T.F. police issue arrest warrant for shooting suspect

Trevino considered armed, dangerous

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A Twin Falls man suspected of shooting a woman at an area hotel Monday remains at large, and the search for him has expanded to a second state.

Twin Falls police issued a warrant Tuesday for the arrest of Thomas Trevino, 30, who allegedly shot an unidentified 24-year-old female inside a Comfort Inn & Suites guest room at 1893

Canyon Springs Road, Twin Falls.

Trevino, believed to be armed and dangerous, is a 5-foot-10, 170-pound Latino male with black hair, brown eyes and extensive tattoos on his upper body and both arms. He was last seen wearing a white T-shirt and dark jeans.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said

authorities were still searching for Trevino on Tuesday afternoon and that the shooting victim's next of kin were still being identified and contacted.

The suspect may have fled to another state. Tuesday evening, several media outlets in Grand Junction, Colo., including The Daily Sentinel newspaper, reported that law enforcement officers were searching for Trevino based off of information from cell-phone towers in the area.

Twin Falls police responded to the shooting after a guest contacted police around 1:45 p.m. Monday.

The female was taken first to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center and later flown to a Boise hospital, authorities said. Her condition remained unavailable Tuesday.

A city police SWAT team, later assisted by the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office Crisis Response Team,

U.S. government files suit to throw out Arizona immigration law

By Bob Christie
Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — The federal government took a momentous step into the immigration debate Tuesday when it filed a lawsuit seeking to throw out Arizona's crackdown on illegal immigrants, saying the law blatantly violates the Constitution.

The lawsuit filed in federal court in Phoenix sets the stage for a high-stakes legal clash over states' rights at a time when politicians across the country have indicated they want to follow Arizona's lead on the toughest in-the-nation immigration law.

The legal action represents a thorough denunciation by the government of Arizona's action, declaring that the law will "cause the detention and harassment of authorized visitors, immigrants and citizens who do not have or carry identification documents" while altogether ignoring "humanitarian concerns" and harming diplomatic relations.

Supporters of the law say the suit was an unnecessary action by the federal government after years of neglecting problems at the border. Republican Gov. Jan Brewer called the lawsuit "a terribly bad decision" and defended the law as "reasonable and constitutional."

Dangling from the canyon wall, the victim lay vertical, strapped into a metal stretcher.

Commands from the edge master were called to the two men pulling the stretcher up the wall. As the stretcher approached the top of the precipice, an instructor belayed down to show the firefighters how to transition from pulling the ropes from the top to the bottom in what is called a pick-and-pivot technique.

place on Tuesday as part of five days of confined-space operation training. Thirteen Twin Falls firefighters will complete the training on Friday. Taught by two state confined-space instructors from Nampa, the training offers firefighters opportunities to hone their skills and practice removing victims from dangerous situations.

Twin Falls' confined-space rescue team was organized four years ago by Battalion Chief Brian Cunningham. The team's $30,000 equipment was bought with a grant from the state. Belts, ropes, harnesses, helmets and stretchers — commonly called "baskets" by the firefighters — are all used in situations of limited access.

Jerry Flavel, captain at the Nampa Fire Department and state instructor for confined-space training, said the training is a way to bring new firefighters up to speed and certify Cunningham and three Twin Falls Fire Department captains to teach the class in the future.

"These situations don't happen very often, but you have to be proficient when it does," Flavel said. "We're there to fix a problem, not cause more problems."

Flavel said a study done by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration found that 60 percent of fatalities in confined-space situations were would-be rescuers. It's a statistic that made the Twin Falls Fire Department take notice and take action.

"We'd like to have everyone trained and ready to go. It's not a requirement but it is a much-needed skill," Cunningham said.

Every firefighter in the course went through the rotation on Tuesday, played each role from victim to rescuer, and participated in the House ethics committee begins Phil Hart probe

Regence debuts Spanish-language website

Navigating the U.S. health care system can be a challenge. Now try dealing with it if you don't speak English.

Many Hispanics do not

While many Twin Falls health care providers employ conversational translators and phone trees often offer a Spanish option, translation of publications lags, partly because it can be a slow and expensive process. Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

- Explore the great area attractions starting with Craters of the Moon National Monument & Preserve. The park is truly a mysterious, wonderful place. You can camp, drive a 7-mile loop, walk trails or delve into caves. Take lots of photos, video and water. The landscape will amaze you. It's located 18 miles southwest of Arco on Highway 20/26/93.
- The Twin Falls Tonight summer concert series features Potato Power Hour's classic rock from 6 to 9 p.m.

at the downtown fountain on Main Avenue. It's free.

- For a different kind of music, there's the Idaho Old Time Fiddlers Association members' acoustic string instrument jam session from 6 to 8 p.m. at Idaho Pizza Co., 1859 Kimberly Road, Twin Falls. It's open to prospective members and the public.

If you've got a problem with that, talk to the cat

Middle management is essentially the art of watching other people work. Which makes it the ideal job for a cat.

My cat, for example. Umbra is her name, and she has an endless fascination with the toil of others — so much so that we've dubbed her Foreman Cat and toyed with the idea of getting her a clipboard and a hardhat.

Pulling weeds? Umbra's got her nose right in the middle of your work. Cleaning out the gutters? She sits on the roof, observing. Giving the dog a bath? Shoot, she practically sits on the dog.

And being a cat, Umbra never, ever confuses management with work.

Which, of course, is the great failing of human middle managers. A poll by Accenture, a management consulting and outsourcing company, showed just four in 10 middle managers were satisfied, 25 percent were looking for new jobs because of a lack of advancement prospects and 43 percent of middle managers felt as if they were doing all the work but not getting credit for it.

One-third reported frustration with their work-life balance.

Umbra, by contrast, has no problem with her work-life balance. She sleeps 14 hours a day.

And she's a black cat with glowing green eyes, so she's got the intimidation thing going. Heck, I'm scared of her.

Being a cat, Umbra doesn't borrow trouble or nurse grudges. She inflicts them.

Years ago, I watched a training film in which a shoe-store manager was trying to mediate a conflict between a customer and one of his employees. The customer claimed to have been treated rudely and the employee said he was insulted, and their dispute grew louder with the manager standing squarely in the middle.

"Now, Mr. Middle Manager," the narrator asks. "What would you do?"

I have no idea what I would do, but Umbra would quite sensibly walk out.

When misfortune knocks on their doors, cats refuse to take delivery. That's why they have nine lives and you have one.

That's also the reason for their zen-like inscrutability. We take our text this morning from the gospel of Garfield:

"If you are patient, and wait long enough, nothing will happen."

That, of course, has important implications for middle managers in hiring, firing and promotion:

"If you want to appear smarter, hang around with somebody stupider."

Proposed intersection for Cheney Drive and North College Road

CSI, city inch closer to north campus development

By Nick Coltraine
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls City Council is on board with College of Southern Idaho plans to slow down North College Road and build a Cheney Drive extension to take its place as a thoroughfare.

City Engineer Jackie Fields said construction is still years off because an environmental study needs to be done before the plan can even be finalized. The goal is to divert traffic from North College Road to the future Cheney Drive, where CSI is expanding north of the road. Plans to change traffic patterns in the area have been discussed since 2006.

Fields said the vote on the intersection proposal between the two roads was "confirming consensus" between the two entities.

The vote was 6-0, with Councilman Don Hall abstaining because he works at CSI.

The construction would be fully refundable with federal money because it would fall under safety improvements for the college. That brings in the city's involvement: the city is the Idaho Transportation Department's transportation representative.

The plans call for North College Road to drop to 25 mph when it splits east of the Health Sciences and Human Services building. The branching of the road will help control traffic, along with some yet-to-be-determined measures.

Councilman Lance Clow called the proposal a "great solution" to traffic flow in the area and said it will increase safety in the whole area.

February; it was the equivalent of a $50,000 donation.

Margie Gonzales, executive director of the Idaho Commission on Hispanic Affairs, said some groups stopped translating their documents after the Idaho Legislature in 2007 declared English to be the state's official language.

So, the amount of Spanish-language information can vary depending on the agency and its resources.

Karen Early of Blue Cross of Idaho said her company provides a Spanish-language enrollment form, a benefits grid explaining deductibles and co-pays, and a few pamphlets, but little else.

The 2007 report said 62 percent of the more than 500 Hispanics surveyed had no health insurance. They use Medicaid if they qualify — or they resort to visiting the emergency room, which can be problematic even with translators. While 83 percent of facilities have Spanish-language consent forms, patients often don't understand what they are signing, according to a 2007 report from the Idaho Office of Rural Health and Primary Care.

The Idaho Medicaid Program Web page, part of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's site, has no Spanish-language version and the 16-page online application is mostly in English. A single question is in Spanish: "Do you want an interpreter if you are interviewed?" But a Spanish version of the Idaho Health Plan Booklet is available, along with other Spanish-language information links, on a separate page for existing Medicaid participants.

So, Regence BlueShield is at the front of the pack in its service to Idaho's Hispanic communities.

"Some of the more-national groups are better at providing those resources," Gonzales said.

Tatko said the census estimates 160,000 Hispanics live in Idaho, and his numbers indicate 40 percent of those are uninsured.

"That's a significant market for us and any business," Tatko said. "It is a greatly underserved population, so whatever we can do, we're willing to do."

In addition to the website, the company sponsors the "Hispanic Hero Award Program," which honors high-achieving Hispanics who have given back to the community. The award committee, in its fourth year, is accepting nominations until July 15.

The Hispanic health disparities report was sponsored by the Idaho Partnership on Hispanic Health, which includes the Idaho Commission on Hispanic Affairs, Boise State University and health and human services nonprofit Mountain States Group Inc.

many safety check positions. Flavel said playing the victim role was important to give firefighters an appreciation of and empathy for the situation. Firefighters were instructed to talk the injured person through every step of the process and try to take as much fear out of the situation as possible.

The men wore helmets, gloves and harnesses that would allow them to flip upside down if necessary to perform a rescue.

Belaying down a canyon wall 100 feet was new to many of the firefighters. The safety equipment was redundant in order to keep both rescuer and victim safe. Two ropes measuring 200 feet and rated at 9,000 pounds apiece held the man belaying to the ground.

Firefighter Andy Stephenson, 27, said the initial jump backward off the canyon wall required a lot of trust in the system and his crew.

"Once you get over the shock factor of being dangled over the edge by an inch-and-a-half piece of rope, then it's fun," Stephenson said.

Today the class will practice more intensive industry training scenarios at the Amalgamated Sugar Co. in Twin Falls and will finish Friday by going to pump stations where potential real-life situations could occur.

Buhl man charged with meth trafficking

Times-News

A Buhl man was charged with drug trafficking Tuesday in 5th District Court in Twin Falls.

Justin Ronald Hill, 32, was arraigned for trafficking in methamphetamine or amphetamine in amounts of 28 grams or more. A police report stated that Hill was driving a red truck, which coincidentally matched the initial description of shooting suspect Thomas Trevino's vehicle, on Monday when he was pulled over around 3:40 p.m. in Filer.

Sgt. William Deetz reported that he met up with Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Kristen Patterson, then stopped and secured Hill, as he was unsure if he was dealing with the suspect in the Twin Falls shooting that afternoon. Deetz then searched Hill and allegedly found a pipe and various packages of methamphetamine, including one described as the "approximate size of a small baseball," according to the report.

After other officers transported Hill to the Twin Falls County Jail, Deetz weighed the seized drugs at the Filer Police Department and determined Hill allegedly possessed 28.4 grams of methamphetamine.

Hill's bond was set at $150,000, and a preliminary hearing is set for July 26.

Accused liquor store robber offered plea deal

One of the five accused robbers of the Kimberly Road state liquor store was offered a plea deal Tuesday in 5th District Court in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls County prosecutors presented Kristan McKean, 19, a plea deal including the following terms: she would plead guilty to grand theft and burglary, and the state would recommend a prison sentence of six years with three fixed, which would be suspended with probation. The state further recommended 180 days in the Twin Falls County Jail with no objection to work release, and an order to pay full restitution.

The terms also indicate that the state would dismiss the counts of conspiracy to commit grand theft, conspiracy to commit burglary and malicious injury to property.

McKean's arraignment is set to continue on July 19.

Others charged in the alleged burglary have yet to be arraigned. Charles Marovich's arraignment is slated for Friday, while arraignments for Kristopher McKean, Brina Krohn and Megan Marovich are scheduled for Monday.

Lawnmower repo man pleads not guilty

Erik Richard Kai Jonsson pleaded not guilty Tuesday to counts of attempted grand theft and aggravated assault in 5th District Court in Twin Falls. He is scheduled to face trial on Sept. 8.

Jonsson is alleged to have pulled a gun on Twin Falls resident Robert Depew during an altercation in which Jonsson tried to repossess a lawnmower from Depew and his wife on June 2.

The maximum punishment for attempted grand theft is imprisonment for seven years in prison and a fine of $2,500, while aggravated assault, is punishable by five years prison and a fine of $5,000.

ISP releases more about on I-84 rollover

A Boise man lost control of his vehicle Monday on Interstate 84 near Bliss, which led to three of the five occupants of his vehicle being ejected, according to an Idaho State Police press release.

James Richard Brinkerhoff, 40, lost control of his vehicle at approximately 3:28 p.m., after which the vehicle overturned near milepost 134. Karen Brinkerhoff was transported by air ambulance to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise, where she is in critical condition. James Brinkerhoff and three other occupants of the vehicle were taken to North Canyon Medical Center, according to ISP. James Brinkerhoff was later transported to Saint Alphonsus, where he is in stable condition. Two unidentified occupants were treated and released in Gooding, while another's condition is unknown at St. Luke's Medical Center in Boise.

None of the vehicle's occupants were wearing safety restraints, according to ISP.

One westbound lane of I-84 was closed for approximately one hour Monday for emergency vehicles. ISP was assisted at the scene by the Gooding County Sheriff's Office and Gooding County paramedics. The crash remains under investigation by ISP Trooper Aaron Bingham.

T.F. police warn of vehicle burglaries

The Twin Falls Police Department reminds residents to refrain from leaving valuables in unattended vehicles, as the department has noticed a recent increase in vehicle burglaries.

Windows left open to keep vehicles cool can also allow burglars access to vehicles and their contents. Police remind residents to conceal valuables out of sight, put them in the trunk or leave them at home.

Police remind residents to eliminate opportunities for crimes to occur, and take such precautions even for short trips away from vehicles.

police fired gas canisters inside. A search of the home found no one inside.

According to online court records, a Thomas Trevino Jr., born in 1979, has a number of past criminal charges against him in Twin Falls County, including a 1999 aggravated assault conviction for which he served three years in prison.

Immigration

Arizona passed the law after years of frustration over problems associated with illegal immigration, including drug trafficking, kidnappings and murders. The state is the biggest gateway into the U.S. for illegal immigrants, and is home to an estimated 460,000 illegal immigrants.

The law requires officers, while enforcing other laws, to question a person's immigration status if there's a reasonable suspicion that they are in the country illegally. The law also makes it a state crime for legal immigrants to not carry their immigration documents and bans day laborers and people who seek their services from blocking traffic on streets.

Other states have said they want to take similar action — a scenario the government cited as a reason for bringing the lawsuit.

"The Constitution and the federal immigration laws do not permit the development of a patchwork of state and local immigration policies throughout the country," the suit says.

The heart of the legal arguments focus on the Supremacy Clause of the Constitution, a theory that says federal laws override state laws. The lawsuit says there are comprehensive federal laws on the books that cover illegal immigration — and that those statutes take precedent.

"In our constitutional system, the federal government has pre-eminent authority to regulate immigration matters," the lawsuit says. "This authority derives from the United States Constitution and numerous acts of Congress. The nation's immigration laws reflect a careful and considered balance of national law enforcement, foreign relations, and humanitarian interests."

The lawsuit also says that the Arizona measure will impose a huge burden on U.S. agencies in charge of enforcing immigration laws, "diverting resources and attention from the dangerous aliens who the federal government targets as its top enforcement priority."

The government is seeking an injunction to delay the July 29 implementation of the law until the case is resolved.

Gulf oil spill spreads to New Orleans' Lake Pontchartrain

By Richard Fausset
Los Angeles Times

ATLANTA — Anne Rheams saw them this week floating in the water, small and scattered and about the size of silver dollars. Some had washed up near boat docks, others near lakeside subdivisions — tar balls, most likely from the Deepwater Horizon oil spill. This week, they made their way to Lake Pontchartrain, the vast estuarine oval that hems New Orleans to the north — and defines the city's character and destiny as much as the winding Mississippi River a few miles south.

By Tuesday, cleanup crews had collected more than 1,020 pounds of tar balls and waste from the lake and the Rigolets, the strait connecting the Pontchartrain to Lake Borgne and the broader Gulf of Mexico.

It was a relatively small smudge for a lake that is 630 square miles, and one that will not pose a direct public health problem: New Orleans gets its drinking water from the river.

But Rheams, executive director of the Lake Pontchartrain Basin Foundation, described the occasion as both an emotional and psychological blow for New Orleans. The city is more than 100 miles from the shores of the Gulf, and while the worry and gloom of the catastrophe penetrated the metro area months ago, there was no oil — until now.

