Idaho officials applaud Yucca Mountain move

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Idaho officials are cheering news that a bid to pull the plug on a proposed national nuclear waste dump has stalled, concerned that eliminating the site could delay removal of nuclear waste from the state.

A U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission legal panel on Tuesday denied a request by the U.S. Department of Energy to withdraw its application for the Yucca Mountain Repository in Nevada.

The three-member Atomic Safety and Licensing Board said there's no evidence the site is unsafe and that Congress, not Energy Secretary

Steven Chu, has the authority to yank the application.

The request now goes before the full NRC. But Idaho's congressional delegation has already joined those from Washington and South Carolina in supporting the panel's ruling.

Arizona cops expect scrutiny of immigration enforcement

By Jonathan J. Cooper

PHOENIX — Police enforcing Arizona's toughest-in-the-nation immigration law are allowed to consider if a person speaks poor English, looks nervous or is traveling in an overcrowded vehicle.

They can even take into account whether someone is wearing several layers of clothing in a hot climate, or hanging out in an area where illegal immigrants are known to look for work.

But top police officials issued a stern warning to officers Thursday, telling them in a training video not to consider race or ethnicity and emphasizing that "the entire country is watching."

The officials cautioned that opponents of the law may secretly videotape

Medical professionals urge fireworks safety

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

On top of the professional fireworks displays, many people this weekend will celebrate the Fourth of July by lighting off a few of their own.

While most do so without incident, some, especially children, are injured in avoidable accidents.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimated in 2008 that 7,000 people nationwide went to emergency rooms with fireworks-related injuries. Most of half suffered burns, mostly to their hands, eyes and head, and half were younger than 15.

The emergency room at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center will be

"I expect it to be a busy weekend."

— Debbie Morris, St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center emergency room manager

fully staffed during the weekend. ER Manager Debbie Morris said she always sees an increase in burns from fireworks around the holiday, amid a general increase in heat exposure and trauma injuries because people are out more.

"I expect it to be a busy weekend," Morris said.

Parents tend to think sparklers are safe, but the colorful sticks cause 16 percent of all burns treated during the fireworks season, said Leslie Ruby, a hand therapist and owner of Active Hand and Physical Rehabilitation in Twin Falls. Sparklers can heat up to 2,000 degrees; most of those injured by them are children age 5 and younger, she said.

Children should always have parental supervision. The American Academy of Pediatrics takes it further, recommending that "children and their families should be counseled to attend public fireworks displays rather than purchase fireworks for home use."

As the only hand therapist in the region, Ruby has seen the results of fireworks mishaps. The most severe was a few years ago, when she worked with a Sun Valley man who lost a finger

Same schools, new rules

Districts attempt to handle social networking

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

In the old days, the rules in school were simple: don't chew gum in class, stay quiet while the teacher is talking and keep your hands to yourself.

In the 21st century, it's more complicated. The emergence and growing popularity of social-networking websites like MySpace and Facebook has spawned a new era when teachers and students can communicate in radically different ways.

Such sites also create challenges, with school districts forced to decide whether to embrace the technology while setting rules for acceptable use, or ban it altogether to avoid problems.

Jerome School District's board, for example, is pondering a social-media policy that would allow teachers to start such school-related pages up, provided they are approved by a supervisor.

The board could make a decision this month. The policy proposal recommends having a designated person responsible for the content, with outlined duties like how often the site must be checked and who can post on the site.

"We're still looking at that," said Superintendent Dale Layne. "We don't have that in place, but we may put a Facebook contact in place."

Layne said the policy researched with great care, including a 1,300-square-foot room available for the community.

Ninety people can fit comfortably in the community room. Light streams through large windows. Brown plastic and little flowerpots decorate each table. The kitchen in the back is what Haynes described as a "dream kitchen." A separate door from the outside of the building leads directly into the community room.

"We've had birthday parties, piano recitals, wedding rehearsal dinners and organizational meetings here," Rosenau said. "We are hoping people will see this more as a community building.

"It's a funeral home, but it has the feeling of a nice, exclusive business. People came (to the rehearsal dinner) and said, 'This is so nice. This is nothing like we expected.' And I said, — Gina Haynes, who arranged her daughter's wedding rehearsal dinner at Rosenau Funeral Home and Crematory in Twin Falls.

We almost had a wedding here."

Use of the room is free of charge — all that Rosenau asks is that it is cleaned up after each festivity. Decorations can be brought in and the kitchen allows for catering.

The room is primarily available for families using the chapel or viewing rooms. A 50-inch flat-screen television is mounted on the wall for families to play tribute videos or for groups to use at meetings and parties.

The room was born out of looking toward the future of the mortuary business, Rosenau said. "You have to try to stay ahead of things that are happening. This is a room that is very beneficial for people."

The building on Addison Avenue East, originally created to be a strip mall, is now a place to celebrate life in all stages. Funerals may be the name of the game, but Rosenau has worked hard to make the building a place where he hopes everyone feels comfortable.

"It's a funeral home, but it has the feeling of a nice, exclusive business," Haynes said. "People came (to the rehearsal dinner) and said, 'This is so nice. This is nothing like we expected.' And I said, 'I told you so.'"

Enforcement

Chief Roberto Villasenor tells officers on the video, which was posted online. The recording demonstrates how officers should determine when they can ask someone for proof they are in the country legally.

Arizona's law, sparked by anger over a surging population of illegal immigrants in the border state, generally requires officers enforcing another law — like speeding or jaywalking — to question a person's immigration status if there's a reasonable suspicion that the person is in the country illegally.

Under the law, officers are also allowed to consider if a person does not have identification or tried to run away. But the stakes for making a mistake are high: Officers can be fired if they start asking questions because of a person's race, then lie about it later, the video warns.

"It is also clear that the actions of Arizona officers will never come under this level of scrutiny again," said Lyle Mann, executive director of the state agency that trains police. "Each and every one of you will now carry the reputation for the entire Arizona law enforcement community with you every day."

The law applies only to a traffic stop, a person who is detained or an arrest — not when a person flags down an officer. Police are not required to ask crime victims or witnesses about their immigration status, and anyone who shows a valid Arizona driver's license is presumed to be in the country legally.

"It's a heck of a price to pay," Wayment said.

Ruby said most blast injuries happen because people try to handle fireworks that have misfired. The CPSC recommends not approaching a malfunctioning firework for 15 minutes, then dousing the firework with water and throwing it away.

Never try to relight a firework.

Never light fireworks, except sparklers, while holding them. Place them on the ground, ensuring they won't tip over, in an area clear of flammable objects, and don't wear baggy clothing. Use a punk or fireplace lighter, not matches.

"Some of these warnings seem obvious," Ruby said. "But obviously, someone has made these mistakes if they're posting these warnings."

It is a misdemeanor offense to shoot firecrackers within the Twin Falls city limits, but certain sparklers and fountains are legal. The U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management also remind people that possessing and igniting fireworks is illegal on public land.

Buhl seeks to make more from deposits

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Buhl city officials, looking to get more from their money, want to find a new home for several million dollars earning near-zero interest rates. Higher interest rates would equate to more money earned for city coffers. On Monday, the Buhl City Council heard from two banks, Wells Fargo & Co. and First Federal Savings Bank, contacted by the city as it explores its options. Farmers National Bank recently gave a presentation as well, and others have been contacted. The city is “doing its due diligence” by reviewing account holdings, Mayor Tom McCauley said. “It really is the responsibility of the city to try and maximize our return on investment,” he said.

“Where we are now ... drawing something like two-tenths a percent, the numbers are so bad, and I think we can do better. That’s what we’re trying to find out.” The effort is in the early stages, and the council right now is only getting a feel for what rates might be available at various banks and how secure its funds would be. The city money is now largely invested in funds managed by the state. Cari Kaster, manager for First Federal’s Buhl branch, noted in her presentation the $20,000 her bank’s foundational arm has given Buhl in the past few years. “We’re local and right here,” Kaster said. Wells Fargo representative Rob Atkins said his bank hadn’t prepared a proposal, but could if needed. He thanked the council for the opportunity.

R-Idaho, said in a press release that Chu could not withdraw the application without the approval of Congress because Congress had selected and approved the site. Nevada officials, led by Robert Loux, executive director of the Nevada Agency for Nuclear Projects, have fought the project for 30 years, including filing challenges to the license application. Their main concerns include potential transportation accidents and radiation emissions from Yucca Mountain. The site experiences earthquakes, which violates the repository siting criteria of the International Atomic Energy Agency. But Simpson maintained that the site “is demonstrated to be a safe, suitable repository for our nation’s spent nuclear fuel and defense waste.” The Bush administration submitted the license application in June 2008 and hoped to have the repository operating by 2020. Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, questioned Chu during a March Senate budget hearing about the time it would take to develop alternatives. “We can move in a way that won’t take as long as the previous experience,” Chu said, according to a video of the hearing posted online. Crapo was concerned because the DOE has a binding agreement with Idaho to remove all spent nuclear fuel from the state by January 2035. While Idaho generates some fuel, it also accepts and stores waste from other states. According to the 1995 settlement agreement, the DOE can store up to 55 metric tons in Idaho at any one time. Susan Burke of the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality said Idaho is about halfway to that limit, which itself is a fraction of the 77,000-metric-ton storage capacity of Yucca Mountain. No spent fuel has been sent out of state yet; that awaits a national repository. Erik Simpson of CH2M-WG Idaho said the Idaho Cleanup Project has shipped some low-radiation waste to Carlsbad, N.M., but that site cannot accept spent fuel and other high-level radiation waste. So, it remains in storage in Idaho. Nicole Stricker of the Idaho National Laboratory said any delay is not a safety concern. “The safety issues with storing spent fuel are not a mystery,” Stricker said. If any spent fuel remains in Idaho after the 2035 deadline, Burke said the DOE will pay the state a penalty of $60,000 a day. After making campaign promises to shut the site down, President Barack Obama began cutting Yucca Mountain funds out of the national budget in 2009. The DOE then filed a request with the NRC to revoke Yucca’s license application on March 3. The move was greeted by cheers from environmental groups and Nevada officials, including Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev. But Sen. Jim Risch, an Idaho Republican and ranking member of the Senate Energy Subcommittee, supported the panel’s stand, saying the president’s decision to pull the application was “purely a political one.” Chu established the Blue Ribbon Commission on America’s Nuclear Future in January to investigate nuclear storage options and told Crapo he anticipated a report by the end of the year. But Jennifer Lee of the DOE said the commission is not a siting commission and wouldn’t comment on site alternatives. Before choosing Yucca Mountain, Congress considered sites in Texas and Hanford, Wash. South Carolina has a weapons storage site at Savannah River. Laura Lundquist may be reached at llundquist@magicvalley.com or 735-3376.

Networking

wasn’t proposed in response to a particular incident, but rather is an attempt to be prepared. “With students now, that’s how they communicate, is with text messaging and Facebook and those kind of communications, which as a school we haven’t done that,” Layne said. “As we do this, we need to be careful. It’s a great form of communication if it’s used correctly.” Minidoka County School District currently blocks social networking. “We’re beginning to have discussions, but there are questions about policing and monitoring,” Superintendent Scott Rogers said. “The other question is whether or not it’s going to help student achievement.” Gaylen Smyer, superintendent of Cassia County School District, said the district doesn’t forbid use of social-networking sites but does caution its employees to be professional and avoid misusing them. “The biggest challenge is ... with all of the wonderful things about it, there also are things about it that can be misused,” he said. “People have to be disciplined to not abuse it, and for some people it’s not an issue, and others, they’re always kind of pushing the limits.” Gooding School District Superintendent Heather Williams said use of social media falls under the district’s technology policies. The district uses its own site, with a portal for students and staff to log in and access pages, she said, offering more control than the wide-open Web. If teachers do use social-networking sites for their classrooms, they must be professional sites separate from their personal sites. “Everything’s traceable and trackable and as public employees, their lives are open for public scrutiny,” Williams said. Twin Falls School District’s policy requires employees interested in starting a social-networking account for a class to get permission from an administrator. Communications must be limited to school-related issues.

Both high schools have Facebook pages that students use. “I think it will become popular as more people get comfortable with it,” said spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass. Ben Botkin may be reached at bbotkin@magicvalley.com or 735-3238.

California grants $20-million settlement for kidnapped girl

By Maria L. La Ganga and Shane Goldmacher
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — The family of Jaycee Lee Dugard, who was kidnaped by a paroled rapist and subsequently gave birth to his two daughters, will receive a $20 million settlement from California under an agreement approved by lawmakers Thursday.

Dugard, now 30, was abducted from her South Lake Tahoe neighborhood on the way to school in 1991 and was missing until last August. That's when she was discovered living in a ramshackle San Francisco Bay Area compound owned by Phillip Garrido — the man charged with her kidnap and rape — in a bizarre case that attracted international attention.

Two months after Dugard and her daughters were found, a prison watchdog group reported that state parole officers had failed to properly supervise Garrido for a decade and had missed obvious clues that could have led them to the three victims much earlier.

In claims filed against the state in January, the family said that “various lapses by the Corrections Department” contributed to “Dugard’s continued captivity, ongoing sexual assault and mental and/or physical abuse.”

Assemblyman Jim Nielsen, R-Gerber, called the settlement “prudent.” As the former head of the state parole board for serious offenders, Nielsen said he voted for the settlement because “it will end the legal vulnerability of the state and hopefully bring comfort to the families that they won’t have to have protracted litigation.”

Nielsen acknowledged that the state could have faced legal liabilities “vastly beyond $20 million” if the case had gone to court. He lamented Dugard’s 18-year abduction and blamed the state’s correctional system for lapses that extended the young woman’s ordeal.

“It was a failure of the administration of the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation and their woeful disregard of statute and regulation,” he said.

The settlement was approved on a 70-2 vote in the state Assembly and a 30-1 vote in the state Senate. Spokesman Aaron McLearn said Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger will sign the legislation.

The payment was recommended by the state Department of Justice and approved by the governor’s budget office. An analysis of the settlement bill noted that, although the state Corrections Department denied the allegations and typically had legal immunity from such claims, the Dugard case “had a unique and tragic character,” including “missed opportunities to identify Ms. Dugard” during her captivity.

The January claims on behalf of Dugard, her mother, Terry Probyn, and Dugard’s daughters, age 12 and 15, were a required first step before filing a lawsuit. Usually the state denies such claims and injured parties then file suit.

“The state, in an unusual and very constructive and thoughtful way, decided to try to settle it before the lawsuit was filed,” said retired San Francisco Superior Court Judge Daniel Weinstein, who mediated the Dugard settlement. The reason: “To avoid greater invasion of privacy and greater publicity for the state.”

Weinstein also praised Dugard, whom he described as “a truly remarkable young lady.” Weinstein spent a day with Dugard during the mediation process, and he said “she’s very sincere. She’s not angry and blaming”

Conservationists try to stop order to kill 2 Oregon wolves

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press writer

GRANTS PASS, Ore. — Conservation groups filed a lawsuit Thursday to stop federal wildlife agents from carrying out a state order to destroy a pair of wolves that are blamed for killing cattle in northeastern Oregon.

