Twin Falls School Board approves new, shortened calendar

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls School Board has approved a new, shortened school calendar for the upcoming 2010-2011 year, part of the district's plan for weathering the downturn in state revenues hitting Idaho's school districts.

The calendar, approved Monday, reflects the 7.8-percent average pay cut teachers will face through 14 furlough days and the elimination of an optional 192nd contract day.

For students, it means eight fewer days in class. Four are full school days, and the other four are half-days in school. The first day of school won't come until Sept. 7, the day after Labor Day. And school will end on May 26, 2011, the Thursday before Labor Day.

By contrast, during the 2010-11 school year:

Classes end: May 26, 2011
Class days: 166

2009-2010 school year classes began on Aug. 24, 2009, with the last day of school falling on June 2.

Besides the loss of eight days of student-teacher contact time, educators will be furloughed for more days. Those days include the loss of pay for the Memorial Day holiday and five furlough days that in a normal year would be used for teachers' professional development needs like workshops, training, in-service and school retreats for staff.

Teachers also lose an optional day on their contract, bringing their total lost days to 15. With the reduced days, teachers will have 177 days on their contract instead of 191 days with an optional 192nd day. Students will be in class for 166 days.

The school board also approved a plan for gradually restoring trimmed school days if funding permits, though district officials cautioned that it's unknown whether that will be a possibility next year.

Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said the district would want to be careful about adding school days in the middle of the coming school year, noting that legislators have signaled that districts should be prepared for possible hold-backs.

The district would first reinstate two days of student-teacher contact, followed by a work day for teachers only. Next would come the reinstatement of two more student-teacher school days, with pay then returned for the Memorial Day holiday.

After restoring the holiday pay the district would reinstate the four student half-days of school. The priority list ends with restoring another teacher work day and the optional day for teachers.

The calendar was formed by a committee that has representation from all district schools.

Obama makes more promises on oil spill

By Tom Raum
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Obama's vow to leave the Gulf Coast in better shape than before the oil spill sounds familiar. It eerily echoes President George W. Bush's pledge after Hurricane Katrina to rebuild New Orleans "higher and better."

Bush wasn't able to keep that 2005 promise. And Obama probably won't be able to keep his either.

If Americans were looking for details on how Obama would meet such goals and a plan for action, they didn't get much from the president's first speech to the nation from the Oval Office on Tuesday.

He used the address to try to assure people that he has a plan for a problem that didn't exist two months ago, to suggest that this crisis proves he was right about energy legislation and that, in spite of all of this, he hasn't forgotten that recovery from recession is still his job No. 1.

Murtaugh man lauded for canal rescue

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

MURTAUGH — Jaime Delgado, 21, was deep in thought as he visited the bank of the Twin Falls Canal Co.'s main canal Thursday afternoon.

The canal was more ominous than the last time Delgado was there.

"I just keep thinking about that night," Delgado said.

"That night" was early on the morning of June 6, when Delgado dove into the canal rapids, risking his own life to rescue Amy Jensen from being swept away in the current.

Jensen, 34, had just driven through part of a wooden barrier and into the canal, an especially treacherous ditch from which the water of the Snake River spills out of Murtaugh Lake and travels quickly to thirsty fields across the Magic Valley.

"I could hear her screaming for help," said Delgado, a College of Southern Idaho pre-nursing student, as he turned his eyes from the roaring canal 20 feet below him.

Magic, one house at a time

Stories poured out easily as Tony Martinez sat on his concrete stairs, shaded by a small awning.

"I like to say that my home is a house of many colors," Martinez said. "It doesn't matter who you are or where you are from, you are always welcome here."

The Twin Falls "house of many colors" is in reality coated in a fresh white paint with simple blue trim. Last summer, a team from Paint Magic surprised the 68-year-old retiree when they showed up on his doorstep.

"My grandson's the culprit," he chuckled. "He filled out that little form at the park and then all these people came to paint my house."

Martinez welcomed the crew and told them his door was always open to them. The house also received about $5,500 in weatherization improvements from South Central Community Action Partnership.

"They installed new windows, insulation, fixed my floors and the attic," Martinez said. "Cut my power bill in half."

Paint Magic's 25 years of service in the Magic Valley have led to 527 freshly painted homes since 1986. To celebrate this year, the organization set out to paint 25 homes of low-income, disabled and senior homeowners across south-central Idaho.

It's an ambitious goal, even for the 501(c)3 nonprofit that's averaged 21 homes painted per year. And it's one organizers say won't be reached, as Paint Magic has received fewer donors, participants and even applicants than in past years.

"I would like to say that we've painted all of the houses that need it in the Magic Valley," said Paint Magic President Ken Robinette. "But I don't think that is the case. We are all a little baffled about why the applications are down."

Anti-amnesty speech at Canyon Ridge tonight

John Birch Society president to lead talk on illegal immigration

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Immigration, a perennial hot-button issue, will be the focus of a talk by the president of the ultraconservative John Birch Society tonight.

Titled "Stealing the American Dream: How Illegal Immigration Affects You," the talk will focus on educating the public instead of provoking action, assistant event organizer Liz Niccum said. John F. McManus, the constitutionalist and anti-communist Society's president, will stop at Twin Falls on the tail end of a regional tour.

McManus will focus on how illegal immigration "continues to spiral out of control" and offer criticisms of any amnesty plans for illegal immigrants, according to a news release.

Niccum said more than 100 people have already bought tickets for the 7 p.m. event. She called the event timely due to Arizona's recent anti-illegal immigration legislation. McManus will be selling an updated version of his DVD "Constitution Si, Amnesty No!" Niccum said she isn't worried about stirring controversy or charges of racism with the event. Its central message is just to treat people as individuals instead of groups, she said.

"We just always need to go back to our foundation and our Constitution," she said. "We always run into problems when we try to treat people as groups instead of as individuals."

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

Music and the outdoors. Nothing beats it.

• The Twin Falls Tonight summer concert series begins, featuring American gypsy jazz ensemble Red Rock Hot Club, from 6-9 p.m. at the fountain downtown on Main Avenue. It's free and kicks off the Snake River Canyon Jam event. Stay tuned for more.

• Learning is a great thing, so take advantage and apply for a J.A. & Kathryn Albertson Foundation Scholarship, which range up to $1,200 per semester for full-time and $600 for part-time students. Go to the College of Southern Idaho website, www.csi.edu, to get the educational ball rolling. The deadline is July 15.

• Take a ride to the Baumgartner campground 11 miles from Featherville. Aside from a campground surrounded by fantastic ponderosa pine trees and the nearby Boise River, you'll also find a hot spring pool. If you want to stay come early or make a reservation because it's a popular place. Call the Fairfield Ranger District at 764-3202.

One more mutt, one more time

After our 15-year-old pound-hound Lhasa apso died in December, my wife and I started thinking about upgrading our dogs.

I'm 58, and it's uncertain how many more puppies I'll be around to shepherd into old age.

So Victoria and I — who already have two other rescue dogs — started looking at Idaho breeders, and were ready to write a big check for the right purebred, papared dog.

Didn't happen. Last week we acquired Henry, a 2-year-old Shih Tzu/Lhasa apso cross, from the Meridian animal shelter. The adoption fee was $23.50.

If there were ever a last-chance dog, it's Henry. He's a mess, with a pronounced under bite, matted fur and crooked teeth. He was found wandering the streets — dirty, lost and hopeless — with his little sister, Leia.

We submitted applications to the shelter to adopt five different small dogs; Henry was the leftover.

Which is to say, he's perfect.

Look, I'm a great admirer of American Kennel Club-registered animals, all beautifully bred, groomed and trained. And I have nothing but respect for the folks who invest so much time, energy, money, hard work and imagination in advancing the canine genome.

But they're missing something.

Any relationship that a human being has without learning something is wasted. Here's what I've learned from Henry and from his many predecessors in our house:

• The right dog isn't merely intuitive; it's wise. And it teaches its human companions things about themselves that they wouldn't have otherwise known.

• If you think a pound-hound doesn't know about

Jerome wins budget award

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome's finance department is receiving kudos for its budget efforts.

On Tuesday, the Jerome City Council presented representatives from the city's finance department with the Government Finance Officers Association Distinguished Budget Award.

Assistant Finance Director Kathy Cone said Jerome has won this award for the last three years, and is one of only three Idaho jurisdictions to have successfully applied for and received it.

"The award is based on recognition of using the budget as a financial plan, operations guide and communications device," Cone said.

The council also approved the final reading of a bill creating no-parking zones on Eighth Avenue East and 10th Avenue East. The zones are located near Horizon Elementary School and Gayle Forsyth Memorial Park, and are intended to help decrease congestion for emergency-vehicle access to the area.

Micah Austin, assistant to the city administrator, said enforcement of the no-parking zones is needed for several reasons.

"This is more than just an annoyance," he said. "It is a necessity for health and safety reasons. Especially when sporting events are happening, emergency vehicles can't get down those streets."

The Jerome City Council next meets at 5:30 p.m. July 6 in its chambers, 100 E. Ave. A.

this month. Selected homes are scheduled to be announced June 23, with the paint day set for July 17. Robinette didn't have an exact number of applicants this year, but said the effort draws more than 400 participants yearly for prep and paint work, while area paint professionals oversee each team's work.

"Paint Magic was started by a group of folks who wanted to make a difference in the community," Robinette said of the free service. "We provide opportunities for people who otherwise wouldn't get the help."

The stories bring volunteers back each year, Robinette said. One team painted a man's home while he was recovering from surgery in the hospital. Another crew painted the home of a woman who had recently been widowed.

"Every year is so different," said Ray Parrish with D.L. Evans Bank, a longtime Paint Magic participant. "Paint Magic gives people who participate in it a good feeling, and it also gives them a chance to see what kind of impact they can have on people who need help."

Parrish has been the team captain for the bank's three branches during the last four years and also serves as the second vice president on the Paint Magic board. He said volunteering with his co-workers has given them a special bond, one that can only be achieved by the camaraderie of serving together. The D.L. Evans branches in Burley were imperative in expanding Paint Magic to the Mini-Cassia area, he said.

"There is a huge need in that area," Parrish said. "Every year people are so grateful. It is amazing to see how blessed we are and how we can bring those blessings into the lives of other people."

Delgado

Luckily for Jensen, Delgado that night had left the same Murtaugh bar just moments apart.

"I was out with friends that night, had gone to a party but had come home. When I got there my dad wasn't home ... he was at the bar in town playing pool," Delgado said. "So I decided to go see him and make sure he had a ride home."

A friend said he'd drive Delgado's father home while Delgado followed in his own vehicle. As they proceeded south along 4500 East Road, the driver ahead of Delgado caught sight of Jensen's red taillights and dust.

Instead of turning, Jensen continued south, seemingly oblivious that the road ended with a wooden barrier marking the top of the ditch.

"He told me he thought he'd seen a car drive into the canal," Delgado said.

"We went to see what happened."

As they aimed their headlights over the canal, Delgado caught sight of Jensen being carried by the current.

"I didn't really think about it. All I knew was that if I didn't try to get her, she would be gone," Delgado said.

He dived in, missing the jagged rocks lining the canal bottom. Fighting the cold water that seized his body, he swam to Jensen, not realizing the burden a drowning person can become.

"He's lucky she didn't drag him down and drown him. They both could have easily drowned," said Ron Andersen, a member of the Kimberly, Hansen and Murtaugh Quick Response Unit who arrived on the scene minutes after being jostled awake by a 1 a.m. phone call. "Had Jaime not checked on her going into the canal, she would have been a missing person. She could have ended up anywhere in the canal system and not been found until they drained them in the fall. He did a remarkable thing."

Pulling Jensen to the bank wasn't easy. Delgado doesn't have formal water-rescue training and didn't know what to expect.

"The first time I got to her she about pulled me under. I fought her off and went back the bank," he said. "After catching my breath I decided to give it another try."

As Delgado approached Jensen the second time, he called out to her and calmed her down before Delgado's friends, gathered on the bank, pulled the pair out of the water. Jensen was taken by ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls and later released.

"We were able to warm Jaime up and he went home. He was shaken, but then again, we all were," said Andersen.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office investigators suspect alcohol may have played a role in the incident; Jensen could not be reached for comment. The case "remains under investigation, pending laboratory test results," said sheriff's spokeswoman Lori Stewart.

Regardless of the circumstances, Delgado said he would repeat his actions if the scenario arises again. Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter plans to honor the CSI student's concern for others at a 2 p.m. ceremony today at the sheriff's office.

"It was the right thing to do," Delgado said. "When I got out, my dad asked what I was thinking but I told him it didn't matter. We were all all right and that was what was important."

IEA attorney questions bargaining process

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls School Board has made its decision about teacher contracts. But some educators have concerns about how negotiations played out between their bargaining unit and the school district.

Twin Falls Education Association President Mike Wilkinson on Monday read to the school board a letter e-mailed from John Rumel, general counsel for the Idaho Education Association, to Fritz Wonderlich, the attorney who was the district's hearing officer for negotiations, and Brian Julian, the attorney who represents the district.

The letter, written Monday, came after the board on June 4 agreed with district administrators that teacher salaries should be cut by an average of 7.8 percent to absorb state budget cuts. The cuts will be reached through 14 teacher furlough days; they'll also lose an optional day in their contracts, bringing total reduced days to 15.

Monday's letter was read before the board unanimously approved the master contract agreement, a legal step formalizing its June 4 decision.

Rumel's letter implied that the issue isn't going to go away, despite the board's decision.

"In sum, the TFEA and the certified employees that it represents object in the strongest of terms to the Board's imposing the terms and conditions of employment," Rumel wrote in the letter. "... If the Board does so, the TFEA will have no choice but to pursue all appropriate actions to challenge the Board's decisions."

Specifically, Rumel's letter said that the district's June 4 "last, best offer" didn't properly come from the board's representatives before its approval, as required by law. Rumel wrote that "any last, best offer made by the Board must be made by it or its representatives during the meet and confer/negotiations process, not solely as part of its decision after the due process hearing."

The letter adds that because the board's representatives never made the offer that the administration recommended to the board, any decision by the board to adopt it would violate the financial-emergency bargaining statute and constitute "bad faith bargaining."

After hearing the letter read to them, school district officials didn't directly respond at the meeting to its contents. Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said after the meeting that he hadn't read yet the letter himself, adding that it's been a "very difficult and challenging" time and the district is focused on moving forward.

Board Chairman Bryan Matsuoka echoed Dobbs' comments, saying that the budget situation is difficult, and that the school district can get through the tough times.

Times-News

The Twin Falls Police Department is seeking information on a string of burglaries.

According to a Tuesday press release, the department has received several reports of commercial burglaries in which burglars have gained entrance from the roof or from a window housing an air conditioning unit or fan.

The burglaries take place in various parts of the city, typically late at night or in the early morning. According to police, suspects have gained access to adjoining businesses by breaking through doors or walls.

The city seeks public information on such burglaries. Tipsters can remain anonymous and may be eligible for a reward for information that assists investigations.

Police also remind business owners that a crime prevention officer can perform a free site survey of businesses to determine its risk of being targeted. The surveys typically take one to two hours to complete, according to police.

Obama

Part of Obama's predicament may be of his own making. He has consistently set high expectations for his own performance, first in his presidential campaign and now in office.

But his eagerness to take "responsibility" has run into a wall of reality with three crises that defy easy resolution: an ocean floor oil gusher neither BP nor government scientists can stop, a nearly decade-long war in Afghanistan that Obama can't seem to end and a fragile economic recovery that isn't creating new jobs.

In each instance, Obama has responded by balancing expressions of hope with cautions that the road ahead is a long and difficult one.

But patience is running short.

A majority of Americans — 52 percent — disapprove of how Obama has handled the spill, up significantly from last month when many more Americans were reserving judgment, according to a new Associated Press-GfK poll.

Heading toward fall elections that will determine who controls Congress, the administration and lawmakers are attempting to deflect as much political blame for the spill as possible.

Obama's choice of the Oval Office for Tuesday night's prime-time address to the nation was a piece of presidential stagecraft designed to emphasize the seriousness of the situation, while projecting strength and engagement. It was an attempt to show him fully in charge and sympathetic to people along the Gulf Coast and to try to counter any remaining impressions of aloofness and detachment.

"Make no mistake: We will fight this spill with everything we've got for as long it takes. We will make BP pay for the damage their company has caused. And we will do whatever's necessary to help the Gulf Coast and its people recover from this tragedy," Obama told the nation.

The day before, Obama said during a stop in Alabama, "I am confident that we're going to be able to leave the Gulf Coast in better shape than it was before."

Obama used a large portion of his speech to promote his energy legislation, which encourages a "transition away from fossil fuels" and a transition to clean energy.

Republicans immediately accused Obama of trying to use the crisis to build support for new taxes on carbon-based fuels that contribute to climate change.

Even some Democrats called the speech a missed opportunity to send a message of competency and urgency.

Presidents have long used the Oval Office format in times of crisis. Bush spoke from the Oval Office on the night of Sept. 11, 2001. Ronald Reagan used the Oval to talk about the space shuttle Challenger explosion. John F. Kennedy spoke from there about the Cuban missile crisis. Richard Nixon announced his resignation from the famous room.

Obama was swept into office on promises of change.

As a first-term senator representing Illinois, he promised to be different. He sought to raise confidence in what government could do and campaigned against the failures of his predecessor.

He took particular aim at Bush's handling of Katrina, scoffing at the Republican president's promise to "do whatever it takes" to help New Orleans.

Obama's presidential campaign was a model of efficiency, innovation and bold can-do gestures, and he continued to raise expectations in office by putting forth an overflowing agenda — from antireces-sionary stimulus spending to health care overhaul, financial overhaul, major energy and education legislation.

He said passage of his health care bill was proof that government "could still do big things." And success seemed imminent on his proposal for a far-reaching overhaul of financial regulation. Then came the oil spill.

After a fitful start dealing with the spill, Obama has worked intently to convince Americans that he and his administration are in full control in the response — and were from the beginning. He has taken responsibility for stopping the leak and for the cleanup.

