ROARING ON THE RIVER

Idaho Regatta dubbed ‘Super Bowl’ of sprint boat racing

By Ryan Howe

Times-News writer

BURLEY — In 1976, two jet boat racing brothers from Burley conceived the idea to host a race in their home town.

Three and a half decades, millions of dollars and almost three dozen mink coats later, the Idaho Regatta has cruised into its second generation of racers and fans. Having already made a splash as one of the premier speedboat races in the country, this year the Regatta celebrates its 35th anniversary while also keeping an eye toward the future.

“I think I can speak for the whole boat-racing community: We’re grateful for what the town of Burley has given us for 35 years,” said longtime Regatta racer Bill Faulkner Jr. “It’s one of the biggest races in our sport every year. It’s almost like the Super Bowl of sprint boat racing.”

Since the beginning

Bill Faulkner Jr. was an energetic 11-year-old running around in the pits when his dad, the late Bill Faulkner Sr., raced at the first Burley regatta in 1976.

Boise State University head football coach Chris Petersen prepares to break a huddle at the end of a youth football camp Thursday at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls.

BSU football coach Petersen teaches T.F. kids ‘Bronco Ball’

By David Bashore

Times-News writer

Boise State University football coach Chris Petersen didn’t talk X’s and O’s at the Bronco Kids Camp held at Twin Falls’ Canyon Ridge High School on Thursday.

In fact, he didn’t talk football at all. But his message wasn’t too different from those he imparts upon his own charges.

“We don’t talk a lot about football ... we spend a lot of time on things that are more important,” Petersen said. “We’re passionate not only about football but youth sports in general, and if done correctly it can be a great deal for everyone.”

To close the camp for kids in grades 1-6, Petersen gave a motivational speech centered around listening to instruction, manners and random acts of kindness. Predictably, once he was done, the children queued up for autographs. Even though he had somewhere else to be, Petersen promised he wouldn’t leave until he signed for each scribble-seeker.

“It’s really great to come out and be around all these kids,” Petersen said. “It’s really one of the perks of the job.”

An estimated 175 to 200

children attended the camp run by several former Boise State football players. They worked on football drills and played a lot of “Bronco Ball” — a game loosely resembling Ultimate Frisbee, just with a football.

Brooke Wagner continues to prove that great things often come in small packages.

The Twin Falls High School senior-to-be was so impressive at a U.S. Bobsled and Skeleton Federation screening camp held June 17 to 20 in Lake Placid, N.Y., that she’s been invited back in September to try out for the 2014 U.S. Olympic team.

Of the camp’s participants, Wagner was the only one to receive that invitation from USBSF developmental coach Don Hass.

“He said he wasn’t going to waste either of their time with Junior Olympics,” said Wagner’s mother, Lesa Wagner. “He was so

Brooke Wagner set an Idaho high school Class 4A girls state record of 12.4 seconds in the 100-meter dash in May and also won the 200 meters while placing second in the 400. Her 5-foot-4 frame had Hass and company doubting her abilities, but “she blew them all away on the track and in the weight room,” according to her mother.

When camp participants hit the weight room, Hass asked Wagner if she’d ever lifted weights before, she said.

“Then I went up there and put up max numbers and really impressed him,” said Wagner, a regular in the weight room at TFHS.

MORNING BRIEFING

Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

● Cool off with the Classic Cruisers' Cool Classic Nights based at Twin Falls City Park. It begins with a car show from 7 to 10 p.m. on Main Avenue and includes a street dance, contests and games. Free admission. The show continues through the weekend.

● The Gooding County Western Heritage Gathering and Ranch Rodeo kicks into gear at the Gooding County Fairgrounds, 201 Lucy Lane. In addition to the rodeo action, there's music around the campfire by Dog Creek Band. Arena admission is $5.

● And if you like boats and speed, visit the Idaho Regatta on the Snake River. While racing starts on Saturday, you can check out the boats and time trials today at the Burley Golf Course Marina.

of the Twin Falls' boys sprinters during track practice this spring. She repeated that feat in Lake Placid, besting the times of many male participants. She was the only female to meet the goal in the camp's bobsled and skeleton pushing exercises.

"(Hass) told her he'd never seen anybody in his career of coaching with as much potential," said Lesa Wagner.

"He said I was right up there with the elite athletes," Brooke Wagner added.

Wagner will return to Lake Placid in September for a weeklong on-ice camp. Hass has invited her to return to New York as often as possible on school breaks to train during her senior year. With her size, Wagner's future is likely in skeleton, unless "I can show them I can push a bobsled like girls that are 5-8 and 170 pounds."

That's a challenge Wagner relishes.

For now she's trying not to let Olympic dreams go to her head, but admitted it's "something to look forward to, something crazy. But this is the first step toward it"

Winners of parade awards misidentified

Due to incorrect information submitted to the Times-News for Thursday's Community report on Filer Fun Days, winners of two parade awards were misidentified. Glenn and Sandy Fischer won first place for private vehicle, and Precious People Preschool won second place for animal-powered vehicle.

Murder plot story didn't end

A story about Edgar J. Steele on Main 5 of Thursday's Times-News didn't end correctly. Here is the complete quote from U.S. Magistrate Candy W. Dale:

"I don't know how this court or any person could take that as anything other than an attempt to intimidate," Dale said, referring to the recorded phone conversations.

Prince Albert story didn't end

A story about Prince Albert of Monaco on Outdoors 5 in Thursday's Times-News didn't end correctly on the page. Here are the story's final lines:

Albert acknowledged in 2005 that he had fathered a boy, Alexandre, with a former flight attendant. The following year, he acknowledged an American daughter, Jazmin Grace Grimaldi, now a teenager, born to a California woman. Neither can assume the throne because they were born out of wedlock.

Fishing event information incorrect

A Thursday Times-News story about a fishing event for veterans included incorrect information.

This was the 19th year the American Legion Post 7 hosted the event, said post Commander Walt Mueller. Also, Blue Lakes Trout Farm is north of Twin Falls.

The Times-News regrets the errors.

it, but if you paid attention you could learn some really cool things," said Hunter Case, 10, after getting his sneakers signed by "Coach Pete."

"It was great to have all the old players and Coach back for this. It was like a family reunion for the team."

Petersen's primary responsibility is winning football games for Boise State, but he made no bones about the importance of giving back to the state that supports his program and all the others in the Boise State athletic department.

It's all part and parcel of being arguably the most popular man in Idaho, and certainly the most popular among areas painted blue and orange.

"It comes with the territory. Anything we can do to encourage participation in sports and healthy activities," Petersen said. "The community has given so much to Boise State University ... we don't take that for granted. We've got great support, and hopefully it will get even greater."

The stop was one of many in Twin Falls for Petersen on Thursday. He also attended two meet-and-greets, an alumni dinner and gave a presentation on leadership at Roper Auditorium alongside BSU men's basketball coach Leon Rice, women's basketball coach Gordy Presnell and former Bronco football players, among others.

Regatta

"As a kid I remember listening to my dad and people talking about this race in Burley," Faulkner said. "We enjoyed boat racing so much because it's a family deal. Everybody participated, everybody worked on the boats, everybody showed up to the races."

According to Mark Moyle, Idaho Regatta committee chairman, three families have participated in every race over the years: the Faulkners from Provo, Utah; the Ray Pauli family of Ogden, Utah; and the Moyles from Burley.

"All three of those families have second-generation drivers," Moyle said. "Our family has been built around boat racing. Our vacations are centered around boat racing."

During the 1970s and '80s, speedboat racing was a big deal in the West. In Utah and Idaho alone, Faulkner said, there were about a dozen races. Today, the Idaho Regatta is the only one left standing.

"In the late '80s and early '90s, the economy took a fall, kind of like what's done right now," Faulkner said.

"Nobody could afford to boat race or put on boat races in Utah and Idaho and this part of the country. We lost a huge count of boat racers from this area."

While brothers Don and Lee Moyle, along with Glen Dilworth, Lex Kunau and Wendell Page, are credited as the original founders of the Idaho Regatta, it's the unheralded volunteers who have helped the race avoid the extinction that claimed the others.

"I can't tell you how many volunteers in the town of Burley have kept this race alive," Faulkner said. "I know there's a ton of people from Burley who have the desire to keep this going, for their love of the sport."

Speeding into the future

In its 35th year, the Idaho Regatta features several traits that'll help it roar through its next 35.

Racers rave each year about the hospitality at the event, known as being fan-friendly for its seating close to the action along the Snake River's south bank.

Mark Moyle said he can't predict the future, but one thing's for sure: boat mechanics are certain to evolve.

"Who knows what kind of engines we'll have 35 years from now?" Moyle said. "You have to look at where we're going to be with fuels. Fossil fuels may go to the wayside and we may be powering boats with something different. We may be running hydrogen engines or atomic or who knows?"

The annual Idaho Regatta event has survived two generations, but can it go a third?

"There are so many variables to look at," Moyle said. "It has a lot to do with economics. Many of these racers are business people, and our economy is slowly changing. It's hard to say, but I hope that the participation (in the future) is similar to what it is now."

Bill Faulkner Jr. has watched the Idaho Regatta start simply, grow large, and then become smaller again — all due to the economy, he said. But while the sport has recently fallen off across the country, he sees Burley's race as stronger than most.

"Of the races we've been to this year, Burley will be the biggest turnout, which is ironic because most of the race boat teams come from the Phoenix and Southern California areas, and they have races in their own backyards," Faulkner said. "But there will be a bigger turnout here just because of the prestige of the Burley Idaho Regatta."

make offers based on market value, the demand for the item, and whether or not a collector wants to buy it.

Gordon and Trudy Saffrey sat across the table from representative Donald Knechtel, waiting to hear what their valuables were worth. They brought a one-carat emerald, a bag full of old coins, a variety of precious gems and handfuls of old jewelry.

"Sorry, we don't deal with foreign currency," Knechtel told the Twin Falls residents.

The emerald, which the Saffreys some time ago had appraised at slightly more than $2,000, wasn't an item any collector had told the Treasure Hunters Roadshow they wanted to buy. So representatives of the international company called in to their headquarters to see if they could find someone to buy it.

If a collector shows interest any time in the future, the company will contact the Saffreys to find out if it is still for sale.

However, Gordon and Trudy Saffrey left their session with mixed feelings.

"I was disappointed," Gordon Saffrey said about the amount of money he received, which totaled less than $1,000. "When you buy something at retail value, you think it's a good investment, but then reality hits you hard."

"We didn't need the jewelry, but the emerald is very valuable," said Trudy Saffrey. The emerald will remain in the Saffreys' possession until they get a call from the company or sell it on their own, whichever comes first.

The couple was mostly disappointed about what they received for the bag of old coins they brought in, some dating back to 1886. They had purchased the coins from a coin dealer years ago for $500, but sold them for $269.80.

"It's money that's been sitting in a drawer," Gordon Saffrey said. "Nowadays, you need all the money you can get."

The seller decides whether or not to accept the offer from the collector representatives.

"I wouldn't say they are cheating you," Saffrey said. "But people should question them," his wife added.

The pile of one-of-a-kind toys, jewelry and valuable coins in the back of the room suggested that a number of people were satisfied with the offers given to them.

"Usually, the unique kinds of things we buy are guitars and guns," Knechtel said.

Symposium

The two-day symposium, organized by the Minidoka National Historic Site, Friends of Minidoka and the College of Southern Idaho, has an emphasis this year on the civil liberty issues surrounding the internment camps and the artwork shaped by that era.

"History is only important as long as you can apply the lessons you learn today," said Emily Momohara, an artist and assistant professor from the Art Academy of Cincinnati.

Momohara showed the audience photographs taken when Japanese-Americans lived in internment camps, as well as pictures taken in this generation that capture the remnants of those places.

On a large screen, photographs showed a multitude of scenes: a soldier visiting family, women waiting for returning soldiers and a baseball team posing for a photo. But some photos brought reminders of suffering: a child waiting near luggage during a move away from home, and a grandmother holding a child and preparing to leave for a camp.

The photographers of World War II came from different backgrounds. The federal government had its photographers. The Japanese-Americans weren't permitted to have cameras, though one managed to get a camera into his camp by disassembling it and stowing the pieces throughout his luggage.

Today, photographers take images of empty internment cots and buildings, using shades of dark against the landscapes to reflect emotions. But in some photos, the human images remain, now of those who descended from the Japanese-American generation of World War II.

Al Capone? I bet on ‘Two Gun’ Bob

The man known as “Two Gun” Bob Limbert is the most unjustly forgotten Idahoan in the state’s history — directly responsible for, among other things, the creation of Craters of the Moon National Monument and the development of tourism in the Sawtooth Valley.

But is the most widely circulated story about the Boise taxidermist and storyteller — a sometime-resident of the Wood River Valley — true? Did he actually challenge Al Capone to a duel?

You bet he did, according to Bend, Ore., filmmaker Steve Wursta, who produced a DVD about Limbert’s life four years ago.

YOU DON’T SAY

Better still, Scarface took him up on the offer.

As Wursta explains it, Limbert — a gifted public speaker — was in the Windy City in the spring of 1929 on a tour sponsored by the Izaak Walton League, a national conservation group. Having won a pistol-shooting exhibition with some Chicago cops, he wondered the Sun Valley Resort, Limbert pitched the idea to Hailey.

Two months earlier, five gangsters who worked for one of Capone’s rivals were gunned down in a Chicago garage in a little disagreement that came to be known as the St. Valentine’s Day Massacre.

In 1926, Limbert went before the Hailey City Council and told officials that the Wood River Valley was a natural location for a future Winter Olympics, perhaps as early as 1932.

The council said no, the Olympics never came to Idaho and Limbert died of a stroke in 1933 at the age of 48.

That’s a shame. By 1931, Limbert was a Will Rogers-caliber personality, heard on 63 radio stations across the country performing animal and bird calls and telling tales of his Idaho adventures.

He should have been governor.

Longtime educator retiring from TFSD

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

A longtime educator is retiring from the Twin Falls School District, ending a career marked by teaching high school journalism and English and overseeing secondary education for the district.

Mary Lu Barry is departing a 34-year career with that included teaching, advising student journalists publishing the Bruin News and serving as director of secondary education for four years. Prior to coming to Twin Falls High School, she taught at Murtaugh High School for two years.

In the span of her career, she’s seen education change into a data-driven field filled with standardized testing that supplements the foundation of teaching and grades.

“What hasn’t changed is the impact a teacher can make,” Barry said.

Barry said she’s enjoyed having a job filled with daily challenges. What she won’t miss is the never-ending stack of papers.

“I think it’s really, really difficult to be a good teacher,” Barry said. “It takes a lot of time and effort.”

Former student Scott Andrus said Barry was the reason he embarked on a 15-year career in journalism.

Barry’s emphasis on composition made such an impression on the 1979 Twin Falls High graduate that he shuns electronic communications that encourage choppy writing and misspelled words.

“Because of Mary Lu Barry I cannot text,” said Andrus, now a media consultant in Las Vegas.

“Because of her, I can’t use the ‘u’ symbol to spell ‘you.’”

Claudia Creek has worked with Barry as both student and colleague.

A 1977 graduate of TFHS, Creek is now a high school French and English teacher.

Creek said Barry reminds fellow educators that there’s always more to learn — even for teachers.

“She makes you want to do the best you can,” Creek said.

That’s one reason why Barry isn’t leaving the education field altogether, even though she’s retiring. She’ll be teaching an English course through the Idaho Digital Learning Academy and consulting part-time through an Idaho State Department of Education program that will have her working with Burley High School.

Barry said she didn’t want to retire without learning what teaching in the online world is like for educators adapting to the 21st century.

Reform, other factors driving St. Luke's psychiatric partnership

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Hospital managers are rethinking how they run their facilities, especially with the changes health-care reform is expected to bring about.

That was part of the reasoning behind St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center's Wednesday announcement that Intermountain Hospital of Boise will manage the Twin Falls hospital's 28-bed psychiatric facility, said Mike Reno, St. Luke's Magic Valley's interim CEO.

St. Luke's Canyon View Behavioral Health Services has been managed by an independent contractor for 15 months. The search for a permanent manager had fallen by the wayside, Reno said, amid the hospital's preparations to move to a new location next year and some turnover in upper management.

Intermountain Hospital

in Boise has provided psychiatric and chemical dependency care for 30 years. Its parent company, Psychiatric Solutions Inc., is the largest provider of psychiatric care in the nation — operating in 32 states, Reno said, with expertise that St. Luke's can't match and more resources to draw upon.

The two companies already have an established relationship through St. Luke's Boise campus. When Reno took over in Twin Falls, he learned that talks about Intermountain taking over management of Canyon View had started a few years before.

Chuck Christiansen, Intermountain's director of business development, said the groundwork had been laid so it didn't take long to reach an agreement. St. Luke's didn't use a bid process because of the existing relationship, Reno said.

"I think this is a nice fit,"

Christiansen said. "We hope to bring our expertise in to help Canyon View provide efficient and effective care."

Intermountain takes over on July 15, and Christiansen said he plans to have a director on site by then. The company then has 90 days to conduct an initial assessment of Canyon View and make recommendations on how to improve its efficiency. St. Luke's doesn't have to make the changes and is still responsible for what goes on in the facility.

Intermountain will initially focus on ensuring smooth operations but eventually, Reno said, better service may lead to expansion. When asked if St. Luke's might bring back adolescent inpatient services, however, Reno said probably not.

"They will evaluate both our in- and outpatient care, and maybe they'll validate that the most critical need is outpatient," Reno said.

Reno anticipates that the arrangement with Intermountain will save his hospital money. Canyon View operates at a loss of about $500,000 a year.

"We don't want to make money," Reno said. "We just want to be able to cover our costs. Maybe we can take that half-million and put it toward more improvements."

He said such collaboration is going to become more common for health care providers looking to save money and hinted that similar agreements may occur at St. Luke's in the future.

"St. Luke's is progressive in this regard, looking for partners in the region to come up with new ways of providing better or more cost-effective care," Reno said.