Filed in U.S. District Court in Portland, the lawsuit argued that the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Wildlife Services should have first consulted the public and studied the environmental impact of killing two of the 14 wolves believed to be in Oregon.

It seeks an injunction blocking the kill order issued by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife on two wolves from the Imnaha pack in Wallowa County.

Josh Laughlin, of Cascadia Wildlands, said they chose to target the federal agency carrying out the kill order, rather than the state agency that issued it, because they felt it was the most direct legal route to stopping the kill order.

“The wolves have since moved away from where the livestock are, and it’s been a month since those killings,” said Noah Greenwald of the Center for Biological Diversity. “To us, it seems like it’s just punitive — a pound of flesh. It’s not clear it’s going to serve any function. We also feel that given how small the wolf population is — roughly 14 wolves in Oregon — that they can’t sustain this kind of killing.”

Laughlin added that if a separate lawsuit in Montana reverses the removal of the wolf from federal endangered species protection in eastern Oregon, the state kill order could be rescinded.

Wildlife Services spokeswoman Carol Bannerman said that by helping to confirm wolves are responsible for a particular livestock killing and removing the wolves responsible, it can help build acceptance of the return of wolves to an area.

Wiped out in Oregon by bounty hunters more than 60 years ago, wolves first returned to the state in 1998 from Idaho, where they were introduced in a federal effort to get them off the endangered species list.

Portland police explain reasons for reopening Al Gore sex case

By Terrence Petty
Associated Press writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Police explained Thursday why they reopened a sexual assault investigation into Al Gore, saying an extra review was needed because detectives looking into the matter last year failed to notify high-ranking officials of their decision to drop the case.

A massage therapist to the stars has accused the former vice president of repeatedly groping and kissing her during a late-night, alcohol-fueled attack in a luxury hotel suite in October 2006. Gore adamantly denies the allegations.

Detectives investigated the claims in 2006 and 2009 but decided not to pursue the case amid a lack of cooperation and erratic behavior by the accuser. The story re-emerged last week after she told her story to the National Enquirer, and police this week said they would reopen the case.

Portland Police Chief Michael Reese said Thursday that “we have determined there were procedural issues with the 2009 investigation that merit reopening the case.” Officers took the accuser’s statement but didn’t proceed further and didn’t clear that decision with higher-ups. In addition, prosecutors were not made aware of the 2009 investigation until recently.

Police would not say whether they would interrogate Gore or examine a pair of black pants the accuser wore on the night in question that she said became stained during the massage.

Gore has said through a spokeswoman that he “unequivocally and emphatically denies” the accusations and believes he will be fully exonerated once the investigation is complete.

“Further investigation into this matter will only benefit Mr. Gore,” said the spokeswoman, Kalee Kreider.

A longtime Gore friend and former campaign and political consultant, Mark McNeely of Nashville, said in a telephone interview Thursday that the allegation seems like an “utterly ridiculous” attempt by the accuser to enrich herself.

Reese promised a thorough, fair and expedited investigation.

“We ask for the public’s patience as we let the facts of the investigation guide us and ensure the integrity of the investigation,” Reese said.

GOP loyalty oath draws some Idaho lawmakers' ire

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Some Republican lawmakers won't pledge loyalty to Idaho's new state party platform, despite a candidate disclosure measure approved at the 2010 state convention last weekend asking them to do so.

State Rep. Maxine Bell, from Jerome, and Sen. Joe Stegner, of Lewiston, said the disclosure could be used to narrow the party's base, not promote healthy debate.

Rep. Carlos Bilbao, from Emmett, said Thursday he hasn't decided what he'll do, but has heard from "five or six" lawmakers who won't sign any pledge.

At Saturday's convention, former Idaho state Senate majority leader Rod Beck spearheaded the provision asking all GOP candidates to pledge support for Idaho's party platform — or list what they disagree with. Beck said answers could become the basis for people to challenge unfaithful incumbents, starting with 2012 primaries.

Bell and Stegner contend it's a mistake to limit the GOP's focus to the platform, which was updated Saturday to urge people to stock up on gold and silver, dump the popular election of U.S. senators and get the Legislature to simply nullify federal laws deemed to violate state sovereignty.

Stegner said it was aimed at threatening Republicans to embrace a more rigid party doctrine instead of the interests of constituents that may differ from region to region.

"It seems to be directed at purifying the party," Stegner said. "It smacks of some rather heavy-handed party membership requirements that I think in the last century have certainly been abused in any number of nations, and I don't think that's the direction America should be going."

Idaho's Republican Party isn't alone: In Georgia, gubernatorial hopeful Ray Boyd was refused a spot on the GOP primary ballot this year because he refused to sign a loyalty oath.

Some Idaho lawmakers aren't taking issue with the disclosure. Idaho candidates who refuse to sign won't be excluded from the GOP ballot, but those who won't would be announced by the GOP chairman 40 days before primaries.

Sen. Brent Hill, R-Rexburg, said he plans to sign it and list areas where he differs — just as he did a similar pledge with the Madison County GOP in the last election.

"We put some things we had concerns about," Hill said, but "overall, we agree with the principles they're looking at."

Idaho Democratic Party Chairman Keith Roark contends Republicans are promoting "ideological purity;" something that will eventually drive moderates from GOP ranks.

"Loyalty oaths are associated with certainly the darkest time in U.S. history," Roark said. "I'm surprised cooler heads have not prevailed."

Beck, who also is behind a lawsuit filed by the Idaho Republican Party seeking to force the state to shutter the GOP primary to all but registered party members, tried unsuccessfully to pass a pledge measure in 2006.

"If some candidate signs the document, then gets elected, and then there's three or four issues or more where they completely ignore the platform, that would give somebody the basis to run against them," Beck said. "It's really for primary voters. Primary voters are typically the more active voters, and they are the voters that probably scrutinize their candidate a little more."

House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke was considering the pledge, but said Thursday he understands frustrations shared by Beck and others who believe the GOP has been infiltrated by those who don't take Republican ideals seriously. The example used by many is Vern Bisterfeldt, a Boise City councilman who won his GOP primary race in May while openly backing several Democrats.

Instead of a pledge, Bedke said halting tomfoolery could be better accomplished by closing Idaho's now-open primaries. Legislation to do just that will be a major theme of the 2011 Idaho Legislature, he said.

"That's the underlying problem — not the lack of a candidate disclosure form," Bedke said. "The system is being worked lately, evidenced by the Ada County commissioner race."

Man convicted of putting loaded gun within reach of stepson

MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (AP) — An Air Force sergeant whose 5-year-old stepson shot a teenager in February has been convicted in military court of reckless endangerment for leaving a loaded gun within the boy's reach.

The boy was playing with the 9mm semiautomatic pistol in his yard in Mountain Home on Feb. 3 when he accidentally shot a passerby in the back. The injury left the teen unconscious for two days and required two operations.

Staff Sgt. Nathanel Harman of the 366th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron was convicted during a June 22 court martial and sentenced to six months of confinement. He also was ordered to forfeit $3,000 in pay over six months.

Air Force attorneys noted the boy had gotten hold of a loaded handgun on top of the refrigerator three days before the shooting.

Some moderate Idaho Republicans have had enough

Five weeks ago, there wasn’t much doubt where the loyalties of most middle-of-the-road Idaho Republicans lay. Come the fall election, they would vote as they always have — for conservative management of state government that adequately funds education. Now, some of them are not so sure. Six mostly moderate Republican legislators were unseated in the May 25 primary, followed by a series of bruising battles between pragmatists and Tea Party activists for control of Idaho county GOP central committees. Then came last weekend’s state Republican convention in Idaho Falls, which produced a party platform which, among other things, called for:

- Ending the direct election of U.S. senators and giving the power to the legislatures.
- Ignoring federal laws “that infringe on Idaho’s 10th Amendment sovereignty.”
- Abolishing the Federal Reserve and allowing “free Idahoans (to) pay taxes, and other fees due to the state, county and city in silver and or gold in any form. ...”
- Suggesting the state engage in tax protest by holding on to the federal taxes Idahoans pay.
- Arguing the state constitutional amendment banning gay marriage wasn’t tough enough and restricting marriage to “naturally born” men and women.
- Recommending a state constitutional amendment as a prelude to Idaho assuming control of U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management territory.
- Subjecting everybody who runs as a Republican to sign a loyalty oath to follow the platform.

Mainstream Republicans are like most Idahoans: They don’t like other folks putting words in their mouths, and they’re not happy when ideas they don’t support are grafted onto their party’s statement of principles. So can the arch-conservative wing of the GOP still count on the moderates’ support in November? Probably, but with some exceptions. And one of them might be Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s increasingly rocky quest for a second term. The governor’s Democratic opponent, Keith Allred, has already raised more money than Otter, and on Thursday Allred gained the support of the kind of Republican the governor will need in November.

Former seven-term state Sen. Hal Bunderson of Meridian is a retired accountant who exemplifies fiscal caution. As chairman of the Local Government and Taxation Committee in 2006, he was one of the leading opponents of then-Gov. Jim Risch’s successful campaign to cut property taxes and pay for it by raising the sales tax.

“I am troubled that Idaho’s education systems and economy are in the worst shape they have been for decades,” Bunderson said. “If the governor had closed the tax gap last year, they would have had the money to educate our children today. Now school districts are asking their taxpayers to increase property taxes or cut school days, programs and teachers. How can a governor allow this to happen — unchallenged?”

It’s a good question, and one that Otter has yet to successfully answer.

So far, the governor’s supporters have mostly dodged substantive issues by trying to paint Allred as a tax-and-spend liberal.

It hasn’t worked. Allred, a Mormon who was raised on a southern Idaho cattle ranch, is as personally conservative as they come. Temperamentally, he has more in common with small-town Idahoans who sit on school boards and city councils than the governor does.

Think not? Two years ago, Allred and his political action organization, The Common Interest, opposed increasing the gasoline tax for road repairs, which the governor wanted. Polls taken at the time showed at most Idahoans were on Allred’s side of the issue.

Otter’s campaign will continue to underestimate Allred at its peril.

Just ask Sen. Bunderson.

Why didn’t the Russians just look on the Web?

Along with many other things, the spy novel did not survive the end of the Cold War. There are still thrillers, of course, but it isn’t the same: James Bond has become just another action hero, and John Le Carre had turned into yet another British writer who doesn’t like George Bush. When communism collapsed, the dead-letter drops, the invisible ink and the micro-film concealed in hollowed-out pumpkins mostly disappeared from fiction, too.

Yet these things have not, it seems, disappeared from real life. This week the FBI arrested 10 people — an 11th was detained in Cyprus, given bail and vanished — who stand accused of working as “illegals” on behalf of the Russian government. Like the Kevin Costner character in the movie “No Way Out,” several of them are Russians who have lived in the United States for many years, slowly acquiring American identities. Although they kept in regular touch with their Russian bosses — “Moscow Center” — they have American university degrees, American professions and American children.

They also have American friends. One of these friends may have been Alan Patricof, a Democratic fundraiser and friend of the Clintons. Patricof had occasional conversations with a tax expert, Cynthia Murphy, with whom he discussed . . . taxes. After one of these chats, an excited Murphy — a Columbia Business School graduate with an unidenti-fiable accent — told Moscow Center she had made contact with a “prominent New York-based financier.” Moscow Center, equally excited, told her, according to a federal complaint, to listen carefully for his “remarks re US foreign policy,” as well as “rumors” [sic] from the White House “kitchen.”

Which leads us to the central mystery: Why on Earth would the Russian government spend years of its time and millions of its dollars on the education, upkeep and housing of a spy who might someday be able to collect some rumors from a Democratic fundraiser and friend of the Clintons? There must be several thousand people who fit that description in New York alone, and I bet not one of them knows a single piece of information that cannot also be found somewhere on the Internet. Rumors, White House gossip, foreign policy tidbits — these are things you can find on the Web sites of The Post, the Brookings Institution and several dozen other institutions, all of whose blogs and articles can be thoroughly examined from an armchair in Moscow.

Explanations have been offered for the apparent cluelessness of these illegals. Maybe they were “sleepers,” agents living under deep cover because they might someday be useful. Perhaps they were “talent scouts” whose job was to identify others with greater potential. Or perhaps they were couriers who carried cash and information on behalf of more senior figures.

My guess is different: I think the instructions they were given reflect the mentality of the current Russian elite, many of whose members were once members of the KGB. In its time, the KGB did not believe that elections could be truly free — so-called bourgeois democracy was always held to be a fiction — and neither does a part of the current Russian ruling class. In its time, the KGB did not believe in the free circulation of information, either and neither does a part of the current Russian ruling class.

By contrast, secret information, according to the old KGB way of thinking, is “better,” or at least more reliable, than anything the American government would make public. Hence Moscow Center’s pleasure when one of its U.S. spies sent an analysis of the gold market even though American think tanks actually compete to publish their best information as quickly and as prominently as possible. Hence Moscow Center’s desire to befriend Harvard professors — as if a Harvard professor wouldn’t share his views with any old Russian diplomat who knocked on his door.

The illegals themselves apparently knew better. In a conversation recorded by an FBI wiretap, one of them complains that Moscow wants sources for the information he is providing. “Put down any politician from here,” his partner tells him. Murphy, meanwhile, persuaded her handlers to buy a house in suburban New Jersey, arguing that in a society of homeowners, she and her partner had to keep up with the Joneses.

A darker version of the story may yet emerge, of course, this being the world of espionage. But in the meantime, I recommend reading the court documents. If nothing else, the stories of money handoffs, secret radio transmitters, bank transfers and, yes, invisible ink make great beach reading, and help fill the hole in the culture where the Cold War spy novel used to be.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

T.F. council sticks it to the little guy

Here we go again, folks! The Twin Falls city fathers are protecting the big guys and sticking it to the rest of us. Who should be surprised?

We will now pay more than $11 more per month on our water bills no matter how much usage we have of the stuff. I suppose that means that although CSI has thousands of people using the water there, it will pay no more than me, and I am the only one in my household.

Each month I pay the same for garbage and sewer as each other residential customer, even though I’m alone in my house. I have neighbors who have two blue dumpsters and put them out on the curb each week. From November to April I put my dumpster out once monthly and the rest of the year when I have lawn clippings, I put it out each week. This week it was less than one-third full. I wash two loads of clothes and one dishwasher load each week, take one shower each day and have only one person to use the toilet and yet I pay the same for sewage and garbage disposal as a family of 12 does.

Sure is fair, isn’t it? It would be so easy for the city to determine the amount of water usage each account has as well as their output of garbage and sewage and then charge accordingly, but it’s much more easy to stick it to the little guy and “protect” and not make waves to offend the others. Twin Falls residents got up in arms about the fireworks situation and they could also about things like this that really matter. Most are so apathetic, however, that they’ll just pay through the nose and let it be. We wouldn’t want to offend anyone or make a fool of ourselves you know!

Why re-invent the wheel with militia?

Militia? We have the National Guard. Any military organization must be correctly trained and under the ultimate control of the citizens (via elected officials). Anyway, if we should need them, the provisions are in place.