The oil spill is "almost impossible to control from the presidency," said James Thurber, a political scientist at American University. "But you can certainly react to it and respond to it and try to create ways to mitigate its impact, at least financially. And I think he's done that."

But Obama might be trying too hard to show he's in charge, said Stephen Hess, a presidential scholar at the Brookings Institution. "I think the amount of fault on his part is limited. So why suddenly start taking the blame for what government doesn't do or hasn't done in the past or shouldn't do?" asked Hess.

Still, Obama has increasingly found himself on the defensive as he faces growing public anger over the spill. In the nearly two months since the disaster, BP and government scientists have failed at nearly every effort to plug the well.

If it's any solace to the president, disapproval of BP's handling of the spill is now up to 83 percent. That suggests that Americans have someone other than their president to blame.

Arizona lawmaker takes aim at automatic citizenship

Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — Emboldened by passage of the nation's toughest law against illegal immigration, the Arizona politician who sponsored the measure now wants to deny U.S. citizenship to children born in this country to undocumented parents.

Legal scholars laugh out loud at Republican state Sen. Russell Pearce's proposal and warn that it would be blatantly unconstitutional, since the 14th Amendment guarantees citizenship to anyone born in the U.S.

But Pearce brushes aside such concerns. And given the charged political atmosphere in Arizona, and public anger over what many regard as a failure by the federal government to secure the border, some politicians think the idea has a chance of passage.

"I think the time is right," said state Rep. John Kavanagh, a Republican from suburban Phoenix who is chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee. "Federal inaction is unacceptable, so the states have to start the process."

Earlier this year, the Legislature set off a storm of protests around the country when it passed a law that directs police to check the immigration status of anyone they suspect is in the country illegally. The law also makes it a state crime to be an illegal immigrant. The measure, which takes effect July 29 unless blocked in court, has inflamed the national debate over immigration and led to boycotts against the state.

An estimated 10.8 million illegal immigrants were living in the U.S. as of January 2009, according to the Homeland Security Department. The Pew Hispanic Center estimates that as of 2008, there were 3.8 million illegal immigrants in this country whose children are U.S. citizens.

Pearce, who has yet to draft the legislation, proposes that the state of Arizona no longer issue birth certificates unless at least one parent can prove legal status. He contends that the practice of granting citizenship to anyone born in the U.S. encourages illegal immigrants to come to this country to give birth and secure full rights for their children.

"We create the greatest inducement for breaking our laws," he said.

The 14th Amendment, adopted in 1868 in the aftermath of the Civil War, reads: "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside." But Pearce argues that the amendment was meant to protect black people.

"It's been hijacked and abused," he said. "There is no provision in the 14th Amendment for the declaration of citizenship to children born here to illegal aliens?"

John McGinnis, a conservative law professor at Northwestern University, said Pearce's interpretation is "just completely wrong." The "plain meaning" of the amendment is clear, he said.

Senate candidate Rand Paul, a Kentucky Republican and darling of the tea party movement, made headlines last month after he told a Russian TV station that he favors denying citizenship to the children of illegal immigrants.

A similar bill was introduced at the federal level in 2009 by former Rep. Nathan Deal, a Georgia Republican, but it has gone nowhere.

The Federation for American Immigration Reform, based in Washington, said Pearce's idea would stop immigrants from traveling to the U.S. to give birth.

Idaho lawmaker blames latest tax woes on state job

BOISE (AP) — A state lawmaker is blaming his latest tax troubles on his job in the Idaho Legislature.

The state notified state Rep. Phil Hart, R-Athol, in October that he owed $53,000 in back taxes. But Hart said he missed the deadline because it ran out 10 days before the January start of the 2010 Idaho Legislature.

The case has highlighted a provision in the Idaho constitution that exempts lawmakers from "civil process" during the legislative session, according to a Spokesman-Review report published Tuesday.

Hart told the Idaho Tax Commission in a Dec. 31 letter that, as a member of the Legislature, he could defer filing an appeal and all the work the process entails while the Legislature was in session and 10 days prior to the start of the session.

"The concept is that the legislator should focus on the business of the Legislature and the business of the state while he's in that time period," Hart said. "So it's not some kind of a privilege, it's really more of a focusing the energy of that man where it should be, and not having a distraction."

He filed a notice of appeal on March 31, two days after the session ended. The state now is seeking to dismiss his appeal, saying he didn't file notice on time or pay the required deposit, which is 20 percent of the amount owed.

It argued in recent court documents that Hart is using his legislator status to exempt himself from the statute of limitations that applies to taxpayers filing an appeal.

Hart serves on the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, which is chaired by Rep. Dennis Lake, a Blackfoot Republican who recalled other legislators have claimed similar exemptions in the past.

"I know of one that claimed he was not subject to traffic fines while he was in session that was proved to be erroneous; he ended up being liable for them," Lake said. "They can have those fights. They're entitled to their own opinion, but when they're proven wrong, they need to step up to the plate and pay the bill."

Bozeman crowd skeptical of bison vaccination plan

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — People attending a public hearing on a Yellowstone National Park plan to vaccinate bison to reduce the incidence of disease want to know how it will benefit the bison.

The National Park Service has proposed using air rifles to fire darts carrying the brucellosis vaccine at bison. Park scientists estimate using the vaccine darts on female bison and calves could lead to a 66 percent reduction in incidence of the disease, making bison more tolerable to cattle ranchers on lands north of Yellowstone.

"As part of the (Interagency Bison Management Plan) there's supposed to be more tolerance if we decided to initiate remote vaccinations. What that tolerance will be is yet to be seen," said park biologist P.J. White.

That was the issue raised by those at Monday's meeting in Bozeman.

"My big concern is, what is the benefit going to be?" asked Mark Pearson with the Greater Yellowstone Coalition.

The vaccine isn't 100 percent effective, and it's not likely all bison would be vaccinated under the $300,000-per-year effort, officials said.

No case of bison transmitting brucellosis to cattle has been documented in the wild. Still, more than 3,000 Yellowstone bison have been slaughtered over the past decade to keep them away from cattle and bison that wander out of the northern part of the park in the winter and are hazed back in the spring.

Brucellosis can cause cattle to abort, and two separate instances can cause a state to lose its brucellosis-free status, leading to restrictions on the out-of-state movement of untested cattle. Montana regained its brucellosis-free status last summer after brucellosis was found in herds near Yellowstone in 2007 and 2008.

Yellowstone already gives vaccinations by hand to some calves captured along the park's northern border, but over the past decade, fewer than 200 shots have been given. Under the most aggressive of the proposed plans, between 600 and 800 vaccines may be used each year, said Rick Wallen, another park biologist.

Appeals court denies protection for giant earthworm

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

SPOKANE, Wash. — The giant Palouse earthworm isn’t that big, doesn’t spit and doesn’t smell like lilies, and now a federal court has decided it is not time to grant the worm endangered species protection.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals this week affirmed a lower court ruling that found there is not enough evidence to prove the little-seen worm is threatened. Justices found that virtually all information about the creature is limited and inconclusive.

In April, University of Idaho officials announced that living specimens of the worm were captured for the first time in two decades. While the 9th Circuit decision involved a petition filed several years ago, environmentalists have since filed a new petition seeking endangered species protection.

“We think that under the new (Obama) administration, that petition will get a better hearing than the last one did,” said Noah Greenwald, endangered species program director for the Center for Biological Diversity in Portland, Ore.

Greenwald contends the handful of sightings of the worm in the past 100 years indicates it is endangered.

The giant Palouse earthworm has fascinated scientists for decades after long being written off as an extinct creature that once lived in the Palouse region of the Washington-Idaho border. Reports suggested that the worms had a penchant for spitting and smelled like lilies.

The recent discovery of the worms appeared to dispel the myth about the creature’s appearance. They don’t spit, or smell like lilies, and aren’t even that giant. While they had been thought to grow to 3 feet long, the adult worm measured about 10 or 12 inches fully extended, while the juvenile was 6 or 7 inches.

The Palouse earthworm was first reported to the scientific world in 1897. Massive agricultural development soon consumed nearly all of the unique Palouse Prairie — a seemingly endless ocean of steep, silty dunes — and appeared to deal a fatal blow to the worm.

In the late 1980s, a University of Idaho scientist found two worms near Moscow, Idaho. They were the last living specimens found until this year.

The worms were considered extinct until 2005, when an Idaho graduate student found a specimen near Albion. But that worm had been cut nearly in half as she was digging a hole.

That’s when the Center for Biological Diversity and other conservation groups petitioned the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to protect the worm as an endangered species, citing as proof the lack of sightings. But the agency said there simply was not enough scientific information to merit a listing, and a federal judge in Spokane agreed.

The conservation groups appealed that decision to the 9th Circuit.

“Evidence regarding the population of giant Palouse earthworm is limited and inconclusive,” the appeals court said in an unpublished ruling Monday, and there was no reason to conclude the worm faced a threat from agriculture and residential development.

White powder sent to fed buildings not hazardous

SEATTLE — An FBI agent says the white powder sent in envelopes to eight federal buildings in Washington, Idaho and Utah on Monday was not hazardous.

Special Agent Frederick Gutt says overnight laboratory tests showed that the main component of the powder was calcium carbonate, which is found in chalk.

Gutt says the investigation on who sent the mailings continues. He says that there was a threat associated with the envelopes, but could not disclose more details.

No illnesses were reported from the mailings Monday.

Envelopes were found at a federal building in Seattle, Internal Revenue Service offices in Bellevue, Wash., and an FBI office in Spokane, Wash. In Idaho, the U.S. attorney’s office and an FBI office in Coeur d’Alene, an FBI office in Pocatello and the U.S. attorney’s office in Boise received envelopes.

In Salt Lake City, an FBI office was also targeted.

Raccoons to be classified as predators come July 1

BOISE — For Idaho folks with a hankering to harvest a raccoon, big changes are coming July 1.

That’s when raccoons will be reclassified as predatory wildlife, allowing them to be taken recreationally in any number — and at any time and manner not prohibited by other state or federal law.

Another bonus for people who really want to get a raccoon: The new regulations set no bag limits.

In addition, wily ringtails can be hunted at night — with an artificial light — without a permit from the Department of Fish and Game.

But remember: An Idaho hunting or trapping license is required.

Another law that takes effect July 1 will allow raccoons, skunks and other predatory wildlife captured while causing property damage to be released on private lands — provided there’s written consent from the landowner.

Previously, the law required most such animals be killed.

Teen meth use drops 52% from 2007 to 2009

BOISE — The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention’s latest youth risk survey shows methamphetamine use among Idaho teens dropped 52 percent between 2007 and 2009.

That’s compared to a decline of less than 10 percent among teens nationwide.

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter says the finding for Idaho may be due to outreach by the Idaho Meth Project, whose graphic ads aims to discourage youngsters from trying the addictive drug.

Otter, whose wife, Lori, is a big Meth Project supporter, says law enforcement, treatment and the Idaho Meth Project are making a difference.

He says, “The numbers are extremely encouraging.”

Idaho teen meth use dropped from 6.4 percent in 2007 to 3.1 percent in 2009, the survey found.

Nationwide, meth use dropped from 4.4 percent to 4.1 percent.

Judge hears arguments in federal wolf case

Associated Press writer

MISSOULA, Mont. — A federal judge heard arguments Tuesday on whether gray wolves in Montana and Idaho should be protected once more under the Endangered Species Act and whether those states can ensure the species won’t be wiped out under their management.

Defenders of Wildlife, the Greater Yellowstone Coalition and other wildlife advocates sued the federal government after the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service named wolves in the Northern Rockies a distinct population segment and removed them from the endangered species list in April 2009.

The Fish and Wildlife Service turned over wolf management to Montana and Idaho wildlife officials but left federal endangered species protections in place for wolves in Wyoming, where state law is considered hostile to the animals’ survival.

Gray wolves were listed as endangered in 1974, but following a reintroduction program in the mid-1990s, there are now more than 1,700 in the Northern Rockies.

The population is one of the most well-studied and best-understood in the world, and the conclusion 15 years after reintroduction is that wolves will continue to survive under state management, Justice Department attorney Mike Eitel told U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy.

The only threat now is Wyoming’s state laws, which does not offer protections against people killing wolves throughout most of the state, Eitel said.

Plaintiffs attorney Douglas Honnold told Molloy the government should not be able to split the level of protection between the states — the entire Northern Rockies population segment must be listed as endangered if a portion is considered endangered.

The plaintiffs also are challenging how the Fish and Wildlife Service determined its minimum recovery population — at least 100 wolves and 10 breeding pairs in each of the three states — and the biology behind how the wolf population should be distributed among those states.

“We hope the Fish and Wildlife Service will go back to the drawing board and come up with something that will work,” Honnold said.

Both sides say Molloy’s decision could shape whether the government can use political considerations, such as state laws and boundaries, in choosing how and where a species can be listed under the federal wildlife protection law.

Congress meant for the government to have flexibility in protecting species under the Endangered Species Act, and both the Bush administration and the Obama administration have approved the wolf decision by the Fish and Wildlife Service, Eitel said.

The Idaho Legislature’s artless tax dodger

In an Idaho House of Representatives full of tax hawks, none is more hard-core than state Rep. Phil Hart of Athol.

Except when it comes to his own taxes. The three-term Republican from Kootenai County is fighting the Idaho State Tax Commission over $53,000 in back taxes, interest and penalties, claiming in part that because he’s a legislator, he’s exempt from the deadlines for tax appeals that apply to all other taxpayers, according to the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash.

Hart, who also argued unsuccessfully to the Tax Commission that Idaho’s state income tax is unconstitutional, was notified last October that he owed the money and had 91 days to appeal. But Hart argued that time frame would run out 10 days before the start of the 2010 legislative session.

“As a member of the Legislature, I can defer filing an appeal and all the work that entails while the Legislature is in session and 10 days prior to the beginning of the session,” he wrote in a Dec. 31 letter to the Tax Commission.

Asked why he didn’t file his appeal during October, November or December, Hart said, “I don’t know. We were putting our game plan together.”

That’s funny. Hart, who holds a master’s degree in business administration from the prestigious Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, seems to have had plenty of time for other things.

He helped recruit and then elect a primary opponent for the senator in his legislative district of whom he doesn’t approve, and was never shy about volunteering for right-wing causes around the state.

On March 31, two days after the legislative session ended, Hart filed a notice of appeal, but he didn’t pay the full required prepayment of 20 percent of the amount owed until April 13. The state has now moved to dismiss Hart’s appeal for failing to file on time and failing to pay the required deposit on time.

Hart, the Tax Commission argues in legal documents, “is seeking to use his status as a legislator to relieve himself of having to comply with the statute of limitations.”

Not that we should be surprised.

Hart, who also has had nearly $300,000 in federal tax liens filed against him by the IRS in the past year, has tax problems stretching back to 1996.

In 1996, he stopped filing state and federal income tax returns while he filed an unsuccessful lawsuit challenging the federal income tax as unconstitutional. He filed no Idaho state tax returns from 1996 to 1998, then filed returns from 1999 to 2004, but the IRS and the state Tax Commission contend he underpaid for those years.

“... I do not believe that being a legislator exempts you from the ordinary duties that you have as a citizen,” state Rep. John Rusche, D-Lewiston, told the Spokesman-Review. “What it does say is that you cannot be arrested when you’re traveling to and from session. But it doesn’t say that you don’t have to pay your taxes and you don’t have to follow the Tax Commission rules and laws, at least I don’t read it that way. And I am bothered any time a public official uses a position to have an advantage over the ordinary citizen.”

Rep. Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot, who chairs the House Revenue and Taxation Committee — on which Hart serves — said, “... They’re entitled to their own opinion, but when they’re proven wrong, they need to step up to the plate and pay the bill.”

It’s wrong for elected officials to claim a privilege that the law denies to those who elected them, and it’s doubly wrong if they fail to pay their fair share as citizens.

And if the voters of legislative District 3 let Hart get away with this tax dodge, there’s something wrong with them.

Teach kids to consume less, save more

Everything parents try to do now to teach their children to save money for the future gets shouted down by the bad economy, credit problems and encouragement at every turn to enjoy now and spend.

Lewis W. Diuguid

It’s like trying to teach kids not to smoke when all of their peers and every adult they know is puffing away and couldn’t care less about the exorbitant costs in money and illness of using tobacco products. The trend of people not saving for the future is negatively affecting families.

A recent report from the Employee Benefit Research Institute found that one-fourth of U.S. workers have saved less than $1,000 for retirement. Workers are unprepared to maintain their standard of living once they retire.

Consider that baby boomers and their offspring generally exercise less, eat more and suffer a greater rate of obesity than previous generations.

Baby boomers save less on average than our parents did. Generations Y and X are following us with shallower footprints. It looks as if our kids’ will have a lower quality of life. They also aren’t expected to live as long.

Our kids shouldn’t bank on Social Security or Medicare. Our adult kids are paying into each just as baby boomers are, but it is less likely the programs will be around for them just as the entitlements are questionable for the 78 million baby boomers.

“Workers are unprepared to maintain their standard of living once they retire.”

Already baby boomers are draining the federal swamp. Social Security is projected to pay out more money this year than it receives in payroll taxes. That wasn’t supposed to happen until 2016. Even so, the program will not exhaust its funds until 2037 unless changes are made sooner.

Individual savings and investments may be our kids’ only salvation. I opened bank accounts for my daughters and I got them into the habit of putting a few dollars regularly in the bank so they would get used to saving.

The money, I told the girls, would be safe and earn interest. They could watch it grow with each statement.

That worked in the 1980s. Less so in the 1990s, and abysmal interest since 2000 has made liars out of parents like me. Ubiquitous advertising in the media encourage people to spend and not to worry about tomorrow. ATMs and credit cards given to teens make spending easier and more appealing.

An Associated Press-GfK poll found that the average amount owed on credit cards is $3,900, down from $5,600 in the fall. People on average carry about $44,000 in debt from credit cards, mortgages, auto loans and other consumer debt.