"People love the lake, and they live around the lake," Rheams said. "It's really bringing this closer to home for our folks in the basin."

Crews have put 600 feet of boom at a choke point in the Rigolets to prevent more oil from making it to the lake, according to the oil spill response headquarters in New Orleans.

On Monday, more than 20 skimming and decontamination boats were working to clean it up. But on Tuesday, bad weather kept the boats docked, and workers were left to try to skim the water from the shore, said U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer Kelly Parker.

In the Gulf, rough seas again stymied the work of skimming boats Tuesday and complicated an attempt to hook up a system of pipes that could more than double the roughly 25,000 barrels of oil currently being captured near the well site.

AROUND THE NATION

AWASHINGTON EPA: Clean-air rule would overturn Bush-era plan

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration is proposing a new rule to tighten restrictions on pollution from coal-burning power plants in the eastern half of the country, a key step to cut emissions that cause smog.

The Environmental Protection Agency said Tuesday the new rule represented its most consequential effort yet to tackle deadly pollution that contributes to smog and soot that hangs over more than half the country. The rule would cost nearly $3 billion a year and those costs are likely to be passed along to consumers, although the rule's effect on specific companies and on consumers was not clear.

"We believe that today is marking a large and important step in EPA's effort to protect public health," said the agency's top air pollution official, Gina McCarthy.

The rule, to be finalized next year, aims to cut sulfur dioxide emissions by 71 percent from 2005 levels by 2014 and nitrogen oxide emissions by 52 percent in the same time frame.

Known as the Clean Air Interstate Rule, the measure requires 31 states from Massachusetts to Texas to reduce smog and soot-producing emissions that can travel long distances in the wind. The agency predicted the rule would prevent about 14,000 to 36,000 premature deaths a year.

Obama, Netanyahu say bond 'unbreakable'

WASHINGTON — Eager to show unity to the world, President Obama and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu on Tuesday dismissed talk of a rift as wildly unfounded, and Netanyahu pledged concrete, "very robust" steps to revive sluggish Mideast peace efforts with the Palestinians.

In a warm, yet carefully choreographed White House embrace, the two leaders took pains to persuade allies and enemies alike that a deeply important relationship is doing just fine.

The two nations clearly felt that was necessary. The meeting came five weeks after Israel's deadly raid on a flotilla that was trying to break the Israeli blockade of the Hamas-controlled Gaza Strip. That raid brought international outrage and tested U.S. support for Israel's security steps.

But the optics and words of Tuesday's visit all sent one message: unshaken cooperation.

Netanyahu emerged with a pile of promises from Obama that the U.S. is both committed to Israel's security and a believer that the prime minister wants peace with Palestinians. For his part, Netanyahu showed the urgency that Obama wants in boosting peace efforts, though he didn't say in public just what he might have planned.

NEW YORK Prosecutors to appeal Russian spy case bail ruling

NEW YORK — The government said Tuesday it planned to appeal a decision to release one of the defendants in the Russian spy case on bail.

The announcement came from U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara, four days after bail was set for a U.S. citizen charged in the case.

A magistrate judge in Manhattan had said the woman, Peruvian-born Vicky Pelaez, could be released on $250,000 bail with electronic monitoring and home detention. The judge said when he set bail that she could not be released before this week because it would take time to set up the bail requirements.

An appeal means that a bail hearing will occur before a federal judge, who will decide whether to uphold the findings of the magistrate judge.

Defense attorney John M. Rodriguez said Tuesday that he received a copy of a letter prosecutors had sent the court saying they were appealing. He said he expected his client to remain jailed pending the outcome of a hearing this afternoon.

Pelaez is among 11 defendants charged with being part of a spy ring that prosecutors say for the past decade has engaged in secret global travel with false passports, secret code words, fake names, invisible ink and encrypted radio.

CALIFORNIA Judge sends Lohan to jail for probation violation

BEVERLY HILLS — A judge sentenced Lindsay Lohan on Tuesday to 90 days in jail and an inpatient rehab program after finding the actress had violated her probation in a 2007 drug case by failing to attend alcohol education classes.

The actress burst into tears after the ruling.

Superior Court Judge Marsha Revel issued the sentence after listening to testimony from employees of an alcohol treatment program that Lohan had been ordered to attend.

Lohan missed seven classes since December, which led to the judge's harsh rebuke moments after the "Mean Girls" star offered a tearful apology.

"I did do everything I was told to do and did the best I could to balance jobs and showing up," Lohan told the judge. "It wasn't vacation, it wasn't some sort of a joke."

Revel said she found Lohan's apology insincere, comparing it to "somebody who cheats and thinks it isn't cheating if she doesn't get caught."

Lohan was not immediately taken into custody and will be permitted to surrender on July 20. She will have to wear an ankle alcohol monitor until then.

Simpson to Otter: Bill is path to Idaho wilderness

BOISE — U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson appealed to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in a letter in a bid to help move his wilderness bill forward in Congress.

Last month, Otter came out against the proposed 332,000-acre federal preserve in the central Idaho mountains, citing concerns including lack of permission for state wildlife managers to land helicopters to collar wolves.

Otter's opposition is a big roadblock for Simpson.

So in the letter made public Tuesday by the Idaho Statesman, Simpson committed to making changes Otter is demanding.

Even so, Simpson conceded that foes — snowmobilers and ATV riders who want to keep trails open on one side, environmentalists who want even more wilderness on the other — are unlikely to be swayed.

As a result, Simpson contends in his letter that the current bill's compromises remain "the path forward."

Two arrested for illegal explosives

COEUR D'ALENE — Two Idaho men have been arrested after a federal investigation into illegal explosives led to the seizure of hand grenades, firearms and more than 10,000 rounds of ammunition.

According to documents filed in federal court in Coeur d'Alene, Kenneth B. Kimbley, Jr., and Steven Eugene Winegar were arrested on firearms charges Saturday after federal agents found grenade components at Kimbley's home in Spirit Lake. Winegar is from Harpster, Idaho.

An undercover agent went to Kimbley's home on Saturday to make grenades. Kimbley and Winegar were arrested as the men began making the explosives. Agents said they do not know if the men had any plans for the explosives.

Woman pleads guilty in construction fraud cases

BOISE — A Treasure Valley resident faces up to 30 years in prison after pleading guilty to lying on a construction loan application.

Shauntee K. Ferguson is the eighth person to plead guilty in connection with the case. In exchange, the U.S. Attorney's office dropped 14 other charges against her.

The Idaho Statesman reports that Ferguson was charged as part of an ongoing probe of Crestwood Construction, a once-major homebuilding company in Idaho and Utah that went bankrupt in 2008.

Ferguson and her father, Michael Hymas, were indicted on charges of falsifying almost $8 million in loan applications in order to buy property in the two states that they planned to resell later at a profit. Hymas and Ferguson's husband, Stanley Ferguson, have both pleaded guilty to single counts of wire fraud.

Assistant U.S. Attorney George W. Breitsameter says U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge can take into account the original charges when he determines her sentence on Sept. 23.

Prosecutors believe her role in the scheme was limited, Breitsameter said.

"They were just using her credit to obtain the loans," he said.

According to the plea agreement, Ferguson told First Horizon Home Loans that she had a monthly income of $10,000, that she had $102,000 in an account and that she planned to occupy the home she was having built in Meridian. The company gave her a $520,000 construction loan.

E. Idaho police searching for missing inmate

IDAHO FALLS — Authorities are looking for a state inmate accused of walking away from a prison work release program in Idaho Falls.

Police say Joe Dee Stang fled from the Idaho Falls Community Work Center Saturday night.

Stang is serving a sentence for convictions on burglary and malicious injury to property in three eastern Idaho counties. He was eligible to be considered for parole in September 2012.

Stang is described as a white male, about 5-11 and 220 pounds with brown eyes and light brown hair.

Car drives off 200-foot cliff into Idaho reservoir

POCATELLO — A man's body was found in a Snake River reservoir after the stolen car he was in apparently drove off a 200-foot cliff.

Authorities in southeastern

Idaho haven't released the identity of the man, who was found in the American Falls reservoir on Monday.

The car had been reported stolen on July 1. It was found half-submerged.

The Power County Sheriff's Department says the car drove through a field and off the cliff at a point where there's no warning of the precipice.

A spokeswoman says, "It just kind of goes straight off a cliff and into the water."

The spot where the car and body were found is on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, so the FBI is investigating.

What happens if Yucca Mountain never opens?

Sometime in the next 20 years, the United States will — or won’t — make a series of decisions that will solve the nation’s long-term radioactive waste storage problem.

We Idahoans have long assumed that solution would be the opening of a facility like Yucca Mountain in the Nevada desert outside Las Vegas, where the Department of Energy had planned to stow America’s deadliest garbage in perpetuity.

But the future of Yucca Mountain is very much in question. President Obama’s DOE doesn’t want it — and largely because of pressure from U.S. Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev. — is doing its best to scuttle the project.

That’s becoming less likely both because the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has slowed down the process of decommissioning and because electoral prospects look brighter for Republicans, who generally support opening Yucca Mountain.

So what does that mean to Idaho?

Just this: The Idaho National Laboratory sits atop the sprawling Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer, which is a primary source of water for nearly half a million people who live downstream.

The Idaho Cleanup Project — mandated in a 1995 agreement between the DOE and former Gov. Phil Batt — has stabilized the most dangerous waste.

Much of it is being moved or will be moved to the Waste Isolation Plant Project in New Mexico, but the spent fuel will remain stored in dry form in INL until Yucca Mountain opens — or until the country comes up with another solution.

Under the Batt deal, the spent fuel must be leave Idaho by 2035. If there’s anyplace to send it.

The DOE long since concluded there’s no other feasible geological storage facility except Yucca Mountain, so if Yucca never opens the spent fuel will stay where it is — at INL, or DOE facilities and at commercial nuclear power plants around the country — awaiting waste disposal technology that hasn’t been invented yet.

But we’re talking about a 25-year-window between now at 2035. With the nation’s nuclear industry slowly stirring back to life, billions of dollars will be spent over the next two decades on waste disposal technology.

The DOE of the Clinton and Bush administrations left a legacy of mistrust on INL cleanup by their foot-dragging, haggling over the details of commitments it had already made, and threats of counter-suits. But as far as INL cleanup is concerned, the atmospherics improved under the current secretary of energy, Steven Chu, and his predecessor, Samuel Bodman.

Waste reprocessing at INL has decreased the threat to the Magic Valley’s water. But Idaho — and future governors and congressmen and senators — can’t afford to be complacent.

Idahoans have no control over what ultimately happens at Yucca Mountain. But we can insist that by whatever means, the federal government keeps its promises to us.

Our view: Technology may eventually solve Idaho's spent nuclear fuel problem even if Nevada's Yucca Mountain complex doesn't happen.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Idahoans have no control over what ultimately happens at Yucca Mountain. But we can insist that by whatever means, the federal government keeps its promises to us.

Is America rising or descending?

Is the United States in decline?

It’s an unusual question for Americans. The nation’s history has generally been one of extraordinary expansion and ascent.

Robert McCartney

Three developments explain the current worry that we’re slipping. One is the rise of China, seen as a realistic contender to replace us at the top. Another is the 2008 financial crisis, which undermined confidence in the United States’ free-market economic model. Third is the perception that the nation is incapable of dealing effectively with obvious, major challenges — the budget deficit, unemployment, oil addiction, illegal immigration, deteriorating infrastructure.

To answer the question, it’s necessary to break it in two parts. Are we in decline relative to other countries? And are we in decline in some absolute sense?

In comparison with other countries, the answer depends on the area of competition.

In military strength, for instance, the United States is still unquestionably on top. Our defense spending exceeds the combined total of the next 10 highest-spending countries, and our technology is unmatched.

We’re striking our most despised enemy, the al-Qaida leadership, with drones piloted by operators sitting comfortably far from the scene. Generals fret that “combat” has become so safe for some that it’s hard to justify medals honoring the traditional military virtues of valor and personal courage.

Think about that. It’s a kind of problem you want to have.

The picture is mixed when it comes to the “soft power” combination of diplomatic clout and all-around international influence.

“Is our political culture so gridlocked that we’re unable to address longstanding problems that we know need solving? I’m sad to say that the evidence suggests the answer is yes.”

George W. Bush’s presidency cost us good will abroad. It also hurt when an American institution, Wall Street, was the main culprit triggering the worst global business slump in seven decades.

On the upside, American democracy and freedoms still inspire many foreigners. U.S. popular culture is dominant from Hollywood to Facebook.

The field where we’ve definitely lost ground is economics. That’s partly because the rest of the world, especially in Asia, is catching up.

In 1950, China made up less than 5 percent of the world economy. Now its share is more than 10 percent and rising.

That’s not necessarily bad. China’s growth has exploded because it adopted free-market policies that we’ve been recommending for decades.

America’s problem is that the global economy is seriously unbalanced, and we’re on the red ink side of the ledger. Globalization led to the export of millions of good-paying U.S. manufacturing jobs. That means we’re now running large trade deficits. They aggravate another serious problem, the gaping shortfall in the federal budget.

This can’t continue indefinitely, and the fix is eventually going to hurt our standard of living.

Right now, the United States is sharply divided: Should we spend more to fight joblessness, or should we move now to contain the government deficit?

That uncertainty points to the other half of the broader question: Is our political culture so gridlocked that we’re unable to address longstanding problems that we know need solving?

I’m sad to say that the evidence suggests the answer is yes:

1. The Gulf of Mexico oil spill has reminded everyone of the environmental hazards of our dependence on petroleum. But there’s no movement toward a meaningful policy to significantly change our energy habits.

2. Virtually everyone regrets the massive violation of immigration laws represented by the presence of 12 million or so illegal residents. But our leaders can’t agree on the only available compromise, which would provide for a mix of gradual amnesty, strict employer sanctions and a guest-worker program.

3. The nation’s infrastructure is deteriorating.

But the public doesn’t want to pay higher taxes to fix the problem, and we haven’t figured out how to get the private sector to do it.

At the root of the deadlock is a fundamental disagreement between liberals and conservatives about the size and role of government.

To end it, a grand compromise is desirable.

Liberals need to show they can use tax money wisely and keep government from quashing entrepreneurial energy. Conservatives need to show they care as much about the common good as private interests.

Yes, America has begun a decline, mainly because we’ve let the economy and our political culture deteriorate. But we can still reverse it. We’re still the wealthiest nation in all of world history. Our politics have shown tremendous resilience and adaptability over more than two centuries. The elections of Ronald Reagan and Barack Obama showed how quickly our system can deliver dramatic change at the top, even if structural problems remain.

14th Amendment needs to be amended

In response to an article by AP writer Michelle Price, not all legal scholars laugh at a proposal to deny citizenship to children born in this country to undocumented parents. Professor Lino Graglia of the University of Texas law school (cited by George F. Will of The Washington Post) presents a sound argument for ending such “birthright citizenship.”

The 14th Amendment states: “All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside.” Dr. Graglia points out, “the authors and ratifiers of the amendment could not have intended birthright citizenship for illegal immigrants because in 1868 there were and never had been any illegal immigrants because no law ever had restricted immigration.” She adds, “It is difficult to imagine a more irrational and self-defeating legal system than one which makes unauthorized entry into this country a criminal offense and simultaneously provides perhaps the greatest possible inducement to illegal entry.”

She says this irrationality is rooted in a misunderstanding of the phrase, “subject to the jurisdiction thereof.” For example, American Indians owed allegiance to their tribes and their children were excluded from birthright citizenship. They could not change their status by their “own will without the action or assent of the United States.” Also, “no one can become a citizen of a nation without its consent.” “Divided allegiance applies equally to exclude the children of resident aliens, legal as well as illegal, from birthright citizenship.” “Subject to the jurisdiction of the U.S.” meant subject to its complete jurisdiction, not owing allegiance to anybody else,” said Sen. Trumbull of Illinois, author of the clause.

We need to correct this error of omission in the 14th Amendment, and we can do so through the amendment process.

Is it financial ‘reform’ — or just revenge?

WASHINGTON — It is a myth to think that the new financial “reform” legislation, assuming it passes the Senate, will insulate us for all time against financial panic and crisis. Great crises of the sort that occurred in 2008 and 2009 are usually separated by many decades, and so it will be hard to determine how much real protection the law provides. But the underlying ingredients of financial panics are always the same — uncertainty, ignorance and fear — and no law can permanently abolish these.

We have had recent reminders of just how quickly surprises can happen. On May 6, American stock prices dropped a scary 5 percent in a few minutes. Some blue-chip stocks momentarily fell to a penny. The collapse still isn’t fully understood, though it’s widely attributed to an interaction between computerized trading strategies (where computers automatically buy and sell stocks) and different securities markets. Another financial scare has arisen in Europe: Greece’s near default. It could lead to a major banking crisis if fears that other governments might default cause big losses for banks that hold government bonds.

It is a truism that most financial shocks don’t become panics. These are prevented through some combination of the self-correcting markets, industry policing and government regulation. But the paucity of panics should not prevent us from recognizing the vulnerability of a financial system that is global and dependent on complex technologies. At the end of 2009, for example, Americans owned $18 trillion of foreign assets (stocks, bonds, real estate, entire companies) and foreigners owned $21 trillion of American assets. Neither investors nor regulators can anticipate every possible threat to this massive, fluid system.