I suggest everyone read Article XIV (Militia) of the Constitution of the state of Idaho. Why re-invent the wheel?

Idaho should get behind Arizona

The illegals in Arizona have taken over the Buenos Aires National Wildlife Refuge (about 3,000 acres, according to Fox News). What are we going to do about it?

Because this can happen in Idaho, which is already happening in small portions in our national parks here in Idaho, they are planting marijuana and guarding it with the same tactics used in Vietnam. These illegals are draining our school systems, our welfare and our Social Security. What are we going to do, just let the illegals come over in our country and take it over? Because what’s going on in Arizona is an act or war!

It’s time we start backing Arizona and send a clear message to them that we’re not going to take it anymore. It’s about time we enact other laws to send a clear message and one is that the only language used in Idaho will be English.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

By Garry Trudeau

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

The roots of redneck pride

Irascible rednecks are nothing new in politics. Once upon a time, they tended to be either marginal firebrands like George Wallace or, more recently, the ne'er-do-well, embarrassing siblings of well-educated Southern pols — think Billy Carter or even Roger Clinton. But nowa-days they seem to be the mainstream politicians themselves.

In April, Haley Barbour, governor of Mississippi, former national GOP chairman and potential 2012 presidential candidate, referred to himself as “a fat redneck” on CNN’s “John King USA.” In May, Sarah Palin embraced the redneck label during her speech at the National Rifle Association’s annual convention in Charlotte, N.C. She then rifled off a list of “you know you’re a redneck when” jokes. (The funniest, I thought, was “you know you’re a redneck if you yell at your husband to move the transmission so you can take a bath.”)

Then, two weeks ago, after local Republican Party officials censured him for using an ethnic slur to describe President Obama and South Carolina gubernatorial hopeful Nikki Haley, South Carolina state Sen. Jake Knotts took to the Senate floor in Columbia. He started by complaining that no one came to his defense when he was called a redneck and ended by proudly claiming the title, saying that the true meaning is a farmer who works in the sun from dawn to dusk.

To many Northerners, “redneck” is just code for uncouth Southern racist, and Knotts’ slurs don’t do much to counter that impression. But as his contorted self-defense suggests, redneck is a complex, marginal and oppositional identity.

Terms like “redneck” and “white trash” were first used in the 19th century by upper-class whites to classify their poorer cousins. They are essentially the product of the ideology of white supremacy. If, as Southern slave owners argued to justify the enslavement of Africans, whites were a superior race, then those whites who did not exhibit “superior” qualities had to be identified and taken down a notch. In other words, poor, rural, uneducated whites were deemed something less than fully white. Northern abolitionists also used poor Southern whites to further their agenda. They considered rednecks uniquely depraved and living proof that the evils of slavery undermined social morality.

More than a century later, during the civil rights era, rednecks became an easy scapegoat for guilty, middle-class Northerners and Southerners — as if poor whites were somehow more responsible than everyone else for the country’s racial sins.

But poor whites gradually redefined the meaning of the terms. If to elites “redneck” or “white trash” meant deserved poverty and menial labor, to many poor whites it came to mean suffering unfairly and hard work. While the Southern gentry may have found rednecks’ lack of education vulgar and coarse, rednecks came to see themselves as frank, commonsensical and having no airs. By the 1970s, redneck also implied a form of authenticity even as the identity jumped far beyond its Southern origins.

Today, to declare yourself a redneck is to insist that you don’t take your cues from New York, Washington or Los Angeles. To call yourself a redneck is to thumb your nose at highfalutin propriety and to revel in a lack of sophistication. Redneck is an identity based on having a chip on your shoulder but not simply — as some insist — because of the gains made by blacks. Redneck resentment doesn’t so much stem from losing “white privilege,” it stems from never having had a crack at that privilege in the first place.

Knotts threw that resentment back at his fellow Republicans in his speech in South Carolina, and he uttered a political threat that sounded a lot like any minority activist flexing his political muscle. “If all of us rednecks leave the Republican Party, the party is going to have one hell of a void,” he said. But unlike most nonwhite activists, Knotts and other redneck pols don’t sound aspirational. Their rhetoric is less about demanding change and help so they can advance than it is about hunkering down in their historical beleaguerment.

So here’s the real redneck joke: You know you’re a redneck when you’re mad as hell and you just want to spread it around. Especially in the midterm elections of 2010.

A backroom deal

Our constituents have expressed disappointment in the failure of animal cruelty legislation to pass in the 2010 legislative session. Senate Bill 1317, which passed the Senate 34-1, was a consensus bill which had many reviewing and changing the content. Led by Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, groups such as Food Producers (an umbrella group), the dairy, pork and poultry groups, the Department of Agriculture, the Idaho Kennel Club, the Idaho Humane Society and the Humane Society of the United States, a broad group of Idaho citizens looked at the drafts and made changes.

The bill clarified the following:

- If standards were to be guidelines, they had to be standards developed by national animal associations
 - Required a list of animal shelters who would provide medical attention for neglected animals
 - Doubled fines with revenues split between the courts, the Department of Agriculture and local governments to compensate entities directly involved in situations
 - Removed the Department of Agriculture from the enforcement of animal cruelty with regard to companion animals (which were defined) but enforcement remained for production animals
 - Allowed for fines for the reporting of false information
 - Clarified and added emphasis to the misdemeanor penalty for the abandonment of horses
 - Clarified that all animal organized fighting events are felonies, not just dog fighting events.
- So, what happened to this bill? The House speaker chose to send the bill to the House State Affairs Committee rather than to Rep. Tom Trail, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. The chairman of the State Affairs Committee, Rep. Tom Loertscher, R-Iona, had some concerns about negligence including the failure to provide “medical care”. A remedy for this concern could have been a meeting during the legislative session of the above stakeholders and anyone else interested, to define “medical care”.

Lastly, personalities had entered the fray. There is some concern that House leadership does not trust the chair of the Senate Agriculture Committee and see him as a threat to Idaho agriculture. Although Sen. Corder owns and manages a trucking company, he is a farmer and has been in agriculture his entire lifetime. We are hopeful that this bill or a similar one will return to the legislature in January 2011. It is important that we, as elected officials, support efforts to reach consensus among groups and citizens with different perspectives to protect animals from animal cruelty.

A second bill, Senate Bill 1411, the Poultry and Swine Act, known as the “ham and eggs” legislation passed the Senate 24-11 and sat in the House Ways and Means Committee until the session ended. You may know that Californians passed tough animal cruelty laws requiring a certain amount of space for farm animals. This has motivated poultry producers to relocate in states like Idaho. This is similar to the dairy industry moving from California to Idaho to escape strict environmental laws.

While there are some concerns about this bill moving oversight of these operations from the Department of Environmental Quality to the Department of Agriculture, we need to do something to ensure that appropriate regulations are in place. Because this bill was sent to Ways and Means to be killed, we have little protections from these large poultry operations. This is unacceptable.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

City officials charged with DUIs get special treatment

I want to talk about DUIs and our judges and our city officials who drink and drive and get caught. I do not understand how our “city officials” and “judges” can go out and drink and drive, get caught, and they do not and are not treated the same way that we as “average Joes” are treated by the courts.

I have witnessed at least four city officials and judges that have been arrested for DUIs and I have yet to see these people out picking up trash, painting walls, cleaning graffiti off our wonderful downtown buildings or any kind of community service. I have not seen these people in drug and alcohol court, at probation and parole going through alcohol classes. I am wondering why not?

I drive people who are in trouble with the courts for these kinds of mishaps, and I see so many people drug testing, urination testing, alcohol blowing early in the morning hours, but not once have I seen some of our officials or judges being treated the same as the rest of us. I think they should be treated the same. They should lose their jobs, their rights to drive, their rights to drink in public places. They should have to do drug and alcohol court, alcohol classes, and they do not.

I have seen two city officials who are currently in trouble for drinking and driving enjoying drinks with their friends and driving home. What’s up with this? I think that if you break the law, city official, judge or even the president of the United States, we all should have to pay the same price as the “average Joes” of society.

Evidence mounts that recovery is hitting the skids

Congress doesn't restore jobless benefits

By Christopher Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The economic rebound is stalling. A raft of weak new reports Thursday provided the strongest evidence yet that the recovery is slowing and added to concerns that the nation could be on its way back into recession. Most notable was a rise in the number of people filing for unemployment benefits for the first time. The four-week average for jobless claims now stands at its highest point since March.

Home sales dive

The bleak indicators come just after Congress adjourned for the holiday weekend without extending jobless benefits, and a day ahead of a report expected to show only modest improvement in the national job market. On top of that, the housing market appears to be slumping again, and the Dow Jones industrials closed down for the sixth trading day in a row. Add in slower growth in China and the Europe debt crisis, and economists are scaling back their forecasts for the U.S. “When you add it all up, it doesn’t imply a double-dip, but it does suggest that growth will be slower than we’d like to see,” said Scott Brown, chief economist at Raymond James. A double-dip recession happens when an economy shrinks, then begins to expand again before going back into reverse. Economists don’t agree on a more precise definition. Senate Republicans, expressing concerns about the ballooning federal deficit, this week blocked a bill that would have kept unemployment checks going to people who have been laid off for long stretches. More than 1.3 million people have been left without federal jobless benefits after Congress adjourned without an extension. That number could grow to 3.3 million by the end of the month if lawmakers can’t resolve the impasse when they return. Among those waiting for a resolution is Nan Esparza, 59, a single mother of three in Smithfield,

N.C., who lost her job as a legal secretary early last year. Her unemployment benefits expired last month. She plans to live off savings. “After that, I’m in a world of trouble,” she said. Near Detroit, Todd Childress expects to run out of unemployment aid in two weeks. He lost his job as a designer at an auto parts company in March of last year and says the job openings in his field attract hundreds of applicants. He had worked in carpet and tile installation as well, but those fields are also hurting. “I really got no answers right now,” he said. See ECONOMY, Business 2

Guaranteed income

Dennis and Karen Defnet pose at their home June 29, in Winneconne, Wis. The Defnets, who are in their 60s, have three annuities that pay them several thousand dollars a month combined.

Annuities draw new look at time of uncertainty

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — The controversy over annuities mystifies people like Dennis Defnet. The semiretired businessman and his wife, Karen, have three annuities that pay a total of several thousand dollars a month. The Wisconsin couple take comfort in knowing they have an assured income for life. And those checks allow them to postpone taking Social Security until age 70, when they can get the maximum payments. “I can’t imagine what drawbacks there would be for anyone who is retiring,” says Defnet, 62. “Who would not like to have guaranteed income for the rest of their life?” More people like the Defnets are coming to appreciate annuities, an investment product which can help retirees meet their income needs once they get a handle on its complexities.

By buying an annuity, generally from an insurance company, investors exchange a sum of money for a stream of periodic payments. Those payments are guaranteed under a fixed annuity but are subject to market risk under a variable annuity, which ties returns to a portfolio of investments. Not everyone is a fan. Annuities can be dauntingly complicated, and some financial advisers shun them because they can be loaded with traps and fees. But interest is growing, reflecting a need for more financial self-reliance at a time when pensions are disappearing and there’s increased anxiety about whether savings will survive a volatile stock market. Everyone from the Obama administration to AARP to a growing number of advisers is encouraging consumers to consider annuities as a way to lock in income in retirement. See ECONOMY, Business 2

Industry feels sting of Chinese ‘honey launderers’

By Dan Eggen
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Washington is buzzing over an unusual lobbying push by the U.S. honey industry, which is asking the federal government for help amid lower domestic honey production and a flood of cheap imports from China. With vocal assistance from Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., U.S. beekeepers, honey producers and packers are pressing the Obama administration to crack down on “honey launderers” in China who ship the product through third countries to avoid the sting of anti-dumping duties. Industry groups and some lawmakers are also pressing the Food and Drug Administration to establish a national “standard of identity” for honey to ensure that products are 100 percent pure, rather than diluted with other sweeteners to cut costs or evade import restrictions. But honey advocates complain that the FDA and other federal agencies have swatted away their concerns. “A standard for honey would protect consumers because they’d get what they’re paying for, and it would protect legitimate producers,” said Bob Bauer, executive vice president of the New Jersey-based National Honey Packers and Dealers Association.

“But it’s not a priority for them.” FDA officials have said previously that a national purity standard for honey would tax the abilities of an already overstretched agency. FDA spokesman Ira Allen said the request is “under consideration in the context of other agency priorities.” The push for action comes at a difficult time for the U.S. honey industry, which is grappling with a mysterious affliction known as “colony collapse disorder” that has decimated the nation’s honeybee population. Domestic production last year was down 12 percent, to 144 million pounds, according to the Agriculture Department; more than 200 million pounds of honey was imported, much of it from China and other Asian locales. The only problem: Many of those countries, including India, Malaysia, Taiwan and Indonesia, have no history of significant honey production. U.S. officials believe most of the honey probably originates in China and is sent through other countries to avoid the tariff.

Sales of foreclosed homes up in Idaho

The Associated Press

BOISE — The sale of foreclosed properties in Idaho increased in the first three months of this year, as banks started foreclosing on homes whose owners had defaulted on their loans. Foreclosure tracking firm RealtyTrac says the sale of Idaho properties in default, scheduled for auction or bank-owned increased 67 percent in the first quarter of this year, compared to the first three months of 2009. Broker Liam Spencer of Boise told The Idaho Statesman that banks had a backlog of loans in default that they have since started processing. RealtyTrac says Idaho had 2,833 foreclosure filings in April and 2,075 in May. The firm says homes sold in foreclosure in Idaho went for average discounts of 7 percent in Idaho, compared to 27 percent nationwide.

Google: China partially blocks search service

By Joe McDonald
Associated Press writer

BEIJING — A Google search feature was blocked in China on Thursday, the company said as it awaited Beijing’s decision on whether to renew its operating license amid tensions over censorship. Google Inc. said mainland users were unable to use the search giant’s “suggest” feature, which offers possible results as they start to type a query. When it works, the feature may offer Chinese users a reminder that “tiananmen square massacre pictures” are available — but perhaps blocked — when they simply start typing in “tiananmen.” “It appears that search queries produced by Google Suggest are being blocked for mainland users in China,” Google spokeswoman Jessica Powell said in an e-mail. “Normal searches that do not use query suggestions are unaffected.” Although Google services such as YouTube do get blocked from time to time, the new constraints are the latest example of the Chinese government using its power to make Google’s search engine a less convenient option on the mainland. Google this week stopped automatically redirecting traffic from mainland China to its Hong Kong site after the government warned the maneuver could result in the loss of the company’s Internet license in the country. Google’s relations with Beijing have been deteriorating since the U.S.-based search giant took a stand against the government’s online censorship rules in response to computer hacking attacks that the company traced to China.

Google closed its China-based search engine March 22 and began routing users to its unfiltered site in Hong Kong. With the shift, Google hoped to be able to maintain its technological toehold in one of the Internet’s most important markets while sticking to its free-speech principles. But the Chinese government’s threats to take away Google’s license indicate it may punish Google for its defiance, even if the retaliation undermines the country’s efforts to encourage more technological innovation.

