Idaho wilderness bill trudges on in Senate

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The journey to make central Idaho's Boulder Mountains and White Cloud Peaks a wilderness area has not been short.

The effort has been tried and failed in past decades.

And the Idaho congressman leading the effort now — U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson — has been at it since 1999.

If he's successful, Idahoans will have three new wilderness areas totaling 332,775 acres adjoining and overlapping with the Sawtooth National Recreation Area. Simpson, in a hearing on Wednesday before the U.S. Senate's Subcommittee on Public Lands and Forests, acknowledged that making the mountainous region a wilderness area has been a challenging task.

"Mine is not the first attempt to solve management issues in this area," Simpson, a Republican, told the committee in his testimony about his proposed Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act.

Idaho to comply with national health care reform

LEWISTON (AP) — The Idaho Department of Insurance is working to implement a major piece of a new health care law, even as the state seeks to overturn the reform.

States are required under the new law to set up the new insurance markets, called exchanges, which let consumers and small businesses choose health insurance.

Department director Bill Deal said his staff is working to get health care exchanges in place two years ahead of the deadline. Idaho is required to have an approved plan by 2013, with an operating exchange available by 2014, he said.

"But we're doing our best to have it up and running by 2012," Deal told the Lewiston Tribune. "You don't just form a program like this, flip the switch and have it run perfectly. I'd like to get it going a little earlier."

About 30 million people will get their coverage through exchanges nationwide, with federal subsidies available to help low-income people buy policies.

Annual T.F. music event welcomed

Downturn tempers business expectations

By Amy Huddleston

The music is sure to waft across Twin Falls during the coming days of Snake River Canyon Jam festivities. Still, a variety of factors have tempered some area business owners' expectations of the financial boost they'll see from the annual event.

The Canyon Jam, which continues tonight and runs through Sunday, has typically drawn between 800 and 900 listeners per year, event organizers have said. Before last year's shift in focus, the annual event at Centennial Waterfront Park was named Jazz in the Canyon.

Shawn Barigar, president and CEO of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, said the event is designed to draw people to the community. The chamber hopes to sell 1,000 event

Kimberly evacuates its City Hall

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News Writer

KIMBERLY — Kimberly City Hall will close its glass doors on June 25.

The 90-year-old building on Main Street, a staple in the community, has suffered three ceiling collapses, an electrical fire and even had a few rodents trapped inside its walls. City officials now say it is time to shut the doors and look elsewhere.

"The structural integrity of the building is severely compromised," Mayor Dave Overacre said on Wednesday. "We are worried about the safety of our employees."

The old rock walls, decorated with crumbling mortar, and the sagging roof offer small hints at the deterioration threatening the building. Overacre said the roof has about 10 layers of shingles laying on top of each other.

"It's kind of like a sway-back horse," he said.

Last June and October, ceiling collapses ruined a printer and required clean-up and repair work. Even with the patched roof, Chief of Police Pat Bermingham worries about the leaks. He keeps two buckets near the window to stand guard against future water damage.

City officials have discussed the need for a new building for some time now. Candidates in last fall's City Council race also weighed in, with some seeing the need for a new structure and at least one arguing against the expense.

City Hall offices will be temporarily moved to the current City Council chambers, two small rooms adjacent to the public library. The police department will stay in the old building until a plan is put in place for its offices.

"We are looking at two locations and waiting for appraisals to come back," said Rob Wright, director of public works. "Starr Corp. has been looking at sites for over four months, but we are hoping to rebuild in the current location."

City officials said they feel strongly about staying in the heart of downtown Kimberly and finding a home that will last them through the years.

City Council meetings will now be held in the Kimberly School District's round building, located at 141 Center St. W., on the second and fourth Tuesday of the month at 6 p.m. City Hall will resume business hours in its new location on June 28 after the offices are moved.

BP says it's sorry — and guarantees $20B for Gulf spill

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Obama wrested a $20 billion compensation guarantee and an apology to the nation from British oil giant BP Wednesday, announcing the company would set up a major claims fund for shrimpers, restaurateurs and others whose lives and livelihoods are being wrecked by the oil flooding into the Gulf of Mexico.

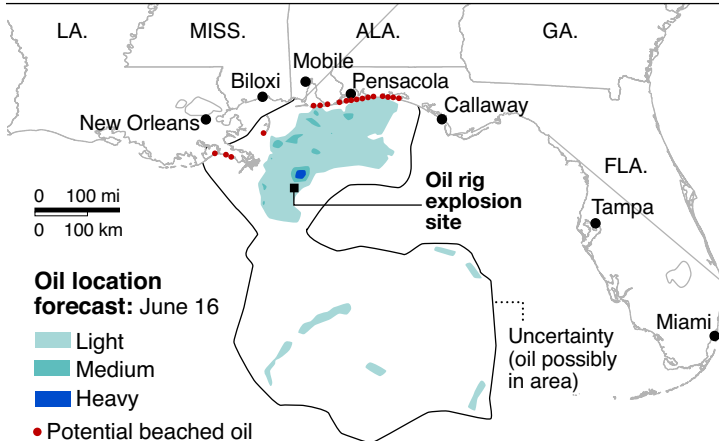

Applause broke out during a community meeting in Orange Beach, Ala., on the news.

"We asked for that two weeks ago and they laughed at us," Mayor Tony Kennon said. "Thank you, President Obama, for taking a bunch of rednecks' suggestion and making it happen."

Obama had said he would "make BP pay," and the company's chairman said after four hours of intense White House negotiations that BP was ready.

The unending oil spill saga had yielded almost no good news before this. Creation of the fund — to be run by an administrator with a proven track record — is the first big success Obama has been able to give to Gulf residents and the nation in the eight weeks since the explosion, a period during which the spill has taken ever more of the public's attention, threatening anything else the president hoped

But he also stressed that inclusiveness is crucial to balance the interests of groups like ranchers, recreationists and motorized access users.

"In short, the needs of the people who live and recreate in the area are as important as the lines drawn on a map," Simpson said.

The bill was carefully negotiated with input from numerous user groups, and includes provisions to open areas now classified for wilderness study. It also includes grants for economic development and funding for trail maintenance.

Simpson said that the sheer scope of the bill leaves it open to be picked apart by critics.

One is Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, who sent a letter to Idaho's delegation outlining concerns about the bill hampering the state's management of endowed lands in the wilderness area and impacting state wildlife management, mechanized recreation and grazing. Keith Allred, Otter's Democratic opponent as the Republican seeks to retain the governorship this fall, announced Wednesday he supports CIEDRA.

For Simpson, the biggest obstacle on the bill's path to passage will be addressing some concerns raised by Otter, including the ability to use helicopters for wolf management and the assurance that state land parcels will be traded out or purchased.

Grant Simonds, executive director of Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association, told the Times-News that Simpson did a good job striking a balance that allows outfitter activities to continue in the wilderness area and makes adjustments for trails and boundaries.

Looking forward, he said the question will be whether

"In short, the needs of the people who live and recreate in the area are as important as the lines drawn on a map."

— U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson

future management actions by the federal government will affect that balance.

Area outfitters said they agreed with the proposal's general goal of preserving the area.

Michael Murphy, a former outfitter who lives in rural Blaine County, said he's in favor of the wilderness proposal as a way of preserving access.

"I'm a firm believer in shared use," he said.

At the hearing, Republican U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo called the area "one of Idaho's greatest assets."

Crapo, whose Owyhee Initiative created wilderness areas in southwest Idaho last year, said that reaching consensus is a crucial part of land projects.

"We have to undertake these efforts together in a consensus-based manner," Crapo said at the hearing.

The bill now awaits more testimony before the Senate committee.

Republican U.S. Sen. Jim Risch said in an interview that he has confidence that Simpson will continue working on areas where disagreements still remain.

"I have no doubt he's going to follow through on it," Risch said.

Five injured in Elmore County rollover

Times-News

Five people were injured, two requiring transport by a Life Flight helicopter, in a one-vehicle rollover Wednesday on Interstate 84, Idaho State Police reported.

ISP was called to investigate the incident at about 1:36 p.m. According to an ISP press release, the driver of a 1997 Honda Civic east-bound on I-84 lost control of the vehicle around mile-post 108. The car rolled multiple times on the right shoulder of the interstate.

Two passengers were ejected and transported by air ambulance to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. Three other passengers were taken by ground to Elmore Medical Center in Mountain Home with non-life-threatening injuries. ISP provided no names of those involved.

Wednesday evening, as family members were still being notified.

Alcohol was not a factor in the crash, which ISP continues to investigate.

Construction progresses on Filer sewer project

By John E. Swayze

Times-News correspondent

FILER — Construction on Filer's $15 million wastewater treatment facility is in full swing two months after the city broke ground on the project.

Rob Hegstrom, of J-U-B Engineers of Twin Falls, gave the Filer City Council on Tuesday a visual overview of progress on the 5- to 15-acre membrane bioreactor project under-way north of town. When completed in late 2011, the plant will use a series of filters and ultraviolet light to remove impurities and leave behind water quality suitable for irrigation and aquifer recharge.

"Rock removal, compacting of the sub-base and most of the rebar and concrete form pouring has been done," Hegstrom said. "On Thursday we'll do the rest of the pouring and start putting up forms for the walls."

Hegstrom also answered questions regarding special inspections that will be conducted as construction progresses. An approximate cost for the inspections could range between $60,000 and $70,000, but exact figures won't be known until the process is completed, he said.

"We are required to keep with standards set down in the International Building Code, which Twin Falls County has adopted," Hegstrom said. "Chapter 17 says that the city or J-U-B has to employ one or more special inspectors, and the city contracted directly with Materials Testing International."

In other action, Joe Herring with Region IV Development told the council that the Idaho Department of Commerce has approved $27,000 in funding to help rural communities in Twin Falls County find ways to improve economic development.

Small towns such as Filer, Kimberly and Buhl could be assessed between $500 and $3,000 to participate in the program, he said.

"Back in 2007, Filer committed to $2,000 for something like this, but I'm not here to ask for money now," Herring said. "It's just something for you to think about and I'll come back next month."

Reform

Idaho is among several states trying to overturn President Barack Obama's health care overhaul in a federal lawsuit that was filed in Florida just minutes after the 10-year, $938 billion health care bill was signed into law.

The states claim the federal government cannot force citizens to buy health coverage. They also argue the federal government is violating the Constitution by forcing a mandate on the states without providing money to pay for it.

Regence BlueShield of Idaho has more than 210,000 members statewide and hopes to participate in the new health care exchange. But the company won't make a firm commitment until all the new rules and requirements are completed, said spokesman Mike Tatko.

Until then, the insurer will keep working with the state to implement the new bill, he said.

"The overarching message is that reform is good," Tatko said. "Not everyone agrees with every aspect of the bill, but the current model isn't sustainable."

to focus on or accomplish.

Huge as the $20 billion seems, both Obama and London-based BP PLC said it was by no means a cap.

The deal also adhered to what Obama had said was his non-negotiable demand: that the fund and the claims process be administered independently from BP. It won't be a government fund, either, but will be led by the administration's "pay czar," Kenneth Feinberg, better known as the man who oversaw the $7 billion government fund for families of victims of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

The April 20 explosion of an offshore oil rig killed 11 workers and sent millions of gallons of crude spewing into the water from the broken well a mile below the ocean's surface — as much as 118 million gallons so far and still flowing. More wildlife, beaches and marshlands are fouled every day, jeopardizing not just the region's fragile ecology but a prized Gulf way of life that is built on fishing and tourism.

Though the company hopes to install equipment soon to capture as much as 90 percent of the escaping oil, the leak is expected to continue at least until relief wells are finished in August.

The use of the BP escrow fund is intended to avoid a repeat of the painful aftermath of the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil disaster in Alaska, when the fight over money dragged out in courts over roughly two decades.

"What this is about is accountability," said Obama in brief remarks in the State Dining Room after a four-hour, on-again, off-again White House negotiation session with BP executives. "For the small-business owners, for the fishermen, for the shrimpers, this is not just a matter of dollars and cents. ... A lot of these folks don't have a cushion."

On the driveway outside, BP Chairman Carl-Henric Svanberg apologized for "this tragic accident that should never have happened."

"We care about the small people," he said.

That comment wasn't as well-received as the promise of compensation.

"We're not small people," said

tickets. He said the economic impact on Twin Falls will be seen both at its gas pumps and restaurants.

Bev O'Connor, owner of O'Dunken's Draught House in downtown Twin Falls, said she looks forward to the event every year.

"We are going to have jazz outside on the street on Friday and the sun is going to be shining," she said. "It is going to be a great time as always."

Weather conditions threatened to thwart the music last year, but O'Connor said everyone packed into the small pub to listen to the band.

This year, the forecast might be more conducive to outdoor events scheduled for Friday and Saturday, as the National Weather Service calls for mostly sunny skies and daytime highs in the mid-70s on those days.

Still, the weekend of music is fighting the national economic downturn and a decline in vacation travel, and some area businesses are unsure if they'll see a noticeable bump in patronage during the event.

"I haven't noticed a large increase in rooms booked," said Erik Bingham, general manager at the Twin Falls AmeriTel Inn. "People aren't traveling as much as in the past because the economy has people worried about using their disposable income on things like this."

Twin Falls/Jerome Campgrounds of America campground owner Kim Carranza agreed. She said 10 percent of campground patrons are typically concert-goers during the weekend of the event, but said she hasn't seen as many registrations this year.

Meanwhile, Twin Falls Hilton Garden Inn General Manager Doug Ableman said

Buhl discounts pool fee for nonprofits

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Nonprofit entities such as the Buhl Boys and Girls Club may now use that city's pool at a reduced fee.

The decision to give certain 501(c)3 groups operating in Buhl a discounted rate came during Monday's City Council meeting.

The pool consistently runs in the red, said Mayor Tom McCauley, "but it's something we offer."

The reduced rates unanimously approved by the council are $10 for up to 20 people, $17.50 for up to 35 people and $35 for up to 70 people. Advance arrangements must be made with the city in order for the rate to apply.

McCauley said the idea was to make pool usage more affordable to groups "who work to better the lives of youth," while also covering city costs.

Councilman Kyle Hauser said a $10,000 First Federal Bank Foundation grant the city is seeking to pay for pool filters may help with pool costs. The council agreed to budget funding to match the grant, which may improve the city's chances of being awarded the funds.

Water Operator Jeff Huntington said budgeting matching funds wouldn't negatively affect the department as it "anticipates spending $2,500 next year anyway" to replace filters, at a cost of more than $1,000 each. He said two filters were recently replaced and an additional 13 "are due to be replaced."

In other city news, resident Wayne Moberg asked the council if he could rent an additional 90-gallon garbage bin for grass clippings.

"I'm making the best moonshine in Buhl," Moberg said about the wet and rotting clippings sitting in three 30-gallon cans the city won't pick up in his 9th Street alley. "The lawn is mowed every 10 days so the situation will recycle itself ... in a few days it's going to be a fire hazard."

Moberg, a senior citizen and war veteran, said the smaller bins are too heavy for he or his wife to lift into the city-issued bin, which fills with regular garbage and doesn't have enough space for his lawn clippings. He said he and several neighbors are willing to pay for extra bins.

Council members told Moberg they would investigate how renting additional bins works. The council plans to address the issue during its next meeting on June 28.

As personal data on Web hits flood levels, Congress wants to plug dike

By Mike Swift
San Jose Mercury News

SAN JOSE, Calif. — In the wake of a series of privacy missteps by Google, Facebook and other companies, a growing chorus on Capitol Hill is calling for major online privacy legislation and Silicon Valley companies are girding for the battle.

Washington politicians say they are increasingly concerned about how Silicon Valley's treatment of personal data could infringe on constituents' online privacy. Even as Congress begins to debate a controversial bill intended to update online privacy rules, a constant drip of headlines this spring about privacy problems affecting Google, Facebook and, now, Apple, has caused several congressional committees, the Obama administration and members of Congress from both political parties to home in on the issue.

"While privacy concerns have ebbed and flowed, I think it is fair to say that they are at an all-time high now," said Jim Dempsey, vice president for public policy for the Center for Democracy & Technology, a Washington-based nonprofit that works to protect both Internet innovation and privacy.

The conflict only intensified Friday after Google delivered a detailed response to the House Commerce Committee, denying that the company broke U.S. law when it inadvertently scooped up data from unsecured Wi-Fi networks as its Street View cars drove past private homes and businesses. That did not satisfy U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, co-chairman of the House Privacy Caucus, who called for hearings.

With the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee,

Ruth Robertson of the organization Raging Grannies protests Facebook's privacy issues, June 4 in front of Facebook headquarters in Palo Alto, Calif.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., asking both Google and Facebook for a broader explanation of their privacy practices, the Federal Communications Commission in a post Friday on its official blog highlighted the security loophole that allowed the e-mail addresses of 114,000 users of Apple's new iPad to become accessible.

"Google's behavior also raises important concerns," wrote Joel Gurin, who heads FCC's Consumer and Governmental Affairs Bureau. "Whether intentional or not, collecting information sent over Wi-Fi networks clearly infringes on consumer privacy."

The bill before Congress now would determine how Internet companies could collect personal data, and what warnings they would have to give to consumers.

Hoping to tell their side of the story, executives with Facebook and Google have been meeting with members of Congress. Google has boosted its spending on lobbying and contributions to federal candidates, and plans to continue to expand its presence in Washington, said Alan Davidson, Google's director of public policy for the Americas.

In 2009, Google spent about $4 million on its lobbying efforts, up from $260,000 in 2005, according to U.S. Senate records. By the end of the first quarter of 2010, Google had already spent $182,800, nearly two-thirds of what it spent during the entire 2008 election cycle, in contributions to congressional candidates, according to federal data collected by OpenSecrets.org.

"We're growing in Washington because we find our company and our industry is increasingly in the center of important debates about the future of the Internet," Davidson said. "We want to be a constructive part of those debates."

Even Twitter, which just hit its 200th employee, is hiring its first representative in Washington. The employee will not be a registered lobbyist, but an unofficial ambassador to help politicians understand the microblogging service, said Sean Garrett, a Twitter spokesman.

"We view communication between us and Washington officials as being a necessary part of a business where you touch millions of people," Garrett said.

Privacy advocates say Silicon Valley, by using people's demographic data and online histories as the currency that pays for online services through targeted advertising, is causing the conflict with Washington.

"I think it is part of the shifting directions of Facebook and Google," said Marc Rotenberg, of the Electronic Privacy Information Center. "Silicon Valley has now gotten itself mired deeply in privacy-related business models. I think that's what Washington is reacting to."