What the new legislation might do is reduce the odds that the next crisis will be like the last. It might, as its advocates claim, largely dispose of “too big to fail.”

During the crisis, the government faced the distasteful choice of rescuing teetering, huge financial institutions (Bear Stearns, AIG) or allowing a sudden bankruptcy (Lehman Brothers) to stoke panic by inflicting losses on other banks and investors. To avoid this dilemma, the legislation does two things.

First, it would police big financial institutions more closely. Until now, the Federal Reserve has supervised bank holding companies such as Citigroup. Some major institutions — such as AIG, mainly an insurance company — virtually escaped federal regulation. Under the legislation, the Fed could examine and regulate any hedge fund, insurance company and financial services firm whose failure might imperil the entire system.

Second, if tougher regulation and capital requirements don’t prevent fatal losses, the legislation creates an orderly way for institutions to close. They would shut down gradually to avoid market disruptions; if they need cash, the government might supply it temporarily. But the losses would ultimately be borne by shareholders, lenders and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which is supported by fees on banks. (If the FDIC were overwhelmed, taxpayer funds would presumably be used.)

The trouble is that — contrary to conventional wisdom — “too big to fail” was just a symptom of the crisis, not its basic cause. That was old-fashioned bad lending: home loans to borrowers who couldn’t repay. The panic arose because no one knew the size or location of the losses, now estimated in excess of $1 trillion. Ironically, the legislation may weaken the government’s ability to quell future panics by restricting — in highly technical ways — the Fed’s authority to lend to panic-stricken institutions in the midst of crisis.

“These reforms making their way through Congress will hold Wall Street accountable so we can help prevent another financial crisis like the one that we’re still recovering from.”

The legislation has other gaps. It doesn’t settle the future of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, the federally created housing agencies whose lax practices contributed to the crisis. Nor is there much to revive private-market securitization — the bundling of individual loans (home mortgages, auto loans) into bonds. This major source of credit has collapsed, down more than 90 percent since 2006. One weakness was that rating agencies (Moody’s, Standard & Poor’s) never verified the reliability of individual loans. The result: “liar loans” with inaccurate information. But the legislation doesn’t require rating agencies — or anyone — to do selective audits of individual loans. Without that, investors may shun most “securitizations.”

What’s called “financial reform” has twin motivations: to stabilize financial markets and to punish “Wall Street” for the crisis. So much in the legislation (a consumer protection agency, restrictions on “proprietary” trading by banks) is left to regulators that no one can now know the full outcome. It could be greater stability, overregulation, or a scattering of risky activities into lightly regulated institutions. History will ultimately judge whether this qualifies as genuine “reform” — or just revenge.

Newsweek columnist Robert Samuelson writes about economics.

Here’s to second-act aces

I used to be a connoisseur of stories about young, doomed geniuses: the F. Scott Fitzgeralds or Vincent van Goghs who died early, broke and crushed, going to their graves before anyone appreciated them. Doomed alcoholic youth were even better, an added edge to their stunted nobility.

A few weeks ago, my colleague Sam Tanenhaus wrote about young writers doomed in another way: those who never lived up to the promise of their early years. Perhaps many young writers now seen as ascendant have actually peaked. He mentioned Herman Melville, delivering “Moby-Dick” at age 32, and the 27-year-old author of “The Sun Also Rises,” Ernest Hemingway.

But those stories, like the doomed youth parables, no longer hold any inspiration for me. I now look to the late bloomer, somebody who kicks around in frustration and misdirection for decades before going on a brilliant late-innings streak.

When does creativity peak? The second-act aces make a case for middle to late age. Take a look at some of the people who have not simply performed well but done their best work in their later years.

For an athlete who must innovate with age, time is rarely an asset. The 40-year-old Ken Griffey Jr., struggling to keep his batting average above .200 this year just before he retired, was a pathetic sight. And Brett Favre, even with the feat of being the first starting quarterback to win an NFL playoff game at the age of 40, looks time-worn and sluggish when compared to his younger self.

But then there is Jamie Moyer, the slow-throwing tosser for the Philadelphia Phillies who at 47 this year became the oldest pitcher ever to beat the Yankees.

Timothy Egan

Almost 20 years ago, Moyer was told he was through — to get out of baseball. That was followed by 10 productive years in Seattle, where I watched the ageless Moyer befuddle the steroid-bulked behemoths of the performance-enhancing-drug age.

His advantages were experience, deception, guile — skills that usually come with added years on the odometer. He could be the athletic prototype for the kind of late-season bloomer that Malcolm Gladwell described in a New Yorker piece on great second acts. For endeavors that require knowledge of craft, and constant experimenting to get it right, age may actually be a benefit, Gladwell said.

You can see that in certain filmmakers. Much as I loved John Huston’s early work — “The Maltese Falcon” and “The Treasure of Sierra Madre” are superb entertainments — the last film of his life, an adaptation of the James Joyce story “The Dead,” is cinematic art of the highest form. At the age of 80, Huston directed the picture from a wheelchair, with oxygen tubes running up his nose.

The king of geriatric film genius has to be Clint Eastwood, who turned 80 in May. Starting with “Unforgiven,” when he was 62, Eastwood created at least five masterpieces (my favorite is “Mystic River”), including two that won the Academy Award for Best Picture. And his films are popular, as well. With “Gran Torino” he became at 78 the oldest leading man to reach number one in weekend box office.

In politics, experience often makes for better, more creative leaders. The Hillary Clinton who roams the globe as Secretary of State at 62 is a much better politician, and diplomat, than the policy-making 40-something who had trouble controlling her temper, or getting the results she wanted. Her best work would seem to be ahead of her.

Teddy Kennedy at 70 was a master of the Senate, and light years in legislative creativity ahead of the callow youth who entered the chamber back in 1962. Because the Senate can be a pampered nursing home, many politicians go the other way. Think of John McCain, once the great maverick, becoming ever more cranky, partisan, narrow-minded and petty with every passing day.

Writers are a tough call. For every J.D. Salinger, who published “The Catcher in the Rye” when he was 32, there is a Mark Twain, who brought out “The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn” at 49. “Huck Finn,” Hemingway said, is the foundation for all modern American fiction, and I agree.

Nobody was a better American essayist in the 1970s and ‘80s than Joan Didion. But the writerly sprint culminating in her late-years memoir “The Year of Magical Thinking” was breathtaking. She finished the book just days after her 70th birthday.

My favorite septuagenarian inspiration is Norman Maclean, who published the most beautiful, word-perfect novel of the American West, “A River Runs Through It,” when he was 74. And then he had a second book in him, “Young Men and Fire,” published after his death at 87. Old, seemingly doomed, and brilliant — a role model for all second-act aces.

Time to reunite church and state

We must restore the principles of freedom contained in the Declaration of Independence that states our rights come from God and government is needed only to protect those rights.

Patrick Henry said that this nation was founded on Christian principles contained in the Holy Bible. The Supreme Court in 1892 ruled that “our institutions are emphatically Christian.”

George Washington stated that the Christian religion and morality were indispensable supports for good government and warned that we would lose our freedom if we separated God from government.

Presently, we have separation of church and state, (although not found in the First Amendment or The Constitution), because of unconstitutional Supreme Court decisions that have resulted in secular humanism’s moral decay and detrimental effects.

Eight words (taken out of context) of President Jefferson’s 1802 letter was used to remove Biblical principles from schools and public institutions. Jefferson was ambassador in France when the Constitution and Bill of Rights were written. The 145 Founders who were involved clearly stated that they did not want a state church or denomination but wanted religion, morality and knowledge to be taught in schools.

President Jefferson ordered that the Bible be read in Washington, D.C., schools. Congress purchased 20,000 Bibles and authorized the government printing of Bibles. The motto of the Revolutionary War for Independence was: “No king but King Jesus.”

The founders honored Independence Day as a religious holiday because the author of liberty, Jesus Christ, made freedom and independence possible for us. We should impeach secular judges and bring God back into our institutions. To verify our Christian heritage, contact www.wall-builders.com. Thank God for independence and freedom.

Jobless recovery slows in south-central Idaho

Unemployment rate drops again as labor force declines in state

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

South-central Idaho's unemployment rate edged higher in June, despite the state reporting its fourth consecutive month of declines.

A comparison of seasonally adjusted unemployment rates since January, which were compiled by the Times-News, shows that available jobs are scarcer than they were during the start of 2010.

From January to June, the unemployment rate in the Twin Falls micropolitan area, which includes surrounding communities within commuting distance, increased two-tenths of a percentage point to 8.2 percent. The Burley micropolitan area reported an increase of four-tenths of a percentage point during the same time period.

That means about 1,300 more workers from both areas were unable to find jobs compared to January, making it more difficult for the 4,300 workers who were already on the unemployment rolls.

"Quite frankly, unemployment hasn't been moving back as much as we would have liked," said Jan Roeser, regional economist with Idaho Department of Labor. "There are a lot of factors, but the biggest factors seem to be the expiration of tax credits and incentives, as well as more people entering the workforce."

According to Idaho Department of Labor, more than 1,500 people entered the workforce in the Twin Falls micropolitan area in June compared to the previous year. About 600 more people entered the workforce in the Burley micropolitan area.

"These are likely older people who have had to return to the workforce, recent graduates and unemployed workers who gave up searching for work earlier in the year but decided to start looking again."

The confluence of more people returning to the workforce, combined with massive job losses, has sent the regional unemployment rate to its highest level since the late 80s.

But labor officials say the launch of the C3 Center in Twin Falls is expected to change the region's unemployment outlook.

Post office seeks 2-cent increase in stamp price

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The post office wants to increase the price of a stamp by 2 cents to 46 cents starting in January. The agency has been battered by massive losses and declining mail volume and faces a financial crisis.

Postal Service officials announced a wide-ranging series of proposed price increases Tuesday, averaging about 5 percent, and covering first class, advertising mail, periodicals, packages and other services.

The request now goes to the independent Postal Rate Commission which has 90 days to respond. If approved, the increase would take effect Jan. 2.

"The Postal Service faces a serious risk of financial insolvency," postal vice president Stephen M. Kearney said.

Kearney said the agency is facing a $7 billion loss in 2011. The rate increase will bring in an extra $2.5 billion, meaning it still faces a $4.7 billion loss.

The rate increase is part of a series of money-saving plans announced in March. These also include reducing mail deliveries to five days a week, closing offices and making other cuts in expenses. Congress must agree to eliminating deliveries on Saturdays.

While the cost of a first-class stamp would go up to 46 cents, people who bought "Forever" stamps at lower prices will still be able to use them for first-class mail without paying the difference.

Officials also said they plan a new design for Forever stamps, which currently have an image of the Liberty Bell. New Forever stamps will have images of evergreen trees. All Forever stamps would remain valid.

In addition to the 46-cent rate for the first ounce of a letter the cost for each additional ounce would go up a penny to 18 cents. The cost to mail a post card would go up 2 cents to 30 cents. The price to send periodicals would go up about 8 percent and other rates for advertising mail, parcels and services will also go up by varying amounts.

SUCCESS, THE WIFI WAY

Mosey Levy, an engineer, works on his laptop at a Starbucks in New York. Despite an increasing number of customers who loiter at cafes and other businesses with free Internet access, Starbucks officials say the coffee chain could reap financial rewards from coffee drinkers who stay longer and buy more drinks to fuel marathon Internet sessions.

Starbucks bets big, but others say free Internet is a drag on business

By Kristena Hansen and Andrea Chang
Los Angeles Times writers

LOS ANGELES — Does free Internet access really increase customer traffic?

Some businesses and even their customers say, 'not a chance.'

Ted Thompson, a civil engineer in Santa Clarita, Calif., likes his coffee without Internet.

But sitting in a downtown Los Angeles Starbucks, he worried that there might not be much room for him in the chain's shops in the future.

"You won't be able to find a place to sit down anymore if more people are coming in to use their computers," said Thompson, 70. "I thought a coffee shop was for drinking coffee."

On Thursday, Starbucks Corp. instituted a free, unlimited Wi-Fi Internet policy for patrons at its nearly 6,800 company-operated stores in the U.S., plus 750 locations in Canada.

Some competitors beat Starbucks to it. Six months ago, McDonald's Corp. announced that it would offer free Wi-Fi at about 11,500 U.S. locations. The fast-food giant had launched its McCafe line of coffee drinks, typically at lower prices than at Starbucks.

Even before the free Wi-Fi policy some customers spent hours in Starbucks shops with their laptops, taking up the tables and chairs. The Seattle company doesn't have a policy regarding how long a person is allowed to stay, even if he or she doesn't purchase so much as a "tall coffee" (despite the name, the smallest size offered).

The new free, unlimited Wi-Fi program could bring in more of those folks.

"This is a double-edged sword," said Eli Portnoy, a Los Angeles brand strategist who stopped going to Starbucks months ago because it was always "littered with laptops."

"It's going to get worse," he said. "But I feel they think it's a no-win situation, that if they don't offer prime amenities that they're going to be at a loss."

Even if it irks some customers, Starbucks could reap financial rewards from coffee drinkers who stay longer and buy more drinks to fuel marathon Internet sessions.

"People are squatting, sure, but they're buying," said Brian Rosen, a retail consultant at Chicago business consulting firm ROCO Partners. "Starbucks didn't come to this altruistically for the good of the people — what it does is increase sales."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Homebuyer credit extended for six months to Sept. 30

Eligible taxpayers who contracted to buy a home, qualifying for the first-time homebuyer credit, before the end of April now have until Sept. 30 to close the deal, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

The Homebuyer Assistance and Improvement Act of 2010, signed by the President, extended the closing deadline from June 30 to Sept. 30 for any eligible homebuyer who entered into a binding purchase contract on or before April 30 to close on the purchase of the home on or before June 30.

The new law addresses concerns that many homebuyers might be unable to meet the original June 30 closing deadline.

The registration fee is $90. For more information call 732-6442 or the Small Business Development Center at 732-6450.

Pfizer gets EU approval for kids' cholesterol drug

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The European Union has approved a new chewable form of cholesterol blockbuster Lipitor for children 10 and up with high levels of bad cholesterol and triglycerides, a type of blood fat, Pfizer said Tuesday.

The approval includes children whose high blood fats are due to an inherited disease that causes extremely high cholesterol levels, familial hypercholesterolemia.

New York-based Pfizer Inc. won U.S. approval for Lipitor use in children 10 to 17 with that condition in 2002.

Lipitor is the world's top-selling drug, with 2009 sales of about $13 billion, but its U.S. patent expires at the end of November 2011. Pfizer, the world's biggest drugmaker, will quickly lose most Lipitor revenue once generic competition hits, so the company has been trying to boost sales where possible before then.

Pfizer said last fall that it plans to apply for a six-month extension of its patent in European countries, after doing studies of Lipitor in youngsters.

As in the United States, the European Union allows drug makers to seek an additional six months of patent protection for medications if they test them in children, who generally are excluded from the drug studies performed to win approval for a new medication.

Washington residents seeking cheaper booze help make northern Idaho liquor store state's top-seller

The Associated Press

POST FALLS — A state liquor store in Post Falls has become Idaho's top-seller of booze, with customers from nearby eastern Washington helping drive up sales of distilled spirits.

Brent Layton lives in Post Falls and said there are times he finds himself outnumbered by shoppers from Spokane, Wash.

"Sometimes I feel like a minority coming in here," Layton told the Coeur d'Alene Press.

Buzz Everett was among customers from Spokane who made the roughly 20-mile drive to the northern Idaho store to buy liquor before the holiday weekend. Everett said he can buy a bottle of cinnamon whisky in Idaho for $11.80, and the same bottle would cost about $17 in his state.

"It's about being cheaper over here, and this is the closest store for us," said Everett, pointing out the large number of out-of-state license plates outside the store.

The Idaho State Liquor Division reports sales at the Post Falls store are estimated at about $5 million for the most recent fiscal year, a 10 percent jump from the previous year. Statewide, liquor sales rose about 2 percent, from $135.8 million to about $137.8 million, according to preliminary data.

This northern Idaho region has become something of a magnet for shoppers from eastern Washington trying to avoid paying for more for certain items in their home state.

Washington Gov. Chris Gregoire this year approved a revenue package that nets roughly $780 million to avoid deeper cuts to education, health care and human services but means consumers pay more for several convenience-store favorites, including soda, bottled water, major-brand beer, candy and cigarettes.

It's higher prices that have sent residents, including Mike Smith of Spokane, across the border for some items.

Jobless

Initial estimates by officials at Idaho Department of Labor project that the unemployment rate could drop as low as 5.5 percent as the company hires more than 600 workers in coming months — that would push the regional unemployment rate down to the lowest in the state.

But that estimate is based on projections that the company will only hire workers from Magic Valley — something that isn't likely with about 700,000 Idahoans desperately looking for jobs.

The statewide unemployment rate declined two-tenths of a percentage point to 8.8 percent in June compared to the previous month, matching the rate for October 2009 when unemployment across Idaho was climbing to a peak of 9.5 percent this February. While down substantially from that peak, the rate is still the highest prior to this recession since July 1983.