TWIN FALLS -Twin Falls Livestock Commission Co. reports the following prices from the livestock sale held Wednesday, June 30.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks began the third quarter with another loss after reports on jobs, housing and manufacturing raised investors' economic worries.
The Dow Jones industrial average fell almost 42 points Thursday for its sixth straight loss, although it ended well off its lows ahead of the government's June jobs report. The report is critical because a rebound in jobs is needed for the economy to recover. The numbers are due before the start of trading today.
Anthony Chan, chief economist at J.P. Morgan Private Wealth Management in New York, said expectations are now so low that the market could get a pop from the report. "So many people are so set up for such a negative number that even if the number shows any signs of life there may be some sort of a relief rally," Chan said.
The latest economic reports followed a bad second quarter for investors and added to the importance of today's snap-shot of the labor market.
The government said initial claims for unemployment benefits rose by 13,000 last week to 472,000.

BP disaster may now be worst spill in Gulf history

By Tom Breen
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — Many fishing boats signed up to skim oil sit idle in marinas. Some captains and deckhands say they have been just waiting around for instructions while drawing checks from BP of more than $1,000 a day per vessel. Thousands of offers to clean beaches and wetlands have gone unanswered.

BP and the Obama administration faced mounting complaints Thursday that they are ignoring foreign offers of badly needed equipment and making poor use of the fishing boats and volunteers available to help clean up what may now be the biggest spill ever in the Gulf of Mexico.

Based on some government estimates, more than 140 million gallons of crude have now spewed from the bottom of the sea since the April 20 explosion that killed 11 workers on the Deepwater Horizon oil platform, eclipsing the 1979-80 disaster off Mexico that had long stood as the worst in the Gulf.

In recent days and weeks, for reasons BP has never explained, many fishing boats hired for the cleanup have done a lot of waiting around. At the same time, there is mounting frustration over the time it has taken the government to approve offers of help from foreign countries and international organizations.

The Coast Guard said there have been 107 offers of help from 44 nations, ranging from technical advice to skimmer boats and booms. But many of those offers are weeks old, and only a small number have been accepted, with the vast majority still under review, according to a list kept by the State Department.

A report prepared by investigators with the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform for Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., detailed one case in which the Dutch government offered April 30 to provide four oil skimmers that collectively could process more than 6 million gallons of oily water a day. It took seven weeks for the U.S. to approve the offer.

White House spokesman Robert Gibbs on Thursday

scorned the idea that “some-how it took the command 70 days to accept international help.”

“That is a myth,” he declared, “that has been debunked literally hundreds of times.”

He said 24 foreign vessels were operating in the Gulf before this week. He did not specifically address the Dutch vessels.

More than 2,000 boats have signed up for oil-spill duty under BP’s Vessel of Opportunity program. The company pays boat captains and their crews a flat fee based on the size of the vessel, ranging from $1,200 to $3,000 a day, plus a $200 fee for each crew member who works an eight-hour day.

Wonder Woman: From star-spangled briefs to skintight pants

By Robin Givhan
The Washington Post

Wonder Woman has traded in her signature superhero briefs for skintight black pants. They are the centerpiece of a head-to-toe makeover that includes a navy motorcycle jacket and a pair of gold, bullet-deflecting gauntlets.

Why the change, and what does it mean, if anything?

First off, in her more modern comic-book costume, Wonder Woman (a k a Diana Prince, a k a Lynda Carter) looks like a glamorous athlete instead of an unusually muscular Miss America who happens to fight crime. The sleek lines of the new wonder pants evoke sci-fi warrior agility, while the cropped jacket — with its studded epaulets — adds rock star, Balmain flash.

Historically, superheroes have been closely tied to patriotism. Wonder Woman’s look has not been substantially altered since 1941 (except for the late ‘60s and early ‘70s, when she gave up her costume entirely). The makeover purges the Americana from her clothes. She no longer looks as though she’s wearing a flag. She has shrugged off parochialism to become an international sophisticate.

Because the superhero universe is dominated by men, Wonder Woman has always been burdened by the politics of gender.

She appeared on the first cover of Ms. Magazine in July 1972, her corset and high boots announcing that feminism, beauty and sexuality could forge a powerful coexistence.

Now that she’s been given a pair of pants — that Western symbol of formalized male authority — it’s tempting to declare this makeover an advance in gender equity. But not so fast. In superhero land, where everything is exaggerated, the boys are sketched with a nod to extreme masculinity. Batman’s suit, for example, gives the slender Bruce Wayne perfectly etched pecs. It was only fair that Wonder Woman’s leg-revealing briefs gave mousy Miss Prince a goddess’s sexy, lithe figure.

Pants make Wonder Woman look chic, fit and contemporary. They imbue her with bourgeois authority. But power? From her lasso of truth to those legs of steel, she’s had that from the beginning.

Mayor lays out strict gun rules for Chicago

By Don Babwin
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — With the city’s gun ban certain to be overturned, Mayor Richard Daley on Thursday introduced what city officials say is the strictest handgun ordinance in the United States.

The measure, which draws from ordinances around the country, would ban gun shops in Chicago and prohibit gun owners from stepping outside their homes, even onto their porches or garages, with a handgun.

Daley announced his ordinance at a park on the city’s South Side three days after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Americans have a right to own a gun for self-defense anywhere they live. The City Council is expected to vote on it Friday.

“As long as I’m mayor, we will never give up or give in to gun violence that continues to threaten every part of our nation, including Chicago,” said Daley, who was flanked by activists, city officials and the parents of a teenager whose son was shot and killed on a city bus while shielding a friend.

The ordinance, which Daley urged the City Council to pass, also would:

- Limit the number of handguns residents can register to one per month and prohibit residents from having more than one handgun in operating order at any given time.
- Require residents in homes with children to keep them in lock boxes or equipped with trigger locks.

Daley

- Require prospective gun owners to take a four-hour class and one-hour training at a gun range. They would have to leave the city for training because Chicago prohibits new gun ranges and limits the use of existing ranges to police officers. Those restrictions were similar to those in an ordinance passed in Washington, D.C., after the high court struck down its ban two years ago.
- Prohibit people from owning a gun if they were convicted of a violent crime, domestic violence or two or more convictions for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs. Residents convicted of a gun offense would have to register with the police department.
- Calls for the police department to maintain a registry of every handgun owner in the city, with the names and addresses to be made available to police officers, firefighters and other emergency responders.

Those who already have handguns in the city — which has been illegal since the city’s ban was approved 28 years ago — would have 90 days to register those weapons, according to the proposed ordinance.

Residents convicted of violating the city’s ordinance can face a fine up to $5,000 and be locked up for as long as 90 days for a first offense and a fine of up to $10,000 and as long as six months behind bars for subsequent convictions.

“We’ve gone farther than anyone else ever has,” said Corporation Counsel Mara Georges.

Toyota to recall 270,000 cars to fix faulty engines

TOKYO (AP) — Toyota Motor Corp. announced Friday it will recall 270,000 vehicles worldwide to fix faulty engines in the latest setback for the world’s No. 1 automaker.

The recalled vehicles include seven luxury Lexus sedan models as well as the popular Crown, Toyota spokesman Paul Nolasco said. Of the 270,000 recalled cars, some 180,000 were sold overseas and 90,000 in Japan.

The latest quality lapse comes as the world’s largest automaker scrambles to repair its reputation following the recall of 8.5 million vehicles around the globe because of problems with sticking accelerator pedals.

Toyota was slapped with a record $16.4 million fine in the United States for acting too slowly to recall vehicles with defects.

Toyota said it received about 200 complaints in Japan over faulty engines. Some drivers told Toyota that engines made a strange noise.

Toyota has said there were no reports of accidents linked to the faulty engines.

The company will inform Japan’s transport ministry of a recall of 90,000 vehicles on Monday. Nolasco said it was unclear how many vehicles would be recalled in the United States.

Lexus said in a statement Thursday about 137,000 vehicles could be affected by the engine problem in the U.S.

Lexus General Manager Mark Templin said during manufacturing there were some contaminated materials used for valve springs in the engine, which could cause abnormal noises, rough idling, or the engine to stall.

Toyota dealers have repaired millions of vehicles, but the automaker still faces more than 200 lawsuits tied to accidents, the lower resale value of Toyota vehicles, and the drop in the company’s stock.

Obama says GOP, politics to blame for immigration delay

By Christi Parsons and Peter Nicholas
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In his first major speech on the issue since taking office, President Obama said Thursday that the U.S. immigration system “offends our most basic American values” and blamed Republican opposition for thwarting critically needed change.

It was the third time in as many days that Obama singled out Republicans as an obstructionist force, blaming them in his earlier appearances for defending the BP company in the aftermath of the Gulf Coast oil spill and for opposing stronger financial regulatory legislation.

The president’s remarks this week represented the clearest preview yet of the message the White House intends to highlight in this year’s mid-term election: stubborn Republican refusal to help solve national problems.

The theme appeared to galvanize many supporters of immigration legislation who were in the audience at American University for Obama’s speech Thursday.

“I think it was a clarion call,” said Samuel Rodriguez, president of the National Hispanic Christian Leadership Council. “He implied, ‘The ball is in your court.’”

Republicans shot back with a sizzling critique of the president’s position, dismissing Obama’s argument that the U.S.-Mexican border was more secure now than in years.

“Half a million people still illegally enter our country today, most through Arizona, and his administration has yet to lay out a strategy on how it intends to bring it under control,” said Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz.

The immigration debate has been fueled by passage of an Arizona law that allows police to question those they suspect of being illegal immigrants following a lawful stop. The Obama administration is expected to announce soon that it will file a legal challenge to that law.

Speaking to religious and political activists, Obama in his speech recalled congressional steps toward immigration restructuring under former President George W. Bush, when a bipartisan coalition of lawmakers supported a comprehensive solution.

“Unfortunately, reform has been held hostage to political posturing and special-interest wrangling,” Obama said. “Now, under the pressures of partisanship and election-year politics, many of the 11 Republican senators who voted for reform in the past have now backed away from their previous support.”

Nonetheless, Obama offered no new solutions, timetables or points of compromise. Instead, he outlined a longstanding prescription for reform that, in addition to having no support from Republicans in Congress, also has failed to unite his fellow Democrats.

Some activists had asked the president to speak at Ellis Island, the historic New York entry port, on the Fourth of July. But Obama chose to deliver his immigration address ahead of the Independence Day weekend and before a crowd at American University.

Doctors need to outline possible prescription side effects

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been diagnosed with peripheral neuropathy. I am a 73-year-old female in generally good health. I’ve had gall-bladder surgery, a hysterectomy, cataract repair, and knee and shoulder replacements.

I noticed a tingling feeling in my left middle finger, left foot and then my right foot. I went to a podiatrist, who prescribed gabapentin. I am now taking 300 milligrams three times a day, but it doesn’t seem to be helping. It is a disturbing feeling that keeps me awake at night until I finally fall asleep from exhaustion. During the night, the tingling seems to go away, but as soon as I start walking, it starts up again.

DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

I read an article that mentioned a person taking a statin drug for more than five years can develop peripheral neuropathy. I was on 40 milligrams of Zocor that was increased to 80 milligrams five years ago. I’ve been cutting the pill in half for a year following a cholesterol reading of 163 and now take L-thyroxine, furosemide, aspirin, folic acid, fish oil, vitamin C, potassium, calcium with vitamin D, iron with calcium, and vitamins B6 and B12. The neuropathy began six months to a year ago. Muscle and nerve biopsy tests showed no damage, nor do I have diabetes according to the blood work ordered.

If peripheral neuropathy results from statin drugs, why aren’t patients told this when they are given them? If I stop taking the statin, would or could the neuropathy go away?

DEAR READER: I am surprised your physician did not advise you of the possible side effects of the Zocor he prescribed. A year or more ago, there was a great deal of media coverage regarding debilitating calf-muscle cramping and tingling that resulted from the use of statin drugs. In the defense of drug companies, not everyone will experience similar side effects. Some people can successfully be prescribed almost any medication without side effects. However, others can’t tolerate them and must find alternative control for their medical issues. There is no need to alarm patients needlessly; however, they do have a right to know what they might expect.

This brings me to a related issue. When a physician prescribes any medication, it is his or her obligation to verbalize any possible side effects. Should that not happen, the patient should ask what to expect when taking something new. When this is accomplished, the patient and physician can make an educated decision as to whether a drug is appropriate or simply not worth the risk.

You list the surgical procedures you underwent but don’t indicate whether you have any cardiac issues that your physician is attempting to micromanage. I occasionally get criticized by my colleagues when I indicate a reading is normal, only to find there are extenuating unknown circumstances for wanting levels substantially lower. That said, I don’t know what your cholesterol readings were prior to the Zocor, but you certainly might be managed on a lower dose than the 80 milligrams. That decision is best left to your physician, who knows your complete medical history.

Give your doctor credit for testing you for diabetes, which carries the symptom of peripheral neuropathy, and kudos to you for supplementing B6 and B12 for possible deficiencies.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report “Understanding Cholesterol!” Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, P.O. Utah artist known for painting of Washington at Valley Forge dies

By Elizabeth White
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Arnold Friberg, a Utah artist best known for his painting of George Washington in prayer at Valley Forge, died Thursday, his family said. He was 96.

Jayna Friberg-Cleamons said her father-in-law died at a Salt Lake City rehabilitation center following hip replacement surgery.

Friberg, a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, also painted portraits of figures from the Book of Mormon.

“He didn’t want to be known as Mormon artist,” Friberg-Cleamons told The Associated Press. “He just wants to be defined as an artist that painted a wide range of things.”

Friberg-Cleamons said Friberg became an expert in any subject area he depicted, from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to the history of college football. She said his paintings are full of emotion.

“There’s something about the light that (he) put in these paintings that just touches” people, she said. “His work inspires people.”

Friberg also painted Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Charles, his daughter-in-law said, holding forth in his own studio at Buckingham Palace for the commission.

Friberg started drawing cartoons in his youth, according to the Deseret News in Salt Lake City.

“I drew an original cartoon every day because I wanted to be a cartoonist,” he told the Deseret News in 2003.

A recorded message at Friberg Fine Art in Salt Lake City said the office will be closed until Tuesday in remembrance of Friberg, who also was nominated for an Academy Award in costume design and painted scenes for the movie “The Ten Commandments.”

Friberg’s “The Prayer at Valley Forge,” which he created to commemorate the United States’ bicentennial in 1976, is displayed at the Mount Vernon estate in Virginia. It depicts Washington kneeling in the snow beside his horse.

In 1999 a federal judge ruled that bronze sculptures made by another artist were illegal copies of “The Prayer at Valley Forge” and violated Friberg’s copyright for the oil painting.

Friberg had sued Jonathan Bronson in 1997, contending the two versions were unauthorized copies.

Utah Gov. Gary Herbert said in a statement Thursday that “The Prayer at Valley Forge” hangs in his office and that it inspires him daily.

“Utah is proud to call Arnold Friberg its adopted son,” Herbert said. “His work is instantly recognizable and has inspired countless people, whether it is through his religious illustrations or his patriotic pieces.”

Researchers closing in on genetic variation that helps people live to 100

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The oldest among us seem to have chosen their parents well. Researchers closing in on the impact of family versus lifestyle find most people who live to 100 or older share some helpful genes.