Washington/North College stoplight removed

The temporary stoplight at the intersection of Washington Street North and North College Road in Twin Falls was removed Thursday, according to a city press release.

The light has been replaced by stop signs along North College. Motorists on east- and westbound North College will be allowed to make only right turns at the intersection, and traffic along Washington won't be stopped at the intersection until permanent stoplights are installed.

According to the Idaho Transportation Department, the stoplight removal is part of the federally funded $6.5 million Washington widening project contracted by DEBCO Construction of Orofino.

Cannon Builders Inc., of Blackfoot, is the contractor for the $1.6 million project.

U.S. 30 work suspended

Reconstruction of two U.S. Highway 30 bridges over the Twin Falls Canal has been suspended for the remainder of the water season, ITD recently announced.

Two lanes of travel will be restored across both bridges, which will have 35 mph speed limits and an 11 foot, 6 inch width restriction.

Work on the bridges, between Hansen and Murtaugh, will resume in the fall after water has been drained from the canal.

Streets to close in downtown Twin Falls for car show

A portion of Main Avenue in Twin Falls will be closed this evening for the annual Classic Cruisers' Cool Classic Nights car show, the city announced.

Main will be barricaded between Gooding and Idaho streets between 5 and 11 p.m., as the car show, which includes a DJ and other activities, will run from 7 to 10 p.m.

Running for the kids

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

JEROME — Mackenzie Chojnacky will run just about anywhere.

When her car broke down on the way to the bank on Tuesday, she pulled on her running shoes and ran the remaining two miles. She runs to clear her head. She does it for fun and, she hopes, to get a scholarship for college next year.

Chojnacky runs in the snow, in the heat of the day and, on Saturday, will run 20 miles for a cause.

The 17-year-old Jerome High School senior organized a 75-mile relay as part of her senior project to raise money for the Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) program, an organization of court advocates who help children in situations of neglect or abuse.

Twenty-three runners will participate in the relay, all of them running five, 10 or 15 miles starting in Jerome and ending a little past Ketchum.

"I read about those ultimate marathoners and I wanted to run 75 miles on my own, but my cross-country coach said I would ruin my legs," Chojnacky said. "So I decided to get other people to help me. I love running and I love a challenge."

The $2,000 in donations she received from businesses will go directly to CASA. Chojnacky said she was shooting for $5,000 at first, but realized that $2,000 was a more realistic goal. She spent an estimated 50 hours or more organizing the relay, asking businesses for money and writing thank-you notes.

Chojnacky said putting the relay together was stressful.

"It's been nerve-racking, but then I think about what I'm getting in the end," she said. "It's cool to think that I could earn that much money by myself."

Babysitting for children in the foster care system inspired her to raise money to help other children in similar situations.

"They were just so loving and they appreciated people caring about them so much," she said. "CASA does a lot for kids and people don't think about them as often."

The Jerome native started running when she was younger to keep up with her two older sisters. Now she runs every day, anywhere from three to 10 miles, and participates in track and cross country at Jerome High School. Chojnacky has medaled at state in the 800-, 1,600- and 3,200-meter races for the past three years.

"No firsts," she said with a smile. "Not yet anyway!"

Tonight Chojnacky will eat a big plate of spaghetti and get ready for her 6 a.m. relay and a new finish line to cross. She will run 20 miles of the relay on her own, a feat she said she just hopes to finish.

"Just don't stop, that is my goal," she said with a determined grin. "And someday, I will run 75 miles in a day!"

A permanent 4-day week for some government?

In 2009 and earlier this year, when local governments were furiously jettisoning costs in the wake of the Great Recession, some decided to close up shop on Fridays. And now a few are wondering if they want to go back to the five-day work week.

A survey of Blaine County employees conducted in May found that 94.5 percent support continuing the four-day week after it's due to expire at the end of September, according to the Idaho Mountain Express of Ketchum.

And they're not alone. The expected uproar by the general public hasn't materialized, and school districts — which were slow to embrace the idea statewide — are increasingly going to four-day weeks to save money after the Legislature cut state education funding.

The largest government agency in Idaho — the Department of Health and Welfare — closed up shop every other Friday in April, May and June after its budget was slashed. The agency will resume opening every Friday after the new fiscal year starts on July 1.

Health and Welfare had trouble accommodating the rising demand for social services when it started closing alternate Fridays, but the change hasn't been nearly as traumatic for other state departments and for city and county agencies.

A Blaine County survey showed 53 percent of respondents said the extended county hours were convenient — in part because county offices are open 10 hours a day Mondays through Thursdays.

Blaine County made the switch for environmental, not economic reasons, but it still saved money — $10,500 in utilities, maintenance and custodial work in the current quarter compared with a year ago. In six months, the four-day week has saved $17,600.

“It will cost the county money to return to the five-day model,” Blaine County Commissioner Larry Schoen told the Express.

Turning off the lights and locking the doors is economical if nobody uses a public building on Fridays. That's not the case with schools.

Districts do save on transportation, but the school buildings stay open on Fridays even when no classes are held — both for academic use and extracurricular events.

Ultimately, four-day weeks for public agencies must be a local decision. It's harder to imagine, say, Twin Falls County making it work than Blaine County doing so.

But for many government agencies, it's a more realistic long-term option than it was just a year ago.

Our view: There are savings in closing down government buildings on Fridays, but there is a downside.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Sixty years after it began, Korean War continues

It was America's fifth-bloodiest war, yet today, 60 years later, it is more often than not just considered “America's Forgotten War.” Sixty years later, the American public seems to remember it, if at all, as a conflict occurring sometime between World War II and Vietnam, or maybe as the background for the 1970s TV show “M-A-S-H.”

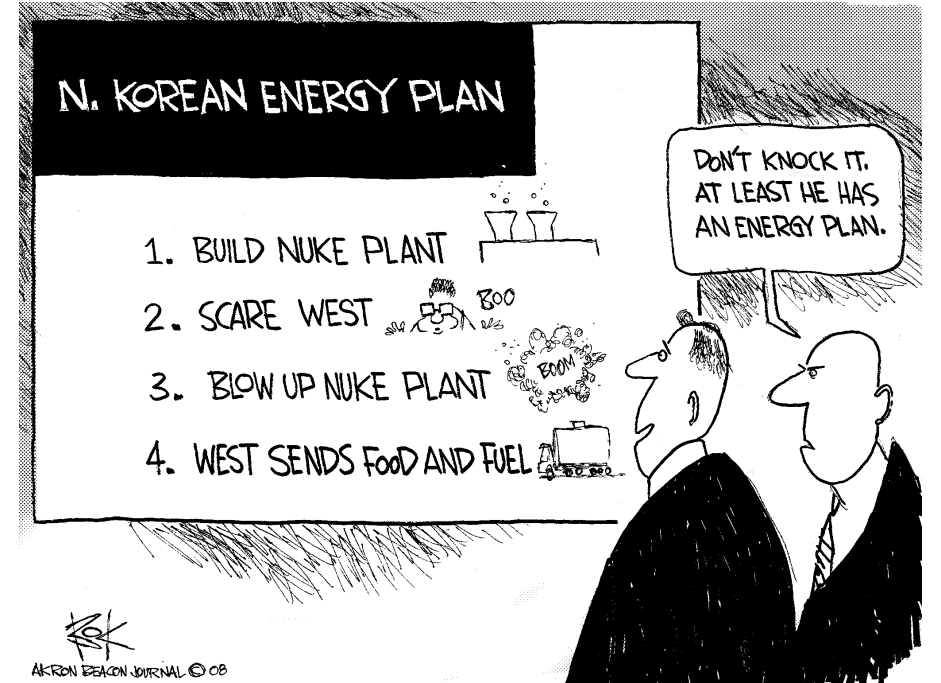

World War II had ended in victory celebrations across the nation, and even the Vietnam War has about it something of a 1960s dramatic, romantic aura: peace, love, drugs, youth, protest. By contrast, the Korean War (1950-53) was a part of the supposedly bland 1950s.

Stanley Sandler

But at the time of the sudden, unexpected North Korean invasion on June 25, 1950, Americans saw this attack as a thrust directed by the Kremlin through its North Korean communist proxies. Such overt aggression roused even the United Nations, which branded North Korea the aggressor and commissioned the U.S. Far East commander, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, as chief of all U.N. forces in Korea.

Two days after the invasion, in one of the most momentous decisions of his career, President Harry Truman, ordered U.S. military forces to the aid of South Korea. The post-World War II years had been ones of savage cutbacks in U.S. military funding and development. At any rate, pundits had pontificated that the next war would be one of push buttons and atomic bombs dropped on Moscow by huge B-36 intercontinental bombers. Almost no one in Washington anticipated that U.S. troops only five years after V-J Day would find themselves down and dirty in someone else's rice paddy.

“By 1952 Americans were so sick of the war that when GOP presidential candidate Dwight Eisenhower simply announced that ‘If elected, I shall go to Korea,’ the election was basically over.”

U.S. and North Korean troops first clashed at the village of Osan on July 5. The outgunned and outnumbered Americans of Task Force Smith saw their WW II bazooka rounds bounce harmlessly off Soviet-built T-34 tanks. The North Koreans shook off their infantry losses, rolled southward, and by August had pushed the Americans and their South Korean allies back into a tight perimeter around the port city of Pusan.

There the U.N. forces held even though they had complete control of the air and vast artillery superiority, until MacArthur's brilliant amphibious September landing at Inchon, well behind enemy lines. That operation opened the way for the devastation of the North Korean Army and its retreat back across the 38th Parallel. MacArthur affirmatively and quickly answered the question of whether the United Nations should advance northward across that artificial line, thus beginning the “Race to the Yalu,” the river separating North Korea from China.

But the United States once again was caught flat-footed, this time by the Chinese Communists. MacArthur's forces were pushed back below the 38th Parallel in the longest retreat in U.S. military history. Finally, the Chinese, hammered relentlessly by U.N. air power, outran their supply train. U.N. resistance stiffened, and from early 1951 on, the battle lines stabilized.

After the Chinese intervention, MacArthur publicly demanded something like all-out war in Korea, including operations against China. His challenge to the Truman administration and the Joint Chiefs of Staff led to the general's very unpopular and sensational firing by the president.

On the first anniversary of the outbreak of the war, the communists called for armistice discussions. But in another surprise of the Korean War, the armistice negotiations would drag out for more than two years.

By 1952 Americans were so sick of the war that when GOP presidential candidate Dwight Eisenhower simply announced that “If elected, I shall go to Korea,” the election was basically over. President-elect Eisenhower duly went to Korea, ate Army chow, looked involved and presidential, and returned home.

Even the communists by then were getting tired of the war. By 1953, communist negotiators no longer demanded that all U.N.-held POWs be forced to return against their will.

The signing of the armistice agreement at Panmunjom on July 27, 1953, fixed the status quo. Both sides agreed to stay in place along the battle line, which was not all that different from the border between North and South Korea on June 25, 1950. No cheers, no jubilation followed the signing — just a sigh of relief.

Men had indeed “died for a tie” — more than 36,000 Americans in combat, and about a million or more North and South Koreans and Chinese. However, South Korea had been saved, the apocalypse tarried, Ike was settled in the White House, and most of the boys were coming home.

But today U.S. and South Korean troops still face a nuclear-armed North Korean rogue state. Will the Korean peninsula hang fire for another six decades?

Reach a compromise on marijuana issue

Proponents of legalized marijuana use often enumerate the benefits of looking to marijuana to help patients who can't find relief in using conventional drugs. Opponents of medical marijuana assert that there are great risks in allowing public policy to open its doors to this “gateway drug.”

For years, both sides have offered reasonable, valid arguments. But not enough people have taken the initiative to weigh the pros and cons; that is precisely why it is still an issue today. What is to be done then?

application of research and wisdom. To those who champion one side or the other in this debate, consider that there are valid points on both sides of the argument.

Compromise can be found, not between principles of right and wrong, of course, but in the means of bringing about that which is right.

Those who have not considered either side, I challenge you to study the issues and be able to champion a reasonable solution. It seems logical that some conclusion can be made by any who would pay the price, who would study and ponder and reason through a difficult problem. And if apathy is to be the thief of wisdom, hopefully the consequences of foolish decisions will inspire a greater sense of responsibility in future generations.

It sounds like some of the members of the Idaho Congress have put much effort into careful research. Legislators ought to make sure that the general populous is informed, and they have to know what people want in order to represent them well.

If this isn't possible, maybe the vote on this particular issue should be put to vote on the statewide referendum in November.

The trouble with the Blue Dog Democrats

Liberal Democrats know what they're for: a second stimulus to create more investment and jobs at a time when the economy is still dangerously weak. Republicans ("conservative Republicans" is redundant) know what they're against: anything the Democrats are for. That leaves the centrist Blue Dog Democrats, who don't really know what they're for or what they're against.

Earlier this year the Blue Dogs, and many other Democrats, were saying they would welcome an end to the debate over health-care reform so they could turn their attention to jobs, jobs, jobs. But now that President Obama and Democratic legislative leaders have done that, the Blue Dogs have largely turned skittish.

Efforts by the leaders in both houses to pass bills that would save the jobs of teachers and police officers, maintain states' ability to make Medicaid payments and extend unemployment insurance have hit not only the expected bumps in the road (unified Republican opposition) but also fresh potholes: Blue Dog resistance to countercyclical spending. The House passed a second stimulus in December, and in theory this is what the Senate is belaboring. Although its version is far punier than the House's, the Senate stimulus bill, which had already been pared by such Scroogish expeditors as cutting weekly unemployment benefits by $25 — thank centrist Montana Democrat Jon Tester — last week came a few votes short of the 60 to needed cut off a potential filibuster. And recent efforts by House Appropriations Committee Chairman David Obey to come up with funds to keep the states from devastating the ranks of teachers have had rough going at the hands of the Blue Dogs, not to mention the Republicans.

The downside of not passing any further stimulus legislation is clear: "Nothing will come of nothing," as Lear told Cordelia. In today's economy, alas, the government remains the only source of significant investment. According to the congressional panel overseeing the Troubled Asset Relief Program, banks are still not lending to small businesses. Beyond the realm of mom-and-pops, nonfinancial companies are hoarding cash — a record-high $1.84 trillion, according to a Federal Reserve report this month — but with unemployment still high and purchasing still low, they are not using it to expand.

The administration is rightly touting the large number of infrastructure projects funded by last year's stimulus that are finally under way this summer. But these projects have a finite time span, and absent a second stimulus, an infrastructure-led recovery is likely to run out of steam. Home construction is falling again. The possibility of a double-dip recession cannot be discounted.

Until recently, virtually every Democratic member of Congress could be counted on to support some level of countercyclical spending. That was one of the basic ways Democrats distinguished themselves from the laissez-faire right. But today, the Blue Dogs insist on offsetting stimulus with cuts, which can create a self-negating position. Suppose you vote for a stimulus that enables the states to save teachers' jobs, while offsetting that expenditure at the federal level by reducing spending on, and jobs in, building rail lines. In aggregate economic terms, you may well have zeroed out the net effect of your action. It's hard to believe that anyone ran for office to craft such exquisitely balanced nullities.

The problem here is that the Blue Dogs, like much of the public, conflate the issues of the nation's long-term fiscal sustainability with the short-term deficits created by the worst downturn since the '30s. Thus the Democratic imperative of creating jobs in 2009 became, earlier this year, one of creating jobs and reducing the deficit, and now, for some Blue Dogs, has become chiefly one of reducing the deficit. In polls, meanwhile, the public rates "jobs" as its chief concern, with the deficit lagging far behind. But because this recession is deeper and longer than any since the '30s; because the job-creating component of the first stimulus, while considerable, was clearly too small; and because the administration did not concentrate those jobs in visible agencies, as Franklin Roosevelt did in the Works Progress Administration, only a minority of Americans credit the stimulus with saving or creating jobs. For millions of Americans, concern over the deficit is at least partly a concern over the government's broader inability, as yet, to "fix" the economy. Reducing the deficit now, however, will make the economy worse.

Yet the Blue Dogs' short-term deficit hawkery is more than bad economics. It's bad politics, too. Even pragmatic centrists — especially pragmatic centrists — have to be in favor of something. The Blue Dogs don't seem to know what exactly that might be.

Property owners getting tired of trespassers

My brother and I have about 3,900 acres of Cassia County farmland (most in CRP) in Heglar. We have stopped people from driving vehicles on old farm roads through our farm land and CRP for quite some time now. So many think they are simply entitled to a shortcut through private property to state, Bureau of Land Management and National Forest Service public lands. Well, they are not entitled to any such shortcuts.

Most property owners I know are sick and tired of trespassers tearing up signs, running ATVs over crop land, tearing up the CRP lands and road hunting private property that they don't own or pay taxes on. Where does this entitlement mentality come from?

Mr. Lloyd needs to quit his whining and build up a relationship with the landowners if he wants to set foot on their land. We allow folks who seek permission to hunt and trespass our property through the Idaho Fish and Game Access Yes program, but even they cannot drive a vehicle on a farm road to get to nearby BLM ground; they must walk or access it another way. We don't allow the public to drive vehicles on the farm roads and tread lightly on it ourselves.

On this issue, Al Barrus has it correct and so far the Cassia County sheriff's department has backed us up 100 percent.

Idahoans set to get free air cooling units

A new miracle air cooler is actually being given away free to the first 1,714 readers who call to beat the order deadline for their first miracle air cooler to stay cool for just pennies a day

Save money: uses 95% less electricity to blast out cold air with no windows, no vents and no freon

UMS – Everyone wants to stay cool this summer. But just turning on your air conditioner sucks the money right out of your pockets.

Well today, for the first time ever brand new MIRA-COOL™ air coolers are actually being given away free to the general public for the next 48 hours starting at precisely 8:00am this morning.

The only thing today’s readers have to do is call the Toll Free Hotline with their order for their first MIRA-COOL air cooler before the 48-hour deadline. The first 1,714 readers who do are instantly getting their second MIRA-COOL air cooler absolutely free.