Idaho saw 4,400 unemployed workers lose their benefits in the first week of June because Congress had not renewed the program. More than 41,000 checks for a total of $11.3 million in state and federal benefits were distributed to jobless workers in Idaho during the first week of June.

Job creation in Idaho during June was weaker than normal for the month, according to the report by Idaho Department of Labor.

New hiring was 8 percent below June 2009 to mark the weakest June on record. Hiring was more than offset by the end of temporary employment for more than 1,400 Census Bureau workers.

Stolen plane fits pattern of elusive 'Barefoot Bandit'

By Megan Reynolds

NASSAU, Bahamas — Police were hunting across a tourist island Tuesday for signs of a pilot who vanished after wrecking a small plane in the Bahamas and investigators in the U.S. turned their suspicions toward an American teenager on the run dubbed "the Barefoot Bandit."

The single-engine Cessna that crashed in shallow waters off Abaco island was apparently stolen more than 1,000 miles away in Bloomington, Ind. By the time rescuers arrived Sunday, nobody was inside.

The 2009 Cessna 400 Corvalis was stolen over the weekend from the Monroe County Airport, the facility's manager, Bruce Payton said. It was unclear how the thief got into the airport, which has a 10-foot security fence with barbed wire and coded access gates.

U.S. authorities said the heist has similarities to other thefts attributed to 19-year-old Colton Harris-Moore, a Washington state teenager who has no formal flight training.

The teen got his nickname for allegedly committing crimes while shoeless. He is suspected of stealing cars and small airplanes to evade authorities since escaping from a halfway house near Seattle in 2008.

Payton said a detective with the Monroe County Sheriff's Department told him authorities had recovered a stolen vehicle about a half-mile from the Indiana airport and "the details of the stolen vehicle seemed to fit that of the pattern known as the Barefoot Bandit."

Authorities believe he has taken five planes, luxury cars and power boats.

FBI Special Agent Steven Dean in Seattle says a warrant for Harris-Moore was issued for the theft of an airplane from Bonners Ferry, Idaho, on Sept. 29, 2009. The plane crashed after running out of fuel 260 miles away near Snohomish, Wash.

In Abaco, a sparsely populated northern Bahamian island known for fishing and sailing, police were handing out wanted posters appealing for information about Harris-Moore.

A statement on the web-site of the U.S. Embassy in Nassau said Harris-Moore may have recent injuries and urged anyone who sees him to contact the nearest Bahamas police station. It said the FBI is offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to his arrest.

A team of detectives in this island chain off the Florida coast traveled from Nassau, the capital, on Tuesday to join the investigation and aid the search for the pilot in Abaco, police Sgt. Chrislyn Skippings said.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, Jeff Dubel, said an extensive manhunt had been under way since the weekend.

"We have a lot of faith in the Royal Bahamas Police Force and the Royal Bahamas Defense Force and they are chasing all active leads," Dubel said.

Temps soar above 100 in Eastern U.S.

By David B. Caruso and Jim Fitzgerald
Associated Press writers

NEW YORK — The East Coast roasted under an unrelenting sun Tuesday as record-setting temperatures soared past 100 from Virginia to Massachusetts, utility companies cranked up power to the limit to cool the sweating masses and railroad tracks were so hot commuter trains had to slow down.

"It's brutal," said construction worker Pat McHugh, 49, his face shiny with sweat, as he took a break in New York City. "Worst heat on the job in 10 years."

The temperature broke records for the day in New York, where it hit 103, and in Philadelphia, where it reached 102.

It was also over 100 in cities from Richmond, Va., to Boston, and Providence, R.I., and Hartford, Conn., also set records.

"It's safe to say this is one of the hottest days in about a decade for many locations in the Northeast and even inland," said Sean Potter of the National Weather Service. "You'd go back to 2001 or maybe 1999 to find a similar heat wave."

With people cranking up the air conditioning, energy officials said there was tremendous demand for electricity, but the grid didn't buckle.

Few power problems were reported and the operators of the regional electrical systems that serve the Mid-Atlantic, New England and New York said they had ample capacity. Usage appeared to be falling just short of records set throughout the Northeast during a major heat wave in 2006.

Still, it was oppressive.

On the baking streets of the Bronx, 14-year-old Miguel Pena and 13-year-old Vincent Quiles walked their bicycles up a steep hill, white handkerchiefs around their heads to keep the sweat from their eyes.

"Man, this stinks," Miguel said. "We just got out of school and this is supposed to be when we have fun, but this is too much. We thought it would be cooler on the bike, but now we're going home. It's just too hot."

"You can't breathe out here," Vincent added.

In downtown Philadelphia, pedestrians and drivers appeared to move a little more slowly in the heat, which combined high humidity with clear sunny skies that made sidewalks hot and asphalt sticky.

"Hydrate," President Obama reminded a group of reporters as they left the Oval Office at the White House.

Meteorologists in some places began calling the hot stretch a heat wave, a phenomenon defined in the Northeast as three consecutive days of temperatures of 90 or above. New Jersey's largest city, Newark, handily beat that threshold, hitting 100 for the third day in a row. Temperatures in the Mid-Atlantic region are expected to be in the high 90s to 100 again on Wednesday.

U.S. soldier charged in leak of classified Iraq attack video

By Barbara Surk
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — An American soldier suspected of leaking a military video of an attack on unarmed men in Iraq was charged with multiple counts of mishandling and leaking classified data and putting national security at risk, the U.S. Army said in a statement Tuesday.

Army Spc. Bradley Manning is suspected of leaking a classified video that shows a group of men walking down the street before being repeatedly shot by Apache helicopters. The American gunners can be heard laughing and referring to the men as "dead bastards."

If convicted on all charges, Manning could be sentenced to a maximum 52 years in prison.

The classified video was taken from the cockpit during a 2007 fire fight and posted last April on the web-site Wikileaks.org. It was an unflattering portrait of the war that raised questions about the military's rules of engagement and whether more should be done to prevent civilian casualties.

Among those believed to have been killed in the attack were a Reuters photographer Nimir Noor-Eldeen, 22, and his driver Saeed Chmagh, 40. Two children were wounded.

Hours after the military announcement, Wikileaks sent out a tweet complaining that while Manning was charged, the "trigger-happy Apache crew remain uncharged."

Manning, 22, from Potomac, Md., was detained in Baghdad in early June and is now being held in Kuwait.

A military version of a grand jury hearing will determine if Manning should face a trial by court-martial, the Army's statement said.

No date has been set for the hearing that will take place in Baghdad, Army spokesman Lt. Col. Eric Bloom told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

A criminal investigation is still open, the Army statement said, detailing charges against Manning including "transferring classified data onto his personal computer and adding unauthorized software to a classified computer system."

Just not quite right

Myanmar refugees struggle to re-create dishes in Twin Falls

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

There was no shortage of food on Cung Awi's kitchen table Monday, and on the surface, it looked like what he would eat in his native Myanmar, formerly Burma. He can find most of the same ingredients — beef, chicken, cilantro, chayote squash, rice, spinach — that his family used in Myanmar and the refugee camp in Malaysia where they lived for three years.

The food is good and filling, but slightly bland. That's not always the case with Myanmar food, Awi said.

"Today is just simple. We did not put any seasoning," said Awi, who goes by Steven.

Awi has problems finding Myanmar seasonings and spices in Twin Falls. Although he is learning English, he said he and other Myanmar refugees aren't yet skilled enough to describe the seasonings to store owners for special orders.

"We can't find it," he said.

So their food is less flavorful than what they would have eaten in their home country. One soup, called tihang, consisted of boiled spinach in water — and nothing else. Baked chicken had nothing more than salt. A salad called chit ti ni married cabbage and tomato with cilantro, the only herb in the meal.

Sokry Heng, who owns Asian Food Market with her husband, Yip, said most of her Myanmar customers who come to the store don't speak English. Heng, who moved to Twin Falls from Cambodia in 2000, often deals with newly arrived refugee families and can steer customers toward familiar food.

"If they buy salami, I know they don't eat salami," she said. Nepalis often try to buy the wrong type of rice, but Heng knows they are looking for basmati.

Myanmar food is similar to Cambodian food, Heng said. "They eat a lot of vegetables, noodles, chili, coconut milk," she said. Both cuisines use a lot of soy sauce and oyster sauce, and not as many spices as the Nepalis.

Still, Awi said, there are a couple of essential Myanmar flavors that he hasn't been able to track down in America.

Online recipes for Myanmar soups, curries and noodle dishes cite ginger, garlic, onions, fresh coriander and a shrimp paste called ngapi as the most commonly used Myanmar spices and seasonings.

Most Myanmar people eat the same cuisine, regardless of what ethnic group they belong to, Awi said. Awi and his family are part of the Chin minority, but other Myanmar families of Twin Falls are part of the Karen minority. All of them have trouble finding seasonings, he said.

Michelle Pospichal, volunteer coordinator for the

Cung Awi

Myanmar dishes rest on Cung Awi's table in Twin Falls. Though all of the vegetables used in the meal are the same as the ones the family ate in a refugee camp in Malaysia, they say it has been hard finding the spices that make the food taste the same as it did overseas.

College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center, estimated that about 100 refugees from Myanmar have arrived since 2008, although several of those families have moved to other states since then. The refugee center is trying to secure a grant that would help refugees grow the vegetables they ate in their home countries. Refugees also work two community garden plots, where they grow tomatoes, cilantro, onions, potatoes, beans and other foods common to their cuisines.

Still, the language barrier prevents some from finding the same ingredients they used before coming to Twin Falls.

"They don't normally know the names (of food) that we would know," Pospichal said.

While Awi learns English and grows accustomed to American culture, he and his family are becoming acquainted with western food. He and his wife, Dawt Chin Sung, like Mexican food, southern fried chicken and pizza.

"In America, they are very clever (with food)," Awi said. Their children, 3-year-old Van Biak Thang and 18-month-old Ro Si Tha Len Par, love American sweets.

"Every time, they ask me for candy," Awi said.

But all the pizza in the world can't replace the dishes he grew up with.

"I miss my country's food," he said.

Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or melissa.davlin@lee.net.

Cung Awi is working hard on his English. Besides gaining good employment and more social connections, Awi says that learning English would help in finding spices for Myanmar dishes.

Ideas for what to do with summer's bounty

By Michele Kayal
For The Associated Press

Right about now farmers market devotees start coming home with more than they know what to do with, simply because it's all so beautiful.

But an unusually good crop of produce-centered cookbooks offers inventive ways to use the bounty to its best advantage.

Susie Middleton's "Fast, Fresh and Green" (Chronicle Books, 2010) injects your cooking with a little

"Huah!" and offers a strategy for decoding and deploying a greater variety of vegetables.

Built around foundation recipes for eight cooking techniques such as grilling, roasting and sauteing, the book teaches home cooks how to handle different vegetables, and then offers suggestions for enlivening them. Roasted cauliflower gets a Moroccan feel from orange zest and olives, and the simple slaw strikes a Southwest note with lime, cilantro and Serrano peppers (technique: No Cooking). Great book for vegetophobics or people stuck in a steamed broccoli rut.

"Cooking from the Garden" by Ruth Lively (Taunton Press, 2010) features more than 200 recipes that aim to move the greens from your backyard to your table with minimal fuss. With the big, blocky look of an elementary school textbook, the book offers quick, comfy fare like tomatoes in shallot-flavored cream (cooking time about 5 minutes), stir-fried shrimp with asparagus, and chicken pot pie with rosemary biscuits. Home gardeners will appreciate the section on turning your piles of borage and lemon

What's new at your restaurant for summer

Easy to make and packed with flavor, this salad will be a welcome change from the usual pasta or potato salad at a summer cookout.

Real salads have bacon, beans, BBQ sauce

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

No time for potato or pasta salad? Or just looking to mix it up at the next cookout? This is your salad. Just 20 minutes will get you an intensely flavored white bean salad studded with savory bacon, crunchy fennel and fresh corn, all tossed with tangy barbecue sauce. The result is a rich, but not heavy salad that is the perfect partner for ribs, burgers, dogs, cobs or whatever you've got on the grill. It's also a versatile dish that can be dressed up multiple ways. Use it as a filling in flour tortillas for barbecue-flavored burritos. Spoon it over tortilla chips, sprinkle with cheese, then bake until heated through for hearty nachos. To save even more time, you can prepare the salad ahead and refrigerate for a day. Let it sit at room temperature for 30 minutes before serving.

BARBECUE BACON AND BEAN SALAD
Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 6.

1/2 pound bacon, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 large yellow onion, diced
1/2 teaspoon smoked paprika

1/2 cup prepared barbecue sauce
15-ounce can corn kernels, drained (or kernels cut from about 4 ears)
Two 15-ounce cans white beans, drained
1 medium bulb fennel, finely chopped
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
1 tablespoon chopped chives
In a large saute pan over medium-high, cook the bacon for 4 minutes. Add the onion and continue cooking until the bacon is crispy and the onion tender. Remove the pan from the heat. If there is more than about 1 tablespoon of fat in the pan, drain most of it, leaving the bacon and onions in the pan. Stir in the smoked paprika and barbecue sauce. Transfer to a bowl and place in the freezer for 10 minutes to cool quickly. In a large bowl, mix together the corn, beans and fennel. Mix in the cooled bacon mixture, tossing well. Sprinkle in the cider vinegar and season with salt and pepper. Garnish with chopped chives.

Steak dish is spicy and cool at the same time

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

This dish is spicy and cool at the same time. Unlike a lot of lean cuts of beef, flank steak is a flavorful one that can stand up to seasoning. Here, I lay it on with a rub of chili powder and cumin spiked with a small dose of smoked chili powder. I like to use ground chipotle powder, but smoked Spanish paprika or any other chili powder made from smoked, dried chili peppers would be fine. Champagne mangoes are particularly good to use here, because they are on the small side and have sweet, smooth flesh. But any ripe mango will do. The spice-rubbed steak should be refrigerated for at least 2 hours and up to 12 hours before grilling. The mango salsa can be covered and refrigerated up to 12 hours in advance.

CHILI-CRUSTED FLANK STEAK WITH MANGO SALSA

4 to 6 servings
For the steak:
2 teaspoons mild chili powder
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/4 teaspoon ground chipotle powder or smoked Spanish paprika
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 pounds flank steak
1 tablespoon olive oil
For the salsa:

Flesh of 4 or 5 small, ripe mangoes, cut into 1/4- to 1/2-inch dice (about 2 cups)
3 or 4 scallions, white and light-green parts, finely chopped (1/4 cup)
Finely grated zest and juice of 1 lime (about 1 teaspoon zest and 2 or 3 teaspoons juice)
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar or champagne vinegar
4 teaspoons honey, or more as needed
Leaves from 3 or 4 stems cilantro, finely chopped (2 tablespoons)
1/8 teaspoon salt, or more as needed

For the steak: Combine the chili powder, cumin, chipotle powder, if using, and salt in a small bowl. Lay the flank steak out on a large piece of aluminum foil covered with plastic wrap. Rub both sides of the steak with the spice mixture, making sure to evenly distribute the spices, then rub with the oil. Wrap the steak in the plastic wrap and then the aluminum foil. Refrigerate for 2 to 12 hours. For the salsa: Combine the mango, scallions, the zest and juice of the lime, the vinegar, honey, cilantro and salt; mix well. Taste, and adjust the seasoning and/or honey as needed. Cover and refrigerate for at least two hours (and up to 12 hours) until ready to serve. Prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for about 4 or 5 seconds. Lightly coat a grill rack with oil and place it on the grill. Place the spice-rubbed flank steak on the grill; cover and cook for 6 minutes. Uncover, and turn over the steak to finish cooking to your desired degree of doneness. The total cooking time for medium-rare will be 10 minutes for a 1-inch steak and up to 15 minutes for a thicker one. Transfer the steak to a platter and let it rest for 10 minutes before cutting against the grain into thin slices. Serve portions of the steak with the salsa spooned on top.

Researcher finds lax food safety in restaurants

By Nicole Norfleet
Associated Press writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — Here's an unappetizing thought: A review of restaurant food safety practices found that a typical kitchen worker cross-contaminates food with potentially dangerous pathogens about once per hour. Among the risky behaviors cited were workers using aprons and other garments to dry hands, as well as using the same utensils and surfaces to prepare both raw and cooked foods, according to a review by a North Carolina State University researcher. Both practices are considered health violations, said Ben Chapman, an assistant professor and food safety specialist who used video cameras in eight restaurant kitchens to monitor worker food safety habits. Joan McGlockton, a food policy representative for the National Restaurant Association, said that while the study is disconcerting, the association doesn't feel it is representative of the entire restaurant industry. "We apply strong emphasis on employee training in areas of food safety to ensure that proper practices in hygiene, food handling and sanitation are in place in every food service outlet," she said in an e-mail. Americans experience about 76 million foodborne illnesses a year. While most of these cases are mild and don't have long-term symptoms, foodborne illnesses cause about 5,000 deaths annually, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. From 1998 to 2004, the latest figures available, more than 50 percent of foodborne disease outbreaks reported to the CDC were associated with restaurants or delicatessens. Cross-contamination happens when pathogens, such as salmonella and E. coli, are transferred from raw food or contaminated source to already prepared food. For example, when a cook uses the same knife to first cut raw chicken and then to slice a sandwich. Chapman says the risky behaviors were most prevalent during busy periods. For example, some employees didn't attempt to wash their hands during lunch and breakfast rushes. Multiple workers using the same tools caused many of the cross-contaminations, according to the review published in the June issue of the Journal of Food Protection. There was also some good news: Chapman found that posting information about food safety in kitchens and break rooms that gives employees examples of the consequences of poor food handling significantly reduced risky behaviors.

