Shooting suspect caught in Colorado

DEAN HUMPHREY/The Daily Sentinel

Mesa County, Colo., sheriff's deputies use a K-9 unit to search for a pistol Twin Falls resident Thomas Trevino allegedly used to shoot a 24year-old female on Monday in Twin Falls. Though Idaho law enforcement allegedly found a gun at the hotel where the shooting took place, Colorado authorities believed Trevino, 30, may have discarded a weapon in rural Mesa County where he was arrested Wednesday morning.

BLM, off-road groups troubled by muddied meadow damage

By Laura Lundquist Times-News writer

Mud can be fun to play in, but dirt-bike and fourwheel-drive enthusiasts shouldn't be tempted to drive off of designated roads on public lands. Motor sports clubs joined the U.S. Bureau of Management in emphasizing that rule after a recent incident east of Bellevue.

A few weeks ago, a BLM work crew found deep ruts in a Martin Canyon meadow. The area, which borders a creek, was marshy due to the wet spring, and someone drove through it even though a road was yards away. "The crew was heartsick when they found it," said BLM spokeswoman Heather Tiel-Nelson.

Plants in river corridors can be hard to replace, said office manager Ruth Miller. Weeds are more likely to move into the exposed dirt so this site will now require weed management. Plus, significant time and BLM resources are spent protecting stream areas from grazing damage, but it's all for naught if drivers don't stay on the roads, Miller said.

"It is expensive and timeconsuming work to restore areas destroyed through irresponsible behavior in the name of recreation," Miller said in a press release.

It's for the kids: Bikers host 'Rally in the Valley'

By Amy Huddleston Times-News writer

It's going to be a good time. Grab the tent, clean the leather chaps and make sure the bike has a full tank of gas.

The Snake River Bros., a Twin Falls-based nonprofit motorcycle organization, is hosting its fifth annual Rally in the Valley Friday through Sunday at Murtaugh Lake Park. The weekend full of biker rodeos, tattoo contests and music can be enjoyed for $20 for adults and $15 for youth ages 10 to 18.

The nonprofit has been in existence for nine years and has raised $95,000 to help children and families in southern Idaho and northern Nevada in need of medical attention. Rally in the Valley has become one of the organization's biggest fundraising events over the last few years.

Jeff Olsen, Snake River Bros. vice president and event chairman, expects the event to draw between 500 and 800 campers and spectators.

Alan Garner, a biker from Rupert, is seen here at 2008's Rally in the Valley put on by the Snake River Bros. to raise money for children needing medical attention.

LOS ANGELES - A onetime police garage attendant suspected of killing 10 people and stumping detectives for more than two decades was finally arrested Wednesday after police used DNA from his son to track him down.

Lonnie Franklin Jr., 57, was charged with 10 counts of murder, one count of attempted murder and special circumstance allegations of multiple murders that could make him eligible for the death penalty if convicted, District Attorney Steve Cooley said.

"Today is a good day," Donnell Alexander, the brother of victim Monique Alexander, said as he watched South Los Angeles house where the arrest was made earlier in the day.

Obesity surgery may tame blood sugar in diabetics

Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES - For nearly a decade, Cristina Iaboni tried to tame her diabetes the usual way, through daily shots of insulin and other medicine.

Still, her blood sugar raged out of control. So Iaboni combed the Internet for another solution and found a doctor who is testing weight loss surgery on diabetics who, like herself, are merely overweight or a tad obese in an attempt to curb the chronic disease.

Scientists in recent years have discovered that diabetes all but disappears in some obese patients soon after the operation. Many were able to achieve normal blood sugar and ditch their medications.

But does the benefit extend to diabetics who are quite as hefty? Performing surgery on the not-as-obese with the goal of reversing diabetes is provocative. Iaboni's surgeon is one of a handful of doctors around the world stretching the rules to see if the weight loss operation helps.

Iaboni had gastric bypass surgery last fall at New York-Presbyterian/Weill Cornell Medical Center as part of a cause long-term remission study. In gastric bypass or stomach stapling surgery, the stomach is reduced to a thumb-sized pouch that holds less food.

Now 50 pounds lighter, she has stopped taking diabetes medications. Her blood sugar is almost normal.

"I didn't care if I lost any weight. I just wanted the diabetes to go away; 'said the 45year-old Connecticut mother of two teenagers.

The twin epidemics of obesity and diabetes are fueling an international public health threat. In the United States, one out of five people with obesity-linked Type 2 diabetes are morbidly obese - defined as 100 pounds overweight.

Surgery is generally a last resort after traditional ways to shed the pounds — such as diet and exercise — fail. Even who can go under the knife.

Federal guidelines say surover 35 plus a weight-related medical problem like diabetes or high blood pressure. Insurers use the cutoffs in deciding whether to pay for the procedure.

BMI is a calculation of height and weight used to estimate body Overweight begins at a measurement of 25, obese at 30 and morbidly obese at 40. A 5-foot-6 person is considered overweight at 155 pounds, obese at 186 pounds and morbidly obese at 248 pounds. The current BMI limits for obesity surgery were set by the National Institutes of Health in 1991.