This is all happening to announce the MIRA-COOL air cooler which actually rolls from room-to-room so you can turn down the central air conditioning and stay cool anywhere. That way, everyone who gets them first can beat the sweltering heat and immediately start saving on their electric bills.

Just in time for the unbearable summer heat, MIRA-COOL portable air coolers are being delivered directly to the doors of all Idahoans who beat the deadline.

The good news is the MIRA-COOL portable air cooler is not an air conditioner, so it only costs about a penny an hour to operate.

These remarkable air cooling units are being called a miracle because they use 95% less electricity than a typical room air conditioner, yet blast out ice cooled air without any windows, vents or freon.

They even come with two sets of reusable ice blocks. Everyone is getting the MIRA-COOL because all you do is fill it up and plug it in to stay cool for just pennies a day.

So what’s the catch? “Well, only the first 1,714 readers who call 1-866-964-2336 to beat the order deadline for their first MIRA-COOL air cooler are getting their second one free,” said Chris Gallo, Operations Director.

“We’re sorry, but we just can’t afford to give any more than that away free to readers of today’s publication,” Gallo said.

“We can barely keep up ever since we started giving the MIRA-COOL air coolers away free. With summer right around the corner, everyone’s trying to get them,” said Gallo.

You just won’t find these MIRA-COOL air coolers in the national chain stores. That makes the first MIRA-COOL air cooler a real steal for just two hundred ninety-eight dollars and shipping since when you cover only shipping of the second MIRA-COOL air cooler the entire cost is free.

This free giveaway is the best way to slash summer cooling bills and stay cool all summer long. The MIRA-COOL air cooler rolls from room-to-room to keep you cool so you can turn down the air and save a ton of money on cooling bills.

“You see, with a central air conditioner you are paying to cool areas of your home that you’re not using. And window air conditioners are even worse because they weigh a ton so they’re a hassle to move,” said

■ RELIEF IS ON THE WAY: Everyone wants to stay cool and save money on their energy bills this summer. These trucks are being loaded full of MIRA-COOL air coolers and soon will be ready to go. The new MIRA-COOL air cooler is a real steal at just two hundred ninety-eight dollars and shipping because the first 1,714 readers who call to beat the 48 hour order deadline for their first MIRA-COOL air cooler are actually getting their second MIRA-COOL air cooler absolutely free.

Gallo.

But the MIRA-COOL air cooler actually rolls from room-to-room so it’s easy to stay cool in any room of the house for just pennies a day.

And here’s the best part. Readers of this publication who beat the 48 hour order deadline are getting one free. The MIRA-COOL air cooler only uses about 1¢ an hour of electricity, so the potential energy savings are absolutely incredible.

“We’re trying to make sure no one gets left out, but you better hurry because we only have 1,714 MIRA-COOL air coolers to hand out to today’s readers for free,” confirms Gallo.

Getting the MIRA-COOL air cooler is the smart way to slash summer electric bills and still stay cool all summer long. And getting the second one free is like putting around three hundred bucks in your pocket and you can keep everyone in your family cool.

“We’re bracing ourselves for all the calls because everyone wants to save on their electric bills and stay cool this summer. But those that really want to stay cool will be telling our operators they want two and they’ll get two more free,” said Gallo.

“So when lines are busy keep trying or log onto www.MIRA-COOL.com. We promise to get every call. Then we’ll have a delivery truck out to you in no time at all so you can stay cool and start saving on your energy bills right away,” Gallo said.

“You’ll instantly feel the ice cooled air in any room. You will never have to be hot and miserable again,” he said. ■

How to get your free air cooler

Readers need to call the Toll Free Hotlines beginning at 8:00am this morning. If lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered.

The first 1,714 readers who beat the 48 hour order deadline to cover the cost of just their first MIRA-COOL™ air cooler and shipping on each get their second MIRA-COOL air cooler absolutely free.

They have imposed a strict limit of 2 free MIRA-COOL air coolers per household. Readers need to hurry and call now because there are only 1,714 MIRA-COOL air coolers to be given away free, when they’re gone, they’re gone.

Mortgage rates sink to lowest level on record

Times-News staff and wire reports

Mortgage rates fell this week to the lowest level on record, giving consumers added incentive to lock in low payments for home purchases and refinanced loans.

The average rate for 30-year fixed loans sank to 4.69 percent, from 4.75 percent last week, mortgage company Freddie Mac said Thursday.

That's the lowest point since Freddie Mac began tracking rates in 1971. The previous record of 4.71 percent was set in December. Rates for 15-year and five-year mortgages also hit lows.

Banks in south-central Idaho were reporting rates on 15-year fixed loans as lows as 4.2 percent, marking the lowest rates in Magic Valley since the late 50s. First Federal Savings Bank in Twin Falls reported that its 30-year fixed rate was 4.625 percent.

Mortgage rates have fallen over the past two months as nervous investors have shifted money into the safety of Treasury bonds. The demand for Treasurys has caused Treasury yields to fall. And mortgage rates tend to track the yields on long-term Treasurys.

Yet the falling rates have yet to spark a home-buying boom — or energize the economy.

“It’s surprising that even with rates this low, lending is still pretty soft,” said Jason Meyerhoeffer, executive vice president and loan administrator at First Federal.

Mortgage applications volume nationwide dipped 6 percent last week from a week earlier, according to the Mortgage Bankers Association. Refinancing activity fell 7 percent. And mortgage applications to buy homes slipped 1.2 percent.

Many borrowers are opting to refinance, instead.

Given the costs of refinancing, some mortgage experts say a refinancing can be worthwhile if you can shave at least 0.75 percentage point from an existing rate. Others suggest waiting until you can lower your rate by at least a point.

Despite some lenders’ ads, refinancing is never free. A fee normally goes to the mortgage broker or lender. There are also fees for title insurance, a new appraisal, document processing and other charges. Often, mortgage brokers or lenders create the appearance of a “no fee” mortgage by adding the costs to a total loan amount or by charging a higher interest rate.

People considering refinancing should factor in such fees. They should also calculate how many months it would take to recover them. For those who expect to stay in their home for two years or less, the fees might outweigh the savings from a lower rate.

Thousands line up to buy new iPhone

By Lauren Sausser
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Apple Inc.’s newest iPhone was selling briskly Thursday as thousands lined up outside stores around the world to snag one amid concerns of supply shortages.

Some stores including ones in Tokyo, Miami, San Francisco and Charlotte, N.C., sold out within hours as the iPhone 4 went on sale in the U.S., France, Germany, the U.K. and Japan. Apple called the demand for the phone “off the charts” and said it’s working hard to get phones into customers’ hands as quickly as possible.

More than 600,000 people had rushed to pre-order iPhones on the first day they were available, prompting Apple and its exclusive wireless partner in the U.S., AT&T Inc., to stop taking orders for pickup or shipment by Thursday’s launch. On Apple’s website, new orders weren’t promised for delivery until July 14.

Apple Inc.’s newest iPhone was in hot demand Thursday as hundreds lined up outside stores in Tokyo, Berlin, New York and elsewhere to become among the first to own the device.

Those who didn’t place an iPhone 4 order had to line up outside Apple stores Thursday in the hopes of snagging one on a first-come, first-served basis. Customers in line were left guessing about whether they’d get one.

From Cherry Hill, N.J. to San Francisco, Apple employees continued the tradition of providing bottled water, coffee, bagels and even cupcakes. In downtown Chicago, several customers waited overnight through severe thunderstorms and even defied tornado sirens that wailed around the city. To keep the die-hard iPhone fans dry, the store handed out black umbrellas with white Apple logos.

Depending on the amount of storage, the iPhone 4 sells for $199 or $299 with a two-year contract.

The new iPhone, the fourth since the 2007 original, is thinner with a better-resolution screen and longer battery life. It features a new operating system that can also be installed on some older models, such as the 3GS, along with cameras on both sides to permit face-to-face video calls.

Micron to make state-of-the-art solar panels in southwest Idaho

The Associated Press

BOISE — A company formed by Boise-based Micron Technology Inc. and Origin Energy of Australia says it plans to start making extremely thin but highly efficient solar cells that will be available next year.

Transform Solar officials say the so-called sliver solar cells will be made at a plant in Boise where Micron once made computer chips, and the cells will be combined into solar panels at another plant owned by Micron in Nampa.

“There is nothing comparable to sliver (cells) on the market,” Phil Mackey of Transform Holdings told the Idaho Statesman.

He said Transform Solar has hired 70 employees and expects to hire up to 50 more, with most of the jobs based in southwest Idaho.

Micron and Origin late last year announced the agreement that officials said takes advantage of Origin’s experience in energy markets and Micron’s expertise in making thin semiconductors.

Mackey said Transform Solar’s manufacturing and research will be based in southwest Idaho, and more research and development will be done in Adelaide, Australia.

Holding out for a better deal

So let’s say you have a sprawling $3-million building lying around that costs thousands of dollars per month just to maintain.

For the sake of discussion, let’s also say it’s full of expensive equipment with a half-life that’s ticking down like a time bomb. Oh, and there is also a recession, so nobody is really buying at the moment.

Then, right in the midst of it all, someone comes along, offering you just enough money to pay your costs, break even and get the heck out.

With economy improving, businesses spend more on durable goods

By Christopher S. Rugaber and Daniel Wagner
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Businesses spent more on big-ticket goods in May and the pace of layoffs slowed in the past week, the latest evidence that the economy is gradually improving.

Overall, factory orders for durable goods fell 1.1 percent last month, the Commerce Department said Thursday. But that was largely the result of a drop in demand for commercial aircraft.

Durable goods

SOURCE: Department of Commerce AP

Excluding the volatile transportation sector, orders rose 0.9 percent after falling in April. Contributing to the strength was a 2.1 percent increase in business spending.

Meanwhile, the number of people filing first-time claims for jobless benefits fell last week by 19,000, the largest drop in two months.

New claims declined to a seasonally adjusted 457,000, the Labor Department said. That’s about the same level that they were at the beginning of the year. The four-week average dipped to 462,750, the first drop in six weeks.

The stubbornly high level of requests for jobless aid is a sign hiring remains weak even as the economy recovers. Initial claims have dropped steadily after reaching a peak of 651,000 in March 2009. But claims need to fall closer to 425,000 to signal sustained job growth, many economists say.

One area that could see job growth is manufacturing, where companies are investing in costly machinery. The increase was driven by a 5.6 percent uptick in orders for machinery. As manufacturers grow confident, they are investing in equipment and repairs that they put off during the recession, analysts said.

Botanical garden has vacant spots

The Oregon Trail Botanical Garden will be putting new vinyl garden signs in the maintained area this year, replacing the old wood ones.

With the spring weather the way it has been, the garden is a bit behind and some spots have been overrun with weeds and grass. Vacant spots are available to anyone interested. They are each marked with an available plaque. Contact Garden Director Valarie Crane at 670-3193 with any questions.

The Oregon Trail Botanical Garden was founded May 5, 1999. It is located on U.S. Highway 30 as you enter Burley, crossing from the Heyburn Bridge. The garden sits near the airport across from the Burley City Golf Course.

Nine compete Saturday for Miss Magic Valley

The 59th annual Miss Magic Valley Scholarship Program will be held at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Twin Falls High School Roper Auditorium.

Heatherly Norman, Miss Canyon Rim 2009, and Courtney Barry, Miss Magic Valley 2009, will say farewell to the community as Miss Canyon Rim 2010 and Miss Magic Valley 2010 are crowned. Contestants will compete in swimwear, evening gown, talent and on-stage question, with the winners progressing to Miss Idaho 2011 for a chance to compete at Miss America.

The contestants include:

Ryan Webster, daughter of John and Kay Webster of Rupert, will attend Idaho State University in the nursing program this fall. Ryan will be singing “On My Own” from “Les Miserables” for her talent and is promoting Relay for Life – “One Day. One Night. One Commitment” – for her platform.

Patricia Blay, daughter of Bruce and Debbie Blay of Twin Falls, is in the third year of the nursing program at the College of Southern Idaho. She will present a monologue for her talent and her platform is “Big Brothers, Big Sisters.”

Kalie Wright, daughter of Brett and Shelly Wright of Kimberly, will be a senior this fall at Kimberly High School. Kalie’s platform is “Music is Instrumental” and she will present a song that she wrote for her talent.

Stone joins Habitat Build-a-Thon

Dylan Stone of Twin Falls has joined more than 500 Habitat for Humanity AmeriCorps National Direct and VISTA members in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to kick off the annual Habitat for Humanity AmeriCorps Build-a-Thon.

During the week of June 11-18, he helped build simple, decent and affordable housing in a region that was flooded in 2008. Build-a-Thon participants built, rehabilitated or repaired more than 20 homes through Habitat’s A Brush with Kindness program.

Each year the AmeriCorps Build-a-Thon helps raise awareness of affordable housing, highlighting the partnership of the Corporation for National and Community Service and Habitat Humanity International, and increase the capacity of a community to meet its local needs.

Is painful biopsy necessary for ex-smoker?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 60-year-old female. After smoking for 40 years, I was finally able to stop. Now I suffer from many illnesses caused by my smoking — emphysema, asthma, COPD and bulla disease.

My white blood count has been high for years, and a year ago I was referred to an oncologist, who promptly performed a bone-marrow biopsy. My count has been in the 15,000 to 17,000 range but never higher than 22,000. The oncologist wants to do another biopsy. He doesn’t say exactly what he is looking for but implies that it might be leukemia.

Dr. Gott, I am trying to be a good patient, but this procedure is very painful, and I don’t want to go through it again if it is uncalled for. My blood count is checked every month. Will I be required to have a yearly bone-marrow biopsy also? Please let me know your opinion on this.

DEAR READER: Sadly, smoking can lead to many respiratory conditions, and the 40-year-long habit has obviously left its mark. Many of today’s lung disorders are caused or worsened by smoking. While a number of disorders affecting the lungs are chronic and incurable, most can be treated. You have taken a positive initial step to improve things, since the habit is now behind you.

ASK DR. GOTT

There are five types of white blood cells — lymphocytes, monocytes, basophils, eosinophils and neutrophils. Your oncologist is determining on a periodic basis how many white blood cells you have. The normal range is between 4,500 and 10,000 per microliter. An abnormally high count known as leukocytosis might indicate such conditions as leukemia, rheumatoid arthritis, tissue damage or infection. An abnormally low count known as leukopenia might indicate bone-marrow failure, a disorder of the liver or spleen, lupus or exposure to radiation.

The bone-marrow biopsy is commonly ordered if a person has an abnormal number of red or white blood cells on lab testing. The results can help a physician zero in on or exclude such conditions as cancer, anemia, leukemia, Hodgkin’s disease and a great number of other possibilities. Because you had the test a year ago, my guess is that your oncologist may not have obtained a clear diagnosis then or wishes to determine any progression. To the best of my knowledge, this test is not performed annually. Because each case is different, that question should be presented to your oncologist or primary-care physician.

While there is discomfort involved during the procedure, it is likely the best means of obtaining vital information necessary for your continued care. Therefore, sadly, I recommend that you undergo the procedure one more time to get to the bottom of the issue. Many patients request conscious sedation, which may alleviate a great deal of the anxiety and pain associated with the procedure.

SOMEBODY NEEDS YOU

Volunteers — Long Term Care Ombudsman Program needs volunteers to visit residents in skilled-nursing and residential care facilities. Volunteers can be advocates for residents and improve elderly care. Information: Mary or Laurene, 736-2122.

Volunteers — Hospice Visions needs volunteers to help make a difference in the lives of caregivers and those experiencing end-of-life issues. Volunteers provide companionship, bring joy during difficult times and ease burdens by writing letters, singing, playing cards and games, reading, working with junior volunteers or being a friend. Information: Flo, 735-0121.

Volunteers — Idaho Home Health and Hospice needs volunteers to help in the office, provide respite care, be companions and assist with the bereavement program in the Twin Falls, Gooding, Wendell, Jerome, Burley, Rupert and Buhl areas. Volunteers also are needed to hold positions on the Friends of Hospice Board of Directors. Information: Nichole, 734-4061, ext. 117, or nichole@idahohomehealth.com.

Drivers — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program needs volunteer drivers, age 55 and older, to take senior citizens to medical appointments and for grocery shopping. Volunteers are needed in Twin Falls and are reimbursed mileage and covered by excess insurance. Information: Edith, 736-4764.

Respite — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program at the Office of Aging needs respite volunteers to sit with elderly homebound clients so their main caregivers can take a break for two to four hours per week. Mileage reimbursement; volunteers are covered by excess insurance. Information: Edith, 736-4764.

Mentors — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program needs volunteers in Jerome and Twin Falls counties to mentor children with a parent in prison. Volunteers must undergo a complete background check and be willing to mentor a child for a minimum of four hours each month for one year. Information: Ken, 736-2122, ext. 2394, or kwhting@ooa.csi.edu.

Donations — The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center is preparing for summer school with about 60 refugee children participating. The center needs volunteers to help with the school program, supplies (picture books, pony plastic beads, origami paper, Hacky Sacks, Rook or face cards, Uno cards, Pictionary and word games) and snacks. Donations also are needed for 20 students’ scholarships of $5 per child for Kids Art in the Park on July 10. Donated items can be taken to the center, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. (closed noon to 1 p.m.), Monday through Friday, at 1526 Highland Ave. E., Twin Falls. Information: Jill, 944-4075, or Michelle, 736-2166.

Volunteers — South Central Community Action Partnership needs a volunteer to pick up donated food items on Monday and Tuesday every week from two stores in Twin Falls for about an hour to an hour and a half each day. These items supplement the emergency food program. Reliable transportation and liability insurance are required to be reimbursed mileage. Information: Leanne or Sandra, 733-9351.

Volunteers — Girl Scouts of Silver Sage Council needs adult mentors to deliver Girl Scout programs in the Magic Valley. Information: 733-9623 or girlscouts-ssc.org.

