquitous device-of-the-future, the whiteboard — essentially a giant interactive computer screen that is usurping blackboards in classrooms across America — locks teachers into a 19th-century lecture style of instruction counter to the more collaborative small-group models that many reformers favor. “There is hardly any research that will show clearly that any of these machines will improve academic achievement,” said Larry Cuban, education professor emeritus at Stanford University. “But the value of novelty, that’s highly prized in American society, period. And one way schools can say they are ‘innovative’ is to pick up the latest device.” Federal dollars for educational technology, minuscule until the mid-1990s, grew to more than $800 million last year, and industry

MORNING BRIEFING

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Jerome Police Sgt. Patty Ward enters the department's attic via a makeshift ladder and cinder block stairs. The attic holds case records and computer equipment used for current and past police investigations.

ago. A narrow hallway leads to a break room that also serves as a place to file reports, process evidence and store things in old lockers taken from a high school gym.
The lack of space for the department's 21 full-time employees is highlighted by the three officers sharing a dorm-sized room as their office.
Sgt. Duane Rubink, detective supervisor and evidence custodian, shares his office with evidence storage. Crude wooden shelves hold brown bags of seized items, while thin cabinet doors are locked in front of drugs, money and guns.
"This room is lacking in ventilation. We replaced the heating vent but it still isn't up to basic safety standards," Rubink said. "Materials like blood, saliva and semen are often processed in the break room where the officers work, eat and meet."
Hall said officers are restricted in their fingerprinting process and the use of chemicals due to ventilation issues.
"To give credit to those who decided to move the department here — these issues weren't a concern then," he said. "We are getting the job done but it does limit us and our growth here. In the six years that I have been here, Jerome has grown by 2,000 people and we have to expand with the county."

The city has conducted a space needs study and is developing a strategy to educate citizens on the department's needs.
Jerome City Administrator Ben Marchant said the City Council, fire and police departments were all included in the study, which will be presented to the council in early July. Marchant said the cost of building a new police facility hasn't been determined, as city officials first consider public support for one.
"The vision would be to build these new facilities but the funding is the issue," Marchant said. "We need to find out first if there is support from the community. The need is there and we have to start budgeting major money to maintain the facilities or look at ways to build new ones."

resource management.
When it comes to managing people, the Army is not much different than corporate America, he said.
"Put the right people in the right place at the right time," Bingham said, quoting the human resources manager creed.
When Bingham was a captain, he was named commanding officer of the second largest company in the U.S. and stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. At the time, Petraeus was the commanding general and, while Petraeus was the senior officer, Bingham's status as company commander put him in charge.
"Even generals need someone to make sure they are doing everything right," he said.
After 18 months as company commander, Bingham was selected to serve one year in Iraq with the expeditionary sustainment command. That command handled all the fuel, ammunition, food and other contracting services needed for combat troops. As a liaison officer, Bingham was also involved with the planning efforts for troop drawdown in Iraq.

Bingham is now taking graduate Army courses designed to give midlevel officers the skills needed to project corporate Army 15 to 20 years into the future.
And that includes human resource managers who handle everything from recruitment to promotions, from awards processing to casualty notification.
"All of these are human resources pieces of the Army," he said.

Idaho trade mission finds Chinese investors

BEIJING (AP) — Twenty people in China seeking U.S. residency have committed to investing a total of $10 million and creating 200 jobs in Idaho through the federal EB-5 immigrant visa program, the Idaho Department of Commerce says.
The program offers foreigners permanent U.S. residency, or a green card, in exchange for investing $500,000 and creating jobs for at least 10 U.S. workers.
The Idaho Statesman reported Sunday that the announcement by the state Commerce Department capped a successful week of meetings in China between Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, Chinese officials, investors and Idaho companies.

"It met and exceeded our expectations," said Don Dietrich, Commerce Department director.
The newspaper reported the Idaho State Regional Center and its Chinese partner Westlink hope to eventually have 120 investors and $60 million in investments.
"Our company believes that the Idaho State Regional Center is the best, most innovative EB-5 program for Chinese investors," Sun Lu of Westlink said in a news release.
The Regional Center

plans to create jobs by investing the money in an existing gold mine near Placerville in the Boise Basin near Idaho City, the newspaper reported.
Otter spoke at several seminars, and on Friday met with Chinese Vice Minister of Commerce Yi Xiao Jhun, who said the country is leery of investing after some businesses turned out to be fraudulent or involved with organized crime.
Otter said that's why Idaho backs companies that can meet high standards, including Idaho Falls-based Melaleuca, a health and home product company.
After hearing Otter's pitch, Xiao Jhun turned to Melaleuca International Vice President Paul Haacke and said: "Congratulations. You've got the governor's personal credibility behind you."

Also during the trip, Otter touted the state's wheat to the Chinese, and suggested investing in silos adjacent to the Port of Lewiston.
Idaho Wheat Commission member Jerry Brown of Soda Springs said it might take more persuading, but at least Idaho is in the door.
"It's (Otter's) clout that gets us in the room with the decision-makers," Brown said.

Reform

analysts estimate that federal, state and local expenditures will total $16 billion next year. Money that once bought filmstrips and overhead projectors has spawned a thriving industry of companies that pitch their products as a way to help schools meet the federal priorities of the day. Glossy brochures that claimed whiteboards would help teachers reach Bush's No Child Left Behind goals, for instance, now say the devices will help schools win Race to the Top grants from the Obama administration.
Nancy Knowlton, the chief executive of SMART Technologies, said that schools are desperate to find ways to engage multitasking, tech-savvy kids, who often play video games before they can read. She says "strictly gathered research data," along with anecdotal evidence, show that her company's products work.

"(Students) are engaged when they're in class, they are motivated, they are attending school, they are behaving, and this is translating to student performance in the classroom," she said. "Kids want an energized, multimedia learning experience. ... When you ask them to shut off when they enter the classroom, that doesn't really work for them."
Fairfax County, Va., public schools began installing interactive whiteboards several years ago, one of which landed in Sam Gee's classroom at W.T. Woodson High School. On a recent morning, the popular history teacher dimmed the lights, and his students stared at the glowing, $3,000 screen.
As he lectured, Gee hyperlinked to an NBC news clip, clicked to an animated Russian flag, a list of Russian leaders and a short film on the Mongol invasions. Here and there, he starred items on the board using his finger. "Let's say this is Russia," he said at one point, drawing a little red circle. "Okay — who invaded Russia?"

One student was fiddling with an iPhone. Another slept. A few answered the question, but the relationship between their alertness and the bright screen before them was hardly clear. And as the lesson carried on, this irony became evident: Although the device allowed Gee to show films and images with relative ease, the whiteboard was also reinforcing an age-old teaching method — teacher speaks, students listen. Or, as 18-year-old Benjamin Marple put it: "I feel they are as useful as a chalkboard."
On its website, Smart Technologies cites more glowing testimony, quoting a former Fairfax high school teacher saying that after the whiteboards arrived, he saw "significant" increases in student performance "across all grade levels."

Such statements reflect the fact that many teachers love whiteboards — industry groups say one in three classrooms will have the device by 2011. They also reflect the relationships that ed-tech companies cultivate with school officials to market their products, underwriting major education conferences and sponsoring professional associations.
Last year, the Arizona attorney general criticized Tucson Unified School District officials for accepting rooms, meals, an open bar and free iPods at a resort conference paid for by Promethean, a major manufacturer of whiteboards, after the district spent $2.1 million on products. Mark Elliott, president of Promethean North America, said the company has since revised its ethics policy. But he and others said such events help the industry "keep its finger on the pulse" of what schools need.

cooperation. The fingerprints are shared automatically, and ICE officers arrest those they intend to deport.

This arrangement stands in contrast to a more active federal-local effort known as the 287(g) program, under which ICE signs agreements that allow local police to arrest and detain people under immigration laws. Few big cities participate in that program.

Still, out of political sensitivity, ICE currently is not matching fingerprints from counties, such as Cook County, that object to the Secure Communities program, he said.

Secure Communities is operating in 193 counties, and ICE has checked 2.2 million sets of fingerprints submitted by local law enforcement agencies, spokeswoman Randi Greenberg said. Through April 30, there were 216,000 hits against a database of people who previously had been fingerprinted by ICE, she said.

Of that number, 24,000 had been charged with or convicted of what ICE classifies as the most serious offenses, including rape, murder and kidnapping. The remainder involved lesser offenses, ranging from bribery and fraud to petty violations, such as gambling.