Fewer people are saving, and a record number of bankruptcy filings keep occurring. High unemployment adds to the problem. So do health issues.

Personal savings is the only way to feel secure. But first, the trends of non-savings have to be reversed. According to the Employee Benefit Research Institute, about one-fourth of workers this year said they have $1,000 to $25,000. Another quarter said they had $25,000 to $100,000.

Only 11 percent of the public had saved $100,000 to $250,000, and another 11 percent had squirreled away more than $250,000. A falling number of workers said they were very confident about their financial stability in retirement.

If an emergency arises — and they always do — people with no savings may have to rely on payday loan services, and the cost of doing so is enormous. Saving for the future is a way to keep from going deep under financial water.

Workers would be wise to redouble efforts to save for retirement. Some thought I was crazy in the 1970s, but I never expected Social Security to be around by the time baby boomers need it.

If it is still around, I am sure the age requirement will place it out of reach just when people my age turn 66 in 2021. The same is likely to be the case when my daughters each hits retirement age.

That makes it imperative for them as well as boomers to save for the future. Interest rates won’t be an incentive. But saving for old age is.

President is picking which laws to uphold

It’s really interesting how the present occupant of the White House can differentiate between laws.

Tuesday morning he said that if any laws have been broken because of the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico, he will prosecute. If he is so bent on upholding the laws that would apply in the case of the spill, why isn’t he just as determined to uphold the laws pertaining to illegal immigration? Instead of backing the Arizona law and the already-in-place federal laws, he has taken the opposite stance and has encouraged the protests throughout the nation.

Is this being a leader? If he is going to pick and choose which laws he is going to enforce? Where will it end?

Many ways to help the environment

I love to help the environment and I think we should do all that we can to help it. Here are some ways to help.

Gathering a group of friends to gather bags of trash and later on, sort them into bins like aluminum, glass, paper and plastic;

those are the bins we should use to recycle with.

More ways to help the environment are to take shorter showers or turning off the water when you are brushing your teeth.

You could use reusable bottles instead of disposable bottles. When my family gets plastic bottles, we use them as refill bottles for water.

You could also turn off your computers or unplug microwaves, phone chargers, radios, and heaters. These are easy ways to help the environment. They are also ways to help us get steps and steps closer to a cleaner community.

LOGAN GROVES Jerome

P.S. I think Jerome county should have a recycle center as those are also helping us get steps closer to a healthier and cleaner environment.

I remember nothing but have been told that without the prompt, fast, professional treatment I received, I would not be here today. How amazing Mr. Haas was at the gym, trained and able to perform professional CPR and operate the defibrillator equipment available and provided by the YMCA.

This is only part of the story. The other has to do with the high quality, fast, efficient care I received from St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center. Shortly after being revived I was transported by ambulance to the emergency room. I was still unconscious and have no memory of the next several days except occasionally waking up and having a friendly face assuring me that everything was going to be OK. The doctors and nurses provided and cared for me and I will always remember their care and concern for my well-being as well as the well-being of my family.

Since the events of May 11 when all this began, I have had successful open heart surgery and am well on the road to recovery. I am so proud to be a member of this community and what it all stands for.

I do not know why God allowed me the opportunity, but I hope I can fulfill the promise of being brought back from “sudden death” I just wish to thank everyone who was involved and wish you all a big “open heart” thank you.

Plug the holes of corporate negligence

Does public opinion toward man-made disasters hinge on the bankroll of the guilty party? The entire world knows of the Gulf Coast crisis; surely the outrage against the multi-billion dollar corporation is more than justified. After all, it's its job to clean it up, right?

What if I told you about a company that bagged $90 billion tax free ('96 to '03) while being directly responsible for dumping 56 million pounds of trash over thousands of square miles in Arizona's deserts? Affected areas include protected wilderness habitat, state parks, national monuments, private property and the Tohono O'odham Reservation.

Protected wildlife and private livestock die from ingesting plastic bags, strings, fabric and Mylar; and they're presently dumping 3,500 tons per year without citation or investigation by the Department of Environmental Quality or Environmental Protection Agency. Arizona, Texas and California together have annual claims in damages exceeding $12 billion, but the corporate fat cats, fearing no government retribution, rake in the cash and laugh at the locals.

They're fearless because they are the government. The $90 billion was tax money collected from illegals using an ITIN or stolen/fake Social Security numbers, yet the $12 billion spent by states baby-sitting the illegals is compensated with a pittance. The trash in the desert is just the cost of doing business. It exemplifies our government's corporate side by collecting pennies in taxes at the devastating expense of every state in the union.

Cleaning oily beaches before stopping the leak is reminiscent of the 1986 amnesty with all the false promises of border security; the next day the problem's three times as bad, three times the cost and no end in sight. Passing amnesty won't make up the difference in volume.

Nothing good comes out of a broken pipe or broken fence. Plug the damn holes, Mr. President, it's your job — for now.

Why shouldn't we celebrate on Sunday?

If we change the date to celebrate a holiday, let's do it for all of them. Like Christmas, let's change that date to something else because it falls on a Sunday, or what about Easter, Mother's Day, Father's Day, or just any holiday just because it might fall on a day that someone or some group doesn't like.

They are assigned days for a reason, not for someone or some group's convenience to say no we should not celebrate it because it is Sunday. Grow up and deal, people. We have been celebrating things on Sunday forever.

By the way, if your birthday is on Sunday, let's change it so you are born on a different day, and let's just keep changing things because it falls on a day we don't like.

Sorry if this is not what people want to hear, but grow up! Life is not always going to be perfect for everyone.

A modest proposal: a king and queen for America

If we can just get over George III, our new constitutional monarchs could serve as National Hand-Holders, Morale-Boosters-in-Chief and Founts of American Indignation.

Our king and queen could spend days traipsing along tar-ball-infested beaches, while bathing oil-soaked pelicans and thrusting strong chins defiantly at BP rigs.

All that would give President Obama time to devise actual clean-up policies. He might then also be able to concentrate on eliminating absurd government policies that make these disasters more likely (such as the $75 million cap on economic damages when an oil rig is responsible for a spill).

Our president is stuck with too many ceremonial duties as head of state, such as greeting ambassadors and holding tedious state dinners, that divert attention from solving problems. You can preside over America or you can address its problems, but it's difficult to find time to do both.

Other countries often hand over ceremonial duties to a titular head of state with no real powers — sort of a national nanny.

state is effectively the emperor. In Germany, it's the ceremonial president. In Britain, it's the queen. Canada divides the job of head of state between Queen Elizabeth (a freebie since she's on the British payroll) and her representative, the governor general.

A figurehead head of state is a nifty foreign policy tool as well. President Obama has twice had to delay his trip to Indonesia and Australia because of the press of domestic policy, but an American king and queen could spend days greeting crowds and cutting ribbons at new schools. And when they aren't traveling, our king and queen could be kept busy hosting state dinners five nights a week.

Some folks complain that it's silly to fret that Obama doesn't emote. Of course, it is. It's farcical that we have bullied our president into trash-talking on television about kicking some you know what.

One of the things I admire about this administration is its cerebral, no-drama emphasis on empirical evidence in addressing issues such as health, education and poverty. This is government by adults, by engineers rather than by dramatists.

But Obama also knows that drama and emotion are the fuel of American politics, and that's why he's struggling to feign fury.

As Stephen Colbert observed about the oil spill: "We know if this was Reagan, he would have stripped to his skivvies, put a knife in his teeth, gone down there and punched that oil well shut!"

But let's be realistic. Most presidents just won't look that good in their skivvies. And some may accidentally swallow the knives. Thus, the need for a handsome king and queen to lead photo-ops.

Small-minded critics will offer petty objections, complaining that it is undemocratic or inequitable to have royalty. Hmm. Considering that the wealthiest 1 percent of Americans own financial wealth six times greater than the financial wealth of the entire bottom 80 percent, well, we already have an aristocracy.

Critics may also protest the expense of royalty. But we could save on housing by having royals stay in the castles at Disneyland and Disney World. In any case, think of royalty as an investment that could bring in billions of dollars in tourist revenue.

If we choose well and adopt royals who are prone to scandal, we might also give a much-needed boost to the newspaper industry. A particularly fecund couple might offer the prospect of regular royal weddings, with sales of enough commemorative kitsch to balance the federal budget.

How should we choose a king and queen? Frankly, we already have royalty: Hollywood celebrities. And they are well trained to emote and explode on demand.

Just imagine the Nielsen ratings for an Academy Awards-type evening in which Americans would choose a royal family for the first time — live!

Movie stars are mostly rich enough that we wouldn't have to pay them, and they can often be counted on to indulge in enough adultery to make royalty entertaining and titillating.

They also tend to be gorgeous, and if we're going to have a king and queen stripped to their skivvies with knives in their teeth, we may as well enjoy the sight.

What? You say that this would be un-American? It's not who we are as a country?

Well, rage isn't President Obama either. It's not who he is any more than a monarchy is America.

So maybe we should just accept that we're stuck with a presidential system — and with a ruminative and slightly boring president who tries to solve problems rather than fulminate about them.

DELICIOUS MELONS. BIZARRE NAME.

Cantaloupe. It would be the perfect name for a hoofed mammal with straight, pointy antlers and a negative attitude (the cantelope). Or a nice justification for a big, expensive wedding (we can't elope). But we simply can't understand why anyone would create such a bizarre name for one of the world's most flavorful and popular melons (we suspect it was the same guy who came up with "poo-poo platter" and "Spam"). So although we're powerless to change the unfortunate name of this delicious melon, we can show our support by selling giant cantaloupes this week for only .44 cents a lb. Fed adopts rules to protect credit card users

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve adopted new rules Tuesday aimed at protecting credit card customers from getting socked by lofty late payment charges and other penalty fees.

The rules respond to public and congressional outrage over practices by credit card companies.

RULE CHANGE

NEW PROTECTIONS: The Federal Reserve adopted rules to protect credit card customers from getting hit by abusive fees for late payments and for other things.

WHEN TO CHECK YOUR STATEMENTS: The rules take effect Aug. 22.

FORCES BEHIND THE ACTION: Congress, responding to public outrage, directed the Fed to implement the rules.

multiple penalty fees on a single late payment.

The rules take effect on Aug. 22.

“Consumers will finally be protected from the worst credit card issuer abuses,” said Rep. Carolyn Maloney, D-N.Y., a major advocate for the changes.

In addition, the rules require companies to reconsider interest rates imposed on customers since the start of last year. Some lenders pushed through rate increases ahead of the first phase of sweeping new credit-card protections, which took effect earlier this year. Those first set of rules were designed to protect customers from sudden hikes in interest rates.

Congress directed the Fed to implement the new credit card protections in legislation signed into law by President Barack Obama last year.

“The new rules require that late payment and other penalty fees be assessed in a way that is fairer and generally less costly for consumers,” said Fed Governor Elizabeth Duke, the central bank’s point person on the rules. “Card issuers must also reevaluate recent interest rate increases, and, if appropriate, reduce the rate,” she added.

Legislation in Congress revamping the nation’s financial regulatory structure could reduce the Fed’s influence over consumer protections — including those over credit cards.

Unemployment benefits end for thousands of Idaho workers

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Unemployment benefits ended this week for 360 jobless workers in south-central Idaho, as well as nearly 4,000 others across Idaho.

Benefits were curtailed when a federal stimulus law passed in February 2009 expired Friday. The law extended unemployment benefits from 26 weeks to as many as 73 weeks for people who were unable to find a job. The provisions also added an extra $25 to the weekly benefit of every claimant.

The curtailment is expected to affect as many as 127 jobless workers in Twin Falls County, and about 30 in

“If jobless workers can string together enough (part-time jobs), they could earn more than what they were receiving in jobless benefits.”

— Jan Roeser, regional economist with the Idaho Department of Labor

Jerome County and Mini-Cassia.

“The thing is in our area is that there are part-time jobs available,” said Jan Roeser, regional economist with the Idaho Department of Labor. “If jobless workers can string together enough of them, they could earn more than what they were receiving in jobless benefits.”

But the Twin Falls micropolitan area, which includes surrounding communities, reported that its unemployment rate increased one-tenth of a percentage point to 7.8 percent. The unemployment rate in the Burley area increased three-tenths of a percentage point to 7.2 percent. The regional unemployment rate is still more than two full percentage points higher than May 2009. The state unemployment rate is hovering around 9 percent.

The Conference Board, a non-profit global business organization supported by business executives, listed only two jobs in April for every seven unemployed Idaho workers.

The extended benefits were also adding millions of dollars to state and regional economies.

The $25 federal supplement alone injected more than $1 million a week into the Idaho economy, and federal extended benefit payments exceeded regular state benefit payments this year.

Last week, unemployment benefits in Idaho totaled more than $11 million — $4.7 million in regular benefits and $5.9 million in federal extended benefits.

Homebuilders less confident in recovery

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Homebuilders are feeling less confident in the recovery now that government incentives for buyers have expired.

Their pessimism could drag on the economy, which may not benefit so much from the job creation that construction typically generates throughout various sectors.

The National Association of Home Builders said Tuesday its housing market index fell to 17 in June, sinking five points after two straight months of increases. It was the lowest level since March.

Builders had been more optimistic earlier in the year when buyers could take advantage of tax credits of up to $8,000. Those incentives expired on April 30, although buyers with signed contracts have until June 30 to complete their purchases.

Experts anticipate home sales will slow in the second half of this year. In addition, high unemployment and tight mortgage lending continue to keep many buyers on the sidelines.

The drop in activity is “a wake-up call to the fact that the market will struggle to stand on its own two feet without the tax credit,” wrote Paul Dales, an economist with Capital Economics. “The double-dip in both activity and prices that we have been expecting for some time appears to have begun.”

New homes sales made up about 7 percent of the housing market last year. That’s down from about 15 percent before the bust.

It’s also bad news for the economy. Each new home built creates the equivalent of three jobs for a year and generates about $90,000 in taxes paid to local and

Walmart to hire 600 workers in Northern Idaho

Walmart officials say they will begin hiring about 600 workers for jobs at two stores in northern Idaho.

Officials say the hiring process for the Post Falls store will begin Monday and for the Hayden store on July 5. The hiring center for both stores will be in Post Falls, where job seekers can fill out an application starting Monday.

The Post Falls store is scheduled to open Aug. 18, and the store in Hayden about a month later.

Company spokesman Josh Phair said the Hayden store will hire between 300 and 350 workers, and the Post Falls store 250 to 300.

Phair says the ratio of full time and part time jobs hasn’t been determined. The average wage for a full-time Walmart employee in Idaho is $11.41 per hour.

Judge OKs N. Idaho lumber mill sale

GRANGEVILLE — A judge in northern Idaho has authorized the sale of Three Rivers Timber Inc. at Kamiah to a Seattle commercial fisherman.

Second District Judge John H. Bradbury on Friday signed the order allowing Michael Burns to pay $2.65 million for the real estate and equipment from the mill that shut down in 2008.

Bradbury also ruled the deal cannot be finalized before noon on June 21. That gives Portland, Ore.-based Iverness Inc., the company administering the assets of the defunct mill, time to accept a higher bid if it is more than $2.8 million.

Wells Fargo foreclosed on the former owners for defaulting on millions of dollars in loans. Iverness is trying to sell the property for $6 million.

Colo. man arrested on solo mission to kill bin Laden

Associated Press writers

DENVER — An American construction worker has been detained in the mountains of Pakistan after authorities there found him carrying a sword, pistol and night-vision goggles on a solo mission to hunt down and kill Osama bin Laden.

Catching bin Laden was Gary Brooks Faulkner's "passion," his brother said, noting that the 50-year-old has been to Pakistan at least six times, learned some of the local language and even grew a long beard to blend in. Relatives and acquaintances said Faulkner is a devout, good-humored Christian who requires dialysis and did time in prison years ago.

"A lot of kids grow up and say, 'I want to be Rambo; you know? Well, he is,'" said Faulkner's brother, Scott Faulkner, 43.

Gary Faulkner arrived June 3 in the town of Bumburate and stayed in a hotel there. The Greeley, Colo., man was assigned a police guard, as is common for foreigners visiting remote parts of Pakistan.

When he checked out without informing police, officers began looking for him, according to the top police officer in the Chitral region, Mumtaz Ahmad Khan. Faulkner was found late Sunday in a forest.

"We initially laughed when he told us that he wanted to kill Osama bin Laden," Khan said. But when officers seized the weapons and night-vision equipment, "our suspicion grew." He said the American was trying to cross into the nearby Afghan region of Nuristan.

Chitral and Nuristan are among several rumored hiding places for bin Laden along the mountainous border between Afghanistan and Pakistan.

Pakistan's military and intelligence establishment generally deny the possibility that bin Laden is hiding somewhere along the Pakistan-Afghan border, as Western intelligence agencies believe.

On Tuesday, Faulkner was being questioned by intelligence officials in Peshawar, Pakistan's main northwestern city. He has not been charged with any wrongdoing.

Scott Faulkner dropped his brother off at Denver's airport May 30, and the two discussed the possibility Faulkner would not return alive from his search of bin Laden.

"He talked about why he was so passionate" to find bin Laden, Scott Faulkner recalled, adding that his brother retained vivid memories of the Sept. 11 attacks. "He has not forgotten."

But Scott Faulkner insisted his brother was on a rational mission.

"He's as normal as you and I," Scott Faulkner said. "He's just very passionate, and, as a Christian, he felt, when Osama mocked this country after 9/11, and it didn't feel like the military was doing enough, it became his passion, his mission, to track down Osama, and kill him, or bring him back alive."

Biker killed in shootout with ATF agents

OLD ORCHARD BEACH — Federal agents attempting to arrest two members of the Outlaws motorcycle gang as part of a seven-state sweep shot and killed one of them in an early morning gunfight Tuesday.

More than two dozen Outlaws members across the country were charged Tuesday in Virginia with participating in a criminal enterprise.