But don’t give up on diet and exercise just yet.

In an early step to understanding the pathways that lead to surviving into old age, researchers report in Thursday’s online edition of the journal Science that a study of centenarians found most had a number of genetic variations in common.

That doesn’t mean there’s a quick test to determine who will live long and who won’t — a healthy lifestyle and other factors are also significant, noted the team led by Paola Sebastiani and Thomas T. Perls of Boston University.

Nevertheless, Perls said the research might point the way to determining who will be vulnerable to specific diseases sooner, and there may be a possibility, down the road, to help guide therapy for them.

The team looked at the genomes of 1,055 Caucasians born between 1890 and 1910 and compared them with 1,267 people born later.

By studying genetic markers the researchers were able to predict with 77 percent accuracy which gene groups came from people over 100.

“Seventy-seven percent is very high accuracy for a genetic model,” said Sebastiani. “But 23 percent error rate also shows there is a lot that remains to be discovered.”

The centenarians could be fitted into 19 groups with different genetic signatures, they found. Some genes correlate with longer survival, others delayed the onset of various age-related diseases such as dementia.

“The signatures show different paths of longevity,” Sebastiani said.

In general, the centenarians remained in good health longer than average, not developing diseases associated with old age until in their 90s, according to the study.

The researchers were surprised, Sebastiani said, that they found little difference between the centenarians and the control group in genetic variations that predispose people to certain illnesses.

“We found that what predisposes to a long life is not lack of disease associated variants, but the presence of protective variants,” she said at a briefing.

In addition, 40 percent of “super-centenarians” aged 110 and over had three specific genetic variants in common.

Perls cautioned that this is a very complex genetic puzzle and “we’re quite a ways away, still, in understanding what pathways are governed by these genes.”

“I look at the complexity of this puzzle and feel very strongly that this will not lead to treatments that will get people to be centenarians,” he said.

But it may help in developing a strategy and screenings that will help find what treatments will be needed down the road.

While this study, begun in 1995, focused on Caucasians, the researchers said they plan to extend it to other groups, including studying Japan, which has large numbers of elderly.

“Inheritability of longevity has been looked at, so genes do play a role,” said Dr. Kenneth S. Kendler of the Department of Human and Molecular Genetics at Virginia Commonwealth University.

But so do other factors “such as driving motorcycles fast and smoking,” said Kendler, who was not part of the research team.

The 77 percent accuracy rate reported in this study is better than other groups have been able to do, Kendler added.

The U.S. study found that about 85 percent of people 100 and older are women and 15 percent men.

“Men tend to be more susceptible to mortality in age-related diseases,” Perls said. “Once they get a disease they more readily die. Women, on the other hand, seem to be better able to handle these diseases, so they tend to have higher levels of disability than men, but they live longer than men.”

The study was funded by grants from the National Institute of Aging and the National Heart Lung and Blood Institute of the National Institutes of Health.

Park service revamps map of Chief Joseph’s route

OROFINO (AP) — There’s a new map highlighting the 1,170-mile Nez Perce National Historic Trail outlining the route Chief Joseph and about 800 Nez Perce tribal members used in 1877 during their unsuccessful bid to reach Canada and avoid being confined to a reservation.

The $10 map — available at U.S. Forest Service and National Park Service offices — replaces the last Nez Perce National Historic Trail map, last revised 15 years ago.

In addition to showing important sites along the trail

Chief Joseph and his band of non-treaty Nez Perce followed to flee the U.S. Cavalry, the map also shows boundaries of the land traditionally used by the tribe — and how that territory was altered by treaties of 1855 and 1863.

The historic trail includes 38 sites in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana and is considered sacred ground to many people.

Swine flu vaccines are sorted at Bill Graham Civic Auditorium in San Francisco in December 2009. Forty million doses of swine flu vaccine expired on Wednesday and will be destroyed.

Millions of vaccine doses pass expiration date, will be burned

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — About a quarter of the swine flu vaccine produced for the U.S. public has expired — meaning that a whopping 40 million doses worth about $260 million are being written off as trash.

“It’s a lot, by historical standards,” said Jerry Weir, who oversees vaccine research and review for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

The outdated vaccine, some of which expired Wednesday, will be incinerated. The amount, as much as four times the usual leftover seasonal flu vaccine, likely sets a record. And that’s not even all of it.

About 30 million more doses will expire later and may go unused, according to one government estimate. If all that vaccine expires, more than 43 percent of the supply for the U.S. public will have gone to waste.

Federal officials defended the huge purchase as a necessary risk in the face of a never-before-seen virus. Many health experts had feared the new flu could be the deadly global epidemic they had long warned about, but it ended up killing fewer people than seasonal flu.

“Although there were many doses of vaccine that went unused, it was much more appropriate to have been prepared for the worst case scenario than to have had too few doses,” said Bill Hall, spokesman for U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Most leading health experts generally agree with that.

“We were faced with the first pandemic we’d had in 40 years. We had to ensure there would be enough vaccine for our nation,” said Dr. Mark Mulligan, an Emory University researcher who was involved in testing the vaccine.

Many average Americans also agreed earlier this year, said Robert Blendon, a Harvard University professor who conducts polls on public health. He said a Harvard poll in January found that 59 percent of Americans would prefer the flu vaccine be over-ordered to ensure enough was available, even if it meant doses went unused.

Millions of doses of flu vaccine typically go unused every year and are marked for burning, but in recent years the leftovers amounted to closer to 10 percent of the supply, rather than the 25 percent expiring now. Government flu experts couldn’t recall throwing away anything close to 40 million doses before.

Something is rotten in comedic ‘Hamlet II’

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Think Shakespeare is a little stuffy? Then join West End Theatre Co. as it pokes fun at the Bard of Stratford upon Avon during its upcoming show, Sam Bobrick’s “Hamlet II (Better than the Original).”

If Mel Brooks, the master-mind behind hit movies like “Spaceballs” and “Blazing Saddles,” would have penned a Shakespearean parody, this would be it, said Billy Perry, who plays Denmark’s Prince Hamlet.

Perry’s rendition of Hamlet is hilarious and full of schtick. His boyish charm shines through as Hamlet is tormented over his suspicion that his uncle, Claudius, killed his father and took his mother, Gertrude, as his wife.

Making matters worse: The Ghost of Denmark continually visits Hamlet, begging him to avenge his death and kill Claudius, so that the rules of heaven are met and he can enter the pearly gates.

“I see the King as a bit Cheech, from Cheech and Chong,” said WETCo newbie Tye Gray, who plays the Ghost. “It fits. I don’t know why but it does ... and it’s hilarious.”

Gray, at 45 one of the older cast members, returned to the theater after a few years away from the stage, last performing in Wyoming. He’s enjoying working with a talented cast, including many College of Southern Idaho theater students.

The Ghost pleads with Hamlet to kill Claudius as soon as possible, but the young prince is torn, musing regularly, “To be or not to be.” To catch Claudius’ conscience, Hamlet decides to write a hit musical. But that just makes the new king even more suspicious of his stepson. Add into the mix the Groucho Marx-like Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, a very loose (and pregnant) Ophelia, a Gertrude like you’ve never seen, and you’ve got the stage set for laughs.

It wouldn’t be Shakespeare without the love and hate, a good sword fight, poetry, religion, treachery and deceit. And this show doesn’t disappoint.

Although written for a mature audience, the script has been toned down, said director David Blaszkiewicz, who said it fits a PG or PG-13 rating. Cursing is replaced with softer synonyms, and most entendre is subtle enough to fly over younger listeners.

“When I’m not producing plays I’m reading scripts, and when I was getting prepared for this show I kept coming back to this script.

Hamlet (Billy Perry), left, reacts to the news, brought by Horatio (Korby Hutchinson), that his musical’s leading lady has died, just moments before the show. Hamlet’s love interest, Ophelia (Paige Nunnally), declares she knows the part, saving the show.

Elvis tribute act heads to Burley

BURLEY — The King is coming to perform in Burley.

After a tour in Montana, Wyoming and Idaho a few months back, Elvis tribute artist Ryan Pelton will return to Idaho to perform “Elvis, Live in Concert” on Tuesday at Burley’s King Fine Arts Center.

Pelton, of Nashville, Tenn., has performed to audiences over the United States and on four continents with the Las Vegas Production show “Legends in Concert.” He has appeared in movies including “Hound Dog” with Dakota Fanning, has appeared in commercials as Elvis and was booked to perform at Graceland, Elvis Presley’s home in Memphis, Tenn. Last year Pelton appeared with Celine Dion on “American Idol” performing a duet of “If I Can Dream.”

Pelton has worked beside many of the musicians and vocalists who performed with The King himself, including The Jordanaires, The Imperials, The Sweet Inspirations, D.J. Fontana, Charlie Hodge, Jerry Scheff and Millie Kirkham, promoters said. He has also worked with Memphis

And if it can get me to laugh again and again, that should be part of my criteria for picking a script,” Blaszkiewicz said.

Summer theater often has low audience turnout in Buhl anyway, so Blaszkiewicz isn’t sure how the production will be received.

With so many talented thespians in this show, it would be a shame to miss. You might develop a taste for Shakespeare — or at least for laughing at him.

100 costumes made and fitted for 61 kids in roughly one month. Both women say they cannot accomplish such a feat without the help of numerous JuMP Co. mothers.

“Ana and I don’t sew,” Jennifer Meeks said. “But we’re really good at research and we’re really good at finding things. We figure out what we can borrow or buy, and we have several moms that are seamstresses.”

Jennifer Meeks, who is Ashton Meeks’ mother, has been a volunteer on the senior board for JuMP Co. for a number of years and is now passing the responsibilities to Carpenter.

“I love it,” Carpenter said. “I’m not a seamstress — I can hem and sew on buttons — but I have become really good with glue!”

Both women were grateful to delegate some of the work.

“That’s so good because one person trying to do all of it would drive someone crazy,” Carpenter said. “We call volunteer parents and say, ‘I need this,’ and they run with it. It’s nice to get a lot of support. They pick things up from thrift stores, iron costumes, and just do a whole bunch of little things that really help a lot.”

Lawn mower madness

Joe Phillips of Rupert, photographed in 2009, holds top bragging rights for Mini-Cassia lawn mower racing.

Watch those crazy racers tonight in Rupert

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The phantom of the lawn mower track rides again.

Reigning champ Joe Phillips will defend his title at this year’s Firecracker 500 Lawnmower races today at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds. Registration begins at 5 p.m., with the races at 6 p.m. Admission is $5, or $15 for a family of four or more.

“I am the old guy. I’m 62, the next is in his 40s and the rest are in their 20s and 30s. They are all after me. I tell them just because I’m old I’m not going to let them win — old age and treachery will overcome youth and enthusiasm,” Phillips said.

This is the second year for the Fourth of July races, but they have been around for 12 years at the Minidoka County Fair. The races were started by East End and West End fire departments and have roared on ever since.

“When we first started there were just about half a dozen of us, and it has really grown since then,” Phillips said.

This year the group will have three races, including a May fundraiser for Meals on Wheels and an Aug. 2 race for the Minidoka County Fair sponsored by East End Fire Department.

“We had 43 entries for the Meals on Wheels race and raised $2,000 for them. We plan to have close to 50 entries for the Fourth of July races,” Phillips said.

The lawn mower racers run modified stock of 5 to 8 horsepower and can reach 25 to 30 mph. Contestants can change gearing, but not the engine.

“We don’t do engine modifications. That way $200 to $300 will give you a competitive racer,” Phillips said.

On race day, they run several classes: 8 horsepower, 9-13 horsepower, 14-20 horsepower, ladies class and drag racing.

“Drag racers usually have a motorcycle or snowmobile engine, and we race them 200 feet. It’s just like watching car drag races. We have a Christmas tree starting light,” Phillips said. “There is now a National Lawn Mower Racing Association. It’s just like NASCAR. They’ve been doing it for about 20 years.”

Racers must be 18 or older and wear safety equipment and clothing. They have heats and win by elimination. Three trophies are awarded in each class.

It’s no wonder the other racers are all out to unseat him. Last year there were five first-place trophies, and he won them all.

“Just luck,” he said.

Buhl combines annual festival with Fourth of July fun

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — A trout feed, Idaho Cowboy Association-sanctioned rodeo, fun run, parade, fire hose competition, free swimming, live music, community church service, tractor pull and fire-works round out events for this year's Fourth of July celebration in Buhl.

It all begins today, with the all-you-can-eat trout lunch at West End Senior Center.

Tonight, Buhl will have its first semi-pro, full rodeo since 1990, thanks to Slash T Rodeo of Gooding, known for its award-winning bucking stock.

"There was the Memorial Day bull rider event for the last several years, but we didn't have that this year, either, so we're really excited that Slash T talked with the rodeo association to come this year.

2 p.m.: Fire hose competition starts, McClusky Park. Free admission.

The rodeo used to be one of the biggest draws for Sagebrush Days," said Michelle Olsen, Buhl Chamber of Commerce administrator.

Juanita O'Maley, who owns Slash T with husband Pat O'Maley, said the community's response has been fantastic. Many businesses quickly signed on as sponsors,

"being more than generous, given these hard times." They expect about 150 cowboys to participate tonight and tomorrow. "Buhl is a good area and has a lot going on. It still retains that ... cowboy way of life," O'Maley said. "I believe this rodeo will continue to grow and be one of the biggest. We see this as a yearly thing; I'm on for the long run."

Having the rodeo Saturday evening will give guests in Buhl something to do after park vendors and other Sagebrush Days activities wind down hours before the fireworks display at dusk.

"We're really hoping the rodeo will bring more people in town and they can stay for the whole day," Olsen said.

Saturday's parade could also be a big draw. Prior to the parade's start, Niel Ring's canary-yellow World War II Navy trainer plane will lead a fly-over by local pilots. Their planes will remain on display at Buhl Municipal Airport until 2 p.m.

During the parade, watchers can cheer on the Buhl

Rotary Club's Horse Biscuit Bingo game. President Rick Lauda said the Main Street and Broadway Avenue portions of the parade will be sectioned off into squares, determined by the number of tickets sold.

"It's all done with GPS," Lauda said. "When you buy tickets they'll be assigned to random spots; you can't buy the whole block."

Prizes rounded up for the game include a year's tuition to the College of Southern Idaho, a 40-inch flat screen television, a Wii game console, iPods and a GPS unit, to name a few. Tickets are $5 each or five for $20 in Buhl at Arctic Circle, Avid Sportsman, Barker Realtors, Buhl Herald, Buhl chamber, Valley Country Store, any Canyonside Irwin Realty office and Farmers National Bank in Buhl and Twin Falls.

‘Over the top but always believable’

A romp of improbable adventures

By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Alfred Hitchcock, the master of suspense, might roll over in his grave if he were to see the zany touch that has been applied to a latter-day incarnation of his movie "The 39 Steps."

But audiences will simply roll over in the aisle because they're laughing so hard.

"We love the catch line: 'Mix a Hitchcock masterpiece with a juicy spy novel, add a dash of Monty Python and you have 'The 39 Steps,'" said Company of Fools artist Denise Simone. "From the moment this play starts, the laughs spread like wildfire."