ICE deported 6,100 of those charged with or convicted of the most serious offenses, and 14,300 who were charged with or convicted of lesser offenses, she said. The goal is to expand the program nationwide by the end of 2012.

Despite Venturella's asser-

“Regardless of how or why a person got into police custody, whether it was based on racial profiling, whether it was a minor offense, whether the person is found not guilty, they are subject to deportation.”

— Joan Friedland, a senior attorney with the National Immigration Law Center

tion that ICE won't focus on people charged with lesser offenses, immigration rights activists aren't so sure.

“We think it's an ill-conceived, ill-functioning program,” said Joan Friedland, a senior attorney with the National Immigration Law Center.

“Regardless of how or why a person got into police custody, whether it was based on racial profiling, whether it was a minor offense, whether the person is found not guilty, they are subject to deportation.”

Friedland said she would be more comfortable with referrals based on convictions, not arrests.

In Cook County, authorities can do neither. While the policies in Los Angeles and other cities allow police to notify immigration authorities about felons they suspect are illegal immigrants, Cook County forbids that, said Steve Patterson, a spokesman for the Sheriff's Office.

Asked why, Chicago Alderman Roberto Maldonado argued that the law did allow the reporting of felons to immigration authorities. “We're not protecting criminals,” he said.

The text of the law, however, contains no such provision.

Asked about the case of the Kenyan gang leader, Maldonado noted that ICE, the immigration enforcement agency, routinely peruses county arrest reports.

“If ICE didn't have their eyes open, that is not our fault,” he said.

In Los Angeles, a case in 2008 re-energized a long-standing debate about the city's policy toward police questioning of immigrants.

Jamie Shaw II, a 17-year-old football star who had been recruited by Stanford and Rutgers universities, was gunned down in March 2008, allegedly by gang member Pedro Espinoza. Espinoza, a 19-year-old illegal immigrant, had been released from the Los Angeles County Jail a day before the shooting after serving time on a gun charge.

Although Espinoza had been in the custody of the sheriff, not the Los Angeles Police Department, activists unsuccessfully sought to use the case to overturn Special Order 40, the LAPD rule that limits the circumstances in which officers may inquire into a person's immigration status. An effort to repeal the policy by referendum failed last year when backers couldn't muster enough signatures to put the measure on the ballot.

Unlike in Chicago, nothing prohibits Los Angeles police officers from referring people they arrest to immigration authorities, said Jorge Villegas, commander of the LAPD operations office.

If police arrest a gang member who has already been deported, for example, officers notify ICE, Villegas said.

Otter mandates emission testing

BOISE (AP) — Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter has denied a last-ditch attempt by Canyon County officials to halt mandatory vehicle emissions testing.

In May, the Canyon County Commission sent Otter a letter asking for a reprieve from testing.

It was required by the 2008 Legislature to improve air quality, but has run afoul of residents and officials in this southwestern Idaho county who think it’s government intrusion and question its effectiveness.

The Idaho Statesman now reports that Otter, in China on a trade mission, told commissioners their county missed an opportunity to establish a testing program of its own, so the state Department of Environmental Quality had to step in.

Testing in Canyon County has been mandatory since June 1.

Commissioners earlier vowed not to submit county vehicles for testing, but later told county residents to comply with the new rules.

Solar panels power N. Idaho boat

By Alecia Warren
The Coeur d’Alene Press

HAYDEN LAKE — Knotting his boat to the dock after a jaunt on Hayden Lake on Tuesday, Richard Trudell was quick to offer hopping back aboard to check his instruments.

About one and a quarter mile covered, he reported, powered by a half kilowatt from the gleaming solar panels above the boat.

Not bad.

“We might have used the batteries for a minute. The sun went behind a cloud,” Trudell mused. “But they recharged immediately.”

No gas tank to refill.

No extension cord to plug in.

Little maintenance is required for the Post Falls man’s newest invention: A solar-and-electric powered pontoon boat.

Equipped with an 85-square-foot solar array, the aptly named Sundancer raises no worries about refueling, the hobby inventor assured.

“This is our third trip out. I’ve never had to plug it in for any reason,” Trudell said.

The physicist and mathematician is negotiating with Metalite Industries Inc. in Spokane about having the boat manufactured for sale, he said, but the 71-year-old didn’t design and build the craft for profit, or even for its lack of pollution.

“I first got the idea because I just wanted to have a quiet boat,” said Trudell, an enthusiast of all water toys for the past 50 years.

And indeed the roughly 20-by-8 foot vessel pulls onto the water with nothing more than a faint hum from the two motors propelling the boat.

“We don’t have to raise our voices when we converse,” he said with a smile.

Trudell started designing the boat in winter of 2009, he said, and started building early this year.

The design is simple. The 1,000-watt array is perched above the pontoon boat, replacing the typical cloth canopy. The array powers the boat’s two motors, and also charges the six batteries in hidden compartments, which act as reserve power if the sun disappears.

Coeur d’Alene Press/JEROME A. POLLOS

Richard Trudell cruises in his solar-powered pontoon boat Tuesday on Hayden Lake that he designed and built so he could enjoy quiet outings on the lake with his wife Nancy Morrison and friends.

Steered with a joystick, the boat can only go a maximum of 5.5 miles per hour — low speeds require minimal energy — and has a cruise range of 50 miles per day at 4 and a half miles per hour.

“It can run 24/7, if you only want to go 3 miles per hour,” he said.

On a day with no sun, the batteries can propel the craft up to 25 miles at a speed of 4 miles per hour, he said.

The boat produces almost no wake, he added.

“It’s just a leisure boat or a party boat. You don’t want to drag water skis behind it,” he said.

Metalite Industries built the boat itself, but Trudell, who worked 35 years doing engineering work for McDonnell Douglas Aircraft and now is a consultant for Boeing, added the solar array himself and did all the wiring.

His wife, Nancy Morrison, laughs when she recalls how Trudell spent all winter immersed in charts and equations.

“My friends said, ‘Aren’t you getting excited?’” Morrison remembered. “I said, ‘If it floats and steers, I’ll be happy. But for now it’s been a good hobby to keep him busy through the winter.’”

He has tinkered with inventions before, she said, including converting a car into an electric vehicle in the early ‘70s, which he rode to and from work during the oil crisis.

“Usually he finishes his projects,” Morrison said. “He does follow through, and he’s always a success. Not many boo boos.”

Chris Newman, owner and president of Metalite Industries, said the company is working with Trudell on a few redesigns for a product line.

“There’s some real uniqueness in what Dick has done in his design to give it better performance,” Newman said, praising the vessel’s shape and solar canopy. “It’s a good combo of technology. He put together a real good package.”

Newman added that there is national and international interest in personal water crafts that aren’t gas or diesel-powered.

“I’m not sure where it all ends or what the end results will be, but one can anticipate the direction for these products will continue to grow and expand,” he said.

Trudell spent about $20,000 constructing the boat, including $6,000 for the solar array.

He figured a manufactured boat would cost $30,000.

“The cost will never pencil out,” he said. “The primary advantage is I don’t have to worry about when to come to shore to recharge the batteries.”

Morrison can always trust Trudell to look at things from new perspectives, she said.

“It’s fun to be married to a man who thinks this way. There’s always something new,” she said. “I wonder what he’ll think of next?”

Celtics handle Kobe outburst for 3-2 Finals edge

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press writer

BOSTON — It's looking a lot like 2008 again, with Paul Pierce carrying the Boston Celtics to victory in the NBA finals and leading them to the brink of yet another title. Pierce scored 27 points — his best performance of this year's finals — and the Celtics withstood 38 points from Kobe Bryant to beat the Los Angeles Lakers 92-86 on Sunday night and take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series. Game 6 is Tuesday night in Los Angeles, and a victory then or in Game 7 in L.A. on Thursday would give the Celtics a record 18th NBA championship. "We've got to get one. We're too close to our goal," Pierce said. "We've got to get one." Pierce was the MVP of the '08 finals, when the new Big Three beat the Lakers to raise an NBA-record 17th banner to the rafters at Boston's TD Garden. Bryant was the finals MVP last year, when the Lakers beat the Orlando Magic to win their 15th championship.