Dr. Philip Schauer of the Cleveland Clinic is among those pushing the BMI envelope. For a study, he's recruiting 150 overweight and obese Type 2 diabetics with BMIs between 27 and 43. Some will have surgery and their progress will be compared to those who manage their diabetes with medicine. The goal is to see which group can achieve complete remission.

Smaller studies have hinted that stomach stapling and gastric banding - in which an adjustable ring is placed over the top of the stomach to create a small pouch - may work in diabetics who aren't

"These procedures can and restore someone to normal blood sugar levels without medication," Schauer said.

How does the surgery help some diabetics beat the disease? Doctors don't exactly know, but there is some evidence that it may not all be due to weight loss. Diabetes occurs when the body can't regulate blood sugar, and some researchers think that the rerouting of the digestive tract after the operation affects the gut hormones involved in blood sugar con-

Last year, 220,000 people had obesity surgery, which can cost between $14,000 and $26,000, according to the American Society for Metabolic and Bariatric Surgery.

The surgery is fairly safe. In a 2009 study, death, serious so, there are strict rules for complications or the need for a repeat procedure occurred in 1 percent who received gery candidates must be bands, about 5 percent who morbidly obese with a body had minimally invasive gasmass index over 40, or a BMI tric bypass and nearly 8 percent who had traditional

Study: Pot prices will plummet if legalized

By Lisa Leff Associated Press writer

SAN FRANCISCO Legalizing the recreational use of marijuana in California would sharply drive down prices for the drug, causing more people to use pot while possibly undercutting the tax windfall that supporters have touted, according to a study published Wednesday.

The study by the nonpartisan RAND Drug Policy Research Center predicts that retail prices for highgrade marijuana could drop from $375 an ounce under the state's current medical marijuana law to as little as $38 per ounce if voters approve a November ballot initiative authorizing counties to license and tax commercial pot sales to adults.

"Right now, when individuals purchase drugs, they are paying for the drug dealer taking risks of being arrested." Beau Kilmer, the center's co-director and the report's lead author,

But apart from creating sizable price cuts, little seems certain about how the measure, known Proposition 19, would affect the cash-strapped state's budget or pot's popularity, according to the RAND researchers. RAND, a nonprofit think tank headquartered in Santa Monica, Calif., paid for the research to educate voters ahead of the election, Kilmer said.

One of the biggest unknowns is how much revenue state and local governments stand to gain if the measure passes, they said after analyzing existing research on marijuana prices, cigarette taxes and current pot consumption and applying modeling techniques to determine possible scenarios. The California Board of Equalization estimated while evaluating a bill introduced in the Legislature last year that would have taxed and regulated marijuana like alcohol that sales taxes and a $50 per ounce excise tax on commercial pot sales would generate $1.4 billion for the

EDITORIAL

A bigot is a bigot, in any language

bove all else, avoid insulting 10 percent of your political constituency. That's our advice to the Bonner County Republican Central Committee now in full control of the reactionaries who dominated this summer's Idaho Republican Convention in Idaho Falls — who don't like the north Idaho county calling this summer's county fair a "fiesta," according to the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash.

Too Latino. Too Mexican, you see.

So the resident wingnuts up Sandpoint way are planning to decorate their fair booth with Arizona license plates and use "celebrate" as its theme instead.

"The Republicans at BCRCC want to make it very clear that English is our primary language, and call our booths 'Celebrate!' and display some Arizona license plates if you have some to spare," committee Chairman Cornel Rasor, a Republican Bonner County commissioner, wrote in a letter to Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer. Razor added, "If I under-stand it correctly, the word 'fiesta' and the word 'celebrate' are actually synonyms, and that's what the people who were concerned about it were talking about, so technically speaking we didn't have a different theme than the fair - it's just a different spelling."

At its monthly meeting in June, the committee voted to "affirm" Arizona's tough immigration law — a position also taken last month by the Idaho Republican Party at its annual convention - and to send the letter seeking the license plates for the fair booth to Arizona's governor.

These folks are bound and determined to insult and demean the one-tenth of Idahoans who are Latino — and the 2 1/2 percent of Bonner County residents who share the same heritage.

And to do so without the slightest evidence that any of them are in the United States illegally.

Bonner County Fair Board Chairman Tim Cary noted that one of the fair's longstanding food attractions is the Mexican food offered at the Search and Rescue booth. "Are we supposed to change the name of a burrito to something in English?" he told the Spokesman-Review. "I'm thinking there's some narrow-mindedness here, but that's just my opin-

Many Idahoans deplore the circumstances under which Arizona felt compelled to enact its draconian immigration law. But that doesn't have a single thing to do with Idaho Latino culture.

Civil Rights Division, headed by Assistant Attorney General Thomas E. Perez, took the lead in prepping the legal brief against Arizona. The son of immigrants from the Dominican Republic, Perez is a far-left lawyer and activist who worked for the late mass illegal alien amnesty champion Ted Kennedy and served in the Clinton administration DOJ. While holding down a key government position there in which he was entrusted to abide by the rule of law. Perez volunteered for CASA de Maryland — a notorious illegal alien advocacy group funded through a combination of taxpayer-subsidized grants and radical liberal philanthropy, including billionaire George Soros' Open Society Institute (not to mention more than $1 million showered on the group by Venezuelan thug Hugo Chavez's regime-owned oil company, CITGO).

directors. Under the guise of enhancing the "multicultural" experience, he crusaded for an ever-expanding set of illegal alien benefits ranging from in-state tuition discounts for illegal alien students to driver's licenses. CASA de Maryland opposes enforcement of deportation orders, has protested post-9/11 coordination of local, state and national criminal databases, and produced a "know your rights" propaganda pamphlet for illegal aliens depicting federal immigration agents as armed bullies making babies cry.