Company of Fools will present "The 39 Steps," a two-time Tony and Drama Desk Award-winning treat, July 6-31 at The Liberty Theatre in Hailey.

As one of only a few theaters to secure rights to the show, the Fools decided to present it through the entire month of July, instead of showing three plays in repertory as they usually do during their Summer Fools Festival.

"It's suitable for all ages, from 9 to 90. And we think people will want to see it more than once. We've already had people reserving tickets for themselves and then buying a second bunch for when friends or relatives come to visit," Simone said.

"The 39 Steps" was written by John Buchan, a propagandist for the British government, who wrote the story for his own amusement while ill. Alfred Hitchcock made it into a film in 1935. And Patrick Barlow adapted the comedy thriller from the film in the late 1990s.

The play, directed by John Glenn, revolves around a man with a boring life who meets a woman with a thick accent while attending a demonstration of the remarkable powers of Mr. Memory, a man with a photographic memory. There's a fight, shots are fired and the woman, who has admitted to being a spy, is murdered.

All of a sudden, Mr. Snore is wrongfully accused and off on a romp through a series of improbable adventures as he tries to escape authorities.

Andrew Alburger, Richard Rush, Jennifer Jacoby Rush and Joel Vilinsky will play more than 150 zany characters in the madcap whodunit 'The 39 Steps.'

It's not all bad, though. He experiences love at the other end of a handcuff, finds a man with a missing finger, escapes death thanks to a book of prayer, and finds he has speech-making capabilities he never knew he had.

Four actors will play more than 150 zany characters, necessitating a full-on stage crew behind the scenes. And even props assume various roles with a trunk becoming a train, which then becomes a hotel desk.

"It's so theatrical but in a very simple way," said set designer Joe Lavigne.

The play stars Joel Vilinsky as the man on the run. Andrew Alburger plays a plethora of characters, including British cleaning woman, underwear salesman and Scottish constable. Jennifer Jacoby Rush plays an assortment including a German spy and an English lady. And Richard Rush? Well, he plays all the rest.

"What I like about it is that it's over the top but always believable," Alburger said.

"I wouldn't call it a slapstick or a farce. It's the combination of several different forms of comedy — almost like a little circus in a way," Simone said.

Learning center fundraiser follows free scavenger hunt

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Up for a mind-boggling scavenger hunt?

The Lee Pesky Learning Center is opening its annual Marvelous Minds Scavenger Hunt to everyone — from children to adults — this year. And it's free.

The learning center is staging the scavenger hunt from 10 a.m. to noon July 10. Teams of up to eight players are invited to race through the streets of Ketchum, solving clues, testing their ingenuity and their ability to think outside the box.

The hunt sign-in will take place at the new Ketchum Town Square across from Atkinsons' Market in Ketchum. But register in advance at 333-0008.

"We're really reaching out to the families this year since so many of our clients are young children," said Mary Rau, who is helping to organize the event.

The scavenger hunt will be followed by the learning center's annual dinner and auction, which raises the money that enables the learning center to accept all clients, regardless of their ability to pay.

The dinner will be held at 7 p.m. at The Community School in Sun Valley. The live auction will include such items as a week in a Bermuda beachfront retreat and a stay at Montana's Yellowstone Bend Ranch, a private hunting and fishing preserve that once hosted President Obama.

Cocktails and a silent auction will begin at 5:30 p.m. Tickets are $150 per person and include cocktails, appetizers, dinner and a few surprises, including a performance by opera singer and Lee Pesky Learning Center board member Lara Nie. Those who can't attend in person may bid online at www.biddingforgood.com/leepesky.

The nonprofit learning center was started 13 years ago to work with youth and adults who learn differently. It has expanded into teaching children social awareness and social thinking skills.

Lee Pesky touches about 10,000 children throughout Idaho each year, said executive director David Holmes. Thirty-five percent of its clients get financial aid; no child is turned away.

The center has clinics in Hailey, Ketchum, Boise and Caldwell. And it has early literacy programs throughout the state, including Magic Valley.

"Many of these children are extremely bright but have a learning disability of some sort, such as dyslexia," said Holmes. "People assume they're struggling because they're lazy, but that's not the case at all."

Cowboy-themed ball benefits equine therapy center

HAILEY — "Mustangs and Moonlight" will be the theme of this year's Cowboy Ball to benefit the Sagebrush Equine Training Center for the Handicapped.

fabulous art by David Stoecklein and an array of auction items," said Lynn Kaplan.

The event will be held inside the horse barn at the riding arena a couple of miles north of Hailey on Buttercup Road.

The Sagebrush Center was founded in 1991 to provide equine therapy for adults and children. It treats people with a variety of challenges, including Parkinson's disease, Down syndrome, brain injuries and autism.

Over the years, it has introduced a number of new therapeutic programs, including horse buggy therapy, and programs for at-risk youth.

Buhl crushes weary Burley in DH

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Buhl is enjoying the dog days of summer, while Burley just looks dog-tired. “Warm weather has gotten us going, the bats are alive,” said Buhl pitcher Markus Lively. “I think we’re playing

Lively tossed a one-hit shutout in the Tribe’s 12-0, five-inning victory over Burley in Game 1 of a Class A American Legion Baseball doubleheader on Thursday. Buhl finished the sweep with a 13-8 win in the nightcap.

“I felt like I had command of most of my pitches,” Lively said. “I hit my spots and trusted the defense. That’s the biggest thing for me, just trying to throw strikes, and hitting the outside spot. I usually hit that spot, and it’s tough for them to hit.”

The lefty’s fastball was on fire, and he mixed in his curveball and an occasional change-up to keep Burley batters guessing. Lively faced two over the minimum with seven strikeouts, no base on balls and two beaned batters.

The Green Sox were playing their 27th and 28th games in a 32-day stretch, and it showed.

“Not only do they look tired, they are tired,” said Burley coach Devin Kunz of his players. “But you still have to play the game right. ... We have a four-day break after tonight and I’ve told them don’t even touch a baseball, don’t come to the yard.”

Seven of Buhl’s 12 runs — including the Tribe’s first five — were unearned as Burley committed four errors.

Marco Avelar was 2-for-3 with four RBIs, including a three-run double to spark Buhl in the second inning. In the fourth, J.D. Leckenby had a two-run triple and Lively hit a two-run homer.

Walk-off wins

Late heroics lead Cowboys to a pair of victories

By John Derr
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Cowboys probably like shows with drama.

Two walk-off hits led to a pair of victories on the first day of the wood bat Cowboy Classic baseball tournament at Skip Walker Field.

In its first game, Twin Falls was down to its last out before a bases-loaded double led to 5-4 victory over Rocky Mountain.

In the second game, an early lead evaporated and the Cowboys were forced to extra innings. Another two-out hit led to another 5-4 win, this time against Longview, Wash.

Thursday’s other games saw Reno topped Rocky Mountain 3-2 while Centennial edged Lethbridge (Alberta) 9-7.

Play continues today at the four-day event with Lethbridge and Rocky Mountain battling at 11 a.m. followed by Longview against Reno at 2 p.m. Longview plays again at 4:30, facing Centennial. The Cowboys finish the night by taking on the Centennial at 7:30 p.m.

TWIN FALLS 5, LONGVIEW (WASH.) 4, EIGHT INNINGS

Braden Box found a hole in shallow center to bring Eric Harr to the plate in the bottom of the eighth as the Cowboys earned their second victory of the day.

“I got jammed. You don’t always hit it hard, but it found a hole and got the job done,” said Box, who went 2-for-4. “It was grit and grind. Coach said this is when the tough players play.”

Facing a team featuring five players with college, the Cowboys led early only to see Longview rally to tie it on a two-run single by Nolan Enriquez. Knotted at 4-4, both teams threatened in the seventh, moving a runner to scoring position before coming up empty.

With two outs in the eighth, Harr, using the bat his father Matt used playing minor league ball, dropped a fly in short right.

Tyler Wolters followed with another single setting up Box’s heroics.

James gets visitors, Gay gets a contract

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press writer

While LeBron James listened to reasons why he should leave his team, Rudy Gay was given a huge reason to stay.

The first big deal of the free agency period went to Gay, who agreed to a five-year deal with the Memphis Grizzlies on Thursday that will pay him more than $80 million, according to a person with knowledge of the negotiations.

While not on the top level of players available, Gay was expected to draw interest from a number of teams. He canceled a planned visit to Minnesota when the Grizzlies stepped forward with their offer.

James received visits in Cleveland from the New Jersey Nets and New York Knicks, and he’s set for more in the coming days before deciding where he will play next season.

In the meantime, deals are getting done around him.

Darko Milicic — drafted right after James with the No. 2 pick in the 2003 draft — agreed to a four-year deal with the Timberwolves. It includes about $16 million in guaranteed money, despite what’s been a disappointing career for the center from Serbia.

Chris Bosh and Dwyane Wade also went in the top five of that draft. They’ve become superstars and will be paid accordingly.

Both players were in Chicago, where Wade met with the Bulls and Nets, and Bosh was visited by Miami. They will sit down with Knicks officials on Friday.

Bosh seemed pleased with what he heard from the Heat.

“Off to a great start,” he wrote on Twitter. “First one went well. Pat Riley is very passionate about winning.”

After years of slashing payroll so it could be a player in this year’s market, New York finally got to make its pitch to James. Arriving just as the Nets left, the Knicks spent more than two hours speaking with James and his advisers.

“I think it went well,” New York coach Mike D’Antoni said. “But obviously everyone that gets the chance to talk to him will probably say the same thing.”

The Nets felt even better about their performance, which came from a group headed by new owner Mikhail Prokhorov and part-owner Jay-Z, James’ longtime

Buhl tabs Winn as new boys basketball coach

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The Buhl Indians have turned to a familiar face to lead their boys basketball program.

Athletic director Stacy Wilson confirmed this week that Castleford coach Dan Winn has been recommended as the placement to Ryan Bowman, who departed after eight seasons to become the principal at Raft River Junior-Senior High School.

Wilson said the hire is pending approval of the school board, which has its next meeting July 19.

“He’s a Buhl guy and he wants to see Buhl succeed, he’s a Buhl community leader,” Wilson said of Winn. “He’s a great fit for Buhl and he’ll have a lot of stability. His job allows him, even though he’s not a teacher, he’s got a lot of time during the winter. He’ll do a good job.”

Winn turned in his resignation to Castleford principal Andy Wiseman on Thursday.

“It was a very difficult decision because of the strong bond I have with the students at Castleford,” Winn told the Times-News in an e-mail. “The Castleford students have done everything I’ve asked of them. They gave me everything they had, and I’m very proud to know them.”

In his tenure, Bowman led Buhl to three straight state tournament trophy finishes, and in 2006 brought the Indians their first hardware — and their first win at state tournament — since 1979. His record in eight seasons at the helm was 92-95.

A 1990 Buhl graduate, Winn assisted Bowman at Buhl before taking the top post at Castleford. He led the Wolves to a 35-16 record in two seasons, including back-to-back Class 1A Division I state tournament appearances and a Snake River Conference championship and second-place state tournament finish in 2010.

“I’m excited to work with the Buhl Indians and I’m curious to see how hard they’re willing to work — on the court, in the weight room and in the classroom,” Winn said. “If they give the team everything they have, we will give them a team experience they will cherish for the rest of their lives.”

Area football players take part in All-State games

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Twenty-four area athletes have been chosen to play in the Sixth Annual All-State Football Games on Saturday at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

The event, sponsored by Wannaplaycollegesports.com, features an 11-man Class 5A-2A game, an 8-man game and an eighth-grade game.

Oakley head coach Tim Behunin will coach the East team vs. the West in the 8-man game and Minico coach Tim Perrigot will lead the Idaho all-stars against the Treasure Valley all-stars in the 11-man game.

“It’s a real honor and privilege to coach in a game like this,” Perrigot said. “There are some outstanding football players and it’s a lot like coaching a college football team. You’ve got some guys who can play, and a lot of them are headed to the next level.”

The games provide more than a platform for players to measure how they stack up against the best in Idaho. According to a press release from organizers, the players will stay in dorms together so they can make lifelong new friends. After practices, the players bond through activities such

Although the teams only have three days of practice together, Perrigot says he’s confident the players will put on a good show for fans.

“It’s a real simple playbook, then you just let athleticism take over,” Perrigot said. “You’re dealing with kids who are not only gifted athletes, but they’re also intelligent football players. These kids can make game adjustments because they have an understanding of the game itself.”

Nineteen players participating in the All-State games will be suiting up for either Boise State, the University of Idaho or Idaho State this fall, including Jerome’s Russ Ciocca at BSU and Declo’s Sage Warner at ISU.

Serena reaches Wimbledon final

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — After Serena Williams moved within a victory of her fourth Wimbledon championship and 13th Grand Slam title overall, she was asked to assess the woman she'll face in Saturday's final, little-known Vera Zvonareva of Russia.

"I don't think she does anything terrible. I think that's the best way to describe her game," Williams said. "She does everything good."

That's a fair, if not necessarily charitable, scouting report. Minutes later came a follow-up: Is there anything Williams herself does "terrible" in tennis or in life?

She hemmed and hawed, then replied, "I don't know. That's a good question. I'm stumped."

It's difficult to find any flaws in Williams' play right now. The No. 1-ranked American has won all 12 sets she's played this fortnight, set a Wimbledon record with 80 aces in the tournament, and reached a third consecutive final at the All England Club by beating Petra Kvitova of the Czech Republic 7-6 (5), 6-2 Thursday.

"Well," the defending champion said, "I'm hoping to still peak in the final."

That must be a daunting prospect for the 21st-ranked Zvonareva, who eliminated Tsvetana Pironkova of Bulgaria 3-6, 6-3, 6-2 in Thursday's other semifinal.

Zvonareva is the second-lowest-ranked woman to reach a Wimbledon final, had never gotten past the fourth round here, and will be playing in a title match for the first time in 30 Grand Slam tournaments.

"I always believe in myself. I don't care about what everyone says," said Zvonareva, who drapes a pink, yellow and blue Wimbledon towel over her head during changeovers to block distractions. "I know if I play my best tennis, I can beat anyone. ... I never look at any odds or comparisons."

Serena Williams swings during her semifinal match against Petra Kvitova at the 2010 Wimbledon Championships at The All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club.

So she might not know that Williams is 12-3 in major finals.

Or care that Williams has won five of their previous six meetings.

"On paper, it looks like I should win," said Williams, who is wearing glittering, silver nail polish that sometimes reflects the sun's rays. "But Vera, she's beaten some good people. Her last two matches, she's been down a set, so she's obviously a fighter."

For Williams, it actually might be refreshing to look across the Centre Court net and see someone other than her older sister Venus.

Serena never has beaten anyone other than Venus in a Wimbledon final, winning all-Williams matchups in 2002, 2003 and 2009. Five-time champion Venus got the better of Serena in the 2008 championship match at the grass-court tournament.

"That's interesting. I guess the crowd should like that — not another Williams-Williams," said their mother and coach, Oracene Price.