Cookies and milk: Together as a frozen treat

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

The classic combination of oatmeal cookies and milk. Together at last in a cool summer treat. These ice cream sandwiches start with oatmeal cookies speckled with flecks of chocolate. Nestled between them is purchased vanilla ice cream (for ease) that gets dressed up with bits of toffee.

Of course, these ice cream sandwiches also are easily adapted to whatever flavors you're hankering for. Finely chopped dried fruit, dark or white chocolate chips, or other small candies could be substituted for the chocolate in the cookies or for the toffee bits in the ice cream. And just about any flavor ice cream can be used.

TOFFEE COOKIE ICE CREAM SANDWICHES

Start to finish: 2 hours (15 minutes active). Makes 12 sandwiches.

For the cookies:
2/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, softened
1/3 cup packed dark brown sugar

AP photo

With cookie and milk in each cool bite, these ice cream sandwiches are ideal for a hot summer day.

1/3 cup granulated sugar
1 egg
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 1/2 cups rolled oats
1/2 cup finely chopped chocolate, bitter or semi-sweet

For the ice cream:
1 pint vanilla ice cream
1 cup crushed toffee bits (found in the baking aisle)

To make the cookies, heat the oven to 350 degrees. In a small bowl, whisk together the flour, baking soda, cinnamon and salt.

In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to beat the butter and both sugars until light and fluffy. Add the egg and vanilla and beat well.

Stir in the flour mixture and beat until just combined. Stir in the oats and chocolate. Divide the dough into 24 tablespoon-size balls and arrange on 2 ungreased baking sheets, leaving about 3 inches of space between them. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes, or until golden brown around the edges. Transfer the cookies to a rack and cool completely.

Soften the ice cream until it can be stirred, but is not melted. The easiest way to do this is to transfer the ice cream to a microwave-safe bowl and heat in 10-second intervals until it reaches the desired consistency. Add the toffee bits and mix well.

While the ice cream is soft, scoop a bit onto the bottom of a cooled cookie, then top with another cookie. Freeze until the ice cream is solid. Store in an airtight container in the freezer.

Picnic fare: A salad that travels well

The Washington Post

Barley seems suited to cold weather and filling foods, yet here it has pride of place in a dish that smacks more of spring. Sugar snap peas, uncooked so they stay nice and crisp, provide great crunch and vibrant green color. Red onion and lemon lend bite.

Adapted from "Eating Well 500 Calorie Dinners," by Jessie Price, Nicci Micco and the Eating Well Test Kitchen (Eating Well, 2010).

SUGAR SNAP PEA AND BARLEY SALAD

Makes six 2/3-cup servings

2 cups water
1 cup quick-cooking barley
8 ounces fresh sugar snap peas, ends and strings removed, cut on the diagonal into thin strips (julienne)
Leaves from 1/4 bunch flat-leaf parsley, chopped (1/2 cup)
1/4 medium red onion

finely chopped (1/4 to 1/3 cup)

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

Freshly squeezed juice from 1/2 or 1 lemon (2 tablespoons)

3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Bring the water to a boil in a medium saucepan over medium-high heat. Stir in the barley; cover, reduce the heat to medium and cook for 10 to 12 minutes or according to the package directions. Remove from the heat; cover and let stand for 5 minutes.

Pour the barley into a colander and rinse with cool water; let drain for a few minutes, then transfer to a large bowl. Add the snap peas, parsley, onion, oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper; toss to combine. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

Bounty

verbena into herbal teas.

To answer the inevitable "But what do you do with it?" that comes after discovering some new treat at the market, Sur La Table's "Eating Local" (Andrews McMeel, 2010) ingeniously organizes recipes according to ingredient. Fava beans? Toss them with corn and bacon for a smoky succotash. Kohlrabi? Sauté with butter and dill.

Enticing preparations will also get you over the hump of making the same things over and over. Beets join up with tahini for a rich, creamy dip, while their tops are sautéed and served with whipped feta. The book gets a big dose of soul — and a warm fuzzy feeling about eating local — from lushly photographed farmer profiles.

Cathy Thomas' "Melissa's Everyday Cooking with Organic Produce" (Wiley Hardcover, 2010) also is organized by ingredient, but caters to broader tastes. Created by Melissa's World Variety Produce, one of the country's leading distributors, recipes such as chicken breast with apricots and green bean casserole hit a comforting note. Packed with nutritional information, tips on selecting and storing produce, and discussions of different varieties this is a handy, general guide for all things fruit and vegetable.

Several single-subject books let cooks plow the produce into their passions. In "Tomato: A Fresh-from-the-Vine Cookbook," (Storey Publishing, 2010) heirloom guru Lawrence Davis-Hollander showcases the sultry balance of sweet and acid in summer's most eagerly awaited fruit with more than 150 recipes from well-known chefs, including Daniel Boulud, Alice Waters and Deborah Madison. Standards like fried green tomatoes and traditional marinara sauce mingle with Middle Eastern "pizza" spiked with allspice and rabbit paella bursting with heirlooms. Tarts stacked with orange, yellow, red and green gems are the stuff of bakery windows. An indispensable guide for tomato lovers.

And lest you think salad is boring, chef Andrew Swallow's "Mixt Salads" (Ten Speed Press, 2010) offers innovative flavor and texture combinations that propel the genre beyond a bowl of cold vegetables. Organized according to season, a spring salad of English peas and morels gets goosed up with watercress and aged sherry vinegar. And perhaps summer's most seductive salad is a gentle cascade of lamb's lettuce caressed by floral lychees and the fresh, green essence of cucumbers.

For your sweet tooth, "Farmers' Market Desserts" by Jennie Schacht (Chronicle Publishing, 2010) offers more than 50 recipes for all those berries, plums and peaches. Amid traditional recipes for pies and buckles, surprises like easy chocolate cherry cupcakes frosted with chocolate sour cream icing and chilled plum soup with sour cream give summer's candy a show-stopping twist. With recipes for petite salted caramel apples and ginger pear skillet cake, the book will also take you into autumn and throughout the year.

When you're feeling whimsical and Italian, "Recipes from an Italian Summer" (Phaidon Press, 2010) is a massive tome from the publishers of "The Silver Spoon." The book conjures picnics and countryside meals. A rustic vegetable tart packs in summer's bountiful Swiss chard, spinach, zucchini and leeks, and a cold corn and mozzarella salad contrasts crunchy green peppers with springy cheese and sweet corn. As with most of Phaidon's books, head notes telling users what to expect from each recipe are absent, but stick with ingredients you like and experiment.

A pie for celebrating healthy eating

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Here's a real reason to celebrate — pies don't have to be banned from a healthy diet.

The problem with many pies is that they are loaded with excess fat and sugar. The crust usually is the biggest culprit, with up to 220 calories and 15 grams of fat per serving.

But the fillings can be trouble as well. Even fruit fillings, which seem healthy enough on the surface, can be hiding more sugar than you think, and sometimes are laced with butter.

Rather than give up your favorite pie, you could take the road of moderation and just enjoy a tiny slice.

The other strategy for keeping pie in your diet is to make one you can feel good about indulging in. A good place to start is getting rid of the top crust, which immediately lops off a good chunk of fat and calories.

As for the filling, fruit is the right idea, just try to limit the sugar. Consider sweetening fillings with fruit juice concentrates or even purees, such as apple sauce or apple butter.

Cream and custard pies, which often are made with full-fat dairy thickened with egg yolks, usually can be made lighter with low-fat milk using cornstarch or tapioca as a thickener.

This single crust blueberry-peach custard pie uses several of these techniques to produce a more virtuous slice.

Several cups of fresh fruit are baked into a light custard made with only two whole eggs, skim milk and nonfat Greek-style yogurt, which adds body and a hint of tanginess that balances the natural sweetness of the peaches and blueberries.

BLUEBERRY-PEACH CUSTARD PIE

Start to finish: 3 hours (15 minutes active). Servings: 10.

- 1 cup sugar
- 3/4 cup skim milk
- 3/4 cup (6 ounces) nonfat plain Greek-style yogurt
- 2 large eggs
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1/4 teaspoon almond extract
- Pinch of salt
- 1 store-bought, refrigerated pie crust
- 1 cup blueberries
- 1 cup peeled, sliced peaches

Position a rack in lower third of the oven. Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a 9-inch pie pan with cooking spray.

To make the filling, in a medium bowl, combine the sugar, milk, yogurt, eggs, flour, cornstarch, almond extract and salt. Whisk until smooth. Set aside.

On a lightly floured surface, roll a sheet of pie crust into a 12-inch circle. Place the crust in the pie pan and trim so it overhangs evenly by about 1-inch. Fold the edges under and crimp or flute the edge with your fingers or a fork. Place the pie pan on a baking sheet.

Arrange peaches in the bottom of the crust and top with the blueberries in an even layer. Pour the filling on top (the fruit will float but this won't affect the final results). Bake for 25 minutes.

After the pie has baked for 25 minutes and the filling is beginning to set, remove from oven and cover the edges of the crust with foil to help prevent over browning. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and return the pie to oven.

Bake until a knife inserted at the center of the pie comes out clean, another 20 to 25 minutes (the pie may puff up quite a bit but will settle during cooling). Let cool for 1 1/2 hours. Serve warm or refrigerate until cold and serve chilled.

Per serving: 200 calories; 58 calories from fat; 6 g fat (3 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 41 mg cholesterol; 34 g carbohydrate; 4 g protein; 1 g fiber; 163 mg sodium.

There's a trick to making perfect pork chops

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

Boneless pork chops are so lean that overcooking them is all too easy.

I found a solution while watching a re-released DVD version of "Julia Child: The Way to Cook" (Knopf Video Books, 2009). Like most things Julia, her method worked perfectly. The trick is to brown the chops, then let them quick-braise on the stovetop. The chops rest while you make a sauce or garnish from the cooking liquid.

The sauce here is made from leeks that have been slow-cooked in advance. I add them to the braising liquid and let them cook together for a few minutes while the liquid reduces. A little butter enriches the sauce without adding too much fat.

Leeks are notoriously sandy, so soak them in cold water, refreshing the water as needed until the leeks are thoroughly cleaned. Don't skip this step, or you might end up with a gritty finished dish.

LEEK-SMOTHERED PORK CHOPS

4 servings

- 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 pounds leeks, tough green tops and outer layer removed; white and light-green parts cut in half, rinsed and cut crosswise into thin slices (4 cups)
- 3/4 cup water
- 3 to 4 teaspoons olive oil
- 1/4 teaspoon salt, or to taste
- Four 4-ounce boneless pork chops, each about 1 inch thick
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1/2 cup dry white wine or champagne
- 1/2 cup low-sodium or homemade chicken broth
- 2 to 3 tablespoons chilled unsalted butter, cut into 6 or 8 cubes (optional)

Place the leeks in a large bowl and fill the bowl with cold water. Soak the leeks for 10 minutes, then scoop them out of the water. If there is dirt in the bottom of the bowl, drain, rinse and soak the leeks again. Repeat the process until the water stays clean.

Combine the drained leeks, the 3/4 cup water, 1 teaspoon of the oil and 1/8 teaspoon of the salt in a large skillet or braising pan. Place over medium-high heat and bring to a boil. Cover partially and reduce the heat to medium or medium-low so the liquid bubbles at the edges. Cook for 30 minutes, until the leeks are quite soft and tender. Most of the water should have cooked away. If not, remove the lid and increase the heat to medium-high until the liquid evaporates; the leeks should be moist but not wet. Transfer to a shallow dish.

Wipe the skillet or pan clean. Return it to the stove over medium-high heat and add just enough oil (2 to 3 teaspoons) to coat the bottom evenly.

Season the pork chops with the remaining 1/8 teaspoon salt and pepper to taste. When the pan is hot, add the chops and cook for 2 to 3 minutes on one side, until browned. Turn the chops over and cook for 2 to 3 minutes to brown the second side.

Add the wine or champagne and the broth; bring to a boil and cover, then reduce the heat to medium or medium-low so the liquid bubbles at the edges. Cook for 4 minutes, then turn the chops over and cook for 4 to 5 minutes or until their internal temperature registers 160 degrees on an instant-read thermometer.

Transfer the chops to a plate and cover loosely with aluminum foil. Let rest for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, add the leeks to the cooking liquid in the skillet or pan; increase the heat to medium-high. Cook uncovered so the liquid reduces by two-thirds. The leek mixture is quite lean. If desired, whisk in the butter (to taste) to add richness and a smooth finish to the sauce. Taste and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Place the chops on individual plates. Top with the leeks and sauce; serve hot.

Books with fresh ideas for summer refreshment

By Michele Kayal
For The Associated Press

It's easy to grab a beer or pour yourself a glass of wine, but sometimes you want a little something more. And if you're like many people, you probably need a few suggestions for participating in the cocktail revival.

"Old Man Drinks" (Quirk Books, 2010) by Robert Schankenber is your back-to-basics starting point, a quirky little tome with more than 60 recipes for vintage cocktails. Yes, you'll find the gimlet (gin and Rose's Lime Juice), the Harvey Wallbanger (your basic screwdriver with a dash of Galliano), and the sazerac, the absinthe and rye tipple worshipped by retro-cocktail devotees.

But the book's real charm lies in its humor and black-and-white photos of actual old men delivering life lessons, such as the hilariously random, "Tacos make me very angry," from Paul, 65, supposedly a museum curator. The men and their mot-tos are commemorated in a drink called the grumpy old man, a mixture of bourbon, lime juice and ginger ale that promises to be both sweet and sour.

"How to Booze: Exquisite Cocktails and Unsound Advice" (Harper, 2010) by Jordan Kaye and Marshall Altier offers a younger man's narrative on drinking that is one part bar guide, two parts liquor love sonnet. The book serves up classic cocktails and delightfully witty reasons to drink them: an unbearable date, the return of a friend to whom you have nothing to say, the sudden realization that you are an old married guy. With riffs on bad sex and beer goggles, this is very much a guy's book, right down to the detailed discussion of appropriate glassware and how to set things on fire (like orange peels).

For lighter, summer-appropriate imbibing, "101 Blender Drinks" (Wiley, 2010) by Kim Haasarud offers ideas that go beyond sickly sweet strawberry margaritas and tired old pina colodas. Those drinks are in there — in fresh, updated guises — but the book's gourmet appeal comes from frothy, icy cocktails often inspired by the local food movement.

The Brazilian pepper crush — with cachaca, fresh sour mix, jalapeno-orange marmalade and kumquats — promises a sweet-spicy take on the now-passe caipirinha. A yuzu cucumber freeze with citrus vodka, cucumber, sake and yuzu could slide down pretty easily on a hot day. With no table of contents or discernable order to the drinks you'll be forced to read through every one to find those that appeal, which may not be a bad thing.

"Super-Charged Smoothies" (Chronicle Books, 2010) by Mary Corpening Barber and Sara Corpening Whiteford may be the book you need after all that drinking. More than 60 recipes aim to help you pack healthy foods into your daily routine. A smoothie called green energy blends avocado, frozen grapes and jasmine tea with macha, a supplement said to boost energy and metabolic rate.

The super-C — with mango, strawberry, orange juice and banana — might help revive you after a night on the town.

Watermelon coolers will help you serve it up Southern style in Denise Gee's "Porch Parties: Cocktail Recipes and Easy Ideas for Outdoor Entertaining," (Chronicle Books, 2010) a compact guide to antebellum hospitality. Standards like refreshing hibiscus punch and herby mint juleps mingle with smooth-sounding cocktails like the Concord grape martini, a deep-purple drink that could hit the spot when it's hotter than a pig on a spit. Recipes for tiny bites like baby crab cakes and smoked salmon sandwiches make it easy to throw together an elegant outdoor celebration.

HIBISCUS PUNCH

Start to finish: 10 minutes active (4 to 6 hours steeping and cooling). Servings: 12 to 14. From Gee's "Porch Parties."

1 gallon water
2 cups dried hibiscus flower pods
2 cups superfine sugar
Fresh hibiscus pods or flowers, for garnish

In a large Dutch oven, combine the water and dried hibiscus pods. Cover and let stand for at least 2 hours.

Remove cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and let simmer for 6 to 8 minutes.

Strain through a mesh strainer, discarding the solids. Add the sugar and stir until dissolved. Refrigerate until chilled.

Pour into small cocktail glasses filled with ice and garnish.

Add veggies to keep lean burgers flavorful, moist

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Many people mistakenly assume turkey burgers are lean.

But depending on the variety of ground turkey used, you can end up with more than 15 grams of fat in a 4-ounce portion. You can buy ground turkey that is 99 percent lean, but you'll end up with dry, flavorless burgers.