In 2006, CASA de Maryland threatened to protest at the schools of children whose parents belonged to the pro-immigration enforcement group Minuteman Project – and then headed into the Montgomery County, Md., public schools to recruit junior amnesty protesters who were offered school credits for traveling with CASA de Maryland to march on Washington.

As a former Maryland resident, I got to see Perez's militant friends and colleagues in action. I watched CASA de Maryland President Gustavo Torres (who met with President Obama last week) complain that motor vehicle administration officials have "absolutely no right to ask

... during his Obama DOJ confirmation hearing last year ... Perez grudgingly stated that "the Civil Rights Division must not act in contravention to valid enforcement actions of our federal immigration laws." for people's Social Security number or immigration status to get a driver's license." I stood among CASA de Maryland grievance-mongers who shouted, "No license, no justice! No justice, no peace!" while playing the race card against naturalized Americans and legal immigrants who opposed the illegal alien welfare state.

Perez himself derided secure-borders citizen activists as "xenophobes;" but denied painting the grassroots immigration enforcement movement as racist. Questioned by GOP Sen. Jeff Sessions during his Obama DOJ confirmation hearing last year about the illegal alien rights guide produced by CASA de Maryland, Perez grudgingly stated that "the Civil Rights Division must not act in contravention to valid enforcement actions of our federal immigration laws." But "act(ing) in contravention" is exactly what the Civil Rights Division is doing in spearheading the challenge to Arizona's valid enforcement actions of our federal immigration law.

Perez, Attorney General Eric Holder and the rest of the open-borders DOJ team have invoked a "preemption" doctrine based on the U.S. Constitution's supremacy clause to attack Arizona's anti-illegal immigration measure and oppose local and state enforcement of federal immigration laws. Never mind that the Arizona law was drafted scrupulously to comply with all federal statutes and the Constitution. You gotta love Obama's fair-weather friends of the Constitution. When a state acts to do the job the feds won't do, Obama's legal eagles run to the Founding Fathers for protection. When, on the other hand, left-wing cities across the country pass illegal alien sanctuary policies that flagrantly defy national immigration laws and hamper cross-jurisdiction enforcement, the newfound federal preemption advocates are nowhere in sight.

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Arizona-style immigration law offers up a tempting political twofer. It allows governors and state legislators to look like they are solving an issue that fires up their constituents.

And while the states use one hand to grab illegal aliens by the collar, they can use their free hand to poke a finger in the eye of big, lumbering, stumbling Uncle Sam. That's an irresistible opportunity in Idaho, where politicos work in fed-bashing like sculptors work in

It should come as no surprise that politicians in as many as 18 states want to emulate a one-sided immigration law that hasn't gone into effect - and hasn't survived a court challenge. If anything, the surprise is that the Associated Press tally didn't come in higher.

Idaho is among the 18

Does Idaho need an Arizona-style law that compels police officers to check immigration status, if they suspect they have stopped, detained or arrested an illegal alien? A law that legitimizes racial profiling and may well violate Fourth Amendment protections against illegal searches?

No. For many good reasons, and one as easy to read

Geography. However ill-founded,

Arizona's immigration law responds to an indisputably pressing problem. Arizona shares a 370-mile southern border with Mexico, and nearly 500,000 illegal aliens live in the state. Stop and think about that second number. An Ada County's worth of illegal aliens, with 100,000 or so on top of that.

Idaho's illegal immigration issues simply aren't of the same magnitude. Idaho has no reason - or excuse - to follow Arizona's misguided

That must have been some ruckus last week in the administrative offices at North Idaho College.

Within moments of The Coeur d'Alene Press letting its online readers know that NIC President Priscilla Bell was in line for a $3,500 bump in her retirement benefits during the trustees meeting that evening, the chase was on. Bell's VP of community relations, John Martin, was cranking up the PR machine, hoping to deflect outrage at Bell's boost with an online comment of his own. The next day, the usually jocular, always loyal former staffer of Sen. Larry Craig's sent an angry e-mail to The Press, accusing the paper of distorting facts and resorting to what he called "tabloid tactics."

Perhaps because Priscilla was upset, John was upset that we listed the entirety of the president's compensation package, clearly indicating that it represents the total cost of her employment to taxpayers. Somehow he inferred that by doing so, we were suggesting Bell takes home all of that $240,000 and gets lots of goodies that other NIC employees do not

... at precisely the same time so many in the education field are having their financial tulips trimmed, Priscilla Bell's garden is getting extra fertilizer ...

... at Bell's behest, last month authorized a countywide property tax increase, ostensibly to offset state funding shortfalls, help pay for the currently unaffordable education corridor and perhaps even to ensure that there's enough left over for the equivalent of a pay raise here and there

But that is what we have come to expect of the current regime. We live in an era when college presidents are rented, stay long enough to collect retirement benefits and then move on to the next campus that is eager to give them too much authority and too little accountability ..