Monsanto runoff dam worries EPA

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Federal regulators are concerned that a dam built by Monsanto Co. earlier this year to trap phosphate mine runoff may be stopping more than just pollution.

They say the dam has also halted millions of gallons of water in Sheep Creek that would otherwise help fill the Blackfoot River.

The Environmental Protection Agency now wants the maker of Roundup herbicide to begin a costly treatment to remove selenium and heavy metals, then discharge clean water downstream, instead of capturing it in a 50-million-gallon lake behind the dam and using it for dust control on its mining roads.

The situation shows the predicament that companies like St. Louis-based Monsanto and the government face in Idaho's rich-but-polluted phosphate mining country not far from Yellowstone National Park: They must work to contain naturally occurring poisons unearthed during a century of digging, while protecting water supplies in an agricultural state hit hard by drought over the last decade.

The aim is to avoid killing streams just to save them.

"We support efforts to reduce selenium discharges to the creek, but we have serious concerns about the methods Monsanto is using, which is drying up the creek," said Mark Ryan, a federal Clean Water Act attorney for the EPA in Boise, on Wednesday. "We want to see it (the water) treated and put back into the creek where it belongs."

In 2007, the EPA warned Monsanto that seleniumand heavy metal-tainted water being flushed from the waste rock dump below the South Rasmussen Ridge Mine into Sheep Creek violated the federal Clean Water Act.

Sheep Creek runs into the Blackfoot River, and both are on the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality's list of 15 waterways that exceed selenium contamination standards.

Traces of selenium are needed by most animals including humans, but the element is toxic in large amounts.

Mines owned by Monsanto, Boise-based J.R. Simplot Co., and Agrium Inc. of Canada in the so-called phosphate patch near the Idaho-Wyoming border have captured public attention since selenium pollution began killing hundreds of livestock starting in the 1990s, including 18 cattle last August.

Monsanto got a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers permit in early April to erect a roughly 20-foot dam below the dump. It also has rights to the water it has trapped behind the dam.

Trent Clark, a Monsanto spokesman in Soda Springs, said Wednesday the company is seeking ways to eventually resume the flow of snowmelt and rain from its waste rock dump into Sheep Creek. He added that springs below the dam continue to flow into Sheep Creek and those meet federal clean water standards.

For now, the new dam is working to keep pollution in one place.

"None of that water is actually leaving the containment area," Clark said. "The next challenge is to find a solution that allows the free flow of the water without contaminants."

EPA plans next stage of Idaho Superfund cleanup

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Officials with the Environmental Protection Agency are preparing to collect public comment on a planned expansion of Superfund cleanup efforts in the Coeur d'Alene basin.

The region is contaminated with lead, cadmium, arsenic and other toxins from decades of silver and lead mining. Work has already been done to remove polluted soil from residential yards — an effort that was considered a priority to reduce children's risk of lead exposure — and the proposed expansion would focus on mine tailings contaminating rivers and streams.

The plan targets the upper portion of the south fork of the Coeur d'Alene River, where more than 300 old mining sites have been identified, including piles of waste rock in Burke Canyon. The piles are left over from the mining boomtown days of the early 1900s, and they are leaching toxic metals into Canyon Creek, which is in the same watershed. Parts of the creek are too poisonous for fish.

"As water flows through those areas, it's continually exposed to contamination," Superfund program manager

Bill Adams told The Spokesman-Review.

Anne Dailey, who is also an EPA Superfund manager, said cleaning the upstream pollution would improve the water quality downstream in Lake Coeur d'Alene.

Mine tailings are prevalent throughout the region. Until 1968, waste rock was dumped into the south fork of the Coeur d'Alene River. Tailings were also used as construction fill, and parts of Interstate 90 are built on waste rock.

Dailey says the EPA won't try to remove tailings from underneath the freeway or buildings.

The expansion is expected to cost $1.3 billion over the next three decades. A settlement with mining company Asarco will help pay for the cleanup.

The EPA is holding a public meeting on the expansion plans in Kellogg on Thursday. A formal 45-day comment period on the proposal starts in mid-July.

Grizzly attacks man riding bicycle to work in Alaska

By Mary Pemberton
Associated Press writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A man riding his bicycle to work Tuesday on a city trail was attacked by a grizzly bear, which swatted his ear and bit him on the leg, police said.

Sean Berkey encountered the bear on the east end of Rover's Run trail at 5:30 a.m. as he headed to work at the Alaska Native Medical Center, where the 45-year-old works as a pediatric pharmacist. He had crossed a wooden bridge when he surprised the sow, who had a cub with her.

Berkey stopped his bike, and the bear charged. He momentarily used his bike as a shield, said Bruce Bartley, a spokesman for the Alaska Department of Fish and Game.

Berkey played dead — the accepted practice when attacked by a brown bear — and then tried to get away, but the sow came after him again, so again Berkey played dead.

"The bear swatted him and bit him once," Bartley said, describing the injuries as "fairly minor."

Berkey eventually got back on his bike and rode to the hospital where he was met by a police officer, said Anita Shell, an Anchorage police department spokeswoman.

Berkey declined an Associated Press request for comment through the Alaska Native Medical Center. Hospital spokeswoman Fiona Brosnan said he did not want to talk about the attack.

It will be up to the municipality to decide whether to close the trail. It was closed two summers ago after a number of serious bear attacks on Rover's Run, including one in which a 15-year-old girl competing in a bike race suffered a crushed skull and almost died.

U.S. Army Spc. Christopher Sheffield of Boise rests his head on the butt of his rifle while riding in a Stryker on his way to a patrol on May 20 with Charlie Company, 1st Battalion, 17th Infantry Regiment of the 5th Stryker Brigade, in Afghanistan's Kandahar province. Sheffield wears a remembrance bracelet with the name of his friend, Pfc. Jonathan C. Yanney, who was killed last August when he stepped on an IED while on patrol with Bravo Company in the Arghandab valley. Yanney was of the first of 22 who have died during the battalion's 12-month deployment, which ends this summer.

Army: Afghan civilians killed by grenades, shots

By George Tibbitts
Associated Press writer

SEATTLE — Five Stryker Brigade soldiers from Joint Base Lewis-McChord killed three civilians in separate shootings in Afghanistan's Kandahar Province earlier this year, charging documents released by the Army on Wednesday allege.

The Army says all three victims were shot and two of them were hit by thrown grenades.

Two of the soldiers also are accused of assault and another is charged with seeking to destroy evidence.

In all, five soldiers have been charged with premeditated murder in the killings. All are assigned to B Company, 2nd Battalion, 1st Infantry Regiment, 5th Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 2nd Infantry Division.

The Army did not say what motives might have been involved.

The brigade, which made its first deployment to Afghanistan in July, has seen heavy fighting against Taliban insurgents and suffered 33 combat deaths. Two other soldiers have died of illness and another in a vehicular accident.

The three civilians killed near the Army's Forward Operating Base Ramrod in southern Afghanistan are identified as Gul Mudin, who died sometime in January; Marach Agha, killed on or about Feb. 22; and Mullah Adahdad, killed on or around

May 2.

Officials at Lewis-McChord said Pvt. 1st Class Andrew Holmes, 19, of Boise, Spc. Michael Wagnon II, 29, of Las Vegas, Nev., and Spc. Adam Winfield, 21, of Cape Coral, Fla., were charged Tuesday with one count each of premeditated murder.

Staff Sgt. Calvin Gibbs, 25, of Billings, Mont., and Spc. Jeremy Morlock, 22, of Wasilla, Alaska, each were charged earlier this month with three counts of premeditated murder and one count of assault.

The charging sheets, with the names of the accusers and officers involved blanked out, say Morlock and Gibbs shot Agha and used fragmentary grenades and their rifles to kill Mudin and Adahdad.

Holmes is accused of throwing a grenade at and shooting Mudin, Winfield of doing the same to Adahdad, and Wagnon of shooting Agha.

The documents also allege Morlock hit and kicked a person on May 5 and spat in a victim's face. Gibbs also is accused of hitting and kicking a person on that date. All identifying information is redacted, including names, gender, whether one or more victims were involved and whether they are civilians.

2 Nevadans plead guilty to killing wild mustangs

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press writer

RENO, Nev. — Two men changed their pleas Wednesday and acknowledged that they shot and killed five wild mustangs in Nevada in a case that flooded U.S. prosecutors with thousands of e-mails from around the world expressing outrage at the slaughter.

Todd Davis, 45, admitted in federal court in Reno that he and Joshua Keathley, 36, had been drinking and used "poor judgment" when they shot the horses with an AR-15 semiautomatic rifle in November near the Nevada-California line.

Prosecutors said they offered no plea bargain and intend to seek the maximum penalty of one year in jail and $100,000 fine for each at the sentencing set for Sept. 14.

"The intentional and malicious harassment, abuse and killing of federally-protected wild horses should not and will not be tolerated," said Dan Bogden, U.S. attorney for Nevada.

In changing their pleas, the two Lovelock men admitted to U.S. Magistrate Judge Robert McQuaid that they shot the horses about 150 miles northwest of Reno, a violation of the Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act of 1971.

"We'd been drinking a little," Davis said. "We saw some horses and used poor judgment and shot a few of them."

"We will fight this spill with everything we've got for as long it takes."

— President Barack Obama in his first address from the Oval Office, eight weeks after the start of the BP oil spill

EDITORIAL

Change is coming to higher ed, and nowhere more than at ISU

Idaho higher education is in crisis. Neglected by the Legislature and forced to ratchet up fees and tuition for students who are having a harder time paying, Idaho colleges and universities are frantically seeking a new business model for the 21st century.

Especially in Pocatello. Fifteen-thousand-student Idaho State University operates in the most competitive neighborhood in Northwest higher education, vying for students with Brigham Young University's Provo and Rexburg campuses, Utah State University, the University of Utah and the other Idaho public and private colleges.

And in some ways, it's at a distinct disadvantage compared to Boise State University, with its urban research-institution pedigree and its ample private-sector support, and with the University of Idaho, the state's land-grant college with operations statewide.

It's hard to imagine any kind of scenario for Idaho higher ed in the next century without BSU and the U of I playing central roles. Things aren't so clear in Pocatello.

By state mandate, ISU takes the lead in teaching health-science programs — the one true growth area for higher education in Idaho. But other Idaho colleges and universities have their own nursing programs, and ISU is still waiting to find out what its role will be in educating Idaho doctors of the future.

Will it be a full-blown medical school, as ISU President Arthur Vailas has lobbied for? Or something more modest?

In a conversation with the Times-News editorial board last week, Vailas made clear he hasn't given up the idea of an ISU-based medical school, which would incorporate programs statewide. But in his fourth year in Pocatello, he's also a realist.

Academic programs at ISU and elsewhere in Idaho higher education must make economic sense, he says, and incorporate the state's community colleges and its evolving distance-learning infrastructure. And with prospects for greater state funding for higher education cloudy, there must be a paradigm shift in how higher-ed pays for itself.

A year ago, Vailas proposed a "skunkworks" — an Idaho incubator where new technologies can be developed.

The politicians, so far, haven't recognized the urgency.

Idaho invests a lot in business development, and through its higher education system spends still more to develop intellectual capital. But it's not so helpful in turning job-creating ideas into reality.

It must do a much better job of that, and institutions like ISU are the logical vehicle for making it happen.

Vailas understand that the Idaho State University of 2020 is unlikely to look much like the ISU of 1980, and that's as it should be. The survival of his institution, and all the others, depends on its ability to make itself indispensable.

Obama's joyless joy ride

President Obama's first address from the Oval Office can be summed up with a song lyric from the 1951 Broadway musical, "Paint Your Wagon":

"Where am I goin'? I don't know.
When will I get there? I ain't certain.
All that I know is I am on my way."

Cal Thomas

Trying to gain momentum he might have had in the initial days following the BP oil disaster, the president took aim at several targets. He is unlikely to hit any of them, with the possible exception of BP, which could conceivably be forced out of business if retribution becomes the goal. Liberals love to beat up on big business, but beating up BP to the point of bankruptcy will not only cost U.S. jobs, but also threaten thousands of pensioners in Britain.

After pledging massive efforts to help clean up the continuing mess while acknowledging damage will continue for a long time, the president turned to his real agenda, which is known as cap and trade, or to conservatives, "cap and tax." He erroneously said, "We are running out of places to drill on land and in shallow water." No we're not. We are running out of places environmentalists will allow us to drill. There's plenty of oil (and gas) to be found under the earth, but the far-left greenies in pursuit of their cowardly new world will have none of it.

The president tried to coin a phrase, saying we need a "national mission" that will lead America to the promised land of energy independence. Every president since Jimmy Carter has said the same thing. At least President Obama didn't give his speech in a cardigan sweater. More about Obama's style in a moment.

The president said he has issued a six-month moratorium on new deepwater drilling until an investigation is completed into the cause of the BP accident. But we already know the cause from internal BP emails. Safety was compromised in exchange for speed and profit. The accident was an aberration. It appears most offshore oil platforms function safely and efficiently. Allowing for the construction of new ones closer to shore with proper oversight is an important step the president should take. Allowing existing oil rigs to continue pumping will preserve jobs.

Nuclear power is the future. This president is correct when he says we can't rely on oil forever. But the way to lead us away from our dependence on foreign oil is not by using the BP disaster to pass his fantasyland cap-and-tax legislation. Instead, he should use the threat of more terrorism as a motivator. But this administration won't label the terrorists for who they are, so don't look for any courage along those lines. A patriotic push, not just punitive punishment, is what's needed, but you've got to show love for America to rally patriots and this president is no George Washington.

The president seems to want a replay of his big government health care bill by using this "crisis" to push "cap and tax" legislation. He promised to listen to Republicans, but that's what he said about the congressional health care bill. In the end, he didn't much. We are living on borrowed money and if it keeps up we will also be living on borrowed time. Replacing dependence on oil with greater dependence on our Chinese debt-holders exchanges one addiction for another.

Now to style. The opening TV shot made the president look small. He was seated too low behind his desk and could have used a booster seat. Rather than fill the Oval Office with his presence, the scene appeared to dominate him. Everything around the president seemed larger than him: desk, flags, window, even his suit.

His gestures resembled a local TV news anchor. Gestures are better used when a speaker is standing. When one is seated, they become a distraction. And his voice never seemed to change. There was no cadence, no variation of tone, no pausing for emphasis.

The president doesn't know where he's going, but he assures us we'll get there. It sounds like a joy ride, but without the joy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pending legislation is important for Idaho

I am very hopeful that the Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act and the three wilderness areas it will establish will be passed into law in 2010.

Our Idaho congressional delegation is demonstrating great leadership in its work to move this bill forward as a bi-partisan team.

The Boulder-White Clouds provide critical habitat for wildlife and amazing beauty for quiet reflection away from our busy wired world. CIEDRA is well-thought out and will leave a lasting legacy in Central Idaho.

I urge our congressional delegation to do everything it can to get this legislation passed.

fathers recognized that our universe is governed by a set of immutable "natural laws." They observed that individuals, families, communities and nations willing to respect those laws have always enjoyed freedom and prosperity. Sadly our society today will rarely acknowledge the fact that these laws have not changed.

Ed's counsel to the Filer High School Class of 2010 covered the spectrum of wise "do's and don'ts" based on respect for those natural laws. Of significance was when he emphasized that marriage and children should be in their future, and in that order, not the other way around. The audience spontaneously burst out with applause. That he would suggest something so bold to teenagers in today's "anything goes" world is commendable. The supportive response that followed speaks volumes of the Filer community.

We are grateful for all of the people like Ed in our community!

Artists' proud husband hypes weekend event

This weekend sees the culmination of many months of preparation for the Art in the Park extravaganza that will take place in the downtown park in Twin Falls on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Many artists will exhibit their works.

Among these artists will be an abstract artist, Magdalena Morales Davis, who has won countless awards at local fairs. Her works have special significance as all monies from sales of her works will be donated to a special fund set up by the College of Southern Idaho student honor society Phi Theta Kappa, which will use the money to landscape a yard at the residence of a lady who lives in Buhl and who lost her son in the Iraq war several years ago.

A local contractor will do the complete job for a small fee. We hope by selling 30 works for a donation of $10 per work, we will meet this goal. I am indeed proud of this effort, as you see the artist is my wife, whose whole existence revolves around her artwork. She is a special lady and, although a bit mentally challenged, is an artist worthy to have her work shown.

My congratulations go to the Magic Valley Art Guild for putting on Art in the Park for the past 50 years. Festivities begin Friday evening at 6 p.m. and continue Saturday and Sunday.

Thank you, Jamie Mack, Art Haugh and other members of the guild for having this special lady display her art. Oh yes, the special lady is my wife as I reap the benefits of her artistic talents.

OTHER VIEWS

Here’s what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... big noise over F-35s

Idaho Statesman, Boise

The debate over the F-35 has grown noisier. That’s probably inevitable — but it’s still disappointing. A group calling itself Save Our Valley Now has mobilized to protest the Air Force fighter jet proposal. Group members say the flights would disrupt their daily lives and reduce the value of their homes — a property “taking” that they will fight in court, if needed. For the record, we disagree with the group’s assertions. We support Idaho’s campaign for F-35 projects — an economic boost that would be consistent with Idaho’s longstanding military presence Gowen Field and Mountain Home Air Force Base. However, we have said state and local officials must make sure neighbors’ noise concerns are taken seriously. An important F-35 debate has been lost in the distracting din of name-calling. An article Thursday about Save Our Valley Now has drawn more than 200 comments at IdahoStatesman.com, with some readers all too willing to label F-35 critics as whiners who are somehow un-American. It is easy and unproductive to question the motives of the opposition. Critics of the Eagle River Pavilion outdoor concert facility are subject to labeling as pampered “not-in-my-backyard” snobs — unfair, maybe, but not terribly malicious. Questioning the patriotism of F-35 critics goes too far and gets nowhere, distracting attention from the questions of how to balance military flights with the concerns of neighborhoods. Save Our Valley Now may well find itself on the short end of public sentiment, considering the area’s long-time support of Gowen activities, and state and local officials’ aggressive push for the F-35. As many of its supporters declare, online and in letters to the editor, the F-35 is accompanied by the “sound of freedom.” Debate, and challenging popular opinion, is another sound of freedom. It deserves respect, not contempt.