Bryant outscored Pierce this time, but the Lakers' guard got little help from his teammates. And the stretch where he was most dominant was also the time when the Celtics pulled away. "He's the kind of guy (where) you ride the hot hand, that's for sure," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said. "We were waiting for him to do that. ... He went out there and found a rhythm." With the "Beat L.A.!" chant returning to the Garden, Kevin Garnett scored 18 points with 10 rebounds and Rajon Rondo had 18 points, eight assists and five rebounds to help Boston become the first team in the series to win two games in a row. If the Los Angeles can't do the same at home, the Celtics will improve to 10-2 against them in the finals dating back to a 4-0 sweep over the Minneapolis Lakers in 1959. "It's basically home-court, home-court," Jackson said. "That's the way it's supposed to be, isn't it?" Bryant did everything he could to keep the Lakers in it. He scored 23 straight

Lakers points between the 4:23 mark of the second quarter until there was 2:16 left in the third. But that's also the time when the Celtics built their biggest lead: Over that span, they expanded the lead from one point to 13. But Pierce was having his best game of the series, too. And he also had help. The Celtics' captain scored seven points in the last 3½ minutes of the second quarter and added nine more in the first 5 minutes of the third. STORM BEFORE CALM

LINDA BRITTSAN/For the Times-News
Super Sixes driver Dick Sola of Boise took the E-ticket ride down the backstretch Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway early in the main event race for the series. Fortunately the 76-year old driver was able to walk away under his own power after the incident.

Super-six drivers roughed up

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

The Rocky Mountain Challenge Series featured the big boys with the big toys, but it was the Super Six drivers who got roughed up Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway. Bob Bachman was able to pull away from the rest of the field, crossing the finish line at 7.652 seconds ahead of runner-up Kyle Waner. But just four laps into the main event race chaos erupted when Jasen Skyberg got loose on the back stretch; setting off a disastrous chain of events that would involve half the field of competitors. Seventy-six year old Dick Sola of Boise initially caught the worst of the spectacular wreck, sending him flying into a seemingly endless series of end-over-end flips before finally coming to a rest wheels-down near turn three. Several other drivers were caught up in the incident that sent at least three of them into the back stretch wall. The incident quickly brought out the red flag, stopping the race so damage control and clean-up could get under way. Sola was shaken after incident, but alert. In addition to Skyberg and Sola, drivers Bob Parks, Walt Calkins, Richard Portenier, Randy Sellars and Rex Reeve were also involved in the wreck. "In my opinion it was just strictly a racing deal," Bachman said of the early race encounter. "But it was the most horrifying thing I've ever seen on a race track. I didn't know if he was ever going to stop rolling. I was right behind him and his arms were playing all over the place — it was really, really violent. I guess I think we could have been a little more patient out there." Sola was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for further evaluation.

tion while the other drivers remained at the track with no series injuries. A caution-free race was in store for the 16 entrants of the Rocky Mountain Challenge Series main event, however. John Dillon, who started the race deep in the field was able to dial in on front-runner Brett Thompson and take the lead all the way to the checkered flag. Thompson led the way by a seemingly insurmountable lead in the early stages, but Dillon nipped past him for the win. Scott Luttmier secured control of the Maverik Intermountain Pro Trucks race at Lap 3, after the caution was brought out, and he held on for the win. Kris McKean was able to capitalize on Stacey Jensen's mistake and take the lead and the checkered flag in the Budweiser Super Stocks. While Doug Brownfield and Jason Quale battled for position, Brandon Greco was able to pull away from the skirmish between Doug Brownfield and Jason Quale to cross the finish line with room to spare for his second Quale's Electronics Junior Hornets win of the season.

Hamlin takes Michigan

By Will Graves
Associated Press writer

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Denny Hamlin continued his hot streak, dominating Sunday's NASCAR race at Michigan International Speedway to pick up his second straight victory and fifth of the season. Hamlin led 123 laps and controlled the second half of the race, easily pulling away from Kasey Kahne on a restart with under 20 laps remaining. Kahne held on for second, followed by pole-sitter Kurt Busch, Jeff Gordon and Tony Stewart. Four-time defending series champion Jimmie Johnson was sixth and Dale Earnhardt Jr. was seventh.

Hamlin needed to survive NASCAR's version of overtime last week at Pocono. There was no such drama Sunday at the two-mile oval. He led by as much as 10 seconds at one point then had little trouble dispatching Kahne following a late caution for debris. "All we do is win baby," said Hamlin shortly after crossing the finish line. And unlike his postrace celebration at Pocono, Hamlin kept his No. 11 Toyota in one piece. Hamlin put a damper on the victory party last week when he smacked the wall while doing a burnout. This time, his car rolled into Victory Lane in pristine condition.

TCU KO's Texas for trip to first CWS

Gerrish part of Frogs history

The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Aaron Schultz hit a two-run home run to help TCU beat Texas 4-1 Sunday, advancing to the College World Series for the first time in school history. The Horned Frogs scored (51-12) the first run of the game in the bottom of the fifth when Jason Coats hit an RBI single off Brandon Workman (12-2) to score Taylor Featherston. Texas closer Chance Ruffin gave up the last three runs on two homers. Schultz sent Ruffin's 2-2 slider over the left-field fence to put TCU up 3-0 in the seventh.

Kyle Winkler (12-2) gave up no runs and five hits with five strikeouts in 7 2-3 innings for the Horned Frogs. Former Filer pitcher Paul Gerrish, a 42nd-round selection of the Houston Astros, is a relief pitcher for TCU and is part of school history in his senior season. Gerrish won Game 2 of the super regional series last season against Texas at the same site. TCU lost the series in three games. Also qualifying for the College World Series on Sunday were Florida State, South Carolina and the winner of a late game between

Germany thrashes Australia in Group D opener

Germany forward Miroslav Klose celebrates his first-half goal during a 4-0 win over Australia in Group D play at the 2010 FIFA World Cup in Durban, South Africa.

DURBAN, South Africa — Germany scored two goals in each half and Tim Cahill was sent off as three-time champion Germany beat Australia 4-0 Sunday in Group D of the World Cup.

Lukas Podolski and Miroslav Klose scored in the first 30 minutes as Australia coach Pim Verbeek's defensive tactics backfired.

Thomas Mueller and Cacau also scored against an overwhelmed Australian defense in the second half after Cahill was red-carded in the 56th minute for a late tackle on Bastian Schweinsteiger.

The Germans' dominant win, played in front of 62,660 fans at the Moses Mabhida Stadium, came without injured captain Michael Ballack.

Germany had not lost an opening game in the World Cup since a 2-1 defeat to Algeria in 1982. It never looked like that string would be snapped on a warm evening in Durban.

Podolski started the rout by ending a slick passing move in the eighth minute and Klose headed in his 11th career World Cup goal in the 26th.

Klose missed two more good chances before Mueller made it 3-0 in the 68th minute, dragging the ball back to avoid Scott Chipperfield's lunge and firing a low shot in off the post.

Cacau rounded off the scoring in the 70th, just two minutes after coming on for Klose.

Slovenia past 10-man Algeria and into first place in Group C of the World Cup, two points ahead of the favored United States and England, who drew Saturday.

The Slovenian captain struck a long-range shot that Algeria goalkeeper Fawzi Chaouchi misjudged and allowed to bounce into the net off his arm in the 79th minute.

It was the first World Cup victory for Slovenia, the smallest nation in the tournament with a population of around 2 million. The Balkan country lost all three of its group matches in the 2002 tournament.

Algeria substitute Abdelkader Ghezzal was sent off in the 72nd, picking up a second yellow card for handling the ball inside the Slovenian penalty area.

GHANA 1, SERBIA 0

PRETORIA, South Africa — Asamoah Gyan scored on an 84th-minute penalty kick Sunday as Ghana earned the first win for an African team at the tournament.

Zdravko Kuzmanovic needlessly handled a cross in the area, then argued the call and yellow card he received. Gyan drove the penalty kick high to the left for the only goal at Loftus Versfeld stadium.

Previously, Ghana missed a series of headers. John Mensah and Gyan missed the target and Dede Ayew headed against the goalpost.

Serbia's only real threat near the end was a shot by Milos Krasic that was brilliantly saved by Richard Kingson.

Westwood takes St. Jude title in playoff

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Lee Westwood has played golf long enough to be philosophical despite all the times he's come up short when so very close to victory.

The Englishman who finished second at the Masters, lost a playoff in Dubai and finished tied for fourth at The Players Championship this year won the St. Jude Classic for his second career PGA Tour victory and first since 1998, beating Swede Robert Karlsson on the fourth hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday.