... charter school debacle

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

Nampa Classical Academy continues to show it won't go down without a fight.

In September, the charter school sued the Idaho Public Charter School Commission for not allowing religious texts to be used in literature classes. A federal judge tossed out the lawsuit, and that is now being appealed.

On Wednesday, the school's charter was officially revoked after the charter commission's unanimous vote last week based on NCA's failure to demonstrate fiscal soundness. On Tuesday, the school's attorney filed an appeal of that revocation with the Idaho State Board of Education ...

The fiasco with NCA harms other charter schools throughout Idaho ... because it has punched a black eye on the entire charter school movement ...

Now charters will be viewed with more suspicion and doubt, thanks to the three-ring NCA circus. That could make it harder for new, legitimate charters to get approval from a gun-shy charter commission. But the silver lining in that cloud is that the commission will most likely scrutinize future charter applications much harder, and that's a good thing.

It could also make it tougher to sell (Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom) Luna's push to lift the state's cap on the number of new charter schools it will allow in one year, which is now at six.

The bottom line for NCA is that it is appealing two rulings against it, and neither of those appeals stands much of a chance. About 500 students will be looking for new schools ...

Let's hope this school can serve as a cautionary tale to anyone toying with the idea of starting a new charter. Make sure you know what you're doing, hire competent people, and don't plan on antagonizing the people who allow you to open.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Taxpayers must stop supporting inefficiency

However, it must be said that the only other job where continued employment is not measured by positive performance must be political office. Contestants on "Are You Smarter than a Fifth-Grader?" must be proud survivors of our public schools. With glee, they pronounce, "Ben Franklin is a favored president, that Tahiti is in the Atlantic and Cape Cod is in Florida."

. We can't blame a defective system on the teachers when they're forced to spend time with unwilling, disinterested, unteachable or non-English speaking kids. Kids interested only in partying, fast cars, drugs, video games, sports and sex. When some tire of math or history tests and drop out, simply to find that life on the outside is even harder. they want back in. And we accommodate them with the Magic Valley School.

Overburdened taxpayers need to stop supporting such an inefficient system. Only students who pass tests (from outside sources) should be financed by the community. All others can find alternate choices on their own dime.

Parents should be expected to stress responsible behavior. Teens should not become pregnant, spend time in jail or require addiction counseling as a result of having made bad choices.

With such an educational system, graduates should be able to answer questions like "Who is buried in Grant's tomb?" or "Are twins always day in history. What the hnaturally born to the same mother?"

I may be asking too much. Maybe you're comfortable living in a non-Christian Third World country. After all, the United Nations will happily help us adjust our

The F136 engine brings the power of competition

- and $20 billion in savings - to taxpayers

From pickup trucks to groceries, competition means higher quality and lower costs. It's common sense.

Maybe that's why so many Americans

– right here and across the country – support the GE/Rolls-Royce F136 Joint Strike Fighter engine. The F136 brings the power of competition to the nation's vital next-generation fighter aircraft.

It's competition that will support 4,000 American jobs. Competition the non-partisan Government Accountability Office estimates can save American taxpayers $20 billion.1

At a time of ballooning deficits, that's competition America can use. And that's a responsible investment in our national security — especially given the other contractor has received a $1 billion bailout in just one year.

For all those who are supporting our efforts to keep competition on the F136 program working for American jobs, American taxpayers and America's national security, we say thank you.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

The Dow Jones Industrial rose 274.66, or 2.8 percent, to 10,018.28. The Dow rose 57 points Tuesday. The index hasn't risen two straight days since June 17-18. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 32.21, or 3.1 percent, to 1,060.27, and the Nasdaq composite index rose 65.59, or 3.1 percent, 2,159.47.

Bond prices fell, driving up interest rates. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note rose to 2.99 percent from 2.94 percent late Tuesday. The yield fell below 3 percent last week for the first time since April 2009. The 10-year yield is used as a benchmark for interest rates on consumer loans and mortgages.

The dollar fell against other major currencies, including the euro.

About six stocks rose for every one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 5.1 billion shares, compared with 4.7 billion Tuesday. The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 21.63, or 3.7 percent, to 611.66. Britain's FTSE 100 rose 1 percent,

Germany's DAX index rose 0.9 percent, and France's CAC-40 climbed 1.8 percent. Japan's Nikkei stock average fell 0.6 per-

New mountain bike trails offer adventure and fun

By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The new trails a few miles west of Hailey sport names like "Bull Dog" and "Two Dog Trail."

But these trails are meant for mountain bikers.

Fifteen new miles of mountain bike trails opened six weeks ago, five of which are open to motorcycles. All are open to equestrians, hikers and dogs, as well.

The trails boast plenty of corners, which keeps the speed down and the fun factor up as bicyclists find themselves constantly carving turns right and left.

And the 4-mile Lambs Gulch loop, an old jeep road, has been rerouted out of the wetland and given a few more curves, as well, to make it more bicycle friendly.

"What makes them unique is their design," said Greg Martin, who heads up the Wood River Bicycle Coalition. "They're not straight like a lot of mountain bike trails adapted from horse trails or motor bike trails. These are curvier than anything around."

There are also a lot of rollers and bumps on the trails, Martin added.