A good compromise is 93 percent lean ground turkey, which has about 8 grams of fat per serving. It's enough to keep the burgers moist and flavorful, but lean enough to include in a healthy diet.

Of course, as with any meat, less fat means less flavor, so you'll want a strategy for compensating for these losses. Think meatloaf.

By mixing in chopped vegetables — such as onions, mushrooms and celery — fresh or dried herbs and a wet component, say ketchup or mustard, you will not only boost the flavor, but also add back much-needed moisture.

Consider adding breadcrumbs or quick cooking oats, too. They not only stretch the meat (which cuts the total fat per serving), but also help retain moisture.

This robustly flavored stout and onion turkey burger uses caramelized sweet onions and a reduction of intense, dark beer combined with zesty mustard and dried thyme to enhance ground turkey. Use

Caramelized onions and a dark beer reduction keep the patty of this turkey burger moist and impart a unique flavor.

this same flavor base to make excellent meatloaf or meatballs.

If you like, you can top the burger with some tangy, extra-sharp cheddar cheese, which makes a perfect foil for the assertiveness of the stout. By using extra-sharp cheddar you can get away with using a full-fat cheese because just a little adds a lot of flavor.

Serve these burgers with a side of sweet potato fries and a few crunchy pickle spears.

STOUT AND ONION TURKEY BURGER

Start to finish: 1 hour (35 minutes active). Servings: 4.

- 1 teaspoon canola oil
- 1 cup chopped Vidalia onion
- 1 cup Guinness or other stout
- 2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
- 2 teaspoons chopped fresh thyme or 1/2 teaspoon dried
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 pound 93 percent lean ground turkey
- 1 cup panko (Japanese-style) breadcrumbs
- 1/3 cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese (optional)
- 4 whole-wheat hamburger buns or other small wheat bread

In a medium saucepan over medium, heat the oil. Add the onions and saute until softened and slightly golden, 7 to 10 minutes. Add the stout and increase heat to high. Boil the mixture until reduced by two-thirds and making syrupy bubbles, about 20 minutes. Transfer the mixture to a medium bowl to cool for 20 minutes.

Heat a gas grill to medium-high or prepare a charcoal fire.

Add the mustard, thyme, salt and pepper to the onion mixture. Add the ground turkey and breadcrumbs. Gently but thoroughly combine. Shape into 4 patties, about 3/4-inch thick.

To oil the grill grates, wet a folded paper towel with oil, hold it with tongs and rub it over the grates.

Grill the burgers until well browned on the underside, 4 to 5 minutes. With a spatula, turn the burgers carefully. Grill 4 to 6 minutes more, or until the burger registers 165 degrees at the center. Top with cheese, if using, during the last minute of grilling. Meanwhile, toast the buns at the edge of the grill. Serve the burgers on the toasted buns.

Grady Glen Evans

HEYBURN — Grady Glen Evans, age 87, passed away Thursday, July 1, 2010, at 6 p.m. at his daughter's home after a three-year battle with prostate cancer. On Thanksgiving Day 2008, he accepted Christ as his Lord and Savior and desired to become a better person.

Grady was born in Eckert, Texas, on April 17, 1923, to Louis Levi Evans and Mary Elizabeth Moehle-Evans. He had five brothers and four sisters and attended school in Eckert. Grady joined the U.S. Navy in 1942, where he served his country as an aviation mechanic while serving in the Solomon Islands at Guadalcanal, Espiritu Santos and New Caledonia. After returning to the states, he was stationed at Corpus Christi Naval Air Station until 1945. He later attended agriculture school in Llano, Texas, on his GI Bill.

He married the love of his life, "Sherry" Marjorie Arlene Bishop, on Oct. 12, 1944, in Kingman, Ariz. They had five children whom they raised on the family farm in Heyburn. Previous employment included Rusty Douglas Heating Oil Company and Barlow's Bean Warehouse, both in Hazelton; Morgan Lindsey Bean Warehouse in Eden and FMC Chemical Plant in Pocatello. He also owned a mechanic shop in Hazelton in 1946.

Grady enjoyed playing baseball, rock hunting, riding motorcycles, golfing, bowling, hunting and fishing. His hobbies were experimenting with inventions such as a magnet-propelled engine, a hoe that would require less physical exertion and a tool that would shut off an irrigation sprinkler valve and other gadgets.

He was known for many upstanding characteristics. He served his country with pride and oftentimes became emotional while reflecting on wartime memories and events. He was generous and a true gentleman. He was a man of his word, a hard worker taking pride in everything he did. Like a teacher, many appreciated him sharing his wealth of knowledge and skills. His life's mission was declaring war on obnoxious-noxious weeds! Sometimes even in his sleep!

Survivors include his wife, Sherry Evans; his children, Glenna McCoy of Twin Falls, Ken Evans of Heyburn, and Sue Ernst (Earl) of Elizabeth, Colo.; a daughter-in-law, Joy Evans of Arlington, Wash.; nine grandchildren; 19 great-grandchildren; and two brothers, Lester Evans (Fran) of San Antonio, Texas, and M T Evans (Barbara) of Heyburn. It was his desire to do all that he could to give back to those fighting the disease. The family would like to extend their heartfelt gratitude to the physicians and staff at the Huntsman Cancer Institute, Hospice Visions and to Dr. Kerry Saurey and nurse, Irene, at the Rupert Family Medical Center for their compassionate care in giving him a better quality of life.

In memory of Grady Evans, the family would like to suggest in lieu of flowers that donations be made to the St. Jude Children's Hospital or the Disabled Veterans Administration.

On Aug. 17, 1965, he married the love of his life, Griselda Burgos. Together they raised three children and their granddaughter, Jessica. Fernando spent most of his working life as a skilled cabinet maker, carpenter and craftsman. The family later settled in Jerome, Idaho. Fernando loved fishing, playing dominoes, horses, oldies music and the Los Angeles Dodgers. He loved working in his "dream shop" and jumped at the chance to take on any project. Mostly, he loved his family and worked very hard to support them. He will be remembered as a hard-working, loving husband, father and grandfather. Fernando was a devoted, lifelong member of the Catholic Church and donated many hours of service and his skills to St. Jerome's Catholic Church.

Dale Hopwood

BUHL — Dale Hopwood, 94, of Buhl, passed into the loving hands of his Lord and Savior on Monday, July 5, 2010, in the presence of his family.

Dale was born in Miller, Neb., on Feb. 6, 1916, to Orville and Elva Anderson Hopwood. He was the oldest of three boys and one girl. Dale went to school through the eighth grade. He started high school but soon quit, as with most boys of that era he had to help with harvest and was not able to continue with his schooling.

Dale met the love of his life, Alice Fortik, at a school dance. They married on Aug. 8, 1934, in Holdrege, Neb. Dale and Alice moved from Nebraska to Colorado, eventually settling in Buhl, Idaho, on Aug. 1, 1941. Dale enjoyed farming in the Lucerne area for approximately 15 years. He then moved into town in 1957 to pursue a career in trucking, including hauling hay and potatoes. In 1968, Dale began working for Rangen's. After his retirement, he continued some seasonal work in farming for Bob Cornie. For 20 years, Dale and Alice were "Snow Birds," spending their winters in Arizona and summers in Idaho. They enjoyed traveling the nation with friends and family, including a seven-week driving trip to Alaska.

In 2009, Dale and Alice had the distinction of celebrating their 75th wedding anniversary. Dale and Alice experienced the joy of having a large family with seven sons and two daughters, Clarence, Allen, Cecil, Marvin, Norma, Jack, Gene, Carol and Jerry. They never recognized a person as a stranger; everyone became an extended member of the family.

Dale was preceded in death by his parents, Orville and Elva; his siblings, Glen, Merle and Irma; his son Cecil; and grandchildren, Jeffery and Sharon. Dale is survived by his wife, Alice; children, Clarence (Bonnie) Hopwood, Allen (Dorin) Hopwood, Joyce (Cecil) Hopwood, Marvin (Maggie) Hopwood, Norma Chandler, Jack (Carolyn) Hopwood, Gene (Luanne) Hopwood, Carol (Robert) Turner and Jerry (Linda) Hopwood; as well as numerous grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, July 9, at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl. A visitation with the family will take place from 4 to 7 p.m. Thursday, July 8, at the funeral chapel. A potluck dinner will be held following the service at 4 p.m. at the West End Senior Center. All friends and family are welcome. Please bring a covered dish.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that you would make a donation in Dale's name to the charity of your choice.

Queen addresses UN, places wreath at ground zero

NEW YORK (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II challenged the United Nations to fight global dangers by "waging" peace, then entered ground zero on Tuesday for the first time to honor the victims of the Sept. 11 attacks.

Back in New York after more than three decades, the 84-year-old British monarch turned her eyes toward the future of the World Trade Center: new skyscrapers rising over what was once smoldering debris that had buried loved ones forever. "We are not here to reminisce," she told the world body earlier Tuesday. "In tomorrow's world, we must all work together as hard as ever if we are truly to be United Nations."

Not even a record high temperature of 102 degrees, accompanied by a heat advisory, kept the monarch from New York's hallowed ground. She arrived at the 16-acre site in lower Manhattan late Tuesday afternoon with her husband, Prince Philip. They walked slowly across a wooden walkway that reaches deep over the construction site. Cranes hovering overhead stopped and workers took a break during the queen's visit.

In silence, Elizabeth laid a wreath of flowers on an iron pedestal near the footprint of the trade center's south tower. Bowing her head, she gently brushed her gloved hand against the locally grown red peonies, roses, lilies, black-eyed Susans and other summer blossoms.

Then the queen met dozens of family members and first responders who had lost loved ones as the twin towers collapsed on Sept. 11, 2001.

"The queen just was asking me about that day, and how awful it must've been," said Debbie Palmer, whose husband, battalion Fire Chief Orio Palmer, was killed.

Even chocolate has a place in a healthy diet

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Death by chocolate? Hardly. We've all heard of the studies suggesting a few ounces of dark chocolate a week can be good for your health. And while chocolate does contain fat (from cocoa butter), a third of it is the same kind of healthier monounsaturated fat found in olive oil.

All this is good news, especially when you're presented with a plate of rich, chocolaty brownies. But beware — all brownies are not created equally in the eyes of the nutritionist.

These dark chocolate brownies with sour cherries are rich tasting, moist and chewy, and they sport an admirable dietary profile.

To start with, the batter is made with dark or bittersweet chocolate chips combined with unsweetened cocoa powder, which adds intense flavor without additional fat.

Plus, a batch of these brownies contains only one egg and a tablespoon and a half of canola oil rather than the stick of butter some recipes call for.

As with any sweet, a brownie is dense in calories, but these pack such a powerful chocolate punch you'll be satisfied with a relatively small portion.

If you like, serve these brownies topped with a scoop of low-fat vanilla ice cream or a dollop of thick and creamy nonfat Greek-style yogurt.

DARK CHOCOLATE BROWNIES WITH SOUR CHERRIES

Start to finish: 1 hour (30 minutes active), plus 2 hours cooling time. Servings: 12.

- 3/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 2/3 cup powdered sugar
- 3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder
- 1 1/2 tablespoons canola oil
- 6 ounces semisweet or bittersweet mini chocolate chips, divided
- 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- 2 tablespoons light corn syrup, blended with 3 tablespoons lukewarm water
- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
- Pinch of salt
- 1 large egg
- 3/4 cup dried sour cherries

Position a rack in center of oven. Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Coat an 8-inch-square baking pan with cooking spray.

In a small bowl, sift together the flour, powdered sugar and cocoa powder.

In a heavy, medium saucepan, combine the oil and half of the chocolate chips. Place the pan over the lowest heat and cook, stirring constantly, until just melted and smooth (be careful that the chocolate does not overheat).

Remove the pan from the heat and stir in the granulated sugar, corn syrup mixture, almond extract and salt until the sugar dissolves. Stir in the egg until smoothly incorporated. Gently stir in the dry ingredients. Fold in the cherries and the remaining 3 ounces chocolate chips just until well blended. Transfer the batter to the prepared pan, spreading evenly.

Bake until almost firm at the center and a toothpick comes out with some moist batter clinging to it, 25 to 30 minutes. Let cool completely on a wire rack, about 2 hours.

Using a sharp knife, cut into 12 brownies, wiping the blade with a damp cloth between cuts.

Buhl pitcher Marcus Lively throws against Kimberly in American Legion Baseball action Tuesday in Kimberly.

Lookin' Lively

Pitching, HRs lead Buhl to sweep of Kimberly

By Michael Cole
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Shutout pitching and big hitters propelled Buhl past Kimberly 15-0 in the first game of a Class AA American Legion Baseball doubleheader on Tuesday.

Buhl pitcher Marcus Lively issued 15 strikeouts and gave up only two hits as he kept Kimberly's hitters guessing for six innings. The Astros only extra-base hit came from James Higginbotham in the fourth inning, but Lively ruined any ideas of a rally as he struck out the next seven hitters.

"It felt good out there," said

Lively. "I just hit my target and pitched what the coach called. Kimberly is a good baseball team and when they get a good hit you can't let that shake you up. You have to throw strikes and not let a hit get into your head."

"Lively has come on pretty strong," said Buhl assistant coach Ryan Bowman. "He throws a lot of strikes and hits his spots and that makes life a lot easier."

The Tribe matched Lively's strikeout total in runs as they capitalized on nearly every base-running opportunity.

"We did a good job at hitting and pushing the base runner," said Bowman. "We got the bunts down and advanced the runner."

But small ball was not the only way the Tribe produced as veteran hitters J.D. Leckenby and Isaac McCreery were red hot at the plate. McCreery went 3-for-3 with two doubles and a triple and Leckenby added a triple and a massive two-run shot in the win.

"I have been practicing a lot," said McCreery. "I just kept my eye on the ball. Coach said to come out hitting and to get everyone hitting. Hitting like this makes me want to go out and hit more in the second game. I want to give it a 110 percent."

Leckenby got the start in Game 2 and looked to carry Game 1's momentum with him.

He was able to do his job on the mound and at the plate as he hit two home runs and helped his team to a 17-5 victory.

"We have to go out and have fun and hit the ball," said Leckenby. "I just have to throw strikes and do my job."

Leckenby and reliever Dylan Brooks combined to strike out 12 batters in Game 2.

"You know that you are not going to score many runs and with their offense they are a tough team to play," said Kimberly coach Tom Myers said. "It is good for our team to play great teams and show

Bumpy third Tour stage for Armstrong

By Jamey Keaten
Associated Press writer

ARENBERG, France — Just four days into the Tour de France, Lance Armstrong is off to a rough start.

On the cobblestones in Tuesday's third stage, on which he had been expected to excel, the seven-time champ instead popped a tire, lost time changing it, and fell back of his main rivals.

The 132-mile ride from Wanze, Belgium, to Arenberg Porte du Hainaut in France was the most dreaded stage of Week One — with seven sections of bone-jarring cobblestones that threatened injury, bike damage or lost time for title contenders.

Thor Hushovd of Norway, leading a six-man group, won the stage in a final sprint. Fabian Cancellara, the Swiss rider who won the prologue, was right behind — and recovered the leader's yellow jersey he had ceded Monday to Frenchman Sylvain Chavanel.

For Armstrong, the bigger threats are riders such as defending champion Alberto Contador of Spain, 2009 runner-up Andy Schleck of Luxembourg and two-time runner-up Cadel Evans of Australia.

They all leapfrogged the 38-year-old Texan. They will be tough to overcome when the next big challenges await in the Alps in Week Two and a punishing four-day run in the Pyrenees in Week Three.

"Our chances took a knock today," Armstrong said. "I'm not going home, we'll stay in the race and keep trying."

Astana team leader Contador avoided disaster, and rode the last 18 miles with the brake jammed against his rear wheel.

"I knew that if I changed the bike would be much worse and I preferred to continue with the wheel braking," he said. "I couldn't stand up, but hey, we saved the day!"

LeBron to announce decision Thursday

By Tom Withers
Associated Press writer

AKRON, Ohio — LeBron James' dramatic and historic free agency will have a fitting conclusion — on TV.

ESPN reported Tuesday night that James will announce his future NBA plans during a one-hour special on its network at 7 p.m. MDT Thursday. ESPN's Chris Broussard said James' "representatives" contacted the network and asked for the unusual arrangement.

It is not known which team James will join or where the announcement will take place.

The two-time MVP and marquee name in a stellar free-agent class also featuring Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh, recently met with six teams — the Cleveland Cavaliers, Miami Heat, Chicago Bulls, Los Angeles Clippers, New York Knicks and New Jersey Nets.

Both James' publicist Keith Estabrook and ESPN spokesman Josh Krulewitz declined comment to The Associated Press.

Citing anonymous "independent sources," Broussard reported James' group requested they be allowed to sell sponsorship for the special with proceeds going to the Boys and Girls Clubs of America.

James' agent Leon Rose and business manager Maverick Carter did not return phone calls and e-mails from the AP seeking comment.

Earlier, all his fans got was a tweet out of James.

With the Summer of LeBron trudging along, James opened a Twitter account and posted his first message on the social networking site. Although he provided no information about his future plans, he offered something as the NBA awaits the decision on where he'll play next.