"You try to do the right thing all the time," Westwood said. "It doesn't always work for you. I've been in contention a lot, especially this year, and I suppose I got a break today with other people's misfortune but made the most of it and took a chance."

He became the first European to win the tour's third-longest event only after Robert Garrigus blew a three-stroke lead on the final hole of regulation with a triple bogey. He bogeyed the first playoff hole.

Garrigus said he thought he had a two-stroke lead on the 72nd hole instead of three and called it just stupidity.

"It's little things to win. I've got to learn that, and next time I'm in that position I'm going to do it," Garrigus said.

Westwood and Karlsson went par-par-bogey until they returned to No. 18 once again. Westwood stuck his approach 6 feet from the pin on No. 18. Karlsson left his birdie putt from 43 feet away to extend the playoff about a foot short.

Then Westwood, who went 17 straight holes between birdies, rolled in the 6-footer for his first PGA win since New Orleans to go with 20 career European Tour victories. He dropped his putter and celebrated with a fist bump.

Westwood started the final round trailing by three strokes, birdied three straight holes to grab the lead. But he bogeyed No. 17 after flying an 8-iron over the green. He was preparing to head off the course when told to stick around behind the 18th green.

He wound up taking home the $1.008 million winner's check after the longest sudden-death playoff at Memphis with a 68-270 total.

RAIN PUSHES STATE FARM CLASSIC FINAL ROUND TO TODAY

King Felix helps Mariners snap losing streak

SAN DIEGO- Felix Hernandez wasn't happy to see Seattle manager Don Wakamatsu come out of the dugout in the ninth inning to replace him.

Hernandez came within one out of a complete game and the Mariners held on for a 4-2 win over the San Diego Padres on Sunday, snapping a five-game losing streak.

One day after a players-only meeting that followed a 7-1 loss Saturday night, Hernandez's gem couldn't have come at a better time for struggling Seattle.

"We talked about having a tremendous performance by Felix and he went out and did," Wakamatsu said. "A gutsy performance."

Hernandez pitched a dominant game to stem the tide of eight losses in nine games for the Mariners. They had dropped five of six on this road trip, getting outscored 44-14.

Hernandez (4-5) held the Padres in check other than a two-run, inside-the-park homer by Tony Gwynn in the third inning. The right-hander gave up four hits, tied his season high with nine strikeouts and walked one while throwing a season-high 128 pitches.

NATIONALS 9, INDIANS 4

CLEVELAND — Stephen Strasburg learned life on the road isn't always smooth.

Washington's rookie sensation had trouble with Cleveland's mound while lasting 5 1-3 innings during his second major league start, leading the Nationals to a 9-4 victory over the Indians on Sunday.

PHILLIES 5, RED SOX 3

BOSTON — Cole Hamels cooled off Boston's surging lineup with seven strong innings, helping Philadelphia salvage the finale of the week-end series.

Hamels (6-5) allowed one run and five hits, struck out eight and walked two, stopping a personal three-game skid. Brad Lidge got two outs for his fourth save.

ANGELS 6, DODGERS 5

LOS ANGELES- Hideki Matsui had three hits and drove in two runs, Jered Weaver pitched into the seventh inning and the Angels swept an interleague Freeway Series at Dodger Stadium for the first time.

Weaver (6-3) allowed three runs and five hits in six-plus innings.

MARLINS 6, RAYS 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Chris Volstad pitched six solid innings to stop a personal six-game winless streak and Florida got two RBIs from rookie Mike Stanton in the victory.

The Rays dropped into a tie for first in the AL East with the New York Yankees. Tampa Bay had held sole possession of first for the past 51 days.

YANKEES 9, ASTROS 5

NEW YORK- Jorge Posada hit a grand slam for the second straight day, Robinson Cano connected for his 100th career homer and the Yankees completed a three-game sweep.

Catching for the first time since coming off the disabled list June 2, Posada connected for his ninth grand slam in the fifth after the Astros walked the bases loaded with two outs for the second inning in a row.

GIANTS 6, ATHLETICS 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Aubrey Huff hit a pair of two-run homers, Matt Cain extended his winning streak to four consecutive starts and the Giants finished off a three-game series sweep.

Cain (6-4) allowed one run and eight hits over seven innings.

and tied a career high with four hits to power Atlanta past Minnesota.

The Braves scored four runs in the first inning and built on the lead to support Kris Medlen. Atlanta took two of three in an interleague series between division leaders.

ROYALS 7, REDS 3

CINCINNATI- Zack Greinke struck out 12 in a five-hitter, ending a four-start skid and leading Kansas City over Cincinnati.

Greinke (2-8) allowed two solo homers to Joey Votto but was in control throughout his first victory since May 13 against Cleveland and his second complete game of the season.

METS 11, ORIOLES 4

BALTIMORE- David Wright hit two homers, Chris Carter and Jason Bay also connected, and New York beat Baltimore for a three-game sweep.

Bay entered in an 0-for-16 skid before going 4 for 4 with four runs scored. Wright and Alex Cora each had three of New York's season-high 18 hits.

TIGERS 4, PIRATES 3

DETROIT- Miguel Cabrera hit a go-ahead, three-run homer in the eighth inning to lift Detroit over skidding Pittsburgh.

Armando Galarraga gave up two runs in his first home start since his near-perfect game.

RANGERS 7, BREWERS 2

MILWAUKEE- Colby Lewis scattered three hits over eight innings and added a key two-out single with the bases loaded to lead Texas over Milwaukee.

Josh Hamilton homered for the AL West-leading Rangers, who won their fifth in six games.

ROCKIES 10, BLUE JAYS 3

DENVER- Jeff Francis pitched seven innings to earn his first home win in two years and Colorado beat Toronto to complete a three-game sweep.

Ryan Spilborghs homered twice and Carlos Gonzalez also connected for the Rockies, who got their second series sweep of the season. Gonzalez drove in three runs and Clint Barmes and Chris Iannetta had two RBIs apiece.

CUBS 1, WHITE SOX 0

CHICAGO- Ted Lilly took a no-hitter into the ninth inning before pinch-hitter Juan Pierre led off with a single.

The Cubs wound up holding on for the win at a revved-up Wrigley Field.

NATIONAL LEAGUE DIAMONDBACKS 7, CARDINALS 5

PHOENIX- Chris Young rescued Arizona's much-maligned bullpen with his second homer of the game, a two-run shot in the bottom of the ninth inning that gave the Diamondbacks the win.

Trailing by three going into the ninth, the Cardinals rallied and tied it on a wild pitch by winner Esmerling Vasquez (1-2).

Cowboys fall to Medicine Hat in Lethbridge tourney finals

Times-News

Timely hitting was the story Sunday, as the Twin Falls Cowboys Class AA American Legion Baseball team lost 7-1 to Medicine Hat, Alberta, in the Elks Tournament championship game in Lethbridge, Alberta.

The Cowboys (9-3) trailed 3-0 in the top of the third inning and had the bases loaded with no outs, according to Cowboys coach Tim Stadelmeir, but could only plate one run in the inning.

Medicine Hat, on the other hand, was able to get quality hits against Twin Falls starter Michael Williams.

"That's a good club. We had an opportunity to keep it close, but we couldn't get any timely hitting," Stadelmeir said. "Michael made some great pitches; it was one of those games where you just have to tip your cap. They're a good hitting club."

Medicine Hat went 6-0 on the weekend, while Twin Falls finished 3-3 and took second place.

Stadelmeir said the tough wood-bat tournament would pay dividends in the long run.

"It was a good learning experience for us," he said. "The whole point of this was that we're just preparing ourselves for this down the road."

Twin Falls hosts Pocatello on Tuesday for a double-header.

It’s Blaine and simple: Get on with it

In the always-fervent politics of Blaine County, arguments for and against change dance like angels on the head of a pin.

So six months into the seemingly mundane task of mentoring possible new appointees to govern a new airport and helping the county in fact-finding and studies, the Blaine County Airport Advisory Committee is stuck on dead center.

The subtext, of course, is that lots of folks in the northern end of the Wood River Valley don’t want a new and expanded Friedman Memorial Airport moved to a site in the Bellevue Triangle, south of the Timmerman Hills, or into Camas County.

We – and most Blaine County residents – get that. But there is not the remotest chance that the Federal Aviation Administration will sign off on building an airport at the present site or anywhere nearby. It’s just too dangerous.

Count on former Blaine County Commissioner Len Harlig, consistently one of the more sensible voices on public policy in the Wood River Valley, to articulate the truth.

