A ROCKY SITUATION

City looks at stabilizing canyon wall

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Deysi Sandoval doesn't give the tenuously wedged rocks in parts of the Snake River Canyon wall much thought when taking one of her regular walks down Canyon Springs Road. The view of the river and parks below usually steals most of her attention.

But the 18-year-old remembers the rock slide of June 2006. And when she's not lost in the view, the possibility of it happening again does cross her mind.

It's also been on the minds of Twin Falls city officials. They've been taking steps toward stopping another road-closing rock slide since the 2006 incident. Then, it shut down Canyon Springs Road for three days; now, scars in the asphalt are the only sign that remains.

Consultant Strata Geotechnical Engineering presented a $500,000 plan to the Twin Falls City Council last week to secure the rockface and protect against future slides. The wall overlooking the road is largely basalt rock that has naturally cracked and eroded to be loose in some places. Parts are also layered with mud, further compromising the stability of the wall in some places, city engineer Mike Trabert said.

"It is specialty work,"

Traffic makes its way along Canyon Springs Road Tuesday in Twin Falls. The city is looking at reinforcing the canyon wall to prevent another rock slide like one in 2006 that closed the road for three days. The project is expected to cost about $500,000.

One platform, many options

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Delegates to the Idaho Republican Party's convention in Idaho Falls last week left the state's GOP with a new platform that reflects an even stronger shift to the right side of the political spectrum.

But if anything, the party platform's reception among area Republicans reflects the way proposed legislation is received by lawmakers: varied opinions, a scrutinizing eye and rarely unanimous support, even among the GOP stalwart.

The party's new platform includes a resolution to establish a loyalty test for political candidates, a recommendation that Idaho withhold taxes from the federal government and a push to define marriage as between "naturally born" men and women, among others. One resolution seeks to repeal the 17th amendment of the U.S. Constitution, a move that would take the election of U.S. senators away from citizens and return it to

THE ISSUES

Some new Idaho GOP platform planks include:

- Repeal the 17th amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which allows the general population to elect U.S. senators. Before the amendment was passed, state legislatures voted senators into office.
- Establish a loyalty test for political candidates requiring them to sign a public document attesting their agreement with the party platform and specifying any differing views.
- Withhold federal taxes that are spent on "unconstitutional" programs and instead use the money for constitutional needs of the state budget normally covered by the U.S., refunding the rest.
- Establish a state militia for the governor to call up when needed because Idaho National Guard units can be called from the state by the president.

FDA seeks to limit antibiotics in meat

By Lyndsey Layton
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration urged farmers on Monday to stop giving antibiotics to cattle, poultry, hogs and other animals to spur their growth, citing concern that drug overuse is helping to create dangerous bacteria that do not respond to medical treatment and endanger human lives.

Joshua Sharfstein, the FDA's principal deputy commissioner, said antibiotics should be used only to protect the health of an animal and not to help it grow or improve the way it digests its feed.

"This is an urgent public health issue," Sharfstein said during a conference call with reporters. "To preserve the effectiveness (of antibiotics), we simply must use them as judiciously as possible."

The FDA issued a draft of its guidance, and the public has 60 days to comment on the draft.

Sharfstein said that the guidance was a first step, and the agency would issue new regulations if the industry does not comply voluntarily.

"We have the regulatory mechanisms, and industry knows that," he said. "We also think things can be done voluntarily. We're not handcuffed to the steering wheel of a particular strategy, but I'm not ruling out anything that we can do to establish these important public-health goals."

The FDA has tried to limit the use of antibiotics in agriculture since 1977, but its efforts have repeatedly collapsed in the face of opposition from the drug industry and farm lobby.

Wildfires flare up in western Valley

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Lightning likely sparked several fires in the western Magic Valley on Tuesday, a sign that wildfire season has begun much earlier than it did last year.

Three significant wildland fires were reported Tuesday afternoon by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management and are the first cluster of fires this season. The first fire, a 1,500-acre flare-up, occurred last week.

The Buhl Corral Fire started around 2:30 p.m. and covered 82 acres about 7 miles west of Hollister before being contained later in the evening. Six fire engines and two water tenders worked the blaze.

Two larger fires were sparked farther west, in the desert around Mountain Home Air Force Base's Saylor Creek Bombing Range. The Sailor Creek Fire started around 3 p.m.; by 7:45 p.m., it had grown to cover 5,000 acres, partly because low-visibility weather conditions were making it hard for firefighters to see the whole fire, said BLM spokesman Brock Astle. Four wildland engines and a bulldozer were on

CSI science camp garners gasps, giggles

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — It was all squishy and slimy and so much fun that the young scientists could hardly peel their eyes away Tuesday as they dissected various organ specimens at science camp.

"It's gross and awesome," said Kennedy Spencer, 9, as she worked to dissect a cow's eye during the College of Southern Idaho's science camp. "It's gross because the eye came from a cow and it's awesome because I get to see what's inside a cow's eye."

Amy Christopherson, coordinator for the Mini-Cassia camp, said the camp is in its second year and has 48 participants enrolled from ages 6 to 13. Last year more than 30 children attended the camp. Sessions will also be held this summer in Gooding, Hailey, Jerome and Twin Falls.

Christopherson said the theme for the four-day camp that started Monday is "Gross Anatomy."

Students are broken into age groups each day to study a different topic like skin and bones, blood and guts, the senses, and immunity, using tools such as microscopes and organ specimens.

CSI biology instructor Bill Ebener said the science camp allows children to be curious with a purpose. He said he tries to keep the knowledge at an appropriate age level and keep participants' curiosity piqued.

"I don't want them just to follow my preconceived ideas," he said.

Science is moved forward by curiosity and diversity, Ebener said.

"I really like it," said Ben Nelson, 12, as he searched for the left ventricle in a sheep's heart. "You get to do stuff that you wouldn't do at school and you have people here to help you."

Nelson said if he wasn't at science camp he would prob-

Film at 11: The other Steve Crump

I saw myself on TV recently. Turned on the television news in Charlotte, N.C., and met Steve Crump, a 52-year-old African-American reporter who unaccountably is using my name.

Really: How many Steve Crumps can there be in the universe?

This one is a reporter and anchor on Charlotte's WBTV-TV, where he's worked after previous stints at stations in Lexington, Ky.; Orlando, Fla., and Savannah, Ga., according to WBTV's website. Crump is about my age — and like me, overweight. Apart from race, we're essentially the same guy.

On the night I was in Charlotte, Crump was on WBTV trying to save Jesus.

Actually, the locally famous "Jesus Saves" sign in question was part of the Old Cannon Cathedral in a sketchy neighborhood on Charlotte. It was scheduled for the wrecking ball.

"We can't save every building, but the Jesus Saves sign is such a powerful link to Charlotte's evangelical community," Tom Hanchett of the Levine Museum of the New South told Crump.

In this case, Crump's story made a difference: "Jesus Saves" was saved, although the old church was demolished.

Not a bad day's work, all things considered, in the news business. Of all the other stories Crump reports in his TV career, folks are likely to remember that one.

My forebears came to America from Sweden and England through Utah, so I have no bloodlines to the South like the other Steve Crump — who according to WBTV is from Louisville. But years ago, I took a road trip through Tennessee and was amazed by the impact that people named Crump have had on that state.

There's a Crump Stadium, where the University of Memphis used to play its football games, and E.H. Crump Avenue, one of the city's main drags.

YOU DON'T SAY Steve Crump

And a hundred miles to the southeast, there's the Tennessee River town of Crump (population 1,521) on State Route 22. The place is hallowed ground for anyone who cares about American history because it's the nearest community to the Shiloh National Monument, where in April 1862 Union troops under Ulysses S. Grant endured a ferocious assault by Confederates and won perhaps the pivotal battle of the Civil War.

Pivotal because Shiloh effectively split the Confederacy in two. After Shiloh, Tennessee — at the very center of the Confederate States of America — was mostly in Union hands.

Crump and surrounding Hardin County are overwhelmingly white, which is typical for rural western Tennessee. I drove into town on a sweltering June day years ago, stopped at a diner and ordered a cheeseburger and glass of sweet tea in honor of local traditions.

The fellow behind the counter — who was black — asked what brought me to Crump, Tenn.

I allowed as to how I was a tourist from Idaho just passing through, and that my name was Crump.

So was his. He pulled a bottle of Jack Daniel's — of course — out from behind the counter and poured an ounce or two into my glass of sweet tea.

"Welcome home, cousin," he said, lifting a shot glass of Jack in a toast.

No matter how hard human beings try to be different from each other, we're the same.

Steve Crump can be reached at 735-3223. Hear him live on KLIX-1310 AM at 8:30 a.m. Fridays or on the Web at www.magicvalley.com/opinion.

Wendell man held for rape charge

Times-News

A Wendell man faces a rape charge and is in custody at the Twin Falls County Jail.

Mozes Joseph Jimenez, 20, of Wendell, was arraigned Monday in 5th District Court in Twin Falls after he was arrested Sunday by Twin Falls police.

A female, whose age or hometown police have not released, alleged that Jimenez and another male, who has yet to be positively identified, forced her to have sex at a party early Sunday morning in a west Twin Falls city residence.

The alleged victim was able to identify Jimenez by name and a tattoo across his chest, according to a police report. Police interviewed Jimenez Sunday. He denied having sex with the female, but once informed that he was under arrest, Jimenez "started crying and admitted that he had sex with (the female) but that it was consensual," according to police.

Police then obtained a search warrant for the residence and retained evidence, including personal property of the female.

Jimenez' bond was set at $150,000. His preliminary hearing is set for July 9.

Strata engineers proposed a mix of tactics to secure the rock, from driving 10- to 15-foot rock anchors into unstable areas to plastering shotcrete — hose-fired concrete — onto some portions.

City Manager Tom Courtney said the project would be paid for through the city's road construction budget for the next fiscal year. Trabert said construction could be finished as soon as the fall if the budget comes through and the project begins quickly.

on how long any construction might take, as the project still needs to go to bid.

Aside from keeping the road — which leads to two parks, a golf course and the city's wastewater treatment facility — open, there are also safety concerns for joggers, Trabert said. No one has been injured from falling rock, but it is still a risk, he said.

"(Securing the rock face) is good for the safety of everybody and it's a real important road," Trabert said. "It's the only road, basically, for a lot of services."

As for Sandoval, she'll keep up her walks and not fret too much over falling rock.

"If (the city) did something, it would be for a reason," she said.

scene and no predictions had been made as to a containment time.

The Black Butte Fire, in remote territory east of the bombing range, had burned 400 acres by 5:30 p.m., only to rapidly expand to 2,000 acres within the next hour due to 50 mph winds. Two wildland engines were dispatched and a containment time was unknown.

Another fire started around 6:30 p.m. in the Snake River Canyon southwest of Jerome, near Niagara Springs. It covered 15 to 20 acres by 7:45 p.m., Astle said, and both the Wendell and Jerome rural fire departments were on scene. Once again, no estimated containment time was available.

Aircraft were grounded for at least part of the evening because of high winds, removing aerial observation and slurry bombing as tools.

A hazardous weather outlook and wind advisory was in place for the valley for Tuesday night, according to the National Weather Service. Thunderstorms and gusty winds up to 70 mph were expected to hamper containment during the night. Winds were predicted to diminish to 10 mph on Wednesday.

Besides the wildland fires, the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center reported four small brush fires by 6 p.m.: two in Twin Falls County, one in Jerome County and one in Gooding County. They included one small blaze that damaged several vacant structures on a lot at 1537 East, 3900 North near Buhl. That fire was out by 8 p.m., said Andrew Stevens, evening duty officer for the Buhl Rural Fire Protection District.

BASE jumper injured after parachute malfunctions

A 40-year-old man originally from Germany had a close call on Saturday when his parachute failed to adequately deploy as he leapt from the Perrine Bridge in Twin Falls, according to Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Jerry Elliott.

Just before noon, the BASE jumper, whose name was not included in a release Tuesday, was observed falling from the bridge by Twin Falls County and Jerome County sheriff's deputies as they conducted a marine patrol academy in the Snake River Canyon near Centennial Waterfront Park.

Elliott said the canopy of the parachute was "only deployed to approximately 25 percent. The jumper then landed in approximately five feet of water at an incredible rate of speed."

The jumper was 200 yards from the exercise, and was already standing in waist-high water when deputies reached him, Elliott said. Paramedics responded from St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, but the BASE jumper refused treatment, stating he would get it checked out in Moab, Utah, where he lives.

Fifth suspect charged in liquor store robbery

Charles Milton Marovich, 17, of Hansen, was charged as an adult Tuesday with burglary, grand theft, conspiracy to commit burglary, conspiracy to commit grand theft and malicious injury to property for his alleged part in the May 20 robbery of a state liquor store on Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

Marovich was originally charged as a juvenile. His bond was set at $5,000, and he remains in the Twin Falls County Jail, segregated from adult prisoners.

Marovich, who is charged along with four other suspects in the burglary, is scheduled to face a preliminary hearing on July 9.

A minor girl reported missing on Jan. 4 was found with him two days later in Utah by a Millard County Sheriff's deputy. The deputy had stopped to check on Acevedo-Guillen's broken-down Chevrolet pickup truck along Interstate 15, about 130 miles south of Salt Lake City.

Acevedo-Guillen's original charge of felony kidnapping in the first degree was amended on April 27, the same day as his plea.

Cassia Co. sheriff's deputy involved in crash

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A Cassia County sheriff's deputy who was responding to an emergency call Monday was involved in a two-car crash.

Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd said the crash occurred at approximately 2:30 p.m. Deputy Clay Anderson was responding with his lights flashing to a hit-and-run accident when his patrol car collided with another vehicle at 300 W. Idaho Highway 30.

Nobody was injured in the collision.

Kidd said Anderson was driving a 2010 Ford Crown Victoria patrol car when his cruiser collided with a vehicle that apparently failed to yield to him.

"There was a slower-traveling car in front of him and the car turned left in front of him," Kidd said.

Idaho State Police were called to investigate the crash since it involved a Cassia County deputy.

ISP Capt. Rob Storm

said Tuesday the details of the crash were not yet available.

Kidd said along with ISP, Minidoka County sheriff's deputies also responded to the crash scene.

But mounting evidence of a global crisis of antibiotic-resistant bacteria has propelled the government to act, said Brad Spellberg, an infectious-diseases specialist and the author of "Rising Plague," a book about antibiotic resistance.

"The writing is on the wall," said Spellberg, who teaches at the David Geffen School of Medicine at the University of California, Los Angeles. "We're in an era where antibiotic resistance is out of control, and we're running out of drugs and new drugs are not being developed. We can't continue along the path we're on."

The European Union banned the feeding of antibiotics and related drugs to livestock for growth promotion in 2006.

U.S. farmers routinely give antibiotics to food-producing animals to treat illnesses, prevent infection and encourage growth. The drugs are often added to drinking water and feed. The Union of Concerned Scientists estimates that 70 percent of antibiotics and related drugs used in the United States are given to animals.

Many of the same classes of drugs fed to animals are deemed "critically" important in human medicine by the FDA, including penicillin, tetracyclines and sulfonamides. In recent years, public health experts say, there has been an alarming increase in the number of bacteria that have grown resistant to antibiotics, leading to severe, untreatable illnesses in humans.

Bacteria can transfer from animals to humans in several ways — in food, through farm workers and through air, water and soil contaminated by manure.

The Animal Health Institute, which represents companies that make drugs for animals, said Monday that it agrees that antibiotics should be used in a "judicious manner."

state legislatures. Another calls for the creation of a state militia.

"I think it's healthy for the party to have these resolutions brought forward and discussed," said state Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls. "... We are a conservative party and I think expressions of conservative positions within the platform, that's generally a good thing."

The party's actions do not create laws, though the resolutions can serve as starting points that frame future legislative efforts. But an issue's presence on the platform doesn't mean every GOP legislator automatically supports it.

For example, Hartgen said that he'd have to give repealing the 17th amendment a large dose of scrutiny before he'd back it.

"It takes away the vote of the people from electing their senators directly," he said. "I don't think I would support that at this time."

Hartgen, along with other Republicans, also isn't quite ready for the resolution requiring political candidates to sign a document agreeing to the party's platform or outlining what parts they disagree with.

"To me that one comes too close to kind of a litmus-test approach, which I don't think we need," he said, noting that the public can vet candidates by reviewing their voting records.

Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, said that the loyalty test would discourage diverse opinions in the party.

"That tent should be big and there should be room for all opinions, and you don't help your party by making a public statement about what you don't agree with them on," Bell said. "... There's more ways to assume that I'm the Republican that you want to support rather than me having to make a statement to find out."

Leon Mills, a delegate running for Twin Falls County commissioner this November on the GOP ticket, said he "didn't agree with a lot of" the platform, including ideas like starting a militia and not paying taxes to the federal government. For example, for one resolution calling for inmates to be workers, the state would need to figure out who would manage the inmates, he said.

"It sounds good on paper, but in real life how would you initiate it?" Mills said.

A Democratic lawmaker, Rep. Wendy Jaquet of Ketchum, is concerned about what the platform will mean for the next legislative session.

"I think it's going to be hard to find middle ground," she said. "I think it will be harder. I would hope that voters would look at this platform and who they're electing and ask some pretty hard questions."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

East Hills Source Site – CS-193
Cassia County, Idaho

WHAT:

A public open house to inform and gather public comment regarding the use of Bureau of Land Management (BLM) property for a material source. Project No.: A011(541); Key No.: 11541

WHEN:

July 7, 4 to 7 p.m.

WHERE:

City of Declo City Hall Council Chambers

FORMAT:

Open house format. Anyone interested in the source proposal is encouraged to attend anytime between 4 and 7 p.m. Displays illustrating the site, property, and other information will be available for review. ITD staff will be on hand to explain the proposed site and its use, answer questions, and to gather comments.

PROJECT HIGHLIGHTS:

The preliminary survey test results indicate that the material meets the specifications for construction and preservation of ITD-maintained roadways. Additional testing is required to fully establish the viability of the site. The site is currently controlled by the BLM and will be transferred under Title 23 of the Federal Highway Act.

Courts need $40M for border security

By Amanda Lee Myers
Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — President Obama's $600 million border security plan seems to have it all: More than 1,000 agents, seven gunrunner teams, five FBI task forces and more prosecutors and immigration judges.

But it doesn't include $40 million to help the already overwhelmed federal courts along the U.S.-Mexico border that will likely be inundated with additional drug and other criminal cases, a judiciary official tells The Associated Press.

Increased patrols will mean more arrests and more cases sent to the five district courts on the border, from California to Texas. The courts handle cases including drug trafficking, smuggling and illegal immigrants charged with other serious crimes.

"The current workload in our Southwest border courts is staggering," said James Duff, director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts.

Duff said the judiciary asked Congress for the $40 million on June 22 after realizing it wasn't sent with Obama's plan. He said judiciary requests are usually included with the president's budget proposals, but wasn't in this case.

White House spokesman Luis Miranda said the request wasn't submitted with the president's because it's a separate branch of government.

Obama's plan does include more money for immigration judges, which operate in the executive branch. But those judges deal almost exclusively with civil deportation matters, not criminal cases, like the district courts.

The chief judge for the District of Arizona in Tucson, located in what's become the busiest corridor for illegal immigration and drug smuggling, said he fears that increased patrols will bring even more cases to his already swamped court.