Mentors/volunteers — The Easter Seals Goodwill GoodGuides program is part of a national mentoring program providing guidance to boys and girls, ages 12 to 17. The program has a variety of volunteer opportunities in the Magic Valley, including mentors, speakers, tutors, activity directors and mentor leaders. Information: Tristan or LeWaynne, 736-2026 or 2469 Wright Ave., Twin Falls.

Volunteers — Guardian Home Care and Hospice needs volunteers in the Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Glens Ferry and Burley areas to assist with patient care: sit with patients, play games and read to patients, or help in the office. Information: Kerri, 736-0900.

Drivers — Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center needs volunteer drivers for the home-delivered meals program for the homebound. Drivers do not have to be seniors to volunteer to drive one or two days a week for an hour to an hour and a half. The center needs people who can be relied on for their appointed routes and who care about the well-being of the elderly. Reimbursed mileage for gas is available. Information: Joanna, 734-5084, or 530 Shoshone St. W., Twin Falls.

Want to help?

This public service column is designed to match needs in the Magic Valley with volunteer help. If you need a volunteer, contact the Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) at 736-4764, before noon Wednesday for Friday publication. RSVP is a United Way-sponsored agency at the College of Southern Idaho.

Alice L. Glauner

RUPERT — Alice L. Glauner, 87, of Rupert, passed away Monday, June 21, 2010, at Rosetta Assisted Living in Burley.

Alice was born May 11, 1923, in Wendell, Idaho, the daughter of Edward and Ida Phillips Hansen. She attended schools in Wendell.

She married Delsman Glauner on May17, 1941, in Wendell. Alice lived most of her life in southern Idaho except for a short period in Bonners Ferry, Idaho, where two of her daughters were born.

They had a cattle ranch in Shoshone, and she also worked at the Manhattan Café and Grosse Drug. She was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and served in many capacities. Alice enjoyed fishing, camping, traveling and visiting her daughter and grandchildren in Mexico.

Alice is survived by her three daughters, Sharon (Larry) Moore of Rupert, Donna (Ron) Sinclar of Heyburn and Darlene (Eduardo) Coutino of Tuxtla Gutierrez, Chapas, Mexico; 16 grandchildren; 22 great-grandchildren; eight great-great-grandchildren; one sister, Helen Nelson of Seattle, Wash.; one sister-in-law, Ana Hansen of Twin Falls; and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her husband, two grandchildren, and six brothers and sisters.

The funeral will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, June 26, at the Rupert LDS 2nd Ward Chapel, 26 S. 100 W. Viewing for family and friends will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, June 25, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, and one hour prior to the service Saturday at the church. A graveside service will be at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at the Hagerman Cemetery in Hagerman.

Olive P. Gray

BOISE — Olive Pearl Gray was born Feb. 6, 1929, in Kangley, Wash., to Roy J. Peak and Louise Wixon Peak. As the oldest of three children, she spent much of her childhood caring for her younger sister and brother as well as working on the family farm in Shoshone, Idaho.

During World War II, Olive and her sister, Elaine, traveled to Sun Valley with the chamber of commerce where they played steel guitar and sang for the soldiers and sailors in the hospital there. The sisters were fondly called “The Sawtooth Sisters.”

She married Johnny Urrutia in 1944. Together they had six children; Larry (Sue), Louisa (Sam Harris), Connie (Frank Stauts), Johnny, Val (Jeff Allen) and Sonja (Marty Humphries). During the course of that marriage, Olive worked on the family ranch, where they raised sheep and later, cattle. Her day often began in the fields driving tractor and ended in the kitchen where she prepared food for the family and hired hands. The hungry homeless who wandered down the railroad tracks knew they would not be turned away from her door. Loaves of homemade bread, quarts of home-canned fruits and dinner leftovers were a feast. When the ranch was sold, Olive and Johnny purchased a country store north of Shoshone, Johnny’s Country Store. They later divorced.

Olive served as deanery president for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Idaho, as well as other positions, when she was a member of St. Peter’s Catholic Church in Shoshone. She led the church choir and was active in maintaining the church, including altar floral arrangements.

In 1970, Olive married Jim Gray and together, they raised Jim’s six children, Jim Jr. (Shelly), Kay (Steve Lippard), Carol, Cindy (Brent Trappen), Mike (Stacy) and Lori (Jim Gardner). She managed restaurants and worked as a head cook while maintaining their busy home in Pocatello, Idaho. Jim’s job with the Union Pacific took them to Omaha, Neb., and then to Stockton, Calif., where they entertained work colleagues and friends. Everyone loved to be at Olive’s home because of the wonderful food prepared to taste great and look beautiful. She was often invited to host company functions because none of the local restaurants could compete with her presentation or preparation of food. Guests at holidays often included homeless people whom Olive had befriended.

Olive and Jim spent time with their family and friends traveling to Hawaii, spending time on the Pacific Coast, playing cards, cooking, golfing, hunting, fishing and camping. Jim remains living in Boise.

After a brief battle with cancer, Olive died Friday, June 18, 2010. The family is thankful for the care given by St. Luke’s Hospice during the last weeks of her life.

In addition to her 12 children, Olive has 40 grandchildren, 35 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

A vigil will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, June 28, and funeral Mass will be celebrated at 6 p.m. Tuesday, June 29, at Our Lady of the Rosary Catholic Church, 1500 E. Wright St. in Boise, Idaho. Services are under the direction of Accent Funeral Home in Meridian. Condolences may be left for the family online at www.accentfuneral.com.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to Catholic Charities of Idaho and the food bank of Sacred Heart Church, 811 S. Latah St., Boise, ID 83705.

A year after public downfall, S. Carolina governor thrives

By Jim Davenport
Associated Press writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The governor who became the butt of late-night jokes for “hiking the Appalachian Trail” may be having the last laugh.

A year after South Carolina’s Mark Sanford tearfully confessed an extra-marital affair, the Republican has won a major state budget victory and seen his hand-chosen candidate nominated to succeed him. He’s even won standing ovations from Republicans who months ago called for his resignation.

“There are any number of different levels of ironies,” Sanford allowed earlier this week at a Republican breakfast to recognize the party’s slate of candidates in November.

Most experts do not foresee Sanford’s political career rising from the wreckage of last year’s scandal, but he’s making the most of his final months in office. Term limits require him to leave in January.

Last spring, Sanford was seen as a possible ultraconservative contender for the Republican presidential nomination in 2012.

South Carolina Gov. Mark Sanford pauses to look at his notes as he admits to having an affair during a news conference on June 24, 2009.

The trim, stubborn former congressman attracted wide interest when he opposed using Obama administration stimulus money in South Carolina. Sanford said it was irresponsible spending the nation could not afford.

His own party fought him on the issue for months. The governor even sued his own attorney general to block the cash from being used in struggling schools.

In the end, Sanford lost, but not before he had burnished his conservative credentials and captured considerable national attention.

Exhausted from the political battle and hiding a failing marriage from the public, Sanford told his staff in mid-June that he was considering going for a solo hike on the trail to clear his head.

Instead, he famously disappeared for five days to see an Argentine woman named Maria Belen Chapur. In an Associated Press interview after his June 24 return, the father of four sons explained how a longtime friendship had blossomed into romance a year earlier.

He called Chapur his “soul mate” but said he would try to save his marriage to Jenny Sanford, the state’s popular first lady.

In subsequent months, Sanford’s political and family lives cratered. AP investigations raised questions about his use of state, private and commercial aircraft. State Republicans called for him to step down midway through his second term.

The Legislature censured him for bringing “ridicule, dishonor, disgrace and shame” to himself and the state. He paid more than $70,000 in ethics fines.

Meanwhile, Jenny Sanford left the governor’s official residence in Columbia with their sons and moved into the family’s coastal home. Their divorce, which he did not oppose when she filed for it in December, was finalized three months later.

In the interim, their lives have remained public.

The governor’s trip to South Florida to vacation with Chapur last month was first revealed on websites. He later explained they were working to rekindle their relationship.

Study: Few Americans meet salt guidelines

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — Most U.S. adults should eat less than a teaspoon of salt each day, but a new government report says just 1 in 18 meet that goal.

“This is not good news,” said Janelle Perezale Gunn of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, lead author of a new study released Thursday.

Health officials currently say no adult should eat more than a teaspoon of salt each day. They go on to advise that 70 percent of adults — including people with high blood pressure, all African-Americans and everyone over 40 — should actually limit their salt intake to a more restrictive two-thirds of a teaspoon.

Sodium increases the risk of high blood pressure, which is major cause of heart disease and stroke. Salt — or sodium chloride — is the main source of sodium for most people.

Overall, only 1 in 10 adults meet the teaspoon standard, said the CDC study. But for those who should be even stingier, only 1 in 18 manage to do it.

The research repeated what others have found, that the vast majority of dietary salt comes from processed and restaurant foods. And it concluded that salt was most commonly found in cold cuts and other meats, and in baked goods and other items counted as grain-based products.

“It’s not a matter of Americans taking a salt shaker and adding salt to their food,” said Linda Van Horn, a Northwestern University medical school professor who chairs the American Heart Association’s Nutrition Committee.

Salt reduction has become a recent focus of public health campaigns. New York City, the heart association and nearly three dozen other groups have been trying to persuade food manufacturers and chain restaurants to reduce salt content by more than 50 percent over the next 10 years. The CDC and federal health agencies also have had sodium-reduction talks with food companies.

The CDC study is based on a national survey of nearly 4,000 adults ages 20 and older in the years 2005 and 2006. They had their blood pressure taken and answered questions about what they ate.

Desperate for child, Indiana woman tries to snatch baby, stabs parents

By Charles Wilson
Associated Press writer

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — Stephanie Foster wanted a baby so badly that when she suffered another miscarriage last fall, she didn’t tell her husband.

Instead, police say Foster, 34, spent months stuffing a pillow inside her clothes to feign pregnancy, forging birth certificates and attending baby showers as she plotted to kidnap a newborn to pass off as her own.

“She didn’t want to tell her husband because he was so elated that they finally were going to have a child,” Vigo County Sheriff Jon Marvel said. When her husband asked to feel the baby move, Foster would jostle a paintbrush she’d slipped inside the pillow, Marvel said.

Police say Foster’s elaborate hoax ended violently Wednesday when she stabbed a couple at their home as their month-old baby slept in the living room. Now, the baby is staying with relatives while his parents recover, and Foster sits in a county jail cell awaiting formal charges.

Foster, who does not yet have an attorney, appeared by video Thursday in Vigo Superior Court, where Judge Michael J. Lewis ordered her held without

Foster

She said little during the hearing as investigators described a woman who spent months planning how to make her fake pregnancy look real.

Her husband, Dwayne Foster, declined to comment Thursday at his home in a close knit rural area where neighbors would only say they’d also believed Stephanie Foster was pregnant.

Detective John Childs testified Foster told police she had forged birth certificates while taking classes at Ivy Tech Community College so she could use them once she had a baby.

As her original delivery date approached, Marvel said, Foster began scouring birth announcements for newborns and targeted Ashley and Michael Speer, whose son was born about a month ago.

Marvel said Foster told police she stopped at the Speers’ home Wednesday “with no intent to hurt the couple at all” and asked to use their phone. Ashley Speer let her in; the baby was sleeping in the living room, and her husband, who works nights, was asleep in a bedroom.

How well we communicate is determined not by how well we say things, but how well we are understood.

Suspected tornado shatters Connecticut's largest city

By John Christoffersen
Associated Press writer

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. — A suspected tornado tore through Connecticut's largest city Thursday, toppling trees and power lines and collapsing several buildings as a powerful line of storms swept across parts of the Northeast. Remarkably, no serious injuries were reported.

Hundreds of bricks shook loose from buildings, trees split in half and crushed cars, and a billboard hung precariously several stories up over Main Street. Nine buildings were partially or fully collapsed, including three on East Main Street that were brought to their foundations. Rescuers searched the rubble to ensure no one had been inside.

Bridgeport Mayor Bill Finch declared a state of emergency after the fast-moving system of driving rain and wind gusts that reached 78 miles per hour in the area.

Jacqueline Arroyo, 44, said she saw a black cloud and ran inside to her third-floor apartment, where the window exploded. Trees were blown so ferociously they appeared to be coming out of the ground, and people were screaming, she said.

"All the wind started coming inside the house. I heard 'boom, boom!'" she said. "It was so fast but terrifying."

A jail was without power, Finch said. The mayor urged residents to stay indoors and remain calm, and Gov. M. Jodi Rell was surveying damage to the city.

Fire Chief Brian Rooney

said 25 people were taken to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The American Red Cross helped relocate 22 people, he said.

Rooney called it a miracle there was no loss of life.

"Anybody that was in the path of that storm would have been in big trouble," he said.

A Catholic high school, a museum dedicated to P.T. Barnum and several other buildings also had roof and window damage. Tree limbs and power lines blocked traffic on some roads in Bridgeport, a former industrial and manufacturing center of about 135,000 residents that has taken steps in recent years to revitalize areas downtown and waterfront properties.

United Illuminating reported nearly 21,100 customers without power after the storms, along with about 3,800 customers of Connecticut Light & Power.

There were unconfirmed sightings of a tornado, Finch said. A tornado warning had been issued for the area, but National Weather Service meteorologist Richard Castro said the agency would have to survey the area to confirm that one had hit.

Edward Beardsley said the noise of the storm hurt his ears and the force of the wind sent him to the other end of his house.

"It was a noise I never heard before. The noise — it killed my ears. My two cats still won't come out from under the bed."

Describing the storm, he said, "Everything was pitch black and going in a circle down the road."

Winds that were part of a powerful storm gusted at 78 mph at Sikorsky Memorial Airport at Stratford and blew over some planes.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said in a statement that he will work with local, state and federal officials to help Bridgeport and area towns obtain assistance, including help from the Federal Emergency Management Agency if necessary.

Hurricane Darby forms off Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Hurricane Darby formed in the Pacific off Mexico's southwest coast Thursday, while Hurricane Celia strengthened farther out at sea.

Neither hurricane posed an immediate threat to land.

Darby, a Category 1 hurricane with winds of 80 mph, was located about 250 miles south-southwest of Puerto Escondido on Thursday afternoon, according to the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

It was expected to strengthen over the next two days as it heads west-northwest, well away from land.

The hurricane center projected the storm could take a sudden eastward turn early next week, putting it on a path toward Mexico's southern Pacific coast.

That prediction is tentative and depends on a tropical wave of pressure forming in the western Caribbean, said John Cangialosi, a hurricane specialist at the center. Otherwise, Darby could continue on its northwestern path out to sea.

"It's a low-confidence forecast at this point," Cangialosi said. "It's not going to have great impact on land over next few days so there is certainly time to watch it."

Dancing off the cuff

Studio brings improv belly dance to Magic Valley

Improvisational Tribal Style belly dance classes

- When: 8 to 9:30 p.m. Thursdays.
- Where: Shimmy Shakti Studio of Yoga and Belly Dance, 124 Main Ave. N., Suite 201, Twin Falls.
- Cost: $50 per month. Six-week introduction course starts July 8. No dance experience necessary, but students can take Belly Dance Bootcamp concurrently.
- Information: Jenna Harder, 308-6329.

At Art in the Park on Saturday, I joined a herd of women with bellies bared and flowers in their hair.

To cheers and ululations, belly dancers from Twin Falls and Boise performed for the gathered crowd. My troupe, Azula, went last and showed off the newest trick in our bag: improv belly dance.

There were just three of us, but the two other Azula members, Jenna Harder and Christina Gonzales, hope that number will rise.

Harder and Gonzales, co-owners of Shimmy Shakti Studio of Yoga and Belly Dance, will offer Improvisational Tribal Style belly dance classes starting in July at their Twin Falls business. The two are the only ITS teachers in Idaho.

Amy Sigil, founder of Sacramento-based belly dance troupe UNMATA, started ITS about 10 years ago. Last year, she invited Gonzales and Harder to UNMATA's Hot Pot Studio for a 10-day crash course on how to teach it.

"It was indescribably exhausting and rewarding," Gonzales said of the training. "I've never danced so hard in my life."

Not many others have Sigil's blessing to teach ITS — two European dancers and April Rose in Los Angeles are the only others Gonzales knew of. That makes the invitation even more exciting for the pair, who cite Sigil as their major dance inspiration.

Here's how it works: ITS dancers learn two sets of choreographed moves — one fast set, one slow — with colorful names like "Washer Woman," "Choo Choo Pass-Through" and "Ghawazee." Unlike fully choreographed dances, the moves can come in any order. The motions are set off by cues, which come immediately before the move and are usually indecipherable from the move itself.

Dancers perform in a stagger, with a leader at the front left. Each person in the stagger watches the leader out of the corner of her eye, looking for the cue that will set off the next move. The leader interprets the music and tries to transition seamlessly from one move to the next, with the stagger following at the same time. When the leader tires of conducting, she triggers a stagger rotation, and the next dancer takes control.

There are rules: Fast moves and slow moves don't cross over. Some moves can't happen without others coming first. Dancers can steal the leadership position in certain situations. It's like a physical chess game. Remember the rules, pay attention, and smile through the sweat.

A reason to drive NORTH for the FOURTH

Wood River Valley's Independence Day goes over the top

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

The Sun Valley area will sizzle this Fourth of July as organizers roll out more events than ever before.

Fourth of July has always been "a really big deal" in Hailey, said Hailey Chamber of Commerce director Heather LaMonica Deckard, a Wood River Valley native who can recall when the Fourth parade rolled past the long-gone train depot on Croy Street. But this year, she acknowledges, everyone has gone over the top.

For starters, there are a half-dozen major concerts sprinkled around the valley from Bellevue to Sun Valley. That means music to fit anyone's tastes from a folk/country tilt at the Big Wood Folk Festival in Bellevue, to patriotic numbers of the American Festival Chorus in Sun Valley, to jazz renderings in Ketchum.

The annual 4th on Fourth concert on July 3 in Ketchum will feature hot young band Jonathan Tyler and the Northern Lights. Fronted by a 24-year-old singer, the group has opened for AC/DC, the Black Crowes, Kid Rock, Deep Purple, Lynyrd Skynyrd and ZZ Top, working crowds into a wild frenzy.