A SWAT team from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives was fired upon at about 6 a.m. while attempting to arrest Thomas "Tomcat" Mayne, 59, the regional treasurer for the Outlaws, along with Kenneth Chretien, according to ATF spokesman Michael Campbell.

Mayne was killed. Two women also were in the house, but nobody else was injured in the shootout, according to the attorney general's office.

The SWAT team was used because the ATF viewed the suspects as being part of a "violent criminal enterprise," said Glenn N. Anderson, ATF special agent in charge of the Boston office. He said the agents were fired at when they arrived.

Authorities found a shotgun and a handgun inside the house after the shooting.

Mayne was one of 27 members and associates of the American Outlaw Association motorcycle gang charged in the indictment unsealed Tuesday in Richmond, Va. A federal grand jury charged many of the defendants with racketeering for allegedly participating in a criminal enterprise involved in attempted murder, kidnapping, extortion, illegal gambling and drug dealing. Defendants are from Wisconsin, Maine, Montana, North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina and Virginia.

WASHINGTON

Dems slam Iowa Republican for saying Obama favors blacks over whites

WASHINGTON — Democrats on Tuesday denounced an Iowa Republican congressman who says President Obama favors blacks over whites, and a GOP candidate from Colorado canceled a fundraiser the Iowan was to keynote.

Rep. Steve King, known for sometimes incendiary remarks about immigration, Abu Ghraib and other issues, criticized Obama and Attorney General Eric Holder, who also is black, in an interview Monday on G. Gordon Liddy's nationally syndicated radio talk show.

"I'm offended by Eric Holder and the president also, their posture," said King, 61. "It looks like Eric Holder said that white people in America are cowards when it comes to race."

King continued: "The president has demonstrated that he has a default mechanism in him that breaks down the side of race on the side that favors the black person in the case of professor Gates and officer Crowley."

He was alluding to last year's incident in which Obama commented on a white police officer's arrest of a black professor from Harvard University.

As news of King's remarks spread, GOP House candidate Cory Gardner of Colorado canceled a planned $100 per-plate fundraiser where King was to speak. King's appearance was also canceled at a Colorado tea party gathering where he was scheduled to appear.

"His comments do not represent the tea party," said Owen Loftus, a spokesman for Republican Ken Buck, who is running for Senate in Colorado.

KYRGYZSTAN

Violence subsides but resentments linger after more than 4 days of riots

JALAL-ABAD — The main road through this rustic town on the edge of the rich fields of the Fergana Valley offers a telling view of the destruction that has unfolded in southern Kyrgyzstan in recent days.

On one side of the street, the University of People's Friendship is a charred ruin, a symbol of ethnic harmony no more. Across the road, a community TV station has been left a blackened shell. Then come the torched cafes and shops, followed by seven blocks of burned-out Uzbek homes, a miserable procession interrupted only by the trees that residents cut down in a desperate bid to slow rampaging Kyrgyz mobs.

After more than four days of ethnic clashes that have left hundreds dead, the violence appeared to subside Tuesday in Jalal-Abad. In an interview, Kyrgyzstan's defense minister said the government had largely restored order here and in the nearby city of Osh and was dropping its appeal for an international peacekeeping force to intervene.

Even here amid the rubble of Lenin Street, which had been a center of the fighting, there was a sign of progress: a mixed crowd of ethnic Kyrgyz and Uzbeks stood peacefully together to pick up emergency rations of noodles, flour and cooking oil. Many said it was the first time they had dared venture outside since the killing began.

But when residents were asked about what had happened — about why neighbors had turned against each other so suddenly and in such brutal fashion — the simmering anger between the Kyrgyz and the minority Uzbeks quickly surfaced, hinting at the continuing volatility of the situation.

N. IRELAND

Bloody Sunday report blames British soldiers; Cameron apologizes

LONDONDERRY — Relatives of 13 Catholic demonstrators shot to death by British troops on Northern Ireland's Bloody Sunday cried tears of joy Tuesday as an epic fact-finding probe ruled that their loved ones were innocent and the soldiers entirely to blame for the 1972 slaying.

The investigation took 12 years and nearly 200 million pounds ($290 million), but the victims' families and the British, Irish and U.S. governments welcomed the findings as priceless to heal one of the gaping wounds left from Northern Ireland's four-decade conflict that left 3,700 dead.

Thousands of residents of Londonderry — a predominantly Catholic city long synonymous with Britain's major mass killing from the Northern Ireland conflict — gathered outside the city hall to watch the verdict come in, followed by a lengthy apology from Prime Minister David Cameron in London that moved many locals long distrustful of British leaders.

The probe found that soldiers opened fire without justification at unarmed, fleeing civilians and lied about it for decades, refuting an initial British investigation that branded the demonstrators as Irish Republican Army bombers and gunmen.

Scientists: Oil leaking up to 2.52 million gallons daily

By Ray Henry
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — Scientists provided a new estimate for the amount of oil gushing from the ruptured well in the Gulf of Mexico on Tuesday that indicates it could be leaking up to 2.52 million gallons of crude a day.

A government panel of scientists said that the ruptured well is leaking between 1.47 million and 2.52 million gallons of oil daily. The figures move the government's worst-case estimates more in line with what an independent team had previously thought was the maximum size of the spill.

"This estimate brings together several scientific methodologies and the latest information from the sea floor, and represents a significant step forward in our effort to put a number on the oil that is escaping from BP's well," Energy Secretary Steven Chu said in a statement.

The latest numbers reflect an increase in the flow that scientists believe happened after undersea robots earlier this month cut off a kinked pipe near the sea floor that was believed to be restricting the flow of oil, just as a bend in a garden hose reduces water flow. BP officials has estimated that cutting the kinked pipe likely increased the flow by up 20 percent.

The pipe was removed so BP could install a containment cap that is trapping leaking oil and drawing it a ship waiting on the ocean surface.

The new numbers are based on a combination of scientific data, including an analysis of high-resolution video taken by underwater robots, pressure meters, sonar, and measurements of oil collected by the containment device on top of the well.

It is the fourth — and perhaps not last — time the federal government has had to increase its estimate of how much oil is gushing. At one point, the federal government claimed only 42,000 gallons were spilling a day and then it upped the number to 210,000 gallons.

As of Tuesday, the maximum amount of oil that has gushed out of the well since the April 20 explosion is 116 million gallons, according to the estimates by scientists advising the federal government.

BP PLC now has a containment system in place in the Gulf of Mexico that has been capturing nearly 648,000 gallons of oil daily. That system was forced to shut down as a precaution Tuesday morning because of a fire on a ship connected to it. BP said the collection system was not damaged and about five hours after the fire, the containment operations resumed.

Lightning destroys 6-story-tall Jesus statue in Ohio

MONROE, Ohio (AP) — A six-story statue of Jesus Christ was struck by lightning and burned to the ground, leaving only a blackened steel skeleton and pieces of foam that were scooped up by curious onlookers Tuesday.

The “King of Kings” statue, one of southwest Ohio’s most familiar landmarks, had stood since 2004 at the evangelical Solid Rock Church along Interstate 75 in Monroe, just north of Cincinnati.

The lightning strike set the statue ablaze around 11:15 p.m. Monday, Monroe police dispatchers said.

The sculpture, about 62 feet tall and 40 feet wide at the base, showed Jesus from the torso up and was nicknamed Touchdown Jesus because of the way the arms were raised, similar to a referee signaling a touchdown. It was made of plastic foam and fiberglass over a steel frame, which is all that remained Tuesday.

The nickname is the same used for a famous mural of the resurrected Jesus that overlooks the Notre Dame football stadium.

The fire spread from the statue to an adjacent amphitheater but was confined to the attic area, and no one was injured, police Chief Mark Neu said.

Estimated damage from the fire was set at $700,000 — $300,000 for the statue and $400,000 for the amphitheater, Fire Capt. Richard Mascarella said Tuesday.

The Ohio State Highway Patrol was at the scene Tuesday to prevent traffic jams and potential accidents from motorists stopping along the highway to take photographs.

The patrol began issuing citations about 4 p.m. Tuesday to motorists for stopping on the side of the highway, dispatcher Adam Brown said. The number of gawkers coupled with construction had slowed I-75 traffic in the area to a crawl, the state Highway Patrol said.

Some people were scooping up pieces of the statue’s foam from the nearby pond to take home with them, said church co-pastor Darlene Bishop.

“This meant a lot to a lot of people,” she said.

Keith Lewis, of nearby Middletown, arrived at the church around 7 a.m. Tuesday to photograph the remains for his wife.

Lewis said he had viewed the statue as both an oddity and an inspiration. Cassie Browning, a church member from Dayton, said she was driving home when she saw smoke and noticed the statue was missing.

Travelers on I-75 often were startled to come upon the huge statue by the roadside, but many said America needs more symbols like it. So many people stopped at the church campus that church officials had to build a walkway to accommodate them.

Bishop said the statue will be rebuilt.

PROMISES MADE, PROMISES KEPT

Idahoans love our wild places, but we need to work together to protect them. Written by Idahoans for Idahoans, the Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act will do just that and more.

- It will protect the core of the Boulder-White Cloud Mountain Range and preserve the extraordinary hunting, hiking and fishing opportunities that we enjoy and that support the local economies.
- It will promote economic development in local communities with $6 million dollars for community centers and health care clinics, plus provide land for much needed fire stations, public parks, a school bus turnaround and other public purposes.
- The popular Frog Lake Loop will remain open to current motorized use and the legislation will forever protect motorized access in the prized Germania Trail Corridor.
- And it will facilitate $3 million in assistance for ranchers.

We appreciate the leadership and vision of the entire Idaho congressional delegation in introducing this legislation and moving it forward. CIEDRA is good for Idaho’s land and good for our economy.

Thank you, Mike Simpson, Mike Crapo, Jim Risch and Walt Minnick!

BURLEY — At first glance, Charlie's Cafe was quiet on a recent Monday afternoon. Four men sat at a center table, sipping coffee over empty plates. Another booth held a family eating french fries and drinking soda.

One by one, people stood to leave. On their way out, they all took a minute to chat with owner Jose Luis Ochoa, who shook their hands and called them by name.

Ochoa has owned Charlie's Cafe since 1989. He draws some customers with the food. Others come because of his connection to the community.

Ochoa first came to the United States from Mexico's Mexicali area in the 1970s. After Ochoa spent three months working fields in San Jose, Calif., his cousin set him up with restaurant work, and the owners eventually gave him a full-time job. It was a natural fit for Ochoa, whose father used to cook Mexican and American food in San Francisco.

"I always enjoyed cooking at home and stuff," he said.

He moved to the Burley soon after and got another job. Other than a short stint in Indio, Calif., he continued to work in Cassia County restaurants until the late '80s, learning American cuisine and waiting from head chefs at the Burley Inn and other restaurants.

Hoping to follow in his business-owning father's footsteps, Ochoa contacted a real estate agent in 1989 and asked whether he knew of any restaurants for sale in southern Idaho. The real estate agent called back 30 minutes later to tell him of one in Burley — Charlie's Cafe, a short drive from where Ochoa and his family lived.

When Ochoa took over in 1989, customers expressed concern that their favorite diner would turn into a Mexican restaurant. Ochoa reassured them by keeping the menu unchanged at first.

Every week or so, he introduced a new dish — sometimes Mexican cuisine, sometimes American — and kept close track of what was popular and what wasn't.

By the end of his first year, he had made the menu his own while retaining the same skeptical regulars.

Missed the farmers market this week?

New Ketchum, Twin Falls stores broaden your options for buying local produce

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Hurley Hamilton didn't have to wait for Tuesday's farmers market in Ketchum last week to buy fresh produce from local growers in the Wood River and Magic Valley.

She simply walked out the door of her Thunderpaws Pet Shoppe, went next door and picked up some fresh baby turnips from Fair Mountain Farm in Fairfield, sausage from a bison rancher in Nampa and some Yukon Gold potatoes already diced for hash browns at the new NourishMe store.

NourishMe, at 151 Main St. in Ketchum, is designed to give south-central Idaho producers yet one more place to sell their wares while giving Wood River Valley residents a reliable option for purchasing locally raised products throughout the week.

And Local Dish, set to open July 1 in Twin Falls, will offer Magic Valley residents a similar option.

"It will be a godsend to locavores to be able to walk in off the street and buy stuff like organic beef," said Douglas Wilson of Ketchum.

NourishMe's owner, Julie Johnson, had worked with Idaho's Bounty — an Internet-based cooperative connecting buyers with local producers — baking flaxseed crackers flavored with jalapeno, olives, basil and other savories. She had lamented that farmers had to take home what they didn't sell each week at the farmers market.

"A store like mine could take that off their hands," she said.

Her experience at Natural Niche, a Ketchum vitamin and supplement store, convinced her of the benefits of pairing healthy food with supplements.

"I can push supplements all day long, but you get your best nutrition from food. I thought: Why can't you do it all in one place?" Johnson said.

The result is a bright, sunny storefront that sports several shelves of nutraceuticals like beta-carotene, acai powder and cat's claw.

Specialty products like Udi's gluten-free lemon streusel muffins, chia seeds, black beluga lentils and organic sprouted wheat berries line the NourishMe grocery shelves. And refrigerators house Ballard Farms cheese curds from Gooding, fresh local asparagus, Mother Theresa's Pear and Plum Chutney and pies from Buhl, homemade applesauce, red potato soup and strawberries that Glen Shepherd just delivered 20 minutes earlier from his small Hagerman Valley farm.

Kiki Paragary, who worked in Akasha Organics and the organic section at Williams Market for 12 years, busies herself in the kitchen, serving up a soup of the day, along with vegetarian sandwiches, fruit smoothies and take-home items such as raw food lasagna made with cashew cheese and topped with pesto. And co-owner Naomi Thomas serves up ZenMatcha tea.

"I swear by the tea," said Jana Skinner of Ketchum. "It's full of antioxidants and a good pick-me-up that you never come down from. Naomi got me started on it awhile ago, and I've lost 30 pounds drinking the tea and working out."

James Reed and his wife, Leslee, will open Local Dish at 788 Falls Ave. next to the Turf Club in Twin Falls on July 1.

They'll sell locally raised meats and vegetables, baked goods, cheese and dairy products, including Buhl-based Cloverleaf Creamery's ice cream, produce from Reed's greenhouse near Banbury Hot Springs and local wine and beer.

Young foodies are more exhibitionist, less highbrow

By Michael Hill
Associated Press writer

Young people immersed in food culture today are as likely to praise a fish taco from a food truck as filet mignon from a four-star restaurant.

They didn't read Gourmet magazine — the longtime bible of highbrow culinary taste stopped printing last year. But they do follow blogs and websites that feature everything from straight recipes to goofy fusions to bite-by-bite dispatches about last night's dinner. And many young connoisseurs are kitchen amateurs.

"The twentysomethings right now are probably one of the most educated food generations ever. And by that I mean they can talk to you about foie gras or cooking sous vide or the flavor profile of a Bordeaux," said Cheryl Brown, editorial director of the popular website Slashfood.

"But what they can't do is truss a chicken or cook a pot roast. So there's this funny balance of having an amazing breadth of food knowledge but not having the kitchen basics to back it up," she said.

Try to imagine a young Julia Child showing viewers how to make awesome 2-minute sashimi burgers or Robert Parker blogging about Red Bull and reislring for an idea of how attitudes have changed. Whether this amounts to a refreshing democratization of hoity-toity food culture or an invasion of "foodiots" depends on your point of view.

But it's clear that Internet culture, with its tendency to knock down old-guard authority, continues to be the driving force. Consider cookbooks.

Cooking enthusiasts traditionally had shelves groaning with cookbooks, maybe old reliables like "The Joy of Cooking" mixed with a Moosewood offering. David Brian Kraus, who hosts a food blog, poses in his kitchen in Albany, N.Y. Kraus loves to cook but has only one cookbook. When Kraus wanted tips on preparing a whole fish, he headed to the Web and did a 'mishmash' of stuff he liked from different sites.

Kraus, a 24-year-old from Albany, N.Y., loves to cook but has only one cookbook. When Kraus wanted tips on preparing a whole fish, he headed to the Web and did a "mishmash" of stuff he liked from different sites.

"I don't really have cookbooks, probably because in our generation we're more for the dynamic media," Kraus said. "We want people to have a comment on our recipes."

Kraus posts his creations on his EatInAlbany.com blog, one of a mind-boggling number of food sites running the gamut from the heavily trafficked Epicurious and Food2 to bloggers like himself.

If it's about food, it's online: Tips on slicing flank steak? Check. Recipes for fugu and frog croquettes? Yes and yes. How about what 34-year-old New York City librarian Emily Drabinski had for lunch yesterday? You bet.

"I guess I wanted a reason to put a stake down in my day, every day," explains Drabinski, who blogs at WhatIAteForLunchAndWhy.com.

Much of this information is useful, or at least interesting. But in a world where anyone can contribute to food discussions, anyone does. Highbrow types are hardly immune, contributing reports about eating fried squid or tuna with wasabi mayonnaise.

"Foodiots," scoffed Joe Pompeo in a New York Observer article last fall. He argued eating "has become a dominant, and perhaps obnoxious, part of our everyday cultural discourse."

Laura Shapiro, a culinary historian and author of "Julia Child: A Life," sees it more like a best-of-times-worst-of-times era in food culture. The Web provides an unprecedented range of useful expert culinary advice. But there's also "these dimwits who go to 16 restaurants a week and say, 'We had this there, but couldn't get in there! Who cares?'"

Easy to eat while maintaining a level of sophistication, wraps are great for a dinner al fresco.

All-in-one wrap perfect for outdoor eats in summer

By Jim Romanoff
By The Associated Press

Summer meals are best when they are simple. But that doesn't mean you have to give up sophisticated flavors.

Thai-style chicken wraps are an exotic all-in-one, a handheld meal that contains protein, salad and starch rolled up into a neat package that's perfect for outdoor dining. All you'll need are some plates, napkins and a few forks for the sweet and tangy mango salsa that accompanies the wraps.