"If you have more agents in the field, they're going to make more apprehensions. ... Being here on the ground in the middle of everything happening, we would have to have more resources if they're going to bring us more cases," Judge John Roll told The AP.

Locals help woman stranded after car crash in northern Idaho

By Brian Walker
The Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Ted and Dustin Conrad know the roads around Harrison — to the point of noticing new skidmarks.

And Lucille Collins is thankful for that.

The injured 72-year-old Coeur d'Alene woman was stranded more than 12 hours on Saturday night and Sunday morning about 45 yards down a steep embankment off Highway 97 after a car crash about a mile south of Harrison.

Ted and his 19-year-old son, Dustin, who were on their way fishing, found Collins after they noticed the skidmarks and no flares in the road.

"They were my saviors," said Collins, who was in good condition at Kootenai Medical Center on Monday but suffered a broken sternum, a deep gash over her left eye, ankle injuries and several bruises. "I told them that I could kiss them; I was so happy."

Ted said that he and Dustin, who live on the Harrison Flats near Harrison, did a simultaneous double-take after passing the skidmarks.

"Being locals, we pretty much know all the skidmarks on the roads, and these were new," Ted said. "I said, 'Wouldn't that suck if there was a car down there and nobody stopped?'"

"It only took a minute to go back to check and, sure enough, there was a car upside down there. I'm just glad that we went back because she may have been down there awhile."

When the Conrads yelled to see if anyone would respond, Collins answered.

"There must've been 50 cars that drove by, and finally someone stopped," Collins said.

The car was not visible from the highway, so Collins is thankful someone stopped when they did.

According to Idaho State Police, Collins was northbound on Highway 97 in a 2003 Buick Century at 8:30 p.m. on Saturday when she drove off the right gravel shoulder, overcorrected and slid across both lanes onto the opposite shoulder.

The vehicle went about 45 yards over the embankment before coming to rest on its top. It was stopped by two trees, including one at the back of the vehicle that was only about 6 inches in diameter.

The small tree prevented the vehicle from tumbling another 80 yards down to O'Gara Road, said ISP Trooper Allen Ashby.

"Had that tree not been there, there's a good chance that she would've went down the whole distance and it would have been a different outcome," Ashby said.

Conrad said a friend of his died several years ago after going over the same embankment.

Collins had driven about 10 hours from Billings, Mont., on Saturday and was headed to the Harrison area to go camping with a friend. She said she doesn't recall falling asleep, but Ashby, who cited her for inattentive driving, suspects she was tired at the minimum.

Collins admits the trip may have been too much for one day.

"I suppose I got tired and I can't blame it on anybody else," Collins said.

After the tumble, Collins opened the passenger side window and wiggled out of the vehicle. However, she was unable to climb up to Highway 97 or traverse down to O'Gara Road due to her injuries.

"I was just too weak," she said.

At first, Collins said she was upset about wrecking the car she loved. She then realized the situation could have been worse as she could have died.

As time went on and vehicles drove by, her thoughts turned to fear.

"If nobody came for two or three days, I thought I could probably die," she said. "A lot of things go through your mind."

Collins said she had a cell phone, but it likely was lost in the crash and she never heard rings. She said she later learned that the friend she was going to go camping with tried calling her several times and drove to look for her, but to no avail.

Supporters tout high-speed network for researchers

By Dave Kolpack
Associated Press writer

FARGO, N.D. — Supporters of a high-speed broadband network that connects researchers in a dozen northern states say the system is in good shape despite university budget cutbacks, thanks in part to a new federal initiative.

The Northern Tier Network was established in 2003 to help improve Internet capability in states that lagged behind the rest of the country. It includes universities from North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Idaho, Wyoming, Washington and Alaska.

Bonnie Neas, North Dakota State University's vice president for information technology and the state representative to the network, told North Dakota lawmakers Tuesday that research dollars created through the system have boosted many universities that are hurting for money.

"It's really pushing the science, math and technology agenda for the country," Neas said.

The system also stands to benefit from a possible $97 million federal grant to two nonprofit Internet networks looking to link regional systems. The proposal by Internet2 and National LambdaRail would give Northern Tier 10 times its current Internet capability and reduce costs by 50 percent, Neas said.

North Dakota will spend $735,000 operating the system this year.

The network was created after officials in several northern states realized they could only afford high-speed service if they banded together. North Dakota has received about $3.25 million in federal funds and $2.73 million in state money for the network, which is used at NDSU, the University of North Dakota and the state's Information Technology Department.

Hailey to mark first anniversary today of Bergdahl capture

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Relatives and friends of Pfc. Bowe Bergdahl are preparing to mark the one-year anniversary of the capture of the Hailey soldier by the Taliban.

On Wednesday, Bergdahl's parents will issue a statement and locals will replace the torn and tattered yellow ribbons that were attached to trees, sign posts and storefronts last summer. The soldier disappeared June 30 while based in eastern Afghanistan and the military changed his status to "Missing-Captured" on July 3. He is the only known American serviceman in captivity.

The community hasn't stopped believing that Bergdahl will come home, said Sue Martin, the owner of Zaney's River Street Coffee House, where Bergdahl used to work.

"People are ready to renew and refresh the ribbons in the valley, and refresh their hopes and faith that Bowe can come home soon," Martin said

Tuesday. "I think it will be hopeful. That's definitely the message we want to send to the family — that they have our hope and support and we're not forgetting about Bowe. He's still in the fronts of our minds and our hearts."

Bergdahl's parents, Bob and Jani Bergdahl, have avoided the media spotlight, declining interview requests and asking that they be given their privacy. However, they did attend an Idaho Republican Party fundraising event earlier this month where they were honored for their family's sacrifice and where a chair was kept empty in recognition of Bowe.

Martin said bumper stickers, ribbons and signs are still spread throughout the region, and that local residents want Wednesday's event to help Bergdahl's family cope.

"They just want to be visibly doing something that will relate to supporting the family so the family knows they're all here for them, and remembering Bowe and thinking of them," she said.

AROUND THE STATE

IDAHO Fund manager must pay $1.2 million

MERIDIAN — A real-estate fund manager from southwestern Idaho must repay $1.2 million to investors after being sued in 2009 by the state for allegedly violating anti-fraud laws.

Sheila Jones, a Meridian, Idaho woman also known as Sheila Kilborn and Sheila Johnson, was slapped with the restitution order in 4th District Court.

The owner of Vitruvian Investment Group was accused of misrepresenting investments, using clients' money for her own personal benefit and failing to tell her investors that the success of the fund depended on securing more cash from additional people.

When the real-estate market failed, the flow of money dried up, prompting Jones to file for Chapter 7 bankruptcy protection.

The Idaho Department of Finance says Jones is now permanently barred from selling securities in the state.

U.S. Chamber endorses Minnick for re-election

BOISE — A national business group has endorsed Idaho Democratic U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick in his bid for a second term, saying he's taken a "common sense" approach to helping pull the state and country out of its economic malaise.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is supporting Minnick over his 1st Congressional District challenger Republican Raul Labrador, an immigration lawyer and state representative.

Labrador on Tuesday dismissed the endorsement, saying it's from an organization that's just looking out for its own political interests.

He says the U.S. Chamber of Commerce is only trying to seem bipartisan by endorsing a Democrat — and blasted the group for what he termed its "big government tilt."

Minnick's spokesman, John Foster, called the endorsement from a group that represents more than three million businesses nationwide "an exciting day for the campaign."

Storms cause damage, power outage in central Idaho

BOISE — Cleanup crews are clearing trees and debris and Idaho Power Co. is working to restore power to hundreds of homes darkened by a storm that swept through central Idaho.

Idaho Power says Monday's storms and powerful wind gusts knocked out power to about 18,000 customers from Garden Valley to New Meadows to lose power. As of late Tuesday, the utility still had about 6,000 homes without power.

The Valley County Sheriff Department says one person was injured by a falling tree at a campground near Donnelly. Winds that toppled trees caused closures on several roads and damaged hundreds of homes and vehicles.

National Weather Service meteorologists predicted more storms for the region Tuesday.

Lewiston man rescued from fiery crash

MOSCOW — The Idaho State Police say three men helped rescue a 51-year-old Lewiston man from his burning pickup truck after a two-vehicle crash south of Moscow.

Matt Logan of Moscow came upon the wreck Sunday evening. He first checked on the occupants of a Ford pickup, then turned his attention to a smaller pickup that had caught fire.

The driver, 32-year-old Jonathan Wager of Moscow, didn't respond to his shouts and Logan was unable to open the driver's door, which was crushed shut. The Idaho State Police say Wager likely died on impact.

The Ford caught fire after three of four family members escaped. Logan climbed into the pickup from the passenger side and pushed with his legs and back to create enough space to pull Kerry Wagner to safety. Two other men helped get Wagner away from the truck as it fully caught fire.

Pigeon-munching peregrine chicks banded in Idaho

BOISE — The progeny of the Idaho capital city's pigeon-munching raptors have gotten bands on their right legs to help aid in their identification.

Four young peregrine falcons that live on a building ledge high above Boise got the color-coded bands earlier this month during an Idaho Department of Fish and Game operation.

During the banding, the protective mother peregrine dived and screeched at the biologists meddling with their offspring. For two decades, peregrine falcons have nested here.

During the banding, workers installed a second Internet camera above the nest box to offer another candid glimpse into the peregrine chicks' young lives.

Remains of prey were also collected, including leftover bits of pigeons, meadowlarks and mourning doves.

Citizens air concerns about 200 oversized truck loads

MOSCOW (AP) — Some northern Idaho residents are concerned about the cost, potential environmental damage and safety of allowing 200 oversized loads of oil field equipment to travel from the Port of Lewiston to the Montana border.

Idaho Department of Transportation and Imperial Oil gave presentations in Moscow and Lewiston earlier this week, further detailing the plan to move the equipment through Idaho en route to the Kearl Oil Sands Project in Alberta, Canada.

The loads are expected to be 16 to 24 feet wide and weigh from 263,300 to 580,000 pounds.

The U.S. Highway 12 route that stretches across the Idaho Panhandle into Montana is believed to be the least expensive way for the equipment to make the trip this fall.

About 75 people attended the meeting in Moscow on Monday.

Some residents asked if the state's transportation department would recoup its costs with a $1,000-per-load permit and questioned the safety of hauling the oversized loads across the Arrow Bridge, which was under construction this summer to fix a worn surface and other signs of aging.

Others wondered how the state would respond if a piece of the equipment slid into the Clearwater or Lochsa rivers.

Residents were assured that crews would handle such a disaster by calling in a company with a crane large enough to remove the rig from the waterways. The closest company, in Spokane, Wash., could be to the site within 10 hours.

Idaho Transportation Department engineer Jim Carpenter told the group that if anything goes wrong, the agency would withhold permits from Imperial Oil for future trips until the problem is fixed.

None of the residents who attended the meeting spoke in favor of the project, the Lewiston Tribune reports.

Canyon County seeks test exemption for vehicle fleet

NAMPA (AP) — Canyon County leaders are mounting a new challenge in their long-standing fight against a state mandate to begin a countywide vehicle emissions testing program.

Canyon County officials are asking the state for an exemption for its fleet of government cars and trucks, specifically vehicles fueled by ethanol. Currently, only hybrid vehicles are exempt from testing.

"This is for the benefit of our citizens and county," Canyon County Commissioner Kathy Alder told the Idaho Press Tribune. "It's expensive to use ethanol, and we want to make sure there's a value and our state recognizes this."

The exemption request is the latest effort by the county to fight or limit the testing program required by a 2008 law. The Legislature approved a measure requiring local government leaders to take steps to limit emissions in regions where air quality is at or above 85 percent of the national air quality standards and where vehicle emissions are a leading source of pollution.

The mandate has irritated government leaders and some residents in this southwestern Idaho county who view it as a government intrusion. Critics have also complained of the costs tied to testing programs and questioned the effectiveness in improving the region's air quality.

In May, Canyon officials sent Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter a letter asking him to suspend the testing program that began earlier this month. Otter, who signed the law, rejected the request.

Earlier this year, commissioners vowed not to test the county's 200 vehicles to show their displeasure with the required program.

At the same time, the county has added more hybrid and ethanol-powered vehicles to its fleet.

Mark Tolman, the county's fleet manager, said the county built its own ethanol fuel station last year and purchased its own testing equipment a year ago.

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality has not considered exemptions for cars and trucks using ethanol.

But Regional Airshed Manager Stephen Coe told the Idaho Press Tribune that ethanol emissions are similar to those produced in vehicles burning gasoline.

"On more of an air quality note, E85 or ethanol-based fueling is great for carbon dioxide and greenhouse gases, but doesn't make a huge difference when you're talking about" nitrogen oxide emissions, Coe said.

Education reform for Idaho: It’s later than you think

In the early 1990s, public education in the state of Washington was a mess. The Evergreen State’s public schools couldn’t turn out enough students qualified for college, and Washington’s colleges and universities weren’t producing graduates who Washington companies wanted to hire.

So Washington launched far-reaching reforms to its school system, but it was neither the governors at the time, Booth Gardner and Mike Lowry, nor any of the state’s education officials nor its university administrators nor teachers unions, who held Washington legislators’ feet to the fire.

It was Bill Gates. The founder of Microsoft and other CEOs of Washington companies laid it on the line for Washington lawmakers: We have lots of jobs to offer Washington kids who are qualified for the work we need to have done, but we have no jobs for those who can’t cut the mustard.

“In Washington, we learn about talented high school students who don’t fulfill their promise — not because they fail in school but because our schools fail them,” Gates said in 1996. “They study hard, do well and get into college. But in college, instead of the good grades they’re used to they get Ds and Fs. They take remedial classes, but they still can’t keep up — so they quit.”

What followed was a wrenching decade of educational reform in Washington state — a decade that ultimately made the state’s schools work better and its kids learn more. The results were not perfect, but Washington has made necessary changes to keep its students competitive in a global economy. It’s also blazed a trail that Idaho must follow — sooner rather than later.

That’s where Steve Appleton comes in. The CEO of Micron Technology, along with some other key corporate leaders in Idaho — Jason Stolworthy, technology transfer and commercialization manager for Battele Energy Alliance; Jefferson Jewell, managing director of Blackfin Technologies, a Boise software company; Steve Hodges, president of M2M Communications, a Boise company that provides computer communications services, and Robin Woods, president of Alturas Analytics, which provides computer services to the pharmaceutical and biotech industries — are folks who just might tip the balance toward comprehensive education reform in this state.

And make no mistake, such reform is overdue. The Gem State, its students and those who work for its companies are losing ground by the day to better-educated and better-funded counterparts in other countries.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna and several members of the State Board of Education, including Ken Edmunds of Twin Falls, recognize that, but surprisingly Idaho’s political leaders do not appear to. Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and the the legislative leaders in education, Senate Education Committee Chairman John Goedde, R-Coeur d’Alene and House Education Chairman Bob Nonini, R-Coeur d’Alene, seem more than content to let Idaho’s education system continue to drift into mediocrity.

That’s not good enough. What’s at stake here is whether or not our children and grandchildren will be able to find jobs good enough to keep them in Idaho.

This issue is a four-alarm emergency and it goes to the very heart of who we are as a community and what we want for the generations to come.

So it’s time for Msrs. Appleton, Stolworthy, Jewell and Hodges and Ms. Woods, among others, to have a come-to-Jesus meeting with Idaho’s political leadership.

Idaho can’t wait any longer for change.

Our view:
Bottom line: Idaho’s public education system doesn’t get it done. So what are we going to do about it?

Taxing the Wall Street casino

Remember the May 6 stock market “flash crash,” when the Dow plummeted nearly 1,000 points in less than half an hour? The experts are still scratching their heads over the exact cause of that historic market bungee jump.

What is clear is that such a plunge would never have happened without the explosion of automated high-frequency trading, which now accounts for 50 percent to 75 percent of daily stock trades.

How does it work? Financial firms program computers to trade millions of shares every second based on certain triggers, such as when a stock drops or rises a certain percent. Like so much of what happens on Wall Street, this financial activity has little to do with what’s actually happening in the economy. It’s about following market trends, whether they are rational, irrational, or the result of human error.

One way to encourage investors to go back to thinking with their heads would be to place a small tax on each trade of stock, derivatives, currency and other financial assets. A fee of a quarter of 1 percent or less would be virtually unnoticeable to ordinary investors. But for the big-time stock-flippers and derivatives dealers, it would add up.

Imagine, for example, if such a “financial speculation tax” had been in place before the flash crash. In just the 20 minutes of the wildest trading that day, it would have generated $142 million in revenue. That works out to more than $7 million per minute.

Ideally, though, a speculation tax would change behavior. It would make high flyers in the global financial casino hesitate before making short-term, high-risk gambles that put our entire economy at risk.

Since the tax would apply to each transaction, it would make purely speculative investment less profitable and encourage more long-term, patient investment.

Of course, a financial speculation tax alone wouldn’t stop those who’ve gone truly nutty with greed. Take the AIG case, for example. It’s unlikely that a tax, no matter how high, would’ve prevented the daredevil gambling that bankrupted the insurance giant and nearly drove our national economy off a cliff.

But at least Uncle Sam would have wound up with a sizeable chunk of change to invest in urgent needs. A 0.25 percent tax on AIG’s $440 billion worth of high-risk credit default swaps would’ve added up to as much as $1.1 billion. That’s enough to cover the salaries of more than 20,000 elementary school teachers for one year.

Support for financial speculation taxes is building in the United States and many countries around the world. Proposals in both the House and Senate would dedicate the substantial revenues from such taxes for jobs programs. Both bills include protections for middle class investors, such as exemptions for retirement funds and the first $100,000 in individual trades per year.

Several key European governments, including Germany and France, support such taxes, but would like the United States to take similar action. They have been pressing President Barack Obama to get on board at summits of the G-20 large economies, including one in Toronto this week.

The Wall Street casino got us into the current crisis. A tax targeting the most reckless behavior should be part of the solution.

Partnership brings prosperity to Twin Falls

The announcement last week that C3/Customer Contact Channels will hire 600-1,200 local workers and lease the former Dell building on Blue Lakes for their operations is a significant accomplishment for our community as well as the state. Economic development is a team sport. So many entities and people were involved to put this new business recruitment together in just five months, we wanted to share some insight on how and who made this a reality.

Primary credit goes to Twin Falls’ Urban Renewal Agency board and director, Melinda Anderson. Many people don’t realize that the URA is an all-volunteer board of individuals that spend hours of their time to help bring jobs to. When the URA opted to acquire the Dell building, the decision was questioned by some. Without a doubt, acquiring the building was a gutsy move by the URA. And their dedication and courage has paid off in spades.

URA’s main goal when deciding to acquire the building was job creation. Find a solid, reputable business that would hire at least as many staff as Dell with good paying jobs and do it fast. It was a formidable challenge.

Anderson contacted any and every individual, group and entity that might assist in this effort — the College of Southern Idaho, Department of Commerce, Department of Labor, SIEDO and others that might help in soliciting the right business for the center. As their marketing partner, SIEDO and Anderson met early on with CB Richard Ellis, the country’s leading commercial site locator who brought Dell to Twin Falls. The goal was to get a better understanding of the market place for call centers in this economic downturn and set an aggressive marketing strategy for the center. After soliciting proposals from a number of consultants, the URA signed a contract with Westerra Real Estate Group who signed a co-agreement with CBRE to begin heavily marketing the Dell building to prospective businesses.