... real-world consolidation

Post Register, Idaho Falls

Sure we can consolidate Idaho Falls School District 91 and Bonneville Joint School District 93, as some in the community desire. Boise has one district. So does Meridian. And consolidation appears to make perfect sense in small counties with multiple school districts. But every situation is unique. And while groups such as Citizens for School District Consolidation make a merger between Districts 91 and 93 seem easy, there are a few details that need to be addressed. Teachers and administrators at District 91 make between 12 percent and 18 percent more than their colleagues at District 93. State law precludes a district from paying teachers less than they made the year before, unless an emergency is declared. So, District 93 teachers would get a pay raise. That would cost between $3.5 million and $4.2 million. Maybe you whittle that down by trimming administrators, but Bonneville County property owners would take a one-time hit. District 91’s supplemental levy is $6.8 million. District 93’s is $2.8 million. Those will have to be squared. It’s doubtful that District 91 patrons would support a drastic reduction in the operating budget, so District 93 property owners would be asked to dig a little deeper. If this can’t be resolved, the new super district would start out by taking a budget cut that would make next year’s 8.5 percent reduction seem small. District 93 has $67 million in long-term debt. That can’t be shared by folks who didn’t vote for it, so only half the new district would spend the next 17 years paying it off. Those aging schools in District 91 do need upgrades. Call us cynical, but we doubt those already paying off $67 million will sign onto more debt to repair or replace aging buildings their children do not attend. Idaho Falls’ charter schools are overseen by the state. But if the idea is to cut costs, charters have to be included in a new district. It would make no sense for the charters to retain administrative staff and boards when we could fold them into the new district. One district, one curriculum. One district, one board. Class schedules and calendars would need to be aligned, and a new board elected. Local control would suffer — each board member would represent a much larger geographical area. But the idea here is savings, not adequate representation. Maybe Citizens for School District Consolidation are right, and there are savings to be found in a merger. Certainly the concerns raised above won’t come as a surprise to these folks. They wouldn’t have campaigned against repairing and replacing aging, inadequate school buildings without understanding the pitfalls of what they were proposing. Would they?

Why the Tea Party is so darn mad

Sometimes it is hard to know where politics ends and metaphysics begins: when, that is, the stakes of a political dispute concern not simply a clash of competing ideas and values but a clash about what is real and what is not, what can be said to exist on its own and what owes its existence to an other. The seething anger that seems to be an indigenous aspect of the Tea Party movement arises, I think, at the very place where politics and metaphysics meet, where metaphysical sentiment becomes political belief. More than their political ideas, it is the anger of Tea Party members that is reshaping our political landscape. As Jeff Zeleny reported The Times, the vast majority of House Democrats are now avoiding holding town-hall-style forums out of fear of confronting the incubus of Tea Party rage that routed last summer’s meetings. This fear-driven avoidance is, Zeleny stated, bringing the time-honored tradition of the political meeting to the brink of extinction. It would be comforting if a clear political diagnosis of the Tea Party movement were available — if we knew precisely what political events had inspired the fierce anger that pervades its meetings and rallies, what policy proposals its backers advocate and what political ideals and values are orienting its members. Of course, some things can be said, and have been said by commentators, under each of these headings. The bailout of Wall Street, the provision of government assistance to homeowners who cannot afford to pay their mortgages, the pursuit of health care reform and, as a cumulative sign of untoward government expansion, the mounting budget deficit are all routinely cited as precipitating events. When it comes to the Tea Party’s concrete policy proposals, things get fuzzier and more contradictory: keep the government out of health care, but leave Medicare alone; balance the budget, but don’t raise taxes; let individuals take care of themselves, but leave Social Security alone; and, of course, the paradoxical demand not to support Wall Street, to let the hard-working producers of wealth get on with it without regulation and government stimulus, but also to make sure the banks can lend to small businesses and responsible homeowners in a stable but growing economy. There is a fierce logic to these views, as I will explain. But first, a word about political ideals.

J.M. Bernstein

In an essay in The New York Review of Books, pointedly titled “The Tea Party Jacobins,” Mark Lilla argued the hodge-podge list of animosities Tea party supporters mention fail to cohere into a body of political grievances in the conventional sense: they lack the connecting thread of achieving political power. It is not for the sake of acquiring political power that Tea Party activists demonstrate, rally and organize; rather, Lilla argues, the appeal is to “individual opinion, individual autonomy, and individual choice, all in the service of neutralizing, not using, political power.” He calls Tea Party activists a “libertarian mob” since they proclaim the belief “that they can do everything themselves if they are only left alone.” What Lilla cannot account for, and what no other commentator can explain, is the passionate anger of the Tea Party movement and the ease with which it succumbs to the most egregious falsehoods. What has gripped everyone’s attention is the exorbitant character of the anger Tea Party members express. Where do such anger and such passionate attachment to wildly fantastic beliefs come from? My hypothesis is that what all the events precipitating the Tea Party movement share is that they demonstrated the depths of the absolute dependence of us all on government action, and in so doing they undermined the deeply held fiction of individual autonomy and self-sufficiency that are intrinsic parts of Americans’ collective self-understanding. The rage and anger I hear in the Tea Party movement is the sound of jilted lovers furious that the other has suddenly let them down, suddenly made clear they are dependent and limited beings, suddenly revealed them as vulnerable. And just as in love, the one-sided reminder of dependence is experienced as an injury. All the rhetoric of self-sufficiency, all the grand talk of wanting to be left alone is just the hollow insistence of the bereft lover that she can and will survive without her beloved. However, in political life there are no second marriages; we have only the one partner, and although we can rework our relationship, nothing can remove the actuality of dependence. That is permanent.

J.M. Bernstein is professor of philosophy at the New School for Social Research.

ANOTHER BOULDER WHITE CLOUDS WILDERNESS BILL?

WE DON'T WANT IT SENATOR CRAPO!

WE DON'T NEED IT CONGRESSMAN SIMPSON!

SO, WHY DO IT SENATOR RISCH?

So what’s the hurry? We already have 4.5 million acres of designated wilderness in Idaho! The Boulders are being well managed and there is no broad support or demonstrated need for locking them up. Introducing a bill like this in a Pelosi-Reed dominated Congress is dangerous—changes they make won’t benefit most of the people of Idaho or the land the bill is intended to protect. We don’t need the bill; neither do the White Clouds.

Withdraw it while there is still time and leave the Boulders the way they are today; beautiful, well managed, and accessible.

Ala. prof charged in brother's 1986 shooting death

By Bob Salsberg
Associated Press writer

CANTON, Mass. — A biology professor charged with killing three of her colleagues at an Alabama university has been indicted in the 1986 shooting death of her brother in Massachusetts, prosecutors announced Wednesday.

Authorities had originally ruled that the shooting of Amy Bishop's brother was an accident, but they reopened the case after Bishop was charged in February with gunning down six of her colleagues at the University of Alabama-Huntsville, killing three.

Bishop, 45, is charged with first-degree murder in the death of her 18-year-old brother, Seth, Norfolk District Attorney William Keating said.

Keating said he did not understand why charges were never brought against Bishop.

"I can't give you any explanations, I can't give you excuses, because there are none," he said. "Jobs weren't done, responsibilities weren't met and justice wasn't served."

Bishop had told police who investigated her brother's death that she accidentally shot him while trying to unload her father's 12-gauge shotgun in the family's Braintree home. Her mother, Judith, the only witness to the shooting, confirmed her daughter's account to police.

But after Bishop was charged in the Alabama shootings, authorities began reinvestigating Seth Bishop's death.

U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, who was then the Norfolk County district attorney, said that Braintree police never told anyone in his office that after Bishop shot her brother, she tried to commandeer a getaway car at gunpoint at a local car dealership, then refused to drop her gun until officers ordered her to do so repeatedly. Those events were described in Braintree police reports but not in a report written by a state police detective assigned to the district attorney's office.

Investigators looking at an old crime scene photo from her brother's shooting discovered a newspaper article about the 1986 killings of actor Patrick Duffy's parents. The clipping, which was in Bishop's bedroom, described how a teenager shot the "Dallas" star's parents with a 12-gauge shotgun and stole a getaway car from an auto dealership.

Keating ordered an inquest, which was held in April. Nineteen witnesses, including Bishop's parents, testified before Quincy District Court Judge Mark Coven during the closed-door inquest. A grand jury heard evidence this month.

FDA says 'Female Viagra' falls short

By Matthew Perrone
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A pink pill designed to boost sex drive in women — the latest attempt by the drug industry to find a female equivalent to Viagra — fell short in two studies, federal health regulators said Wednesday.

The Food and Drug Administration is considering Boehringer Ingelheim's drug flibanserin for premenopausal women who report a lack of sexual desire, a market that drugmakers have been targeting for more than a decade since the blockbuster success of Viagra in men.

The search for so-called "female Viagra" has proved elusive though, with many drugs abandoned after showing lackluster results.

On Friday the FDA will ask a panel of experts to weigh in on the safety and effectiveness of Boehringer's drug. The agency is not required to follow the group's advice, though it often does.

In its review posted online, the FDA said two Boehringer studies failed to show a significant increase in sexual desire, as recorded by women in a daily journal. Women taking the drug reported slightly more sexually satisfying experiences, but FDA said that was not the primary measure of the study.

"The division wanted to see that an effect of treatment is an overall increase in sexual desire regardless of whether a sexual event occurred or not," states the FDA review.

The FDA also noted increased side effects like depression, fainting and dizziness seen among women taking the pink pill.

The drug, which is related to the antidepressant family, affects serotonin and several other brain chemicals, though it's not clear how that increases sex drive.

"We don't know specifically what the exact mechanism of action is but we believe it acts on brain chemicals that have a role in human sexual response," said Dr. Peter Piliero, executive director for Boehringer's U.S. medical affairs.

Since the launch of Viagra in 1998, more than two dozen experimental therapies have been studied for so-called "female sexual dysfunction," a market which some analysts estimate at $2 billion.

Study: Being obese bad for bedroom

By Maria Cheng
Associated Press writer

LONDON — Scientists say being fat can be bad for the bedroom, especially if you're a woman.

In a new study, European researchers found obese women had more trouble finding a sexual partner than their normal-weight counterparts, though the same wasn't true for obese men, and were four times as likely to have an unplanned pregnancy. Fat men also reported a higher rate of erectile dysfunction.

Experts interviewed more than 12,000 French men and women aged 18 to 69 about their sexual experiences and analyzed the results based on their Body Mass Index.

Obese women were 30 percent less likely than normal-weight women to have had a sexual partner in the last year. In comparison, there was little difference among obese men and normal-weight men as to whether they found a sexual partner.

The results were published online Wednesday in the medical journal BMJ. The study was paid for by several French government agencies.

People with a BMI of 18-24 are considered to have a healthy weight. Those with a BMI of 25 or above are considered overweight and people with a BMI of 30 or more are classified as obese.

Previous studies have found similar trends, but researchers were surprised by the discrepancy they found between the genders as to how excess weight affects peoples' sex lives.

"Maybe women are more tolerant of tubby husbands than men are of tubby wives," said Kaye Wellings, a professor of sexual and reproductive health at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine and one of the BMJ study authors.

Experts said the problems faced by obese people were probably due to a combination of physical problems linked to obesity as well as other issues, like low self-esteem and social prejudices.

Obese people are at higher risk anyway for diabetes, depression and urinary stress incontinence, all of which can hinder sex. If people are extremely heavy, they might also have muscular or skeletal problems that make sex challenging.

Scam targeting attorneys hits S.C. Idaho

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

A sophisticated scam is targeting attorneys and even some business owners in Idaho, prompting some banks to notify their clients before they become victims.

The scam, which first struck south-central Idaho about a month ago, has the ability to defraud banks and

BUSINESS ALERT

First Federal Savings Bank Security Director Sara Rose said a scam is targeting south-central Idaho businesses by overpaying for large purchases. She said scammers make a purchase using a stolen or legitimate credit or debit card. They then overpay and ask the business to pay the balance through Western Union. In most cases, businesses will suffer the loss for any money sent. "Anytime a customer tries to overpay, it's a huge red flag," Rose said.

victims of hundreds of more than previous scams thousands of dollars — far targeting consumers and the elderly. "This is one of the more sophisticated scams that we have seen and it involves a large amount of money," said Jay Dodds, chief financial officer at First Federal Savings Bank, who added that the bank is calling to warn some clients who may be targeted by the scam. Twin Falls attorney Thomas High is likely the first in the region to be targeted by the scam, which started with an e-mail from a business seeking services in collecting assets for a client. Unlike many scams initiated by e-mail, this one uses the names and addresses of legitimate businesses and people. "If you do a quick check, everything seems to pan out," he said. "But you never talk to anybody." The scammer sent High a retainer agreement and invoices reflecting the amount owed. One week later, he received a cashier's check for $265,000 with instructions to extract the retainer fee, and other fees associated with the transaction. He was also informed that the "business was in negotiations with the client." "A few days later they sent me an e-mail saying the client has paid, so I

CONFLICTS in CONGRESS

Lawmakers overhauling financial law have industry ties

By Sharon Theimer
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Anyone with a bank account or credit card has a stake in the overhaul of financial rules Congress is working on. But the industry ties of some politicians writing the law go far beyond the norm.

One senator's wife is a director of a securities exchange; another senator and his wife run a multimillion-dollar title company. And a congresswoman's husband drew salaries from three industry players last year.

Several lawmakers hashing out a House-Senate compromise on the legislation have millions in financial services company investments or owe big mortgage debts to banks lobbying on the legislation, according to an Associated Press review of financial disclosure reports released Wednesday.

None have stepped away from the dealmaking.

The legislation is the most ambitious rewrite of financial regulations since the Great Depression. It aims to prevent a repeat of the 2008 financial crisis that drove the economy into a deep recession. Lawmakers hope to get the measure to President Barack Obama by July 4.

Sen. Chris Dodd, a Connecticut Democrat and chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, is leading the negotiations for the Senate. Dodd's wife, Jackie Clegg, serves on the board of CME Group Inc., which has spent at least $2.9 million since January 2009 lobbying on federal issues, including the financial regulation overhaul.

Mercantile Exchange merged, is the world's largest futures and options exchange. It has a huge stake in the overhaul.

Exchanges charge a fee for processing trades, and under the legislation, derivatives traders would have to execute over-the-counter swaps through the exchanges. CME has opposed that requirement, putting it at odds with the Senate bill. CME executives have said such a mandate might drive some of their business overseas.

Clegg received $153,219 in compensation from CME Group last year, divided between cash payments and

Commission accepts Idaho Power energy credit plan

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

The commission regulating utilities in Idaho said Wednesday that it will accept a proposal by the state's largest utility to sell energy credits in order to lower customer rates.

The decision marks the end of a nearly two-year debate between the Idaho Power Company and ratepayers over management of renewable energy credits — often called Green Tags.

Customer groups have disagreed over whether the tags should be sold, with the proceeds being used to lower customer rates, or "retired" to meet possible future renewable energy standards.

Green Tags are issued to utilities for every megawatt-hour of electricity generated by a renewable energy source such as wind or manure digesters. The tags represent a currency that can be traded on an active market to businesses wishing to support renewable energy.

The tags have become more valuable as an increasing number of states require their utilities to buy or generate a certain amount of power from renewable sources. Idaho Power's Elkhorn Wind project in Oregon and its Raft River geothermal project in south-central Idaho generated more than 320,000 MWhs worth of Green Tags for Idaho Power in 2007 and 2008.

In 2009, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission told Idaho Power to sell its 2007 and 2008 Green Tags and use the $1.7 million in proceeds to benefit ratepayers. However, Idaho Power asked that it be allowed to retire the tags, saying it expected to federal renewable energy mandates.

Senate approves home tax credit extension

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Wednesday approved a plan to give homebuyers an extra three months to finish qualifying for federal tax incentives that boosted home sales this spring.

The move by Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid would give buyers until Sept. 30 to complete their purchases and qualify for tax credits of up to $8,000. Under the current terms, buyers had until April 30 to get a signed sales contract and until June 30 to complete the sale.

The proposal, approved by a 60-37 vote, would only allow people who already have signed contracts to finish at the later date. About 180,000 homebuyers who already signed purchase agreements would otherwise miss the deadline.

Reid, D-Nev., added the proposal to a bill extending jobless benefits through the end of November. Nevada has the nation's highest foreclosure rate, and Reid is facing a tough re-election campaign.

The Realtors group has been pushing hard in Congress for the extension. Mortgage lenders, the trade group says, have been swamped with borrowers trying to get approved by the end of the month. Many potential borrowers are unlikely to make the deadline.

"If Congress fails to act promptly, then prospective homebuyers might not get the benefit of the homebuyer tax credit, even though they have completed contracts," the Realtors said a letter to lawmakers.

First-time buyers were eligible for a tax credit of up to $8,000. Current owners who bought and moved into another home could qualify for a credit of up to $6,500.

The $140 million cost of the measure would be financed by denying businesses the ability to deduct from their taxes punitive damages paid when losing lawsuits or judgments.

Nintendo woos gamers with classics, 3-D

By Barbara Ortutay
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — You won't need special glasses to play games in 3-D on Nintendo's newest handheld device, but don't expect the technology to hit big-screen TVs anytime soon.

The 3DS, as the Japanese video game maker's upcoming gadget is called, uses a technology that's specially suited to a handheld device. It's a "parallax barrier" LCD screen, whose pixels are aligned so your left and right eyes see different portions of the image.

It's as if two sets of thin blinds were laid over the screen so each eye sees its own version. Combined in the brain, the two versions become a 3-D image, explained Satoru Iwata, president and CEO of Nintendo Co.

Nintendo showed off the 3DS along with a broad swath of upcoming video games Tuesday at the E3 Expo in Los Angeles, an industry conference of 45,000. To please its long-time fans, Nintendo also introduced updates to classic game franchises like "Donkey Kong," "Zelda" and "Kirby."

The technology behind the 3DS requires viewers to sit at a certain angle and distance from the screen. That's why it works for a handheld device but not — at least not yet — for a TV.

FedEx says global trade recovery is underestimated

By Samantha Bomkamp
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — FedEx said people are too pessimistic about a recovery in global trade, after it reported Wednesday that strong exports from Asia and other international shipments drove its improved fourth-quarter results.

While concerns about European economies and their looming debt problems remain, FedEx said international shipments overall grew by 23 percent. Countries like India, China and Brazil in particular are driving the increase.

FedEx said the U.S. economy is steadily growing as well. Still, it has a conservative outlook for the next year, expecting rising costs as shipments pick up.

FedEx delivers higher earnings

The company's forecast for earnings of $4.40 to $5 per share for the fiscal year that started June 1 falls short of analysts' predictions of $5.05 per share. It's the first time FedEx has issued a full-year forecast since before the recession, indicating the company's growing confidence in the long-term recovery.

FedEx, based in Memphis, Tenn., expects to earn 85 cents to $1.05 per share for the quarter ending in August. Analysts forecast $1.03 per share.