If you're planning a picnic, you can refrigerate the wraps and serve them cold. Skip the salsa to make for easy packing. Or if you like, serve it in disposable cups with plastic forks.

THAI-STYLE CHICKEN WRAPS WITH MANGO SALSA

Start to finish: 30 minutes.
Servings: 4.

For the salsa:
1 small mango, peeled and diced
2 tablespoons coarsely chopped fresh cilantro
1 tablespoon lime juice

For the wraps:
1 1/2 tablespoons toasted sesame oil
3 cups shredded Napa cabbage
1 cup shredded carrots
3/4 cup sliced scallions
3/4 cup lightly salted peanuts, coarsely chopped

2 tablespoons lime juice
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
2 cups shredded cooked chicken
1/2 cup coarsely chopped fresh mint
4 burrito-size (large) flour tortillas
1/4 cup purchased peanut sauce

To make the salsa, in a small bowl, stir together the mango, cilantro and lime juice. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve.

To make the wraps, in a large skillet over medium-high, heat the sesame oil. Add cabbage and carrots and saute until the vegetables begin to soften, about 2 minutes. Stir in the scallions and peanuts. Add the lime juice, soy sauce and black pepper, then saute until the mixture is heated through, about 2 minutes longer.

Remove the pan from the heat and stir in the chicken and mint.

Spread the center of each tortilla with about 1 tablespoon of peanut sauce. Top with a quarter of the chicken filling. Fold in 2 ends of the tortilla, then roll up. Place the wraps on a microwave safe plate, seam-side down.

Heat the wraps in the microwave on high until heated through, about 1 1/2 minutes, or in a 350 F oven for about 5 minutes. Serve with the mango salsa.

Patrons will also be able to purchase granola, muffins and homemade yogurt to eat at the cafe, as well as barbecued pulled pork, grilled pork loin sandwiches, vegetarian burgers and salads.

In time, Reed said, Local Dish will offer lunch and dinner specials.

"We're not going to have a menu. It'll be a seasonally driven moving target based on what the producers bring. In other words, don't expect squash soup until fall," he said.

Reed said his experience as co-founder of Idaho's Bounty taught him where the best fruits and vegetables are. And he says markets like his will prove their worth if the flow of food supplies into south-central Idaho is interrupted by a food security issue or by high gas prices that force truckers to stop hauling.

"It's so incredibly important we localize food, and the only way that can happen is to create local markets," he said, praising the efforts of businesses like the Boise Co-Op and Wood River Valley-based Atkinsons' Market to buy local produce and goods.

"There's no question that the best way to offer food is through a market. But the tragedy of a farmers market is that it's not convenient and not a big enough event."

Reed said the food he sells won't be strictly organic but will adhere to standards including humane treatment of animals and being pesticide-free.

"It'll be about healthy food. And good-tasting food. If we're going to cook a burger, we're going to cook the best burger in Twin Falls," he said. "We'll know who raised the beef, who baked the buns, who raised the onion."

Many of those original regulars are still around. As Ochoa sat in a booth with a cup of coffee the afternoon of June 7, he pointed to an older man across the dining room. See him? Chachi used to sit on his lap and pull on his ears, he said, referring to his now 18-year-old daughter. The man's wife made the ceramic creamer and sugar holders on all the tables.

As he left the restaurant, Vealtn Teal stopped by Ochoa's table and ribbed him about Mexicans taking over and stealing jobs. (He gets that a lot, Ochoa said, and it's all in fun.)

"He's a very nice guy," Teal added. "I kind of like him."

But old age has claimed many of the men who used to fill Ochoa's seats. While the diner would have been packed with the coffee-drinking seniors on a weekday afternoon

Key limes tart, herbal and complex

By Noelle Carter
Los Angeles Times

At first glance, Key limes are hard to resist. Bright green, shading to lemon yellow, smooth and compact, they're adorably cute — yeah, cute, just like a little puppy. It's hard not to want to snatch a bag or two along with your other groceries.

Of course, once you have gotten them home, you have to use them. You can break out the cocktail shaker — a no-brainer — Key limes often have been referred to as the “bartender's lime,” and they readily complement a host of libations. But then what? Fix margaritas for a small party and you still might be left with several cute little limes, sitting sadly alone on your counter. What to do?

You might be tempted to substitute them for the larger limes, lemons or even some other citrus in a recipe, but be careful, because these cute little puppies pack a powerful bite.

Key lime pie can be made with graham cracker or pastry crust, and topped with meringue or whipped cream.

Pair them with the right ingredients, however, and they can add depth and dimension to an otherwise ordinary dish. Give them a little room and they can add wonderful complexity, shining as a main flavor, highlighting a layered harmony, even working as a seasoning.

After you get over the initial acidity, you might notice the herbal notes — Key limes have their own harmony going on — a bouquet almost. They're not a one-note fruit.

The key to cooking with them is balance. Because their flavor and nose are so assertive, Key limes don't always go well with other flavors. You really need to fine-tune to get a good balance.

Along with cocktails, probably the most popular way to use Key limes is in the eponymous pie. About the only thing everyone agrees on is that it includes Key lime juice. Most recipes combine the juice with sweetened condensed milk and egg to form a rich custard. After that, almost anything goes. It can be spooned into either a graham cracker or pastry crust, and topped with either meringue or whipped cream.

Many older recipes do not call for baking the custard even; the lime juice alone thickens the mixture over time to “set” the custard.

Cookbook author Rose Levy Beranbaum takes the pie in a different direction, which I like better. She lightens the custard with a bit of Italian meringue. Not only does it improve the texture, but it also helps distinguish the flavors on the palate, brightening the lime. The custard is baked in a classic graham cracker crust (baking helps to thicken the texture and firm up the slices) and topped with the remaining meringue, which is baked just long enough to slightly brown the edges.

Incidentally, Beranbaum prefers the Persian lime for the pie. She says the Key lime's “bitterness seemed to penetrate the sweetness.” I prefer the punchiness of the Key lime.

One quick note here: You can't bottle fresh flavor. Packaged Key lime juice may look easy, but it tastes like the shortcut that it is. Generally made from concentrate and treated for preservation, it lacks punch and often has metallic undertones.

Anyway, it's not hard to find fresh Key limes in most Mexican markets. Look for limes that are heavy for their weight, green shading to yellow (yellow signals ripeness and makes for a slightly less tart lime). Store them at cool room temperature because refrigeration can speed decay.

It seems, more often than not, that Key limes (and limes in general) appear in sweet recipes, but they can be just as great in savory dishes.

Again, balance is the key. Sweet dishes tend to “tame” lime with sugar or other sweeteners, toning it down and softening it. At the same time, in many savory dishes, the sharp flavor is often contrasted with a spice and/or rich texture, as with guacamole. Lime juice is frequently used in marinades and dressings. Toss some arugula with grapefruit and avocado, then finish the salad with a light dressing of lime juice, honey and cumin. It's a simple presentation, but the flavors can be stunning — the balance comes from the sweetness of honey, the spice of cumin and the richness of avocado.

Or try a ceviche. Toss cubed fish in lime juice just until it turns opaque. The acid from the lime firms the fish, much like cooking, and it's balanced by fresh-chopped serrano or jalapeno chile and cilantro. Indeed, lime and chile are frequently paired. Try combining them for a spicy, tangy marinade. It works well with chicken and makes for a particularly fun take on hot wings.

Or try a spicy Thai-inspired marinade: lime juice, chiles, onion, ginger and garlic. Season with a little soy sauce and toss in a bit of chipotle powder to add a smoky element. Marinate a couple pounds of chicken wings for a few hours, up to overnight, then fry until golden. Brush the wings with a sweet peanut sauce and finish them in the oven until the sauce cooks to a nice shellac. The combination of flavors is striking: First, you get the sweet peanut sauce, followed by the sharp acid and heat from the marinade.

Key limes also go particularly well with coconut. While the lime can be overwhelmingly tart, it works nicely with the rich, sweet flavor of coconut.

Try pairing Key lime and coconut in a scone. Substitute coconut milk and a little fresh lime juice for the liquid in a standard recipe, adding some toasted coconut for crunch and a little fresh lime zest to brighten the composition.

It's a fun recipe, not overly sweet, and you don't have to wait as long for scones to chill as you would a pie. Besides, they're cute. But these puppies won't bite.

KEY LIME PIE

Adapted from “The Pie and Pastry Bible” by Rose Levy Beranbaum. This recipe requires a 9-inch pie plate.

Graham cracker crumb crust:
1 package graham crackers (11 double crackers, about 4 7/8 by 2 3/8 inches)
2 tablespoons sugar
5 tablespoons butter, melted

1. Heat the oven to 350 degrees.
2. To make the crust by hand, place the crackers in a freezer bag and use a rolling pin to crush them into fine crumbs. In a medium bowl, combine the crumbs and sugar and toss with a fork to blend. Stir in the melted butter and toss to incorporate it. To make the crust using a food processor, process the crackers with the sugar until the crackers become fine crumbs, about 20 seconds. Add the melted butter and pulse just until incorporated, about 10 times.

3. Using your fingers or the back of a spoon, press the mixture into the bottom of the pie pan and partway up the sides. To keep the crumbs from sticking to your fingers, it helps to place a piece of plastic wrap over the crumbs and press them through the wrap. Then switch to a flat-bottomed, straight-sided measuring cup or glass to smooth the crumbs over the bottom and all the way up the sides. Be sure to press the bottom thoroughly so that the crumbs are evenly distributed. Place the crust in the oven and bake just to set the crust (the crust will color just slightly), about 6 minutes.

Filling and assembly:
4 eggs (at room temperature), separated and divided
1 1/4 cups (one 14-ounce can) sweetened condensed milk
1 1/2 teaspoons finely grated Key lime zest
3/4 cup fresh Key lime juice
1/2 cup sugar, preferably superfine
2 tablespoons water
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 tablespoon powdered sugar (optional)

1. In a medium mixing bowl, lightly whisk the egg yolks with the sweetened condensed milk. Gradually beat in the lime juice. (It will cause the mixture to thicken.) Beat in the zest and set aside.

2. In the bowl of a stand mixer, or in a large mixing bowl with an electric mixer, beat the egg whites until foamy. Add the cream of tartar and beat until stiff peaks form when the beater is raised slowly. Set aside.

3. In a small, heavy saucepan, stir together the sugar and water until the sugar is completely moistened. Heat, stirring occasionally, until the sugar dissolves and the syrup begins to bubble. Stop stirring and reduce the heat to a gentle simmer and continue cooking until a thermometer inserted reads 236 degrees (soft ball stage). Immediately remove from the heat.

4. With the mixer running at low speed, gently pour the syrup in a slow, steady stream over the whites until the syrup is incorporated. Continue beating on high speed until the outside of the bowl is no longer hot to touch uncomfortably, about 2 minutes.

5. Remove a scant 2 cups of the meringue and cover the remainder with plastic wrap. Set it aside.

6. Gently fold the scant 2 cups of meringue into the lime mixture and pour it into the crust. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes (to set the filling more firmly).

Remove the pie from the oven and spread the remaining meringue on top of the filling, starting from the outside edge of the crust, covering the crust, and working toward the center of the pie. If desired, for extra crunch, dust the meringue with optional powdered sugar.

7. Return the pie to the oven for 5 additional minutes. Then turn the oven to broil and brown the meringue for 20 seconds to 1 minute, watching to prevent burning, until the meringue is golden. Cool in a place away from drafts for at least 30 minutes, then refrigerate for at least 4 hours before serving. (The pie can be cut after 2 hours, but the slices hold their shape better after 4 hours.) Cut with a wet, thin-bladed knife. Store uncovered, refrigerated, up to 3 days.

THAI PEANUT CHICKEN WINGS

Marinade:
Zest of 3 Key limes
1/2 cup Key lime juice
1/4 cup water
1 small onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 teaspoon grated ginger
2 teaspoons chipotle powder
1 tablespoon plus 1/2 teaspoon soy sauce
1 to 4 Thai or serrano chiles, or to taste
2 pounds trimmed chicken wings, cut at the joint and wing tips removed (20 to 24 pieces)

1. In a blender, combine the lime zest and juice, water, onion, garlic, vanilla, ginger, chipotle powder, soy sauce and serrano chile. Blend until well pureed.

2. Place the trimmed wings in a large, sealable plastic bag. Pour over the marinade and eliminate as much air as possible before sealing the bag. Use your hands to massage the marinade through the bag over the wings. Refrigerate at least 4 hours, up to overnight.

Peanut sauce and assembly:
1 cup creamy peanut butter, preferably Skippy
1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons brown sugar, sifted to remove any lumps, plus extra to taste
2 tablespoons canola oil, more as needed to thin the sauce
2 tablespoons toasted sesame oil, more to taste

KEY LIME COCONUT SCONES

To toast shredded coconut, spread it out on a baking sheet and toast at 350 degrees, checking every couple of minutes and shaking the pan as needed, until coconut is golden, about 5 minutes.

3 cups (12 3/4 ounces) flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon Key lime zest
8 tablespoons (1 stick) cold butter, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons toasted shredded sweetened coconut
3/4 cup cold coconut milk
1/4 cup cold Key lime juice
2 tablespoons cream
1 teaspoon turbinado or coarse decorating sugar

1. Heat the oven to 375 degrees. In a large mixing bowl, whisk together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Whisk in the lime zest. Then cut in the butter until the mixture is crumbly. Stir in the toasted shredded coconut, then stir in the coconut milk and lime juice just until incorporated; the dough will be crumbly and look dry. Knead in the bowl a few times to bring the dough together into a single mass.

2. Turn the dough out onto a lightly floured work surface and press into a circle roughly 7 inches in diameter and 1 inch thick. Cut the dough into 8 wedges, and place the wedges on a parchment-lined baking sheet.

3. Brush the wedges with the cream and sprinkle over the turbinado sugar. Bake on the center rack until golden, about 25 to 30 minutes. Remove the scones to a rack to cool slightly. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Total time: 50 minutes, plus cooling time. Servings: 8.

Each scone: 397 calories; 6 grams protein; 49 grams carbohydrate; 2 grams fiber; 20 grams fat; 15 grams saturated fat; 36 milligrams cholesterol; 11 grams sugar; 488 milligrams sodium.

Dinner in 25 minutes: Flatbread pizza

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

A few minutes of assembly yields this tasty candidate for a quick lunch or dinner. The original recipe counts one 9-inch flatbread pizza as 2 servings, but we're thinking that those portions would be good for children. A teen-ager or hungry adult would most likely eat 1 flatbread pizza, or close to it.

Recipe author Pam Anderson uses nan, an Indian flatbread, as the base for this pizza, topped with pesto and Canadian bacon. But we found that using a whole-grain, non-Indian kind of flatbread called Flatout greatly reduced the calories and sodium. Both kinds of flatbread are available at grocery stores.

Serve with a green salad. Adapted from "The Athlete's Palate Cookbook," by Yishane Lee and the editors of Runner's World (Rodale, 2010).

FLATBREAD PIZZAS WITH CANADIAN BACON, ASPARAGUS AND FONTINA CHEESE

- 3 or 4 servings
- 8 to 10 asparagus spears
1 teaspoon extra-virgin olive oil
Salt (optional)
Freshly ground black pepper
2 ounces fontina cheese
3 ounces Canadian bacon
1/4 cup part-skim ricotta cheese
1/4 cup homemade or store-bought pesto

Three 9-inch flatbreads, such as Flatout Healthy Grain Honey Wheat flatbread (may substitute Fabulous Flats nan)

- Position an oven rack in the lower-middle of the oven; preheat to 425 degrees.
Trim off the woody ends of the asparagus, then cut the spears into 1 1/2- or 2-inch pieces. Toss in a bowl with the oil, salt, if desired, and pepper to taste.
Grate the cheese to yield 2/3 cup. Cut the Canadian bacon into thin strips.
Combine the ricotta and pesto in a medium bowl; mix well.
Arrange the flatbreads on a large baking sheet. Divide equal-size dollops of the ricotta-pesto mixture among them, spreading the

- mixture to within half an inch of the edges.
Scatter the asparagus and bacon pieces evenly over the surface of each pizza. Bake for about 10 minutes, until the breads are warm and the asparagus is bright green.
Remove the baking sheet from the oven and scatter equal amounts of the grated fontina over each pizza. Return to the oven and bake for about 5 minutes or until the breads are crisped at the edges and the fontina has melted.
Serve warm, either whole or cut into wedges.

Eating lighter, with sesame noodles

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

Sesame noodles are No. 1 on my takeout disappointment list. Over and over again, I see sesame noodles on a salad bar or nicely packaged in the ready-to-go aisle and I can't resist. Just as predictably, I'm underwhelmed. Greasy, slimy and mushy are three adjectives that come to mind. When I started to look at recipes, every one I saw was loaded up on fatty ingredients or was what I call a "dump recipe," with an ingredient list so long there was no chance I'd ever make it.

So I came up with this recipe, which is simple, quick and based on fresh ingredients. Start with fresh Asian noodles, available at some supermarkets and in the produce section of Asian markets. (Fresh linguine or spaghetti may be substituted.) Blanch snow peas and carrots, then combine them with slivered scallions, sesame oil, low-sodium soy sauce and toasted sesame seeds. That's it.

Look for the freshest snow peas you can find. They'll have a nice green color and should be very flexible.

SESAME NOODLE SALAD

6 to 8 main-course servings or 10 to 12 side-dish servings

1 pound fresh Chinese noodles (may substitute 12 ounces dried pasta)

4 ounces carrots, peeled and cut into matchsticks, about 2 inches long and 1/4-inch thick

4 ounces scallions or spring onions (3 to 4 large, 4 to 6 medium), trimmed and cut into 2-inch-long thin strips (julienne)

2 to 3 tablespoons sesame oil

2 to 3 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce

2 tablespoons sesame seeds, toasted

Cook the noodles according to the package directions. Rinse well with cold water until thoroughly cooled. Spread the noodles on a rimmed baking sheet or large piece of aluminum foil.