Dutch treat: Netherlands into WCup final

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Arjen Robben emerged from the bottom of an Oranje mosh pit, mud on his brow and a smile on his face.

For good measure, he threw kisses at his teammates and fans. His goal gave the Netherlands a 3-2 victory over Uruguay and a spot in the World Cup final.

Now that's a Dutch treat! The big prize — that elusive first title — is still one game away. But this was such a moment to savor that most of the squad made a curtain call nearly an hour after the biggest Netherlands victory in decades, leading about 1,000 orange-clad fans in cheers that figure to last until Sunday.

That's when the Dutch play either Spain or Germany for the championship of the world.

"If you win the final, you make yourself immortal, at least in our country," Robben said. "We will do everything we can to take the Cup back?"

Long wasteful with its soccer talent, the Netherlands sure has found the right touch in this tournament.

Stars Wesley Sneijder and Robben scored three minutes apart in the second half as the Netherlands advanced to its first title match since losing in 1978 to Argentina.

"We are so close," Sneijder said. "There is nothing bigger than the World Cup?"

And nothing better than sharing it with their countrymen.

So out came Robben, Sneijder and their teammates long after the final whistle, to join the celebration in an empty stadium — empty except for that rollicking section of fans still singing Dutch songs, waving flags, and bowing in unison. The players joined in from the field, several on the shoulders of others, some

Winners of all six games in South Africa, 10 in a row overall and in the midst of a 25-match unbeaten streak, the Dutch have the look of champions — with an Oranje hue, of course.

"This is unforgettable," said Sneijder, now tied with Spain's David Villa for top scorer at the tournament (five goals). "It was a tough fight and toward the end we complicated matters."

"Sunday we play in the World Cup final. I have to get used to that!"

Besides the loss to Argentina in '78, the Netherlands fell in its only other appearance in the final, to West Germany in 1974.

Both of those title-game defeats came during the golden period of Dutch soccer, and in the opposition's

Braves outlast Phillies in 11th

PHILADELPHIA — Matt Diaz hit a tiebreaking double in the 11th inning, Eric Hinske added a two-run homer and NL East-leading Atlanta beat Philadelphia 6-3 on Tuesday night.

Yunel Escobar singled off David Herndon (0-2) to start the 11th and scored when Diaz ripped a liner to the gap in right-center. Hinske connected two outs later.

Jesse Chavez (1-1) pitched a scoreless 10th to earn the win. Billy Wagner finished for his 18th save.

Raul Ibanez hit a two-run homer for Philadelphia, which managed just three hits.

ROCKIES 12, CARDINALS 9

DENVER — Seth Smith's three-run homer off Ryan Franklin with two outs in the ninth capped a nine-run rally as Colorado stunned St. Louis Cardinals.

It was the largest ninth-inning comeback in franchise history.

The Rockies trailed 9-2 after Matt Holliday's three-run shot in the sixth and got one run in the seventh on Chris Iannetta's fielder's choice groundball.

NATIONALS 6, PADRES 5

WASHINGTON — Ryan Zimmerman's second homer of the game, a shot to center field off Luke Gregerson leading off the bottom of the ninth, gave Washington the win.

Zimmerman hit an 0-1 fastball from Gregerson (2-4) over the wall in center. He had earlier homered in the fourth for the Padres, who had a three-game winning streak snapped.

The left-hander, in his fourth major league start and third of the season, gave up three singles, struck out five and walked three. Bumgarner (1-2) picked up his first career RBI as part of a five-run Giants sixth.

ASTROS 6, PIRATES 2

HOUSTON — Wandy Rodriguez struck out 10 and allowed four singles in seven innings and Houston snapped a three-game losing streak.

Carlos Lee and Lance Berkman homered and Michael Bourn scored two runs for the Astros, who have won all four meetings with the Pirates this season.

AMERICAN LEAGUE RAYS 3, RED SOX 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jeff Niemann pitched six strong innings and Tampa Bay's bullpen shut down Boston for the second day in a row in a 3-2 victory Tuesday night.

Niemann (7-2) limited the Red Sox to four hits and an unearned run. He walked three and struck out five to win for the first time since a complete game shutout against Toronto on June 8.

TWINS 7, BLUE JAYS 6

TORONTO — Denard Span drove in the go-ahead run with a single in the eighth inning for Minnesota.

Joe Mauer, Justin Morneau and Jason Kubel homered for the Twins. Delmon Young led off the eighth with a single off Jason Frasor (3-2). After a sacrifice, Scott Downs came on to face Span and allowed his RBI single to center.

TIGERS 7, ORIOLES 5, 11 INNINGS

DETROIT — Johnny Damon followed his 2,500th hit with a game-winning homer in the 11th inning for Detroit.

Austin Jackson led off the inning with a single off David Hernandez (3-7) and Damon followed with a long homer to right. Damon singled in the third inning for his 2,500th hit, and received an ovation from the crowd of 22,532.

RANGERS 12, INDIANS 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Josh Hamilton homered to stretch his home hitting streak to 26 games, and C.J. Wilson pitched six strong innings for Texas.

Vladimir Guerrero added a two-run homer in a five-run sixth inning, Nelson Cruz and David Murphy also went deep, and Joaquin Arias had a career-high four RBIs for Texas.

The AL West-leading Rangers won after losing five of seven.

Wranglers, Hawks halted by darkness

Times-News

Locked in a 7-7 tie after nine innings, the Wood River Wranglers and Twin Falls Hawks had Game 2 of their doubleheader suspended by darkness Tuesday night.

Wood River coach Matt Nelson said it's unknown if or when the game will be completed.

The Wranglers took the opener 15-5 on the run-rule. Wood River's entire lineup scored in the fourth inning to break the game open. Jimmy Hague had three doubles in the game, while winning pitcher Tag Lyons batted 2-for-3 and scored twice.

Kassidy Gaines took the loss for the Hawks in the opener after pitching three innings. He started the second game and went eight more innings, throwing 181 pitches on the night, according to Nelson.

"Gutsy effort by both sides," Nelson said. "That second game was a lot of fun to watch and a lot of fun to participate in."

COWBOYS SPLIT WITH BLACKFOOT

The Twin Falls Class A American Legion Baseball team split its doubleheader with visiting Blackfoot on Tuesday with the Cowboys taking opener 4-2 and losing the nightcap 7-2.

Cowboys pitcher Michael Garcia was huge on the mound, allowing just three hits and giving up two runs to a tough Blackfoot team.

"Michael did a great job to keep them off balance," said Twin Falls coach Mark Schaal. "They have a lot of good hitters and he got them to hit a lot of fly balls and we were able to play good defense."

Tucker Donnelley blasted a triple to give the Cowboys the go-ahead run.

It was a different story in Game 2 as Blackfoot's bats punished the Cowboys and Blackfoot's starting pitcher Alex Jones kept the Cowboys at bay.

"We did not hit the ball well in that game," said Schall. "That Jones kid really pitched well. They are a tough team. I think that there record is 22-4 so that puts them close to the top of our conference. Getting a split with them was a big plus for us and our kids played really hard."

Twin Falls (18-15) travels to Marsh Falls today for a doubleheader.

Jake Mills pitched a two-hitter with eight strikeouts and two walks in Burley's 3-2 win in Game 1. Jackson Kunz hit 2-for-4 and scored two runs, while Kody Moon tripled and Joe Ferrin had an RBI.

"We had a couple days off, and coming back I felt really good on the mound," Mills said.

In Game 2, Burley gave up 11 hits and lost 14-4 in five innings.

Rockies ace Jimenez hits some speed bumps

DENVER (AP) — Ubaldo has taken a U-turn.

Colorado ace Ubaldo Jimenez is off to the best start in this "Year of the Pitcher," with a 14-1 record and a 2.27 ERA. He's the odds-on favorite to get the ball for the NL in the All-Star game, and with one more start this week, he could become the first pitcher in a decade to win 15 games by the break.

His nasty repertoire includes a ridiculous six different pitches — and variations of each — that he regularly throws for strikes on any given count, and some hitters swear they've never seen a fastball dip and dive like his is doing this year. He even threw a no-hitter against Atlanta in April.

But Jimenez has allowed 17 runs and 19 hits over his last 17 2-3 innings for an astonishing 8.66 ERA over his last three starts.

"We like to talk about this under the assumption that this guy is just a machine," Rockies manager Jim Tracy said. "But he's not. He's human."

Before this bad stretch, Jimenez's ERA was a minuscule 1.16, in striking distance of Bob Gibson's modern day record of 1.12 set in 1968, the original "Year of the Pitcher," when Denny McClain won 31 times and hitters were so overmatched that the mound was lowered the next year from 15 inches to 10 to even the playing field.

Jimenez is having such a great year that it's not preposterous to talk about 31 wins even though he pitches every five days, not every four like McClain did.

To have any shot, though, Jimenez can't waste any time rediscovering his Colorado Rockies starting pitcher Ubaldo Jimenez, pictured July 3 against the San Francisco, has struggled in his last three starts after a brilliant stretch to open the season.

magic. He'll face St. Louis' Chris Carpenter (9-2, 3.16 ERA) on Thursday at Coors Field in a marquee matchup of All-Stars.

All it takes is one bad inning to ruin things, and Jimenez has had one in each of his last three starts.

He was sabotaged by four-run sixth innings against Boston and San Diego — the Padres were without a hit through five — and the San Francisco Giants trounced him for seven runs in the third inning of his last start, five of them after an umpire's questionable safe call on what would have been an inning-ending double play.

Jimenez usually brushes off bad breaks, but he admittedly starting over-throwing after the close call went against him and he served up his first grand slam in 100 major league starts. Travis Ishikawa, making his first start since May 19, drove an off-speed offering into the right-field seats for his first career slam.

This rough stretch has led to a series of questions about Jimenez's durability and mindset, and measured responses from the 26-year-old right-hander and the Rockies.

No, his arm is fine. The spotlight doesn't bother him, and he hasn't hit a wall.

"I saw a bad third inning and then I saw five others where they didn't come close to running a run across the plate," Tracy said after Jimenez's last start, on Saturday. "He had a lapse. It happens. I think he's still 14-1 and his ERA is in the low 2s. He's still a pretty good pitcher in my mind."

Despite giving up four or more earned runs in each of his last three games, Jimenez has a win and two no-decisions in that span thanks to an offense that finally has his back after providing little support while he was lights-out for nearly three months. His only loss was against the Dodgers, when he allowed one run and two hits in seven innings.

Jimenez attributed the first two starts of his slump to a mechanical flaw. He was occasionally opening up his left shoulder a split-second too soon on his delivery, which ruined his fastball command.

LeBron

King James is in the Building," said the tweet from KingJames, which by 11 p.m. EDT had more than 187,000 followers.

After arriving for the second day of his skills academy on Tuesday four hours later than expected, James spent six hours at Rhodes Arena in meetings and playing ball with several Cavaliers teammates against high school campers before heading home. He didn't speak to reporters before pulling away in his customized Dodge pickup.

"That's the question," Cavs teammate Daniel Gibson said when asked what he thinks James will do. "I don't know. I'm here with the hanging-out, having-fun LeBron. I'm not out here with the business LeBron."

Estabrook confirmed the superstar joined Twitter, a place where Wade and Bosh often post details about their public lives off the floor.

In the past, James poked fun at athletes for giving details of their daily routines on Twitter and Facebook, but at the prodding of New Orleans guard Chris Paul, his U.S. Olympic teammate and closest friend in the league, the two-time MVP decided it was time to join the fun.

Now, if he would only announce which team he's going to.

James arrived at his Nike-sponsored skills academy at the University of Akron at 3:15 p.m. for the second day of the camp hosting many of the nation's top high school and college stars.

James did not speak to reporters before walking into Rhodes Arena with former Cavs teammate Damon Jones. James wasn't dressed for a workout, and was not visible when organizers cleared the media from the school's arena at roughly 4 p.m.

Tour

Schleck was fifth in the stage, clocking the same time as Hushovd: 4 hours, 49 minutes, 38 seconds. In the splintered pack, Contador was 13th, 1 minute, 13 seconds back. Armstrong placed 32nd — 2:08 behind.

Overall, Cancellara leads Geraint Thomas by 23 seconds, and two-time Tour runner-up Evans is third: 39 seconds back. Contador is ninth, 1:40 back, Schleck is sixth, 1:19 back and Armstrong sank to 18th, 2:30 back, after entering the day in fifth overall.

The cobblestones stage, the first at the Tour since 2004, followed two straight stages marred by crashes on slick roads that caught up Contador, Schleck and Armstrong.

Organizers took a gamble by running the riders over the treacherous, roughhewn stones, hoping to inject drama to the race. The move appeared to be vindicated.

"I'm not sure I'm a fan of the cobblestones in the Tour de France," said Bjarne Riis, the Saxo Bank team manager, "but it was a spectacular race.

Armstrong, who has dealt with cancer, will have to prove that at 38, he's still got some fight in him if he wants to win.

Armstrong began the stage ahead of his general classification rivals. Now, he trails them: Contador is 50 seconds ahead, Evans is nearly 2 minutes ahead. Britain's Bradley Wiggins has 41 seconds on Armstrong.

They're likely to pounce if Armstrong tries to get in the front now. It's a far cry from his heyday, when he methodically worked to ensure his rivals were eating his dust from the outset.

"Bad luck," Armstrong said of his mishap.

Cup

No such worries this time, and no country outside of Africa has had as much fan support as the Netherlands.

Inside Green Point Stadium it looked like a Florida orange grove. Outside, a Netherlands fan in a blue and white bodysuit stood on stilts and played a vuvuzela — badly. It was about the only thing that didn't measure up for the Dutch.

And a tournament that looked like a South American fiesta early on will end in a European showdown for the second straight World Cup. Sneijder and Robben made sure of that.

Sneijder's goal came somewhat unexpectedly because Uruguay had shut down the Dutch offense for much of the second half. His left-footed shot from just inside the penalty area barely ticked the leg of defender Maximiliano Pereira and, with Robin van Persie almost deflecting it again, the ball skidded past goalkeeper Fernando Muslera.

Then Robben sent a cross from Dirk Kuyt past a flat-footed Muslera with a brilliant header. His teammates piled on in an Oranje Crush celebration, and Robben came up from it muddled and merry — and with the knowledge that, ahead 3-1, the Netherlands was likely headed to the championship match.

Uruguay was without dangerous striker Luis Suarez, whose handball on the goal line in the final seconds of extra time against Ghana saved his team in the quarterfinals. He drew a red card for that, and spent his suspension on the bench watching his undermanned teammates come up just short.

Pereira made the Netherlands sweat with a goal in injury time, and Stekelenburg's late save preserved the biggest Dutch win in decades. The Dutch have now won 10 straight and are unbeaten in their last 25 games.

Robben was replaced late in the match, and at the final whistle he fell flat to the turf as he ran back onto the pitch.

World champ Semenya cleared to return to track

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Caster Semenya was cleared to immediately return to track by the sport's governing body Tuesday, ending an 11-month layoff while she underwent gender tests after becoming the 800-meter world champion.

Semenya is allowed to keep running as a woman, although it is unclear if she has had any medical procedure or treatment during her time away.

The International Association of Athletics Federations said medical details of the 19-year-old South African's case would remain confidential and it will have no further comment on the matter.

The IAAF added in its statement from its Monaco headquarters that it accepts the conclusion of a panel of medical experts that Semenya can compete with "immediate effect."

She could return to competition at the world junior championships in Moncton,

New Brunswick, starting July 19.

"I am thrilled to enter the global athletics arena once again and look forward to competing with all the disputes behind me," Semenya said in a statement.

Athletics South Africa said Semenya would be considered for the country's team at the junior championships. The ASA says she must pass a fitness test in Pretoria on Wednesday.

"Of course, we are happy," ASA official Richard Stander said. "When an athlete cannot compete it is frustrating for them and frustrating for us as a federation."

Stander said the African championships in Kenya in late July and the Commonwealth Games in India in October were more realistic targets for Semenya.

Semenya's lawyers said negotiations with the IAAF lasted 10 months and had been held in Monaco, Istanbul and Parish.

"But due to the nature of the matter the parties resolved to keep the negotiations confidential," said Greg Nott, managing partner of Dewey and LeBoeuf's Johannesburg office.

Semenya underwent gender tests following her dominant run as an 18-year-old at the Berlin world championships last August.

"We are delighted that Caster is finally being permitted to compete with other women, as is her legal and natural right," lawyer Jeffrey Kessler said. "Hopefully, this resolution will set a precedent so that no female athlete in the future will have to experience the long delays and public scrutiny which Caster has been forced to endure."

Earlier, Semenya's father said his daughter had told him before the announcement that she was going to be cleared.

"She told me she doesn't have any problems and she is happy," Jacob Semenya said.

The announcement ended a saga in which the teenager burst onto the world scene in Berlin where she captured a gold medal in her first major event. Her dramatic improvement in times and muscular build led the IAAF to order gender verification tests.

Semenya was welcomed as a national hero in South Africa following her stunning victory, but reports of the gender tests and stories in the Australian media saying she had both male and female sex organs caused outrage in her home country and led some public officials to rally behind her.