"You can jump them at higher speeds. But they're designed to keep speed down. The idea is to keep people entertained at lower speeds."

The trails are located just a few miles west of Hailey out Croy Creek Road in Croy Canyon. They're close to the bulk of the population in the Wood River Valley. And they offer the opportunity for early spring and late fall biking and hiking when trails farther north are covered with snow.

"They're very well designed from the standpoint of flow and drainage," said Rob Santa, an avid mountain biker who owns Sturtevants Mountain Shop. Recommended Read: 'Snake River Fly Fishing'

By Andrew Weeks Times-News writer

If you're a fly fisherman, chances are you'll appreciate the book "Snake River Fly Fishing: Through the Eyes of an Angler" by Boots Allen. As its cover suggests, it's a guide to one of the country's "most cherished" fly-fishing waters.

The book, published by Frank Amato Publications, Inc., of Portland, Ore., is formatted in an 8x11 glossy volume.

I'll confess that I haven't used this book just yet, but I've been reading it, especially after visiting with Dennis Brauer, a Twin Falls man I recently profiled in an article about fly tying.

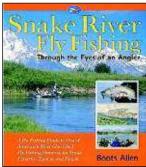

After visiting with Brauer at his home, hearing his fish stories and seeing his impressive collection of flytying material, I got to thinking: I really need to do more fly fishing.

I started fly fishing several years ago with a friend from Utah, but, for one reason or another, I never stayed with it. That's going to change.

And thanks to Allen's book, I have a little extra help when I tackle the Snake.

Allen, a fly-fishing guide in Jackson Hole, Wyo., spends more than 100 days a year fishing and guiding on the Snake River. Research for his book has come from these personal jaunts on the river, but also from conversations with several generations of fishermen who consider the Snake one of the best fly-fishing waters in the country. He tells their stories in his book, along with his

"Not everyone who fishes

the Snake River regularly may agree with all I present here," Allen writes. "I believe this is common to all trout streams, but none more so than the Snake. If you were to ask a dozen different anglers their opinion regarding tactics, fly selection, even insect and trout abundance on the stream, you would probably get a dozen different answers. But this is what makes fishing the Snake River special."

If you were to use some of the tactics locally, you might think Allen has lost his head. The truth is, the book focuses on the Snake River in eastern Idaho and western Wyoming, so tactics locally might be different. But serious anglers know that sometimes long-distance travel is part of the fly-fishing experience.

The book is still an informative and fun read. At only 130 glossy pages (retail: $24.95), you'd think it'd be a quick read. But you'll want to absorb this one, take it with you on your fishing trips.

Allen writes, the Snake River "has a reputation as a relatively easy stream to fish, yet at the same time, it can present challenges to even the most experienced angler."

Only the savvy fisherman can tell.

Hikers can discover many wonders on newly acquired BLM property

By Brett French

The Billings Gazette

RED LODGE, Mont. -Judging by the numerous piles of scat scattered across the hillside, at least one black bear seems to like the Bureau of Management's recently acquired Meeteetse Spires

Recently, a group of hikers led by Grant Barnard of the Montana Wilderness Association explored a portion of the 560 acres along the Beartooth Front. The land, purchased in a deal finalized last year, is sandwiched between the Forest Service's Line Creek Research Natural Area to the west and the BLM's 960acre Meeteetse Spires Area of Critical Environmental Concern to the north, east and south.

Acquiring the landlocked parcel in such an unusual area was a priority for the BLM. The two-part deal, brokered by Conservation Fund, cost $2.65 million. Tom Carroll. BLM's land planner in the Billings office, credited Rep. Denny Rehberg with shepherding the project through Congress. Federal Land and Water Conservation Fund dollars paid for the pur-

Carroll, along with his wife and daughter, tagged along on the Sunday hike.

"The real beauty of the property is that everything to the east is protected now, and that's important to a lot of people," he said.

Lower the drawbridge

We entered the draw at the South Fork of Grove Creek about an hour later than planned. The initial convoy from Red Lodge was turned back by a muddy, rutted section of the Meeteetse Trail road. That meant driving back to Red Lodge, south to Belfry and then west to the Beartooth Front. Neither of the routes has seen a road grader in a long time.

As we bumped in a pickup across the drylands along the base of the Front, the pink upturned faces of Indian paintbrush flowers blanketed the sparse soil, a sure sign of a wet spring. A pair of antelope stood guard near a section of state land, jogging off a short distance as the entourage passed.

Once the road levels out, the cabin is discovered nestled near the Custer National Forest boundary at the edge of pine trees. Even though the cabin isn't open to the public, the deck makes a nice perch for resting in the shade and admiring the view of the basin below and the Pryor Mountains in the distance.

Some day, the Forest Service's trail from Robertson Gulch to the south, called the Face of the Mountain Trail, could link up with the South Fork of Grove Creek to provide a loop route. The Face of the Mountain Trail, which the Forest Service's trail crew has been working on this spring, runs along the edge of the Line Creek RNA and hooks into the Line Creek and Mount Maurice trails.

Help keep fishing sites safe, clean

Question: "My grandson and I were fortunate to go fishing together the other day at the new Filer Ponds. What a great collaboration between the Twin Falls Canal Co. and the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. I'm beginning to notice a lot of litter and fishing violations. Is there anything I can do to help?"