Fill a large bowl with ice water.

Bring a large pot of lightly salted water to a boil over high heat. Add the snow peas; once the water returns to a boil, cook for 1 minute. Use a slotted spoon to transfer the snow peas to the bowl of ice water. As soon as the snow peas are cool, transfer them to a clean towel to dry them. Cut the snow peas lengthwise into 1/4-inch matchsticks.

When the water returns to a boil, add the carrots; cook for 1 to 2 minutes, until the color brightens and the carrots become flexible. Drain and transfer to the ice water to cool, then place the carrots on the towel to dry.

Combine the noodles, snow peas, carrots, scallions, 2 tablespoons of the sesame oil, soy sauce and sesame seeds in a large bowl. Use tongs or your hands to thoroughly combine. Taste and add sesame oil, soy sauce or sesame seeds as needed.

Serve immediately, or cover and refrigerate for 2 to 3 days. Toss before serving.

Note: Toast the sesame seeds in a dry skillet over medium heat for 3 to 5 minutes, stirring or shaking them frequently, just until fragrant and lightly browned.

Love marinating? Learn to love flank steaks

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Flank steak may not be the most tender cut of meat you'll ever eat, but it could be the tastiest. And it's often a good bargain.

The flank is a long, flat and fibrous muscle, so it needs to be either seared and served moderately rare or braised until tender. Either way, carving this steak into thin slices across the grain at a 45 degree angle makes for a more pleasant bite.

The flank is thin and boneless (with almost no waste), so it's a perfect candidate for marinades, which will penetrate well.

This ginger-soy marinated flank steak can be grilled and enjoyed on its own or turned into this Asian-inspired sandwich by surrounding it with crunchy toasts, sweet and spicy mayo and a generous handful of peppery, fresh watercress.

Marinate the steak in the morning for a quick and delicious supper from the grill.

GINGER-SOY MARINATED FLANK STEAK SANDWICHES

Start to finish: 30 minutes (plus 2 to 24 hours marinating time). Servings: 4.

2 tablespoons rice vinegar
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
2 tablespoons reduced-sodium soy sauce
2 tablespoons canola oil
1/4 cup grated fresh ginger
2 teaspoons chili-garlic sauce, or more to taste
4 scallions, ends trimmed and thinly sliced
1 1/4 pounds flank steak
For the sandwich spread:
1/4 cup reduced-fat mayonnaise

Thin and boneless, a flank steak is a great cut of meat for a marinade like the one used in this recipe.

1 tablespoon honey
2 teaspoons chili-garlic sauce

For the sandwiches:
Eight 3/4-inch-thick slices crusty country-style bread
1 tablespoon extra-virgin oil

3 cups loosely packed watercress or arugula

In a small bowl, whisk together the vinegar, brown sugar and soy sauce until the sugar is dissolved. Whisk in the oil, ginger, chili-garlic sauce and scallions.

Place the steak in a shallow glass dish. Add the marinade and turn to coat the meat well on both sides. Cover and refrigerate for at least 2 hours and up to 24 hours, turning once.

Heat a gas grill to medium-high or light a charcoal fire.

Meanwhile, in a small bowl, stir together the mayonnaise, honey and chili-garlic sauce.

Set aside.
Brush both sides of the bread slices lightly with olive oil.

Grill the steak until the underside is well browned, about 5 minutes. Turn the steak over and grill about 4 minutes longer for medium-rare. While the steak is grilling, place the bread slices around it to toast, about 1 minute per side.

Let the steak stand for 5 minutes, then cut it across the grain into thin slices. Spread a thin layer of the chili-garlic mayonnaise on each toasted bread slice. Arrange the steak over 4 of the slices. Top with watercress or arugula and the remaining bread slices.

Taste of fried without all the oil

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Fish tacos certainly sound like a healthful meal. After all, experts encourage us to eat fish at least twice a week. And when you add a fresh tomato or fruit salsa, the dish seems downright virtuous.

That is, except for that whole deep-frying thing.

But you don't need a fryer to get the satisfying crunch. There are several tricks for crafting crisp fish (or meats and vegetables, for that matter) that involve only a fraction of the fat needed to fry.

"Oven frying" is a great technique that can be used for getting crispy deep-fried results without all the fat.

Pieces of fish, chicken or pork can be dipped in egg white or a mixture of egg white and Dijon mustard, then coated with light and crispy panko (Japanese-style) breadcrumbs. If you like, you can add spices to the crumbs to boost flavor.

For this crispy fish taco recipe, a different but equally effective method is used to create crunch. Strips of tilapia are dredged in Wondra flour (sold in baking aisles and often used for gravies), which creates an excellent crust even when fried in only a tiny amount of oil.

Cayenne pepper, cumin and white pepper give the coating a spicy flavor. And if you don't have Wondra flour or want a gluten-free alternative, rice flour works almost as well.

Top these crispy fish tacos with your favorite salsa or try this avocado-mango salsa, which will add layers of sweet, sour and creamy flavors to the spicy fish.

CRISPY FISH TACOS

Start to finish: 15 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 5 tablespoons Wondra flour
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/4 teaspoon salt, or to taste
- 1/4 teaspoon ground white pepper
- 1 pound tilapia fillets, cut into 1-by-2-inch strips
- 1 1/2 tablespoons canola oil
- Canola oil cooking spray

- 8 soft corn tortillas, warmed
- Avocado-mango salsa

In a medium bowl, combine the Wondra flour, cayenne, cumin, salt and white pepper.

Place the tilapia pieces in the flour mixture, then toss to coat well. Shake the fish fillets gently to remove excess flour.

In a large nonstick skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the fish, placing each piece in a bit of the oil. Cook until the bottom side is crispy and golden, 2 to 4 minutes.

Turn and cook until crispy, another 2 to 4 minutes. Serve immediately with warm corn tortillas and avocado-mango salsa.

AVOCADO-MANGO SALSA

- 1/4 teaspoon ground

- chipotle chili powder
- 1/4 teaspoon ground coriander
- 1/4 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1 small Hass avocado, peeled, pitted and cut into 1/2-inch dice
- 1 small, ripe mango, peeled, pitted and cut into a 1/2-inch dice
- 3 tablespoons lime juice

In a small dish, stir together the chipotle, coriander and salt. Set aside.

In a medium bowl combine the avocado, mango and lime juice. Toss lightly. Add the reserved spice blend and toss to coat.

Macarons take the cake in pastry craze

By Michelle Locke
For The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Watch out, cupcake! The macaron is angling to be the new darling of the pastry world. And it is one cute cookie.

"They're adorable," says Angie Dudley, who blogs about baking at Bakerella.com and recently took a class on how to make the meringue-based treats from France. "I think it's just the colors and they're so uniform, they're so perfect-looking if you do it right."

The dessert (pronounced MAC-a-RON) comes from France and consists of just a few ingredients, mainly egg white, ground almonds and sugar. They're often also called macaroons, which is confusing because a macaroon more commonly is a coconut-based sweet.

A proper macaron consists of two rounds of meringue cookies sandwiched together with filling. Flavor? You name it. Macarons generally are treated like a blank canvas that can take on just about any color and flavor.

Sandro Micheli, pastry chef at Adour Alain Ducasse at The St. Regis New York, has long been a fan of the confection, crisp outside, creamy inside. In the last year, he's noticed the appetite for macarons growing and has been teaching regular macaron classes.

Fans include Jason Wu, the designer who made Michelle Obama's inaugural gown, who says he's asked Micheli to create macarons in his signature color of gray to hand out at a fashion show.

Moment of baking truth: Macarons may be easy on the eye. But are they hard to make?

"Hard, no. Finicky, yes," says Helene Dujardin, a food stylist and photographer in Charleston, S.C., who taught the macaron class Dudley recently took. "No matter which method you use, French or Italian meringue, there are certain

These Strawberry-Spice Macarons, a version of the classic French cookie, have a slightly peppery taste in the shell that matches nicely with the sweet filling.

steps that require absolute focus. If the meringue is not stiff enough or too stiff before mixing in the almonds the shells can be too weak or too hollow. If the whole batter is over-mixed, the shells can spread too much, crack. It takes a little bit of practice."

Dujardin, originally from France, began making macarons regularly after moving to the United States about a decade ago and missing the treats.

Dudley, who lives in the Atlanta area, discovered macarons after coming across pictures of them on the Web. That's not surprising since this trend seems to have gotten a lot of its oomph from bloggers, with numerous posts and websites as well as "mac" baking sessions on Twitter.

"They are the perfect item for blogging," Dujardin, who blogs at Tartelette.com, said in an e-mail. "You can teach your readers something, express your process, frustrations and joys included, and mac-driven emotions are perfect writing materials — trust me!"

Visual appeal is a big part of macaron madness. The colorful confections make for spectacular displays whether built up into pyramids or other shapes or simply stacked neatly in a glass baker's case.

GET IN ON THE MACARON MADNESS

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

This classic French cookie is forever being reinvented with new flavor combinations. Almond, raspberry, pistachio and chocolate are among the most common. This light and slightly peppery combination of strawberry filling in a spiced shell is particularly nice.

If you'd like to experiment with different flavors, extracts can be mixed into the meringue just before adding to the almond flour. Dry flavoring ingredients should be mixed into the flour. And fillings can be a simple jam as in this recipe; ganache and buttercreams also are classic fillings.

STRAWBERRY-SPICE MACARONS

Start to finish: 2 hours (30 minutes active). Makes 24 cookies.

- 2/3 cup (3 ounces) almond flour
- 1 1/2 cups (5 1/4 ounces) powdered sugar
- 1/8 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/8 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1/8 teaspoon ground cardamom
- 1/8 teaspoon cinnamon
- 3 egg whites, room temperature
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- Strawberry jam, to fill
- Line 2 baking sheets with parchment paper.

In a food processor, combine the almond flour, powdered sugar, cloves, allspice, cardamom and cinnamon. Process for 1 minute. Using a mesh strainer, sift the mixture, twice, into a medium bowl. Set aside.

In the bowl of a stand mixer, combine the egg whites and salt. Using the whisk attachment, beat the mixture on medium-high until very frothy.

Slowly add the granulated sugar while continuing to beat until the mixture is bright white and makes firm, glossy peaks.

Fold half of the egg mixture into the almond flour mixture. Add the second half of the egg mixture and fold together until thoroughly combined. Fold carefully but thoroughly until the mixture is thick and it takes about 30 seconds for a dribbled line to flow back into the rest of the batter.

Put the mixture into a piping bag or a zip-close bag. Snip a 1/4-inch hole in the tip or corner of the bag.

Pipe 1-inch mounds onto the prepared baking sheets, leaving about 2 inches between mounds. The mounds should spread slightly. Tap the baking sheet on the counter firmly once or twice. Let sit at room temperature until a skin has formed and the mixture does not stick to your finger, about 20 to 30 minutes.

Heat the oven to 375 degrees.

Bake the cookies for 15 to 18 minutes, rotating the baking sheets top to bottom and front to back halfway through the baking time. The cookies should remain quite pale but be slightly firm to the touch. Let the cookies cool on the baking sheets.

Peel the parchment paper back from the cookies. If you have difficulty removing the paper from the cookies, put them in the freezer for a couple of minutes.

To assemble the cookies, spread a thin layer of strawberry jam on the flat side of half of the cookies. Top with a second cookie to make sandwiches. Store in an airtight container in the refrigerator for up to 3 days.

Eating lighter? Have your BLT anyway

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

Traditional BLTs can be delicious, but sometimes they're lacking. Apart from the usual caloric overload, there doesn't seem to be enough acidity in the sandwich to balance the fat.

My alternative offers a dose of vinegar to achieve that balance. To be sure the sandwich has enough bite, I use baby arugula, a wonderfully bitter green. Instead of regular, fatty bacon, I use pancetta, an Italian uncured bacon that is meaty and mild-tasting.

This open-faced sandwich is built with care. Slices of Italian or country bread are grilled, then topped with a lightly dressed salad. Grilling the pancetta instead of placing it under the broiler will keep it from shrinking. To seal the deal, a thin slice of fresh mozzarella melts from the heat of the grill or a hot oven. For me, it's lunch.

GRILLED ITALIAN BLTS

4 servings

- 2 ounces (about 4 cups) baby arugula, washed and spun dry
- 4 ounces vine-ripened tomato, peeled and seeded if desired, cut into 1/4- to 1/2-inch pieces (1 cup)
- 1 tablespoon oil
- 1 1/2 teaspoons red wine vinegar
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 4 slices Italian or country bread (about 3/4 ounces each)

- 8 thin slices pancetta (3 to 4 ounces total)
- 4 ounces fresh mozzarella cheese, cut into 8 thin slices

Prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, pre-heat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for about 4 or 5 seconds. Lightly coat a grill rack with oil and place it on the grill.

(Alternatively, position an oven rack 4 to 6 inches from the top broiler element; preheat the broiler.)

Toss together the arugula, tomato, oil, vinegar, salt and the pepper to taste in a medium bowl.

Grill or broil the bread for 2 to 3 minutes on each side, until it is lightly browned or has good grill marks. Transfer the bread to a large piece of aluminum foil.

Top each slice with one-quarter of the arugula-tomato salad; distribute the pancetta and then the mozzarella evenly to form open-faced sandwiches.

Return, with the foil, to the grill or broiler and cook for 3 to 4 minutes, until the cheese melts. Serve hot.

A quick wet rub, a massive amount of flavor

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

During summer, I'm likely to grill as many as four or five nights a week. It just makes sense for the weeknight kitchen.

Grilling is fast, easy and leaves almost no cleanup. Especially when you do the entire meal on the grill.

The only downside of grilling with the frequency I do is that meals can start to feel repetitive. That's why I am constantly experimenting with new rubs, brines, marinades and seasoning mixes — all of which are near effortless and versatile ways to add tons of flavor.

Burgers, for example, can be spiked with different seasonings for fresh approaches each night. Perhaps an Asian-inspired blend of fresh ginger, garlic, chives and mustard powder one night, then a mix of diced jalapenos and Jack cheese the next.

Pork and chicken can be brined in a mix of cool water, sugar, salt and whichever seasonings appeal to you. Beef (or in the case of this recipe, bison) does particularly well with rubs, either wet or dry.

For this recipe, a base of balsamic vinegar and tamarind paste (widely available in the Asian aisle at most grocers) add tons of flavor, while also keeping the meat (bison dries out quickly) moist.

And since I like to do the entire meal on the grill, the side of garlic-paprika corn can be tossed on right alongside the steaks. The ears of corn are wrapped in foil to help keep the butter from dripping off.

In a large bowl, mix together the oil, vinegar, tamarind paste, salt, pepper, cinnamon and smoked paprika. Add the bison steaks and use your hands to slather the mixture evenly over all sides of the steaks. Set aside at room temperature for 15 minutes.

TV personality, country singer and sausage icon Jimmy Dean dies at 81

By Terence McArdle
The Washington Post

Jimmy Dean, a country singer and television personality who parlayed his show-business fame into a successful second career marketing breakfast sausages that bore his name, died June 13 at his Henrico County, Va., home. The cause of death was not reported. He was 81.

Dean, a Texas native, came to the Washington area during an Air Force hitch in the 1940s and soon became a local country music star through his radio shows. By the late 1950s, he was a national television personality with his CBS program "Country Style," which began in the District of Columbia at WTOP-TV.

His first hit as a singer came in the early 1950s with "Bummin' Around," but his signature song was "Big Bad John," a tear-jerking recitation about a heroic coal miner who stood "6-foot-6 and weighed 245, kinda broad at the shoulder and narrow at the hip." That record, which made country and pop charts, garnered Dean a Grammy award in 1961 for best country and western song.

But he is perhaps best known for his brand of sausages, which made their way onto American breakfast tables through a

His sausage business began in the 1960s with the purchase of a failing Texas hog farm owned by the husband of one of his cousins. Dean's attorneys suggested he view the business as tax write-off. Instead, with brothers Troy and Don as partners, he decided to make sausage out of swine.

"I was losing about 20 dollars an animal every time I sold one," Dean told Esquire magazine. "I was having breakfast in a little old diner in my hometown. I pulled some gristle from between my teeth about the size of the end of your little finger and I said, 'Man, there's got to be room for quality sausage in this country.'"

As a television personality, Dean sold himself as the quintessential country bumpkin, an image that belied his shrewd business acumen. The Jimmy Dean Meat Co., which the brothers started in 1969, was profitable within six months. It was sold to Sara Lee Corp. in 1984 for $15 million. By the 1990s, the Associated Press estimated, Dean's wealth from investments, music royalties and other business interests was $75 million.

"Poverty was the greatest motivating factor in my life," Dean said in 2001.

Donald (Don) Lewis Hamblin

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Donald (Don) Lewis Hamblin, 77, of La Quinta, Calif., died Saturday, June 12, 2010, at his home due to an extended illness.

Don was born Sept. 5, 1932, in Caldwell, Idaho, to Lewis and Ruth Hamblin. He had two brothers, Frank and Jerry, and a sister, Jean (Hayes) Hamblin. Don graduated from Caldwell High School, where he played basketball, baseball and golf. He attended Woodbury Junior College in Los Angeles, Calif., for two years before graduating from the College of Idaho with a Bachelor of Science in physical education and a minor in English. Don was a two-sport athlete at the College of Idaho, where he played basketball and baseball.

After graduation, he began his career as an English teacher and coach in Parma, Idaho. While in Parma, Don met his wife of 51 years, Alice, of Notus, Idaho, and they were married at St. Mary's in Caldwell, Idaho, on Feb. 7, 1959. Two weeks later, he accepted the assistant professional position at The Desert Inn Country Club in Las Vegas, Nev., where he later became the head golf professional. In 1960, son Michael was born; daughter Jeanne was born in 1962; and daughter Julie in 1965.

In 1965, Don became the head professional at The Dunes Emerald Green Country Club.