A-Rod, Yankees avoid sweep against Seattle

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez hit a tiebreaking, two-run homer in the eighth inning and CC Sabathia won his sixth straight start, leading the New York Yankees past the Seattle Mariners 4-2 on Thursday to avoid a three-game sweep.

Robinson Cano added a solo shot for the Yankees, shut down by Seattle co-aces Cliff Lee and Felix Hernandez the previous two nights.

Sabathia (10-3) took a three-hit shutout into the eighth before a leadoff walk and a passed ball by catcher Jorge Posada led to Russell Branyan's two-run single that tied it at 2.

Mark Teixeira singled off closer David Aardsma (0-5) with one out in the bottom half and Rodriguez homered, his 595th.

Mariano Rivera worked a perfect ninth for his 18th save.

INDIANS 6, BLUE JAYS 1

CLEVELAND — Justin Masterson took a shutout into the ninth inning and Matt LaPorta homered for the third straight game in Cleveland's season-high fifth-straight win.

Toronto has lost five in a row, matching its worst skid this year.

Masterson (3-7) blanked the Blue Jays until Jose Bautista led off the ninth with a double and Aaron Hill hit an RBI single with one out. Frank Herrmann relieved with the bases loaded and got Jose Molina to bounce into a double play for his first major league save.

Masterson gave up eight hits, walked none and struck out five.

Shawn Marcum (7-4) allowed five runs and six hits in four innings.

ATHLETICS 8, ORIOLES 1

BALTIMORE — Trevor Cahill pitched seven innings of four-hit ball to earn his seventh straight win, and Oakland got four hits from Ryan Sweeney.

Sweeney, Jack Cust and Cliff Pennington had two RBIs each for the A's, who took two of three for their first road series win in five tries since May 29-31 in Detroit. Oakland has won four series away from home, half of them in Baltimore.

Cahill (8-2) gave up a run, struck out four and walked one. After starting the season in Triple-A Sacramento and losing two of his first three starts with Oakland, the right-hander is 7-0 with a 2.12 ERA over his past nine starts.

RAYS 5, TWINS 4, 10 INNINGS

MINNEAPOLIS — Willy Aybar's single off Matt Guerrier gave Tampa a 10th-inning lead.

Jon Rauch blew a save for the fourth time this season when Carl Crawford — who had four hits and an RBI — singled and scored on Evan Longoria's tying double in the ninth.

Delmon Young homered, drove in two runs and prevented another with an inning-ending outfield assist against his former team, but Carl Pavano took his first no-decision of the season and his top two relievers — Rauch and Guerrier (1-3) — didn't hold up at the end.

Lance Cormier (3-1) pitched a perfect ninth, and Rafael Soriano picked up his 20th save.

NATIONAL LEAGUE REDS 3, CUBS 2, 10 INNINGS

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Miguel Cairo singled and scored in the 10th as Cincinnati beat Chicago 3-2 on Thursday, the Reds' ninth straight extra-innings win on the road.

Drew Stubbs' RBI grounder as the Cubs tried to turn a double play sent the Reds to their eighth victory in 10 games. Cincinnati is a season-high 10 games over .500 (45-35).

Cincinnati's road winning streak in extra innings dates to June 2009, and is the longest such string in the NL since Atlanta won nine straight in 1999-2000.

The Cubs fell 10½ games behind NL Central-leading Cincinnati. They have lost 11 straight series openers and have scored two runs or fewer in 10 of their last 12 games.

NATIONALS 2, METS 1

WASHINGTON — Ryan Zimmerman hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning to give Washington the win.

Pinch-hitter Willie Harris started the rally with one out in the ninth by walking on a full-count pitch from Pedro Feliciano (2-4). After a sacrifice moved the runners, Cristian Guzman

At least one of her daughters has reached the Wimbledon final in 10 of the past 11 years. Not facing Venus on Saturday "makes it easier" for Serena to give it her all, Price said.

Venus isn't even in England; she flew home to Florida. She lost in Tuesday's quarterfinals to the 82nd-ranked Pironkova, who along with the 62nd-ranked Kvitova was trying to become the first unseeded women's finalist at Wimbledon.

Pironkova's match against Zvonareva began with dozens of empty green seats in the stands, perhaps because of the lunchtime start — or the low-wattage names on the marquee.

Still, the tennis was entertaining, with both women pounding shots. There was an odd delay in the second game, when Zvonareva's backhand landed in the net, and she immediately grabbed the ball and squeezed, showing it was flat. She handed the ball to chair umpire Eva Asderaki, who announced, "Ladies and gentlemen, the ball is broken, and according to the rules, we will replay the point."

There also was a glitch during the second semifinal, when the speed meter momentarily went out of kilter and showed that Williams smacked a serve at 138 mph, then Kvitova hit one at 145 mph — which, if correct, would have surpassed the women's record, by far.

Pironkova never made it past the second round in 18 previous Grand Slam appearances, and she hasn't been a finalist at any tour event. But she didn't show nerves early on, breaking Zvonareva's serve to lead 4-2.

PIRATES 3, PHILLIES 2

PITTSBURGH — Daniel McCutchen became the second Pittsburgh rookie in as many days to win for the first time this season, pitching into the sixth inning.

Rookies Jose Tabata and Pedro Alvarez drove in a run each as the Pirates beat a team with a winning record for only the second time in 33 games since May 25. Their last victory over an above-.500 team was a 6-3 win over San Francisco on June 5.

On Wednesday, Brad Lincoln got his first win in the majors by pitching seven innings in a 2-0 victory in Chicago.

The Phillies lost their third in four games a few hours after learning star second baseman Chase Utley probably won't return until September because of a damaged ligament in his right thumb that required surgery earlier in the day.

Philadelphia has seven players on the disabled list.

BREWERS 4, CARDINALS 1

ST. LOUIS — Randy Wolf allowed one run over 6 1-3 innings and Prince Fielder hit one of three Milwaukee home runs.

The Brewers, who have won eight of their last 11, lead the National League with 99 homers.

Wolf (6-7) gave up four hits, including a leadoff home run to Albert Pujols in the seventh inning. Pujols hit his league-leading 19th home run and 385th of his career, tying him with Jim Edmonds and Dwight Evans for 53rd on the all-time list.

Milwaukee's Corey Hart had a double in the fifth inning to extend his hitting streak to 16 games.

ROCKIES 7, GIANTS 3

DENVER — Carlos Gonzalez hit an early two-run homer and Aaron Cook threw 6 1-3 sharp innings for Colorado.

Dexter Fowler stole two bases and scored twice as the Rockies won for the third time in four games.

The Giants' reached a season-high six games.

Buster Posey had a solo homer as he took the place of Bengie Molina in the lineup after the veteran catcher was dealt to Texas earlier in the day.

Cook (3-5) allowed three runs and seven hits to win for the first time since May 29.

first three innings. Ryan Petersen broke up the no hitter with single to right while Zane Slotten followed. T.J. Ellis' hard grounder got by the first baseman to score Petersen.

Cy Sneed laid down the sacrifice bunt to score Slotten. Harr kept things going with another single for a 3-0 lead after four.

Ellis came through again with an RBI single in the fifth.

TWIN FALLS 5, ROCKY MOUNTAIN 4

With two outs and two strikes, Petersen smacked a bases-loaded double to left as the Cowboys rallied for the win.

For Peterson, who missed the last two Legion seasons due to a knee injury, it was a good feeling.

"I just tried to relax and put the ball on the barrel. I knew he didn't want to walk me so I would get a strike to hit," said Peterson, who tallied two doubles in the game. "We hit solid all game, but left guys on with a chance to score. We chipped away until the end and T.J. (Ellis) kept us in the game. It was a good team win."

The Avalanche put four on the board in the fifth to take control. With the bases loaded and nobody out, a misplayed ball in the outfield brought two home, a fielder's choice led to another run, while the last came on an RBI single down the first-base line.

Buhl

Atwal, Tiger's practice partner, tops at Aronimink

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa. — In the five years Arjun Atwal has been playing practice rounds with Tiger Woods at home in Florida, he learned long ago to stop comparing himself with the world's No. 1 player.

There was no comparison Thursday in the AT&T National.

Atwal made seven birdies in his round of 4-under 66 and was in a four-way tie for the lead at Aronimink Golf Club. Woods threw away five shots over the last five holes and opened with a 3-over 73, making it a challenge Friday just to make the cut.

"It was a very frustrating day on the greens, especially how good I was driving it," Woods said. "I was driving it on a string all day."

Atwal had no such complaints after finding himself atop the leaderboard with Nick Watney, Joe Ogilvie and Byron Nelson winner Jason Day on a tough day at Aronimink, where the pin locations made it difficult to attack the flags.

Playing on a sponsor's exemption — spending so much time with Woods has its perks — Atwal recovered from a bogey on his opening hole with three straight birdies, all of them inside 12 feet, and kept the mistakes to a minimum.

Tiger Woods tees off on the No. 12 hole during the first round of the AT&T National golf tournament at the Aronimink Golf Club, Thursday, in Newtown Square, Pa.

"Four under, I think, is a great score for me or anybody on this golf course," Atwal said. "I'll take it every day."

Woods, who won the AT&T National last year at Congressional, had his best round of the year off the tee. He hit driver on all but three holes on the tree-lined course with rough nearly as thick as it was in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach. He just didn't give himself that many birdie chances, and when he did, he couldn't make any.

His only two birdies were from 4 feet on the opening hole, and a 60-foot putt from the back of the green on the par-3 fifth. What hurt even more, however, was the finish.

Woods was at 1 under and poised to join the crowd toward the top of the leaderboard. Then came a three-putt from 50 feet on the 14th to bring him back to even par. Then, he really unraveled.

After laying up perfectly from the rough on the par-5 16th, he had 82 yards to a front pin. His swing was so bad that Woods flung the wedge toward his bag and started walking as it flared to the right and into the bunker. He made bogey on the easiest hole on the course.

The par-3 17th proved to be the toughest hole at Aronimink. No one hit it closer than 15 feet all day on the 197-yard hole over water, and Jonathan Byrd made the lone birdie. Woods tried to hammer a 6-iron toward the middle of the green, but he turned it and watched it come up short on the shaved bank and trickle down into the water. From the drop area, he hit it to 15 feet and made double bogey.

Walking quickly to the 18th, Woods hit his best drive of the day and followed that with a wedge to 5 feet. His round ended appropriately when the birdie putt caught the corner of the cup and spun away.

Woods will start the second round Friday morning in a tie for 81st, needing a good round to stick around for the weekend in a tournament that benefits the Tiger Woods Foundation.

CHOI SHOOTS 64 AT CORNING CLASSIC
SYLVANIA, Ohio — Na Yeon Choi shot a career-best 7-under 64 to take a one-stroke lead over Canadian Alena Sharp in the Jamie Farr Owens Corning Classic.

Choi, the South Korean player who missed her first cut in 2½ years last week in the LPGA Championship, had eight birdies and a bogey at Highland Meadows and needed just 26 putts — after changing putters this week.

Marisa Baena, playing even though she says she has officially retired from competitive golf, was at 66 along with Christina Kim and Switzerland's Karine Icher.

DERKSEN 8- UNDER AT FRENCH OPEN

VERSAILLES, France — Dutchman Robert-Jan Derksen shot an 8-under 63 at Le Golf National to take a three-shot lead in the French Open.

Defending champion Martin Kaymer of Germany, Spain's Alejandro Canizares and France's Jean Van de Velde opened with 66s. Rory McIlroy had a 68, Lee Westwood an Luke Donald shot 70s, and No. 8 Ian Poulter had a 72.

Bradley hoping to stay as U. S. coach

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Bradley says he'd be "honored" to remain the U.S. soccer coach, and he expects a decision in three to four weeks.

Bradley told The Associated Press on Thursday he had "a very good first conversation" with federation president Sunil Gulati before leaving the World Cup. Bradley plans to meet with U.S. Soccer CEO Dan Flynn next week.

"I would simply say that we need time," Bradley said. "Time to talk. Time to think a little bit."

Hired in December 2006, Bradley's contract runs through the end of the year. He led the Americans to the top of their group for the first time in 80 years. But with the team in good position to reach the semifinals, the U.S. lost 2-1 to Ghana in overtime in the first round of the knockout stage.

Gulati said Monday that "I think the team is capable of more."

"We're proud of the work and the results, and we stand behind that," Bradley said of his coaching staff. "As this four-year cycle ends and a new one begins, we're pleased that regardless of decisions going forward that the work in this four years will pay off in the next four years."

Bradley said he was satisfied with the team's World Cup preparations over those last four years — from scheduling matches against difficult opponents to the luminaries who addressed the squad before it played in South Africa. Speakers included NBA Hall of Famer Bill Russell and Dan Jollota, the helicopter pilot involved in the events depicted in the movie "Black Hawk Down."

One obvious goal for the next four years is to improve at scoring goals. The U.S. didn't get any from their forwards in South Africa. In his first World Cup, 20-year-old striker Jozy Altidore created chances but couldn't capitalize.

"He still can improve in terms of his pure finishing," Bradley said.

Bradley likes to say that as the level of competition increases, "the window is smaller and the window closes faster." Learning to score through that window takes experience.

Altidore had an excellent opportunity for a go-ahead goal against Ghana but missed.

"He did so well to put himself in a goal-scoring position," Bradley said. "Over time he'll just understand that in those spots you have a little more time and you don't have to rush anything. That ability to take that chance calmly and finish it, that's a sign of experience."

Altidore scored just two goals for Premier League club Hull this past season and has struggled to find consistent playing time at Europe's highest level.

"When you're a forward, it becomes really important that you are someone that can consistently score for your club team," Bradley said. "That gives confidence. I think that Jozy needs to find a club situation where week in and week out he's on the field and they're counting on him for big goals."

Bradley is picking Brazil to win the World Cup, and he knows the Americans have a ways to go to match that powerhouse in fielding players who combine superior physicality, athleticism and skill.

NBA

Continued from Sports 1 friend. A person briefed on the meeting was told it was "spectacular."

"So far we have met with LeBron," team president Rod Thorn said. "Told our story and we'll see what happens."

The Heat, Bulls, Los Angeles Clippers and the Cavaliers also are expected to meet with James before the end of the week.

While James, Wade and Bosh wait, the next big deal could go to Joe Johnson. The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported Wednesday that Atlanta was prepared to offer a maximum-value contract to its All-Star guard, who also met with New York and Miami after free agency opened Thursday.

"We have met with LeBron. Told our story and we'll see what happens."
— Nets president Rod Thorn

Other top names in the class, considered the deepest free agent pool ever, include Amare Stoudemire, Dirk Nowitzki and Carlos Boozer.

But the only other deal since the market opened was the five-year, $32 million contract Drew Gooden agreed to with the Milwaukee Bucks.

Deals can't be signed until July 8. There is a moratorium period while the salary cap for next season is determined.

Agent: Byron Scott accepts Cavs' job

CLEVELAND — With LeBron or without him, Byron Scott has decided to get back on an NBA sideline.

Scott accepted Cleveland's coaching job just as LeBron James officially became a free agent and no longer property of the Cavaliers, who are hoping that landing the best coach available will convince the two-time MVP to stay home and try to win a title.