“We’ve been at this for six months” and “don’t seem to have moved the dial by a hair,” Harlig told a meeting of the airport advisory board last week. “We’ve barely been able to draft bylaws and elect officers. This is not a credible body.”

“I’m not going to keep pushing water up the hill with a spoon,” Harlig told the Idaho Mountain Express of Ketchum. He wondered if there’s another alternative.

As do we.

Sometimes Blaine County reminds us of former U.S. Secretary of State George Schultz’s description of Washington, D.C.

“Nothing ever gets settled in this town, a seething debating society in which the debate never stops, in which people never give up, including me,” Schultz said after he left office in 1989.

The committee’s original agenda was to develop recommendations on the form of a new airport authority for a replacement field, contribute to development of a financial plan for building and operating a new airport and conduct a survey about general aviation attitudes. Those aren’t – or shouldn’t be – labors of Hercules.

So what’s it going to be? Is the Blaine County community going to flog this issue until the cost of replacing Friedman doubles? Or until an accident causes the commercial carriers that serve the present airport to reconsider their options?

Debate over public issues is always lively in Blaine County, but it at some point something has to get settled.

Bailouts banned? Tell me another one

It won’t work, you know. The Senate’s plan for dealing with Too-Big-To-Fail institutions may satisfy President Obama, but it won’t prevent what we have learned to call “taxpayer bailouts.”

The House approach makes sense. “Give us $150 billion upfront,” it would have told the 15 or 20 companies that are TBTF, “and we will use that money to take you down in an orderly fashion when you hit skid row.”

Tom Blackburn

“Oh, dear,” said the big banks’ big lobbyists, “we can’t afford it. Giving up that kind of money would kill us.”

“OK,” said the sympathetic Senate. “If you can’t afford it now, we’ll be happy to wait and collect it when you are broke.”

That’s the approach it appears we will be stuck with.

The Senate was nudged toward incoherence by the minority leader, Sen. Mitchell McConnell, R-Ky. He declared that making big banks pay for their own funeral amounts to a “taxpayer bailout.” His noise saved the banks $150 billion but left taxpayers on the hook.

Sen. McConnell says that if there’s a plan for failures, there will be failures. Right. If there is no plan, there also will be failures.

Sophisticates note that “too big” is not a precise definition of the problem. Size isn’t the issue. The issue is how many other things will collapse if the institution doesn’t pay its bills. So the term should be something like “too interconnected.” The game is dominoes, not weight lifting.

OK. But too-interconnected entities were bailed out under the title of TBTF. Whatever you call them, they exist and are run by people who are perfectly capable of messing them up again. No government will let them fail. President Bush produced the bank bailout not because he wanted to but because he had to.

The Senate bill would make it illegal to spend tax money to save a TBTF. That means that there will be angry rhetoric before Congress repeals the law and spends the money. If the alternative is the end of world trade, most of your family out of a job, your savings wiped out and riots in the streets, what would you do?

The Senate bill foresees the government winding down a big bank the way the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. closes any other bank. But the FDIC does it with premiums banks pay on insured deposits. That money is running out now, of course. In a TBTF failure, much of the money the bank owes is not insured. That’s what the House wants to cover in advance.

Take two ugly entities on the current TBTF list. Among people who need one-factor explanations, the mortgage backers Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac are the Mrs. O’Leary’s cow of the Great Recession. The cow burned down Chicago, Fannie and Freddie burned down the housing market, and the peanuts on the bar cause drunkenness.

But Fannie and Freddie, now officially wards of the state, are bad enough. They hold most of the mortgages that are larger than the value of the homes. They bought billions of dollars in toxic mortgages on orders of the Treasury to get them off the books of shaky banks. When the private sector messed up, it dumped its garbage where it always does, on the government.

Think of Fannie and Freddie as dumpsters. They have $145 billion in bailout money. Maybe they should not have been allowed to get in that deep, but how do you unwind them now? As they are, dumpster-divers will salvage something over time.

Without Fannie and Freddie, the housing market would take longer to recover. Dump them, and wild beasts will lurk in the tall grass of the abandoned lawns of suburban America.

That last is an exaggeration, but only a small one. It can be compared to the kind of hyperbolic predictions Congress hears when capitalists beg for government to get them and their friends out of a world-as-we-know-it-threatening crisis. What politician, ready or not, ever will turn a cold shoulder to that?

T.F. speaker will discuss illegal immigration

Please attend a speech by John F. McManus, president of the pro-constitutional, pro-American John Birch Society on Wednesday, June 16, at 7 p.m. at the Canyon Ridge High School auditorium in Twin Falls on College Road West off of Washington Street North.

His important speech is titled “Stealing the American Dream: How Illegal Immigration affects you.” If you are concerned about the effects of illegal alien immigration and amnesty on your job, taxes, health care, border security, voter fraud and the national debt, then please plan to attend.

Mr. McManus will discuss how illegal immigration affects you and your family in all these ways and will present constitutional solutions that are fair to immigrants and present citizens. Also learn what you can do to help solve the illegal immigration problem. Tickets are available at Red’s Trading Post and at the door.

We must get out of the anti-American pro-totalitarian United Nations by passing HR 1146. The U.N. was founded by communists and Council on Foreign Relations members whose goal is a socialist world government. The U.N. seeks total power to control the environment and every aspect of our lives. The U.N. Charter outlines the path to world tyranny. The U.N. is building its own army to enforce its will. The U.N. ignores communist atrocities but targets non-communist nations and leaders.

The U.N. is a moral cesspool filled with perverts and fat cats. America supplies the money which the U.N. uses to finance tyrants and enemies of the U.S. U.N. diplomats have immunity from searches. They could bring in deadly biological agents in their unsearched luggage. It is a nest of spies! The U.N. is a war organization, not a peace organization!

We must get out of the U.N. before we totally lose our independence and freedom.

A different kind of termites

Termites are destroying my world. Not the ordinary type; these are a strain from centuries past. They attack not only wood but brick, steel, flesh and bone. They attack anything that cannot be assimilated.

The problem is they are so virulent we are not allowed to name them. We devise euphemisms to describe them, such as “red shirts” or we describe their atrocities as “man-caused disasters.”

Our attorney general will not even utter their name. (If I were to call them by name, this letter would not be printed.)

The enemies among us who deride our constitutional republic seem unaware that they will suffer the same fate as we. When the termites have finished their work, the sawdust and rubble that is left will only provide mud huts for the survivors.

LOUISIANA BP begins more aggressive response to spill as Obama readies another visit to Gulf

NEW ORLEANS — BP mounted a more aggressive response to the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico on Sunday as it deployed undersea sensors to better measure the ferocious flow of crude while drawing up new plans to meet a government demand that it speed up the containment effort ahead of President Barack Obama's visit to the coast.

The financial ramifications of the disaster are growing by the day as the White House and states put pressure on BP to set aside billions of dollars to pay spill-related claims in a move that could quickly drain the company's cash reserves and hasten its path toward possible bankruptcy.

BP was also trying to meet a Sunday deadline to respond to a letter from the Coast Guard demanding that it intensify the efforts to stop the spill. One of the actions BP took Sunday was to use robotic submarines to position sensors inside the well to gauge how much oil is spilling.

Scientists haven't been able to pin down just how much oil is leaking into the Gulf, although the high-end estimates indicated the spill could exceed 100 million gallons. The government has stressed that the larger estimates were still preliminary and considered a worst-case scenario.

The Obama administration's point man on the oil spill, Adm. Thad Allen, on Sunday said government officials think the best figures are from a middle-of-the-road estimate, which would put the spill at around 66 million gallons of oil. That is about six times the size of the Exxon Valdez spill.

KYRGYZSTAN 75,000 Uzbeks flee chaos in Kyrgyzstan in worst ethnic violence in 20 years

OSH — Kyrgyz mobs burned Uzbek homes and cafes and slaughtered Uzbek villagers Sunday in the worst ethnic rioting this Central Asian nation has seen in 20 years. More than 75,000 Uzbeks fled across the border into Uzbekistan, trying to dodge bullets in a frantic dash to safety.

Triumphant crowds of Kyrgyz men took control of Osh, the second-largest city in Kyrgyzstan, on Sunday as the few Uzbeks still left barricaded themselves in their neighborhoods. Fires set by rioters raged across the city of 250,000, and food was scarce after widespread looting. Police or military troops were nowhere to be seen.