While the consultants warned the URA it may take 12 months to market the building, the URA stayed aggressive in keeping the building and surrounding parking areas in tip-top shape. Certainly, that keeps the project appealing to any lookers. And it looks good for the community.

Hard work, dedication and working as a team helped recruit C3/Customer Contact Channels in half the time. The URA worked with city leaders, the Department of Labor and the College of Southern Idaho, to bring all the vital pieces together that convinced C3/Customer Contact Channels to come here. The Department of Labor quickly set up a system with numerous support staff to accept, screen and interview the huge influx of expected applicants. CSI agreed to ramp up immediately with training and facilities to get those hired ready to work in about 30 days.

The property was clean and ready for immediate move-in. And the URA developed a solid, fair agreement with C3/Customer Contact Channels on the building with caveats to protect Twin Falls if the business lease was terminated prematurely.

As the southern Idaho region has demonstrated, again and again with business recruitment or existing business expansions, a true team/partnership approach in economic development pays off. C3/Customer Contact Channels’s recruitment is a perfect example. Everything that had to be done was done. Done right and done fast.

Kudos to Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency board and its director, Melinda Anderson. Without the URA and its leadership, we would not have had this success. We agree with the editorial that ran in the Times-News last Thursday. This is something worth celebrating.

Oil spill impact may be less than doomsayers think

Two months have passed since the blowout of the BP exploratory Macondo well in the Gulf of Mexico. Much more is now known about a string of fateful decisions taken in the course of drilling this well. Individually, none of BP's decisions would have caused the blowout, but their confluence led almost inevitably to the largest oil-related tragedy in U.S. history. Eleven people have died, a whole coastal region of the Gulf of Mexico has been devastated and it is uncertain that BP will survive the ordeal. There is some good news, however: Most of the oil and gas spewing from the failed well is now being captured by BP engineers. Here is why. On June 17, video feeds showed oil and gas to be still escaping from the containment hat attached to the failed blowout preventer on top of the well. The brown part of the plume consists of oil droplets, while the white bubbles are gas encapsulated in hydrate ice skins. These ice-gas bubbles eventually dissolve in seawater, thus they never reach the ocean surface. I have watched the BP video feeds for weeks. The plume currently overflowing the top hat is significantly smaller and less violent than the initial oil and gas plume emanating from the broken riser. This suggests that a large portion of the well flow is now being produced in a controlled fashion. On June 16, BP finally managed to connect the choke and kill lines below the BOP to a surface collection system onboard the Q4000 vessel. Both production lines (the top-hat riser and the choke-and-kill line riser) are capable of collecting around 25,000 barrels of oil and 30 million standard cubic feet of gas daily. Correcting volumes for the pressure difference between the sea bottom and the surface, the total flow of oil and gas through the BOP should be about 35,000 barrels a day, not 60,000 barrels a day as some claim. There are two reasons why the oil flow rate from the failed BP well may have increased from the initial 9,000 to 22,000 barrels a day, the amount estimated to have been leaking in May. First, the partially closed rams and rubber rings functioning as flow barriers in the BOP may have been eroded by oil and gas, and perhaps sand. Second, "wormholes," or meandering flow tubes that connect the reservoir and the well, may have formed. "Wormholes" are created when sandstone crumbles and washes away because either the oil and gas flow rate is high, or the reservoir oil is highly viscous, like cold molasses. The combined effect of rock and well erosion might have increased oil flow from about 20,000 to 30,000 barrels a day. The physics of this phenomenon, akin to washing soil away by rain, is nicely described on The Oil Drum website. Gas is an additional 50 percent of the total flow and is often conflated with the oil flow. As indicated at the beginning, gas dissolves in the seawater at depth and doesn't reach the ocean surface. For the sake of perspective, consider the BP Thunder Horse platform, the world's largest semi-submersible facility. Prior to the disastrous spill it was also the most productive platform in the Gulf of Mexico, located in water that's about 6,050 feet deep. As of March 20, 2009, daily production at this platform was approximately 260,000 barrels of oil and 210.5 million standard cubic feet of natural gas a day from seven wells, an average of 37,000 barrels of oil and 30 million standard cubic feet of gas per well. The former Minerals Management Service reports that the majority of ultra-deepwater wells in the Gulf of Mexico produce around 20,000 barrels of oil a day, with the best well in the entire region producing 41,000 barrels a day. Unless there has been a complete failure of the central 7-inch production casing — which I don't believe has occurred — then no reason exists to believe the failed Macondo well is producing 60,000 barrels of oil a day. Based on the available information and calculations, it is highly probable that the failed BP well is producing oil at a rate that is closer to 20,000 or 30,000 barrels of oil a day. If BP is currently collecting 25,000 barrels a day, then only some 5,000 barrels of oil are being spilled in the Gulf waters. Based on the evidence presented thus far, it seems quite unlikely that 60,000 to 150,000 barrels of oil a day will ever flow from the Macondo well. By controlling the spill rate, BP has gained the breathing room required to successfully complete the bottom kill using the relief wells. I anxiously await the good news that the Macondo well has ceased flowing. Tadeusz W. Patzek is chairman of the petroleum and geosystems engineering department at the University of Texas-Austin. Iraq reverting to its former freedom-less ways

As American troops withdraw from Iraq this summer, expect the democratic freedoms Iraqis have enjoyed in recent years to recede as well. Already, the Iraqi government is restricting freedom of the press, expression and assembly. It's toying with Web censorship, torturing political prisoners and killing political opponents. Even with all of that, Iraq remains freer than every other Arab state, except Lebanon. The United States wrote democratic freedoms into Iraq's constitution, including protections for women and minorities — offering as a tacit guarantee the active presence of 150,000 American troops. But now the guarantors are leaving. A large part of the problem is corruption. Under American stewardship, Iraq has grown to be one of the half-dozen most corrupt nations on Earth. "Significant widespread corruption" afflicts "all levels of government," the State Department says. "We are controlled and censored," Faris Fadhil Sultan told me. He's a reporter for Al-Arabiya television in Iraq. "The government can exert its will on reporters through criminal charges or suspension from work — even kidnapping and killing." Iraqi reporters are intimidated into compliance — even when Western journalists found that government officials had embezzled $13 billion in American reconstruction funds. That is a tactical problem for Iraqi democracy. A larger, strategic, problem lies in the certainty of history. After the United States invaded Iraq in 2003, the Bush administration came up with the plan to bestow Iraqis with a great gift: Democracy. Freedom! But a nearly inviolable rule governs this arena: Democracy cannot be imposed on any nation unless its people and its leaders all are asking for it. Otherwise the nation's oligarchy will fight to restore the old order of things, to protect their positions and perquisites. It happens every time. All of that is made even worse when sectarian divisions smolder under the heavy foot of an oppressive government — only to flare up once the government falls. That's what's happening in Kyrgyzstan right now. Of course, that's been a fundamental part of Iraq's problem from the start. Afghanistan, another state where Bush tried to bestow the gift of freedom, offers a vivid demonstration of this rule. Like Iraq, Afghanistan had no history of democracy — and dozens, if not hundreds, of unelected warlords who stood to lose everything if local leaders were elected. And, like Iraq, Afghanistan is thoroughly corrupt. Democracy there stands not a chance. A generation earlier, the United States imposed democracy on Nicaragua after fighting the Contra war against the Marxist Sandinista government and its leader, Daniel Ortega. The country held its first free election, ever, in 1990. But Ortega, the ultimate oligarch, was still around. He manipulated the electoral system so he could win office with only 35 percent of the vote and then faked a Supreme Court decision exempting him from term limits. So much for democracy there. The granddaddy of democracy efforts was Cambodia. The United Nations occupied the nation for two years in the early 1990s and staged elections in a nation that had been ruled by kings or dictators for all of time. But the previous king and the rest of the oligarchy were still there. They all fought to undermine the election results as soon as they were announced and pulled the country back into dictatorship almost without pause. There it remains today. The Iraqi people already hold their own leaders in such low regard that even two violent attempted bank robberies in the last week are raising eyebrows and malicious rumors — rampant speculation around the country that al-Maliki had engineered the attacks so that his minions could wipe out evidence of his fraudulent funds transfers, just in case he fails to return to office once the never-ending electoral-debate is settled. As it is, the Iraqi people are well aware of how richly their leaders reward themselves, even before dipping into the till. Members of Iraq's Parliament pay themselves $112,000 a year. The nation's average income is about $2,200. It seems all but certain. Another nation given a chance to be free is slipping almost effortlessly back into old patterns of behavior, as if drawn by inertia. Soon, after the Americans leave, the last vestiges of freedom will begin to disappear. Magic Valley Rural Training Track

The Magic Valley Rural Training Track, established in 2008, is a branch of the Family Medicine Residency of Idaho, designed for broad-spectrum rural family medicine training. Residents serve with the physician team in the Jerome community and on rotations with specialists in the Twin Falls area. Evidence shows that newly-graduated doctors are more comfortable practicing in a setting similar to their residency experience. Of the nine graduates to date in the sister program in Caldwell, 60 percent are practicing in Idaho and 70 percent are serving in rural areas.

You are cordially invited to a Welcoming Reception for Jeanette Walker, MD the first family medicine resident in the newly-created Magic Valley Rural Training Track Wednesday, June 30th, 2010 5:30-7:00 p.m.

FOUNDING FATHERS AND FRESH FRUIT

We all know that the 4th of July and fresh, ripe cherries go together like Laverne and Shirley, which puts an ironic twist on that old familiar story of George Washington and the cherry tree. Why on earth would the Father of Our Country decide to chop down a tree that produces such a delicious treat—instead of, say, mangling a gooseberry bush or trampling a bunch of artichoke plants? If he'd done either of those things, his dad probably would have patted him on the back and raised his allowance. So this year, as you celebrate our nation's independence by remembering great men like George Washington and munching on some fresh, juicy cherries from Swensen's Market, we'll forgive you for wondering, even for an instant, what George Washington possibly could have been thinking when he cut down that tree.

No shortage of applications for call center

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

There is no shortage of applications for more than 600 jobs at the new C3 call center in Twin Falls.

In one day alone, the company received more than 400 applications through the Idaho Department of Labor's online job search site, said Bob Tenzer, C3 senior vice-president and human resources.

Applicants are coming from outside the Magic Valley and even Idaho.

C3 is currently working with the labor department to recruit training staff, supervisors and managers for the call center. New hires will be trained at both the College of Southern Idaho and the C3 Center in their respective duties.

Those duties will be molded around the needs of the company's clients, Tenzer said.

"Our clients have specific needs and they want to be represented in a specific way, so all our training is done around their requirements," he said. "Flexibility is going to be really important because training will be ongoing as our clients' needs change."

CSI has been told to prepare for up to 40 managers and more than 600 C3 employees in classrooms starting in early September.

Todd Schwarz, instructional dean at CSI, said the college will make five rooms available for the company's training needs.

Training will prepare nearly one third of the employees to be insurance agents in all 50 states. Employees will work as customer-service representatives, licensed insurance agents and in management positions.

Wages for insurance agents will run between $8.50 and $11.50 per hour, and supervisor and management positions will pay more, Tenzer said. He said pay for managers and supervisors will be based on experience. All jobs will include benefits.

"We hope to have our staff of trainers, supervisors and managers up and running as early as the end of July," Tenzer said.

Pump prices in Idaho remain stable

Gas prices higher this year, but plenty of Idahoans expected to travel

Times-News

BOISE — Gas prices are 19 cents higher than a year ago and 14 cents higher than the national average price, but plenty of Idahoans will be traveling to make the most of the Fourth of July weekend, according to AAA Idaho.

Based on AAA's Daily Fuel Gauge Report, Idahoans are paying an average $2.90 a gallon for regular unleaded, compared to a national average price of $2.76.

Oil prices have been up and down in recent months, taking cues from the weather, the European debt crisis and every tidbit of information about the US economic recovery. Still, AAA expects pump prices should be fairly stable heading into the holiday.

"The gap between Idaho's average price and the national average price has closed somewhat in the past few weeks, but Idahoans are still paying 14 cents more a gallon than their national counterparts," according to AAA Idaho Spokesman Dave Carlson.

The travel organization says it expects a 19 percent increase in the number of travelers originating travel in Idaho and other Mountain states. That's two percent more than the 17 percent increase in total U.S. travel AAA expects for the July 4 holiday period.

Higher regional gas prices notwithstanding, AAA and Boston-based consultant IHS Global Insights also expect Idahoans will take longer trips. Thirty-seven percent of travelers in this region will travel between 400 and 700 miles during the holiday. For the rest of the country, just 17 percent of travelers will travel that far.

"Within our own borders, motorists will find a large range of pump prices," Carlson said. "That may say something about the level and intensity of regional competition among retailers."

House extends homebuyer credit another 3 months

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Homebuyers would get an extra three months to complete their purchases and qualify for a generous tax credit under a bill overwhelmingly passed by the House on Tuesday.

Under current law, homebuyers who signed purchase agreements by April 30 have until Wednesday to close on the sale to qualify for tax credits of up to $8,000. The bill would give buyers until Sept. 30 to complete their purchases.

The extended deadline only applies to people who signed purchase agreements by April 30. The National Association of Realtors estimates that about 180,000 homebuyers who already signed purchase agreements are likely to miss the Wednesday deadline.

"We owe this to the people who have essentially followed the rules who are caught by a closing date," said Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The bill passed 409-5. It now goes to the Senate, where Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., has sponsored a similar measure.

The popular tax credit has helped to stabilize the nation's slumping housing market. More than 2.6 million taxpayers claimed the tax credit through April — claiming $18.7 billion — according to the Internal Revenue Service.

The Realtors group says the tax credit has generated 1 million new home sales that wouldn't have happened otherwise.

The tax credit for first-time homebuyers was part of President Barack Obama's economic recovery package enacted last year. In November, Congress extended the credit and expanded it to longtime owners who bought new homes. First-time buyers were eligible for a tax credit of up to $8,000. Current owners who bought and moved into another home could qualify for a credit of up to $6,500.

The Realtors group has been pushing hard in Congress for the extension.

Stocks skid on renewed fears of global slowdown

By Tim Paradis
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — No matter where they look, investors are seeing economic trouble.

Stocks and interest rates plunged Tuesday after signs of slowing economies from China to the U.S. spooked traders who were already uneasy about a global recovery. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 268 points, or 2.7 percent, and dropped below 10,000. The benchmark Standard & Poor's 500 index dropped 3.1 percent to close at its lowest level since October.

Interest rates fell in the Treasury market after demand for the safety of government debt grew. The yield on the 10-year note dropped to 2.95 percent, the first time it has fallen below 3 percent since April 2009, when the markets were in the early stages of their recovery from the financial crisis. The yield is used as a benchmark for many consumer loans and mortgages. The yield on the two-year note hit a new low.

The markets began the day by following Asian and European stocks lower. Asian exchanges fell after an index that forecasts economic activity for China was revised lower. European stocks continued the slide after Greek workers walked off the job to protest steep tain Samsung Blu-ray players and TVs. It's coming soon to Sony Corp.'s PlayStation 3 and some of its TVs and Blu-ray players, and there are plans to launch on Microsoft Corp.'s Xbox early next year.

"More wherever. More whenever. Than ever," the company says in an explanatory video.

The long-awaited move should be a boon to Hulu's corporate parents: News Corp., General Electric Co.'s NBC Universal, The Walt Disney Co. and Providence

Equity Partners.

The paid section will show the same number of ads to viewers as on the free site, but it has more content. Subscribers can watch shows in high definition. Automaker Nissan Motor Co. and Anheuser-Busch InBev SA are advertising partners for the launch.

Keeping ads helps keep the monthly subscription fee low, Hulu CEO Jason Kilar wrote on Hulu's blog.

"For our end users, we're offering them the most convenient way to access their favorite shows, on devices they love, in high definition, at a fair price," he wrote. "For our content partners, we offer revenues that compensate them fairly for bearing the cost of producing the shows we love."

Gun law challenges likely after Supreme Court ruling

By Mark Sherman
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — State or local gun laws that prohibit people from carrying firearms outside the home and onerous registration requirements are the most likely to be struck down by judges following the Supreme Court's latest decision supporting the right to keep and bear arms.

An explosion of cases will keep courts busy for years defining gun control's new limits now that the high court has ruled that wherever they live, Americans have a right to possess guns, at least for self-defense in the home.

Justice Samuel Alito, author of the majority opinion Monday, dismissed "doomsday proclamations" that all gun laws would be struck down. Alito essentially repeated the formulation used by Justice Antonin Scalia two years ago that the court was not calling into question "long-standing prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons or the mentally ill, or laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings."

But the justices left a lot of ground for other courts to cover in determining the constitutional limits on gun laws. Legal challenges already are pending against several state and big-city gun laws.

Among other laws already facing lawsuits or expected to be challenged:

- Age limits that bar people younger than 21 from buying or owning guns.

- Lockbox and trigger-lock requirements to keep guns away from children.

- One-gun-a-month purchase limits in California, Maryland, New Jersey and Virginia.

- Georgia's prohibition on carrying guns into churches.

- Bans on guns in bars.

- California's outlawing of certain handguns.

- Assault weapons and ammunition bans.

- Federal and state prohibitions aimed at keeping domestic violence offenders from having guns.

Local officials around the country professed confidence that their regulations would hold up under legal scrutiny, but many scholars were not so sure.

"I think a lot of these will fall," said Temple University law professor David Kairys, a gun control proponent. "Can you limit people's ability to carry concealed weapons, or open weapons? That's noticeably absent from the majority's list of what you can do?"

Eugene Volokh, a UCLA law school professor who has written extensively on these constitutional issues, predicted challenges to the ban on assault rifles will fail because judges will conclude that people still will be "free to have lots and lots of guns."

Cleanup ships idled as storms hit Gulf region

By Mary Foster and Tom Breen
Associated Press writers

GRAND ISLE, La. — The crashing waves and gusting winds churned up by Tropical Storm Alex put the Gulf oil spill largely in Mother Nature's hands Tuesday. Regardless of whether the storm makes things worse or even better, it has turned many people fighting the spill into spectators.

Oil-scooping ships in the Gulf of Mexico steamed to safe refuge because of the rough seas, which likely will last for days. Officials scrambled to reposition boom to protect the coast, and had to remove barges that had been blocking oil from reaching sensitive wetlands.

Those operations could soon get a boost, as the U.S. accepted offers of help from 12 countries and international organizations. Japan, for instance, was sending two skimmers and boom.

Alex is projected to stay far from the spill zone and is not expected to affect recovery efforts at the site of the blown-out well. But the storm's outer edges complicated the cleanup as the oil turned whitecaps red.

Waves were as high as 12 feet in parts of the Gulf, according to the National Weather Service.

U.S. Coast Guard Lt. Dave French said all skimming efforts had been halted for now off the Louisiana coast. Wayne Hebert, who helps manage skimming operations for BP PLC, said all nearshore skimmers were idled off the coasts of Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

"Everyone is in because of weather, whether it's thunderstorms or (high) seas," Hebert said.

French said workers were using the time off the water to replenish supplies and perform maintenance work.

In Grand Isle, dozens of boats, from skiffs up to huge shrimp boats, were tied up at the docks, rocked by waves even in the sheltered marina.

NEW YORK — Larry King, who interviewed statesmen and stars from a prime-time perch at CNN for 25 years but has faded in ratings and influence lately, said Tuesday that he will step down this fall from his nightly show.