Don moved his family back to Idaho in 1976, leased the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course and served as head golf professional. In 1982, he started working part time for the PGA Tour as a rules official and joined the PGA Senior Tour full time as the assistant tournament director in 1987.

Don loved all sports, especially basketball, fishing and cards, where he excelled in gin and poker. He served as vice president of the UNLV Booster Club in the '70s. Don had a passion for junior golf and was instrumental in starting junior golf programs in Las Vegas, Nev., and Idaho for the Idaho Golf Association. While at the Dunes Country Club in Las Vegas, Nev., he taught hundreds of celebrities, but what he loved most was working with juniors and influencing their lives. Of course, his favorite students were his son, Mike, who followed in his footsteps as a PGA professional, and his grandson, Jordan, who currently plays golf for Odessa College in Texas. His daughter, Julie, was also an exceptional golfer, playing college golf in San Diego, Calif. She also followed her father's lead in the golf business, working at Las Vegas Country Club and Crane Creek Country Club. Jeannie was the smart one who chose the jewelry business instead of the golf business.

Don held every office in the Rocky Mountain Section PGA and was also the executive director while still at the Dunes Country Club. He was a six-time Golf Professional of the Year and was district director of the PGA of America from 1982 to 84. While a rules official for the PGA Tour, he worked hundreds of tour events, including numerous PGA Championships, U.S. Opens, Ryder Cups, Senior U.S. Opens and Senior Skins Games.

Don and Alice loved the tour and made many lifelong friends. They enjoyed traveling and working the tour until a devastating stroke in 1994 that drained Don's body but not his compassion for the game. Although his speech and movement were limited, he always found a way to share his opinion when it came to teaching. He was the ultimate constant worker and did everything for his family. He loved to cook and entertain and was one of the best cooks of all time.

Don has now gone to the course in the sky where you always have a perfect lie. His family and friends love him and will miss him.

Don is survived by his wife, Alice of La Quinta, Calif.; son, Mike (Kaly) of Twin Falls; daughters, Jeanne of Snohomish, Wash., and Julie of Twin Falls; and grandchildren, Jordan, Kurtis, Jessica, Anthony and Michael.

It was Don's wish to be cremated, followed by a Mass at 10 a.m. Monday, June 21, at St. Francis of Assisi Church in La Quinta, Calif.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations in Don's memory be made to the Twin Falls Golf Club, Junior Golf Foundation, in care of First Federal Savings, P.O. Box 1885, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Lakers steamroll Boston to set up Game 7

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Buckle up, Boston and L.A. These epic NBA finals are going to Game 7.

Kobe Bryant made sure of it, with plenty of help from the rest of the revitalized Los Angeles Lakers.

Bryant scored 26 points, Pau Gasol added 17 points and 13 rebounds, and the Lakers emphatically extended the NBA finals to a decisive seventh game with a 89-67 victory over the Boston Celtics in Game 6 on Tuesday night.

Ron Artest added 15 points for the Lakers, who stared down elimination by jumping to a 22-point lead during a dazzling first half. While limiting Boston to the second lowest-scoring performance in NBA finals history, the defending champions stretched the finals to the limit for the first time since 2005.

A champion will be crowned Thursday night at Staples Center.

out their longtime rivals are still quite serious about earning their 16th championship.

Two years after the Celtics ended the finals with a 39-point blowout of the Lakers in Game 6, Los Angeles turned Game 6 into a long nightmare for Boston. Only Utah’s infamous 54-point performance against Chicago in 1998 was worse than this offensive disaster, which included 33 percent shooting and a 52-39 rebounding advantage for the Lakers.

“We did a great job,” Bryant said. “We have to come with the same energy, the same dedication to defense (in Game 7).”

Bryant grabbed 11 rebounds, and Gasol led the Lakers with nine assists in a remarkable bounce-back game for Los Angeles, which dominated from the opening minutes by vacuuming up rebounds and playing relentless defense. The Lakers’ bench largely took care of the rest, outscoring Boston’s reserves while the Celtics failed to make a run.

“Our defense was good, our rebounding was better,” Lakers coach Phil Jackson said. “We had some good luck on some tips and offensive rebounds, and those things changed the course of the game.”

These rivals have played a Game 7 four times in their 12 previous finals meetings, with Boston winning all four. But it hasn’t happened since 1984 — and it hasn’t happened to Bryant, who looks determined to stake his claim among the NBA’s greats in pursuit of his fifth championship.

SHOOTING FOR THE TOP

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Kimberly junior Gage Huft is the 2010 Times-News boys golf athlete of the year.

Huft vows to improve on successful junior year

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Gage Huft refuses to let his junior season be defined by one subpar round.

But when that subpar round turns a four-shot lead at the state tournament into a six-shot deficit with six holes to play, it’s certainly hard to avoid it becoming the headline.

Even on his worst day, the Times-News 2010 Male Golfer of the Year didn’t play that badly. But in a game where every stroke counts and par is the goal, falling short even 10 percent of the time can result in disaster.

“I was hitting the ball OK, I just couldn’t score (low),” Huft said. “It was one of those days where nothing you did was going to get a par.”

Improved iron play lifted Huft’s game this season, he said, propelling him to the forefront of many tournaments he entered.

While his 2-under 70 at the first round of the state tournament was impressive, Huft said he was at his best in a victory at the Class 3A district tournament at Canyon Springs Golf Course, Kimberly’s home course this season. It was the third victory of the season for Huft, who never finished lower than seventh in a tournament he entered — even those with Class 4A heavy hitters.

“It was one of those days where everything clicked,” Huft said. “The times I think I’m doing the best are days when I’m not even trying, just letting the swing do its thing. I was really relaxed that day and hit the ball really well.”

Hitting the ball well wasn’t good enough in rainy, gusty conditions a week later.

Poised to crash in spectacular fashion after a 12-shot swing in a nine-hole span at the second round of the state tournament, Huft started a long rally with a six-stroke deficit staring him in the face, with just six holes left to play.

Down by two strokes on his final hole, the long No. 9 at the Links Golf Course in Post Falls, Huft went for broke with a stiff wind at his back and blasted his tee shot 396 yards. He overhit the green on his second shot but still hit his third within a foot of the pin and tapped in for a birdie.

The only problem was he needed an eagle to join a playoff for the championship. He settled for third place, one stroke off the winning score.

“It’s the first time I’ve ever been unhappy with a birdie,” he said. “I finally got it going, but I just ran out of holes.”

Huft said all he can do now is live and learn, taking his experience and hopefully parlaying it into a championship next season.

“I’ve got to keep working on my swing,” he said. “If you even hit it a fraction of a degree’s difference, the ball travels so different. Every shot counts.”

If his 2010 progression is anything to go by, he should like where he’s at when next season ends.

Elliott, Eames lead after CNFR’s second round

Times-News

Elliott, a College of Southern Idaho cowboy, posted a second-best 84 Tuesday in his second go-round in bull riding at the College National Finals Rodeo in Casper, Wyo., to take the overall lead through two rounds with 168.5 points.

Eames, a Gooding roper who competes for Idaho State, drove to the top of the leaderboard in tie-down roping with a combined time of 20.1 seconds through two rounds. He leads team-roping teammate Rob Webb of Wendell, competing for Weber State, by 0.7 seconds. Filer’s Kyle VanBiezen, a Bengal teammate of Eames, is fourth.

Zach Hutchison’s strong bareback ride from Monday night held up for him to win the second go-round with 82.5 points. It also moved him into fourth place in the overall standings after two go-rounds. But he was bucked off in his third go-round Tuesday evening, meaning he’ll have a long wait to see if he makes the finals.

Hutchison, also from CSI, got a ride in his final go-round in bull riding, posting a 67.5 score that gives him at least a slim chance to make the short go in bulls as well. But like with the bareback, he’ll have a long wait, as he’s currently the last man in with 11 riders left that can eliminate him.

CSI’s Monty Johnson was also in Top 10 contention after two bull rides, sitting eighth in the standings. LeeRoy Winward of CSI and Eden’s Montana Barlow, competing for Idaho State, were also in the Top 20 after two rounds.

Paige Yore of CSI was in 14th after two rounds in goat tying, keeping herself in contention for a Top 20 finish. A 10.3-second time in the third go-round moved her up to sixth, but she’ll have to wait and see if her title-round bid is successful.

Promise of bigger TV dollars drove Big 12’s survival bid

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN, Texas — Looking for the savior of the Big 12? Follow the money.

Assurances that the big television money will soon be coming to the leaner Big 12 pulled the league back from the dead, officials with schools and the league said Tuesday.

With Colorado (Pac-10) and Nebraska (Big Ten) leaving in the next two years and the Pac-10 making a hard sell to Texas and four other schools to join them, the promises — not guarantees — of bigger checks in the future finally persuaded the Longhorns and the others to stay put.

unequivocal commitment,” Texas president William Powers Jr., said Tuesday. “We’ve decided the Big 12 provides the best long-term opportunity for our university.”

According IRS tax records examined by The Associated Press, the Big 12 paid out between $8.7 million to $15.4 million per school in 2008-09, with Kansas State getting the smallest payout and Oklahoma the biggest. The Big 12’s television deal with Fox expires in 2012 and a more lucrative contract with ESPN runs through the 2015-2016 academic year.

Big 12 commissioner Dan Beebe said no new TV deals have been struck, but he has “extremely

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Tom Izzo is staying at Michigan State, turning down a chance to coach the Cleveland Cavaliers and perhaps LeBron James.

“I knew at the beginning that whatever decision I made would be a decision for life,” Izzo said during a news conference on campus.

“I am going to be a lifer. This is what I’m going to be, and I’m damn proud of it.”

For the past nine days, Izzo has been trying to decide whether to leave the place that has been his home since 1983 and jump to the NBA to perhaps make $6 million — doubling his salary — and possibly coaching one of the best basketball players in the world.

“Just as I decided to stay home, I hope a 6-8, 270-pound forward in Cleveland decides to stay home,” Izzo said in a statement released by the school.

He admitted the idea of coaching the 25-year-old superstar was very tempting.

“I thought playing one-on-one with LeBron James every day would be a good thing,” Izzo said.

He admitted turning down the Cavs was a difficult decision.

“How many more offers do you get? How many more opportunities?” Izzo said. “People asked ‘why would you want to leave?’ I didn’t. I didn’t want to leave.”

Izzo

James’ uncertain future will make for a difficult decision for any prospective Cavs coach. The 25-year-old superstar is unlikely to tip his hand publicly before free agency begins July 1.

Izzo’s decision ends a nearly two-week courtship by Cavaliers owner Dan Gilbert, who was hoping a reported five-year $30 million contract would be enough to land the Spartans coach, and perhaps show James he intends to remake the Cavs following a bitter postseason loss.

“The entire Cleveland Cavalier organization has nothing but respect and admiration for Coach Izzo and his family,” Gilbert said in a statement. “Tom is a special person in so many unique and positive ways. We only wish great things for him and his family in all the years ahead.”

Izzo did not look at ease as he walked into Tuesday night’s news conference along with his wife, Lupe, Michigan State president Lou Anna Simon and athletic director Mark Hollis.

He kept his head down when Simon made her opening remarks, sipping water, tapping his feet and fidgeting with his fingers and rubbing his hands.

This past season, Izzo led the Spartans to the Final Four for the sixth time in 12 years. Only the late John Wooden at UCLA and Duke’s Mike Krzyzewski also have done that.

coming back,” said Mateen Cleaves, perhaps Izzo’s favorite player and one of the stars from his 2000 national championship team. “It put the biggest smile on my face to know he’s coming back.”

Milwaukee Bucks guard Charlie Bell, who played on the 2000 national championship team, was also glad to hear Izzo’s staying: “Izzo is Michigan State basketball.”

Two of the five former assistants who are Division I coaches were thrilled, too.

“Thought he handled very difficult process very well,” Utah coach Jim Boylen wrote in a text message. “It was a win-win situation for him. Happy for him, his family and his team that it’s over.”

Yankees hammer Halladay to win World Series rematch

NEW YORK — Nick Swisher and the New York Yankees handed Roy Halladay a rare thumping, beating the Philadelphia Phillies and their new ace 8-3 Tuesday night in a World Series rematch.

Mark Teixeira, Curtis Granderson and Swisher all homered off Halladay to build a comfortable cushion for CC Sabathia in a marquee pitching matchup that fizzled early.

Brett Gardner laced a two-run triple in the second inning and the Yankees, who began the day tied with Tampa Bay for the AL East lead, won their ninth straight home game — the club’s best streak in its second-year ballpark.

Sabathia (7-3) went seven innings, allowing five hits and striking out seven while winning his third consecutive start.

Making his third start since his perfect game at Florida on May 29, Halladay (8-5) matched a career high by serving up three homers — the same amount he allowed in his first 13 outings with Philadelphia.

New York Yankees second baseman Robinson Cano, left, congratulates Nick Swisher after Swisher hit a two-run homer during Tuesday’s game with the Philadelphia Phillies in New York.

METS 7, INDIANS 6

CLEVELAND — Johan Santana won for the first time in four starts.

Santana (5-3) gave up four runs and seven hits over seven innings as the Mets won their fifth straight and ninth of 10, helped out by a nifty bit of baserunning by Jose Reyes.

The left-hander fell behind early, and struck out only one, but earned his first win since beating the New York Yankees in another interleague game on May 23.

During that stretch, he had two no-decisions

RED SOX 6, DIAMONDBACKS 3

BOSTON — David Ortiz homered, Dustin Pedroia scored three runs and Clay Buchholz had another solid start.

Buchholz (9-4) allowed three runs on seven hits and a walk, striking out eight in 5 2-3 innings for his sixth win in seven starts. Jonathan Papelbon pitched the ninth for his 14th save.

Pedroia was hit by a pitch in the first inning, and Ortiz followed with his first homer since June 2 — his 13th of the season. In the third, Pedroia doubled in a run, Daniel Nava scored on a wild pitch and then Pedroia scored to make it 6-1 on an infield single by Victor Martinez that resulted in a close play for first base umpire Jim Joyce.

WHITE SOX 6, PIRATES 4

PITTSBURGH — Gordon Beckham drove in three runs and the Chicago White Sox spoiled former first-round draft pick Brad Lincoln’s first start at home, extending the last-place Pirates’ losing streak to nine games.

Ramon Castro doubled in a run while reaching base four consecutive times.

Andrew McCutchen matched his career high with three stolen bases while getting three hits and a walk for Pittsburgh.

TIGERS 7, NATIONALS 4

DETROIT — Slumping Ryan Raburn hit his first homer of the season and drove in four runs.

Raburn drew a bases-loaded walk in the second inning, then hit a leadoff single that started a two-run fourth to make it 4-all. He hit a three-run homer in the fifth.

TWINS 9, ROCKIES 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Carl Pavano allowed two runs on five hits in seven innings and Jason Kubel homered to lead the Minnesota Twins.

Pavano (7-6) struck out five and walked one, going at least seven innings for the 10th time in 13 starts this year.

CARDINALS 4, MARINERS 2

ST. LOUIS — Jeff Suppan was a success in his comeback start with the St. Louis Cardinals and Albert Pujols homered a day after getting bopped in the head.

Pujols is 6 for 10 with five RBIs in three games, snapping a 1 for 18 skid that dropped him below .300. He’s a career .352 hitter in interleague play, best in the majors.

ROYALS 15, ASTROS 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Yuniesky Betancourt’s bases-loaded double keyed a seven-run, two-out rally in the fifth inning.

Mike Aviles went 4 for 4 with a career-high four RBIs and Billy Butler and Alberto each had three hits on an oddity-filled night.

much of the Lakers’ three-game stay in Boston, but Los Angeles was a symphony in Game 6. Gasol was a constant low-post presence and playmaker after disappearing for long stretches of the series, while Artest harnessed his wildly inconsistent jumper and hit three 3-pointers.

With first lady Michelle Obama watching from a luxury box, the Lakers were on their best behavior — and the Celtics responded terribly to the chance to clinch a title.

Paul Pierce scored 13 points and Kevin Garnett added 12, but the Celtics’ offense was a jumbled, stand-around mess. Rajon Rondo, the late-game hero in Boston’s last appearance in Los Angeles, got off to a 1-for-8 shooting start before finishing with 10 points and six assists.

“I thought we’d play better, obviously,” Boston coach Doc Rivers said. “I thought we were ready. ... We played an individual game tonight on both ends. We never gave ourselves an opportunity offensively, because we never trusted each other. Everybody was out to make their own place.”

After earning the NBA’s second-best road record during the regular season, the Celtics must win on the road again to avoid becoming just the third team to blow a 3-2 series lead in the 2-3-2 finals format.

The Celtics lost starting center Kendrick Perkins in the first quarter to a sprained right knee when he landed awkwardly under the hoop, but his absence couldn’t explain the Lakers’ utter domination of the first half — a 30-13 rebounding edge while holding Boston to 34 percent shooting and frustrating Rondo.

U.S. enters match as – yes – the favorite

IRENE, South Africa (AP) — The Americans returned to the practice field Tuesday, not only to prepare for their upcoming match with Slovenia, but the new role they’ve been cast in at this World Cup. Favorites.

Yes, that’s right. The good, ol’ underdog Yanks are favored for a change - and therein lies the problem.

“In all likelihood, if we lose we’re out of the tournament,” Landon Donovan said. “That’s the reality of the situation.

“A tie means we’re still in the tournament. You have to be aware of that. That being said, we understand very clearly that if we win the game, we’ve got a very, very good chance of getting through. So that will be our focus,” he said.

It doesn’t take a genius to figure out that the Americans don’t want to be in the position of having only one point through two matches while Slovenia has six and England may have four.

“Going into a game as possible favorites will be different for us,” defender Jay DeMerit said, “to know you’re under pressure to get three points or to get a good result instead of saying, ‘Let’s go out and try our best and make sure we work well together and see what happens.’”

Coming off an opening 1-1 draw against the Three Lions, a victory against Slovenia on Friday would put the U.S. in prime position to advance going into its Group C finale against Algeria on June 23. Slovenia beat Algeria 1-0 in its opener.