The rioting that began Thursday night appeared aimed at undermining Kyrgyzstan's interim government, which came to power after former President Kurmanbek Bakiyev was ousted in a bloody uprising in April and fled the country. Uzbeks have backed the interim government, while many Kyrgyz in the south have support the toppled president.

The United States, Russia, and the U.N. chief all expressed alarm about the scale of the violence and discussed how to help the refugees. Russia sent in an extra battalion to protect its air base in the northern part of the country.

Most of the Uzbek refugees at the border were elderly people, women and children, with the men having remained behind to defend their property. Many arrived with gunshot wounds, the Uzbekistan Emergencies Ministry said, according to Russian media.

IRAQ Gunmen storm Iraq's central bank, battle security forces after bombings; 15 killed

BAGHDAD — Gunmen wearing military uniforms stormed Iraq's central bank Sunday in an apparent robbery attempt, battling security forces in a three-hour standoff after bombs exploded nearby in a brazen daylight attack that left at least 15 people dead.

The assault on Iraq's top financial institution stoked fears that insurgents are taking advantage of political deadlock after inconclusive March 7 national elections to try to derail security gains.

The 325-member parliament was due to convene Monday, but analysts have said agreement on a new government could still be months away.

Iraqi military spokesman Maj. Gen. Qassim al-Moussawi blamed the attack on al-Qaida in Iraq but said no money had been stolen from the bank, which holds gold deposits as well as U.S. and Iraqi currency.

The violence began with the bombings — which sent plumes of smoke over the city skyline — although there were conflicting reports about the number and nature of the blasts. Some Iraqi police and hospital officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they weren't authorized to release the information, put the casualty toll as high as 26 dead and more than 60 wounded.

ARKANSAS State police: Death toll from Ark. flash floods reaches 19; 1 person still missing

LANGLEY — State police say the death toll from a flash flood that tore through an Arkansas campground has reached 19 and searchers are looking for just one more missing person.

State Police Capt. Mike Fletcher says one more body was recovered at midday Sunday.

He says searchers are looking for one more person who went missing after the pre-dawn Friday flood swept through the Albert Pike Recreation Area.

Fletcher did not disclose the latest victim's identity. Sixteen of the 19 people confirmed killed in the flood have been publicly identified.

Official: Utah oil spill has not reached Great Salt Lake

By Brock Vergakis
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Emergency workers believe they have stopped a 21,000-gallon oil leak from reaching the environmentally sensitive Great Salt Lake, one of the West's most important inland water bodies for migratory birds that use it as a place to rest, eat and breed.

But the spill has taken a toll on wildlife at area creeks and ponds, coating about 300 birds with oil and possibly threatening an endangered fish.

The leak began Friday night when an underground Chevron Corp. pipeline in the mountains near the University of Utah broke. The breach sent oil into a creek that flows through neighborhoods, into a popular Salt Lake City park, and ultimately into the Jordan River, which flows into the Great Salt Lake.

The 10-inch pipeline was shut off Saturday morning, when workers at a nearby Veterans Administration building smelled oil and called the Salt Lake City fire department, which notified Chevron. The pipe carries crude oil from western Colorado to a refinery near the Salt Lake City International Airport.

Jason Olsen, spokesman for the Salt Lake City Joint Information Center, said Sunday emergency workers believe they have contained the spill to the Jordan River.

But the spill still took its toll on birds at Red Butte Creek and at a large pond at Liberty Park, where visitors often feed birds from the shore and on rented paddle boats. About 300 birds were coated in oil and cleaned at Utah's Hogle Zoo. Fewer than 10 have died, said Salt Lake City spokeswoman Lisa Harrison-Smith.

Obama plans speech, victims fund for Gulf

By Erica Werner
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama demanded that BP set up a compensation fund for the oil-tainted Gulf Coast and prepared for his first Oval Office address to the nation as he tried to wrest control of the environmental disaster threatening to overwhelm his administration.

White House officials announced the steps Sunday as Obama prepared for his fourth visit to the tortured Gulf. They came at a pivotal moment in the catastrophe, with the enormity of the oil spill in sharper focus from more accurate measurements and no end in sight until relief wells are completed in August.

That means the nation must settle in for a long, hot summer of oil and gas spewing relentlessly from the ocean floor, driving residents to anger and despair, ruining precious marshlands, and poisoning pelicans, turtles and other wildlife.

Obama

For Obama, it is imperative that he try to help guide the country through the anguishing weeks ahead. After returning Tuesday from a trip to Alabama, Mississippi and Florida he will deliver a prime-time address from the Oval Office. It will be the first time he has used that most presidential of settings as a backdrop, underscoring the urgency of the moment.

"We're at a kind of inflection point in this saga, because we now know that, what essentially what we can do and what we can't do, in terms of collecting oil, and what lies ahead in the next few months," senior adviser David Axelrod said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "And he wants to lay out the steps that we're going to take from here to get through this, through this crisis."

Obama will use the speech to address the challenges associated with the oil spill, from cleanup to damages claims, and will reiterate the need for Congress to pass comprehensive energy legislation stalled in the Senate.

Brides face issues of fitness, self-esteem

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

First, the excitement of the engagement ring. Then, a bride's mind turns to planning. Caterers, photographers and, of course, how she'll look in the dress.

Even the most trim, toned, self-confident woman has something about her body she doesn't like, and with the deadline of the wedding looming, there is both pressure and opportunity to make changes for most brides-to-be.

We talked to experts on bridal fitness and appearance, and here is their best advice:

Q: I want to lose some weight before my wedding. Is this normal, or are most brides in shape when they get engaged?

A: You're very, very normal, said Christa Hannold, owner of Christa's Dress Shoppe in Twin Falls. Three out of four brides tell her consultants that they want to lose pounds before the wedding. However, she strongly suggests that a bride order her gown in the size she is when she chooses the dress, rather than assuming she will get slimmer in time.

"It's a four-month process to order the dress, and many of them say, 'I'm going to lose the weight,' and then they don't," Hannold said, noting that only a quarter of those who say they want to slim down actually do. "It's probably one of the hardest times in your life to lose weight, because there's so much going on and you're so nervous."

Hannold also noted that 95 percent of dresses have to be altered anyway, and it's easier to take in an inch from a larger dress than to let out a too-small one.

Q: But I'm determined. What can I do to buck that trend?

A: Hannold said she has seen the best success with women who opt for a structured program, whether it's Jenny Craig or a personal trainer.

Nikki Kober, owner and trainer at BodyIQ in Twin Falls, has worked with many brides to help them get ready for their big day.

"What's hard for a lot of ladies is to get the motivation, and being a bride is a great motivation. They have that deadline," she said. "They want everything to be perfect."

Kober said it's important to have professional advice as you try to slim down and tone up, because it is easy to overdo it.

"Don't work out too hard or too long or do the exercises wrong, because you can injure yourself," Kober said. "You need to keep eating, have a wellness coach or a trainer help you with meal plans for your body type."

Q: Oh no! I was going to work out regularly, but I got so busy, and now there are just three months before the wedding!

A: There still is time to tone up, Kober said. "The (brides) that are on a shorter time schedule, they get either more workout sessions during a week or a more intensified workout when they're in here," she said.

At Marod Medical Spa in Twin Falls, spa manager Trish Larson said her counselors often work with women to develop fitness plans well before their weddings, but many of their clients come in during the last few months before the event.

"If time is more of the essence, we'll do the SmartLipo body sculpting," Larson said. "Most of them come in and want that, because it doesn't cost as much as you would think it would, and it's instant gratification. We're the microwave generation, we want it now!"

Of course, surgical procedures are fairly extreme, and not for everyone, and Larson said all the spa's clients receive counseling to help them see themselves for the features they like and are proud of.

"Everybody has body dysmorphic disorder to some degree," she said. "If somebody's really down on themselves I can take away their tummy (bulge) and they still won't like who they are."

Q: But I'm happy the size I am, I just want to look my best. What are my options?

A: Hannold said some brides she sells to have this attitude, "which is refreshing and nice. I think they're more beautiful when they accept who they are," she said. "Some in the 14-16 (size range), even in the 20s, are more confident than those who are littler."

She has dresses that are designed to create long, lean lines on any size bride, and she suggests strategic use of ruching to move the eye across the body in the most flattering way.

Hannold also advised ignoring the tag inside the dress, because wedding dress designers size things differently than designers of street clothes.

At Marod, the liposuction can quickly eliminate small bulges in areas like the tummy and thighs.

And Kober noted that, depending on what style dress is chosen, she can recommend exercises to firm up the body parts that are most revealed.