"It's time to hang up my nightly suspenders," King said in a message sent to fans via Twitter.

King said he will do occasional specials for CNN. He marked his 25th anniversary on the air this month and takes pride in a Guinness Book of World Records citation for hosting the longest-running show on the same network in the same time slot.

The longtime radio host was a pioneer in cable television. From the first show where he interviewed then-New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, King's desk was considered a valued spot for anyone interested in talking to the nation. King's interview style was plain-spoken and critics would suggest occasionally ill-prepared, but he was good at making his guests feel comfortable.

"He lured so many people to this new frontier of cable back before anybody understood what it was all about," said CNN U.S. President Jon Klein, who called King a "living, breathing Hall of Famer who is still doing the work."

King said he felt no pressure from CNN to leave. He said he began thinking about stepping down as his 25th anniversary week ended earlier this month, on the airplane home after interviewing basketball star LeBron James. During that week, he also spoke to Bill Gates, President Obama and Lady Gaga — an apt example of the mix that he always sought on his show.

"I said, 'I can't top this,'" King said in an interview Tuesday.

"I'm tired of the nightly grind," he said. "I do want to do other things but I want to stay at CNN in some way ... There's a case of great mixed emotions."

King told his staff during a conference call Tuesday that he called "one of the saddest 10 minutes of my life."

CNN is in the midst of remaking its prime-time lineup and last week announced that former New York Gov. Eliot Spitzer and conservative columnist Kathleen Parker would co-host an 8 p.m. EDT show on politics and current events.

The network will now begin concentrating on potential successors. Klein said he wanted to continue with provocative newsmaker interviews in the time slot.

Kagan seems to appeal to both sides at confirmation hearing

By Amy Goldstein and Alec MacGillis
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Elena Kagan told the Senate Judiciary Committee on Tuesday that her political outlook is "generally progressive," but the glimpses she offered of her legal views defied Republican efforts to pigeonhole the type of Supreme Court justice she would be.

During the first day of questioning at her confirmation hearings, Kagan said that she respects legal precedent that upholds people's right to own guns and that she supports the use of military commissions to prosecute enemy combatants — positions favored by many conservatives.

But she also suggested that a controversial requirement in the new federal health-care law that most Americans obtain coverage has a legal basis — a question that is likely to come before the courts. She indicated that she differed with a recent Supreme Court decision that struck down limits on corporate contributions to political campaigns. And she adamantly defended her reluctance as a Harvard Law School dean to sponsor military recruiters on campus because of the ban on openly gay men and women serving in the armed forces.

During more than eight hours of friendly questions by Democratic senators and sharper grilling by Republicans, Kagan, 50, remained somewhat guarded. At times, she retreated into broad statements about the workings of the Constitution or recited legal precedent on polarizing questions without divulging her personal views. Nevertheless, for a nominee who has spent her career in government and academia — without displaying much of an ideology — her testimony provided the strongest clues to date of her beliefs.

Kagan noted that she has worked for two Democratic presidents, including currently as President Obama's solicitor general. But at several points during the hearings, she played to conservatives. She said she has "the greatest admiration" for Justice Antonin Scalia, one of the high court's most conservative members. She lauded as "a great lawyer and a great human being" Miguel Estrada, a prominent conservative who has been a GOP cause celebre since President George W. Bush nominated him as an appellate judge was thwarted by Senate Democrats. And she said that military lawyers she has worked with have been "stunningly good."

Such an explicit bipartisan appeal was a central theme of Kagan's performance as the televised hearings provided Americans the first opportunity to hear from her since her nomination in May to become the 112th justice — and the fourth woman — to serve on the nation's highest court.

Her demeanor contrasted markedly with that on Monday, the first day of the hearings, when she sat silently for hours, wearing a slightly uncomfortable expression, until she somberly read a prepared opening statement. On Tuesday, she loosened up. She smiled. She showed frequent flashes of wit.

At one point, Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., introduced a line of questioning about Miranda rights and military commissions by recalling the unsuccessful attempt to bomb an airplane last Christmas. He asked the nominee where she was on Christmas Day. "You know, like all Jews, I was probably at a Chinese restaurant," she replied, as the other senators and audience members in the hearing room burst into laughter.

During the pointed questions of several of the committee's Republicans, Kagan did not appear stumped at any point, nor did she commit any obvious gaffes. The committee, which has a 12-7 Democratic majority, is almost certain to forward her nomination to the full Senate, which probably will schedule a final vote in late July. By the end of the afternoon, Sen. Tom Coburn, R-Okla., one of the panel's most conservative members, told Kagan that she is smart and "tough as nails."

The hearing will resume at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

Kagan rebutted Republicans' efforts to tie her to the left. "(My) politics would be, must be, have to be completely separate from my judging," she said.

Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., prodded her to talk about the extent to which she had absorbed the values of one of her mentors, Justice Thurgood Marshall, for whom she clerked, including his belief in the law as a tool to help "the little guy." Kagan sidestepped the question. "The courts are open to all people and will listen respectfully with attention to all claims," she said. "I love Justice Marshall. He did an enormous amount for me. But if you confirm me to this position, you will get Justice Kagan. You won't get Justice Marshall."

Russian spy suspects had interests in science, finance

By Samantha Henry, Pete Yost and David B. Caruso
Associated Press writers

MONTCLAIR, N.J. — One hobnobbed with academics and entrepreneurs who shared his interest in cutting-edge science. Another spoke five languages, went to embassy parties and was fascinated by global politics. A third held herself out to be a venture capitalist and hit the networking circuit, looking for investment opportunities.

The 11 people arrested and accused of being members of a Russian spy ring operating under deep cover in America's suburbs appear to have been part of a slow and patient plan by Moscow to cultivate contacts in the U.S. who could yield vital competitive information — not necessarily on weapons or U.S. strategic planning, but on finance, business and technology, intelligence experts say.

"This is a long-term investment by an intelligence service to lead those individuals there, give them general assignments and see what they can pick up," said John Slattery, a deputy assistant director of counterintelligence at the FBI who retired in 2008 and is now an executive with BAE Systems Intelligence and Security.

"Although they aren't trained intelligence professionals, they are available and on call for assignments such as: Can you go attend this trade show? Can you go attend this trade show? Can you contact this person? Could you maybe enroll in this university? And then elevate the access as they go."

Ten members of the alleged ring were arrested across the Northeast and charged Monday with failing to register as foreign agents, a crime that is less serious than espionage and carries up to five years in prison. Some also face money laundering charges. An 11th suspect was arrested in Cyprus, accused of passing money to the spies over several years.

Prosecutors said several of the defendants were Russians living in the U.S. under assumed names and posing as Canadian or American citizens. It was unclear how and where they were recruited, but court papers said the operation went back as far as the 1990s. Exactly what sort of information the alleged agents provided to their Russian handlers — and how valuable it may have been — was not disclosed.

The FBI finally moved in to break up the ring because one of the suspects — apparently a woman who called herself

Anna Chapman, who was bound for Moscow, according to court papers — was going to leave the country, the Justice Department said.

The arrests flabbergasted many of the defendants' neighbors. In a case that seemed to have come straight out of a Cold War spy novel or a Hitchcock thriller, many of the defendants lived what seemed to be utterly ordinary suburban lives — saying goodbye to their kids at the bus stop, taking pride in their well-kept lawns and flower beds, making small talk with the neighbors, even holding Fourth of July parties.

Mexican election goes ahead despite candidate's slaying

By Olga R. Rodriguez
Associated Press writer

CIUDAD VICTORIA, Mexico — Drug cartels fund a tenth of Mexico's economy. They have infiltrated many local and state police forces and staged assaults on army bases. Now they're violently inserting themselves into politics, killing the leading candidate for governor of a northern state only days before Sunday's elections in 12 states.

The assassination of Rodolfo Torre in the border state of Tamaulipas on Monday capped the deadliest month yet in President Felipe Calderon's military-led offensive against drug traffickers.

Carefully planned attacks — including an ambush that killed 12 federal police officers — have served as chilling reminders that Mexico's drug cartels can get to anyone, anywhere, armed with sophisticated weaponry and billions of dollars to pay off informants. Mexican officials said Sunday's voting would go forward as planned, including in Tamaulipas, where Torre's replacement as candidate of the Institutional Revolutionary Party had not even been named.

But even as Calderon's government urged citizens to stand up to the cartels by turning out to vote, Mexicans increasingly see the cartels — not Calderon — as having the upper hand.

"Organized crime has voted," the national newspaper Reforma wrote in a front-page editorial Tuesday. "What's the point of having elections when a de-facto power is imposing its will over the will of citizens?"

Throughout Mexico, the cartels have had a strong impact on this year's campaigning. The mayor of Cancun, who was running for governor of Quintana Roo state, was arrested last month on charges of protecting two cartels. In Sinaloa and other states, assailants have lobbed grenades at party offices. And rumors abound about candidates who just might be on the take from one or another of the powerful drug organizations.

The assault on Torre's campaign caravan was typical of a cartel hit. Gunmen intercepted his convoy as it headed to the airport, indicating they knew exactly when he would be passing by. The body of the candidate and four others in the caravan lay strewn on the street, suggesting they had tried to flee.

Mexicans took the hit to be part of a feud between the Gulf cartel and a gang of hit men who split from it known as the Zetas, who have been battling in Tamaulipas this year.

Petraeus heads for easy confirmation in Senate

By David S. Cloud
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON (MCT) — The nomination of Gen. David H. Petraeus to take over command of the Afghan war headed toward quick Senate confirmation after he played down differences Tuesday between military and civilians officials over the July 2011 deadline for the start of U.S. troop withdrawals.

Petraeus made clear during a three-hour confirmation hearing that he was wary of withdrawing large numbers of U.S. troops from Afghanistan too quickly, and did not rule out prospects that he would ask President Obama for additional troops if security conditions worsen.

"There will be an assessment at the end of this year after which undoubtedly we'll make certain tweaks, refinements, perhaps some significant changes," Petraeus told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The committee approved his nomination Tuesday afternoon and the full Senate was set to vote today.

Petraeus was chosen last week by Obama to take command in Afghanistan after the previous commander, Gen. Stanley A. McChrystal, was fired over comments he and his several aides made in a Rolling Stone article.

Google may lose Internet license in China

By Joe McDonald and Michael Liedtke
Associated Press writers

BEIJING — China is threatening to revoke Google's business license over the company's decision to redirect Chinese traffic to computers in Hong Kong that are not governed by the communist government's censorship practices.

The latest skirmish between Beijing and the Internet search leader threatens to cripple the company in one of the Web's biggest markets.

Google agreed Tuesday to dismantle the virtual bridge to its Hong site that was created in March, but it was unclear whether that will be enough to stay in business in China. The license is required for the company to continue providing its mapping and music services in China.

Google hopes to keep its license by turning its Chinese website into a so-called "landing page" anchored by a link that users must click on to send visitors to the Hong Kong search service. The company has no plans to revert back to its previous practice of omitting search results that the Chinese government considers subversive or pornographic.

"This new approach is consistent with our commitment not to self-censor and, we believe, with local law," David Drummond, Google's top lawyer, wrote in a blog post.

A foreign ministry spokesman, Qin Gang, said he had not seen Google's announcement and could not comment on it.

However, he added, "I would like to stress that the Chinese government encourages foreign enterprises to operate in China according to law."

The impasse could drag on for months, analysts predicted, as both Google and the Chinese government jostle in a heavy-weight wrestling match unfolding on an international stage.

MAKING DOUGH

Photos by ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Jane Slickers fills dough with a mixture of spinach, garlic, ricotta, bacon and Parmesan and uses a ravioli press to make the tasty pasta at her Twin Falls home.

Pasta from scratch is easier than you'd think

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

The ingredients are basically the same: eggs and flour. And the process isn't that hard: knead the ingredients until they're the right texture, make a shape, and boil it until it floats.

Fresh pasta is inexpensive, simple to customize and not nearly as difficult as you might imagine, and many cooks across south-central Idaho are turning to the Mediterranean staple.

"It's one of the simplest things in the world to make; it's all about the feel of the dough," said Don Nocito of East Fork, whose Italian parents frequently made fresh pasta in their Philadelphia home. "They had to cook from scratch because it was the least expensive way to go."

Nocito went to his grandmother's house on Sundays to watch her make noodles, which were cut on a frame made from a board, nails and piano wire.

"My grandmother always taught me you fold it in half away from you, turn it 90 degrees, fold it in half and knead it. At one point that dough will feel like silk, it'll get so smooth, and you just stop and cover it and let it rest," he said.

Some pasta makers choose traditional hand tools like rolling pins, bench knives and drying sticks. But today, there are machines to knead, machines to flatten, and machines to cut, and many cooks turn to one or more of them to ease the process.

"It's hard to get it thin enough with a rolling pin unless you're an expert at it," said Jane Slickers of Twin Falls. She attended a class at Rudy's with friends to learn the basics of pasta making, and the group frequently gets together for pasta parties, where everyone brings machines and ingredients to cook, and tastes each other's recipes.

Like most who make pasta, Slickers said getting

Run dough through the pasta machine a number of times to get it thin enough to make ravioli, Jane Slickers says.

the proportions of ingredients right — especially given Idaho's altitude and dry environment — is a matter of trial and error. Some cooks believe chilling the dough is the secret, while others simply let it rest.

"I Google-searched basic egg noodles, and my friend gave me a cookbook that had a basic recipe in it," said Jeff Meyer of Hailey, who turned to fresh pasta to save on his family's food budget. "With this altitude it turned out like a brick, so I cut down flour and added an extra egg, and it turned out perfect."

Eric Ettesvold of Twin Falls was inspired by Food Network chef Mario Batali and often adds herbs, spices or pureed vegetables to his pasta. He has had the most success with powders, including pulverized dried mushrooms and dried tomatoes, although his favorite is simple cracked black pepper.

"There is definitely a learning curve, but once you try a half-dozen batches you'll feel comfortable with

See PASTA, Food 2

RECIPE

From Eric Ettesvold of Twin Falls:
BASIC PASTA DOUGH
Makes 1 pound.

3 1/2 cups unbleached all-purpose flour
4 extra-large eggs
1/2 teaspoon olive oil

Mound flour in center of wooden cutting board.

Make a well in the middle of the flour and add the eggs and olive oil.

Using a fork, beat the eggs and oil together and incorporate the flour starting with the inner rim of the well.

Keep pushing the flour up from the base of the well to retain the well shape.

This will look messy, but the dough will come together when half the flour is incorporated.

Knead the dough using the palms of your hands, and once you have a solid mass, remove from cutting board and scrape clean. Lightly flour board and knead for about six minutes, or until the dough becomes sticky. Wrap the dough in plastic and let rest for 30 minutes.

Divide into four portions and roll out to the thinnest setting on pasta machine.

Variations: For green pasta, add 6 ounces chopped spinach squeezed very dry, to the dough. To infuse pasta with herbs or cooked vegetables, chop or puree them to the texture of flour, and add 2-3 tablespoons per pound of pasta to the egg mixture. If the pasta seems too wet, add a little extra flour. Black pepper pasta with 2 tablespoons of coarse ground black pepper is one of Ettesvold's favorites.

Fat: The secret ingredient to a tasty lean burger

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

When it comes to ground meat (or most any meats for that matter), it's a simple equation: fat equals flavor and moisture. It would follow then that a low-fat burger should be dry and tasteless, right? Not necessarily.

While it may be tempting to go for 90 or 95 percent lean ground beef or turkey when crafting a leaner burger, the results will be disappointing. A better choice is to use a juicier 85 percent lean meat and find other ways to cut the fat.

The secret is in knowing how to pad your patty by using some healthful ingredients mixed into the ground meat that can enhance the flavor while also reducing the amount of meat (and fat) in each burger.

Ingredients such as whole-grain breadcrumbs, couscous or prepared bulgur often are used for making meatballs and meatloaves, and they work just as well in burgers, too.

As a rule of thumb, it's best not to add filler at more than a one-to-three ratio to the meat; otherwise the hamburger patties will tend to fall apart, especially on the grill. Dry ingredients also tend to work better than moist ones.

The right filler, like the mashed black beans and sauteed onions in this burger, will help keep a lower-fat burger moist and flavorful.

If you'd like to use vegetables to bulk up your burgers, it's best to drain the ingredients well. For instance, you can use flavor-packed roasted red peppers or sun-dried tomatoes, but be sure to thoroughly blot away any excess packing liquids with paper towels before chopping and adding to your meat.

This recipe for chili turkey burgers uses black beans to reduce fat while adding extra bulk and fiber. The beans are mashed with sauteed onion and garlic that have been spiced with ground cumin and minced jalapeno. This mixture then is combined with lean ground turkey (not the 99-percent lean kind!), and a few tablespoons of tomato paste for a touch of acidity and extra binding power.

For more daring palates, you can jack up the heat by adding a few more chilies, a few dashes of your favorite hot sauce or using habaneros instead of the tamer jalapenos.

CHILI TURKEY BURGERS

Start to finish: 35 minutes.
Servings: 4.

- 1 teaspoon canola oil
- 1 small sweet onion, finely chopped
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 jalapeno pepper, seeded and minced
- 2 teaspoons ground cumin
- 3/4 cup canned black beans, rinsed
- 2 slices firm whole-wheat bread, torn into small pieces
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 pound lean ground turkey
- 4 whole-grain hamburger buns
- Tomato salsa, for topping
- Shredded lettuce, for topping

In a small nonstick skillet over medium, heat the oil. Add the onion and saute until lightly colored, about 4 minutes. Add the garlic, jalapeno and cumin. Cook, stirring often, until fragrant, 1 to 2 minutes longer. Transfer to a dish to cool.

Heat a gas grill to medium-high or light a charcoal fire.

Meanwhile, in a food processor, combine the beans, bread and tomato paste. Pulse until well mashed, then add the cilantro, salt, pepper and the reserved onion mixture. Pulse several more times, then transfer to a bowl. Add the ground turkey, mix well, then shape into four 3/4-inch-thick patties.

Grill the burgers until they register 165 degrees on an instant thermometer, about 5 minutes per side. Meanwhile, toast the buns on the edge of the grill. Serve the burgers topped with tomato salsa and shredded lettuce.

it," Ettesvold said. "I think everybody should just try to do it, once they see how easy it is; the possibilities are endless."

If flavoring the pasta itself isn't your style — "I'm a real traditionalist," said Nocito — try ravioli with fresh fillings like pureed squash and chipotle, or ricotta and spinach.

And don't forget, you don't have to eat it all immediately after you make it. Fresh pasta can be dried, and it freezes well.

"I make what they call a nest, I'll take the strands and coil them up into about fist-sized portions and then freeze them on a sheet pan, and then put them in Ziploc bags," Ettesvold said. He recommended using extra water when cooking frozen pasta, so when the noodles are added the water doesn't cool below a boil.

Drape long noodles over a wooden rod, like a thin rolling pin or a broom handle, to let them dry, Nocito said. If you're really pressed for time, he said, the fresh pasta available in grocery stores isn't bad, although it tends to have preservatives in addition to the basic ingredients.

"If you're going to make pasta and you're not real sure about what you're doing, make fresh pasta, you can't really screw up the cooking," Nocito said, bemoaning overcooked noodles. "Once it floats, take it out."

Although the process can take anywhere from 35 minutes to two hours, depending on the complexity of the recipe and whether you choose to chill the dough, pasta from scratch is sure to please.