In the quarter ended in May, FedEx earned $419 million, or $1.33 per share. It lost $876 million, or $2.82 per share a year earlier. Excluding a writedown on the value of assets and aircraft, earnings were 64 cents per share a year ago.

Revenue climbed 20 percent to $9.43 billion. FedEx took delivery of 18 planes in the fourth quarter. Six of those were Boeing 777Fs, which can fly from the company's hub in Memphis to China without refueling.

FedEx said international priority shipments jumped 24 percent in the period. Average daily shipments in the company's Ground unit rose 7 percent. The Ground segment grew steadily during the recession as people switched to slower shipping methods to save money.

Arlington headstones found in stream bed

By Christian Davenport
The Washington Post

ARLINGTON, Va. — Several mud-caked headstones line the banks of a small stream at Arlington National Cemetery, the country’s most venerated burial ground. Farther upstream in a wooded area, a few others lie submerged with the rocks that line the stream bed.

On Wednesday, after The Washington Post alerted the cemetery to their presence, officials there said they were shocked to find the gravestones lying in the muck near a maintenance yard.

Already under fire in recent days for more than 200 unmarked or misidentified graves and a chaotic and dysfunctional management system, cemetery officials vowed to investigate the headstones along the stream and take “immediate corrective action,” said Kaitlin Horst, a cemetery spokeswoman.

Officials said they do not know how the stones got there, whom they belong to, or how old they are. Horst could say only that “they appear to be decades old.”

Were they used as riprap to prevent stream erosion? Were they engraved incorrectly and then discarded? Or were they intended for a landfill — where thousands of weathered or damaged burial markers routinely were sent years ago — and ended up in the mud instead?

One of the headstones offers some clues. It has a cross in a circle at the top, a design that Horst said was discontinued in the late 1980s. And there is writing. It is worn and faded but seems to identify the person as a Navy captain, whose name is something like J. Warren McLaughlin.

In closing arguments, California trial casts gay marriage as landmark battle

By Robert Barnes
The Washington Post

SAN FRANCISCO — A landmark federal trial that could lead to a constitutional right for same-sex couples to marry ended Wednesday with competing views about the traditional role of marriage and whether the battle represented the latest frontier of the nation’s civil rights struggle.

Two stalwarts of Washington’s conservative legal community argued before Chief U.S. District Judge Vaughn Walker, but this time on opposite sides.

Walker is being asked to decide whether California voters violated the U.S. Constitution’s guarantees of due process and equal protection when they passed a referendum in November 2008 to amend the state constitution, defining marriage as between a man and a woman.

Washington lawyer Charles Cooper, arguing on behalf of Proposition 8 backers, told Walker that it is “crucial to the public interest” to limit marriage to opposite-sex couples. It is “fundamental to the very existence and survival of the human race” that society promote marriage to ensure that procreative relations are in “enduring, stable unions” with a goal that children be raised by both parents.

Cooper said California voters are in line with the rest of the country, where referendums on allowing same-sex marriage have met with defeat for gay-rights advocates. The record in the judicial branch is similar, he said: More than two-thirds of judges who have considered the issue have ruled against same-sex marriage.

“It is a judicial tsunami they are asking you to sail into,” Cooper told Walker. He said the judge needed to find only that voters had a rational basis for their definition of marriage to find the amendment constitutional. Thirty states have such restrictions in their constitutions.

Cooper’s counterpart, former U.S. Solicitor General Theodore Olson, told Walker that the times called for boldness.

Representing two same-sex couples who want to marry, Olson invoked groundbreaking Supreme Court civil rights decisions, such as Brown v. Board of Education, which forbade racial segregation in public schools, and Loving v. Virginia, which threw out that state’s law against interracial marriage.

“Proposition 8 discriminates on the basis of sex the same as Virginia law discriminated on the basis of race,” Olson said.

Walker replied that, when the Supreme Court decided Loving, the number of states that barred interracial marriage had dwindled from more than 40 to less than half that. “There was already a tide running with respect to interracial marriage,” Walker said. “Do we have a political tide here that’s going to carry the Supreme Court?”

Walker also candidly worried that having the judiciary find a right to same-sex marriage, rather than producing such a change through the political process, might cause the kind of intractable national dilemma that he said had consumed the country for 30 years.

Olson said he assumed Walker was referring to abortion, but said this issue was different. Allowing gays to marry, he said, would be granting them participation in what the Supreme Court has declared for more than a century to be a fundamental right.

Interpreting the Constitution is not a job that allows a judge to wait until the public opinion polls improve, Olson said. “Some judge is going to have to decide what we’ve asked you to decide,” he said.

The personal notes came at the end of a long day. Walker had presided over a 21/2-week trial in January, but procedural matters delayed closing arguments until Wednesday.

The plaintiffs are Kris Perry and Sandy Stier, a lesbian couple from Berkeley with four children, and Paul Katami and Jeffrey Zarillo, longtime partners from Burbank.

They are represented not only by Olson, who represented George W. Bush in Bush v. Gore, but also by Olson’s Democratic rival in that case, David Boies.

The two men put on an elaborate case for Walker, with their own clients, social scientists, psychologists and experts on marriage providing testimony. Cooper called only two witnesses, and, in his questioning, Walker seemed peeved that the Proposition 8 backers did not do more.

President Obama seeks tighter rules on school profits

By Nick Anderson and Daniel de Vise
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration proposed to tighten oversight of the booming for-profit sector of higher education on Tuesday, with rules that aim to curtail aggressive recruiting practices and that require schools to disclose graduation and job-placement rates to prospective students.

But in its notice of proposed rulemaking, the Education Department omitted a draft measure, under debate for several months, that would cut federal aid to those schools if graduates on average spend more than 8 percent of their starting salaries to repay loans.

Administration officials said that the draft measure — an attempt to define “gainful employment” for graduates — remained under discussion and that a related proposal would be published in coming weeks. Some industry officials object to the measure, saying it would jeopardize many degree programs at for-profit schools even as President Obama is seeking to raise the nation’s college graduation rate.

“We have many areas of agreement where we can move forward,” Education Secretary Arne Duncan said in a statement. “But some key issues around gainful employment are complicated and we want to get it right, so we will be coming back with that shortly.”

Nationwide, enrollment in for-profit, post-secondary schools rose from about 550,000 in 1998 to 1.8 million in 2008. Critics of the schools say too many students graduate with unacceptably high debt, which the industry disputes.

Most of the rules proposed Tuesday would apply to all colleges, public and private, an administration official said. One proposal would end certain types of incentive payments to college recruiters. Another proposal, which targets the for-profit sector and post-secondary vocational programs, would require schools to disclose information about graduation and job-placement rates to prospective students.

The government plans to publish final rules by Nov. 1, and they would take effect in summer 2011.

Among the schools that would be affected is the for-profit Kaplan University, owned by a subsidary of The Washington Post Co. A Kaplan spokesman declined to comment Tuesday pending a review of the administration proposal.

Sara Jones, a spokeswoman for Apollo Group, which owns the for-profit University of Phoenix, said the company already discloses graduation rates for degree programs but does not release job-placement rates because many of its students work while taking classes.

“We support the U.S. Department of Education’s efforts to advance accountability in higher education,” Jones said.

Poll bolsters congressional Democrats

By Alan Fram
and Trevor Tompson
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — There’s encouraging news for Democrats battling to retain control of Congress in this fall’s elections, with the party holding a slender edge in public trust for shepherding the economy and slightly more people saying their finances are healthy, according to a new poll.

The reeling economy remains people’s top concern, according to an Associated Press-GfK Poll conducted earlier this month, making public attitudes about it crucial for both parties’ hopes in November. The good news for Democrats: By a margin of 47 percent to 42 percent, people trust them more than Republicans to guide the economy, and 64 percent — slightly more than in April — say their household budgets are in good shape.

In addition, people want Democrats to win control of Congress by a 46 percent to 39 percent margin. That is the second straight month in which Democrats have held a delicate advantage on that question since April, when 44 percent preferred Republicans and 41 percent picked Democrats.

“When Clinton was in office, we were doing exceptionally well. Then Republicans got in office and we are where we are,” said Daniel Lowery, 23, a warehouse worker from Fostoria, Ohio, who wants Democrats to continue leading the House and Senate.

Even so, there’s plenty in the poll to encourage Republicans, and nothing that contradicts many analysts’ views that the GOP has a solid shot of capturing majorities of one or both chambers of Congress.

The public’s anti-

Washington mood remains robust, with 55 percent saying they want a new member of Congress — bad news for Democrats with more incumbents to defend. While Republicans strongly prefer a fresh face, Democrats are divided about evenly over whether they want to re-elect their current representatives and 6 in 10 independents want someone new — all ominous signs for congressional Democrats.

In addition, a low 24 percent approve of how Congress is doing its job, a hefty 72 percent still say the nation’s economy is in poor condition, and 77 percent consider huge federal budget deficits a top concern.

“It’s just my conservative views on taxes, on how involved government gets in people’s lives,” said Jessica Iskander, 25, a homemaker from Hartly, Del., who wants Republicans running Congress.

People also remain upset about the anemic job market and the oil gushing into the Gulf of Mexico. President Barack Obama gets mediocre marks for handling the economy, unemployment, the deficit and the oil spill, numbers that over time could rub off on congressional Democrats.

“They’re leading us down the wrong road,” Raymond Beard, 60, a minister from Crowville, Ala., said of Democrats. “They’re doing a lot of things against what I was raised to believe, such as going to a socialist-type government where the government takes care of people instead of people taking care of themselves.”

Other questions in the poll point to Democratic advantages.

Congressional Democrats get a thumbs-up from 38 percent, modestly more than the 32 percent who approve of how Capitol Hill Republicans are doing their jobs. When it comes to performance on major issues, Democrats have taken a solid advantage over Republicans on handling health care and have narrowed the GOP edge on defense and immigration.

“You have to spend all this money,” John Gillies, 71, of Houston, a Democrat in the oil and gas business, said of why he favors Democratic efforts to revive the economy. “If you try to balance the budget at this point you’ll break it, and you have to tax people like me who have money.”

Since the April 20 Gulf oil rig explosion triggered a massive leak that remains unplugged, the oil spill has rocketed to such prominence that 87 percent consider it a major concern, trailing only the economy’s 91 percent.

Fifty-two percent disapprove of Obama’s handling of the crisis, a weak number that parallels the public’s dissatisfaction with President George W. Bush’s performance in Hurricane Katrina’s aftermath in 2005. The one saving grace for Obama — the public is even less happy with BP, with 83 percent condemning its effort to stop its leaking well.

The AP-GfK Poll involved landline and cell phone interviews with 1,044 randomly chosen adults and was conducted by GfK Roper Public Affairs & Corporate Communications from June 9-14. It has a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 4.3 percentage points.

Apple, AT&T suspend iPhone 4 orders

By David Sarno
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Barely a day after its new iPhone went on sale, Apple Inc. and partner AT&T Inc. said they were so slammed with orders that they were temporarily suspending sales to make sure they didn't sell more units than they could make.

Apple said it sold 600,000 iPhones Tuesday, the first day in which it began taking orders online. That amounted to 10 times more advance orders than it had received for the previous version last year. The new phone hits Apple and partner stores June 24.

The heavy sales triggered widespread glitches encountered by prospective iPhone 4 buyers Tuesday, when for most of the day AT&T's website displayed errors to those trying to order the phone. The new iPhone comes equipped with a much sharper screen and cameras on front and back that for the first time allow users to make video calls.

Apple apologized Wednesday for what it called "many order and approval system malfunctions" and noted that "many customers were turned away or abandoned the process in frustration."

Although AT&T did not offer an explanation for its system glitches, it did say there were 13 million visits to its website Tuesday by users interested in upgrading their phones, for which it is the exclusive wireless carrier.

"That number is about three times higher than the previous record for eligibility upgrade checks in one day," the company said in a statement.

But AT&T's trouble handling the demand for new phones was reminiscent of its issues supporting the heavy load on its wireless networks, which it says are handling 50 times as much data as they were three years ago.

Floods near Riviera leave at least 19 dead

By Lionel Cironneau
Associated Press writer

DRAGUIGNAN, France — At least 19 people were killed in flash floods that hit the backhills of the French Riviera on Wednesday and turned streets into rivers of surging, muddy water, officials said.

There was confusion about how many people were missing in the flooding that washed over picturesque towns and left them standing in several feet of brown water, a press officer at the local Var region prefecture said. But probably at least 12 people were unaccounted for, the official said on condition of anonymity in keeping with her job's regulations.

Interior Minister Brice Hortefeux, visiting the region, said the death toll "unfortunately, may climb."

The floods swept away cars, trees and parts of houses in a downturn that devastated the picturesque region in the hills behind a portion of the Riviera, a magnet for tourists. Coastal towns where tourists flock, Frejus and Roquebrune, also were hit.

Eleven of the deaths were in Draguignan in the Riviera back hills scattered with olive groves and small vineyards.

Nearly 3,000 rescue workers poured into the region, joining 650 police, the prefecture said. Nearly a dozen helicopters worked overnight Tuesday to evacuate people trapped by floodwaters, which reached about 6.5 feet high in some areas.

It was the second time in less than four months that France has coped with major weather-related disasters. On Feb. 28, at least 52 people were killed when a storm named Xynthia swept through French coastal communities on the Atlantic with waves smashing dikes.

On Wednesday afternoon, about 1,200 people were in shelters, and tens of thousands were without electricity or phone service, the Var government said. More than 89,000 people remained without electricity Wednesday evening.

The Toulon-Hyeres airport, closed for several hours, was reopened, but the train line between Toulon and Nice was shut down, the prefecture said.

The flash flooding started Tuesday evening. Meteo France meteorological service forecast more but lighter rain Wednesday night in the popular tourist region.

"We've never seen so much rain in the month of June," said Patrick Galois of the national weather service. He said some 16 inches of rain had fallen in the hardest-hit area of Arcs, near Draguignan. "That corresponds with average rainfall in six months."

French television broadcast images of walls of muddy brown water slamming over stone walls and coursing through city streets. The flood left cars stacked on one another and ripped the siding off houses.

Residents worked Wednesday to clear mud and water from homes and businesses.

French President Nicolas Sarkozy said his "first thoughts go out to the victims," and underscored his "solidarity with the inhabitants of the Var region who have had to go through this very difficult natural disaster," according to a statement.

Bill Gates, Warren Buffett lobby rich to donate half their wealth

By Donna Gordon Blankinship
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE — Microsoft Corp. co-founder Bill Gates and billionaire investor Warren Buffett are launching a campaign to get other American billionaires to give at least half their wealth to charity.

Buffett, chairman and CEO of Berkshire Hathaway Inc., said in a letter introducing the concept that he couldn't be happier with his decision in 2006 to give 99 percent of his roughly $46 billion fortune to charity.

Patty Stonesifer, former CEO of the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, told The Associated Press on Wednesday that Gates and Buffett have been campaigning for the past year to get others to donate the bulk of their wealth.

The friends and philanthropic colleagues are asking people to pledge to donate either during their lifetime or at the time of their death. They estimate their efforts could generate $600 billion dollars in charitable giving.

In 2009, American philanthropies received a total of about $300 billion in donations, according to The Chronicle of Philanthropy.

The handful of billionaires approached so far have embraced the campaign, said Stonesifer, a close friend of Gates who offered to speak about the effort.

Sawtooth Botanical Garden extends wildflower walks through mid-July

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Ted Witt scanned the hillside as he stepped out of his SUV at the end of the road in Greenhorn Gulch.

As far as he could tell, there were no wildflowers in sight — not a good sign for a Wildflower Walk organized by the Sawtooth Botanical Garden.

But it took just 30 steps along the trail for Witt to realize the area was swimming in flowers — from yellow dogtooth violets to pinhead-sized blue-eyed Marys to sweet cicely, which, guide Allison Kennedy pointed out, has a myriad of medicinal properties.

“It’s amazing how we have all this out here, and I completely ignored it for so long,” said Witt. “One day I said: This is ridiculous. If anybody has any natural curiosity at all, they should check it out.”

Learning about the wildflowers along the trail adds interest to any hike. It’s also a good way to become better acquainted with the area in which you live.

“Knowing the flowers in my area gives me a feeling that this is where I belong,” said Ketchum naturalist Jeanne Cassell.

This year’s wildflowers are two to three weeks behind schedule, thanks to a cool, wet spring. That prompted the Sawtooth Botanical Garden to extend its wildflower walks through mid-July, said Allison Kennedy.

But the wildflowers are expected to be spectacular because of the cool, damp weather.

Here’s a look at a few you might see along the

Scarlet Gilia

These bright red trumpet-shaped flowers can often be spotted along trails and even from Highway 75 as one drives north of Ketchum. They’re also known as sky rocket. And some people even call them skunk flowers, said Sun Valley flower enthusiast Scott Earle, because the flowers and foliage have an acrid odor when crushed.

There are a few out now but they will become more abundant in the next few weeks lasting until late summer or early fall. As you can imagine, the hummingbirds love their bright red color — and that’s a good thing for the flower, as they need the hummingbirds to pollinate them.

WANT TO KNOW MORE?

The Sawtooth Botanical Garden offers Wildflower Walks each Thursday. The walks are held from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., leaving from the garden at Highway 75 and Gimlet Road. Cost is $10 for members and $15 for non-members. To register: 726-9358.

way:

The Vaseflower

Also known as the Sugar Bowl or Hairy Clematis, this hairy bell-shaped purple flower can be found in late spring and early summer after the snows melt.

It is a member of the buttercup family.

Pioneers boiled its leaves to treat headaches. And the Navajo Indians used the root to treat nose congestion.

Brown’s Peony

You often have to lift this showy globe-shaped flower to see its golden yellow stamens, which encircle a large olive green ovary, because its stems often bend over under the weight of the heavy reddish brown to maroon-colored blossoms.

Mountain Hollyhock

These showy flowers created people jams on the Fox Creek Loop north of Ketchum last year as hikers and mountain bikers flocked to see fields of wild hollyhock blooming amidst the charcoal skeletons of trees burnt in the 2007 Castle Rock Fire.

Large amounts could also be seen on the Lodgepole Trail in Greenhorn Gulch.

The mountain hollyhock belongs to the mallow family. The term “mallow” defines their soft, fuzzy leaves.

They bloom in shades of pink and lavender on spike-like stems three to five feet tall. They’re commonly found along stream banks or in burned areas because the seeds, which can remain dormant for more than a century, require some scouring action, such as running water or heat from a fire in order to germinate.

The Indians chewed the stems like gum. The flowers also provide a nice buffet for elk and deer as burnt areas regenerate.