"If you have a dress that doesn't have sleeves, you want toned arms," she said.

Of course, the easiest way to be pleased with how you look is to accept yourself the way you are, at least for today. After all, when you're walking down the aisle, none of the guests will be criticizing your thighs — they'll just be excited to see how happy you are.

Atrial fibrillation is easy to find, but evidence on how best to treat it isn't

After drugs failed to correct her rapid, irregular heartbeat, Judy Currier had parts of her heart cauterized. But the problem soon came back.

By Julie Appleby
Special to The Washington Post

Judy Currier remembers waking up the morning after doctors spent hours cauterizing tissue inside her heart. They were trying to correct a rapid, irregular heartbeat that had left her exhausted, frequently out of breath and at a higher risk of stroke.

"I was amazed at how quiet my heart was," says Currier, a 69-year-old resident of Springfield, Va. But the benefits of the treatment, called catheter ablation, didn't last. Soon her heartbeat became erratic again, forcing her to ask: What should I do?

That's the dilemma facing more than 2.2 million Americans who have atrial fibrillation, the most common heart arrhythmia and one of the most vexing to control. While treatments ranging from medication to surgery are proliferating — and often are marketed aggressively by hospitals — no one can say with certainty which will work best for any individual patient. And each treatment has side effects, some of them serious.

"We don't have great evidence to help patients and doctors make a fundamental choice among the treatment options, which differ dramatically," says Steven Pearson, president of the Institute for Clinical and Economic Review, which evaluates medical treatments and is affiliated with Harvard Medical School.

That makes A-fib, as it's commonly called, a top candidate for comparative effectiveness research, say Pearson and other experts. Congress set aside $1.1 billion last year for this type of research, which involves

How to eat with good form

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

How you eat — not just what you eat — can help control weight and keep your digestive tract healthier, dietitians say:

Sit down. Don't eat while walking around, working, driving or watching television. Distractions make you more likely to overeat.

Take small bites. One good measure: aim for half-inch squares when cutting chewier foods such as meat or fish.

Drink between bites. Don't use liquids to "wash down" big chunks of food. Not only is it a choking hazard, you put more strain on your digestive system. Take small sips of water after each bite to slow your pace.

Chew well. Your food should feel like mush before you swallow. That gives digestive enzymes in your saliva a chance to begin breaking down food before it reaches your stomach.

"Chew" semi-liquid foods, too. Don't just gulp down yogurt, soup and other items with similar consistency. Again, some time in your mouth will ease the burden on your lower digestive system.

Put down your silverware. After each mouthful of food, lay your fork or spoon on your plate. Swallow completely before your next bite.

Don't copy your companions. The pace at which fellow diners are eating doesn't matter. Worry about your own plate.

Don't talk with your mouth full. You'll swallow more air, which can lead to burping and digestive discomfort.

Wait before getting seconds. Your brain generally needs 15 to 20 minutes to receive a signal from your stomach that you are full. If you eat until you're stuffed, you've eaten too much.

Eat when you're hungry. You don't have to follow the typical 7 a.m., noon and 6 p.m. meal schedule. You may do better with more frequent but smaller meals.

head-to-head testing of drugs and treatments to determine which work best, and for which types of patients. Advocates say such research will improve health care and help get costs under control.

More information about A-fib therapies, for instance, would allow doctors to customize treatment for specific patients, says Harold Sox, a prominent internist who headed an Institute of Medicine committee advising Congress on how to spend the comparative effectiveness research funds. The committee issued a report recommending that atrial fibrillation should be a top candidate for such funding when it is given out by the government in the coming months.

A-fib occurs when erratic electrical signals cause the heart to go haywire. Age is a major risk factor; others include high blood pressure, heart failure, valve problems and open-heart surgery.

But sometimes there is no evident cause. The heart quivers, or fibrillates, rapidly, for a few minutes, days or even weeks. During A-fib, the heart doesn't pump as effectively, which allows some blood to pool in the heart, potentially forming stroke-causing clots. In some patients, the condition comes and goes; in others, it's constant.

A-fib is different from a heart attack: Some people never even know they're experiencing the condition. It is not in and of itself life-threatening, although prolonged A-fib increases the risk of stroke, and the symptoms, such as palpitations and shortness of breath, can be frightening.

There are several main ways of treating the condition:

- Prescription drugs. Most cases of A-fib are initially treated with medications, to control either the heart's rate or rhythm. Douglas Packer, a professor of medicine at the Mayo Clinic and the lead researcher for a recently launched multinational study of A-fib treatments, says that the drugs work in 30 to 60 percent of patients, with success rates falling after the first year.
- Catheter ablation. In this procedure, specialists thread guide wires through blood vessels into the heart. Then they insert devices that use intense cold or heat generated by radio waves to cauterize, or ablate, tissue thought to be responsible

Research may determine which A-fib treatments are best

Under the new health law, a nonprofit entity called the Patient Centered Outcomes Research Institute will be established to carry out a comparative effectiveness research agenda, starting in 2012. The law bars the government from using findings as the sole basis for decisions about what Medicare, the federal health program for the elderly and disabled, will cover.

A-fib treatments are among the top priorities for comparative effectiveness research not only because the medical problem is so common and has so many different treatments, but also because the number of those afflicted is expected to grow, fueled by an aging population, an increased prevalence of heart disease and improved diagnosis.

And it's costly: Medicare spends more than $15.7 billion annually to treat new A-fib patients, who are hospitalized more often than those who don't have the condition, according to a 2008 study in the Journal of Medical Economics. Other research from 2006 estimated that A-fib results in 350,000 hospitalizations, 276,000 emergency room visits and 5 million doctor visits a year.

So far, studies have generally considered how well the treatments do at controlling A-fib over the course of about a year. But comparative effectiveness research would look at: Which treatments do better in the long run to control the condition? Which are better at preventing strokes or death? Which is most cost-effective? Should all patients try drug therapy first, as is common now, or should some go straight to catheter ablation or surgery?

Getting answers will be difficult, requiring multiple clinical trials over many years, says Sean Tunis, director of the Baltimore-based Center for Medical Technology Policy, a nonprofit that helps design comparative effectiveness studies. A recently launched six-year, multinational study comparing drug treatment of A-fib to catheter ablation is expected to answer some of those questions, but final results won't be in until 2015.

for the electrical impulses causing the erratic heartbeat. Catheter ablation corrects A-fib in 60 to 80 percent of patients in the short run, Packer says.

The technique is most successful among patients whose rapid heartbeat comes and goes, a condition known as paroxysmal A-fib, says Sung Lee, director of cardiac pacing and electrophysiology at Washington Adventist Hospital in Takoma Park, Md. He says that about 30 to 50 percent of all patients will need a second procedure.

- Surgery. Some surgeries involve opening the chest and often stopping the heart. One of these is the Cox maze procedure, introduced in 1987. Surgeons make cuts and stitches in a maze-like pattern on the outside of the heart to block areas thought to be causing the malfunctioning electrical heart signals. Another type of surgery, minimally invasive, requires three or four small incisions and the use of special laparoscopic tools.

About 80 to 90 percent of patients get relief from A-fib after an open-chest procedure, Packer says; the percentage is somewhat smaller for those undergoing the minimally invasive technique. True Hills says costs can range from $40,000 to $70,000 for minimally invasive surgery, and up to $100,000 for the open-chest kind.

- Cardioversion. This is a technique that uses drugs or an electric shock with a defibrillator to jolt the heart back into normal rhythm. Most patients return to a normal rhythm, but many slip back into A-fib weeks, months or years later. Cost is about $5,000 to $7,000.

"The bottom line," Packer says, is that "it can be confusing for specific patients to know what should be done."

Today is Monday, June 14, the 165th day of 2010. There are 200 days left in the year. This is Flag Day.

Today's Highlight:
On June 14, 1777, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia adopted the Stars and Stripes as the national flag.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1775, the Continental Army, forerunner of the United States Army, was created.

In 1801, former American Revolutionary War General and notorious turncoat Benedict Arnold died in London.

In 1846, a group of U.S. settlers in Sonoma proclaimed the Republic of California.

In 1919, John Alcock and Arthur Whitten Brown embarked on the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic Ocean. (Flying a Vickers Vimy biplane bomber, they took off from St. Johns, Newfoundland, Canada and arrived 16 1/2 hours later in Clifden, Ireland.)