Answer: The collaborative effort between the Twin Falls Canal Co. and Fish and Game has produced a fantastic urban fishing opportunity.

You have identified an issue that turns really good ideas and great fishing opportunities into public displays of poor ethics, poor sportsmanship and violations of Idaho law.

One of the items that have become a source of irritation and is a violation of law is littering. The littered items are often beverage or worm containers. Another significant problem is the often discarded fishing line along the banks of streams or lakes.

Many anglers strip off tangled fishing line and forget to pick up and properly dispose of the tangled web. What many people don't realize is the discarded fishing line is a death trap waiting for many species of birds and mammals. When wrapped around a wing or leg the fishing line acts like a saw blade, easily cutting through flesh.

A common loon was recently found at Lake Walcott with a fish hook impaled in its beak. The fishing line was wrapped around its head and one wing. A Canada goose wrapped in fishing line at Dierkes Lake was recently captured by Senior Conservation Officer Iim Stirling and Wildlife Technician Mike Remming. With the fishing line removed the goose was freed to rejoin her goslings.

The birds in these two examples were successfully freed, but victims die more often. Several years ago I found a mallard duck with a fish hook stuck in its tongue after it ate a kernel of corn used for bait. The fishing line had broken off and was tangled around some brush. The duck was tethered to the brush by the fishing line until it died.

We also receive reports of fishing violations. Conservation officers often work the areas in plainclothes to identify violations and issue citations to the offend-

As a citizen you can report any violations you see to the department through the Citizens Against Poaching (CAP) program or by calling your local sheriff's office.

Please try to obtain descriptions of the offenders, including license plates.

I applaud your interest in helping to keep these areas open and available to public use. When you are done fishing, any efforts to pick up and properly discard trash would greatly be appreciated.

It's moments like these that can help instill valuable lessons of public service and outdoor ethics in your children and grandchildren.

comprises a multitude of stars too faint to see without a telescope, it was assumed that "dark nebulae" were simply places where stars were absent. The 20th century had barely begun when it was discovered that, when starlight was spread out into a spectrum, certain colors were "missing." Non-luminous gas along the lines of sight to the stars revealed its presence by absorbing the missing colors.

Because dark clouds absorb starlight they must also emit energy, otherwise they'd heat up until they glowed brightly. Instead, they immediately emit the absorbed energy as heat, not light. Thus, an infrared telescope can image them. In May, the Herschel infrared satellite imaged a dark region surrounded by glowing gas, known as NGC 1999. But curiously, the nebula appeared dark in the infrared images as well. NGC 1999 appears to be not an absorbing cloud, but an actual hole, possibly punched through the surrounding nebula by a jet from a newborn star, long ago.

The most elusive nonluminous material is dark matter, whose presence is revealed by its gravitational influence on its surroundings. Whatever it is, it seemingly doesn't interact with energy, allowing starlight to pass right through it without being reflected or absorbed. Being immune to spectroscopic analysis, its nature continues to elude us.

Was eye-drop medication to blame for side effects?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a female who used Timoptic eye drops for glaucoma about 20 years ago. The beta blocker caused me many side effects, most of which went away when I discontinued the medicine. However, I still have shortness of breath and difficult urination. Is there anything that can be done to relieve these side effects?

DEAR READER: Even today, Timoptic is contraindicated for patients with a history of chronic bronchitis, emphysema, bronchial asthma, chronic disease and a number of cardiac conditions. I cannot tie in your shortness of breath 20 years following usage, but I wonder whether you had an existing condition even then that might have been exacerbated by the medication. This can best be determined by a pulmonologist, who will listen to your obstructive pulmonary

lungs, and perhaps order a chest X-ray, CT or MRI to determine just what is and isn't going on.

I am unaware of a link to urinary difficulties with Timoptic but can offer some other possible causes for the condition. Retention can be caused by an obstruction in the urinary tract or by mixed signals between the bladder and the brain. Diabetes, pelvic injury, vaginal childbirth, bladder stones and infection of the spinal cord are but a few more options. An infection can cause inflammation and irritation, resulting in urinary retention.

A cystocele can result when the wall between the bladder and the vagina weakens, allowing the bladder to sag into the vagina. A rectocele occurs when the rectum sags into the back wall of the vagina. Both conditions can force the bladder out of position, causing incontinence and retention.

I feel you need a referral to an urologist for a complete examination to rule

Oveson retires from teaching

After 42 years of teaching, Margaret Johansen Oveson has retired this spring from South Fremont High School in St. Anthony. During her 11 years at South Fremont she has coached her debate and speech teams to win seven state banners and numerous individual awards. She has coached several state champions and 11 students have competed on the national level. Oveson was awarded Coach of the Year by her C. colleagues in 2007, and she has also been recognized as American Legion Educator of the Year.

> She graduated from Brigham Young University, where she majored in physical education and speech.

She has taught in California, Utah, and at Vera C. O'Leary Middle School, Twin Falls High School and Rigby High School. She said she receives letters from list, students must complete former students from all over the country who are making a difference in their communities because of their experiences in speech and debate. Killinger completes military training

Army National Guard Pfc. Stephen D. Killinger has graduated from One Station Unit Training at Fort Knox, Ky., which consisted of basic military training and advanced individual training (AIT).