Boise botanist Ray Vizgirdas, author of “Useful Plants of Idaho,” says Northwestern Indians made a tea from the peony’s thick roots to treat lung ailments. A decoction of boiled roots was also taken for tuberculosis, venereal disease, coughs and nausea while a lotion was used for headaches, a liniment for swellings, a gargle for sore throats and a wash for sore eyes.

Oregon Grape

The oregon grape, or mahonia, boasts evergreen leaves that look like holly. This time of year it has bright yellow flowers in tight clusters near the stem. Later those flowers will become red and purple fruits, hanging like small grapes as the leaves turn brilliant red.

The berries mature in summer, and make delicious jam when harvested and cooked with sugar. Pioneer women used Oregon grape juice as a substitute for lemon juice, and sometimes candied the berries for winter use.

Native Americans, in turn, mixed the berries with other berries, boiled, dried, mashed and diluted with water to make a warm weather drink. They are also forage for numerous birds and animals.

A tincture made from its roots is said to help dilate blood vessels, lowering blood pressure and relieving the aches and pains of rheumatism. It is also good for the liver, and is sometimes used for indigestion, hyperglycemia, and as a laxative. Moreover, it’s used for chronic, scaly skin conditions like eczema and psoriasis.

The roots make a vibrant yellow dye, which the natives used in decorating baskets, moccasins,

Mountain Bluebell

Every year, it seems, one or two wildflowers take on a life of their own, blooming beyond the call of duty.

This year it’s the mountain bluebells’ turn to be in the spotlight. They’re everywhere, blooming in profusion from Greenhorn Gulch south of Ketchum to Adam’s Gulch just northeast of Ketchum. And they’re sure to be turning up in the mountains farther to the north soon.

It’s not difficult to remember their name, as they have bell-shaped flowers that hang beneath leaves. They’re among the first blue flowers to appear in the spring, appearing on sagebrush-covered slopes soon after the snow melts. They appear to turn pink as they age.

Fish & Game officer recognized as hero

Question: “I heard about one of our local COs getting special recognition for saving someone’s life. What was that all about ... ?”

Answer: We’ve had several department employees receive special recognition recently.

The one you are referring to was a Life Saving award given by Gov. C.L “Butch” Otter to Senior Conservation Officer Richard Holman of Wendell. Last December, Holman risked his life to save three young waterfowl hunters

ASK THE OFFICER

after they capsized their small boat in the Snake River less than 100 yards above the Upper Salmon Falls diversion.

Using a boat, Holman plucked the three from a small cattail island hip-deep in icy water and transported them to a rescue vehicle to take them to Gooding Memorial Hospital. When picked up, the three were severely hypothermic and rapidly losing strength. A Twin Falls County sheriff’s deputy said if Officer Holman had not risked his own life and displayed exceptional boating skills to pick those kids up, instead of a rescue, this operation would have been a recovery.

Randy Smith, regional wildlife manager, and Jack Connelly, a principal wildlife research biologist specializing in sage grouse, also received special recognition. They each received the Robert L. Patterson award at the 27th Western Agencies Sage and Columbian Sharp-tail grouse workshop held in Twin Falls last week.

The award was established in honor of Robert L. Patterson’s strong commitment to the conservation of sage grouse and his landmark, 1952 book, “The Sage grouse in Wyoming” The award recognizes outstanding individuals and organizations that have worked to conserve and manage Gunnison and greater sage grouse and Columbian sharp-tailed grouse.

Both biologists received this prestigious award for their continued efforts to obtain and use scientific information to manage Idaho sage grouse, a native western prairie grouse species. In attendance at the annual workshop were biologists from the western United States and several western Canadian provinces.

We rarely get to “blow our own horn,” but in these instances the public needs to know we have several employees that are true heroes and perform life-saving acts, while others are nationally recognized by their peers for excellence in performance of their duties.

Rough front: Where beauty is accessible

Photos by MICHAEL GALLACHER/Missoulain

‘It’s just rough old country,’ says longtime outfitter Bill Cunningham as he treks into Volcano Reef on the Rocky Mountain Front west of Bynum, Mont., last month.

Breathtaking scenery highlights this hike along the Rocky Mountain Front

By Rob Chaney
The Missoulain

BYNUM, Mont. — Unlike Many Glacier, Old Faithful or Beartooth Pass, your grandmother cannot visit the Rocky Mountain Front and bring you a lousy T-shirt about it.

That’s because if your grandmother has ever been to the Front, it’s probably her favorite place in the world and she’s kept her mouth shut about it. Also, there’s almost nobody there selling T-shirts.

Part of that is down to the Front’s almost Patagonian style of repelling humans. When the wind gets blowing, you quickly understand why the pine trees are 6 inches tall and 20 feet long. No rail line delivers tourists, like Glacier National Park enjoys. There is a ski area, but frequently no snow. The beautiful creeks hold few fish.

We’ll get to the grizzly bears in a bit.

“It’s just rough old country,” says Bill Cunningham, an outfitter and writer who abandoned Montana’s big cities to settle in Choteau. “It’s rougher, more austere, more sparse country that isn’t going to appeal to every taste.”

Hearing Front-lovers like Cunningham describe their mountains resembles the geological equivalent of a wine-tasting class. The Rocky Mountain Front bursts abruptly from the eastern plains, compared to the Beartooths’ more prolonged buildup. Its gray-orange limestone has a particularly abrasive nature, unlike Glacier’s soft red and green argillite. And for a place with a dominant landmark called the Chinese Wall, it’s surprisingly accessible.

On the other hand, where else in Montana can you see a sea of nameless peaks? Just elevation numbers on the map. Talk about splendid isolation.

Retired Great Falls Tribune editor Tom Kotynski recalled coming to Montana from Chicago 37 years ago with plans to explore every inch of Glacier National Park. But he ended up writing a book titled “Discover the Rocky Mountain Front: A Hiking Guide.”

“When I moved here, the first thing I did was head for Glacier Park every weekend,” Kotynski said. “But you can’t drive from Great Falls to Glacier Park without noticing those wonderful mountains out to the west. I got curious right away about going into them.”

No Going-to-the-Sun Road crosses the Front, but several good drives make the place visitable by vehicle. The Willow Creek Road from Augusta into the Sun River Game Range gets a stampede of traffic on the May 15 opening of elk-antler season, and then returns to a lonely scenic drive at the foot of Sawtooth Ridge the rest of the summer. The Sun River Road breaks off to the northwest and weaves through a canyon to Gibson Reservoir. If your rig has reasonable clearance, the Beaver Willow Road runs about 20 miles south from the reservoir to the Benchmark Road, which will loop back to Augusta.

From Choteau, the Canyon Road goes to defunct Teton Pass Ski Area. It’s a nice drive by itself, and also makes for an ideal start or end point for more adventurous circuit hikes.

Because the real splendor of the Front comes best on foot or horseback. Its mountains form a series of north-south ridges and walls, a cross-section of “thrust sheets” of Paleozoic rock layers that snapped and bent skyward above the continental shelf to the east.

The winds can be fierce on the Front. It’s a place where pine trees grow 6 inches high and 20 feet long.

These walls have a few perpendicular cracks. For example, Blackleaf Creek is finishing the job a glacier started long before in carving an entrance to the northern Front. It’s one of Cunningham’s favorite starting points, and he’s made about a dozen scrambles up Volcano Reef over the years to show visitors the majesty of the plains and peaks.

“There’s a richness of natural diversity here,” he said on a rare windless day atop Volcano Reef. “All the charismatic megafauna are here, including the buffalo. The wolves are coming back. And it’s the only place on the Rocky Mountain Front between Mexico and the Yukon where you still have grizzly coming out on the plains to live their annual life cycle.”

Two centuries ago, explorers Meriwether Lewis and William Clark first started running into grizzlies near the Montana-North Dakota border. As settlers laid out farms and ranches, the big bears wound up with only the toughest parts of the Rockies for a refuge. But around Choteau and Augusta, they still come down to roam the grasslands.

The grizzlies leave their calling cards everywhere, from scratching trees in creek bottoms to huge scats on the edge of mountain ridges. Last August, a poacher killed one known locally as Maximus — who was estimated to weigh more than 800 pounds.

Dupuyer rancher Karl Rappold knew Maximus, and never had a problem with bears messing with his cattle. His mailbox features a sheet-metal silhouette of Charlie Russell’s painting of a cowboy roping a grizzly.

“You should have seen Maximus’ dad and his grandpa,” Rappold said. “He was a baby compared to them.”

Bighorn sheep and big herds of elk also wander through the Front and its foothills, attracted by some of the last unbroken prairie grasses and the blasting winds that strip the snow away in winter.

And there’s also evidence of much earlier life. The limestone “reefs” aren’t true coral formations, but they do encase fossils of corals, trilobites and other residents of the ancient inland seas that used to cover this region. In his book, Kotynski noted many trips have been stalled by the investigation of some new deposit of prehistoric life.

“I’m just drawn to the drama of the Front,” he said. “I don’t think you’ve got that anywhere else in the state. It’s sort of the pivot point. Any place you pivot, you’re seeing a different aspect of Montana.”

Going wild with Hogue gun products

If you agree with the bumper stickers that say “Gun Control Is Being Able to Hit Your Target,” then you’re going to love the American-made gun-control products manufactured by Hogue Inc. of Paso Robales, Calif.

Hogue is a major player in the production of aftermarket handgun grips, rifle and shotgun stocks, and shooting accessories. Its products are designed to meet the unique needs of hunters, law enforcement and military personnel, as well as competitive and recreational shooters.

Though the company does offer a generous variety of exotic hardwood and laminate grips for handguns, Hogue is best known for its proprietary rubber overmolded synthetic stocks and grips. Essentially, these gun handles consist of a fiberglass reinforced polymer insert (skeleton) overlain with a soft rubber coating.

For my money, these are the best utility-field stocks and grips on the market today. The rubber coating is soft but resilient. Unlike conventional plastic stocks, which are hard and impersonal in the hand and on the cheek, Hogue stocks have a comfortable organic feel to them. Available in black, olive drab, today’s most popular camo patterns, and now pink (for the ladies), Hogue grips and stocks feature a raised cobblestone texture in the gripping areas; unlike wooden or conventional plastic stocks the rubber itself provides a slip-resistant surface, even when wet from perspiration or precipitation. This is gun control at its finest!

grip.com. You’ll find overmolded stocks patterned for many of today’s most popular rimfire and centerfire rifles and carbines. All of the stocks feature varmint-style forearms, hand-filling ambidextrous palm swells, sling swivel studs, effective recoil pads and straight-stock combs for easy alignment with optical sights.

Shotgunners, we have not been forgotten. Before the season opens this fall, I hope to outfit my waterfowling Remington 870, Winchester 1300 and Mossberg 500 pump shotguns with the Advantage Wetlands Max 4 and Realtree Hardwoods camo pattern stocks.

All of my Ruger 10/22s are currently suited with Hogues. This was as simple as loosening the takedown screw and barrel band, lifting the barreled action from the factory wooden stock and dropping them into their handsome new rubber handles.

Interested in improving the ergonomics and handling qualities of your AR or Ruger Mini 14/30? Hogue has what you need. Several officers on my brother’s SWAT team have added Hogue grips and free-floating aluminum forearm tubes to their guns, and brother Dave recently upgraded his aging .223 Mini with an OD stock. The coyotes will never see him coming.

Hogue also produces wonderful rubber replacement grips for our most popular rimfire and centerfire pistols and both single- and double-action revolver models.

Join the ranks of gun-control fanatics everywhere by heading to your local sporting goods store and picking up some Hogue stocks. You’ll thank me for it.

Good shooting!

A ROCK LEGEND

Wyoming site offers window on ancient world

By Ruffin Prevost
The Billings Gazette

THERMOPOLIS, Wyo. — Archaeologist Larry Todd wasn’t aware when growing up in Meeteetse that he lived just a few miles from Legend Rock, one of the most easily accessible, compelling and well-preserved petroglyph sites in the region.

“I didn’t have a clue growing up,” said Todd, a professor of anthropology at Colorado State University in Fort Collins.

But Todd has spent each summer over the past three decades studying places like Legend Rock, buffalo hunting grounds and other ancient sites, searching for clues about the lives of the earliest people in the Big Horn Basin.

“Places like Legend Rock are places that deserve respect and recognition,”

Todd said. “We may not understand the interactions the people had in their minds when they made and used them. But it’s clear that it was an important place.”

Near Hamilton Dome, between Thermopolis and Meeteetse, Legend Rock is the site of many different petroglyphs, some created about 10,000 years ago.

Legend Rock is administered by Wyoming State Parks and Cultural Resources in cooperation with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. It is open to the public and there is no fee to visit, but vehicle access to the base of the petroglyph area requires signing for a gate key.

Todd will lead a field trip to Legend Rock this month.

Interpreting Legend Rock and other places like it from a modern perspective can be tricky, and is based partly on speculative attempts to imagine the world as an ancient person may have seen it, Todd said.

The site is not a single rock, but rather a cliff face with several large, flat rocks on a low rise overlooking Cottonwood Creek. Several depictions of animals and people, made in different styles during separate eras, are etched into the rocks.

“It has been sort of a magnet or a focus of attention or power location for nearly as long as people have been in the Big Horn Basin,” he said.

Todd said the petroglyphs aren’t decorative art, graffiti or what we might call pictograms or hieroglyphs.

The images most likely represent careful attempts by people to interact with the supernatural world, he said.

“They would see rock art places as localities where you could go to do things like vision quests — places that had a more permeable boundary” between the physical world and the supernatural realm, Todd said.

Researchers have worked to use radiocarbon dating to determine when the different images were created.

“There’s almost a little biological world that lives on the rock face. As those plants and animals live and die, they deposit carbon across the surface marked or etched by rock art,” Todd said.

Dating the deposits helps determine the age of the art.

Much like visiting a cathedral, Todd said, a visit to Legend Rock is likely to inspire “a certain sort of respect and sense of awe, even though you may not be of the particular religion that made it.”

Legend Rock overlooks Cottonwood Creek in Thermopolis, Wyo.

Bluegills a good fish for beginners to catch, but proper technique, equipment still needed

By Ray Sasser
Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Rick Pope calls bluegills the most important fish that swim. The Dallas-based founder of Temple Fork Outfitters, a fishing rod company, has caught huge trout, surface dancing dorado and even a white marlin on fly rods. He considers bluegills and their various relatives as gateway species to the watery wonderland of sport fishing.

“Bluegills have been the species responsible for introducing more folks to fishing — whether its fly fishing or conventional fishing, than any fish I know,” said Pope, himself an early convert.

“My love for bluegills is sincere. My first fly rod was a white Shakespeare Wonder Rod with a wind-up automatic reel. I used foam spiders for flies, and this rig served me well in the creeks and farm ponds of central Texas.”

Just because the small sunfish (most weigh less than half a pound) are considered an ideal first fish for beginners, Tim Lee does not take them for granted. Lee is a second generation fly-fishing fanatic who teaches casting, fly tying and equipment selection. He fishes more often for sunfish than any other species, often fishing in Dallas-area suburban streams and ponds.

“Panfish get no respect because people think they can just throw anything at them and be successful,” said Lee. “Since we fish for panfish all the time, we find there are days when the fish are highly selective.”

Sunfish spawn in early summer, and this is a great time to find them within easy casting distance of the bank in virtually every body of water in Texas. Natural bait like earthworms, fished under a cork using a spincast rod and reel is the best setup for children.

More experienced anglers hoping to ramp up their bluegill experience and fine-tune fly-fishing techniques can learn from these two pros. Pope said appropriate fly rods for bluegills range from a 6-foot, 1-weight rod to a 9-foot, 5-weight. The smaller, shorter rods are more difficult to cast.

“Lots of bluegill specialists are into 1, 2 and 3-weight rods, and I enjoy fishing with them when conditions are right,” Pope said. “It is important, however, to consider line weight relative to fly weight and/or wind resistance. If you’re using weighed streamers or larger poppers, you need the mass of a 4- or 5-weight line for castability.”

The hottest selling bluegill rod in the TFO stable is the Bug Launcher series, which includes 7-foot rods in 4- and 5-weight and 8-foot rods in 5- and 6-weight. They retail for $79.95.

“We initially thought we’d make these rods for kids, but we quickly learned they are very popular with adults who fish on smaller ponds and streams, often for sunfish,” said Pope.

For casting accuracy, the fly rod is the most important component of a fishing outfit, but it’s the fly that attracts fish. Lee has made a science out of reading the fish and the fishing conditions, then matching his fly to the situation.

For instance, on a windy day in the heat of summer, he often fishes with a grasshopper pattern because grasshoppers are abundant that time of year. Windy conditions blow the grasshoppers into the water where sunfish are waiting.

“On a given day, I try to determine whether the fish prefer a fly floating on the surface, resting in the film surface of the water or sinking,” Lee said. “I then narrow the fly down to color and work on my presentation — do the fish want it still or moving — moving fast or moving slow?”

If you’re using a store-bought leader, Lee advises a 7½-foot leader that’s rated 4X. They usually have a tip that’s about 6-pound test.

Twin Falls student wins state DAR essay contest

Alexa Olsen, a fifth-grader at Sawtooth Elementary School in Twin Falls, received first-place honors at the state level in an American history essay contest sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution. This year's essay topic addressed the completion of the First Transcontinental Railroad in 1869.

State winners were selected for each grade level. Olsen's essay was forwarded to the Idaho State Society DAR after being selected as the first-place winner for fifth grade by the Twin Falls Chapter DAR in February.

Maureen Williams, chairwoman of the Twin Falls Chapter's American History Committee, presented the state award to Olsen at the school. Olsen received a certificate, medal and a $40 check.

DAR is a national organization promoting patriotism, education and historic preservation. Essays were judged on historical accuracy, originality and writing skills.

Is there an alternative to surgery for bunions?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had a bunion on my right foot for a long time. It is very painful. My foot doctor has cut the side of my shoe off so the bunion can extend out. This is the only pair of shoes I can wear.

I may have to have surgery, but some of my friends have told me the bunion will probably grow back. Do you know of any ointment that I can put on it? Or what else would you suggest I do?

ASK DR. GOTT

DEAR READER: A bunion is a bony protrusion on the joint at the base of either big toe. There are a number of reasons for them to form, the most common of which are poorly fitting shoes, congenital deformities, foot injury and arthritis.

Symptoms include the obvious bulge of the bunion, intermittent or constant pain when wearing footwear, swelling and skin thickening at the base of the great toe. The toenails may grow into the sides of the nail bed, and some bones may bend permanently at the joint.