And even though the U.S. is a 2-1 favorite, according to betcris.com., players don’t see it as much of an advantage.

“They’re going to be a tough team,” said Clint Dempsey, who scored the tying 1-1 goal against England in the opener. “They keep the ball well. They have players who can cause you problems. So we’re just going to have to play our best game to get something out of it.”

There was some new gear at training in Pretoria, with many players wearing navy ski caps, most wearing sweat pants and some putting on gloves as a biting 22 mph southern wind ripped across Pilditch Stadium, where the temperature was just 46 before sunset.

It will be a different type of game, too, against Slovenia, which won its opener on Robert Koren’s 79th-minute goal when it bounced in off the arm of goalkeeper Fawzi Chaouchi.

Central midfielders Michael Bradley and Ricardo Clark were pinned in defensive positions against the English, while Donovan and Dempsey were pinched in, forcing attacking wingers to go wide.

Slovenia, which qualified by defeating Russia in a home-and-home playoff last November, likely will rely on counterattacks. For that reason, there has been speculation U.S. coach Bob Bradley might consider starting Jose Torres in place of Clark in an effort to improve possession.

While the United States is ranked 14th in the world, Slovenia is 25th. Still, Eastern European defenses have been difficult for the Americans to infiltrate. Czechoslovakia won 5-1 at the 1990 World Cup, Romania won 1-0 four years later and Yugoslavia by the same score in 1998,

Even after the Americans started with a win against Portugal and a draw with host South Korea in 2002, Poland beat the U.S. 3-1. Four years ago, the United States opened with a 3-0 loss to the Czech Republic.

Lee Westwood hits out of a bunker on No. 12 during Tuesday's practice round for the U.S. Open in Pebble Beach, Calif.

Westwood now hopes major drought ends

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — It's only a matter of time before Lee Westwood wins a major — or so the theory goes.

They used to say that about Phil Mickelson. He's won four.

They've also said that, at different times, about Colin Montgomerie, Sergio Garcia, Adam Scott and a slew of others. Those are much different stories.

Heading into the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Westwood holds the title of “Best Player to Never Win a Major,” ranked third in the world and making a run at shedding that title almost every time he tees it up at one of the world’s biggest tournaments.

Like many of those who’ve had that albatross hanging around their necks in the past, Westwood insists all the pressure comes from within, not the outside.

“The main challenge is fulfilling my own expectations,” he said Tuesday. “And especially over the last couple of years, I’ve been putting myself in a position to win a major and feel like I ought to be expected to win a major now.”

He finished second at the Masters this year, tied for third at the British and the PGA last year and finished third at the U.S. Open two years ago.

In two of those tournaments, Westwood was one putt away from making a playoff: Against Tiger Woods and Rocco Mediate at Torrey Pines, he knew the stakes; against Tom Watson and Stewart Cink at Turnberry, he didn’t.

Not that it mattered. Westwood missed them both. And insists he wouldn’t change a thing, other than the results.

“At Augusta, Phil won it fair and square, and Hazeltine, I wasn’t really there for me to win it,” Westwood said. “I suppose I made a couple of slight errors at Torrey Pines, which in an ideal world I would try not to do. The Open championship, I let a chance slip. But all in all, I think I’ve played pretty good the last rounds of majors. Just haven’t quite done enough, really.”

When Westwood walked off the course two months ago at Augusta, a loser by three to Mickelson, he got advice from someone who knows exactly how he feels. Mickelson was the best without a major for the better part of a decade before he broke through at the 2004 Masters.

“You can’t get lured into the thought that you have to do something drastic,” Westwood said at Augusta, when asked if he had to change his final-day approach.

The best he can do is keep putting himself in positions to win, and there’s no sign he’ll stop doing that anytime soon.

He is coming to Pebble Beach fresh off a victory at the St. Jude’s Classic in Memphis, which halted another talked-about streak of his. Before Sunday, when he took advantage of a triple-bogey on 18 by Robert Garrigus then went on to win in a four-hole playoff, Westwood hadn’t won on the PGA Tour since 1998.

Brazil survives plucky North Koreans

JOHANNESBURG — Portugal and the Ivory Maicon and Elano scored a goal apiece in the second half and Brazil broke through a solid North Korea defense to win its first 2010 World Cup match 2-1 on a frigid Tuesday night.

Brazil escaped with a hard-fought victory in the Group G match after struggling to get past the defensive setup of the North Koreans, who are making their first World Cup appearance in 44 years and arrived as the tournament’s lowest-ranked team.

Maicon put Brazil ahead in the 55th minute after a through ball from midfielder Elano, making a run on the right side and firing into the far corner from a tight angle as North Korea goalkeeper Ri Myong Guk went for the cross.

Elano then added to the lead in the 72nd after a well-timed pass from Robinho, finding the net with a one-timer from inside the penalty area.

Ji Yun Nam scored for North Korea in the 89th minute in 34-degree temperatures with a wind-chill of 24.

The victory gave five-time champion Brazil first place in the group after Portugal and the Ivory Coast drew 0-0 earlier Tuesday. Brazil has won all its opening matches since a 1-1 draw with Sweden in the 1978 World Cup.

“The opener is always harder,” Brazil coach Dunga said. “There is the anxiety, the players are more nervous than usual, trying to do too much. But we are satisfied.”

NEW ZEALAND 1, SLOVAKIA 1

RUSTENBURG, South Africa — Winston Reid scored in second-half injury time Tuesday to snatch a draw for the Kiwis.

Robert Vittek scored early in the second half, putting Slovakia in position to take the lead in World Cup Group F. But Reid sneaked behind the defense to take a long cross from Shane Smeltz and tie it.

New Zealand ranked 78th in the world, 44 spots above Slovakia, which is in its first World Cup as an independent nation.

lead in the 69th minute on a counterattack, but goalkeeper Mark Paston was quick off his line and made the save.

All four teams have one point in Group F. Italy and Paraguay drew 1-1 Monday.

PORTUGAL 0, IVORY COAST 0

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa — Ivory Coast largely outplayed its higher-ranked opponent despite Didier Drogba only coming on as a late substitute.

Portugal captain Cristiano Ronaldo rattled a 30-yard

He was only ruled eligible shortly before kickoff at Nelson Mandela Bay Stadium, and his entrance was greeted by huge cheers, with vuvuzelas drowning out the drums of Ivorian fans for the first time in the match.

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. — Darrelle Revis insists he’s not playing head games with the New York Jets.

A day after staging a protest of his stalled contract talks, the All-Pro cornerback said he actually was lightheaded when he sat out a few plays during practice Monday.

“I didn’t eat anything that morning, for real,” Revis said Tuesday. “I came in here and went straight to meetings and didn’t eat anything. I drank Gatorade, but I didn’t eat anything, so I was like, ‘I feel funny.’”

Defensive backs coach Dennis Thurman told him to take a break, and Revis went to the sideline.

After practice, Revis was told he needed to get his blood checked and he told trainers he had to get something to eat. He then told reporters that he sat because his head had bothered him and “a hamstring pull, too.”

“The hamstring,” Revis said, “I kind of exaggerated that and went on with it.”

He did say Monday that sitting out a few plays “was something just to let them know I can play, and I can not play.” He reiterated Tuesday that the negotiations played a role in him sitting.

“Yeah, it was a factor to a point,” Revis said. “Because now I’m getting to a frustrated point, and when you get to a frustrated point, other things start happening. But like I said, if I’m lightheaded, I’m lightheaded.”

Revis, who said he spoke from the heart Monday, added that it all wasn’t for show.

“If I really wanted to make a statement,” he said Tuesday, “I would’ve just not practiced.”

CARROLL RESPONDS TO USC PENALTIES

RENTON, Wash. — Pete Carroll believes the NCAA had no basis for sanctions on the Southern California football program, and reiterated Tuesday that he didn’t leave to escape the penalties.

The former Trojans coach expects USC’s pending appeal of NCAA sanctions will produce transcripts that show the governing body for college sports had no basis for its “really, really harsh” bowl ban and scholarship cuts.

Carroll answered questions for the first time since the NCAA came down hard on USC, mainly for improper benefits received by former star rusher Reggie Bush during Carroll’s tenure.

The new coach of the Seahawks said he was “responsible” as USC’s head coach, but that there was no way for him to know Bush was being wooed by an off-campus agent.

Carroll said the NCAA’s bowl ban and scholarship cuts are unfair to the current Trojans who had nothing to do with the case.

He called rules allowing players to leave a potentially devastating “fire sale” for the program, and wants the NCAA and high schools to help in a grass-roots effort to keep outsiders away from college athletes.

strong verification, based on our analysis with our consultants and others, and media companies themselves, that we are in a tremendous position to execute future agreements that will put our member institutions on par with any in the country.” He did not provide any numbers during a conference call with reporters.

“The Big 12 approached us asking if we would maintain our current agreement through its term of 2015-16 and we agreed,” said Josh Krulewitz, vice president for communications for ESPN.

A Fox Sports Net spokesman said that no new deal had been reached but there would be ongoing discussions.

The Big 12 has increased the financial reward for every one of its members since it began play in 1996. It distributed $139 million to its members this past fiscal year, more than ever.

Texas, already the richest and most powerful of the Big 12 schools, is convinced it can make even more money in a 10-team league.

“The Big 12 (television) package is going to be every bit as good as any other conference,” Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds said. “We are in good shape on the television side.”

And by staying in the Big 12, Texas can explore whether it should start its own Longhorns TV network. If they had moved to the Pac-10, Texas would have had to surrender its media rights.

Texas women’s athletic director Chris Plonsky said the network, which would broadcast Texas sports and other university events, should bring in “millions” to the school.

Some of the league’s smaller schools are giving up cash for the promise of keeping the league together and more money later.

Kansas, Kansas State, Baylor, Iowa State and Missouri — who were in danger of being left homeless if the conference dissolved — agreed to give up their share in buyout penalties to be paid by Nebraska and Colorado for leaving the league, Beebe said.

The idea is to have that money go to Texas, Texas A&M and Oklahoma, the schools the Big 12 needed to stay to remain viable, to make up for the difference in revenue those three might have made going elsewhere.

The amount of the penalties has not been disclosed, the Colorado athletic director Mike Bohn confirmed his school’s penalty for leaving the Big 12 “could be” around $9 million.

“We’ll work with our new conference with some type of finance agreement,” Bohn said. “The Pac-10 will not assist in any contributions toward the buyout. But they’ve indicated a willingness to help us finance the agreement (to join).”

Late Tuesday, Missouri officials said they have not agreed to give up their share of the buyout penalties.

“In no way do we expect to be hurt financially,” Missouri chancellor Brady Deaton said.

Beebe insisted the Big 12’s decision to stick together was about more than money.

“A strong, strong consideration ... by the institutions to remain is the association of these schools, the fact that college athletics is very much a regional, regionally supported endeavor, and that it would be a great travesty for this part of this country if it’s major institutions located with conferences that aren’t in this region,” Beebe said.

Texas A&M’s flirtations with the Southeastern Conference had threatened to pull apart a 100-year-old rivalry with Texas.

“We committed to the Big 12 before we knew what Texas A&M was going to do. We are delighted Texas and Texas A&M will be in the same conference,” Powers said.

One thing that could still fracture the conference are hurt feelings. Missouri officials had hoped for an invitation to the Big Ten and other less-influential members may not appreciate the top-down nature of the conference.

“We live in athletics,” Dodds said. “We beat each other up on Saturdays, we hug each other on Sunday.”

Beebe said there are no plans to expand the conference, leaving the Big 12 with 10 teams to play a nine-game football schedule and do away with the conference championship game.

And what about that conference name? Can a league with 10 teams call itself the Big 12?

“We’ll consult the Big Ten on that,” Dodds said, with a nod to a league that now has 12 teams.

Associated Press writers Stephen Hawkins, Pat Graham, Josh Dubow and Alan Scher Zagier contributed to this report.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was at a club with friends and ran into a co-worker. He was dressed in drag and introduced himself as "Glenda." At work, he dresses like a male and goes by "Glen."

Since that night he has been avoiding me and cutting conversations short, if not ignoring me altogether. Should I let him know I'm OK with his alternate persona, or let it be? I don't want to risk awkward situations.

— SYMPATHETIC IN NORTHERN VIRGINIA

DEAR SYMPATHETIC: I don't know how large your company is or how much contact you have with Glen. If the answer is it's a large company and contact is minimal, then let it be. If you have contact with Glen frequently, and his embarrassment is having an impact on your work relationship, then clear the air by letting him know that what happens after hours is his business and you do not gossip. Period.

DEAR ABBY: My sister, "Gina," recently became engaged to her longtime boyfriend. A few days after hearing about the engagement, I sent her an e-mail telling her my husband and I were free every weekend except Oct. 8, 9 and 10 because a dear friend had asked me months ago to be a bridesmaid in her wedding that weekend. I have already bought the dress and had it altered. I called Gina to explain the situation after sending the e-mail.

Yesterday, I spoke with my father and found out that Gina has chosen Oct. 9 for her wedding day, even though I told her I couldn't make it then. Gina wants me to be her matron of honor because she was my maid of honor.

Clearly, I cannot participate in two weddings on the same day at the same time in different locations. Who do I say no to?

— DREADING WEDDINGS IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR DREADING: Let me get this straight. You warned your sister that you would be unavailable on a certain weekend, she chose that date for her wedding anyway, and you had to hear the news from your father? Could there be more going on with your relationship with your sister than you mentioned in your letter? Perhaps she felt "obligated" to have you in her wedding party because she was in yours?

From my perspective, you should thank your sister for her kind offer and remind her that you had already told her you would be unavailable that weekend. That way, you're both off the hook.

DEAR ABBY: I work in a small office, and every day a co-worker's adult child who works nearby comes here to have lunch with her mother. She knows everyone's business as if she worked here, and we're forced to order her something when we get takeout. Frankly, we're tired of it. How can we put a stop to this without hurting anyone's feelings?

— ONE MORE FOR LUNCH

DEAR O.M.F.L.: It appears the line between "family" and "business" has become blurred. The co-worker who is closest to the mother should approach her privately and say, "You should know that your daughter coming here every day is creating hard feelings in the office. If you want to have lunch with her every day, then you should be doing it outside the office. During our lunch time, we want to talk about things that are personal, and her presence makes that difficult."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Where there is much desire to learn, there of necessity will be much arguing, much writing, many opinions; for opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making."

— John Milton

Today's deal features a point of interest in the bidding as well as in the play. When the weak-two from West was doubled, East suspected that his opponents could make a considerable number of tricks in spades. In an attempt to tangle their wires, he tried a baby psyche, hoping to keep his opponents out of spades. (There is nothing inappropriate about such actions — so long as partner is not expecting them any more than your opponents.)

A good idea, perhaps, but South was not fooled. He opted for the simplest way to get to a spade slam, managing to right-side the contract into the bargain.

West was looking at an ace, so knew that a diamond lead was unlikely to succeed. Since South had inferentially promised a heart control, West shrewdly led a top club, giving declarer nothing. South took dummy's club king and drew trumps in three rounds with his king, queen and jack, at which point he knew nine of West's cards. When that player followed twice more to the top clubs, the contract had suddenly become almost a claim. West had three cards in each black suit and six hearts and thus no more than one diamond.

Declarer took dummy's diamond king and, when no jack appeared, led a diamond back to his 10, cashed the diamond ace, then returned to dummy with the spade ace to pitch one of his heart losers on the diamond queen.

ANSWER: Although most partnerships will not discuss sequences of this sort until too late, the pass of a redouble by the hand sitting over the trumps can only sensibly be played for blood. Your partner was going to pass out two hearts doubled and will instead enjoy this denouement even more! Do not let West trick you out of collecting your penalty.

IF JUNE 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The Force isn't with you in any area that has to do with work, investments, career or business now so concentrate on having a good time with loved ones during the next several weeks. August could be a perfect time for travel, as your desire to explore new vistas and have adventures is in full flower, but you might choose to begin a new study or educational project. Steer clear of signing business agreements or making financial decisions in September when the universe seems to oppose your best interests. October and November are excellent months for travel, romantic excursions, or for just feeling good about your progress with mental pursuits.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Faith in the future is a good thing. However, you can't cure pressing financial problems by gambling on risky enterprises. Love-making and investing prove disappointing so err on the side of caution.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sit this dance out. If you pursue an attractive someone, you may end up with a bad case of star-crossed lovers. Pass up a business opportunity, as there may be a hidden agenda.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your partners or close friends may confuse you by offering contradicting feedback. You may not be communicating as clearly as possible. Hold off on making major purchases and decisions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Minor agitations mean nothing in the vast scheme of things. Strive to maintain peace and harmony with a special someone. Be satisfied with holding hands and just enough material things to get by.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Ride it out. Don't rock the boat when the sea is already churning beneath you. You must avoid making an impetuous change that involves your finances just because you think you can outsmart the system.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid making major decisions based on faulty judgment. Use caution and exercise extreme prudence if important decisions are required. You tend to go to extremes with both money and feelings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Purple passions can create pitfalls. Your seductive powers are in high gear, but don't put all your eggs in one basket. Play the field, as tomorrow your heart and wallet might find a more suitable match.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The world is more complex than you can know. You may be driven by ambition, but should be skeptical of respecting power for power's sake alone. Don't take risks with your cash or your heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Minor turbulence may upset personal finances. This can be resolved with the help of a significant other. Joining financial forces can be beneficial if you concentrate on developing a long-term plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Balance in the middle rather than taking sides. You will need to shoulder some serious responsibilities and concentrate on career. Yet your intensity of purpose may interfere with home harmony.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Even rats in a maze receive a reward for finding their way out of a conundrum. You might figure out all the angles and still lose money. This isn't the right time to risk your money in the rat race.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have to kiss a lot of frogs before you find your perfect prince or princess. Unless you like the taste of swamp water and lily pads, you might be wise to pass up an opportunity to try your luck tonight.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