During the first nine weeks of initial entry training, or basic combat training, Killinger was instructed in drill and ceremony. weapons, rifle marksmanship qualification, bayonet combat, chemical warfare, field training and tactical exercises, marches, military courtesy, military justice, physical fitness, first aid, and Army history, traditions and core values.

During AIT, Killinger completed the seven-week cavalry scout course. The training included subjects and instructions to operate, maintain and fire M2/M3 Bradley fighting vehicles; call and adjust fire on enemy targets; recognize friendly and threat vehicles; conduct reconnaissance and security missions; perform foot patrols; conduct land navigation; locate and neutralize mines; and operate and maintain scout vehicles.

Ancient tool find shows early humans ventured farther north than thought

By Raphael G. Satter Associated Press writer

LONDON - Ancient man ventured into northern Europe far earlier than previously thought, settling on England's east coast more than 800,000 years ago, scientists said.

It had been assumed that humans - thought to have emerged from Africa around 1.75 million years ago - kept mostly to relatively warm tropical forests, steppes and Mediterranean areas as they spread across Eurasia.

But the discovery of a collection of flint tools some 135 miles northeast of London shows that quite early on man braved colder climes.

"What we found really undermines traditional views about how humans spread and reacted to climate change," said Parfitt, Simon University College London researcher. "It just shows how little we know about the movement out of Africa."

The researchers dated the artifacts to somewhere between 866,000 and 814,000 years old or 970,000 to 936,000 years another of the paper's old. That's at least 100,000 years before the earliest known date for British settlement, nearby Pakefield.

Exactly what kind of humans made these tools is unknown.

"It is impossible to guess who those people were without fossil evidence,"

Obama bypasses Senate for new Medicare chief

By Erica Werner Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON President Obama bypassed the Senate Wednesday and appointed Dr. Donald Berwick, a Harvard professor and patient care specialist, to run Medicare and Medicaid.

The decision to use a socalled recess appointment to install Berwick as administrator of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services drew immediate fire from the GOP. Republicans have raised concerns about Berwick's views on rationing of care and other matters and said it was wrong for Obama to go around the normal Senate confirmation process. That view was echoed by a key chairman, although the recess appointment is a tool used by presidents of both parties.

Berwick has wide support in the medical community but some Democrats feared the GOP would use his confirmation hearings as an opportunity to reopen last year's divisive health care mation hearing, also said he debate. So far, cleanup workers hired by BP have skimmed only the surface, using shovels or sifting machines to remove oil. The company is planning a deeper cleaning program that could include washing or incinerating sand once the leak is stopped off the coast of Louisiana.

Some experts question whether it's better to just leave it alone and let nature run its course, in part because oil that weathers on beaches isn't considered as much of a health hazard as fresh crude. Some environmentalists and local officials fret about harm to the ecosystem and tourism.

Lois Lavonne Highbarger Schoessler

(Mom was in the process of writing her obituary when she passed away. We printed her version just as she had written it.)

Lois was born on the Winnebago Indian Reservation in Eastern Nebraska on July 30, 1933. Her parents Ted and Dorothy Wilder and her Grandparents had a big farm and raised corn.

Lois lived in the country and on farms most of her life.

Her first husband and Lois had two sons — Robert was taken at 16 in an auto accident July 6, 1969. Monte is a long-haul driver. He and Kelley are team drivers in a new Kenworth hauling for the government.

her canning and freezing for winter. She was so proud of her accomplishments. It didn't bother for her to stay up most of the night. She really didn't care for TV.

The parents brought the family to Idaho in 1948. We bought a small house and farm in Caldwell.

I next married Dean Highbarger in 1957. We had two more children, Steven and LouAnn. Their father died in 1983. This year was Lou's last year of high school. This year I started the kitchen at the nursing home.

The last marriage I had was May 1992. We bought a 66-foot new manufactured home. Bob Schoessler was the last man of my life. Bob passed away in 2001. Everything was sold and I moved to town in my house for several years, then moved Buhl to Applegate Assistance Living.

When Grandma and Grandpa were getting to old to watch and buy for their Grandson, they passed away and the job was on to me. Clifford was big but small in mind; was funny to see him eat bananas and chocolate Dad went to work milking covered cherries, all in one mouthful.

I read all the farm magazines. I need to keep up on farm prices.

Lois Lavonne Wilder, the third child of Dorothy Opal Peck and Neil Stanton Wilder, was born on the Winnebago Indian Reservation in northeast Nebraska on July 30, 1933. It was a hot, dusty and dry day in the midst of the Great Depression. Mom's early life in Nebraska was hard and times were tough. As though the Depression wasn't bad corn was planted only to wither and die from lack of water. They had little money or material things, but they were rich in love and family. It has been said that the family was so poor they had to share a birthday cake. At some point, the family moved to a farm southwest of Craig, Neb., where Mom attended school through the eighth grade in a one-room school house.

In the spring of 1948, Lois liked to sew and do all Mom moved with her family to Idaho. They first settled in Caldwell and later moved to Middleton. Mom attended Middleton High School and graduated from there in 1951. It was during the time in Middleton that Mom and her Mother opened and operated the Beehive Café. It was a very successful little café, but life's opportunities kept tugging at Mom. After the Beehive closed, Mom went to work in Boise delivering Krispy Kreme doughnuts. Mom laughed when telling me this story. It cleaning house and worked required that Mom be to work at 2 a.m. and she was always late. It didn't take long before she was fired from the Krispy Kreme job, but to her dying day, she loved Krispy Kreme doughnuts. Later Mom went to live and work with a doctor and his family as a nanny.