Treatment commonly begins with a conservative approach, such as wearing shoe inserts, using appropriate padding, taking over-the-counter pain relievers and wearing better-fitting shoes. As your physician apparently pointed out and took measures to correct, cutting the shoe at the site of the bunion is yet another means of accommodation; however, if you live in a cold climate, this could certainly present its own set of difficulties during the winter.

When conservative measures fail to be effective, surgery might be appropriate. A podiatrist has several options, depending on the severity of the deformity. In some instances, a patient will be able to walk as soon as the procedure is completed. In other cases, it may take two months or longer before complete recovery occurs.

CSI center offers life-skills, gun-safety classes

Youth ages 8 to 12 can learn skills to use throughout their whole lives by enrolling in the “Life Skills Training” class being offered by the CSI North Side Center College for Kids program.

With the help of instructor Heidi Diehl, they’ll learn how to feel good about themselves, an easy way to help them make the best decisions, be a good friend, find a good friend and more. They’ll play fun games, make projects and perform skits with their classmates

“Life Skills Training” will meet from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Monday through June 25 at the North Side Center. The course fee is $8.

Also offered: Get informed and learn what your rights are when it comes to carrying a gun in “Handgun Safety,” a three-session preparatory class instructed by Gooding County Sheriff’s Sgt. Dave Kiger.

The course will cover current Idaho laws, some other states’ gun laws and safety issues. Range practice on June 26 will focus on trigger control, target alignment and holster requirements. Following range practice, Kiger will provide students with a certificate of completion and the forms needed to apply for a concealed weapons permit at the sheriff’s office. Students must be age 21 or older to participate. “Handgun Safety” will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. on June 22 and 24 at the North Side Center, and from 8 a.m. to noon June 26 at the practice range. The course fee is $60. Students must furnish their own guns for the range practice that are in compliance with concealed weapon laws, along with ammunition, safety glasses and ear protection.

For more information or to register for both classes: 934-8678 or stop by the center, 202 14th Ave. E. in Gooding.

Four Wood River Valley students earned second- and third-place positions in their grade levels. Taking second place in two grade levels are Hailey siblings Jake Simon, kindergarten, for “Eagle Adventures,” and Zoe Simon, second grade, for “Casey and Cleopatra.” Ketchum first-grader Blake Beckwith and second-grader Sarah Feltman each took third place in their grade levels for “The Knight’s War” and “Believe,” respectively.

All contestants wrote stories illustrated with at least five pictures and submitted the entries to the IdahoPTV station in their region. Stories are judged on originality, creative expression, storytelling and integration of text and pictures.

Recurrence occurs post-surgery if a patient continues to wear ill-fitting shoes. Thus, appropriate footwear is vital. This may be what your friends refer to when they indicate a bunion can grow back.

I recommend you make another appointment with your podiatrist to determine what might be best for you, based on your age and possible medical conditions. Get all your questions answered before making any decision to undergo even the simplest surgical procedure. If questions still remain, request a referral to another podiatrist for a second opinion. Until a firm decision can be made, consider using bunion pads, icing the area a couple of times each day and using ibuprofen or acetaminophen.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 70-year-old female who began experiencing restless legs at age 20. I understand you have discussed using hawthorn berries for control and would like to know more about this alternative treatment. Thank you for your help.

DEAR READER: Hawthorn berries contain antioxidant properties and improve blood flow to the heart. Readers have also indicated the supplement has helped with the muscle twitches and tremors associated with restless-legs syndrome, Parkinson’s and hypertension.

Check with your primary-care physician before using hawthorn berry, because some herbals can cause unwanted side effects if taken with other drugs. If you choose to continue, be sure to follow the packaging directions for recommended doses.

Defense officials downplay year-end Afghan assessment

By Karen DeYoung
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Senior defense and military officials Wednesday played down the importance of an end-of-year review that President Barack Obama has described as crucial to assessing whether his Afghanistan war strategy is working, saying that it would have little bearing on decisions about troop withdrawals scheduled to begin in July 2011.

“I would not want to overplay the significance of this review,” Gen. David Petraeus, head of the U.S. Central Command, told lawmakers. The military, he said, “would not make too much out of that.”

Undersecretary of Defense Michele Flournoy said the December assessment would be “a bit deeper” than the regular monthly reviews Obama now receives, but essentially the same. The remarks appeared at odds with senior administration officials’ past descriptions of the review as a “proof of concept” moment and a potential turning point in the war effort.

The review has long been scheduled to take place exactly one year after Obama’s announcement, in a Dec. 1 speech at the U.S.

Military Academy at West Point, that he was sending an additional 30,000 troops to Afghanistan. In response to a run of bad news about the war, senior administration officials have repeatedly referred to the assessment to wave off judgments on the strategy — along with reports that some of them already have doubts about it — by saying they are only halfway through the trial year.

“You are in the middle of the surge,” one official said, “and you can look at a set of data points that say the glass is half full and another that say the glass is half empty. That’s what happens when you are halfway through a process.”

Officials strongly denied media reports that Vice President Joe Biden, said to have initially opposed the surge in troops in favor of a more limited counterterrorism strategy, now thinks that December is too long to put off revisiting the decision. A Biden aide, who spoke on the condition that he not be quoted directly, said the vice president has strongly supported the policy from the moment it was announced.

U.S. war casualties have steadily increased in recent months, even as the new troops have begun to arrive. A Marine offensive launched against entrenched Taliban forces in Helmand province, in southern Afghanistan, has progressed more slowly than anticipated, and Gen. Stanley McChrystal, the top U.S. commander in Afghanistan, said last week that military elements of a major operation that was to begin this month in Kandahar would be delayed until at least September. Also last week, Afghan President Hamid Karzai fired his interior minister and intelligence chief, two of his senior officials closest to the United States.

The growing unease about the war has led to a close parsing of official statements on the subject and has revived disagreement, in both Congress and the military, about the establishment of a date to begin a drawdown.

When Obama said in December that “after 18 months, our troops will begin to come home,” many Democrats applauded it as a way of pressuring the Afghan government to improve its performance and of reassuring Americans about the length of the commitment. Many Republicans, and many in the military, said that by setting a time frame, the administration might encourage the Taliban to simply sit tight until the Americans leave.

Former CIA agent sues over lead poisoning

By Joe Davidson
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When Franklin A. Richards, a former CIA agent, readily accepted assignment to Iraq, he knew he might have to take a bullet — some lead — for his country.

And he says he took plenty, but not because he was shot.

Richards, a firearms expert, was sent to Iraq in August 2003 to provide weapons training. He wasn’t hit by a bullet during the three weeks he was there, but according to a lawsuit he has filed, he was seriously wounded by lead poisoning.

Richards, a firearms expert, was sent to Iraq in 2003.

let Richards, whose 42nd birthday is this week, identify that country during interviews.

In its response to the $3 million suit, the Justice Department did not deny, or confirm, Richards’ charges. It did argue that his complaint should be dismissed on several jurisdictional and procedural grounds.

Although Iraq is not mentioned in the lawsuit, other information, including Richards’ CIA medal from the “Directorate of Operations Iraq Operations Group,” given “In Appreciation of your efforts against the Iraqi Target 2003,” and a document from the outside physician the CIA eventually sent him to, confirm his service there. The CIA would not comment on the lawsuit but did verify that his medal is from the agency.

His lawsuit outlines a series of situations that seemingly could have been easily avoided.

When Richards and another trainer arrived in Iraq, they went to the firing range arranged by the agency’s chief of station, identified in the brief only as “Gordon P.” “The range was filthy,” alleges the complaint.

“It was clear that millions of rounds of ammunition had been discharged in the room over the years and little or no time had been spent on range maintenance.”

Richards and the other trainer felt ill after visiting the range. They found an outside location for training, but Gordon, according to Richards, insisted on using the underground site. He said his partner refused to use the indoor range, so Richards conducted sessions there, while the other trainer held lessons outside.

Although Richards cleaned the range between the “live fire” sessions, even his students who were there for only one class were later found to have dangerously high levels of lead, the suit said.

After returning to the United States, Richards went to Brian H., a CIA physician, who said Richards had post-traumatic stress disorder and not lead poisoning. But at the insistence of Richards’ supervisor at CIA headquarters, and after a delay of several weeks, Brian sent Richards to Margit L. Bleecker, director of the Center for Occupational and Environmental Neurology in Baltimore — more than two months after his exposure.

That delay, along with Brian’s misdiagnosis, caused Richards to miss the period when chelation therapy treatment for lead poisoning would have been useful, according to his lawsuit.

As a final insult, Richards said, he was medically retired on May 4, 2006, at grade GS-12, instead of GS-13, as he was promised in a letter from K.D. “Dusty” Foggo, then the agency’s executive director. A copy of the letter was obtained by The Washington Post. Richards said he now gets $4,244 in monthly Federal Employment Compensation Act payments, “far below” what he was paid previously.

“We appreciate your dedication and service, and we understand that the tragic circumstances of your illness are a direct result of that dedication,” Foggo wrote on Richards’ last day.

Lead poisoning can cause a variety of problems, including personality changes, loss of concentration and memory, changes in sleep patterns, headaches, and even seizures and comas. The impact of lead on Richards was detailed in an April 23, 2010, report from Bleecker, also obtained by The Post. It lists Richards “health related problems related to lead poisoning in Iraq,” including clinical depression, memory impairment, peripheral neuropathy, migraines and erectile dysfunction.

That’s the clinical description of what ails Richards. When he and his wife, April, speak about the impact of lead on their lives and on their 10-year-old son, it gets much more personal.

“If I sent Frank to the grocery store and I asked him to get bread, milk and cheese, Frank would probably come back with ice cream, chips and sodas,” April said, describing his inability to carry out even routine duties. “Simple tasks, walking the dog, taking out the trash, it’s just not something I can expect of him.”

Defying sanctions, Iran plans more atomic reactors

By Ali Akbar Dareini
Associated Press writer

TEHRAN, Iran — Defying week-old U.N. sanctions over its nuclear program, Iran promised to expand its atomic research Wednesday as its president vowed to punish the West and force it to “sit at the negotiating table like a polite child” before agreeing to further talks.

Tehran, which insists its nuclear work is peaceful, said it will build four new reactors for atomic medical research. The U.S. and some of its allies believe Iran is trying to develop nuclear weapons, and the Islamic Republic’s plans to expand research could encourage calls in the West for more economic pressure against the country.

President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad said Iran will not make “one iota of concessions.” He said he will soon announce new conditions for talks with the West, but first he wants to punish world powers for imposing sanctions.

“You showed bad temper, reneged on your promise and again resorted to devilish manners,” he said of those powers. “We set conditions (for talks) so that, God willing, you’ll be punished a bit and sit at the negotiating table like a polite child,” he told a crowd during a visit to the central Iranian town of Shahr-e Kord. His speech was broadcast live on state TV.

The Obama administration took its first step in implementing new sanctions Wednesday, leveling penalties against additional individuals and institutions it says are helping Iran develop its nuclear and missile programs and evade international sanctions.

The list includes a bank; 22 petroleum, energy and insurance companies; two individuals and four organizations that are part of Iran’s Revolutionary Guard Corps; and five front companies and more than 90 ships that Iran’s national maritime carrier has been using to try to evade sanctions. Some are based in Iran, while others are based in countries including Britain, Singapore, the United Arab Emirates and Germany.

“In the coming weeks we will continue to increase the financial pressure on Iran,” Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said. “We will continue to target Iran’s support for terrorist organizations.”

Geithner said at a White House news conference that the administration expects other countries to announce new penalties for their own against Iran soon.

The European Union is expected to announce additional steps today. EU foreign ministers agreed earlier this week to consider tighter sanctions for Iran’s refusal to halt uranium enrichment.

U.S. lawmakers also could press for additional embargoes after last week’s U.N. Security Council sanctions.

Jobless aid bill hits deficit wall in Senate

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama’s plea for more stimulus spending as insurance against a double-dip recession hit a roadblock in the Senate on Wednesday, the victim of election-year anxiety over huge federal deficits.

A dozen Democrats joined Republicans on a key 52-45 test vote rejecting an Obama-endorsed, $140 billion package of unemployment benefits, aid to states, business and family tax breaks and Medicare payments for doctors because it would swell the federal debt by $80 billion.

The swing toward frugality runs counter to the advice of economists who support the bill’s funding for additional jobless benefits and help to states to avoid layoffs of public service jobs. They fear that the economy could slip back into recession just as it’s emerging from the biggest economic downturn since the Great Depression.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke warned last week that while lawmakers need to come up with a plan for tackling the nation’s long-term deficit crisis, the U.S. recovery is still fragile.

It’s too early for large, immediate spending cuts, Bernanke said.

“We’ve got to do more to build on the existing jobs momentum and that’s what these targeted measures are about,” said White House economist Jared Bernstein.

The Senate earlier passed another version with even bigger deficits.

But that was before tea party-backed candidates running on anti-deficit, anti-big government platforms began knocking off more established politicians in spring primaries.

BP starts burning oil from leaking ruptured well

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — BP began slowly burning oil siphoned from a ruptured well in the Gulf of Mexico on Wednesday as part of its plans to more than triple the amount of crude it can stop from reaching the sea, the company said.

Energy giant BP PLC said it had burned 52,500 gallons of oil by noon Wednesday using a specialized flare system. Oil and gas siphoned from the well first reached a semi-submersible drilling rig on the surface of the Gulf around 1 a.m.

Once that gas reaches the rig, it will be mixed with compressed air, shot down a specialized boom made by Schlumberger Ltd. and ignited at sea. It's the first time this particular burner has been deployed in the Gulf of Mexico.

BP spokesman Tristan Vanhegan said engineers were still working to optimize the system, which the firm previously said could incinerate anywhere from 210,000 gallons of oil to 420,000 gallons of oil daily once it's fully operational.

Under pressure from the Coast Guard, the energy firm is attempting to expand its ability to trap leaking oil before it reaches the water. Already, oil and gas are being siphoned from a containment cap sitting over the well head and flowing to a drill ship sitting above it in the Gulf of Mexico.

Adding the burner is part of BP's plan to expand its containment system so it can capture as much as 2.2 million gallons of oil a day by late June, or nearly 90 percent of what a team of government scientists have estimated is the maximum flow out the well.

Only a relief well, which BP says will be completed in August, will completely stop the flow of oil. Still, comments from President Barack and federal officials have raised expectations that the flow of oil could be significantly contained by the end of the month.

The Coast Guard has been pushing the British energy firm to bring more equipment and boats to the scene to deal with the leak. But plans remain subject to uncertainty.

‘Small people’ remark angers Gulf residents

BP Chairman Carl-Henric Svanberg attempted an earnest apology Wednesday for the worst environmental accident ever to befall America, but it will be remembered for only two words: “Small people.”

Svanberg came with other BP executives to the White House, where he said President Barack Obama made clear that he is “frustrated because he cares about the small people.”

“And we care about the small people,” added Svanberg, who is Swedish. “I hear comments sometimes that large oil companies are greedy companies or don’t care. But that is not the case indeed. We care about the small people.”

Just like that, a new slogan was born. It sardonically swept through cyberspace and landed in the gulf, where it was greeted with no more enthusiasm than the unrefined crude gushing from BP property.

“We’re not small people. We’re human beings. They’re no greater than us. We don’t bow down to them. We don’t pray to them,” said Justin Taffinder of New Orleans.

“Purely a translation matter,” e-mailed BP spokesman Scott Dean. And later Wednesday, Svanberg apologized for his apology: “I spoke clumsily this afternoon, and for that, I am very sorry.”

BP’s European executives have consistently struggled to strike the right tone in response to the oil spill. Svanberg was the guy who was supposed to demonstrate humility.

Early on, Hayward outraged Gulf Coast residents and officials when he pledged to honor “all legitimate claims,” then scoffed, when asked for examples of illegitimate claims: “I could give you lots of examples. This is America — come on. We’re going to have lots of illegitimate claims. We all know that.”

Sea creatures flee oil spill, gather near shore

GULF SHORES, Ala. — Dolphins and sharks are showing up in surprisingly shallow water just off the Florida coast. Mulletts, crabs, rays and small fish congregate by the thousands off an Alabama pier. Birds covered in oil are crawling deep into marshes, never to be seen again.

Marine scientists studying the effects of the BP disaster are seeing some strange phenomena.

Fish and other wildlife seem to be fleeing the oil out in the Gulf and clustering in cleaner waters along the coast in a trend that some researchers see as a potentially troubling sign.

The animals’ presence close to shore means their usual habitat is badly polluted, and the crowding could result in mass die-offs as fish run out of oxygen. Also, the animals could easily get devoured by predators.

“A parallel would be: Why are the wildlife running to the edge of a forest on fire? There will be a lot of fish, sharks, turtles trying to get out of this water they detect is not suitable,” said Larry Crowder, a Duke University marine biologist.

The nearly two-month-old oil spill has created an environmental catastrophe unparalleled in U.S. history as tens of millions of gallons of have spewed into the Gulf of Mexico ecosystem. Scientists are seeing some unusual things as they try to understand the effects on thousands of species of marine life.

Day by day, scientists in boats tally up dead birds, sea turtles and other animals, wildlife in the Gulf is more than an academic exercise; the deaths will help determine how much BP pays in damages.

As for the fish, researchers are still trying to determine where exactly they are migrating to understand the full scope of the disaster, and no scientific consensus has emerged about the trend.

Mark Robson, director of the Division of Marine Fisheries Management with Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission, said his agency has to find any scientific evidence that fish are being adversely affected off his state’s waters. He noted that it is common for fish to flee major changes in their environment, however.

In some areas along the coast, researchers believe fish are swimming closer to shore because the water is cleaner and more abundant in oxygen. Father out in the Gulf, researchers say, the spill is not only tainting the water with oil but also depleting oxygen levels.

A similar scenario occurs during “dead zone” periods — the time during summer months when oxygen becomes so depleted that fish race toward shore in large numbers. Sometimes, so many fish gather close to the shoreline off Mobile that locals rush to the beach with tubs and nets to reap the harvest.

But this latest shore migration could prove deadly.

First, more oil could eventually wash ashore and overwhelm the fish. They could also become trapped between the slick and the beach, leading to increased competition for oxygen in the water and causing them to die as they run out of air.

they seek refuge from the onslaught of oil.

“That is their understanding of how to protect themselves,” said Doug Zimmer, spokesman for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

For nearly four hours Monday, a three-person crew with Greenpeace cruised past delicate islands and mangrove-dotted inlets in Barataria Bay off southern Louisiana. They saw dolphins by the dozen frolicking in the oily sheen and oil-tinged pelicans feeding their young. But they spotted no dead animals.