"I don't make it as often as I like to, but when I do make it, it goes over really well," Ettesvold said. "Fresh pasta, there's nothing better."

RECIPES

From Jane Slickers of Twin Falls: BASIC PASTA

Prep time: About two hours; one hour inactive. Semolina flour has additional gluten to help the dough stretch instead of break. The water required for this recipe seems to vary a lot, Slickers says; she has used up to 8 tablespoons in dry Idaho.

- 5 ounces semolina flour
- 7 ounces all-purpose flour
- 2 eggs (lightly beaten)
- 1 teaspoon extra virgin olive oil
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 to 5 tablespoons of water

Put ingredients in a food processor. Pulse until dough starts to form a ball. If it sticks together when pinched it should be just right. Knead by hand about 5-10 times. Form a ball, flatten slightly, cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate at least one hour, then use a pasta machine to make your desired shape.

Variations: If making chipotle pasta, hold the water and add chopped chipotle pepper to taste (it's hot) plus some adobo sauce from the can. Pulse until texture is as described above.

Have fun with ravioli fillings like spinach with bacon and ricotta, or pureed Hubbard squash with pine nuts.

From Jeff Meyer of Hailey: CAPRESE PASTA

Serves 3-4 as full meal, or 5-6 as a side. Prep time: 30-45 minutes. Cook time: 2-3 minutes.

For the egg noodles:

- 2 eggs
- 1 cup plus 1/2 cup unbleached flour

Have on hand a medium-sized, raised-wall baking dish, and a clean kitchen towel.

Crack both eggs into a bowl to ensure shell-free pasta. On a well cleaned counter (36-inch square) pile 1 cup flour and make a dent in the center large enough for both eggs, with large enough edges so the egg doesn't get loose on the counter. With a fork, lightly beat eggs while slowly incorporating the flour. Continue mixing until about a quarter of the flour is mixed in, then using your hands pile in the remaining flour. Work the loose dough until all the flour is incorporated.

Continue working the dough, adding just a dusting of flour as needed to hinder the dough sticking to the counter and your hands. When the dough reaches the point of being able to knead without adding flour, work it with your palms for a few more minutes, then place in plastic wrap and wrap tightly. Let stand for five minutes. Resting lets the gluten work, making the dough elastic.

Clean the work surface of extra flour and dough pieces.

Lightly flour the work surface. Remove the elastic, slightly sticky dough from the plastic wrap, place on the floured surface and dust all sides with flour. Knead the dough with your palms for a few more minutes to excite the gluten.

Start forming the dough into a rounded rectangle with your hands, dusting only as necessary with flour. With a rolling pin continue flattening and shaping the dough until it's between 1 and 2 millimeters thick; the thinner the dough the more tender the finished noodle is.

Once to desired thickness, heavily dust the top side with flour. Start lightly folding the dough over itself in about 2-inch increments. With a sharp knife cut the roll into noodles of desired width, roughly 1/4 to 1/2 inch. After cutting a few times, immediately separate and detangle noodles. Lightly dust noodles with flour and place in baking dish as spread out as possible. Cover with kitchen towel and continue cutting.

Let rest while about 4 quarts of salted water boils.

If serving hot, prep all fresh ingredients before cooking.

For the topping:

- 2 vine-ripened tomatoes
- 8-12 fresh green basil leaves
- 4-6 ounces fresh mozzarella
- Salt and freshly cracked pepper to taste

Cut tomatoes into wedges and set aside. Stack basil leaves and roll into cigar-shaped log; hold the roll firmly on the cutting board and make 1/8 inch slices; set aside. Cube mozzarella into half-inch squares; set aside. Reduce the boiling water to a gentle bubble. Add a small handful of pasta at a time so the noodles don't stick together. The noodles initially sink but float when they are cooked; remove cooked noodles with a slotted spoon and place in large serving bowl with a small pat of butter (or extra virgin olive oil).

To the noodles add tomatoes, basil and mozzarella cubes and toss lightly. Finish with salt and pepper.

For fruit, the acid test: Made the proper way, vinegar starts with wine

By Jane Black
The Washington Post

One of my favorite summer salads is a mix of mache, chunks of peaches, fresh goat cheese, candied pecans and a few drops of my best strawberry vinegar. A few drops are all that's required, because my vinegar smells like a bowl of ripe berries left in the afternoon sun. It tastes even better than that.

I am also about to run out of it.

I bought my vinegar three years ago on a trip to southern Sweden. Knowing that I like food, our Swedish friends took us to a small farm stand that sold fruits, vegetables, preserves and half a dozen fruit vinegars. In a perfect world, I would have bought one of every kind, which included lingonberry and raspberry. But after being reminded about zealous airport security officials, I satisfied myself with one bottle. Being sensible, it turns out, is not its own reward.

Real fruit vinegar isn't easy to come by. That surprised me, at least at first. Fermented foods of all kinds ranked high on this year's list of fashionable fare, and vinegar seems a natural for those do-it-yourself types who spend the summer pickling and preserving. But making real fruit vinegar turns out to be a lot harder than it seems.

"Taking vinegar and adding berries may seem like it's making vinegar," said Albert Katz, who makes wine and apple cider vinegar in California according to the traditional Orleans method. "But it's not."

The old-fashioned way to make fruit vinegar is to press fresh fruit juice and ferment it into wine. Next, the wine is made into vinegar by adding what is known as a mother. This ghostlike mass includes a special kind of bacteria, called acetobacters, that convert the alcohol into acetic acid. What's left is the essence of the fruit brightened by a tangy bite. The

WHERE TO FIND WINE-BASED FRUIT VINEGARS

Most fruit vinegars on store shelves are infused or flavored, which gives them pretty colors but a rather insipid taste. The following vinegars are made from fruit juice fermented into wine and offer a rich intensity of flavor.

- Acetorium Fig Vinegar. The golden color belies the richness of the flavor, which is perfectly balanced. Its wine base comes from Italy's Alto Adige region, but the vinegar is made in Germany. Try it with smoked fish or a goat cheese salad. 8.5 ounces, $50; available at www.zingermans.com.
- Gegenbauer Tomato Vinegar. Austrian vinegar maker Erwin Gegenbauer produces 40 kinds of authentic fruit vinegar. We loved the tomato, which tastes like an acidified version of intense tomato water. Use a splash on steamed fish or to dress a summer tomato salad. 8.5 ounces, $27.99; prices range from $17.99 to $34.99, depending on the fruit. Available at www.gigachef.com.
- Gingras Aged Organic Cider Vinegar. This earthy, apple-y vinegar has the depth of a farm-fresh cider. Zingerman's uses it as a base for its North Carolina barbecue sauce. But it would also add zing to braised chicken or roast pork. 16.9 ounces, $20; available at www.zingermans.com.
- Katz Gravenstein Apple Cider Vinegar. A bright apple flavor with a slightly sweet finish, and priced for everyday use. Good for vinaigrettes, on braised meats or in a summer coleslaw. 12.7 ounces, $10; available at www.katzandco.com.
- Jean Marc Montegottero Vinaigre de Framboise. The intoxicating bouquet of this French vinegar is almost as rewarding as its pure raspberry flavor. Drizzle it on grilled duck, over foie gras or atop vanilla ice cream. 16.9 ounces, $16 to $19.99; available at www.dibruno.com and www.gigachef.com. Other flavors available.

process takes from six months to three years.

Grapes traditionally are used for vinegar. But just about any fruit — and some vegetables — can be made into vinegar, as Erwin Gegenbauer has proved. At his craft vinegar brewery in Vienna, Austria, he makes about 40 kinds of fruit vinegars including apricot, blueberry, elderberry, sour cherry and tomato. Much as a jam maker preserves the flavors of summer, Gegenbauer told me he wants to "preserve the flavor of the fruit by turning it into vinegar."

Unfortunately, most fruit vinegars available in the United States are not made that way. Industrially manufactured wine vinegar, which can be made in just days, is used as a base. Next, producers add whole fruit or fruit purees and leave it to steep. Others take the heretical shortcut of adding a sugary fruit syrup or fruit extract to vinegar, then dropping a few berries or lemons into the bottle to make it look pretty. No wonder Ari Weinzwieg, co-founder of gourmet food mecca Zingerman's in Ann Arbor, Mich., once called raspberry vinegar "the wine cooler of the vinegar world."

The prices reflect the craftsmanship. Wine-based fruit vinegars sell for between $15 and $50; a 16-ounce bottle of supermarket-brand cider vinegar sells for less than $1.50. That might be one of the reasons they are so hard to find. Without ever having tasted the depth and intensity of a true fruit vinegar, customers find it hard to understand why they should pay a premium. Gourmet stores that do stock real fruit vinegar often find that the bottles tend to hang around.

"It certainly doesn't fly off the shelf," said Hunter Fike, assistant general manager of DiBruno Bros in Philadelphia, which sells 8.5-ounce bottles of Jean Marc Montegottero's raspberry vinegar for $19.99. "But we have a very high rate of success when we sample it. All you have to do to understand the difference is to taste it. It's so good you can sip it straight."

Once you secure some of the good stuff, use it sparingly and with respect. Don't add it to sauces; the heat will evaporate the fruity intensity. Instead, use it as you would salt and pepper, to season and finish a dish. A few drops will lend something special to carpaccio, steamed fish, even ice cream. As for salads, there's almost no need to mix great vinegar with oil. But if you do, use a ratio of 1 to 1.

"I've laughed for years when people ask me how to make a low-fat dressing," said Zingerman's Weinzwieg. "The best one is called 'really good vinegar.'"

A summery salad for entertaining

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

Crunchy, cool celery and a tangy dressing make this dish light, fresh and summery. It is perfect for warm-weather entertaining or just a weeknight dinner.

The salad looks and tastes good when served right away, but overnight refrigeration makes the flavor even better.

CILANTRO-LIME BLACK BEAN SALAD

Makes eight 1/2-cup servings

1/2 bunch cilantro (tough stems discarded; 1 cup packed)

Finely grated zest and juice of 2 limes (2 teaspoons zest and 2 tablespoons juice)

2 tablespoons white wine vinegar

3 tablespoons olive oil

1/2 teaspoon salt, or more to taste

1 teaspoon sugar

3 cups cooked black beans (rinsed and drained, if using no-salt canned)

2 or 3 ribs celery, cut into 1/4- to 1/2-inch dice (1 cup)

3 large scallions, white and light-green parts, finely chopped (1/2 cup)

Combine the cilantro, lime zest and juice, vinegar, oil, salt and sugar in a blender; process to form a pureed dressing.

Combine the beans, celery and scallions in a large bowl; add the dressing and mix well. Let sit for 15 minutes, then stir again and taste; add salt as needed. Serve; or cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for up to 12 hours. Mix well before serving.

Mexico embraces food tourism to bring visitors

By Martha Mendoza
Associated Press writer

MEXICO CITY — They sniffed the concha rolls, scrutinized the granola, photographed the salsa and nibbled the chilaquiles, Mexico’s crunchy-warm breakfast of corn tortillas fried in eggs and tomatillo sauce.

Amidst the fresh squeezed orange juice and high-altitude sunshine at the rooftop bistro there was a buzz of excitement — and whispers of “save room for later” — as 100 chefs, journalists, researchers and foodies took their first bites of a 10-day “Aromas and Flavors” gastronomical tour of Mexico, part of the government’s latest effort to attract tourists interested in something other than beaches and pyramids.

“We’re excited to help Mexico improve its image, sharing all the richness, variety, flavors and abundance of dishes that are Mexican cuisine,” said Mexico City’s tourism director Alejandro Rojas Diaz Duran.

A typical Mexican culinary tour day starts with fresh mango and papaya, hand-beaten hot chocolate, sweet rolls in fresh double-clotted cream, eggs poached in a spicy turkey stew. As the hours pass, there are pork loin tacos, then small fried battered fish, fresh tortillas, toasted grasshoppers sprinkled with salt and lime, roasted corn on the cob dipped in chili powder, slow-cooked cow head, chicken vegetable soup and the omnipresent rice, beans, avocado and salsa.

“We’re going to eat and drink and eat and drink and eat and drink!” laughed food writer Betty Fussell, who flew in from New York, leafing through an itinerary that will take busloads of adventurous eaters through five states.

At the helm of this barely containable passel of wandering, sampling, questioning foodies is the ever-serene chef and restaurateur Patricia Quintana, Mexico’s official Cuisine Ambassador, who herds her minions from restaurant to market to museum without raising her voice or dropping her serene smile.

For Quintana, whose work is subsidized by the Mexican government, bringing gastronomical tourism to her country is a labor of love.

“Mexico offers innumable riches for tourism, but beyond the beaches, the archeological sites and the ecotourism, there’s the cuisine, which should be known throughout the world, providing magnificent opportunities for visitors,” she said.

Quintana’s tour is one of many now available to would-be tourists in Mexico. Dozens of culinary guides offer tours that can be as short as an afternoon to several weeks. Prices vary, but are typically around $350 per day including hotel rooms and lots of food. Many tours include cooking lessons, as well.

The burgeoning industry was launched last year when Mexico’s government began investing in culinary tourism as swine flu and drug cartel violence put a dent in the country’s second most lucrative industry.

In addition to subsidizing some culinary tour guides, the government has also launched a series of “culinary routes” in the country. The Thousand Flavors of the Mole route, for example, features Tlaxcala, Puebla and Oaxaca, all cities known for their history, culture and the cooking of a complex Mexican culinary specialty, mole. The routes are mapped out, with key stops identified on the way, along with hotel and restaurant recommendations.

“We know that today, more than ever, to attract tourists and enhance their stays and spending in our country, it is necessary to provide products and services with greater added value and that are differentiated according to the tastes, time and resources of each traveler,” said Mexico’s tourism director Gloria Guevara.

And culinary tours incorporate the history, visiting Diego Rivera’s murals depicting cocoa bean growers in the National Palace and dining in former home-turned museum of famed composer Jose Alfredo Jimenez, whose dishes were flavored from orange and lemons grown on trees in the garden.

But the focus is on eating. And eating.

Days begin as early as 6:30 a.m. (eggs with cactus, sweet rolls with locally grown cinnamon) and can end as late as 1 a.m. (tequila and salty nuts, fresh cheese platters, tropical fruit sorbets) with visits to chili roasters and tequila distill-

The state of Michoacan provides a verdant backdrop to our trek from the elegant city of Morelia to the pine forested home of the monarchs to the small folk art villages near Lake Patzcuaro. We experience the culinary wonders of central Mexico all along the way, but I have to say, the high point is our time spent with the one and only (Diana Kennedy), shopping, cooking and enjoying meals in her home.”

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

This chicken is authentic Appalachian

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

According to a new cookbook with a mighty down-home title, this is the way chicken is done in the southern Appalachian region of northern Alabama. Author Joan E. Aller calls it “sinful.” We also gave it a fry using boneless, skinless chicken breast halves; not all of the coating stays on, but you get some of the same flavor. See the variation below. Serve with coleslaw and steamed ears of corn. Adapted from Aller’s “Cider Beans, Wild Greens, and Dandelion Jelly” (Andrews McMeel, 2010). Serves 6.

SOUTHERN BUTTER-CRUSTED CHICKEN
3 pounds (1 large can) vegetable shortening
6 tablespoons (3/4 stick) unsalted butter

3 tablespoons flour
1/2 to 3/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon sweet paprika
Scant 2 1/2 pounds bone-in, skin-on chicken thighs and drumsticks (about 4 of each)

Melt the shortening in a deep, heavy skillet (preferably cast-iron) over medium heat; it should reach a depth of 1 inch. Test the heat with a drop of water; if it sputters and pops when it hits the hot shortening, the oil is ready. Meanwhile, melt the butter in the microwave on low or in a small saucepan over medium-low heat. Remove from the heat; stir in the flour, salt to taste and the paprika to form a fairly smooth, loose paste. Line a baking sheet with paper towels and place a wire cooling rack on top.

Use more paper towels to pat the chicken pieces dry, then use a pastry brush to coat each piece completely with the butter mixture. Carefully place the chicken in the hot oil; fry for about 10 minutes on each side, until the skin is golden brown and crisp and the chicken is cooked through (turn the drumsticks often to cook on all sides). Use tongs to transfer the chicken to the cooling rack to drain for a minute or two. Serve hot or warm. Variation: Six boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (about 2 1/4 pounds) may be substituted. Cut each piece in half cross-wise and place in a bowl; coat with the butter mixture and fry for a total of 18 to 20 minutes, until the chicken is cooked through. Drain on the cooling rack for a few minutes before serving.

The recipe for Southern Butter-Crusted Chicken, taken from the southern Appalachian region of northern Alabama, is included in Joan E. Aller’s cookbook ‘Cider Beans, Wild Greens, and Dandelion Jelly.’

Whole new ballgame for whole grains

By Samuel Fromartz
Special to The Washington Post

If you’ve ever baked with whole-wheat flour and ended up with something nearly inedible, take heart. That is not unusual, even for professional bakers.

Kim Boyce, a talented Los Angeles pastry chef with a new cookbook on whole-grain baking, remembers the first time she tried making whole-grain muffins at home for her kids. “It was just dreadful. They were heavy, almost leaden,” Boyce says.

When Peter Reinhart, a well-known baker, author and teacher, baked his first whole-grain bread, the effort yielded “a thick, dark, leathery crust surrounding an inedible wad of spongy, glutinous paste. It was awful,” he wrote in “Peter Reinhart’s Whole Grain Breads,” which is devoted to rectifying such problems.

Granted, Reinhart’s initial whole-grain foray was circa 1970, and the bread included no yeast. Still, for decades, bakers have been tugged between the mounting knowledge that whole grains are nutritious, even essential to good health, and the age-old notion that they taste like dull, earnest bricks.

Thankfully, he and Boyce did not give up. They attacked a common problem: How do you temper the weight of whole grains while letting the full range of flavors and textures shine through? If you can manage that, you can win over the most jaded cookie lover.

“It’s a genuinely exciting palate of ingredients,” says Heidi Swanson, the author of “Super Natural Cooking” and the popular blog 101 Cookbooks. Just as farmers markets have introduced consumers to a wider range of fresh ingredients, “whole grains kind of bring that ethos of the farmers market into the kitchen pantry,” she says.

Mark Furstenberg, who formerly owned the BreadLine in the District of Columbia, agrees. Although he loves a well-made baguette, “almost all the breads I make at home these days are with whole grains,” he says. He is planning to bring that emphasis to his own new bakery and breakfast restaurant, which will offer a line of wood-fired breads made with organic whole grains.

In this shift, a relatively recent crop of cookbooks has proved to be groundbreaking. Reinhart’s bread book appeared in 2007. A year earlier, Lorna Sass released “Whole Grains Every Day Every Way,” a highly informative book that explored whole grains in salads and main courses as well as baked goods. That same year, King Arthur Flour delivered its “Whole Grain Baking,” a 600-page tome.

Now Boyce, 35, who worked as a pastry chef at Spago and Campanile in Los Angeles, has produced “Good to the Grain: Baking With Whole-Grain Flours” (Stewart, Tabori & Chang) with Amy Scattergood. The book takes waffles, scones, cookies and muffins in new directions, using a dozen grains including amaranth and teff. Among the friends, relatives and neighbors who scarfed up the goods I tested, not one mentioned the word “healthy.” In short, by coaxing out the flavors of whole grains in new ways, Boyce managed to turn the stereotype on its head.