The group is hotter than a Fourth of July firecracker right now, having just made its late-night television debut on "Jimmy Kimmel Live." They also just recorded a new CD with Atlantic Records called "Pardon Me."

"We were fortunate to book them just before their album came out," said Stefany Mahoney, the Sun Valley/Ketchum chamber's visitor services manager. "After their debut on 'Jimmy Kimmel' and their album being a USA Today 'Top Pick,' their price has probably gone up."

Tyler, who taught himself to play the guitar from a Guns' N Roses guitar book, promises to show the Fourth of July audience a good party: "I see my role as being less of a rock star — like 'I'm up here, look at me' — and more like we're all in the same place hanging out together and having a party and the band's just driving the car."

Meanwhile, the Big Wood Folk Festival, now in its fourth year, has decided to see whether Fourth of July weekend is a good fit, said organizer Michael White.

Idaho — include Captain Dano, Spare Change, Bill Coffey, Rick Hoel, The Kim Stocking Band, Up a Creek, Headwaters, Slow Children Playing, No Cheap Horses, The Boulder Brothers and Michael White.

And Tony Furtado, an extremely skilled musician who blends rock music with Americana, folk and pop, will perform July 2 in Ketchum.

Meanwhile, two of America's top skaters — including a 10-year-old prodigy who's been featured on World News Tonight — will perform a few fireworks of their own at Sun Valley's outdoor ice rink.

The Hailey Rodeo grounds will see its last Days of the Old West Rodeo before it's torn down to make way for a new incarnation.

And pedal pushers will sizzle during the Hailey Fourth of July Criterium, which follows the parade on July 4. The mass start and high-speed cornering and sprinting will make the race exciting for participants and spectators alike, said Janelle Connors, spokeswoman for Blaine Country Recreation District. And a new Cruiser Crit, open to all ages and levels of abilities, should attract less daring cyclists.

Dancing

It's regimented and logical, Gonzales said, but that logic gives dancers the freedom and fluidity to express themselves. Sigil worked hard to ensure ITS makes sense, Gonzales said, and genius came through in December as the pair learned the system.

"Every 30 minutes my mind was blown," Gonzales said.

The improv form changed how Harder views the dance to which she has dedicated the last six years of her life.

"What's really cool for ITS for me, as a belly dancer, is I didn't know that that was what I was looking for," she said. "It's fulfilling in a different way."

"It brings a totally different dynamic to belly dance," she added.

ITS doesn't require dance experience, but be prepared to work. Many moves require arms held high in the air, leaving my biceps and shoulders aching by the end of class. Correct form is critical, too. Improper technique causes sore backs and tender feet. I speak from experience — posture is my No. 1 nemesis.

Classes are open to both men and women. At least two Hot Pot ITS dancers are male. Performing isn't required, but it's darn fun.

ITS isn't the only improv belly dance system. American Tribal Style, created by Carolena Nericio of San Francisco's Fat Chance

Belly Dance in 1987, predates ITS and is the most common group improv belly dance style. There are no certified ATS teachers in south-central Idaho, Gonzales said, but Kashmir Dance Studio in Salt Lake City offers ATS classes.

Our inaugural ITS performance took place at Art in the Park last weekend. The first minute went smashingly, and Gonzales rotated the leadership position to me. I ran through one of my favorite moves, a spin set-up. So far, so good.

Then the sound went out. Audience members groaned, then started cheering as we kept dancing in silence for another 30 seconds. When it became clear the music wouldn't return, I busted out a finishing pose and the three of us examined the problem — a weak connection between the speakers and iPod.

There was no going back, so we moved on to the second ITS dance: LMFAO's "Leaving U 4 The Groove." A Shimmy Shakti student held the cord in place the entire time to prevent a second audio blackout. This time, the performance went well. All three of us got a chance to lead, and we finished the song without hitches.

It was the first of what we hope will be many improv performances.

Quilt walk set for downtown Twin Falls

Times-News

The Historic Downtown Twin Falls Quilt Walk will be held from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. July 2 and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. July 3, along Main Avenue. Quilts will be displayed inside and outside of businesses on both days.

The event features about 300 quilts designed and made by area and Idaho quilters, as well as quilters from throughout the U.S. and Canada, according to Cathy Reitz of Stitchin' Time, one of the organizers.

In addition to the displayed quilts, the two-day event includes vendors (including other area quilt shops) and demonstrations.

A special showing of the Hoffman Challenge, a trunk show traveling around the U.S. and sponsored by Hoffman Fabric, will be on display at Stitchin' Time. The traveling collection has 40 quilts entered into the challenge and 37 items of clothing and apparel, organizers said. Stephanie Van Diest of Kimberly was selected by Hoffman Fabric to have her article of clothing in the show. Van Diest's entry is a jacket made with a design of cathedral windows.

In conjunction with the quilt walk, Scrappin' Girlfriends is hosting an art display, "Take a Seat in Twin Falls," featuring different types of chairs. Twelve artists will alternate or decorate the 12 chairs, which will be displayed throughout the downtown area with the quilts.

Information: Reitz at Stitchin' Time, 735-4094; or Lisa or Michele at Scrappin' Girlfriends, 734-8592.

Afro funk soul band kicks off free concert series Tuesday

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Nine weeks of free Tuesday-night concerts will kick off this Tuesday with Rubblebucket, an Afro funk soul group from Boston.

The Ketch'Em Alive concerts will also feature a reggae group from Hawaii, an African group from Mali with dancers to show the audience all the right moves and an encore performance of Maria Muldaur, who brought her "Midnight at the Oasis" to Ketch'Em Alive once before.

"We've got a rocking lineup when you consider how tight sponsorship dollars were this year," said Will Caldwell, who got the free concert series off the ground 11 years ago.

The concerts are held at Ketchum's Forest Service Park in a tree-lined courtyard surrounded by historical white Forest Service buildings. Local groups play from 7 to 7:30 p.m. And the headliner plays until 9. The Roosevelt Grille and Sawtooth Club will offer beverages for sale.

The first group, Rubblebucket, is comprised of seven young fellas from Brooklyn, Boston and Burlington, Vt., who draw their inspiration from the likes of Talking Heads, James Brown and Bjork.

Expect banging horns and bombastic dance beats from Boston's Rubblebucket at a free concert Tuesday in Ketchum.

Their banging horns and bombastic dance beats provide the background for the vocals of leading lady Kalmia.

The other headliners are: July 6: Free Sound with reggae from Hawaii.

July 13: The Heaters playing classic rock all the way from the Wood River Valley.

July 20: Kusun Ensemble, an African group from Mali that comes with its own dancers.

July 27: Orgone, a retro soul dance party from Los Angeles.

Aug. 3: Run for Cover, a new local rock band made up of players from Straight Up and other bands, that specializes in rock covers.

Aug. 10: Maria Muldaur, whose hits include "Midnight at the Oasis."

Aug. 17: 812 Band, a Wood River Valley favorite known for its classic rock. Aug. 24: Matt Lewis Band, a jam band from Salt Lake City.

Week-long camp uses art as lens for nature study

Times-News

Sun Valley Center for the Arts and the Environmental Resource Center are teaming up to present a week-long overnight camp for seventh to ninth graders that combines art, nature and science.

Held at the Central Idaho 4-H Camp 17 miles north of Ketchum, "Eco Camp: Wild Art" is an overnight field ecology and natural history program that uses art as the lens to explore nature, giving teens opportunities for self-expression and discovery. The center will provide daily art workshops in small groups in a variety of mediums. Field instructors will then guide participants in applying those techniques to complement a study of ecology, geology and natural history.

There will be open studio time each day (and campfires every night), and the program will conclude with a gallery show for family and friends.

"ECO Camp: Wild Art" is Aug. 9-13. Camp is open to kids entering grades seven through nine and costs $400. To register or for information about scholarships: ercsv.org or 726-4333.

Read ancestral stories in Australia’s Aboriginal art

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The Picassos of the Outback are coming to Ketchum. An exhibition of 21 Aboriginal paintings from the Outback of Australia will open in Ketchum on July 2. The world premiere of a documentary will accompany it, as will a screening of an award-winning documentary and several talks.

“This exhibit presents the opportunity to view works that you would otherwise have to travel thousands of miles to see,” said Julie Harvey, a curator of Aboriginal art who lives in Hailey.

The exhibit, on view through the rest of July, will feature the work of the Papunya Tula people from the Western Desert. The most renowned of the Aboriginal artists, they drew their work in the sand and on their bodies as part of ceremonies until 1971. That’s when Melbourne school-teacher Geoffrey Bardon encouraged some to paint a mural on a blank school wall using acrylic paint — something they’d never used before.

Their work was ignored at first, even destroyed by white authorities. But now individual pieces are commanding as much as $2.4 million, with sales providing economic support not just to the individual painter but to the entire tribe.

Still, Aboriginal art hasn’t received much exposure in the U.S. Harvey is trying to change that. She staged a critically acclaimed 2009 New York exhibit, “We Are Here Sharing Our Dreaming,” in conjunction with New York University. And now she’s bringing the art to Sun Valley.

“I’ve noticed a lack of understanding about Aboriginal art in this country. For me, the end goal is to have more people see the indigenous art and realize how extraordinary it is,” she said.

Harvey, a native Australian, takes bush treks to the desert each year, traveling more than 800 miles off beaten track to the remote desert communities of Kintore and Kiwirrkura.

There, amidst beautiful rock formations where summertime temperatures hang out at about 120 degrees, the artists live in communities of about a hundred people. They have an art center, but many choose to do their work sitting cross-legged on the ground instead of using an easel.

Professional photographer Paul Exline said he is enchanted by the abstract color palette that reflects the ritual colors of the landscape.

“They’re more than art. They tell ancestral stories, what’s called dreamtime stories,” said Exline, Harvey’s husband. “The art reveals legends, folklore ... it talks about the spirits that inhabit the land.”

The artwork also often serves as maps, describing where water holes and sacred sites were, Harvey said.

She pointed to a painting over her fireplace. Certain elements depict ancient mythological women who traveled the desert collecting plants. Lines indicate traveling, curves depict landscape, and other symbols reflect the land and plants to gather.

“Aboriginal art is very contemporary to look at, but embedded within is their ancestral story. That’s what attracted me to this art in the first place — because it’s so much more than acrylic on canvas,” she said. “Some of the art resembles designs they paint on their body during ceremonial functions. There’s no photorealism at all. Art to them is part of ceremony, not a distinctive thing called art.”

Bellevue artist Marie Stewart, who has emulated

Aboriginal dot painting in some of her own work, says having a rare exhibit like this come to town is a treat.

“I’ve always had to learn about art through books,” she said. “This will be a hands-on cultural experience about something we really don’t know that much about.”

Independence Day weekend in Rupert

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

Rupert will hold its 84th annual Fourth of July celebration Wednesday through July 4, featuring lots of free entertainment on the Rupert Square.

“We’ve got some new fun things this year,” said Roberta Christiansen, one of the organizers. “There’s the 5K/10K fun run, the new family rodeo and some really neat new music.”

Kicking off the event is the High Street Band in concert with Dixieland music at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Rupert Square gazebo.

“This is a 10-member band, and they sing ’50s and ’60s music and Dixieland,” Christiansen said.

Thursday, two groups will perform on the square: Kimberly Roads Band at 6 p.m., and The Fugitives from Declo at 8 p.m. Later in the week, Twin Falls Municipal Band will perform on the square at 8 p.m. July 2, and the popular Patriotic Program will be on the square at 6:30 p.m. July 4.

The Christmas Lighting Breakfast will be on the Rupert Square from 6 to 10 a.m. Wednesday, followed by fireworks in the Park on the square at dusk Wednesday.

Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation will present a melodrama at the Wilson Theatre, Monday through July 3. Show time for “The Vile Veterinarian” or “How Much is that Doggy with the Widow?” is 7:30 p.m. each night, as well as a 2 p.m. matinee July 3.

This year’s parade, themed “Great American Heroes,” will be at 11 a.m. July 3, and Idaho Operation Lifesaver will give free train rides before and after the parade.

A carnival will be in town Wednesday through July 4, opening at 6 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday; 4 p.m. July 2; noon July 3; and 1 p.m. July 4. All rides are $1 on Thursday only. Presale tickets for $10 are available at Showkase Place in Rupert, Tots to Teens, The Book Store, Carmelita’s Design in Rupert, Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce office and the Migrant Council office.

Daredevil racers will again participate in the Firecracker 500 Lawnmower races July 2 at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds. Registration begins at 5 p.m., with the races at 6 p.m. Cost is $5 each, or $15 for a family of four or more. Information on the races: Joe Phillips, 436-1563.

“The lawn mower races are bigger and better this year,” Christiansen said.

Check out the Old Time Family Rodeo at 7 p.m. July 3, sponsored by the Minidoka County Fairboard — great family entertainment competing or watching. It’s got

Patriotic program

The Community Patriotic Program has become a favorite at Rupert’s Fourth of July celebration.

This year’s show will be at 6:30 p.m. July 4 at the gazebo on the Rupert Square. Roberta Christiansen, one of the organizers, promises some new, first-rate entertainment.

“The veterans will present the flag ceremony with melodies and flags from the various service groups. Dean Cameron, Bert Stevenson and Maxine Bell will give a tribute to the veterans,” Christiansen said.

Also expect readings, as well as music by the John Webster family, the Brad Wilson family and the Glade Chandler family.

“And we’re especially lucky to have Rob Newman there to sing for us this year,” Christiansen said.

The show will last from one to 1 1/2 hours and is sure to be uplifting. “It’s strictly patriotic. It’s going to be neat!” Christiansen said.

Can our hero save the town and banish the villain?

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

Once again the Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation and the Historic Wilson Theatre will present a melodrama for your Fourth of July entertainment in Rupert.

Their amateur production of “The Vile Veterinarian, or How Much Is That Doggie with the Widow?” will open Monday at the Wilson Theater in Rupert. Showtime is 7:30 p.m. June 28-30 and July 1-3, as well as a 2 p.m. matinee performance on July 3. Admission is $5.

Jim Jolley Jr. said directing the melodrama has been a lot of fun.

“The setting is the late 1800s in the small mining town of Woof Creek, Idaho, that has ‘dried up.’ Grandma Kay Nein and her granddaughter, Polly Purina, are struggling to keep the family business going,” Jolley said. “They own and operate the local hotel and pet store. Our hero, Hugh Kandoit, is doing all he can to save the town from total failure. Our villain, Dr. Ray Beeze, has stumbled upon a plan that will strip the town of its integrity and its hidden stash of gold.”

“Vile Veterinarian” is Jolley’s directorial debut. He acted throughout high school and recently returned to the stage after a 27-year sabbatical. Since then, he has appeared in two melodramas at the Wilson Theatre. He also performed at The King Fine Arts Center in “Fiddler on the Roof” and “Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat.”

Jolley can’t decide whether he prefers directing or acting.

“Both have their appeals, and both have their drawbacks. I just love the stage. I have really enjoyed directing this production. I have a really good cast who worked hard. They memorized their lines well. Most of them have already been in a production before, so it’s worked out real well. It’s been pretty fun,” Jolley said.

The cast: Judy Graham-Barnes as Poker Face Alice; Mark Merrill as Rufus The Brave; Levi Graham as Hugh Kandoit; John Primrose as Mort Gudge; Olivia Rogers as Polly Purina; Lilly Merrill as Kay Nein; Tarisa Mari Weeks as Barbara Blacksheep; Amy Pearson as Liza; Sabra Chantry as Suzy; Steven Weeks as Cattle Clark; Lyn Brisbin as Kitty Litter; Shane Cochran as Ray Beeze; Emilie Merrill as Ida Gree; Garrett Ryan as Pat T. Gree; Parker Mittelsteadt as Will E. Gree; Chase Barnedt as Don A. Gree; David Chantry as Charlie Horse; and KriSan Hardcastle as April May June.

Helping with stage design, construction, lighting, music and costumes are Lorraine K. Jolley, Rachael Jolley, Dennis Byington, Mary Brisbin, Judy Graham-Barnes and other cast members.

“I have to give credit to my stage crew. They have been great to work with,” Jolley said.

Jolley also likes working at the renovated Wilson Theatre. “I love the Wilson. I want to help out to get it finished so we can do more shows in there,” he said.

New York jazz musician headlines season's first Jazz in the Park

Times-News

The Paul Tillotson Trio will kick off six weeks of free Jazz in the Park concerts Sunday in Ketchum.

Tillotson, a jazz musician from New York, will play from 6 to 8 p.m. at Ketchum's Rotary Park on Warm Springs and Saddle roads.

The jazz series, set on the banks of the Big Wood River, is like a little secret that has grown in popularity each year with people bringing picnics and wine to spread out on blankets underneath towering pine trees.

Hailey resident Dayle Fowler has sponsored the series each summer.

"I love the music. I love the venue. It's just so relaxing sitting there on a blanket and soaking it all in," she said.

Paul Tillotson, left, will bring his trio to Ketchum for a free outdoor concert Sunday.

The concert series goes through Aug. 1. It won't even try to compete against the free Sun Valley Summer Symphony concerts, which start at that time, said organizer Will Caldwell.

Here's the rest of the line-up:

July 4: Pianist Alan Pennay with vocalist Cheryl Morrell.

July 11: The Sun Valley Latin Jazz Ensemble featuring Russ Caldwell on drums.

July 18: Kevin Kirk's Onomatopoeia, a Boise jazz ensemble headed up by Kirk.

July 25: John Northrop's Jazz Rangers.

Aug. 1: Idaho Falls Jazz House Band.

The last band features 17 musicians who paid their own way last year because they wanted to play Sun Valley. They became an instant hit, Caldwell said.

Love a lunar eclipse? Get to bed early tonight

Times-News

The Centennial Observatory at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science will open at 4 a.m. Saturday to allow free telescope viewing of the partial lunar eclipse that will be visible to southern Idaho that morning.