“I think part of the reason why we’re not seeing more yet is that the impacts of this crisis are really just beginning,” Greenpeace marine biologist John Hocevar said.

Pay czar, 9/11 arbiter takes on oil spill

By Karen Matthews
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — He was given the delicate task of putting a dollar figure on the life of each Sept. 11 victim and trimming paychecks at companies that got taxpayer bailouts.

Now the federal government has given Kenneth Feinberg a new job overseeing a fund to pay the victims of the massive oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

President Obama announced Wednesday that BP would set aside an initial $20 billion and that Feinberg would administer the fund to oil spill victims.

“This is about accountability. At the end of the day, that’s what every American wants and expects,” Obama said.

Feinberg, 64, has become the go-to guy when the government needs to distribute money while appearing impartial.

He also has overseen payouts for victims of Agent Orange, is managing a multi-million-dollar settlement for ground zero workers exposed to toxic dust and set guidelines for paying top corporate earners as Obama’s pay czar.

Named to head the Sept. 11 Victim Compensation Fund after the worst terrorist attack in U.S. history, Feinberg had to weigh applications from victims’ families and distribute awards from a $7 billion-plus pot based on an estimate of what each victim would have earned in a lifetime.

Family members complained that he was cold and aloof in the initial weeks after the attacks.

“At the beginning he was telling families ‘My way or the highway,’” said Charles Wolf, whose wife died at the World Trade Center. “He had a very poor bedside manner.”

But Wolf said Feinberg grew in the job and ended up “bending over backward” to get victims’ families to apply to the Sept. 11 fund. In the end, 97 percent of the families applied to the fund; the average payout was $1.8 million.

“He’ll approach this thing with firmness,” Wolf said. “I’m very pleased.”

Sally Regenhard, whose firefighter son earned far less than the financial industry professionals who died at the trade center and received a lower payout, said the process Feinberg used was unfair.

“It really created a kind of caste system for human beings,” she said. “I know that (Feinberg) kept on saying that he had to go by the guidelines, but don’t accept guidelines if there’s inequity in there.”

In his 2005 book, “What Is Life Worth?: The Inside Story of the 9/11 Fund and Its Effort to Compensate the Victims of September 11th,” Feinberg wrote that the Sept. 11 fund was “the single most difficult challenge I had ever confronted in my 30 years as a lawyer.” He wrote he wanted everyone to participate in his fund’s payout “rather than have them pursue a costly, time-consuming, and emotionally wrenching remedy through the courts.”

The oil-spill fund could be more complicated to administer than the Sept. 11 fund, which had a finite number of potential claimants. The eight-week disaster in the Gulf is jeopardizing the environment as well as the livelihoods of tens of thousands of people across the coastal areas of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida.

Panel: Vietnam needs $300M a year to clean up Agent Orange

By Margie Mason
Associated Press writer

HANOI, Vietnam — Thirty-five years after the Vietnam War, a $300 million price tag has been placed on the most contentious legacy still tainting U.S.-Vietnam relations: Agent Orange.

A joint panel of U.S. and Vietnamese policymakers, citizens and scientists released an action plan Wednesday, urging the U.S. government and other donors to provide an estimated $30 million annually over 10 years to clean up sites still contaminated by dioxin, a toxic chemical used in the defoliant.

The funding would also be used to treat Vietnamese suffering from disabilities, including those believed linked to exposure to Agent Orange, which was dumped by the U.S. military in vast quantities over former South Vietnam to destroy crops and jungle cover shielding communist guerrilla fighters.

Washington has been slow to address the issue, quibbling for years with its former foe over the need for more scientific research to show that the herbicide sprayed by U.S. aircraft during the war caused health problems and birth defects among Vietnamese.

"We are talking about something that is a major legacy of the Vietnam War, a major irritant in this important relationship," said Walter Isaacson, co-chair of the U.S.-Vietnam Dialogue Group on Agent Orange/Dioxin that released the report. "The cleanup of our mess from the Vietnam War will be far less costly than the Gulf oil spill that BP will have to clean up."

The dialogue group was formed in 2007 to look for ways to address the lingering issue. It is supported by the nonprofit Ford Foundation and coordinated by the nonprofit Aspen Institute.

Their report said nearly $100 million was needed to restore damaged ecosystems and clean up dioxin-contaminated sites, with priority given to three former U.S. air bases in the central city of Danang, and the southern locations of Bien Hoa and Phu Cat — hot spots where Agent Orange was mixed, stored and loaded onto planes during the war, allowing spilled dioxin to seep into the soil and water systems.

Another $200 million would be devoted to expanding care and treatment for Vietnamese with disabilities, including those believed caused by dioxin.

Isaacson said he was hopeful the U.S. government will provide at least half the $300 million needed by 2020, with corporations, foundations and other donors supplying the rest.

"The war is over but the wounds from the war still remain in many areas of Vietnam," Nguyen Van Son, a member of Vietnam's National Assembly, said during the report's launch in Hanoi. "Many Agent Orange victims have died, but many other victims, including children with disabilities, have been fighting diseases under extreme hardship and they are in dire need of treatment and support."

The U.S. military dumped some 20 million gallons (75 million liters) of Agent Orange and other herbicides on about a quarter of former South Vietnam between 1962 and 1971.

The defoliant decimated about 5 million acres (2 million hectares) of forest — roughly the size of Massachusetts — and another 500,000 acres (202,000 hectares) of crops, the report said.

Dioxin has been linked to cancers, birth defects and other ailments. A study released last year by the Canadian environmental firm Hatfield Consultants showed that dioxin levels in some blood and breast milk samples taken from people who had lived near the Danang air base site were 100 times above safe levels.

Dioxin levels in soil, sediment and fish in the same area were 300 to 400 times above international limits. That report estimated up to 100,000 people living near the site still face a potential health risk from exposure.

Dioxin is slow to degrade. It works its way from the soil into the sediment of rivers, lakes and ponds via rainwater then attaches to the fat of fish and ducks, which can be eaten by humans and passed on to future generations.

The Vietnam Red Cross estimates up to 3 million Vietnamese children and adults have suffered health problems related to Agent Orange exposure. But the U.S. says the number is much lower, with many Vietnamese birth defects instead likely resulting from other health and environmental reasons, including malnutrition.

Army tries to regain control in southern Kyrgyzstan

By Sergei Grits
Associated Press writer

OSH, Kyrgyzstan — Kyrgyzstan's weak military attempted Wednesday to regain control of the city of Osh, a major transit point for Afghan heroin and the epicenter of ethnic violence that has driven much of the Uzbek population from the country's poor, rural south.

Troops encircled the city with checkpoints and held the central square, but citizens reported that some soldiers also were looting food aid, casting doubt on the government's ability to re-establish stability after nearly a week of brutal attacks.

The leader of Kyrgyzstan's Uzbek community said the death toll among Uzbeks exceeded 300. The official toll on both sides is 189, although officials have acknowledged it is likely far higher. More than 100,000 Uzbeks have fled to Uzbekistan, with tens of thousands more camped on the Kyrgyz side of the border.

The interim Kyrgyz government has alleged that attackers hired by deposed President Kurmanbek Bakiyev set off the bloodshed by shooting at both Kyrgyz and Uzbeks, who have a history of ethnic tensions. The United Nations bolstered the claims by declaring that the fighting was "targeted and well-planned," and appeared to have begun with five simultaneous attacks in Osh by men wearing ski masks.

Provisional authorities said Bakiyev's clan could try to foment unrest in other parts of the country.

Zarylbek Rysaliyev, the police chief in the capital, Bishkek, said Wednesday that his officers have detained 111 people from the southern regions who allegedly sought to stir up ethnic tensions and offered money to those who would rally in Bakiyev's support.

Locals quiet on Day 3 of college rodeo finals

Long wait looms for some riders

Times-News

Wednesday was a quiet day for local entrants as the third go-round continued at the College National Finals Rodeo in Casper, Wyo.

CSI cowboy Monty Johnson's 71.5, currently fourth in the go-round, puts him in eighth position in the saddle bronc with 21 riders left to go.

Johnson and teammate LeeRoy Winward were both bucked off in the bull-riding, leaving each to wait and see if one ride will be good enough to reach the finals.

J2 Bridges of Hazelton, competing for Mesalands Community College, was given a re-ride option in the bareback-riding competition.

Bridges struggled in steer wrestling, posting a time of 16.9 seconds that puts him in precarious position for the finals. He's currently 12th in the standings with 14 cowboys left that can surpass him in the standings.

CSI cowgirl Kristyn Vasconcelles no-timed for the second time in break-away roping, ending her rodeo and leaving her in 24th position.

Rob Webb of Wendell and Cy Eames of Gooding no-timed for the third time in team-roping.

They occupy the top two positions in tie-down roping, however, and will compete against each other as they vie for the title.

The third go-round continues through Friday, with the top 20 in each event after three goes advancing to the championship round, which takes place Saturday.

Twin Falls routs Minico in Game 1 of twinbill

By Ryan Howe

Times-News writer

Eric Harr feels quite comfortable facing the Minico Spartans.

Harr, who went 2-0 against Minico during the high school season, pitched a two-hit shutout in Game 1 of the teams' doubleheader Wednesday as the Cowboys AA American Legion Baseball squad whipped Minico 13-0 in five innings at Skip Walker Field.

"Eric was working down, hitting his spots. That's what he's good at," said Twin Falls catcher Jayson Welker. "He's not going to overpower people, but he's a spot-up pitcher and he gets people out and that's what we need."

Harr only struck out two, but surrendered zero walks as he allowed his teammates to back him up.

"I just wanted to come in and throw strikes, let my defense work for me. My defense really helped me out today," Harr said.

Twin Falls pounded Minico pitchers Sager Nevarez and Shay Chandler for nine hits — six for extra bases — and drew six walks. Eight Cowboys had at least one RBI.

"We didn't pitch very well," said Minico coach Ben Frank. "We didn't give

Pac-10's Plan B is plucking Utah

Utes expected to accept invitation

By Brock Vergakis

Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah is poised to become the 12th member of the Pac-10 as the conference quickly pivoted Wednesday to invite the Utes after being turned down by Texas and four other members of the Big 12 two days ago.

Utah officials did not immediately say whether the invitation would be accepted, but it would be shocking if the Utes didn't leave the Mountain West Conference for the Pac-10.

Spokeswoman Liz Abel said the athletics department would not comment until Thursday, after the school's board of trustees meets to discuss the school's conference affiliation. A news conference was scheduled at the football stadium following the meeting.

Pac-10 officials are expected to attend Thursday's news conference in Utah.

Utah has been a member of the MWC since the league began in 1999 — and one of its most successful in football and basketball.

There had been speculation on Tuesday that Utah would be the next school to be approached by the Pac-10. When asked about the possibility, school president Michael Young told The Associated Press "we wouldn't anticipate making a move of this magnitude without the concurrence of our board of trustees."

A message left with Randy Dryer, chairman of the board of trustees, was not immediately returned Wednesday. If Utah bolts the Mountain West, it would be the latest in a string of conference affiliation changes.

Last week, Colorado decided to leave the Big 12 and accept an invitation to join the Pac-10. Nebraska has also said it will leave the Big 12 for the Big Ten, while Boise State is fleeing the Western Athletic Conference to join the Mountain West.

The Mountain West called a news conference for Thursday following Utah's.

Earlier in the week, Texas, Oklahoma, Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Oklahoma State recommitment to the Big 12 instead of hopping to the Pac-10.

That left the Pac-10 in need of another member to reach the 12 required to hold a football championship game. Pac-10 spokeswoman Danette Leighton declined to say when Utah would begin competing in the Pac-10 if it accepts the conference's invitation.

Utah officials have long been frustrated about their inability to play for a football national championship while in the Mountain West. Utah had an undefeated season in 2008 but was not invited to the national title game. It defeated Alabama in the Sugar Bowl. Utah also went undefeated in 2004 and did not play for the national championship.

Under the Bowl Championship Series, the champions of six conference have automatic bids to play in top-tier bowl games, while the other conferences such as the Mountain West don't. Those six conferences also receive more money than the other conferences.

Utah Attorney General Mark Shurtleff, angered that the Utes were denied an opportunity to play for a national title, has said he's investigating the BCS for possible antitrust violations. It

Pagan helps Mets extend win streak to six

CLEVELAND — Angel Pagan drove in three runs with three hits to help the New York Mets stretch their winning streak to six games by beating the Cleveland Indians 8-4 Wednesday night.

All nine batters in the Mets' starting lineup had a hit. New York has won 10 of 11 and is a major league-best 17-5 since May 21 to move from last place in the NL East to challenging for first place.

Jonathon Niese (4-3) won his third straight start, extending the Mets' string of strong pitching during their streak. New York starters are 16-3 with a 2.61 ERA over 27 games since May 17.

The left-hander gave up three runs and eight hits over seven innings. In three starts in June, Niese is 3-0 with a 1.57 ERA.

MARINERS 2, CARDINALS 1

ST. LOUIS — Jason Vargas stymied the St. Louis Cardinals into the eighth inning and Matt Holliday failed again in the clutch.

Holliday struck out on a ball in the dirt against Brandon League with the tying run at third to end the eighth, dropping his average to .194 with runners in scoring position.

Vargas (5-2) gave up a run on five hits in 7 2-3 innings, the second-longest outing of his career, and is 3-0 over his last eight starts. He outpitched St. Louis rookie Jaime Garcia (6-3), who gave up two runs on five hits in seven innings.

BRAVES 6, RAYS 2

ATLANTA — Tommy Hanson pitched seven scoreless innings, Troy Glaus drove in two runs and Atlanta returned to its winning ways at home with a victory over Tampa Bay.

Cleveland Indians baserunner Carlos Santana, right, is tagged out at second base by New York Mets infielder Ruben Tejada in the fifth inning Wednesday in Cleveland.

Atlanta has won 10 of 11 at Turner Field and is 20-7 overall there this season.

PHILLIES 6, YANKEES 3

NEW YORK — Jamie Moyer worked eight sharp innings to become the oldest pitcher to beat the Yankees, and the 47-year-old lefty bounced back from the worst start of his career to pitch Philadelphia past New York.

Shane Victorino hit a bases-loaded triple, and Ryan Howard and Jayson Werth hit the Phillies' first back-to-back homers of the season to end the Yankees' nine-game home winning streak.

TWINS 2, ROCKIES 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Baker

struck out a career-high 12 over seven shutout innings and the Minnesota Twins, despite hitting into three more double plays, held on to beat the Colorado Rockies.

GIANTS 6, ORIOLES 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Tim Lincecum struck out 10 before getting hit in the back of the right shoulder by a line drive and leaving after six innings as San Francisco beat Baltimore.

Giants manager Bruce Bochy said Lincecum was OK.

The two-time NL Cy Young Award winner was struck by Miguel Tejada's shot, which turned into a groundout that ended the sixth.

The righty ace crouched close to the ground for a moment, but walked off the field under his own power.

BLUE JAYS 7, PADRES 1

SAN DIEGO — John Buck hit his third home run of the series, Vernon Wells also went deep and Fred Lewis had four hits as Toronto beat San Diego.

WHITE SOX 7, PIRATES 2

PITTSBURGH — White Sox starter John Danks (6-5) held down Pedro Alvarez and the Pirates — who did plenty to hurt themselves with six errors that helped Chicago beat Pittsburgh.

ANGELS 5, BREWERS 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Bobby

Wilson drove in three runs with his first major league homer and Mike Napoli also connected, helping Joel Pineiro and the Los Angeles Angels beat Milwaukee.

TIGERS 8, NATIONALS 3

DETROIT — Justin Verlander's season-high 11 strikeouts and Brennan Boesch's three-run homer lifted Detroit over Washington.

RED SOX 6, DIAMONDBACKS 2

BOSTON — Dustin Pedroia and Kevin Youkilis homered, and Jon Lester scattered four hits over seven innings to earn his eighth straight victory and lead Boston over Arizona.

RANGERS 6, MARLINS 3

MIAMI — Josh Hamilton capped a four-hit night with his 16th home run, Michael Young hit a two-run single to break Texas' career hits record, and the Rangers overcame an early injury to starter Tommy Hunter to beat Florida.

CHICAGO — Ryan Dempster pitched into the seventh inning for the win, Derrek Lee homered and the Chicago Cubs beat Oakland.

NATIONAL LEAGUE DODGERS 6, REDS 2

CINCINNATI — Andre Ethier hit his first home run since breaking his finger and Clayton Kershaw outpitched rookie Mike Leake, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers over slumping Cincinnati.

Kershaw (7-3) won a matchup of promising, 22-year-old starters, giving up one run and seven hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Lakers, Celtics shrug off weight of history

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even when Lamar Odom was a kid with limitless imagination growing up on New York's playground courts, he thinks he might have dismissed Thursday's season finale as a bit too extravagant.

When the Los Angeles Lakers take on the Boston Celtics in Game 7 of the NBA finals, Odom realizes it's a fantasy come true for any basketball player with the audacity to dream this big.

"It's historic, especially when you talk about these teams and what they stand for, the pride," the Lakers forward said Wednesday. "This is what you envision when you're a kid in your backyard. Counting down, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1..."

Another memorable chapter in the NBA's best rivalry will end with a coronation at Staples Center, where the defending champion Lakers will try to earn their 16th banner while denying Boston its unprecedented 18th title in the clubs' second finals meeting in three years.

For the fifth time in their 12 finals meetings, Boston and Los Angeles need all seven games to decide it. Each previous time it went to Game 7, the Celtics won — but when the current Lakers and Celtics take the court for the NBA finals' first Game 7 since 2005 and just its second in the past 16 years, most will try awfully hard not to think about the history and pressure heaped on their shoulders.

It's fine for kids and historians to savor this scenario, but Kobe Bryant knows it's not a good idea for players to get caught up in it.

"It's got nothing to do with me," said Bryant, the series' leading scorer with 29.5 points per game. "(When) I look back, years from now, or even when I was a kid, (if) you'd talk about being in this situation, I'd be really excited. But when I'm in the moment right now, I've got to play. I've got to focus on that. I can't focus on the hype about it."

Although Boston has the rivalry's Game 7 history on its side, the Celtics have plenty stacked against them after an embarrassing 89-67 loss in Game 6 Tuesday night. Most glaringly, Boston won't have starting center Kendrick Perkins, who sprained multiple ligaments in his right knee in the first quarter.

NBA Finals

The Celtics' starting five has never lost a playoff series, but that five must change for Game 7. Although Perkins is a role player next to Boston's Big Three and point guard Rajon Rondo, the Celtics must hope veteran Rasheed Wallace and youngster Glen Davis can make up for Perkins' inside defense and rebounding.