In 1940, German troops entered Paris during World War II; the same day, the Nazis began transporting prisoners to the Auschwitz (OWSH'-vitz) concentration camp in German-occupied Poland.

In 1943, the Supreme Court, in West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette, ruled that children in public schools could not be forced to salute the flag of the United States.

In 1954, the words "under God" were added to the Pledge of Allegiance.

In 1967, the space probe Mariner 5 was launched from Cape Kennedy on a flight that took it past Venus.

In 1985, the 17-day hijack ordeal of TWA Flight 847 began as a pair of Lebanese Shiite Muslim extremists seized the jetliner shortly after takeoff from Athens, Greece.

In 1990, the Supreme Court upheld, 6-3, police checkpoints that examine drivers for signs of intoxication.

Ten years ago: In the biggest step toward peace since the end of fighting in the Korean War, the leaders of North and South Korea signed an agreement pledging to work for reconciliation and eventual reunification. The Southern Baptist Convention declared that women should no longer serve as pastors.

Five years ago: U.S. Army deserter Charles Jenkins, who'd crossed into North Korea in 1965, arrived in the United States for his first visit in 40 years. Michelle Wie became the first female player to qualify for an adult male U.S. Golf Association championship, tying for first place in a 36-hole U.S. Amateur Public Links sectional qualifying tournament.

One year ago: The Los Angeles Lakers won their 15th championship, beating the Orlando Magic 99-86 in Game 5 of the NBA finals. Anna Nordqvist shot a 4-under par 68 to become the second straight rookie to win the LPGA Championship. Bob Bogle, 75, lead guitarist and co-founder of the rock band The Ventures, died in Vancouver, Washington.

DEAR ABBY: A close friend in our social group, "Reed," has been in and out of rehab for alcohol problems. We have all been there to offer moral support anytime we can — including him in golf outings, barbecues, etc. The problem is he has started lecturing us about "the dangers of drinking." We are social drinkers and professional people. Some of us don't drink; others are "on call" and can't. So it isn't like we're lying around getting drunk as skunks. Reed has no family here. We love him dearly and don't want to exclude him. But he's starting to make people feel uncomfortable. How should we handle this?

— NO LECTURES PLEASE, IN FLORIDA

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR NO LECTURES, PLEASE: Reed is preaching with the fervor of the newly converted. Whoever is closest to him in your social group should tell him privately that his comments are making some of you uncomfortable and to please stop it — or start spending more time with other teetotalers.

DEAR ABBY: I am a census worker and knock on doors to interview people who have not sent in their census forms. I am concerned that so many people are reluctant to participate in the census. Please help us get the word out. A real census worker will never ask to come inside your house or any questions about personal finance or your employment. If you are not sure who is at your door, ask for the person's picture identification, such as a driver's license. By now, everyone should have received a census form in the mail. The deadline was very important. Once the deadline passed, the addresses of all the non-respondents were turned over to us: the non-response follow-up team. In order to prevent someone from being counted twice, once the non-response follow-up list was compiled, the rest of the forms out there were no longer collected or counted. If you mailed in your census questionnaire, but a census worker still shows up at your door, it is because your questionnaire was not received in time. So please bear with your enumerator because he or she has to interview you again. Please take a few minutes to make your voice heard because your participation is important.

— YOUR CENSUS WORKER

DEAR CENSUS WORKER: I'm glad to help spread the word.

Readers, taking the time to participate in the census is not only important, but it's also to your advantage. The census is how your representation in Congress is determined. And in addition, the census is used to determine how federal funds will be used to build hospitals, schools and highways in your community. And by the way, the census is mandated by the U.S. Constitution and has been conducted every 10 years since 1790!

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I went out to dinner with another couple. After finishing our meal, I offered our friend, "Elaine," a piece of gum. I handed her the box so she could remove the piece herself. When she returned the box she said she had taken two pieces. I told her it wasn't right as I had offered her only one piece, which I believe is the correct serving. Elaine claimed I had no right to dictate her serving size. Was she right for "chewing me out" over this?

— MORE THAN I CAN SWALLOW, WAYNE, N.J.

DEAR MORE: After reading your letter, I took a random poll among my staff. Of those who had chewing gum with them, two-thirds had packages that indicated a serving is two pieces, while the rest read that a serving is only one piece. I don't think Elaine was wrong to defend herself after you attacked her, and before criticizing, you should have asked yourself if it was worth possibly gumming up a friendship.

IF JUNE 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next six to eight weeks, you may be feeling good about yourself and get a chance to relax and enjoy the fruits of your labors. The only snag will occur if you overly optimistic and translate this optimism into gambling with your future by making crucial changes to your investments or career. Let your ambitions simmer on the back burner and don't be swayed by the opinions of people in arms-length association. In September you could form a lifelong friendship or earn recognition for your efforts within organizations or groups. Your heart is in the right place in late October and early November, but throughout December your gullibility may leave you open to mistakes of judgment.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Preen your tail feathers before you shake them. Although you don't consider yourself a social climber, your ability to entertain and impress others might create a reputation as a mountaineer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Achieving your dreams with love, friends and relationships dominates the landscape. You may experience elements of joyous truth as you make a change for the better within your personal world.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spoil yourself. Take a time out for romance, music, art — or to embrace some of the finer things of life. You may be guided by a spirit of cooperation that inspires you to help others without being asked.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Help others choose wisely. People are more than willing to share their ideas, hopes and dreams with you because your attitude is encouraging and empowering. You can give old ideas a new twist.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can operate within the laws of attraction. Once a relationship is put into motion, it will tend to stay in motion. There may be moments when you have the opportunity to meet someone who is very special.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There is no one-size-fits-all committed relationship. If you find something to criticize in a significant relationship or if the "magic" seems to have evaporated, it is time to develop new joint goals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can have a fabulous time in group settings. You might enjoy a staid business meeting more than anticipated or could strike up a friendship while sprawled on the beach. Social activities are highlighted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There can be definite chemistry between you and a new friend. You may sense that someone understands your needs or notice an increased sensitivity to your feelings. Your sex appeal is sizzling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): "Return to sender" doesn't work on unpleasant or contentious messages received within a committed relationship. This is the time to strive to achieve a compromise or to offer concessions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may find yourself drawn to someone who appears intense and inspiring. You may hope that ambitions will be realized by hooking up with someone who fills in your gaps, but loyalty is an issue.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Seize the day. You feel mentally alert, energetic and optimistic, and this in turn works to attract further opportunities. It is a good time to straighten out a misunderstanding or have a heart-to-heart talk.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your relationships tend to be harmonious, but ambitions could bar the way. It takes effort and drive to accomplish anything of consequence, but making someone happy is an accomplishment, too.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Hope, whose weak Being ruined is,
 Alike if it succeed, and if it miss;
 Whom Good or Ill does equally confound,
 And both the Horns of Fates Dilemma wound."
 — Abraham Cowley

When the holdings in two suits look more or less equal, a closer inspection can reveal that one of them offers a slight extra chance. Take a look at this six-heart deal, which occurred in a national knockout event.

West's simple three-spade raise did nothing to hinder North-South. It merely suggested to both players that the other was unlikely to have too much in spades, while it took away none of their bidding space. No doubt West's subsequent five spades was in to find out if North-South could work out how many aces they had. As it was, North's pass showed an odd number (there are all sorts of methods one can play here, the only important thing being to know what your partner does) and the fair slam was reached.

When West led the spade queen, declarer won and drew trumps in two rounds. The bidding had indicated that there was very little chance of one defender being long in both majors, so declarer had to make an immediate decision. He could make his slam if either minor suit broke evenly, but he had to guess which one to play on. In diamonds a 3-3 break offered one chance, but in clubs there was a significant extra chance: If the suit was not 3-3, East might have a doubleton honor, or, as here, West might have a doubleton Q-9 or J-9. Today the right choice made the difference between success and failure.

ANSWER: It seems reasonable to attack spades, your best source of tricks, and a low spade lead looks normal enough. I know geniuses who would lead the spade queen because that is very unlikely to cost a trick and might leave them on lead to continue spades or to shift to clubs through dummy. But I leave such plays to others!

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

Outdoor Rocker

Busy do-it-yourselfers will appreciate this quick and easy outdoor rocker project. Requiring only basic tools, even amateurs will find that they can finish it in one or two afternoons. Redwood is preferred because of its strength and durability outdoors, but other woods like cedar, pine and fir also work well if properly treated. The completed rocker measures 36 in. tall by 24 in. wide by 30 in. deep.