This eclipse will cover more than half the moon as it hovers close to the western horizon before sunrise, said Chris Anderson, observatory coordinator. Anderson said the optimal portion of the eclipse will occur between 5:30 and 6 a.m. when the sun rises and the full moon sets. Visitors are welcome to come to the observatory at any time during the event at no charge.

Anderson said there are generally two lunar eclipse seasons each year, though most of them pass virtually without notice. The next total lunar eclipse, he said, will be the evening of Dec. 20.

Trees inspire Hailey's indoor-outdoor art exhibit

Times-News

A new indoor exhibition features work by Idaho artists on the subject of trees, and the Sun Valley Center for the Arts will hold an opening celebration for "Timber!" at its Hailey location from 5:30 to 7 p.m. Thursday.

Also on that historical Hailey property — the birthplace of poet Ezra Pound — two regional artists have created temporary outdoor installations using live trees.

Jill Fitterer, printmaking professor at Boise State University, was drawn to a conifer on the site's southwest corner. She plans to suspend 12 handmade books — one for each week of her installation — that will contain some of her own writing and artwork but also have blank pages for visitors to write in.

"The 'Dream Tree' installation invites Hailey residents and visitors to participate in a collective dream journal," Fitterer said in a press release. "The tree will harbor and protect the books while providing shelter and inspiration to the writers who sit underneath its branches." Fitterer may also mount small etchings in the tree's knotholes.

Nickolus Meisel's installation uses the property's magnificent old apple tree. For "Pound Wish Prescription," Meisel, an assistant professor at Washington State University in Pullman, plans to inscribe Pound's poem "A Girl" on steel plates that will be set in a circle around the base of the tree and to tie "wishing strings" weighted with bells to the tree's branches so visitors can add their wishes.

Work in the indoor exhibition ranges from photography and painting to small sculptures and textiles. The exhibition was open to Idaho residents and limited to the first 45 artworks submitted.

"Timber!" will be on display through Sept. 10.

Gallery hours in Hailey are noon to 5 p.m. Wednesday-Friday. The Center in Hailey is on the corner of South Second Avenue and Pine Street.

A related exhibition, "Beam, Board, Breath: An Investigation of Trees," opens at the center's Ketchum facility on July 9, together with an installation by Patrick Dougherty on the site of the center's future home in Ketchum across from the post office.

The 2010 Idaho Regatta begins today at the Burley Golf Course Marina.

RIVER RAPIDS

2010 Idaho Regatta begins today in Burley

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The race for the coveted Moyle Mink and Faulkner Memorial Trophy begins today on the Snake River’s 1.25-mile tri-oval course.

The best boat racers in the world, along with thousands of fans, will converge on Burley this weekend for the 35th Annual Idaho Regatta.

Sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association, the Idaho Regatta is one of the favorite events for racers and fans alike. Visitors come from across the country for three days of arguably the fastest inboard circle boat racing in the nation. The nine classes include teams from Arizona, Florida, Maryland, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Colorado and California.

“We’re expecting a lot of boats. All the class reps I talked to say that we’re going to have full classes,” said Mark Moyle, Idaho Regatta committee chairman.

Today from 8 to 10 a.m., the boats will be on display at the Smith’s parking lot at 937 East Main Street. The public can meet the drivers and kids can collect candy and autographs.

Testing and tuning on the water begins at noon today, and preliminary heats go at 5 p.m.

Saturday and Sunday heat racing starts at noon each day and will include the Budweiser K-Boats, Smith’s Food and Drug Super Stocks, D.L. Evans Bank Grand Nationals, Idaho Equipment & Sheet Metal Cracker Boxes, Fairfield Inn Pro Stocks, U.S. Geothermal Competition Jets, First Federal Bank Nostalgia Flatbottom, BJ’s Tavern 2.5-Liter Hydros and the Barclay Crane Service 1-Liter Hydros.

In the past, due to insurance restraints, the public could not wear open-toed shoes in the pits. But starting this year, the public can now wear open-toed shoes, such as sandals and flip-flops, in the pit area. However, open-toed shoes are still not allowed in the ramp area.

Also, for the first time in several years, the event is without a corporate title sponsor. According to Moyle, that’s not a problem.

“We’re fine on money and we’re going to have a great event,” Moyle said. “We (the Idaho Regatta committee) were lucky enough to be in a position that we could step up and make up the difference ourselves on the prize money.”

Tickets for the Saturday and Sunday races are $25 at the gate. Kids 12 and under are free with a paying adult.

“We have worked hard to make this a family-friendly event,” Moyle said.

2010 NBA DRAFT

Wall leads Kentucky parade

Five Wildcats taken in draft’s first round

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — John Wall is heading to Washington, and a record number of Kentucky teammates are following him to the NBA.

Wall went to the Wizards with the No. 1 pick in the NBA draft Thursday and four more Wildcats were among the top 30 selections, making them the first school ever to put five players in the first round.

After falling short of the Final Four even with all that talent around him, Wall is ready to help Washington bounce back from a season that was embarrassing on the court and in the locker room.

“I feel like I had pressure since I became No. 1 in high school and was one of the top players,” Wall said. “I always got there hungry wanting to fight hard and compete in every game, so when I step on the court I’m going to take on any challenge there.”

The SEC player of the year is the first Kentucky player chosen first overall. He goes to a team still reeling from Gilbert Arenas’ season-ending suspension for bringing guns into the team locker room.

Wall could replace Arenas as the Wizards’ point guard, or perhaps play alongside him in a potential high-scoring backcourt. He’ll try to become the third straight freshman point guard to win Rookie of the Year honors after Chicago’s Derrick Rose and Sacramento’s Tyreke Evans — who like Wall also played for John Calipari.

The pick came shortly after a person familiar with the deal told The Associated Press that the Chicago Bulls had agreed to trade veteran guard Kirk Hinrich and the 17th pick in the draft, Kevin Seraphin, to the Wizards. Hinrich is a solid veteran defensive guard who could help with Wall’s transition to the NBA.

After his name was announced to begin the draft, Wall hugged family members and donned a blue Wizards cap before climbing onto the stage to shake commissioner David Stern’s hand.

Former CSI center Parakhouski not selected in draft

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Former College of Southern Idaho center Art Parakhouski was not among the 60 players selected in the 2010 NBA Draft Thursday night in New York City.

The 6-11, 268-pounder from Minsk, Belarus, had been projected as a second-round selection, but never heard his name called in the 4 1/2 hour affair.

“We all knew that this was a possibility when you’re projected for the middle or late second round,” said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. “... It was a tough night for him.”

Parakhouski didn’t begin playing basketball until age 16, but made incredible strides in the past six years. He played at CSI from 2006 to 2008 and averaged 14.0 points, 8.1 rebounds and 1.4 blocks as a sophomore with the Golden Eagles.

He averaged a double-double at Radford University in Virginia, putting up 21.4 points, 13.4 boards and 2.1 blocks as a senior. He earned national attention in the 2008-09 season when he led Radford to the NCAA Tournament.

He had big nonconference performances this past season against both Duke and Kansas, adding to the expectation he’d be selected in the NBA Draft.

Parakhouski worked out for nine NBA teams before the draft. He will likely get picked up as a free agent and fill a spot on a team’s summer league squad.

Parakhouski did not return a message left on his cell phone by the Times-News Thursday night, but Gosar did speak with him by phone.

“I just told him, ‘You’ve got to keep everything in perspective. You’re going to be on some team’s summer league team and you’ve got to go and make something happen.’”

WIMBLEDON 70-68 in 5th! Isner wins epic match

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

WIMBLEDON, England — When The Match That Would Not End finally did, at 70-68 in the fifth set, after a record 11 hours, 5 minutes spread over three days, the customary handshake between opponents simply would not suffice.

So when John Isner of the United States won the longest match in tennis history and went to the net to greet Nicolas Mahut of France, who — for lack of a better word — lost Thursday at Wimbledon, Isner pulled Mahut in for a hug.

“You know,” Isner told the crowd moments later, “it stinks someone had to lose.” Quite true.

There were 980 points overall, and Mahut won more, 502-478. There were 711 points in the fifth set, and Mahut won more, 365-346.

But Isner (IHZ-ner) won the most important point of all: the last one, which happened to be a rather nondescript backhand winner down the line. It allowed Isner to break Mahut’s serve for only the second time all match. That also was the only service break of the

Nadal wins in Round 2

By Steven Wine
Associated Press writer

WIMBLEDON, England — The King of Clay passed up a chance to meet the Queen of England.

Rafael Nadal had another priority — winning at Wimbledon.

Queen Elizabeth II visited the All England Club for the first time since 1977 and met a small group of current and former players, including Roger Federer and the Williams sisters. Nadal was invited, but his practice schedule conflicted, and he wanted to be in top form for his second-round match later Thursday.

Hours after the queen departed, Nadal took Centre Court and beat Robin Haase 5-7, 6-2, 3-6, 6-0, 6-3. British tabloids may take the five-time French Open champion to task, but he defended his decision to put practice ahead of royalty.

“I am playing in Wimbledon. It’s not a joke. I love this tournament,” Nadal said. “I have a lot of respect for the queen. I have a lot of respect for this tournament. Today is a match day for me, no? So I have my things to do.”

Thomas' single gives Gamecocks win in 12th

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Brady Thomas singled in the winning run in the 12th inning and South Carolina eliminated Oklahoma from the College World Series with a 3-2 victory Thursday night.

The Gamecocks (50-16) were down to their last strike against closer Ryan Duke when Jackie Bradley's full-count base hit past first baseman Cameron Seitzer brought in Robert Beary from second to tie it.

Duke walked Jeffery Jones before Thomas drove his first pitch into center field, scoring Bradley from second and touching off a celebration in the middle of the infield.

Oklahoma (50-18) took a 2-1 lead in the top of the 12th on Tyler Ogle's homer off Ethan Carter.

Tyler Webb (3-2), the Gamecocks' sixth pitcher, got the win after relieving Carter. Duke (3-2) took the loss.

South Carolina will play in-state rival Clemson in the Bracket 2 final Friday night. The Gamecocks have to beat Clemson twice to reach the best-of-three championship round.

Caleb Bushyhead's RBI single in the second put OU up 1-0, and Sooners starter Zach Neal pitched seven shutout innings before South Carolina broke through to tie it in the eighth.

Ogle's blast in the 12th, which barely cleared the wall in right center, came after the Sooners were held scoreless for nine straight innings. Carter came on in the 12th for South Carolina after Matt Price struck out five in three scoreless innings. Ogle sent out Carter's second pitch, just beyond the reach of Bradley in center field.

Bradley, batting a team-leading .380 with homers, including two in Omaha, was 0 for 5 when he came up in the 12th. He was down to his last strike when he hit a hard shot into right field. He raised his right arm and pumped his fist while running to first, then pounded his chest three times after rounding the base.

Thomas also was 0 for 5 when he came up. He had struck out twice and fouled out on a bad bunt try in his previous at-bat, but he drilled Duke's first offering into center field, where Chris Ellison bobbled the ball and didn't even try to throw home.

Cubs edge past Mariners in extras

SEATTLE — Marlon Byrd hit an opposite field RBI single with one out in the 13th inning, and the Chicago Cubs avoided a sweep in Seattle with a 3-2 win over the Mariners Thursday.

Pinch-hitter Alfonso Soriano led off the 13th with a walk against reliever Garrett Olson (0-2). Kosuke Fukudome sacrificed Soriano to second and, after Ryan Theriot walked, Byrd lined a 1-2 pitch from Sean White into right field. Soriano was waved around third and beat Ichiro Suzuki's throw to the plate.

John Grabow (1-3) pitched two innings of relief for the win. He gave up one hit in his first victory since May 24, 2009, for Pittsburgh.

Tom Gorzelanny got one out 13th inning for his first career save.

BREWERS 5, TWINS 0

MILWAUKEE — Yovani Gallardo did not allow a baserunner until Drew Butera singled with one out in the sixth inning, and Milwaukee went on to complete a sweep of Minnesota.

Prince Fielder and Rickie Weeks homered as the suddenly resurgent Brewers chased struggling Twins starter Nick Blackburn (6-5) from the game in the fourth inning. Gallardo (7-3) tied a career high with 12 strikeouts and gave up only five hits as he recorded his second career shutout.

RAYS 5, PADRES 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Matt Garza pitched eight effective innings and Kelly Shoppach came within a triple of hitting for the cycle for Tampa Bay.

Garza (8-5) gave up three runs and six hits to rebound from a loss last Friday to Florida in which the right-hander allowed seven runs in 11-3 innings.

WHITE SOX 2, BRAVES 0

CHICAGO — Paul Konerko homered with two outs in the eighth inning, lifting the White Sox to their ninth straight victory.

Gavin Floyd, J.J. Putz (3-2) and Bobby Jenks combined on a two-hitter for the White Sox, who have their longest winning streak since 2006 and have won 13 of their last 14 games.

PHILLIES 12, INDIANS 3

PHILADELPHIA — Joe Blanton pitched effectively into the eighth inning and the Phillies roughed up Fausto Carmona to complete a three-game sweep.

Placido Polanco had four hits, Chase Utley and Jayson Werth each had three hits and catcher Dane Sardinha connected for his first career home run for the Phillies.

TIGERS 6, METS 5

NEW YORK — Armando Galarraga won for the first time since his near-perfect game, Phil Coke struck out David Wright in a key spot and the Detroit held off the Mets.

Magglio Ordonez and Ryan Raburn homered as the Tigers built a 6-1 lead through five innings and managed to avert a sweep.

ORIOLES 11, MARLINS 5

BALTIMORE — Miguel Tejada had a season-high four hits, ended a long home run drought and drove in four runs to lead the Orioles.

Tejada singled in a run and scored in the third inning, singled in the fourth, singled and scored in the sixth and hit a three-run homer in the seventh. The drive ended a career-long streak of 205

Predicted to finish in the top half of the Eastern Conference last season, the Wizards' season quickly spiraled out of control, reaching its low point on New Year's Day when news broke of the altercation involving guns between Arenas and fellow guard Javaris Crittenton, who also was suspended for the year. Washington eventually traded fellow stars Antawn Jamison and Caron Butler in a dismal 26-56 finish.

Arenas is eligible to return, but Wall is ready to take charge of the team.

"I was always a leader by example being the first in the gym and the last in the gym," Wall said. "But I'm a leader that doesn't mind speaking up to the older guys."

Kentucky landed a second top-five pick when DeMarcus Cousins was taken by Sacramento at No. 5, then put two more players in the top 18 when the Houston Rockets chose Patrick Patterson at No. 14 and Oklahoma City took guard Eric Bledsoe four spots later. Daniel Orton then went to Orlando with the 29th pick, breaking the previous record of four first-round picks from one school.

"It's a big day and they are all behind us right now and they won't stop texting and tweeting and calling me, so this will be a big day," Cousins said.

The Philadelphia 76ers took national player of the year Evan Turner from Ohio State at No. 2. The notoriously tough Philadelphia fans at Madison Square Garden liked the choice, loudly cheering and chanting "Evan Turner! Evan Turner!"

"I don't have any pressure. I have a lot of demands of myself," Turner said. "If Philly expects me to be great, then we have a mutual understanding."

Derrick Favors became the second freshman taken in the first three picks when the New Jersey Nets chose the Georgia Tech forward.

Butler forward Gordon Hayward addresses the media after being as picked by the Utah Jazz in the NBA Draft in New York Thursday.

idea I was going to the Nets, and when they called me I was just excited," Favors said.

The Minnesota Timberwolves then grabbed Syracuse forward Wesley Johnson, whom the Nets also had considered. Stern seemed impressed by the Christmas-colored slacks worn by Johnson, who held up his leg to show them off.

Baylor's Ekpe Udoh also is headed to Northern California, chosen by Golden State at No. 6. Detroit kept up the run of big men by selecting Georgetown center Greg Monroe with the seventh pick, before the Los Angeles Clippers went for Wake Forest's Al-Farouq Aminu.

Butler's Gordon Hayward went ninth to Utah, one spot before the Indiana Pacers would've faced pressure to pick the hometown star. Instead, they chose Fresno State forward Paul George before Kansas teammates Cole Aldrich (New Orleans) and Xavier Henry (Memphis) went with back-to-back picks.

Aldrich's rights were later sent to Oklahoma City along with veteran swingman Morris Peterson for the rights to the Thunder's Nos. 21 and 26 picks, which became Iowa State forward Craig Brackins and Washington guard Quincy Pondexter.

The draft hadn't even started and already the buzz was on free agency,

JAZZ DEFEND PICKING HAYWARD AT NO. 9

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Jazz made their highest draft pick in years, then immediately had to defend it.

Utah's selection of Butler sophomore Gordon Hayward with the ninth overall pick Thursday was greeted with more boos than cheers at EnergySolutions Arena, where the lanky forward helped lead the Bulldogs' run to the Final Four just a few months ago.

"The only thing I hope is that in two years you're not booing," Utah general manager Kevin O'Connor responded to the boos for the Jazz's lottery pick choice. Hayward was in New York attending the draft Thursday night, but was aware of the negative reaction before a quick conference call with Utah reporters.

"Hopefully I can do some things on the court and turn those around," Hayward said.

Utah fans were wary of using a rare top-10 pick on a 6-foot-8 forward who weighs in at all of 207 pounds. Jazz fans were also skeptical of point guard Deron Williams when Utah took him third overall five years ago, so O'Connor wasn't too bothered with the negative response.

"They told me they booed John Stockton, too, so let's hope history repeats itself," O'Connor said.

which opens in exactly a week with LeBron James leading perhaps the deepest class ever. There were even a few chants for the league's MVP, whom the Knicks are expected to make a run at.

Moves were made with July 1 in mind, such as the Bulls' deal with Washington that opened additional salary cap space for perhaps a second top player. Toronto drafted North Carolina's Ed Davis at No. 13, a potential replacement if the Raptors lose Chris Bosh in free agency.