When you think about it, Boyce’s approach isn’t entirely new. After all, the culture of cooking with whole grains dates back thousands of years. Think of staples such as Scandinavian rye crackers, French pain de campagne loaves (white, whole-wheat and rye flours), Italian farro risotto (emmer wheat, an ancient grain), Middle Eastern tabbouleh (bulgur wheat), Japanese soba noodles (buckwheat), Indian roti (whole wheat) and Ethiopian injera (teff).

In fact, grains such as barley, with its distinctive nutty note, and spelt, another ancient relative of wheat that has a sweeter and milder taste, were once far more common than white flour. No wonder the famous French baker Lionel Poilane described his signature dark whole-grain sourdough niche that he developed in the 1980s as a “retro-innovation” — that is, going forward in new ways by learning from the past.

But if the past was about whole grains, they largely became a footnote as methods and tastes shifted to white flour.

What makes whole grains whole? The grain is made up of three parts: the bran, a fibrous coat that surrounds and protects the seed; the nutritionally rich germ; and the protein- and starch-filled endosperm that Carrot muffins.

CARROT MUFFINS

Makes 8 muffins (with large tops)

Here’s a good baking tip: Fill alternate wells in a muffin pan, so each muffin has room to spread out and bake evenly. For this recipe, use two 12-well muffin pans or one large 24-well muffin pan (with 1/3-cup wells). When greasing the pans, make sure you grease outside the rim of each muffin well so the muffin top does not stick.

The muffins can be stored in an airtight container for up to 1 day, but they are best eaten the day they are made. Adapted from “Good to the Grain,” by Kim Boyce with Amy Scattergood (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, 2010).

For the topping:

1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons spelt flour
2 tablespoons oat bran
2 tablespoons dark brown sugar
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1/8 teaspoon kosher salt
3 tablespoons cold unsalted butter, cut into 1/4-inch pieces

For the muffins:

4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) unsalted butter, melted and slightly cooled, plus more for greasing the pan
1 cup spelt flour
3/4 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 cup oat bran
1/3 cup packed dark brown sugar
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon ground allspice
1 teaspoon kosher salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon

2 medium carrots, peeled and grated (1 1/2 cups)
1 cup regular or low-fat buttermilk
1 large egg

For the topping: Combine the spelt flour, oat bran, sugars and salt in a medium bowl. Add the butter, and use your fingers to work the mixture to the consistency of coarse cornmeal. The faster you work, the more solid the butter will remain.

For the muffins: Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Use a little butter to grease alternating muffin wells in a 12-muffin pan.

Sift together the flours, oat bran, sugars, allspice, salt, baking powder, baking soda and cinnamon into a mixing bowl, pouring into the bowl any grain or other ingredients that remain in the sifter. Add the carrots and stir to coat.

Whisk together the melted butter, buttermilk and egg in a separate bowl until thoroughly combined. Use a spatula to incorporate the butter mixture into the flour mixture.

Use a spoon or ice cream scoop to portion the batter evenly among the 8 prepared muffin wells. The batter should be slightly mounded. Sprinkle the topping evenly over the mounds of batter and press it into the batter slightly. Bake on the middle rack for 32 to 35 minutes; the muffins should smell nutty and the bottoms should be golden brown (twist one out to check).

Place the muffin pan on top of the stove and gently twist out the muffins, letting them cool on their sides halfway out of their individual wells; that will help keep them from becoming soggy.

Serve warm.

STRAWBERRY BARLEY SCONES

Makes 8 scones

Barley has very little gluten, which means it needs another agent — all-purpose flour, in this case — to bind it. The barley flour and bits of butter ensure the tenderness of this crumbly scone, while the jam caramelizes at the edges. Adapted from “Good to the Grain,” by Kim Boyce with Amy Scattergood (Stewart, Tabori and Chang, 2010).

For the scones:

8 tablespoons (1 stick) cold unsalted butter, cut into 1/2-inch pieces, plus more for greasing the baking sheet
1 cup plus 2 tablespoons barley flour, plus more for the work surface
1 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 cup packed light brown sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 1/4 teaspoons kosher salt
1/2 cup regular or low-fat buttermilk
1 large egg

For assembly:

1/2 cup strawberry jam or marmalade
1 tablespoon unsalted butter, melted
1 tablespoon granulated sugar

For the scones: Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Use a little butter to grease a rimmed baking sheet.

Sift the flours, brown sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt into a mixing bowl, pouring into the bowl any grains that may remain in the sifter. Add the butter, then use your hands or a pastry knife to break the butter into pieces the size of grains of rice. The quicker you work, the more solid the butter will remain, which is important.

Whisk together the buttermilk and egg in a small bowl, then pour it into the flour mixture and stir until barely combined.

Liberal flour a work surface. Transfer the dough to the surface and dust the top of it and your hands with additional flour, folding the dough a few times so it is not sticky.

Divide the dough in half. Flour your hands and pat each piece into a disk 7 inches across and about 3/4-inch thick. Use the pastry scraper to loosen the disks from the work surface.

To assemble: Spread 1 disk of dough with the strawberry jam or marmalade. Place the remaining disk on top, pressing down gently so the dough settles into the jam. Brush the top of the second disk with the melted butter, then sprinkle it with the sugar.

Use a sharp knife to cut the double-decker disk into 8 equal wedges. Carefully transfer them to the baking sheet, spaced a few inches apart. Bake on the middle rack for 22 to 26 minutes, rotating the sheet halfway through. The scones are ready when their tops are golden brown and some of the jam or marmalade has bubbled over onto the baking sheet.

Use a metal spatula to transfer the scones to a wire rack to cool slightly (and to keep them from sticking to the sheet as they cool).

Serve warm.

WHOLE-WHEAT CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

Makes about 24 4- or 5-inch cookies

These cookies are chewy on the inside and crisp at the edges. The whole-wheat flour gives them a nutty taste that goes well with brown sugar. The key, though, is to use high-quality chocolate that you chop yourself.

Best eaten the same day, the cookies last up to 3 days in a sealed container. The dough can be refrigerated a day or two in advance, but be sure to form the balls of dough before chilling. The cookies will be thicker than those made at room temperature. Adapted from “Good to the Grain,” by Kim Boyce with Amy Scattergood (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, 2010).

3 cups whole-wheat flour, plus more for the work surface
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 1/2 teaspoons kosher salt
16 tablespoons (2 sticks) cold unsalted butter, cut into 1/2-inch pieces

1 cup packed dark brown sugar
1 cup granulated sugar
2 large eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
8 ounces bittersweet chocolate, coarsely chopped into 1/4- and 1/2-inch pieces

Position oven racks in the upper and lower thirds of the oven; preheat to 350 degrees. Line 2 baking sheets with parchment paper.

Sift the flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt into a mixing bowl, adding any large bits of grain or other ingredients that remain in the sifter.

Combine the butter and sugars in the bowl of a stand mixer or hand-held electric mixer; beat on low speed for about 2 minutes, until just blended. Add the eggs one at a time, mixing to incorporate after each addition, then add the vanilla extract.

Add the flour mixture and beat until barely combined. Stop to scrape down the sides and bottom of the bowl. Add the chocolate, and beat on low speed just until evenly distributed.

Lightly flour a work surface. Transfer the dough to the work surface and use your hands to fully incorporate any remaining flour or chocolate from the bowl.

Scoop 3-tablespoon mounds of the dough onto each baking sheet, spacing them 3 inches apart (about 6 mounds per sheet). Bake for 8 to 10 minutes, then rotate the sheets top to bottom and front to back. Bake for 8 to 10 minutes, until evenly browned. Transfer the cookies to a wire rack to cool before serving or storing.

Repeat to use the remaining dough.

Per cookie: 240 calories, 3 g protein, 33 g carbohydrates, 12 g fat, 7 g saturated fat, 40 mg cholesterol, 240 mg sodium, 3 g dietary fiber, 21 g sugar.

white sugar, butter, whole milk and/or cream. When a muffin batter was too heavy as she experimented, she would add all-purpose flour to balance things out.

She also takes chances. Although she toyed with adding white flour to a whole-wheat chocolate chip cookie dough, she went with 100 percent whole-wheat flour instead. The resulting cookie doesn’t taste like a whole-wheat cookie; it tastes like a dynamite chocolate chip cookie with bold flavor and texture. Boyce pairs barley and coconut flour in another cookie; blends spelt flour with oat bran to create a moist, flavorful carrot muffin; and makes a poppy seed wafer with buckwheat flour. Her go-to rustic rye dough for tarts builds up flakiness through folding, in a technique reminiscent of that for croissants.

In short, she brings Poilane’s “retro-innovation” to whole-grain baked goods and coaxes out their inherent flavors. Although purists might bristle at her use of white flour, butter and sugar, it’s important to remember that Boyce is not aiming for low-fat and sugar-free. She is aiming for taste: a new kind of taste arising from these under-used grains.

Given the dearth of chefs working in whole grains, she theorizes that professional bakers and chefs are in the early stages of rediscovering them.

“This is really a new direction that hasn’t been fully explored,” Boyce says. “I think there are endless possibilities.”

A simple summer fruit tart with panache

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

Like the classic French fresh fruit tarts you see in fancy pastry shops, this American berry tart has serious panache. But we want you to enjoy your summer celebrations, so we came up with a simpler approach.

We've replaced the pastry cream filling with a sweetened cream cheese, and used a simple press-in crust. And if you can't be bothered to arrange your berries neatly, you can just pile them on top. Serve topped with a dollop of whipped cream and you have the perfect, impressive summertime dessert.

FRESH SUMMER BERRY TART

Start to finish: 1 hour (25 minutes active). Servings: 8.

For the crust:

- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 3/4 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 stick cold unsalted butter, cut up
- 2 tablespoons cold water

For the filling:

- Two 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup powdered sugar

Fresh berries (such as raspberries, strawberries, blackberries and blueberries)

Heat the oven to 375 degrees. Coat a 9-inch removable-bottom tart pan with baking spray.

In a food processor, pulse together the flour, sugar and salt. Add the butter, then pulse together, adding cold water as needed, until a meal forms that sticks together easily when you squeeze it.

Press the mixture into the tart pan, making sure to press the dough up the sides. Dock the bottom of the crust with a fork. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes, or until the edges just start to turn golden and the center is slightly firm to the touch. Cool on a wire rack.

Once the crust has cooled, make the filling. In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to beat together the cream cheese, vanilla, lemon juice and powdered sugar. Spread the filling evenly in the shell. Top with berries and serve.

Per serving: 506 calories; 280 calories from fat; 31 g fat (20 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 92 mg cholesterol; 52 g carbohydrate; 7 g protein; 2 g fiber; 290 mg sodium.

Summer parties deserve a big dessert with serious panache, like this berry tart.

Grilled peaches dress up these angel food cakes

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

I love warm fruit desserts, but they tend to be a little heavy. These little low-fat cakes are a lighter option.

The peaches are the one last-minute item; it takes only a few minutes to grill and slice them. I especially love how easily the skins slip off after the fruit is grilled. The technique cuts the prep time for the peaches to almost nothing.

The recipe for the angel food cakes, adapted from "Joy of Cooking," by Irma S. Rombauer, Marion Rombauer Becker and Ethan Becker (Scribner, 1997), makes 12 small (cup) cakes. You'll need only 6 for this dessert. The extras can be tucked into a lunch box or served as a snack.

If you'd prefer to leave out the Grand Marnier, add a tablespoon of sugar instead.

The cupcakes can be made earlier in the day or even a day in advance. The strawberries need to be prepared 2 to 12 hours in advance.

ANGEL FOOD 'SHORTCAKES' WITH GRILLED PEACHES AND STRAWBERRIES

6 servings

For the strawberries:

16 ounces strawberries, washed and hulled; small strawberries cut in half, medium strawberries quartered, large strawberries cut into eighths (about 3 cups)

2 tablespoons orange-flavored liqueur, such as Grand Marnier

2 tablespoons sugar

For the cakes:

- 1/2 cup cake flour
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 5 to 6 large egg whites (3/4 cup)
- 1 1/2 teaspoons water
- Juice of 1/4 lemon (1 1/2 teaspoons)
- 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/8 teaspoon almond extract

For the peaches:

3 large ripe peaches, cut in half, pit removed

For the strawberries:

Combine the fruit, liqueur and sugar in a medium bowl. Mix to coat evenly, then cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for at least 2 hours and up to 12 hours.

For the cakes: Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Line a standard muffin pan with 12 paper liners.

Sift together the cake flour, half of the sugar (1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons) and the salt; sift the mixture 2 more times.

Combine the egg whites, water, lemon juice, cream of tartar and the vanilla and almond extracts in the bowl of a stand mixer (use a balloon whisk attachment) or hand-held electric mixer. Beat on low speed for 1 minute to incorporate the ingredients, then increase the speed to medium and beat for 1 to 3 minutes, until the mixture is foamy and has increased in volume by 4 to 5 times. The foam will hold a very soft shape when the whip is lifted out of it.

Add the remaining sugar (1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons), 1 tablespoon at a time. The foam should be a glossy white and hold a soft peak when the whisk or beaters are lifted out. Do not over-beat.

Transfer the beaten egg white mixture to a large mixing bowl. Sift about one-quarter of the flour-sugar mixture over the egg whites, then use a large rubber spatula to gently fold the mixture into the egg whites. Repeat until all of the flour mixture is incorporated. Spoon the batter into the paper liners, filling each one at least three-quarters full. Bake for 15 to 18 minutes, until the cakes are firm to the touch and their tops are lightly browned. Let the cakes rest in the pan for 5 minutes; then transfer them to a wire rack to cool completely.

For the peaches: Prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees).

If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for about 4 or 5 seconds. Lightly coat a grill rack with oil and place it on the grill.

Place the peach halves on the grill, cut sides down. Cover and grill for 3 to 4 minutes, until the peaches have grill marks and are heated through. Use a spatula and/or tongs to loosen the fruit and flip it over. Cover and cook for 1 to 2 minutes or until the skin of the peaches loosens. Transfer the peaches to a clean plate; carefully remove and discard the skins.

To assemble: Working with one cake at a time, carefully remove and discard the paper liners and place the cakes on their sides. Use a serrated knife to cut each one into 3 equal slices (cross-section), which will be the bottom, middle and top.

Place 1 set of bottom and middle slices on a plate. Slice one of the peach halves into 5 or 6 slices and fan them out over the cake slices. Spoon about 1/2 cup of the strawberries over the peaches, making sure to include some of the juice. Stack the middle slice with fruit on top of the bottom slice with fruit to form a kind of shortcake. Top with the remaining (top) slice of cake. Repeat to prepare all 6 servings.

Serve immediately.

Gelatin stabilizes whipped cream

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

You can't beat the collective wisdom of cooks. A question about how to keep whipped cream stable while taking a banana cream pie to the office brought a reminder of an old tip using unflavored gelatin, shared by several cooks.

To do it, sprinkle a little gelatin powder over a small amount of water, usually 1/2 teaspoon gelatin over 1 tablespoon water for 1 cup cream; 1 teaspoon gelatin and 2 tablespoons water for 2 cups of cream. Either warm the water and gelatin over simmering water in a saucepan, or warm it in a microwave until the gelatin melts. Set the dissolved gelatin aside to cool.

Whip the cream until it is just barely holding peaks, then beat in the dissolved gelatin. You also can beat in confectioner's sugar to sweeten the whipped cream. The cornstarch in powdered sugar also helps to stabilize whipped cream.

Harvey Butler

GREEN FOREST, Ark. — The Rev. Harvey Butler, former Buhl resident, passed away Tuesday, June 29, 2010, in Green Forest, Ark., at the age of 82.

He was born to Clarence and Luvena (Youngblood) Butler on Nov. 22, 1927, in Blue Eye, Mo. In 1947, he married Ina Faye Nance. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II.

After moving to Idaho in 1959, he worked at J.C. Penney and Gambles. He pastored the Buhl Free Will Baptist Church in the 1960s and continued to pastor churches in Arkansas until the age of 80. Harvey was also the owner of several businesses, carpet stores and a western clothing store.

He is survived by his wife, Ina Faye of Green Forest, Ark.; three daughters, Shirl (Les) Bennett of Twin Falls, Carolyn Wilson of Branson, Mo., and Terri (Eric) Williamson of Green Forest, Ark.; one son, Mark (Elena) Butler of Twin Falls; 11 grandchildren; 15 great-grandchildren; two sisters, Elsie Ferguson of Green Forest, Ark., and Mary Smith of Red Bluff, Calif.; and three brothers, Bob Butler of Mount Vernon, Mo., George Butler of Eureka Springs, Ark., and Joe (Connie) Butler of Filer.

A memorial service will be held Saturday, July 3, in Oak Grove, Ark.

Mildred Grace Hartman Jacobs

BEAVERTON, ORE. — Mildred (Milly) Grace Hartman Jacobs, of Beaverton, Ore., died Thursday, June 17, 2010, in Portland, Ore.

She was born June 9, 1914, in Bristow, Neb., but moved to Idaho with her parents, Emory and Helen Hartman, when she was 4 years old. Milly graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1932, attended Albion Normal School for two years and graduated from Idaho State University. She married Ben W. Jacobs in 1939 and lived in Twin Falls many years before retiring to their mountain home in the Sawtooth Mountains. She was preceded in death by Ben in 1995.

Milly taught elementary school in Idaho for 33 years, 25 of which were in Twin Falls at Bickel and Harrison schools. In later years, she substituted at the elementary school in Stanley. She will be remembered as an excellent educator of children and lover of people and her God. She was a member of the First Methodist Church of Twin Falls for many years. She served as secretary-treasurer for the Stanley Chamber of Commerce and was a member of the Sawtooth Interpretive and Historical Association during the 1980s.

Milly is survived by her brother, Ed Hartman of Jerome; son, Brent W. Jacobs of Beaverton, Ore.; daughter-in-law, Jennifer Jacobs; grandsons, Brian and Andy Jacobs; granddaughter-in-law, Wendy Jacobs; and great-granddaughters, Jaelyn and Savannah Jacobs.

‘Charlie’s Angels’ theme song composer Allyn Ferguson dies

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, Calif. (AP) — Allyn Ferguson, an Emmy-winning composer who co-wrote the themes for the 1970s TV shows “Charlie’s Angels” and “Barney Miller,” has died at 85.

Ferguson died at his home in Westlake Village near Los Angeles on June 23, said his daughter, Jill Ferguson.

Ferguson wrote scores for dozens of TV episodes in the 1970s and 1980s but he may be best-known for the “Charlie’s Angels” and “Barney Miller” themes he co-wrote with Jack Elliott.

He received eight Emmy nominations, winning the award for music composition in 1985 for scoring a television adaptation of the classic novel “Camille.”

It was one of several literary adaptations that Ferguson scored for producer Norman Rosemont.

“Allyn will always be remembered as the co-writer of two iconic television themes,” said Jon Burlingame, author of “TV’s Biggest Hits.” “But I think his real strength was in writing large-scale orchestral scores for Rosemont.”

“He’d often write lavish orchestral scores, some very swashbuckling in nature, that helped to set the mood and place the viewer in the proper period,” Burlingame said. “It was great stuff; he was really good at this.”

Orville William ‘Bill’ Heiner

BURLEY — Orville William “Bill” Heiner, 89, of Burley, our beloved husband, father and grandfather, passed from this life Saturday, June 26, 2010, at the Cassia Regional Medical Center surrounded by his loving family.