Rookie forward Gordon Hayward looks to change opinions in Utah

By Antonio Gonzalez
Associated Press writer

ORLANDO, Fla. — Even here, in a gym full of young NBA hopefuls, Gordon Hayward looks a little out of place at first glance.

There aren't many baby-faced, thin-looking, former high school tennis stars drafted with the ninth overall pick. Then again, there aren't many rookies who can shoot the way he can.

The debate over Hayward's potential has put perhaps more pressure on him than any rookie this year.

The 20-year-old who led tiny Butler to the NCAA championship game last season was booed by Utah Jazz fans after the team selected him on draft night. He's been called too weak and not physically ready for the NBA, and the Bulldogs' surprising run in the tournament has only created more attention.

Not all of it is positive, either.

"I'm just going out there and playing my game," Hayward said. "And maybe I'll change some opinions."

That could take time.

He showed some promise Tuesday in the final minute of an Orlando summer league game where he didn't always play like a lottery pick. But he delivered when it counted most.

Hayward's 3-pointer from the wing with 30.2 seconds remaining gave the Jazz a 74-70 lead over the Orlando Magic's summer squad. Then he grabbed a defensive rebound, was fouled and headed to the free throw line.

PARAKHOUSKI GETS START IN SUMMER LEAGUE

Former College of Southern Idaho center Art Parakhouski got his first NBA summer league start Tuesday in the Boston Celtics' 86-69 loss to the Philadelphia 76ers in Orlando.

Parakhouski had five points, two rebounds and a block in nearly 24 minutes, but committed four fouls.

Parakhouski and the Celtics face the Charlotte Bobcats at 11 a.m. MDT today. The undrafted 6-foot-11 center from Belarus played two seasons at CSI from 2006 to 2008 before completing his college career at Radford (Va.) University.

from a playoff team to one that could contend in the Western Conference.

"For me, it was kind of an after thought," Hayward said of the boos. "I was excited about getting drafted. The organization told me they were excited about drafting me. But I think it's a little bit of motivation."

His coaches don't believe that pressure has effected Hayward.

Hayward has, however, been hesitant to shine through two summer league games. He has wandered around the perimeter aimlessly at times, struggled to create his own shot and become a defensive liability.

But when he has found the ball, he hasn't missed much.

"He's trying to not make a mistake instead of just going out there and playing," said Jazz assistant and summer league head coach Tyrone Corbin. "That's typical for a young guy. But with his talent level, I think he'll pick it up."

The Jazz don't consider Hayward a leftover by any means.

He's a sharpshooter, has a knack for passing and has been trying to add muscle to his frail frame. His biggest challenge will likely be adjusting to the physical play and speed of the NBA.

And, of course, keeping expectations tame.

"People have criticized my strength my whole life, in high school, college and now," Hayward said. "But what I give up in some regards, I make up with other things, like quickness, anticipation, a first step."

"I like my chances."

No charges filed in Vick party shooting

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — Police said Tuesday they know who was responsible for shooting another man following Michael Vick's birthday celebration, but the shooter will not be charged "at this time" because the victim has not cooperated with investigators.

Vick was not the shooter and there are no suspects other than the shooter, police spokesman Adam Bernstein said. The decision not to press charges was made by the prosecutor's office, but could be reversed if the victim decides to cooperate.

In a statement released Tuesday, police said witnesses have also been reluctant to help in the investigation of the shooting outside a nightclub just after 2 a.m. on June 25. The statement said because the shooter will not be charged, his identity will not be released.

The shooting took place about a block away from the club where a 30th birthday party for the Philadelphia Eagles' quarterback was ending.

for alleged possession of codeine syrup resulted from a two-month undercover investigation that could result in more arrests.

Mobile County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Lori Myles said Tuesday that the investigation wasn't targeting the former Oakland Raiders quarterback but that his name and home address had come up several times.

The 2007 No. 1 draft choice was arrested Monday at his home and charged with possession of a controlled substance. Myles says forensic tests to determine the amount of codeine syrup involved sometimes take 5-7 days.

Russell has a bond hearing Wednesday and his trial is scheduled for July 20.

Russell did not return a call from The Associated Press Tuesday. A business partner of Russell's agent said they had no comment.

BREES' NEW MEMOIR NOT JUST ABOUT WINNING

NEW ORLEANS — Super Bowl MVP Drew Brees asks himself often is there anything he could have done to prevent his mother from committing suicide.

The Saints quarterback initially viewed his mother's death as very personal, but he opens up about that tragedy as well as other failures and misfortunes in his new book: "Coming Back Stronger"

In the book, Brees writes, "I ask myself the question often: Could I have saved her?"

Brees led New Orleans to glory despite being in mourning — and guilt-ridden — over the death of his mother, Mina, in August 2009. Although he didn't discuss her death in detail during the season, he devoted a chapter in the book to his relationship with her. He reflects on his alienation from his mother in adulthood, wondering whether he could have handled it differently.

Brees said Tuesday that he realized during many late nights sitting at his laptop computer in his kitchen that writing about his mother's death could serve as therapy for him and advice for others.

RUSSELL'S ARREST STEMS FROM 2-MONTH INVESTIGATION

MOBILE, Ala. — The arrest of JaMarcus Russell

Woods turns icy as media questions turn personal in Ireland

ADARE, Ireland (AP) — After another warm welcome from the Irish public, Tiger Woods turned curt and dismissive at a news conference Tuesday when asked about his state of mind since the sex scandal that's wrecked his marriage.

Woods was questioned following his 3-under-par 69 in his final round of the charity J.P. McManus Invitational Pro-Am, his first foreign appearance since the turmoil.

When asked whether his liaisons with other women had been "worth it" since it cost him his marriage and endorsements, Woods replied, "I think you're looking too deep into this." He torpedoed the follow-up question with an icily firm "Thank you."

Woods is returning immediately to his Florida home rather than heading to Scotland to prepare for next week's British Open at St. Andrews, one of his favorite courses and where he won Opens in 2000 and 2005. Once the subject was broached, the previously easy-speaking Woods flipped a switch into staccato half-sentences.

How will you prepare? "Practicing."

Where? "Home."

Why not try and play some links golf in Scotland beforehand? "I need to get home." Silence.

Why? "See my kids." Silence.

Throughout the 15-minute news conference Woods had to parry various attempts at a comment on how his marital implosion was affecting his game.

"There are times in one's life when things get put in perspective, one being when my father passed, and obviously what I've been going through lately," he said in his most expansive reply.

But when asked again whether he was finding personal worries overshadowing his game, Woods clearly had enough.

"Everything's working itself out," he said.

When asked if that meant his troubles were still undermining his golf, Woods descended into glum-eyed silence, offering an expression somewhere between a grimace and a frown.

Out on the Adare Manor

Golf Course, Woods felt nothing but love and admiration from the more than 20,000 fans who lined the course five-deep to watch his every drive, approach shot and putt.

Armed with a full night's sleep, Woods breezed through a course that had befuddled him Monday, when he shot a 7-over 79 to fall near the bottom of the field of 54 professionals.

His Irish caddie, silver-haired Tipperary car dealer Arthur Pierce, said Woods was exhausted Monday after flying overnight following the AT&T National outside Philadelphia, where he finished 46th. He climbed back into the middle of the pack Tuesday.

Darren Clarke of Northern Ireland finished first after shooting a 68 for a two-day score of 3-under 141. Woods finished seven shots back, tied for 24th with six others.

Every five years, Irish billionaire McManus persuades many of the world's top golfers to join his charity event in Adare, where three-member teams of amateurs pay $155,000 for the chance to play alongside the pros.

DEAR ABBY: "Aaron" and I have been married five years, and I have always tried to keep our sex life "spicy." Letting him take private X-rated photos and videos of me seemed fun at the time.

I recently learned that my "private" photos and videos have been on the Internet and shared with Aaron's buddies, co-workers and friends. I am shocked, embarrassed and hurt. When I confronted him, he said, "You're beautiful, and I enjoy sharing you with other guys!" I was dumbfounded at his response. I have tried talking to him, and he just doesn't see my objections.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Every time I see one of our friends, I wonder if Aaron has shared my "beauty" with him. I'm too embarrassed to talk to my minister about this. I have lost my trust in my husband and don't know what I should do now.

— X-POSED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR X-POSED: What your husband has done is the equivalent of inviting his buddies, co-workers, friends, etc. into your bedroom during your most intimate moments. Your trust was violated and your feelings are understandable. That he would disregard your feelings in the matter is, frankly, shocking.

What you should do now is contact a licensed marriage counselor to figure out if, with professional help, you can help your immature and insensitive husband reorganize his priorities.

DEAR ABBY: Twenty years ago I was in love with "Connie," a girl who was my best friend and soul mate. We had so much in common. Connie was chubby — not fat, just not a size 5.

Being 22 at the time, I became infatuated with "Lisa," who was a size 3. Lisa was also jealous, insecure and still tied to her mother. I snapped one day and left her — the smartest thing I have ever done. By then, of course, Connie had moved on, and I deeply regret my wandering eye, lack of sensitivity and misplaced values. My life would be so much happier had I done what was right instead of being stupid.

Connie, I am told, is happily married, and I would not wreck her marriage. I have remained single. I don't know if you can offer me advice, but if my experience can help another young man to recognize the beauty within, he will be happier than I am.

— WISER NOW IN OHIO

DEAR WISER NOW: You are not the first man to wind up with indigestion from too much arm candy. But this happened 20 years ago and you have grown since then. It's time to stop punishing yourself and open yourself to new possibilities. There are many out there. Trust me on that.

DEAR ABBY: My sister is showing signs of Alzheimer's, but she is in denial and refuses to face the issue. I would like to get her medical help. Our mother had the disease and my sister is probably scared. Any advice?

— BIG BROTHER IN FLORIDA

DEAR BIG BROTHER: If your sister is without a spouse or children, her doctor should be notified about your concerns. You also need to talk to her, to ensure that she has an advance directive for health care and powers of attorney in place in the event that she "might" become unable to make decisions for herself.

While the thought of preparing these documents can be scary, NOT having them is far scarier should any incapacitating health-care crisis arise. This needs to be done while your sister still has the capacity to make rational decisions.

The Alzheimer's Association can be a valuable resource in a situation like this, so please don't hesitate to contact it. The toll-free, 24-hour helpline is (800) 272-3900. The website is www.alz.org.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"You will, therefore, permit me to concede your entire argument, and yet contrive means to escape your dilemma."

— Johann Wolfgang von Goethe

A cunning declarer can sometimes get away with murder if he manages to conceal his high-card strength. Today's deal provides an example, where North-South had bid very aggressively to a delicate game at both tables of a team game. Cover up the East-West cards and make your plan in four spades on a trump lead.

In one room West led a diamond and declarer was soon down two tricks when he mis-guessed the diamond suit at trick one.

At the other table Israel's Ilan Herbst received a trump lead. He won in hand and found the inspired shot of leading the heart queen from hand, inferring from the passive lead that West had awkward holdings in the other suits. While it may look like an extreme position to give up on a legitimate play in exchange for a swindle, good players should have the courage of their convictions.

West won the trick and, with no real clue, chose to return a heart. Declarer won his ace, crossed to dummy with a trump, and discarded a club on the heart jack. He now played a club, which was won by West. When West continued with a second club, declarer ruffed, crossed to dummy with a trump, ruffed the last club, then played ace and another diamond. The king was offside, but because East had only a doubleton, his only choice was to win and give declarer a ruff and discard for his contract.

ANSWER: The range for your two-diamond call was quite wide — you might easily have had a 10-count. Your partner must have extra shape if not high cards and be trying for game. Since you have no interest beyond partscore, you should sign off in three diamonds.

IF JULY 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your romantic side is in full bloom this month, so it is a good time to enjoy a romantic weekend built for two or to write down your inspiring thoughts. Because you are a bit more glib than usual, it is wise to check with your friends before making investments or taking on any important new project or relationship. Your ability to analyze numbers and make strategically sound decisions involving your career or business is highlighted during August and September. Get your ducks in a row before November when your luck temporarily deserts you and people will be more critical of your transgressions or errors. Work hard and pay bills on time.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Shakespeare probably said it best, "Neither a borrower nor lender be." Take care to avoid setting up a situation that can create hurt feelings or costly misunderstandings. Ignore the sales tables.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Know when to bluff and when to show your hand. Be a savvy poker player if the workplace becomes a hotbed of intrigue. If you mind your own business, the opinions of others won't matter.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Choose a more reflective, private path. Steer clear of confrontations when communications take on fresh meaning and significance. Family members can field messages or assist you with paperwork.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tip the doorman and you could make a favorable impression on people who have the ability to open important ones. Emphasis is placed on career and winning recognition but you may run into competition.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Earn your 15 minutes of fame. You may receive added attention when creative endeavors or ideas are offered. Restrain your annoyance or concern if financial rewards don't follow quickly enough.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Love the things you are with. Don't let money become an issue or give in to moments of irrational acquisitiveness. What attracts your avid interest now might leave you cold in a few short days.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends may come and go, but enemies accumulate. Watch your step and be careful not to offend people who might cause you problems behind the scenes. An admirer might perform a secret act of kindness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Happy times are in the stars. Chance meetings could put dollars in your wallet and a smile on your face. Maintain a steady pace and don't be in a rush to confront others as hostilities could erupt.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A stroke of genius is on the clock. New ideas and ingenious methods can put you on a track that can lead to financial success. It is a great time to brainstorm but not a good time to put ideas into action.

Department of the Interior, Bureau of Land Management Notice of Realty Action; Direct Sale of Public Lands in Lincoln County, Idaho; IDI-35790

SUMMARY: The following described public land is being proposed for direct sale to Alan Woodland in accordance with Sections 203 and 209 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, as amended, (43 U.S.C. 1713 and 1719), at no less than the appraised fair market value of $14,000; Boise Meridian, T. 6 S., R. 22 E., Sec. 29, SW¼SW¼. The area described contains 40 acres in Lincoln County.

The public land is identified as suitable for disposal in the 1985 BLM Monument Resource Management Plan, as amended, and is not needed for any other Federal purposes. The identified public land was identified for disposal in an approved land use plan in effect on July 25, 2000; therefore, proceeds from this sale will be deposited into the Federal Land Disposal Account authorized under Section 206 of FLTPA. Under FLTPA, revenues generated from the sale or disposal of lands identified for disposal in land use plans as of July 25, 2000, are directed to an account that can be used by the BLM, the U.S. Forest Service, the National Park Service, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to purchase lands located within Federally designated areas or with higher resource values from willing sellers.

Regulations contained in 43 CFR 2711.3-3 make allowances for direct sales when a competitive sale is inappropriate and when the public interest would best be served by a direct sale, including the need to recognize an authorized use, such as an existing business which could suffer a substantial economic loss if the tract were purchased by someone other than the authorized user. In accordance with 43 CFR 2710, the BLM authorized officer finds that the public interest would best be served by authorizing the direct sale to Alan Woodland, which would allow the identified lands to be consolidated with Alan Woodland's adjacent private property to continue to be used for agricultural purposes.

It has been determined that the subject parcel contains no known mineral values; therefore, the BLM proposes that the conveyance of the Federal mineral interests occur simultaneously with the sale of the land. On August 25, 2008, the above described land was segregated from appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws. The segregation terminates 1) upon issuance of a patent, 2) publication in the Federal Register of a termination of the segregation, or 3) 2 years from the date of segregation, whichever occurs first. The lands will not be sold until at least 60 days after the date of publication of this notice in the Federal Register. Alan Woodland will be required to pay a $50 nonrefundable filing fee for the conveyance of the available mineral interests.

Any patent issued will contain the following terms, conditions, and reservations:

1. A reservation of right-of-way to the United States for ditches and canals constructed by the authority of the United States under the Act of August 30, 1890, 43 U.S.C. 945;
2. A condition that the conveyance be subject to all valid existing rights of record;
3. A notice and indemnification statement under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (42 U.S.C. 9620(W)), indemnifying and holding the United States harmless from any release of hazardous materials that may have occurred; and
4. Additional terms and conditions that the authorized officer deems appropriate.

Detailed information concerning the proposed land sale including the appraisal, planning and environmental documents and a mineral report are available for review at the Shoshone Field Office, 400 West F Street, Shoshone, ID 83352. Normal business hours are 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, except for Federal holidays.

PUBLIC COMMENTS: Public comments regarding the proposed sale may be submitted in writing to Ruth A. Miller, BLM Shoshone Field Manager, 400 West F Street, Shoshone, Idaho 83352, on or before July 30, 2010. Comments received in electronic form, such as e-mail or facsimile, will not be considered. Any adverse comments regarding the proposed sale will be reviewed by the BLM Idaho State Director or other authorized official of the Department of the Interior, who may sustain, vacate, or modify this realty action in whole or in part. In the absence of timely filed objections, this realty action will become the final determination of the Department of the Interior. Before including your address, phone number, e-mail address, or other personal identifying information in your comment, be advised that your entire comment including your personal identifying information may be made publicly available at any time. While you can ask us in your comment to withhold from public review your personal identifying information, we cannot guarantee that we will be able to do so.