No visiting team has won an NBA championship in Game 7 since the Washington Bullets did it in 1978, yet the Celtics are a whole lot more worried about the Lakers than the Hollywood crowd.

"I just love the pressure," said Paul Pierce, who leads the Celtics with 18 points per game. "I love the fact that I get to play against the Los Angeles Lakers in a Game 7 on the road. I love the fact that if I don't win multiple championships that I probably won't be mentioned amongst the other guys in Celtic history that have done it before. That type of stuff motivates me. That's what the challenge is for me, every time I put on this Celtic uniform."

Pierce is usually the only player in this series who embraces its history, yet it's too soon to say where these finals will fit in the rivalry's annals. Although the games had been uniformly competitive before the Lakers' blowout win in Game 6, they haven't been spectacularly played, with gritty defense trumping offense in most of the major moments.

Ray Allen's historic 3-point shooting barrage in Game 2, the Celtics' gritty victories in games 4 and 5, the Lakers' blowout win in Game 6 — all will be dwarfed by what happens in the deciding game.

"I guess it's going to be another decade that people look back and see the formation of this rivalry again," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said. "The '90s was missed, and the '70s was missed, but the '60s and the '80s were big decades. It seems to skip a decade, doesn't it?"

was unclear if the investigation would continue if Utah changed conferences.

A message left with Shurtleff was not immediately returned.

Utah lawmakers, including U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch, have also expressed their frustrations with the BCS.

Last year, the state legislature adopted a resolution calling for a playoff system to determine college football's national champion after an undefeated Utah was shut out of the national title game for the second time in four years.

Utah's lawmakers contend the BCS formula is flawed and gives schools from the major conferences an unfair advantage that would make it impossible for a school like the Mountain West's Brigham Young to win the national title, as the Cougars did in 1984 when they were a member of the WAC.

Study evaluates soccer players' performances

NEW YORK (AP) — Xavi Hernandez was voted player of the tournament after Spain won the 2008 European Championship. Teammate Sergio Ramos didn't even make the all-tournament squad.

Yet they tied as the two best players at Euro 2008. At least according to a study out of Northwestern University's engineering school, which tried to quantify the performances of soccer players.

The report was published Wednesday in the scientific journal PLoS ONE.

Luis Amaral knows he isn't exactly unbiased when it comes to watching his beloved Portugal. The Northwestern engineering professor wanted to find a way to objectively evaluate players in a sport with few statistics because of the rarity of goals.

"When things are going well, I think they're playing better than they truly are," Amaral, the study's senior author, said in a phone interview Tuesday not long after Portugal tied Ivory Coast 0-0 in a World Cup match. "When they're not going well, I'm probably harsher than I should be."

Amaral and colleagues Jordi Duch and Josh Waitzman did a computer analysis of the play-by-play from each Euro 2008 game. The best players would be the ones who most often touched the ball as part of a sequence that resulted in a shot.

Of the 20 players with the highest scores for the tournament, eight made the all-tournament team. Amaral said that indicates the computer analysis is an accurate tool.

He believes it would be most valuable for scouting lower-level events and comparing players across different leagues and different seasons. Just as statistical analysis has influenced how baseball teams spend their millions, he predicts soccer clubs could follow suit.

"You start to ask, 'Are these players you're paying this amount of money to actually performing at that level?'" Amaral said.

He suggested this type of analysis could also be helpful in basketball, even though the sport, unlike soccer, produces a plethora of stats. Assists are a widely used indicator, but what about the pass that led to the pass that led to the score?

These evaluations could even extend into business, measuring the individual contributions of employees working as a group.

Spain's Ramos may want to show this study to any potential future employers. The Real Madrid defender got off to a rocky start at Euro 2008, getting beat for a goal against Sweden and arguing with his coach at a practice.

But he wound up being a key cog in Spain's run to the championship — and apparently was just as important in his team scoring all-important goals as the much-honored Xavi.

WORLD CUP: SWITZERLAND 1, SPAIN 0

Switzerland midfielder Gelson Fernandes (16) scores as Spain defenders Joan Capdevila (11) and Gerard Pique try to defend during a World Cup Group H match in Durban, South Africa, Wednesday.

Swiss precision: Fernandes sinks Spain

DURBAN, South Africa — The World Cup needed a jolt. Switzerland provided it.

Gelson Fernandes scored on a rare Swiss attack, giving his team a stunning 1-0 upset Wednesday over European champion and tournament favorite Spain.

The loss ended Spain's run of 12 straight wins and handed the Spanish just their second loss in 50 games — the other was to the United States at the Confederations Cup in South Africa last year.

It also provided a thrill at a tournament that has seen few surprises and just 25 goals after the first game for all 32 teams.

"To be fair, I'm not used to scoring goals, so I was a bit surprised," said Fernandes, who got just his second in international play. "It was a bit of luck."

And tenacity. Eren Derdiyok created Switzerland's big chance in the 52nd minute by surging through the center of Spain's defense and rounding Iker Casillas. Gerard Pique's desperate tackle stopped Derdiyok, but Fernandes pounced on the loose ball and forced it into the net.

"It's just a special moment," he said.

Spain badly outshot the Swiss and held the ball 63 percent of the time, but could find no way through Switzerland's determined defense.

"Today wasn't our day," Spain coach Vicente del Bosque said. "We have two games ahead of us. We have to find a way to win them."

Derdiyok nearly doubled the Swiss lead in the 75th minute when he shrugged off Carlos Puyol's tackle and poked the ball past Casillas only to see the shot rebound off the post.

Midfielder Xabi Alonso came closest to equalizing when his powerful drive in the 70th minute slammed into the crossbar.

— Jean Beausejour scored the only goal as Chile picked up its first World Cup victory in exactly 48 years.

In a free-flowing match, Chile took command fter Beausejour tapped in a cross from Mauricio Isla in the 34th minute.

URUGUAY 3, SOUTH AFRICA 0
PRETORIA, South Africa — Diego Forlan scored two goals, helping push South Africa closer to being the first host nation to go out in the opening round of a World Cup.

Forlan scored on a deflected 25-yard shot in the 24th minute and converted a penalty kick in the 80th.

Defending U.S. Open champion Lucas Glover hits a drive on No. 13 during a practice round for the U.S. Open Wednesday in Pebble Beach, Calif.

Pebble Beach now an intimate meeting of land and sea

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — One shot that stands out from the last U.S. Open at Pebble Beach was the 7-iron that Tiger Woods gouged out of the right rough on the par-5 sixth, a blind shot over the hill and onto the green to turn trouble into birdie.

He might not get so lucky if it happens this year.

That famous meeting of land and sea is a lot more intimate at this U.S. Open.

In a subtle change that could put even more fear into Pebble Beach, the USGA opted to eliminate the rough on six holes along the Pacific coastline, allowing errant shots to go over the cliff and into the biggest water hazard in golf.

"If the wind is into us on those holes, you're going to see a lot of fun and games," Ernie Els said. "I actually hit one onto the beach the other day on the 10th hole. If you just leak it there, there's no way. The cliff comes into the fairway a little bit and from the tee, you might think you can fly it over that side. But you can't. Or at least I can't."

Els didn't go down to the beach to play his next shot. It was a practice round. Besides, "I don't know if I would have come back up."

Padraig Harrington knows where not to hit his tee shot on the sixth hole. He pushed it a little bit to the right during the Pebble

U.S. Open: Facts and figures

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Facts and figures for the 110th U.S. Open golf championship, which starts Thursday.

Site: Pebble Beach Golf Links.

The course: Designed by two amateur players, Jack Neville and Douglas Grant, Pebble Beach opened in 1919. Jack Nicklaus redesigned the par-3 fifth hole along Stillwater Cove for the 2000 U.S. Open. It now is owned by a group that includes Arnold Palmer.

Length: 7,040 yards.

Par: 35-36-71.

Cut: Top 60 and ties, and anyone within 10 strokes of the lead after 36 holes.

Playoff, if necessary: 18 holes of stroke play on June 21.

Defending champion: Lucas Glover.

Last time at Pebble Beach: In the most dominant victory in major championship history, Tiger Woods led wire-to-wire to win by 15 shots, a record for any major, and tied the U.S. Open record at 272. He did not make worse than par over the final 26 holes.

U.S. Open champions at Pebble Beach: Jack Nicklaus (1972), Tom Watson (1982), Tom Kite (1992), Tiger Woods (2000).

Noteworthy: The four U.S. Open champions at Pebble Beach — Tiger Woods, Tom Kite, Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus — collectively have 202 victories on the PGA Tour and 41 majors.

Quoteworthy: "Old age and treachery can sometimes win out over youth and experience." Tom Watson, 60, on playing the opening two rounds with 21-year-old Rory McIlroy and 18-year-old Ryo Ishikawa.

Beach National Pro-Am in February and watched it tumble over the bluffs and onto the rocks at Stillwater Cove.

"I'm not sure if it's playable to the right," he said. "It certainly wasn't playable then."

That's just one more element for Woods, Phil Mickelson, Lee Westwood and the rest of the 156-man field to contend with when the 110th U.S. Open gets under way on Thursday.

Pebble Beach already is a severe test with its tiny greens, already so firm that the USGA put water on

COLLEGE WORLD SERIES

AP survey: 17 top college baseball coaches prefer metal bats to wood

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — If coaches at the top U.S. college baseball programs have their way, the ping of the aluminum bat will forever remain a part of the game.

According to an Associated Press survey of 24 coaches whose programs have won 1,000 or more games since 1985, 17 said they preferred aluminum and that there was no need to study the possibility of going to wood bats.

"I just don't see the aluminum bat hindering our game in any way," Mississippi State's John Cohen said. "In an ideal world, wood would be cheap, very cost efficient and it would be totally equitable. That can never happen."

Five coaches said they like wood better, but all acknowledged that aluminum probably is here to stay. Florida coach Kevin O'Sullivan said he had no opinion on the question and Arizona State coach Tim Esmay declined to participate in the survey as both teams prepared for the College World Series, which begins Saturday with TCU, Florida St., UCLA, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Clemson also in the field.

Proponents of metal argue that all 301 Division I programs play with the same thing and there's no risk of having top programs playing with better wooden bats, potentially skewing the results. They also like the scoring boost and say a $300 aluminum bat can last an entire 56-game season, while $100 wooden bats can break at any time.

Still, wooden bats have appeal. They allow the game to be played as it was intended, the argument goes, with the hit-and-run, base stealing and bunting all emphasized. Plus, college players would in theory be better prepared to move to professional baseball.

Earlier this year, Division II commissioners began studying the possibility of going to wood, perhaps as soon as 2012.

Ty Halpin, the NCAA associate director of playing rules administration, said Division II made the move in part to address length-of-game concerns. Aluminum-bat games generally take longer because there is more offense.

The length of games also is a concern in Division I. The NCAA does not track the time of games in the regular season. But in 1973, the year before aluminum bats, the average College World Series game lasted 2 hours, 19 minutes. Last year, the average was a record 3:38, with four games stretching longer than 4 hours, and since 1996, the average CWS game has been under 3 hours just once.

Aluminum bats were seen as a cost-saving alternative to wood when they were introduced at the college level in 1974, and the extra offense they produced added excitement to the games.

Advances in technology and design in the 1980s and '90s fueled an arms race of sorts where companies tried to make the liveliest bat.

The result: an integrity-of-the-game crisis that peaked in the 1998 College World Series, when there were a record 62 home runs in 14 games. Southern California's 21-14 championship-game win over Arizona State, which featured seven home runs and 39 hits, was a turning point.

The NCAA began taking steps to tone down aluminum bats and make them perform more like wood, a process that continues 12 years later. In 2011, a new standard will be implemented to bring the performance of metal bats closer to that of wood.

Previous bat testing emphasized the speed with which a ball exited the bat, but there were discrepancies with different lengths of bats. Researchers for the NCAA believe the new formula will offer a more direct measure, using wood-bat performance as the baseline.

Renewed calls for wood came up last year when it was discovered that some composite-barreled bats had been tampered with to circumvent NCAA bat standards. Composite barrels — which contain varying amounts of graphite, fiberglass and resilient plastic — were banned for 2010 but will be allowed in 2011 if they meet the new standards.

Wood, of course, remains legal at all levels of college baseball. Just don't count on ever seeing it in Division I, where bat makers' have long-standing relationships with the top programs.

IF JUNE 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You might chafe under the lack of recognition you receive. If you try to move forward with financial ambitions or business plans this month, they will meet with opposition or in some way undermine your confidence. Bide your time and wait until late September or October to interview for a new job, change careers or put important plans into motion. That is a time when people will view you most favorably and when you can lock in a lucky break for the best possible results. If you are single, that is the beginning of a long period of time when you are at your most attractive, so a special someone appear or a relationship could show signs of being ready for lifelong commitment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spread good will like rose petals wherever you go. Helpful friends will be happy to give you the benefit of their wisdom and support your aims because you are tolerant and supportive of their goals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Every bump and blemish seems magnified under the scrutiny of faultfinding eyes. Take care of practical considerations before you take time out for friendly frolics. You are at your best working alone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): To know you is to love you — so, let people know who you are. Share a few private memories or personal anecdotes. You can get recognition for your hard work and gain points in the business world.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Build a castle in the sky, but don't neglect the real world. Write down inspirational ideas and talk over your thoughts with trusted friends. Your imagination is in high gear.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Place emphasis on making a pleasant appearance and an alluring first impression if you want to make dollars Romantic urges bubbling just beneath the surface need to simmer longer before being satisfied.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can hit a bull's-eye, but hit the wrong target. There may be inadvertent consequences to your actions, so maintain a low profile even if it seems that you can do no wrong in some areas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You might be too old for a teddy bear, but your inner child still needs a warm, snuggly security blanket. You may cling to the past or to old habits because they give you a familiar safe feeling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You might bang your head against the brick wall. Frustration can arise when people criticize your best efforts. Family members could be a bit cranky if your opinion conflicts with their beliefs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You might be entertaining both Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde today. Your cheerful nature could turn sour when bills arrive. A scarcity of funds can put you in a temporary funk. Pack a brown bag lunch or clip coupons.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Toe the line or suffer the consequences. You could suddenly get so far behind with your obligations that you feel like a rear-view mirror. Your love life is temporarily in the deep freeze.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may be motivated to plant important seeds for the future. Essential relationships are running smoothly, but the boss might have little patience with the niceties. Make necessary concessions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Nest with the best. Home and family could loom large in importance and provide a safe haven from worldly troubles. A peaceful and tranquil resting place is the key ingredient to achieving your ambitions.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I disagreed with your advice to the woman whose husband was upset about his wife going out for drinks with her male co-workers. ("Pulled in Two in Pennsylvania," April 2). We have been happily married for many years, and neither she nor I feel comfortable with a female employee going for drinks with mostly males.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Drinking can lower inhibitions. Many office affairs begin in similar situations. In addition, no one should be driving home after two or more drinks. Office parties or get-togethers should not be held at bars. Employers can be held responsible for a multitude of things that can happen after these socials.

That woman's husband may be too protective or controlling, but he is not out of line to be upset about the situation.

— BOB IN LEWISVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR BOB: Thank you for your comments. I told "Pulled in Two" that her husband appears to be insecure and can change only if he's willing to own up to it. However, many readers felt differently — distinctly differently. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: As someone with a "jealous" husband, I beg to differ. There is a positive definition of jealousy — rightly guarding what belongs to a person. This man may be guarding the relationship he has with his wife. He may sense some danger from her "friendly" and "happily married" co-workers that she doesn't see. Although they have been married 16 years, it seems his jealousy arose only after she took this job.

I speak from experience as someone who didn't realize I had boundary issues with men. I thought I was just being friendly, but my husband helped me understand where to draw the line. In doing so, I have seen how much he values our relationship and wants to protect it.

I am a college graduate and have worked in my profession more than 25 years. I'm not a throwback to the days of male domination. I appreciate my husband's concern and wisdom.

"Pulled" needs to find a way to put her marriage ahead of having fun with her co-workers. Jobs come and go; a great marriage can last a lifetime.

— JO ANN IN GEORGIA

DEAR ABBY: Every company I have ever worked for invited employee spouses to attend almost all after-work social events. Only rarely, once or twice a year, may they have had an employee-only function. I suspect "Pulled in Two" enjoys the extra attention she is getting from her male co-workers. Otherwise, I bet she could invite her husband.

— BEEN THERE IN AZTEC, N.M.

DEAR ABBY: It does seem that the husband is insecure, but there may be another explanation. Some of the most jealous spouses I have witnessed were the ones who caroused the most. Obviously, since they cannot be trusted, they project that unwarranted lack of trust onto their mate.

— ILENE IN CORPUS CHRISTI

DEAR ABBY: Any time social drinking is a part of a "work" event, the opportunity for inappropriate behavior presents itself. Many marriages have been ruined because of a "mistake" or "I didn't mean it to happen" — it was the alcohol.

If "Pulled" wants to go out drinking with male associates rather than go home to her husband, she is taking the road that leads away from a strong marriage. I faced that crossroad many times throughout my life and have never once regretted telling the ladies I couldn't join them because I already had a commitment at home. The result has been 30 years of wedded bliss with no "mistakes."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Seek not out the things that are too hard for thee, neither search the things that are above thy strength." — Ecclesiasticus 3:21

These days the proliferation of bridge events, even at the smaller tournaments, means that everyone can find a competition where they have a chance to win. For example, today's deal is from a 99er pairs (for those with fewer than 100 masterpoints) that was held at the 2006 Chicago Summer Nationals. To succeed, declarer had to employ a strategy that would have been beyond many players in a much higher-level event.

Against four spades (reached after an aggressive limit raise from North) West led the heart ace, then the king, on which the queen dropped from East, and continued with the heart jack. South ruffed in dummy, East overruffed, and when declarer later made the normal but unsuccessful play in clubs, down went the game.

When the heart queen appeared from East at trick two, the danger signals were clearly evident. If dummy ruffed the third heart, an overruff looked certain.

Declarer was unlucky to find the club finesse failing. However, he could have saved himself the decision if, instead of ruffing the third round of hearts, he had discarded a club from dummy, effectively exchanging one ruff for another.

No continuation at trick four can harm South. He wins the return, draws two rounds of trumps, then follows with the ace and king of clubs and a club ruff. He takes the diamond ace, ruffs a diamond to hand, and draws the last trump, securing the contract.

ANSWER: If your partner can compete voluntarily to two hearts, then your 10-count, with nothing wasted in spades, must be worth a raise to three hearts. You have aces and a useful doubleton to offer your partner. Don't be surprised if he makes game should he bid on.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