Bill was born Oct. 22, 1920, in Oakley Basin to Orville Heiner and Mildred Lucille Richens Heiner. He attended school at the Basin School House and the Oakley High School, where he met and married his sweetheart of 71 years, Melba Hale. They were married in Carey, Idaho, and were later sealed in the Logan Utah Temple for time and all eternity.

To this union were born five children, Dr. Larry Orville (Dayle) of Chester, Va., Edna Lucille “Lucy” (Gary) Cranney of San Marcos, Calif., Bonnie Jean (Robert) Jackson of Alpine, Utah, Virginia Kay “Pinch” (Forest) Ward of Twin Falls and Margaret Cristine, “Criss” (Randy) Rich of Rupert. They have 21 grandchildren, 72 great-grandchildren and eight great-great-grandchildren.

He faithfully served his country in the Army during World War II. Bill farmed in the Oakley Basin for 10 years then move to Burley where he worked for the state of Idaho. He was supervisor of the fresh fruits and vegetable inspection service for 28 years before his retirement. After retirement, Bill and Melba spent 23 winters in San Marcos, Calif., where they served in the San Diego Temple.

Bill loved the outdoors and was an avid golfer. He also loved to fish and camp, especially with the Good Sam Twin Falls Travelers Club. Some of his fondest memories were teaching his children and grandchildren waterskiing, fishing, golfing, horseback riding and motorcycle dirt bike riding. He always giggled and took such pleasure in watching his family excel in sports and never missed a game. Bill, along with Jay Hatt, kept stats for the Burley Bobcat football teams for years. He never tired of anything that had to do with sports. He was a devoted member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Bill is also survived by two brothers, Keith (Zina) Heiner of Salem, Ore., and Robert (Marilyn) Heiner of Sandy, Utah. Bill was preceded in death by his parents; one sister, Iris Stock; and three brothers, Richard, Paul and Jim Heiner. He also had two grandsons precede him in death, Dr. Ryan Rich and Brady Orville Heiner.

The funeral will be held in his honor at 1 p.m. Friday, July 2, at the Burley LDS 2nd and 4th Ward building, 515 E. 16th St., with military honors provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans. Bishop Clay Handy will officiate. There will be a viewing from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, July 1, at the Hansen-Payne Mortuary, 321 E. Main, and one hour prior to the service Friday at the church. Services will conclude with burial in the Oakley Basin Cemetery.

The family wishes to thank the loving staff in ICU and Cassia Regional Medical Center.

Marian B. Hunter Clark

GLENN'S FERRY — Our beloved mother, teacher and friend left us Saturday, June 26, 2010.

Mother was born April 2, 1920, in Oakley, Idaho, the only child of Lewis Franklin Hunter of Oakley, Idaho, and Sarah Isabelle Berrett Hunter of Menan, Idaho. Mother spent a good portion of her childhood in Menan, her mother’s hometown, after her mother passed away when Mom was only 8 years old. She was then loved and cared for by her father and her mother’s many loving relatives. Mom returned to Oakley with her father when she was a teenager, and graduated from high school at Oakley High School with her future husband and our father, Franklin K Clark. Her father, Frank, passed away when she was 16 years old, and she continued to live with her kind and nurturing grandparents, Lewis and Elsie Hunter at Oakley Meadows.

After high school, Mom attended Albion Normal School in Albion, Idaho, for two years. She loved Albion and spoke often and fondly of her time there. Mom and Dad were married Oct. 17, 1940, at the Lann Ranch in Oakley, and would have celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary in October of this year. Mother was a voracious reader, and a wonderful teacher. She never stopped learning.

During the early years of their marriage, Dad and Mom worked together at the radio station which Dad managed, KBOL, later KBAR, in Burley, Idaho. Mother wrote commercials and actually did some very clever on-the-air work herself. Years later, they bought a radio station in Jerome, Idaho, and continued to work there together for several years. During that time, Mom ran her own yarn shop, taught her friends and customers how to do beautiful needlework and began to cultivate her love of painting.

In 1969, Mom and Dad moved to Glenns Ferry and began their careers together in the insurance business. Mother’s passion for painting continued to flourish, much to the delight of her friends and family, who are the proud owners of some of her amazing art work. Mother was brilliant, witty and a wonderful friend. We will all miss her every day.

She is survived by her husband, Franklin K Clark; two daughters, Kathleen Pack of Glenns Ferry and Shannon McBride of St. George, Utah; and two sons, Franklin Kelly Clark and Reilly Saul Clark, both of Boise.

A graveside service will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, July 1, at the Glenns Ferry Cemetery in Glenns Ferry, Idaho. In lieu of flowers, it was Mother’s wish that donations in her name be made to the Oakley Valley Arts Council (OVAC).

Carl Albert Nutsch

POCATELLO — Carl Albert Nutsch Jr. passed away early Monday, June 28, 2010, from injuries while helping take down a Ferris wheel after a weekend festival in West Valley City, Utah.

He was born April 4, 1969, in Burley, Idaho, the son of Carl Albert Nutsch and Paulette Blubaugh Nutsch. He attended schools in Jerome and graduated from Jerome High School. He then joined the Army. He received a medical discharge from an injured back. He worked at Thunderbird Carwash for about a year. He also drove truck for several companies. For the last 15 years, he was working for Royal West Amusements. He greatly enjoyed the friends he made and thought of them as family.

Carl is survived by his mother, Paulette and stepfather, Claude Runyan of Pocatello; father, Carl Albert and step-mother Anita Nutsch of Jerome; daughter, Courtney Pauline Nutsch of Burley; three brothers, Robert P. (Patricia) Nutsch of Nampa, Richard P. (Rhonda) Nutsch of Battle Mountain, Nev., and Patrick L. Nutsch of Twin Falls; half brother, Paul A. Schwendiman of Nampa; and one sister, Donna (Michael) McNaughtor of Nampa.

A family and friends gathering for celebration of life will be held Sept. 7 at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds hosted by Royal West Amusements. The time will be announced later. Arrangements are under the care of Manning-Wheatley Funeral Chapel, 510 N. 12th Ave., Pocatello. Online condolences may be sent to the family at www.manning-wheatleyfuneralchapel.com.

IHSAA moves to mandate concussion awareness

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

If the Idaho High School Activities Association has its way, concussion awareness won't be optional anymore.

In its August meeting the state's body governing high school sports will vote to mandate that all high school coaches — head or assistant, teacher or outsider, paid or volunteer — view an online video about concussions and submit proof of doing so in order to be eligible to coach, starting with the 2010-11 school year.

It's part of a multi-faceted IHSAA effort to promote greater awareness of concussion symptoms and aftereffects. That plan of action was in response to the state legislature's passing of Kort's Law, which requires information on concussions be made more readily available to players, coaches and parents.

IHSAA board member and Jerome High School athletic director Ty Jones said the information contained in the roughly half-hour course is mostly common knowledge but would be beneficial to less-experienced coaches.

"Most of the stuff, if you've been around sports ... I don't want to say everything in it is common sense, but most of it is," Jones said. "The people that are really going to need it the most are probably your volunteer coaches and your younger guys who haven't been around the activities that much."

In addition to the new coaching requirements, IHSAA Executive Director John Billetz said the association has made more information available on its website, <http://www.idhsaa.org>, for parents and athletes to research as well. Officials will also receive additional instruction about concussions.

"In this day and age, with the emphasis we have on concussions, this is something we feel we need to do," Billetz said. "This is the whole package."

Coaches can access the free course through the IHSAA's website, Billetz said, and anyone associated with a school district — teachers, principals, coaches, even students, parents or officials — may complete the course.

The IHSAA will also send out letters that athletic directors will provide to parents at informational meetings, Billetz said, regarding the website's concussion information. Schools may use the IHSAA letter or generate one of their own, but they must do something, he said.

If the coaching requirement passes an Aug. 4 vote, the deadline for fall coaches to comply is the first game of their respective seasons. Coaches of winter and spring sports have until the start of practice for their respective sports to fulfill the requirement.

Billetz said the first reading was passed unanimously in June, and he anticipates its passage in August — though there could be changes made if necessary. He added he had recently sent out an e-mail to athletic directors and coaches about the issue and hadn't received much, if any, resistance to the stringent nature of the pending regulation.

"One of the comments we did hear was about the management (aspect). Athletic directors have tons of stuff to do and that's another thing on their plate," Billetz said. "But in the long run it's going to be better for everyone."

Decision time

LeBron's suitors

CHICAGO BULLS

Projected amount under the salary cap: $29.2 million
Why they'd land LeBron: With Derrick Rose and Joakim Noah, perhaps the best core of any James suitor. ... Draft-night trade left them close to being able to offer two maximum salary contracts that would start at around $16.5 million next season. ... James grew up a Bulls fan.
Why they'd lose LeBron: James may not want the pressure of living up to inevitable comparisons to Michael Jordan in Chicago. ... Management has had some strained relationships with its star players, a point Dwyane Wade alluded to this season.
Outlook: If James doesn't mind playing in Jordan's old home, he may find his best chance to win is there.

CLEVELAND CAVALIERS

Projected amount under the salary cap: Doesn't matter, they can exceed the cap to sign James.
Why they'd land LeBron: James has spent his entire career in Cleveland and is comfortable there, saying the Cavs have an "edge" in re-signing him. ... Close to his hometown of Akron. ... Able to offer him about $30 million more than any other team over the life of a max deal.
Why they'd lose LeBron: With coach Mike Brown fired — and still not replaced — and general manager Danny Ferry leaving since the season ended, the Cavs have the look of a team in turmoil. ... Moves to win now have left few easy opportunities to upgrade the roster.
Outlook: It was hard during the season to find many people who thought James would leave. Since the season ended, it's gotten harder to find those who think he's staying. The Cavs have to count on his loyalty to home.

LOS ANGELES CLIPPERS

Projected amount under the salary cap: $16.8 million
Why they'd land LeBron: A good core, with All-Star center Chris Kaman, 2009 No. 1 draft pick Blake Griffin, and guards Baron Davis and Eric Gordon. ... Los Angeles would provide numerous entertainment opportunities.
Why they'd lose LeBron: A long-time laughingstock in pro sports and the clear little brother in its own building to the NBA champion Lakers. ... Donald Sterling is considered one of the worst and cheapest owners in sports. ... No coach in place, having not yet replaced Mike Dunleavy. ... Would be tough to unseat Kobe Bryant as the most popular player in the city.
Outlook: There's certainly reasons for James to be intrigued by the Clippers, but just as many to be scared off by them.

Will LeBron stay or leave home?

By Tom Withers
Associated Press writer

CLEVELAND — As he dressed in his spacious corner locker, LeBron James glanced over at the news scrolling across the flat-screen TV on the far wall. The ticker read: "NBA: Kobe Bryant signs three-year contract extension with Los Angeles Lakers."

Buttoning his shirt following the game in April, roughly one month before his quest for a championship would end awkwardly and two months before becoming The Free Agent Of All Free Agents, James wasn't a bit surprised.

"Did anyone really think he was leaving?" he asked incredulously. "Kobe's been there since he was like 17. That's his home. He wasn't going anywhere."

Hmm. Sound like someone you know, 'Bron?

The league's MVP grinned and bit his top lip. Not saying.

Soon enough, we'll have his answer.

At the heart of James' impending free agency, a moment of controlled chaos hyped beyond anything in recent sports memory, is one underlying question: Can he move away from the only place he has ever known?

James hits the market at 12:01 a.m. Thursday as the valedictorian of this historic 2010 free-agent class. He might have already decided where he'll dribble, drive and dunk next. Even if he has, he's still going to listen to offers and can't sign with anyone until July 8.

Depending on whom you believe, the soon-to-be No. 6 is either headed to New York to resurrect the sorry Knicks; or to New Jersey to plot global domination with rap mogul pal Jay-Z and Russian billionaire owner Mikhail Prokhorov; or to Chicago to follow Michael Jordan's magnificence; or to Miami to join Olympic teammates Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh in a terrifying trifecta; or to Dallas where he could play with buddy Jason Kidd and watch his beloved Cowboys all the time.

Or, he'll stay in Ohio, kick back in the 40,000-square-foot palace he built not far from the Akron streets where he was raised and continue to play for the Cavaliers.

Right now, nobody knows.

In a guessing game changing by the minute, one thing is certain: James' decision will be made by one person — LeBron Raymone James.

He has listened to his advisers, consulted with friends, former coaches, Nike bigwigs, gazillionaire Warren Buffett and others of influence. But James and only James will make the final choice before signing on the dotted line.

What's he going to do?
"What's best for him and his family," teammate Shaquille O'Neal said before the Cavs' postseason collapsed in a second-round loss to Boston. "He's 25, but he's something I've really never seen before."

There's never been anyone like him — or anything like this.

LeBron's suitors

MIAMI HEAT

Projected amount under the salary cap: $26.7 million ($43.3 million if Dwyane Wade left).
Why they'd land LeBron: Enough money to afford James, another max player and still have enough left over for a solid third piece. ... Trendy spots, great weather and no state income tax make Miami a favorite of many NBA players. ... Good friends with Dwyane Wade, whom the Heat expect to keep.
Why they'd lose LeBron: Not much there besides Wade as a result of salary-clearing moves. ... James may not want to come to Wade's team.
Outlook: Wade and James both have talked about playing with each other, and here's their chance. But James would have to be sold they could build a competitive roster around them, and he may prefer beating Wade to joining him.

NEW JERSEY NETS

Amount under the salary cap: $27.1 million
Why they'd land LeBron: Excitement of new Russian owner Mikhail Prokhorov, who vows the Nets will become a global team. ... Expected to begin playing in new arena in Brooklyn, which James calls his favorite borough, in 2012.
Why they'd lose LeBron: Will spend the next two years in Newark while waiting for Brooklyn arena to be built. ... Coming off a 12-70 season that was one of worst in NBA history. ... With president Rod Thorn expected to retire next month, no clear leader of the basketball operations.
Outlook: The Nets might be the favorites if they were already in Brooklyn. But playing near New York isn't the same as playing in New York, and the difference might be enough to make James look elsewhere.

NEW YORK KNICKS

Amount under the salary cap: $34.1 million
Why they'd land LeBron: James loves Madison Square Garden and New York. ... Coach Mike D'Antoni is friendly with James from the U.S. Olympic team, and James likes his system.
Why they'd lose LeBron: Mired in franchise-worst stretch of nine straight losing seasons. ... Moves to clear salary have left little remaining talent. ...
Outlook: The Knicks believe they'll get someone. But they haven't had a winning season since James came into the NBA and have little talent to put around him, so no matter how much James loves New York, he may not love the Knicks.

WAC says it will not expand for 2011

League will stay at 8 after BSU leaves

The Associated Press

DENVER — The Western Athletic Conference does not plan to replace departing Boise State for the 2011-12 season.

Commissioner Karl Benson announced on Tuesday that the conference will operate with eight members in 2011-12 and won't add any new schools until July 1, 2012, at the earliest.

Boise State has accepted an invitation to join the Mountain West Conference after this season.

"Over the past few weeks, the WAC's Board of Directors and athletics directors have explored several membership options," Benson said. "We believe it is in the best interest of the WAC to operate as an eight-team league for the 2011-12 season."

Benson said the league will take several months to look into various membership options before making any decisions for the 2012-13 season.

The WAC's remaining members are Fresno State, Hawaii, Idaho, Louisiana Tech, Nevada, New Mexico State, San Jose State and Utah State.

Change has been a constant for the Western Athletic Conference since it was established in 1962.

None of the original members are still in the league and in 1999, after it had expanded to 16 teams, eight of its most prominent programs, including Utah, BYU and Air Force, broke away to form the Mountain West.

Boise State, which joined in 2001, had become the conference's marquee and most successful football program in recent years. The Broncos have played in the BCS twice.

Benson had said he expected to announce the addition of another member or two some time this summer.

But instead those plans were put on hold. Benson said the league will look at scenarios with various numbers of schools, including a 12-members conference that would allow the WAC to hold a football league championship game.

"The future for the WAC is very bright, and we will continue to provide our student-athletes with the opportunities to compete on both the regional and national stages in all of our sports," he said.

No all-Williams final: Venus upset

By Howard Fendrich
Associated press writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Venus Williams would shank a shot — and she shanked many on this day — then turn toward the Court 1 player guest box where her parents were seated and put her palms up or shrug her shoulders, as if to indicate, “I don’t know what’s happening here.”

The five-time Wimbledon champion was out of sorts, out of answers and out of the tournament in the quarterfinals, stunned 6-2, 6-3 Tuesday by the lowest-ranked woman left, No. 82 Tsvetana Pironkova of Bulgaria, meaning there won’t be an all-Williams title match at the All England Club this year.

Williams double-faulted five times and totaled 29 unforced errors, 23 more than her solid-if-not-spectacular opponent.

“Didn’t do myself any favors,” said the No. 2-seeded Williams, whose younger sister, No. 1 Serena, won Tuesday to reach the semifinals. “I missed all shots today: forehand, volley, backhand. You know, if there was a shot to miss, I think I missed it.”

It was the older Williams’ 77th career singles match at the All England Club — she participated in eight of the past 10 finals, losing to her sister three times, including in 2009 — and never had she won so few games. The only time she’s been beaten at Wimbledon by someone ranked lower than Pironkova was all the way back on June 28, 1997, when the American lost her tournament debut to No. 91 Magdalena Grzybowska.

Really, the only factor preventing this result from truly being considered one of the biggest upsets in tennis history is that Pironkova actually managed to do this before: She defeated Williams at the 2006 Australian Open.

“I don’t even really remember anything from last time,” Williams said. “Obviously, she’s played well to get this far, but I don’t think I did anything right today.”

Set aside, for a moment, all of Williams’ bona fides — seven Grand Slam titles, seven runner-up finishes at majors, a stint at No. 1 in the rankings — and consider the 22-year-old Pironkova's resume: She never made it beyond the second round in 18 previous Grand Slam events, and never made the final at any tournament.

“No one expected me to (reach a) semifinal in Wimbledon,” Pironkova said, “and to beat Venus Williams like that.”

But Pironkova, who's coached by her father, must have believed this was possible, right?

“If I have to be honest: no,” she said. “Coming here, I really just wanted to play a good game, to maybe win one or two rounds. But (a) semifinal looked, to me, very far.”

Well, now she's there.

On Thursday, Pironkova will face No. 21 Vera Zvonareva of Russia, who added to the topsy-turvy day by coming back to oust No. 8 Kim Clijsters 3-6, 6-4, 6-2. Unlike Pironkova, Zvonareva at least can boast of some experience at this stage, having reached the 2009 Australian Open semifinals.

On the other side of the draw, defending champion Serena Williams smacked 11 aces — lifting her total for the tournament to a Wimbledon-record 73, one more than she hit last year — and made only six unforced errors in a 7-5, 6-3 victory over No. 9 Li Na of China.

She next faces yet another unheralded member of this year's final four, 62nd-ranked Petra Kvitova of the Czech Republic.

Class AA Cyclones sweep Upper Valley

The Burley Green Sox suffered a pair of road losses at Bonneville Tuesday.

Bonneville won 9-2 in the opener, and then led 5-1 through five innings when Game 2 was called due to rain.

Burley hosts Wood River in a doubleheader starting at 4 p.m. today.