Cristie Kerr tees off on the No. 8 hole during the first round of the 2010 LPGA Championship golf tournament at Locust Hill Country Club in Pittsford, N.Y. on Thursday. Kerr is tied for the lead after posting a 4-under 68.

Kerr in 3-way tie for lead at LPGA Championship

PITTSFORD, N.Y. — Already the top American in the world rankings, Cristie Kerr is aiming a little higher after taking a share of the lead after the first round of the LPGA Championship on Thursday.

Relying on her clutch putting, and untroubled by a heavy downpour that briefly stopped play early in the afternoon, Kerr shot a 4-under 68 to match Stacy Lewis and Seon Hwa Lee on the Locust Hill Country Club course outside of Rochester.

It's still anybody's event as the tough conditions — including a persistent and gusting wind — created a logjam behind the leaders in the LPGA Tour's second major of the season. Inbee Park, Mika Miyazato and Lindsey Wright were a stroke back.

And score one for Juli Inkster. The 31-time LPGA tour winner celebrated turning 50 with a 71. She was tied for 11th and 19 players were within three shots of the lead.

Paula Creamer, competing in only her second tournament since having surgery to repair ligament damage in her left thumb, was among those at 1 under. Creamer struggled with her putting, and played with her left thumb wrapped.

Kerr has plenty of incentive to win this weekend. Though she has 13 career victories, she's only won one major — the 2007 U.S. Women's Open.

Then there's the objective to climb into the race for top spot in the world rankings. She opened the week ranked fifth and with a victory has a chance to move firmly into contention after Ai Miyazato supplanted Jiyai Shin for the top spot last weekend.

ROSE BIRDIES 5 OF LAST 6 HOLES AT TRAVELERS

CROMWELL, Conn. — Justin Rose birdied five of his final six holes for a 6-under 64 and a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the Travelers Championship.

Rose, the Memorial winner three weeks ago who failed to qualify for the U.S. Open last week at Pebble Beach, missed a 12-foot birdie putt on 18, leaving him tied with morning starters Padraig Harrington, Charlie Wi and Mathew Goggin.

Rose was 1 under through 12 holes, before making his run, which included a 34-foot birdie putt on 17.

"I was more than happy to walk off there with a par," he said. "But sometimes when things are going your way, you roll in a 30-footer and suddenly, I was like, 'Things are going right now.'"

Harrington and Rose are trying to run Europe's tour winning streak to four.

"As I've been saying for quite a while, European golf is very strong and there's a lot of good young players finding their way in the game, learning how to win, given the opportunity," Harrington said. "You've seen three in the last three weeks and a few others during the year"

Northern Ireland's Graeme McDowell won the big prize last week at the U.S. Open. The Memorial was Rose's first tour win, and fellow Englishman Lee Westwood won before that at the St. Jude Classic.

Harrington, Goggin and Wi all capitalized on perfect morning conditions, finishing well before high wind and heavy rain hit the area in the afternoon, forcing a 90-minute delay.

Panthers' Smith regrets YMCA flag football injury

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An apologetic but defiant Steve Smith expressed regret Thursday for breaking his left forearm playing flag football, while also taking shots at critics who questioned the Carolina Panthers receiver's judgment.

Smith called into Charlotte radio station WFNZ-AM, acknowledging he had been a regular participant in an adult flag football league at a Charlotte YMCA. He was injured Sunday when he slipped and used his left arm to brace his fall. Smith broke the same arm, but in a different spot, at the end of last season.

"Obviously, I put my team and myself in a bad situation by playing," Smith said. "But that wasn't my intention and wasn't what I thought the outcome was going to be."

Playing football out of the team setting and participating in risky activities are usually banned in most NFL contracts. The Panthers aren't expected to take serious action against Smith, who will miss much of training camp but is expected to be ready for the regular-season opener Sept. 12 at the New York Giants.

"I wish I could take it back," Smith said. "But I am a regular guy outside of football. I mow my grass, too. I can get my finger chopped off fixing my lawnmower. I could roll my ankle playing tag or slip-n-slide with my kids. In hindsight, yeah, I won't do it again. But I was just having fun, playing with some guys"

Smith, who said he played quarterback and defensive back in the league, was quick to bring up the subject many wanted answered: Why would a four-time Pro Bowl selection due $5.75 million this season play in a flag football league full of weekend warriors?

"If you get out of your little shallow box, you would understand it's more than just money for me in this game," Smith said. "This is what I grew up playing, and it was my offseason. Until freaking Father's Day, nothing had happened."

The fiery Smith, who has been suspended twice in his NFL career for punching teammates, led the league in catches, yards receiving and touchdown catches in 2005. Despite Carolina's quarterback problems last season, Smith had 65 catches for 982 yards and seven touchdowns before he was injured in Week 16.

Unburdened at last, Donovan seizes day

IRENE, South Africa (AP) — The words came haltingly, then not at all, as Landon Donovan tried to explain how much the goal meant to him.

He's the greatest player the United States has ever produced and, at times, its greatest disappointment. He's spent the last four years trying to claw his way back from heartbreaks both personal and professional. And for all the introspection and work he's done, he and the Americans were on the verge of yet another World Cup flame-out.

So yeah, he celebrated like a 6-year-old on a sugar rush when he scored the goal that will be remembered as one of the biggest in U.S. soccer history. And when it finally all sank in, no way he could — or would — stop the tears.

"In the past, a moment like that wouldn't have felt the same, it wouldn't have felt as good," Donovan said Thursday. "When you put yourself on the line, and you risk things that you weren't willing to risk before and then you're rewarded for it, it feels incredible."

Donovan's evolution is fascinating, on the field and off.

He is the rare star athlete who will give not only a glimpse into his deepest emotions, but a front-row seat. He talks candidly about his struggles on the field and his uncomfortable transition to U.S. soccer's poster boy, and freely admits therapy has helped him work through personal failings laid bare by his crumbling marriage.

He is, finally, a man at peace. But he also knows he can't be whole without success on the soccer field.

On Saturday, the Americans play Ghana — the team that knocked them out four years ago — with a chance to make at least the quarterfinals for only the third time in history.

"It's not a failure if we don't win Saturday, but there's such a massive opportunity to do something so much more special," Donovan said. "And I really want to emphasize that to everybody, and make sure we understand that."

For as much as the Americans like to talk about team and doing something special together, everyone knows they will only go as far as Donovan leads them.

Playing with the unbridled joy and confidence only a 20-year-old can have, he scored twice at the 2002 World Cup as the Americans made a stunning run to the quarterfinals, and was selected as best young player of the tournament. Burdened by the expectations and the hype four years later, he all but disappeared as the Americans stumbled out of Germany without a victory. Just about everyone deserved a piece of the blame, but Donovan took the majority of criticism.

"That was not a good day. For me or for the team," Donovan said when asked about the Ghana game in 2006. "What I remember most personally was my tentativeness and the immediate feeling afterward of the finality of it, and how disappointing that was."

Dethroned: Italy crashes out in group stage

JOHANNESBURG — Defending champion Italy was eliminated Thursday from the World Cup with a humbling 3-2 loss to Slovakia, which advanced.

Slovakia finished second in Group F to Paraguay. The Italians were last, the first time they've ever finished at the bottom of an opening-round group.

For the third consecutive game, the Azzurri allowed an early goal and this time they never recovered.

Robert Vittek put Slovakia ahead in the 25th minute, taking advantage of an errant pass from midfielder Daniele De Rossi. Vittek doubled the lead from close range in the 73rd following a corner kick.

Antonio Di Natale scored for Italy in the 81st, but Kamil Kopunek ended Italy's chances eight minutes later, even though Fabio Quagliarella scored in injury time for the four-time champions.

It marked the end of an era for Italy captain Fabio Cannavaro and Gennaro Gattuso, who already announced their retirement from the national team after the tournament. Coach Marcello Lippi is also moving on, with Cesare Prandelli already chosen as his successor.

Never have the previous World Cup finalists both failed to advance in the next tournament when both qualified. France, which lost to Italy on penalty kicks for the 2006 title, went out earlier this week in Group A.

POLOKWANE, South Africa — Paraguay was held to an uneventful draw but still won its World Cup group and moved into the round of 16.

United States midfielder Landon Donovan, left, celebrates with his teammate Edson Buddle after scoring the winning goal in injury time of a World Cup Group C match against Algeria at Loftus Versfeld Stadium in Pretoria, South Africa Wednesday.

His two unsuccessful stints in Germany only fueled the negativity. Signed by Bayer Leverkusen at 16, he never got in a game in two years and was shipped to the San Jose Earthquakes of Major League Soccer in 2001. He went back to Leverkusen in January 2005 and made nine appearances, but lasted only two months before running back to MLS.

Long MLS' undisputed star, he was forced to give up part of his spotlight when David Beckham joined him at the Los Angeles Galaxy. It was an uneasy partnership, and Donovan ripped the England midfielder's leadership and effort in "The Beckham Experiment," the highly critical book chronicling Beckham's first two seasons in America. Donovan eventually apologized for airing his thoughts in public, and the two have since repaired their relationship.

Put it all together, however, and Donovan seemed like just another spoiled athlete who'd failed to live up to his promise.

"He got criticized quite heavily after the last World Cup, and he's worked hard and pushed himself to get to this level," Carlos Bocanegra said. "It's nice for him to get the winner for us. It kind of shows his work has paid off, his mentality has changed."

Donovan gives much of the credit for his growth to his estranged wife, Bianca Kajlich. Kajlich is an actress, and seeing her have to battle for even the smallest roles made him realize he was squandering his talent.

What he had was a gift, not a burden.

Though Kajlich and Donovan broke up last July, the split was a turning point. The two are still on friendly terms — Donovan blew a kiss into the TV camera for her during his postgame interview Wednesday night — but he realized it was time to take a long, hard look at himself.

NETHERLANDS 2, CAMEROON 1

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — The Netherlands produced its first goals of flair and finesse to beat Cameroon and set up a second-round match with Slovakia.

Robin Van Persie finished off an end-to-end move in the 36th minute, and substitute Arjen Robben sent a shot against the post in the 83rd that Klaas Jan Huntelaar only had to slide in for the winner.

In between, Samuel Eto'o scored on penalty kick for Cameroon.

The Dutch won Group E with three victories. Cameroon lost all three of its matches.

JAPAN 3, DENMARK 1

RUSTENBERG, South Africa — Spectacular first-half goals by Keisuke Honda and Yusuhito Endo helped lift Japan, sending the Japanese into the round of 16 at the World Cup.

The Danes, who replied in the 81st when Jon Dahl Tomasson tapped in the rebound from his own penalty kick, failed to advance from the group stage for the first time in four World Cup appearances.

Shinji Okazaki scored an insurance goal in the 87th minute for the Japanese.

Nadal said he thought the queen might attend his match and he could meet her afterward, but he played late in the day, and she stayed only long enough to watch Briton's Andy Murray win.

The queen missed seeing Nadal at his most ferocious in the final two sets. He ripped a point-blank backhand that nearly knocked the racket from Haase's hand. He almost drilled a linesman in the face with an overhead winner. And in the final set he served like John Isner, winning all 20 of his service points.

"I'm very happy to win in five sets," Nadal said. "Everybody prefers to win in three, but it's not possible a lot of times, especially on this surface, because all depends on a few points."

Not always. Top-ranked Serena Williams drubbed Anna Chakvetadze 6-0, 6-1. Maria Sharapova, Caroline Wozniacki and Robin Soderling also won easily.

Before her victory, Williams greeted the queen with a curtsy she practiced for days.

"My bow didn't go the way I wanted," Williams said. "I didn't get my wrist action that I thought I would have, and then I got nervous. ... I definitely handle pressure way better on the court than off"

All 10 men playing second-round matches advanced. Three seeded women lost: No. 18 Aravane Rezaï, No. 19 Svetlana Kuznetsova and No. 23 Zheng Jie.

Those results — and even the queen's visit — were overshadowed by the completion of the longest match in tennis history. Isner hit 112 aces to beat Nicolas Mahut in a marathon that took more than 11 hours to complete over three days.

The score that broke the Court 18 scoreboard at one point: 6-4, 3-6, 6-7 (7), 7-6 (3), 70-68.

"Amazing match," Nadal said. "They make history, I think."

The top-ranked Nadal is trying to do the same playing at Wimbledon for the first time since winning the 2008 title. He missed last year's tournament because of knee tendinitis but may be poised for a strong run after another undefeated clay-court season, capped by his latest Roland Garros title.

Haase, a big-serving Dutchman who has been plagued by knee injuries, has fans buzzing about the possibility of an upset. He hit four aces in one game and led after winning two tight sets.

"I was playing well all the time," Nadal said. "I played probably four bad points in two sets, and I lose both sets."

So the Spaniard stepped things up, pounded his groundstrokes into the corners and scampering all over the court. When he hit a lunging lob to break for a 3-1 lead in the final set, he celebrated with a running, spinning leap as he threw his fist — a knockout punch of sorts.

"Mentally I think I was perfect in the fourth and in the fifth sets," Nadal said.

The day began with royal ritual, and the queen watched from the front row as Murray defeated Jarkko Nieminen of Finland, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2. Murray, seeded fourth, is trying to become the first British player to win Wimbledon since the queen watched Virginia Wade win the women's final 33 years ago.

Shortly after the queen took her seat, Murray and Nieminen walked onto the court. They turned toward her and simultaneously bowed as the crowd roared. When Murray closed out the win, the queen joined the applause.

seemingly interminable fifth set, ending a run of 168 consecutive holds that began in the second set, all the way back on Tuesday.

Essentially, the match lasted as long as it did for two reasons: Neither man could break the other's serve, and Wimbledon does not employ a tiebreaker in the fifth set.

"Especially once the match got past, you know, 25-all, I wasn't really thinking," said Isner, who led the University of Georgia to the 2007 NCAA team tennis championship. "Hitting a serve and trying to hit a forehand winner is the only thing I was doing."

When it did conclude, Isner dropped down to the court, rolled on his back, and kicked his legs in the air. After the players briefly spoke, Mahut sat in his changeover chair, stared blankly ahead, then draped a purple-and-yellow Wimbledon towel over his head.

"It's really painful," Mahut said.

The 23rd seeded Isner's 6-4, 3-6, 6-7 (7), 7-6 (3), 70-68 victory — yes, that's

Republicans kill Senate jobless aid measure

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Republicans on Thursday defeated Democrats' showcase election-year jobs bill, including an extension of weekly unemployment benefits for millions of people out of work more than six months.

The 57-41 vote fell three votes short of the 60 required to crack a GOP filibuster, delivering a major blow to President Barack Obama and Democrats facing big losses of House and Senate seats in the fall election.

The rejected bill would have provided $16 billion in new aid to states, preserving the jobs of thousands of state and local government workers and providing what White House officials called an insurance policy against a double-dip recession. It included dozens of tax breaks sought by business lobbyists and tax increases on domestically produced oil and on investment fund managers.

White House press secretary Robert Gibbs accused Republicans of blocking a commonsense economic package aimed at helping Americans suffering in the recession. "The president has been clear: Americans should not fall victim to Republican obstruction at a time of great economic challenge for our nation's families," Gibbs said in a statement. "The president will continue to press Congress to pass this bill and bring this relief that's critical to our economic recovery."

The demise of the bill means that unemployment benefits will phase out for more than 200,000 people a week. Governors who had been counting on federal aid will now have to consider a fresh round of budget cuts, tax hikes and layoffs of state workers.

"This is a bill that would remedy serious challenges that American families face as a result of this Great Recession," said Sen. Max

Baucus, D-Mont., the chief author of the bill. "This is a bill that works to build a stronger economy. This is a bill to put Americans back to work."

The bill had been sharply pared back after weeks of negotiations with GOP moderates Olympia Snowe and Susan Collins of Maine. The most recent version, unveiled Wednesday night, contained new cuts to food stamps and scaled back the state aid provision to allow Democrats to claim the measure was fully paid for except for the unemployment insurance extension.

That didn't move Republicans like Minority Leader Mitch

McConnell of Kentucky.

"It adds new taxes and over $30 billion to an already staggering $13 trillion dollar national debt," said McConnell.

Only one Democrat, Ben Nelson of Nebraska, voted with Republicans. Another, Robert Byrd of West Virginia, did not vote.

After the Senate vote, the House passed by a 417-1 vote a measure to reverse a 21 percent federal fee cut imposed last week on doctors providing care to seniors on Medicare. That measure was one of the most important contained in the now-dead catchall bill, but it was broken out and passed separately by the Senate last week.

Latest blunder feeds frustration in Gulf oil spill

By Michael Kunzelman
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — Earlier this month, BP boldly predicted the oil gushing from the bottom of the sea would be reduced to a "relative trickle" within days, and President Barack Obama told the nation last week that as much as 90 percent would soon be captured. But those goals seemed wildly optimistic Thursday after yet another setback a mile underwater.

A deep-sea robot bumped into the cap collecting oil from the well, forcing a temporary halt Wednesday to the company's best effort yet to contain the leak. The cap was back in place Thursday, but frustration and skepticism were running high along the Gulf Coast.

BP's pronouncements have "absolutely no credibility," Jefferson Parish Councilman John Young said. The latest problem shows "they really are not up to the task and we have more bad news than we have good news."

Even before the latest setback, the government's worst-case estimates suggested the cap and other equipment were capturing less than half of the oil leaking from the sea floor. And in recent days, the "spillcam" video continued to show gas and oil billowing from the blown-out well.

BP officials said they sympathized, and laid out in new detail the company's plans to have additional ships in place that can capture even more oil.

"For BP, our intent is to restore the Gulf the way it was before it happened," BP PLC managing director Bob Dudley, who has taken over the company's spill operations, said in Washington.

In other developments:

- The spill began arriving in sheets of oil on the Florida coast, forcing the first closing of a beach in the state since the accident more than nine weeks ago, and fouled some of Mississippi's most fertile coastal waters.
- The federal judge who struck down the Obama administration's six-month ban on deep-water drilling in the Gulf refused to stay his ruling while the government appeals.
- Environmental groups asked the court to release additional information about U.S. District Judge Martin Feldman's holdings in oil-related stocks.
- Dudley said BP had asked James Lee Witt, director of the Federal Emergency Management Administration during the Clinton administration, to review its response to the oil spill and recommend improvements.