Scott's agent, Brian McInerney, said in an e-mail to The Associated Press that he and the Cavs are working through some final details, but doesn't expect any problems and that Scott has agreed to become Cleveland's next coach. The team is expected to announce Scott's hiring later Thursday, just as James listens to offers from the New Jersey Nets and New York Knicks.

Scott, who previously coached in New Jersey and New Orleans, may not know for some time if he'll have James on his roster. But after working as a TV analyst, the 49-year-old has decided it's time to get back to doing what he loves most.

The Cavs have been looking for a coach since Mike Brown was fired May 24, ending a five-year run with the club. Brown guided James and his teammates through the most successful run in franchise history, but fell short of winning a championship.

Scott's hiring ends a twisting drama to the Cavs' coaching search.

Los Angeles Lakers assistant Brian Shaw appeared to be the favorite to become Cleveland's coach after an impressive two-day meeting with the club earlier this week. As of Tuesday, Shaw was reported to be assembling a staff to bring to Cleveland.

But despite the Cavaliers seemingly moving toward a deal with Shaw — to the point where McInerney sent out a congratulatory e-mail to Shaw through several news outlets — general manager Chris Grant reopened talks with Scott on Wednesday.

Byron Scott has reportedly accepted the head coaching job with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

PHIL JACKSON WILL COACH LAKERS NEXT SEASON

LOS ANGELES — After just one relaxing week in Montana, Los Angeles Lakers coach Phil Jackson decided he can handle another season of the NBA grind.

The two-time defending champions locked up their most important free agent of the summer Thursday when Jackson announced he'll return next season, putting off retirement for at least another year to chase his 12th NBA title.

Jackson said last week he was worn out and leaning toward retirement after the Lakers' third straight long season culminating in the NBA finals. He changed his mind after a week of rest and health evaluation at his offseason home, signing up for the unprecedented chance to win three consecutive NBA championships for the fourth time in his career.

"Count me in," Jackson said. "After a couple weeks of deliberation, it is time to get back to the challenge of putting together a team that can defend its title in the 2010-11 season. It'll be the last stand for me, and I hope a grand one."

Jackson, who will turn 65 later this year, is the winningest coach in playoff history and the most successful coach in NBA history by almost any measure.

He has a league-best .705 regular-season winning percentage, a record 225 post-season victories and two more titles than Boston's Red Auerbach, winning five championships with Kobe Bryant's Lakers and six with Michael Jordan's Chicago Bulls. His 1,098 regular-season victories are fifth-most in league history.

The Lakers beat the Celtics in Game 7 of the NBA finals last month to claim their second straight title, wrapping up a season in which Jackson navigated Bryant, Pau Gasol and wild-card newcomer Ron Artest through numerous injuries to win the franchise's 16th title.

Los Angeles has made the finals in seven of Jackson's 10 seasons with the club, and they'll be among the early favorites to win it all again in 2011. The Lakers have surrounded Bryant with a core in its prime and signed to long-term contracts.

"We're extremely pleased that Phil has decided to return," Lakers general manager Mitch Kupchak said. "He's not only the best coach for this team, but quite simply the best coach in the history of the NBA."

Vick says he 'had nothing to do with' shooting

RICHMOND, Va. — Philadelphia Eagles' quarterback Michael Vick says he was not involved with a shooting following his birthday celebration in Virginia Beach last week.

"I want to assure everyone that I had nothing to do with that incident," he said in the statement provided to The Associated Press by his representatives Thursday night. "I left the restaurant prior to it occurring and did not witness what happened."

Vick said he reported the incident to the Eagles and "to representatives of Commissioner Roger Goodell."

The former Atlanta Falcons star also said he has been "completely truthful and fully cooperative" with law enforcement and the NFL, and will continue to cooperate as the investigation continues.

The Eagles and NFL have said they are looking into the matter. Goodell told Vick when reinstating him last season that his margin for error was "extremely limited."

Police said earlier Thursday that they have not ruled out Vick as a suspect or person of interest in their investigation. Police spokesman Adam Bernstein said they will not discuss specifics of the investigation and that no one has been named as a suspect or arrested.

Vick met with police on Monday, accompanied by Woodward.

Bernstein declined to characterize Vick's status in the investigation.

"I don't want to say either way as to what his involvement is," Bernstein told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. "Everyone wants me to give him a label because of who he is."

Police have not identified the shooting victim, but Vick's attorney, Larry Woodward, said it was Quanis Phillips.

In his statement, Vick did not name Phillips, a co-defendant in the dogfighting case that landed Vick in federal prison.

Vick, who filed for bankruptcy in 2008, is entering his second season with the Eagles and due to earn $5.2 million.

The NFL star's statement comes almost a week after the shooting early last Friday.

Woodward told The Associated Press on Tuesday that Vick left the establishment at least 10 minutes, and perhaps as many as 20 minutes, before the shooting took place.

But Allen Fabijan, spokesman for Guadalajara Mexican restaurant and nightclub, said Wednesday that he had video that contradicted Woodward's timeline.

The time-stamped footage from a surveillance camera outside the entrance of the club shows a car with Vick inside leaving at 2:07 a.m. — about 4 minutes before the shooting a block away.

The waiting car with Vick inside pulled away at about 2:07 a.m. heading in the direction of the eventual shooting. Numerous people were visible lingering in front of the club for several minutes until, at 2:10:55, they appear to be startled, with some ducking for cover.

INNOVATIVE FOOTBALL COACH CORYELL DIES AT 85

SAN DIEGO — Don Coryell, the innovative coach whose Air Coryell offense produced some of the most dynamic passing attacks in NFL history, has died. He was 85.

The San Diego Chargers confirmed Coryell died Thursday at Sharp Grossmont Hospital in La Mesa, just outside of San Diego. The team did not release the cause of death, but Coryell had been in poor health for some time.

Coryell is one of the founding fathers of the modern passing game. He coached at San Diego State from 1961-72 and went 104-19-2. He left the Aztecs for the St. Louis Cardinals in 1973. With Jim Hart at quarterback, the Cardinals won division titles in 1974 and '75 behind Coryell.

He returned to San Diego in 1978 when he was hired by the Chargers.

From 1978-86, his "Air Coryell" offense — led by quarterback Dan Fouts — set records and led the NFL in passing almost every season. Coryell guided the Chargers to the AFC championship game after the 1980 and '81 seasons, but he never reached the Super Bowl.

The lack of a Super Bowl on his resume may have hurt Coryell last winter in voting for the Pro Football Hall of Fame. He was a finalist for the first time, but was not selected for induction.

"He revolutionized the game of football, not only in San Diego, but throughout the entire NFL," Chargers president Dean Spanos said in a statement.

Texas Tech appeals judge's ruling on lawsuit by former coach Mike Leach

LUBBOCK, Texas — Texas Tech is appealing a judge's decision to allow former football coach Mike Leach to sue for breach of contract.

Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott's office filed a notice of appeal for the school Wednesday.

District Judge William Sowder last month struck down Texas

Tech's claim of sovereign immunity on Leach's breach of contract claim.

The school fired Leach on Dec. 30, two days after suspending him amid allegations he mistreated a player with a concussion. Leach denies mistreating receiver Adam James and suspects an $800,000 bonus he was to have received Dec.

31 was the reason he was fired.

James is the son of former NFL player and ESPN analyst Craig James.

USC ASSISTANT COACH MCNAIR'S CONTRACT EXPIRES

LOS ANGELES — Southern California running backs coach

Todd McNair apparently is no longer with the Trojans.

The school said in a statement Thursday that McNair's contract expired Wednesday, but made no additional comment.

McNair was given special penalties last month for what the NCAA claimed was his role in the scandal surrounding Heisman Trophy-winning tailback Reggie Bush. USC was hit with a two-year bowl ban and severe scholarship restrictions, and McNair was prohibited from contacting recruits.

McNair was an assistant to former coach Pete Carroll for six seasons.

2010 VOLKSWAGEN GOLF TDI

ECONOMICALLY FUNCTIONAL!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

For 2010, the venerable Volkswagen Golf is ready to stand out yet again—sporting fresh, dynamic styling inside and out. The Golf, now in its sixth-generation, is available with the athletic yet extremely fuel efficient, TDI clean diesel engine. Available in both two and four-door models, the new Golf TDI carries the Volkswagen brand heritage into overdrive with proven, German-engineered performance and refinement.

The exterior of the new Golf TDI proudly shows off the new "face" of the Volkswagen brand with an all-new front end design that includes a wider, double-bar grille that blends into angled halogen headlamps for a sportier visage. The body-colored bumper sits above a revised lower front fascia featuring a wide-mouthed cooling duct. Crystalline oval fog lamps complete the front fascia.

These elements, combined with the Golf's wider appearance give the hatchback a more commanding road presence. Updated taillights mimic their counterparts from up front, and feature integrated clear turn signal and reverse indicators along the bottom edge. Running lights are blended into the lower rear bumper which adds a blacked out insert and a cutout for a pair of exhaust tips.

Power for the Golf TDI is generated by a 2.0L clean diesel TDI engine bolted to a traditional six-speed manual gearbox. The Golf TDI is marked by its fusion of German-tuned performance and impressive fuel economy — compliments of an advanced electronically-controlled turbocharger and the electronically-controlled direct injection fuel system. Drivers can also go for the optional six-speed automatic Direct Shift Gearbox (DSG®) transmission with Tiptronic, and have the performance of a manual gearbox with the effortless precision of an automatic transmission.

The Golf TDI rides on a laser welded unibody construction that remains stiff and helps keep everything in line as the Golf zips along. Control hardware includes a fully independent suspension with McPherson struts with an anti-roll bar and an updated sport suspension at the front that works with a fully independent four-link arrangement with coil springs, telescopic shocks and another stabilizer bar at the rear. This arrangement is designed to keep the Golf agile yet rider-friendly in most any driving situation.

On the inside, the latest Golf carries its refinement throughout with a variety of stylish additions that will aim to keep drivers and passengers comfortable and pleased. All models start out with eight-way manually adjustable sports seats at the front, which include two-way adjustable lumbar support, and adjustable head restraints. The rear seats include adjustable head restraints for all seating positions, a center armrest, and have 60/40 split folding capability for maximizing cargo space when needed. Both the front and rear seats come standard with Volkswagen's "Me2" cloth fabric.

At the helm, the updated three-spoke steering wheel is leather-wrapped with multifunction controls. Brushed metallic appearance trim inserts are standard on the dash and in the door panels of all Golf models, and accent the redesigned instrument panel and center console. Chrome trim surrounds the tachometer on the left side, which incorporates an integrated temperature gauge, and the speedometer on the right, has an integrated fuel gauge. Located between the black analog gauges is a multi-function onboard computer display that provides the driver with key information regarding the selected gear, fuel mileage, odometer, and more.

The climate system controls are handled by a more ergonomic arrangement of knobs and buttons versus the more traditional dial and button layout, complementing the different stereo and navigation systems available. All TDI models come standard with a touch-screen 8-speaker sound system featuring an AM/FM/Sirius™ satellite radio, in-dash six-disc CD changer with MP3 CD readability, theft deterrence, and an auxiliary input jack.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

*"An active, ardent mind;
A fancy pregnant with resource and scheme
To cheat the sadness of a rainy day."*

— William Wordsworth

When the defender under the main trump strength holds significant length, declarer can sometimes draw his trumps by leading plain cards from dummy. For example, what do you think of East's chances on defense to five clubs today, given that his heart ace is going to stand up? Pretty fair, you might say, but he had not reckoned with a resourceful declarer.

West led a heart to East's ace and back came a second heart in an attempt to remove dummy's trumps and solidify the defenders' second club winner. Declarer ruffed in dummy and played a club to hand, West showing out. Now another heart ruff and a second club to hand left declarer in good shape, despite East's threatening trump holding.

Declarer knew that the spade finesse rated to work, but he did not need to take it. He played a spade to dummy's ace and ruffed a spade, then led a diamond to the 10 and ruffed another spade, West's king dropping. Now he crossed to dummy's diamond queen, cashed the spade queen to pitch a diamond and, in the two-card ending with declarer needing one more trick, led the 13th spade from dummy. East had no answer. If he ruffed low, South would overruff; if he ruffed high, South would discard and make trick 13 with the club jack.

Declarer can score his last trump en passant on a very similar line, even when the spade king does not fall, with East having three small spades and three diamonds.

ANSWER: You should jump to two spades. As a passed hand you cannot just hold spades (or you either would have opened two spades or would not now be worth more than one spade). When a passed hand jumps in a new suit in response to an opening bid or an overcall, it should promise values, decent fit for partner and at least a respectable five-card holding in the bid suit.

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and sad all the time. I have never had a boyfriend, and have struggled in the past with anxiety and loneliness. It has been a rollercoaster year for me — a tough first year of college, watching all of my friends enter meaningful relationships. All I can do is be ashamed of the fact that I'm struggling while others are thriving. I need help, but don't know where to turn.

— A COMPLETE MESS IN OHIO

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR COMPLETE MESS: Before I start offering you advice, please let me point out that the first year of college is a huge adjustment for everyone. You're away from your usual support systems, adjusting to a new environment and new responsibilities. Instead of comparing yourself to your friends who are entering "meaningful relationships," please look around at all of the students who are single like you are. If you do, you will realize they outnumber the ones who are coupled up.

Because you are sad for extended periods, you should head over to the student health center and talk about it with a counselor. He or she will help you find ways to overcome your feelings of isolation, anxiety and depression — but only if someone who is qualified knows you're having trouble. And please don't waste one minute being "ashamed." What you're experiencing is not uncommon.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two young children. Three years ago I divorced my husband of eight years. My mother does not accept the divorce and still views my ex as a family member. She's planning a family reunion for my father's 80th birthday and has told me she's inviting my ex, which will be uncomfortable since I am attending the party with my boyfriend of two years.

My mother's unwillingness to accept my new boyfriend in my life is hurtful, and it is affecting my relationship with her. How can I sustain a relationship with her if she doesn't accept that I have moved on with my life?

— IRRITATED IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR IRRITATED: You have moved on with your life. But in the eight years you were married, your mother grew attached to your former husband. I assume that you and your ex have a civil relationship, if only for the sake of your children. So go to the reunion with your boyfriend. Give your parents every opportunity you can to get to know him, because the more they are exposed to him, the greater the chances of their accepting him.

P.S. Wouldn't it be lovely if your ex were to bring a date? Why not call him and plant the idea ...

DEAR ABBY: I am a 61-year-old, recently retired male. I think I am experiencing a midlife crisis, exacerbated by my wife's decision to let her hair go natural — meaning gray.

I know you and your readers will probably think I'm shallow and am trying to hold onto my young, 59-year-old "trophy wife." We have been happily married nearly 40 years. In my eyes she represents our youth and vitality, which suddenly isn't feeling so youthful or vital since her roots started showing. What can I do?

— YOUNGER AT HEART IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR YOUNGER AT HEART: Try this. Remember the words of Benjamin Franklin on aging. He wrote: "In the dark all cats are gray."

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.