Lee stifles Yankees as M's win

NEW YORK — Cliff Lee pitched his third straight complete game and the Seattle Mariners beat the New York Yankees 7-4 on Tuesday night.

Lee (7-3) beat New York twice in last year's World Series for the Philadelphia Phillies, including Game 1 at Yankee Stadium. He won the ballpark opener for Cleveland in April 2009.

This time, the left-hander allowed two solo homers to Nick Swisher and his first walk in almost a month. The Yankees scored twice in the ninth.

Jorge Posada's walk in the second inning was Lee's first since walking Nick Punto on June 2 — 144 batters and five starts ago.

Rob Johnson hit a two-run double in the sixth and Ichiro Suzuki drove in two runs with an RBI single in the third and a sacrifice fly in the fifth. Franklin Gutierrez homered for Seattle.

Yankees starter Phil Hughes (10-2) allowed seven runs — six earned — and 10 hits in 5 2-3 innings. The Yankees had won six of eight.

Lee yielded three earned runs in his 18th career complete game and fifth this season. He allowed eight hits and one walk, striking out two.

Seattle Mariners pitcher Cliff Lee gestures in the dugout during the first inning of the baseball game against the New York Yankees Tuesday at Yankee Stadium in New York. Lee pitched nine innings and the Mariners beat the Yankees 7-4.

New York scored twice in the ninth off closer Leo Nunez (3-1), tying it at 6 on a single by pinch-hitter Josh Thole — his second hit this season. It was Nunez's fourth blown save in 20 chances

RED SOX 8, RAYS 5

BOSTON — David Ortiz hit a three-run homer to break a fifth-inning tie, and Adrian Beltre had four hits for Boston.

INDIANS 5, BLUE JAYS 4

CLEVELAND — Fausto Carmona rebounded from his worst start of the season by pitching into the seventh inning for Cleveland.

ATHLETICS 4, ORIOLES 2

BALTIMORE — Substitute starter Vin Mazzaro allowed three hits in six-plus innings and Kurt Suzuki had three RBIs as Oakland won its fourth straight.

WHITE SOX 4, ROYALS 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chicago's Gavin Floyd pitched into the seventh inning to earn his first win in five weeks.

TWINS 11, TIGERS 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Denard Span tied a modern-era record with three triples and had five RBIs to get Minnesota back into first place in the AL Central.

NATIONAL LEAGUE MARLINS 7, METS 6

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Hanley Ramirez hit a grand slam and Dan Uggla singled home the winning run in the ninth inning for his third RBI.

Never before has one player carried such clout into free agency. Despite never winning a championship — or even one game in the finals — James has the league bowing at his expensive sneakers. The anticipation of his league-tilting decision has caused an information feeding frenzy only rivaled by Tiger Woods' sex scandal.

Teams have revamped their rosters for him, with Chicago and Miami doing the most maneuvering.

Cities have spent big bucks campaigning for him, calculating the economic impact of his arrival, or in Cleveland's case, a possible departure.

Corporate jets will descend upon Northeast Ohio in the coming days, loaded with teams hoping to lure James away. The Nets' delegation will make their sales pitch first, followed by the Knicks and at least four other teams.

Everyone wants him.

COLLEGE WORLD SERIES Merrifield's single in 11th gives Gamecocks title

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Whit Merrifield's RBI single with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning gave South Carolina its first baseball national championship with a 2-1 victory over UCLA in the College World Series on Tuesday.

The Gamecocks (54-16) won six straight games after losing their CWS opener against Oklahoma. They also won the last championship played at Rosenblatt Stadium, the CWS' home since 1950.

“I don’t know how I feel,” coach Ray Tanner said. “I’ve never been in this situation. I know one thing, I’m extremely proud of these guys and my coaches. It’s unbelievable.

“I’m off the ground right now.”

It was the fifth championship decided in an extra-inning final, and first since Southern California topped Florida State — also 2-1 — in 15 innings in 1970.

Scott Wingo drew a leadoff walk and took second when catcher Steve Rodriguez, perhaps distracted when Evan Marzilli squared to bunt, let an inside 1-0 pitch get past him. Wingo moved to third when Marzilli got a bunt down, and scored when Merrifield drilled a 2-0 pitch by Dan Klein past the pulled-in outfield of the Bruins (51-17) and into right field.

Matt Price (5-1) got the win, allowing one hit over 2 2-3 innings for the Gamecocks.

Today is Wednesday, June 30, the 181st day of 2010. There are 184 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On June 30, 1860, the famous Oxford University Museum debate on Darwin's theory of evolution took place as Anglican Bishop Samuel Wilberforce led his side in denouncing the concept, while biologist T.H. Huxley rose to defend it. (Although exact details of the debate, which was not transcribed, are in dispute, it is generally believed that Huxley's side prevailed.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1859, French acrobat Charles Blondin walked back and forth on a tightrope above the gorge of Niagara Falls as thousands of spectators watched.

In 1908, the Tunguska Event took place in Russia as an asteroid exploded above Siberia, leaving 800 square miles of scorched or blown-down trees.

In 1921, President Warren G. Harding nominated former President William Howard Taft to be chief justice of the United States, succeeding the late Edward Douglass White.

In 1934, Adolf Hitler carried out his "blood purge" of political and military rivals in Germany in what came to be known as "The Night of the Long Knives."

In 1958, the U.S. Senate passed the Alaska statehood bill by a vote of 64-20.

In 1960, Belgian Congo achieved independence.

In 1963, Pope Paul VI was installed as 262nd head of the Roman Catholic Church.

In 1971, a Soviet space mission ended in tragedy when three cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 11 were found dead inside their spacecraft after it had returned to Earth.

In 1984, John Turner was sworn in as Canada's 17th prime minister, succeeding Pierre Elliott Trudeau. (However, Turner held the post for less than three months.)

In 1985, 39 American hostages from a hijacked TWA jetliner were freed in Beirut after being held 17 days.

Ten years ago: Nine people died in a crush of fans during a rock festival in Roskilde, Denmark. An Arkansas Supreme Court committee sued President Bill Clinton to strip him of his law license. (Clinton later agreed to pay a fine and give up his law license for five years.)

Five years ago: Federal Reserve policymakers boosted the federal funds rate by one-quarter percentage point to 3.25 percent, the ninth such increase since the Fed began to tighten credit in June 2004 in an effort to keep inflation under control. Spain became the third country (after the Netherlands and Belgium) to legalize gay marriage nationwide.

One year ago: Former "Saturday Night Live" comedian Al Franken was declared the winner of Minnesota's eight-month U.S. Senate vote recount, defeating Republican incumbent Norm Coleman. A Yemeni jet with 153 people on board crashed into the Indian Ocean as it tried to land on the island nation of Comoros; a 12-year-old girl was the sole survivor. American soldier Pfc. Bowe R. Bergdahl went missing from his base in eastern Afghanistan, and was later confirmed to have been captured by insurgents. Musical actor Harve Presnell, 75, died in Santa Monica, Calif.

DEAR ABBY: I know some people are obsessed with hoarding things. Is it possible to have an obsession about throwing things away? My mother seems bent on removing every item from our home. Every time I went away as a kid, boxes of books and toys would disappear from my room. I resorted to hiding things I wanted to keep.

Since I have left for college, 90 percent of my belongings have been thrown out or given to Goodwill. She even gave away two dolls I have had since I was a baby and which were of great sentimental value to me. Mother was well aware of it.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

She recently became adamant that I get rid of some dresses and a pair of winter boots to "prepare for the change in seasons." Abby, the boots were less than six months old, and the dress was brand-new! Could she have a serious problem?

— EMILY IN ATLANTA

DEAR EMILY: Yes, but it's not what you think. It appears your mother regards you not as an individual, but as an extension of herself. Therefore, in her mind what is yours is really hers to do with as she wishes. She should not be giving away your possessions unless it's by mutual consent. And yes, it is a serious problem because it will negatively affect your relationship in the future, if it hasn't already.

DEAR ABBY: "Susan" and I have been married for many years. After our sons left for college, my wife began experiencing "empty-nest syndrome," so I surprised her with two cats. I'm not wild about cats, but I knew she'd be pleased. Big mistake!

Susan is constantly doting on her "babies" (as she calls them). Her time is spent brushing them, talking to them, playing with them and photographing them. When we do have a little feline-free time, it's spent talking about them. I have grown more and more annoyed with these spoiled cats who have 100 percent of her attention.

I have tried expressing my feelings, but she reminds me that I was the one who "adopted" them in the first place. Any suggestions?

— HUBBY

IN PURR-GATORY

DEAR HUBBY: You may have been the one who adopted the cats, but your wife has gone overboard. Tell her that unless she reorganizes her priorities and makes some time for her husband, her husband may adopt a "kitten" of his own.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 11-year-old girl. My brother, "Jason," and I have always been close friends. Summer, for me, means wearing tank tops and shorts, but Jason doesn't like the idea. He tells me I'm showing too much skin and that boys will stare at me.

I used to think Jason was silly. So far, he has liked only one of my outfits this summer. Now that I think about it, my shorts are pretty small. Is my brother just being protective? Or do you think I should try to wear clothes that don't show a lot of my skin?

— STAYING COOL

IN HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR STAYING COOL: Not knowing your brother, I don't know what may be motivating him. I assume that when you are shopping for outfits, your mother has some input in what's being purchased. That's why I think you should address this question to her. She can tell you whether your brother is being overprotective or if his fashion sense is on target.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

IF JUNE 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your business skills are better than usual for the next several months. When life hands you lemons, you have the recipe on hand to make lemonade. Sail effortlessly through the next several months but avoid taking crucial steps during late September or October. January will offer a good period of time for an excursion or romantic interlude. Next April is the best month to launch key strategies or receive life-altering opportunities. Whatever you start during those months will be blessed by excellent business shrewdness and guidance from unexpected corners.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get your head out of the clouds and watch your step. Flights of fancy might provide grounds for misunderstandings. It is difficult to meet on common ground if someone suffers from over-active imagination.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some pampered playmates want to be waited on hand and foot by adoring slaves or attentive partners. You can't say no when persuasive charm is turned on, but don't count on receiving real commitment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your judgment is much better today. Sleep on major questions and concerns and you'll wake up with the perfect answer. Important business objectives may work out for the best if you wait patiently until tomorrow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Examine your options. This might be a good time to ask for second opinions from trusted professionals or advice from outside sources. You might be deceiving yourself or chose not to see reality.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Remember the lesson of the tortoise and the hare. Snap decisions or misleading first impressions could lead to mix-ups. Keep pennies safely in the piggy bank where they can't be wasted or spent unwisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be through with the past, but that doesn't mean the past is through with you. Passing predicaments may upset your personal paradise or cause misunderstandings in important relationships.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Adopt a generous attitude. Let bygones be bygones. It doesn't cost a cent to give someone a smile or to share experiences. A new goal or a reevaluation of your objectives can get you back on track.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be forthright and honest. You don't need to embellish the truth. If you are humble and aware of what is lacking it will be simple to make needed corrections. Listen to the voice of experience.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Intuitions may be stronger than usual. Jot down ideas and lay out outlines for future plans. Friendly competition is in the air but don't wager money you can't afford to lose on a game of chance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't flash the cash rashly. Be politically correct about picking up the tab and repaying debts. Be gracious if someone wants to treat you to something nice even if that gives that person an advantage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Moderation is the answer. The jingling change in your pocket may attract fair weather friends. Set reasonable spending limits and don't let a passing fancy capture your heart or entangle your finances.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Quiet times at your home base may fit the mood tonight. The right person for you shares your philosophy and feels like a family member. Small misunderstandings vanish under late evening stars.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Amid the pressure of great events, a general principle gives no help."

— Georg Hegel

Fred Gitelman is perhaps the world's most successful marketer of bridge via the Internet. He was at the helm today in four hearts, a contract hard to make even when you look at all four hands.

Fred won the spade lead with dummy's ace and immediately played a heart to his king. He decided that West's play of the queen was a true card — how many of us would be up to a false-card here? He therefore switched his attention to clubs, and when he led the king from hand, West obliged by taking the ace, simplifying Gitelman's task.

Fred took the spade continuation with dummy's king, pitching a diamond, ruffed a spade, cashed the diamond ace and king, then crossed to dummy with a club and ruffed another spade. Now he led another club to dummy and, in the three-card ending, played dummy's last diamond. East had the A-10-8 of hearts left, and Fred still had the 9-7 in his hand. Whether East ruffed high or low, Fred would collect another trump for his 10th trick.

Had West ducked his club ace and taken the next round of the suit to return a third club, Gitelman would have cashed the spade king to pitch his diamond loser, then led a low trump from dummy. East can win and force declarer with a spade, but declarer ruffs, cashes both diamond winners, and leads the fourth club. He ruffs it with the heart jack, losing only one more trump trick.

ANSWER: This hand feels too strong for you to pass. I'm not sure if a double of two clubs should deliver a fourth trump on defense, but that seems to me to be the best call with this hand. Since the opponents have bid and raised clubs, the double is not for penalties. It simply shows a hand with extra values, asking partner to raise spades, bid a five-card suit, or defend if appropriate.

NOTICE OF HEARING ON APPLICATION FOR AMENDMENT TO ZONE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a public hearing will be held on Thursday, the 15th day of July, 2010, at 2:00 o'clock PM, Burley City Hall, Burley, Idaho before the Cassia County Planning & Zoning Commission on the application of Thomas Petroleum DBA Bowen Petroleum, PO Box 940, Burley, Idaho regarding an Application for Amendment to Zone, which application was received by the County on the 25th day of June, 2010, for the purpose of Proposed Zone change to Commercial. The property is located on lands at approximately 650 West 0 South, Burley, Idaho, Cassia County, Idaho more particularly described as follows:

Such lands are located within the Residential Agriculture zone.

The applicant will appear at this hearing to provide the Cassia County Planning & Zoning Commission all the information required for issuance of a Conditional User permit for the proposed use under the Cassia County Zoning Ordinance, before such permit can be issued.

A copy of the Application for Conditional Use Permit, including relevant maps and drawings, and information concerning the hearing process is available for review by the public at the office of the Zoning Administrator, Room #4 in the basement of the Cassia County Courthouse, 1459 Overland Ave., Burley, Idaho, prior to the hearing.

All other interested persons are invited to attend the hearing on the question of issuance of the requested conditional use permit. Such other interested persons are advised that in order to participate in the hearing, the following regulations apply:

A. Written Statements of Support of Objection: All persons to whom notice is mailed shall be advised in that notice that they and others who can establish that their substantial rights would be affected by the approval or denial of the permit may file written objections or supporting statements with the planning and zoning commission secretary no later than ten (10) days prior to the hearing setting forth in that writing that person's support or objection to the issuance of the new conditional use permit.

- Written objections shall set forth each requirement of law (local, state or federal) which the objecting party believes the conditional use permit would violate.
- Written statements shall also set forth either that the party making the statement owns property within one (1) mile of the external boundaries of the conditional use permit described in the application and/or otherwise setting for the substantial rights that would be affected by the approval or denial of the permit.
- Additionally, any party desiring to file any document(s) exceeding one (1) one-sided, 8 1/2" x 11" sized page, shall file such document(s) at least ten (10) days prior to the hearing, with the planning and zoning commission secretary. The planning and zoning commission reserves the right to reject any proffered documentation that violates the intent of this regulation.

B. Providing Testimony at the Public Hearing: Any person who files a statement in support or objection to the issuance of a new conditional use permit shall indicate in such statement whether or not such person desires to testify at the hearing.

- Prior to the hearing the planning and zoning commission shall determine which of those persons who desire to testify will be permitted to testify at the hearing.
- All statements of support or objections shall be made a part of the record at the hearing, but no person except the applicant shall be permitted to testify at the hearing unless they have previously filed a written statement of support or objection to the issuance of the permit.

Notice of Realty Action; Direct Sale of Public Lands in Lincoln County, Idaho; IDI-35790

SUMMARY: The following described public land is being proposed for direct sale to Alan Woodland in accordance with Sections 203 and 209 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, as amended, (43 U.S.C. 1713 and 1719), at no less than the appraised fair market value of $14,000: Boise Meridian, T. 6 S., R. 22 E., Sec. 29, SW¼SW¼. The area described contains 40 acres in Lincoln County.

The public land is identified as suitable for disposal in the 1985 BLM Monument Resource Management Plan, as amended, and is not needed for any other Federal purposes. The identified public land was identified for disposal in an approved land use plan in effect on July 25, 2000; therefore, proceeds from this sale will be deposited into the Federal Land Disposal Account authorized under Section 206 of FLTFA. Under FLTFA, revenues generated from the sale or disposal of lands identified for disposal in land use plans as of July 25, 2000, are directed to an account that can be used by the BLM, the U.S. Forest Service, the National Park Service, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to purchase lands located within Federally designated areas or with higher resource values from willing sellers.

Regulations contained in 43 CFR 2711.3-3 make allowances for direct sales when a competitive sale is inappropriate and when the public interest would best be served by a direct sale, including the need to recognize an authorized use, such as an existing business which could suffer a substantial economic loss if the tract were purchased by someone other than the authorized user. In accordance with 43 CFR 2710, the BLM authorized officer finds that the public interest would best be served by authorizing the direct sale to Alan Woodland, which would allow the identified lands to be consolidated with Alan Woodland's adjacent private property to continue to be used for agricultural purposes.

It has been determined that the subject parcel contains no known mineral values; therefore, the BLM proposes that the conveyance of the Federal mineral interests occur simultaneously with the sale of the land. On August 25, 2008, the above described land was segregated from appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws. The segregation terminates 1) upon issuance of a patent, 2) publication in the Federal Register of a termination of the segregation, or 3) 2 years from the date of segregation, whichever occurs first. The lands will not be sold until at least 60 days after the date of publication of this notice in the Federal Register. Alan Woodland will be required to pay a $50 nonrefundable filing fee for the conveyance of the available mineral interests.

Any patent issued will contain the following terms, conditions, and reservations:

1. A reservation of right-of-way to the United States for ditches and canals constructed by the authority of the United States under the Act of August 30, 1890, 43 U.S.C. 945;
2. A condition that the conveyance be subject to all valid existing rights of record;
3. A notice and indemnification statement under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (42 U.S.C. 9620(W)), indemnifying and holding the United States harmless from any release of hazardous materials that may have occurred; and
4. Additional terms and conditions that the authorized officer deems appropriate.

Detailed information concerning the proposed land sale including the appraisal, planning and environmental documents and a mineral report are available for review at the Shoshone Field Office, 400 West F Street, Shoshone, ID 83352. Normal business hours are 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, except for Federal holidays.

PUBLIC COMMENTS: Public comments regarding the proposed sale may be submitted in writing to Ruth A. Miller, BLM Shoshone Field Manager, 400 West F Street, Shoshone, Idaho 83352, on or before July 30, 2010. Comments received in electronic form, such as e-mail or facsimile, will not be considered. Any adverse comments regarding the proposed sale will be reviewed by the BLM Idaho State Director or other authorized official of the Department of the Interior, who may sustain, vacate, or modify this realty action in whole or in part. In the absence of timely filed objections, this realty action will become the final determination of the Department of the Interior. Before including your address, phone number, e-mail address, or other personal identifying information in your comment, be advised that your entire comment including your personal identifying information may be made publicly available at any time. While you can ask us in your comment to withhold from public review your personal identifying information, we cannot guarantee that we will be able to do so.