At nearly every important juncture since the Deepwater Horizon rig exploded April 20, killing 11 workers, the government's and BP's estimates on the size of the spill, its effect on wildlife and the time frame for containing it have spectacularly missed the mark.

Lake Michigan shipwreck found after 112 years

By Dinesh Ramde
Associated Press writer

MILWAUKEE — A great wooden steamship that sank more than a century ago in a violent Lake Michigan storm has been found off the Milwaukee-area shoreline, and divers say the intact vessel appears to have been perfectly preserved by the cold fresh waters.

Finding the 300-foot-long L.R. Doty was important because it was the largest wooden ship that remained unaccounted for, said Brendon Baillod, the president of the Wisconsin Underwater Archaeology Association.

"It's the biggest one I've been involved with," said Baillod, who has taken part in about a dozen such finds. "It was really exhilarating."

The Doty was carrying a cargo of corn from South Chicago to Ontario, Canada in October 1898 when it sailed into a terrible storm, Baillod said. Along with snow and sleet, there were heavy winds that whipped up waves of up to 30 feet.

The Doty should have been able to handle the weather. The ship was only five years old, and the 300-foot wooden behemoth's hull was reinforced with steel arches.

But it was towing a small schooner, the Olive Jeanette, which began to founder in the storm after the tow line apparently snapped, Baillod said. The Doty probably sank when it came to the schooner's aid. All 17 of its crew members died, along with the ship's cats, Dewey and Watson.

As a maritime historian Baillod spent more than 20 years researching the shipwreck. He knew that swaths of debris had washed up afterward in Kenosha, about 40 miles south of Milwaukee. But he found news accounts that it had last been seen closer to Milwaukee, near Oak Creek. Meanwhile, a Milwaukee fisherman in 1991 reported snagging his nets on an obstruction about 300 feet under water. The observation was largely forgotten for decades until diving technology improved enough to enable exploration at that depth.

A number of explorers did some preliminary scouting on the lake's surface in recent months, using deep-sea technology to find a massive submerged object. Divers waited until last week to descend, when the weather was just right.

As soon as they got to the lake floor they knew they had found the Doty.

"It felt so good to solve this," said Jitka Hanakova, 33, a diver and captain of the charter boat that led the exploration. "This ship has been missing for so many years and it's one of the biggest out there."

Divers found the ship upright and intact, settled into the clay at the lake's bottom. Even the ship's cargo of corn was still in its hold.

The Doty is so well-preserved because it's in a cold, freshwater lake. It's also far enough below the surface that storms don't affect it.

Those same factors mean the crew's corpses are likely intact as well, Baillod said. Their bodies are probably still in the boiler room, where the sailors must have huddled as the ship went down, he added.

While details of the sinking remain unclear, Baillod said the most likely explanation is that rudder chain snapped while the Doty was turning around to aid the Olive Jeanette. That would have left the 20-foot-tall ship at the mercy of 30-foot waves that would have dumped tons of water on the fragile wooden hatches.

"When the rudder broke (the crew) must have known they were going to die," Baillod said. "They probably had a good hour to contemplate their fate until the cargo holds collapsed!"

Obama confident of no policy discord on Afghanistan with Petraeus on board

WASHINGTON (AP) — No more discord in the Afghanistan war command, President Obama vows. With Gen. David Petraeus in charge, the president said Thursday he's assembled the team that will take the U.S. through the months ahead — by all expectations the make-or-break stage of the conflict.

"I am going to be insisting on a unity of purpose on the part of all branches of the U.S. government," the president said. "Our team is going to be moving forward in synch!"

Obama said he does not anticipate further firings beyond Gen. Stanley McChrystal, the top war commander hired a year ago to turn around a war then sliding into quagmire. He was fired Wednesday for sniping at civilian war bosses in a magazine article.

"I'm paying very close attention," Obama said of his war council. "And I will be insisting on extraordinary performance moving forward."

The Taliban-led insurgency has dug in for a long fight in crucial southern Afghan provinces where McChrystal focused the conflict. Petraeus is expected to continue that campaign, but he will have flexibility to make changes as he sees fit, his civilian and military bosses said Thursday.

"When he gets on the ground, he will assess the situation for himself, and at some point he will make recommendations to the president," Defense Secretary Robert Gates said. "At the end of the day, the president will decide whether changes are to be made in the strategy."

Both in Washington and Kabul, U.S. officials tried to stay on-message, insisting that the sudden sacking of McChrystal does not reveal a crisis of confidence in a war that Gates asserted is no longer a stalemate.

"I do not believe we are bogged down," Gates said. "I believe we are making some progress. It is slower and harder than we anticipated."

Obama and his top security advisers also underscored that U.S. forces will begin to come home from Afghanistan next summer, and that the commander taking over for the disgraced McChrystal is pledged to that timetable.

Lawmakers seek late-night deal for Wall Street bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers negotiated behind closed doors late into the evening Thursday, seeking a compromise on a contentious Wall Street restriction that would force large bank holding companies to spin off their lucrative derivatives business.

Obama administration officials were trying to broker talks between Sen. Blanche Lincoln, D-Ark., the leading advocate of the regulation, and moderate House Democrats and members of the New York congressional delegation opposed to her plan.

"We're listening to the concerns," Lincoln said.

The provision stood out as the last major sticking point in a sweeping overhaul of financial regulation.

Congressional leaders were eager to wrap the bill up Thursday, with hopes of getting final House and Senate passage before July 4.

"There have been conversations all day," said Rep. Barney Frank, the chairman of the House-Senate panel assembling the bill. "They are a lot closer than they were, and I believe we will get a deal!"

But Rep. Collin Peterson, D-Minn., the chairman of the House Agriculture Committee and an ally of Lincoln's on the provision, was more downbeat after participating in some of the talks.

"They're not making a lot of progress," Peterson said. "Somehow or another we have to do something."

Jamaican gang leader arrives in N.Y. to face drug, gun charges

By Tom Hays
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Following bloodshed over his capture, Jamaican gang leader Christopher “Dudus” Coke arrived in New York City under tight security on Thursday to face charges he flooded the East Coast with shipments of cocaine and marijuana, authorities said.

Drug Enforcement Administration agents brought Coke by plane to an airport in suburban White Plains, N.Y., hours after he waived his right to extradition in Jamaica. He was smiling as agents led him to a car that took him to a federal lockup in lower Manhattan to await arraignment today.

In agreeing to leave Jamaica without a legal fight, Coke said he was saddened by the 76 lives lost in street clashes between fiercely loyal supporters and security forces in his power base in Tivoli Gardens slum. He said he hopes his decision will help Jamaica heal.

“I take this decision for I now believe it to be in the best interest of my family, the community of western Kingston and in particular the people of Tivoli Gardens and above all Jamaica,” Coke said in a statement released to the news media, his first public comments since the U.S. requested his extradition in August.

Coke, 42, faces a maximum sentence of life in prison in the United States if convicted of drug and gun trafficking charges.

An indictment unsealed last month in federal court in Manhattan alleges that since 1994, members of Coke’s notorious Shower Posse gang in Jamaica and their U.S. counterparts “have sold narcotics, including marijuana and crack cocaine, at Coke’s direction.”

The U.S. cohorts, the indictment says, “commonly send cash and good, including clothing and electronics to Coke as ‘tribute’ payments, in recognition of his leadership and assistance.” The tribute payments also include firearms, the court papers add.

The indictment says that cooperators have recorded phone conversations with Coke about shipments of drugs and handguns.

Coke was captured Tuesday after a monthlong manhunt. He was disguised in a wig and riding with the Rev. Al Miller, an influential evangelical preacher who said Coke was on his way to surrender at the U.S. Embassy.

The 15-minute extradition hearing Thursday was held under heavy security at a military outpost in Kingston, the Caribbean nation’s capital, out of fear of possible attacks by supporters.

Australia gets first female PM

By Rohan Sullivan
Associated Press writer

SYDNEY — Julia Gillard had long been tipped as Australia’s first woman prime minister, but the way it finally happened has shocked almost everyone.

Only last month she said she was more likely to become a football star than replace her boss. But in a brutally efficient move driven by bad opinion polls and the approach of a general election, the Labor party dumped Prime Minister Kevin Rudd for his 48-year-old deputy. On Thursday, Gillard was sworn in.

At a news conference that capped one of the most abrupt transitions in Australia’s often-bruising political history, Gillard said she accepted the job “with the greatest humility, resolve and enthusiasm.”

She immediately sought to refocus attention on the popular decisions of the government in which she served for the past 2½ years, while distancing herself from mistakes attributed to Rudd.

She vowed to continue stimulus policies credited with shielding Australia from the global recession, and said she would revisit the plans Rudd shelved for a greenhouse gas emissions trading system. She sought to defuse a bitter dispute with mining companies over a proposed tax on profits.

Gillard is unlikely to change foreign and defense policies, including Australia’s 1,500-strong military contribution to the war in Afghanistan. The biggest change is likely to be in style.

2010 TOYOTA HIGHLANDER CROSSOVER AN IMPRESSIVE VALUE!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

The Toyota Highlander crossover sport utility vehicle continues to showcase Toyota value for 2010 by adding new options to Base grade models. The base four-cylinder model, which was added to the lineup last year, now offers a power tilt/slide moonroof, & the Base V6 model now offers a backup camera with a monitor in the multi-information display.

Introduced back in 2008, the second-generation Highlander is significantly larger, roomier & more powerful than the vehicle it replaces, yet still has excellent fuel efficiency. The new-generation Highlander is noticeably quieter & more spacious with enhanced versatility & ride comfort. It is among the leaders in providing standard active & passive safety equipment in a segment where safety is at the top of purchase considerations.

Offered in Base, Sport, SE & Limited trim levels & available in two-wheel (2WD) & full-time four-wheel-drive (4WD) models, base power for the Highlander is provided by a 2.7L four-cylinder engine. Torque is communicated to the pavement through a six-speed ECT automatic transmission. Standard on Highlander Sport & Limited grades & optional on the Base grade is the 3.5L V6 prime mover. The V6 is bolted to a five-speed electronically controlled transmission (ECT), which offers fully automatic shifting as well as selectable manual sequential shifting.

Inside the passenger cabin, the Japanese automaker's seven-passenger crossover offers comfort all the way from the defroster-linked CFC-free front air conditioning to the eight-way adjustable driver's seat & 40/20/40 split fold-down second row. Featuring a middle Center Stow™ seat & console with cup holders, the interior is welcoming & airy.

The Highlander's interior measures more than four inches longer than the previous model. This has created additional room between each of the three rows of seats. Toyota has provided the driver with a steering column offering both tilt & telescope function to provide a comfortable drive. The knobs & switches are large, well-marked, & easy to use.

Base grade models include AM/FM/CD with six speakers, AM/FM six-disc in-dash CD Changer with six speakers, MP3/WMA playback capability & satellite radio capability (standard on Sport & Limited Highlander) & a universal mini-jack.

With a total of seven airbags, the Highlander provides the most airbag coverage ever in a Toyota vehicle. There is a front driver & front passenger airbag, a driver & front passenger seat-mounted side airbags & driver's knees airbag. In the event of a rollover, there are "roll-sensing" curtain airbags intended to protect all three rows in certain side collisions or rollover events.

All of Toyota SUVs come standard with Toyota's Star Safety System™. Included is the Vehicle Stability Control & Traction Control, an anti-lock brake system with Electronic Brake-force Distribution, & Brake Assist.

The Highlander also features two additional electronic/hydraulic systems as standard equipment. The Hill-Start Assist Control prevents the vehicle from rolling backwards from a stopped position & when traveling up hill, it ensures a smooth start. The Highlander's Downhill Assist Control is designed to maintain a continuous speed downhill & reduces wheel lock at slower speeds. This is especially important to maintain control in slippery conditions.

"I did not choose thee, dearest. It was love That made the choice, not I. Mine eyes were blind."

— Wilfrid Blunt

Today's deal comes from the Open Teams tournament at the European Open Championships from San Remo last year.

As so often happens, the first board was a defining moment - here, in a match between a French and a Dutch squad. After an auction in which North had shown diamonds artificially at his first turn, South reached the decent diamond slam, having managed to get the contract declared from the better side.

Michel Bessis of France led the heart king, and East, his son Thomas Bessis, surmised that South was unlikely to have bid slam with two heart losers, especially after North had denied a heart control. Accordingly, Thomas overtook the heart king with the ace and switched to the club eight.

At this stage South had to guess whether spades were behaving — i.e. whether either defender held a doubleton or tripleton spade queen. If so, South had to win the club ace and establish the spades to make his contract. If spades were not behaving, declarer had to take the club finesse. Without the fine play by East, declarer would have had the luxury of testing the spades first and, if that failed, could have fallen back on the club finesse. He got it wrong — and regardless of whether he played with the odds or not, one must credit East's defense for giving South the chance to err.

In the other room declarer brought home the slam from the North seat on a high spot-card club lead, so that was a huge swing for the Bessis team.

ANSWER: I'm not convinced that a double would always work here, but I hate to let the opponents play the hand at the one-level if I have a chance to act. If I were not a passed hand, I would not be brave enough to bid; as it is, I would double and hope that my partner can take a joke.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Claude," and I are deeply in love. He's devoted to me and my son. He brings me candy and flowers and takes me out. He includes my son in everything we do.

My problem is, he recently mentioned that he is on the national sex offenders list. He says he didn't do it and that he was framed. It happened years ago — if it happened at all — and he doesn't like to talk about it.

Abby, I need your advice. Should I believe him or run the other way? It scares me to think that I am putting my son in danger, but then again, I don't believe Claude did what they say he did. Please help me.

— MOM IN THE SOUTH
DEAR MOM: The first thing you should do is check the national sex offenders database. Find out if Claude should, by virtue of the fact that he is a convicted sex offender, even be around children. Learn the facts of what happened from the authorities in that community. And then, think with your head instead of your heart and put your son's welfare above everything.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: You frequently say children are not responsible for their parents' divorce.

My grandmother said my parents married because my mother was pregnant with my sister. They divorced because I was born. What do we say to our parents, knowing they divorced because Mom didn't want us? (I have met her only twice, and she's not around to defend herself.) I am 25 and have had self-esteem problems my entire life.

— STILL FEELING SAD
MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR STILL FEELING SAD: I'm sorry you have had so little contact with your mother. Had it been otherwise, you might have discovered that your parents' divorce had nothing to do with you as a person and everything to do with her and your father's level of maturity at the time and the quality of their marriage.

I strongly suspect that other factors in your mother's life made her unable, rather than unwilling, to nurture. If it's possible for you to contact her, you should do so. And if not, discuss this with a therapist who will help you put any questions about your self-worth to rest once and for all.

DEAR ABBY: My son is married to a beautiful Japanese woman who is well-educated and speaks both Japanese and English fluently. They have a daughter, "Mari," who is 2 1/2 and just starting to talk. My concern is whether my granddaughter should be taught English or Japanese first.

Mari already speaks and understands a little of each language, but I'm worried that she may grow up confused while trying to communicate with others. I feel she should learn English first. Then, as Mari grows older, her mother can teach her the Japanese language.

Am I being concerned about something I shouldn't be? By the way, there is no family conflict here. I'm just concerned that my granddaughter will grow up confused.

— HAPPY PAPA
IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR HAPPY PAPA: Worry no more. Children absorb languages like sponges absorb water. Mari is a lucky little girl to be learning Japanese and English so young. If she's able to practice both, they will become interchangeable for her. So stop worrying, and if you're receptive, your granddaughter may teach you a few phrases.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

IF JUNE 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Ambition is a good thing until it is taken too far. During the next few weeks you may have an urge to steamroll over anyone or anything that interferes with your success. Don't burn bridges now because the people or things you discard might be useful in the future and you may regret actions taken now. The same holds true for October and November when you may obsess about something or someone. For the best results wait until next spring, and especially April, to make decisions that have long range effects. That is when other people will appreciate your talents and attractions the most and is a very good time to begin a new job or find a special someone for long-term happiness.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't mess with a hot streak. It seems that no matter what you do today, it turns out for the best — as long as you don't start anything new. Expect the unexpected from family members or loved ones before nightfall.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let logic keep you from wandering where your heart beckons. You could traverse some choppy waters when sailing the seas of romance. Stick to your original game plan and use rational thinking.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you doubt that you have truly found true love, the answer is most likely that you haven't. Follow through on promises that you have already made, even if you have to suffer a bit to keep them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stick with what works. Everyone seems to put his or her two cents in as to what changes need to be made. The simple fact is that the current system has worked so far, so changes would be fruitless.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tread lightly. You will do just fine by simply doing what is asked of you. Ignore an urge to rock the boat or to make sweeping changes. Adding romance into the mix today could create a recipe for disaster.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You don't know what you've got until it's gone. If you are feeling that you need more out of life, take a moment to count your blessings. Distinguish between what you really want and what you really need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Monkey see, monkey do. Look to someone with infinitely more experience and try to emulate their success. Make sure to clear the air over a matter or a lack of trust could undermine future efforts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Every rose has its thorns. A new hookup may have you enjoying the sweet smell of romance, but taking things to the next step will only bring pain. Follow the example of those who at least appear to know what they're doing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): When it rains, it pours. Steer clear of tense situations, as someone is likely to get wires crossed and put you on the spot. Don't let minor disputes or disagreements escalate into anything more severe.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Why do today what you can put off until tomorrow? It is wise to tap dance around pressing issues. Don't be cornered into making key decisions or commitments. The suspicions of others are not your concern.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Sometimes the best offense is a good defense. Take care of problems as they come to you but don't go out of your way to find them. Stay out of conflicts as more than likely you will end up as the villain.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You're only human. Too many obligations may have paralyzed you into inertia. Tackle one task at a time and hope everything works out for the best. The only restrictions are the ones that you place on yourself.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