In 1953, Mom married Charles J Bohannon. CJ worked for Idaho Power and the family moved quite often. Mom and CJ had two children, Bob and Monte. Bob left this life on July 6, 1969. Mom and CJ later divorced. In 1957, Mom married Dean Highbarger and they moved to southern California where cows. In March of 1962, the young family moved back to Idaho and settled on a farm at Star. Mom's life didn't get any easier. With four young children, 160 acres and a herd of milk cows, she was busy from long before the sun came up until long after the sun went down. Mom always had a large garden and grew and canned most all of her own vegetables and fruit. She was always proud of the hard work and the fruits of milk. The times were better, but Mom didn't slow down. She was a tireless worker and a champion to her children. Mom was fiercely loyal to her children and even when we were wrong, she would take up our cause and fight our battles. Mom's door, and all too often her heart, was always open to our friends. Mom always set an extra plate at the dinner table. Almost always, and without notice, there would be a hungry mouth to feed at dinner time. I never heard her complain. The strongest rebuke I ever heard come from Mom was if someone sat down at her table with their hat on.

When Dad passed away in 1983, times were once again tough for Mom. The farm wasn't making any money, so Mom returned to the work force with the skills she had honed her entire life. She worked at the nursing home in the kitchen and in her off time, she cleaned houses and offices in Gooding. Mom built up quite a reputation as her cleaning business just kept growing until she was turning down jobs. During all this, Mom still made time for her children and grandchildren. Mom was finally able to sell the farm in 1989 and moved to town, buying a house on Utah Street. She was proud of that house and spent a great deal of time making it her home and a safe haven for her children and grandchildren (and of course she had a big garden).

Mom married again for the third time in 1992 to Bob Schoessler (Papa). Bob had been a neighbor and friend of the family for more than 20 years. Mom moved from her home on Utah Street to the farm east of Gooding only a quarter mile north of where she had spent 20 years with Dad. Mom dug in and once again made a home. Not long after that, Mom and Bob sold the farm and bought a small acreage closer to town. A new home was constructed and Mom busied herself with homemaker duties while still cleaning offices and homes and, of course, tending a large garden. She was always so busy. Bob passed away in 2001. Mom, now suffering from the affects of COPD, realized she needed to be back in town and closer to Lou. So once again, Mom had to sell In 1968, it was time to possessions and her home there were more cows to when, with a heavy heart, she made the determination Patrick's Day in 1952 that she needed more help in in her life than Lou could provide. Being the loving person she was, she broke the ties of servitude and sold her home their third child into and possessions and moved to Applegate Assisted Living overdue, for Mom to enjoy the rest of her life, but being the independent soul she was, the transition was difficult. She was able to finally accept the help from those around her. Mom left this life on July 6, 41 years to the day that her beloved first born, Bobbie, died. She was preceded in death by her parents, Ted and Dorothy Wilder; her older brother, Dick Wilder; her husbands, Dean and Bob: two grandsons, Beau and 1970. Like most of us, she Joseph; and a very special nephew, Cliffford Cox. Mom is survived by her children, Louann and Jon Bolton, Steve and Tena Highbarger, Monte Kelley and Bohannon, and Mike and Valynn Highbarger. She also leaves her grandchildren, Cecily, Chris, Sean, Zachary, Ben and Stevie. She is also survived by her siblings, Mary, Kenny, Lyle and Nancy, a very special sisterin-law who Mom called Sis.

We call her Grammie, a name passed down for generations that she earned because of her giving and wrote her own obituary; she kept it short, as if her life was so simple. We all loved her so much. She touched the lives of everyone she met.

Grammie raised her four children and a stepson as best she could. She loved them with all her heart and soul. She was a fine woman, lived a meager life mostly but shared her spirit with all of

That journey took her to Twin Falls and various points around the West before once again settling in Twin Falls. It was there on a sunny June day in 2010 that she bid this world goodbye and began a new adventure.

Patty attended Edward's Catholic School, O'Leary Junior High and Twin Falls High School, from which she graduated in dabbled with various jobs before settling into a career with the U.S. Forest Service. She worked in a variety of capacities for Forest Service operations based in Twin Falls, Orofino and Salmon, Idaho; Libby, Mont.; Cottage Grove, Ore.; Yreka, Calif.; and Springerville, Ariz. She retired — with a big smile on her face - in 2007.

Forest Service work was OK, but Patty's real passion was crafts. In this regard, she didn't dabble. She plunged into new challenges with gusto. She took classes, extensively. researched loving nature. Grammie picked people's brains and firmly embraced the "trialand-error" methodology. For Patty, the error period didn't last too long. Cowboys sweep Spartans

By Ryan Howe Times-News writer

RUPERT - Twin Falls' doubleheader sweep at Minico Wednesday exposed one glaring difference between the two clubs: Twin Falls has a deep and experienced pitching staff. Minico's is young and developing.

The Cowboys Class AA squad got solid performances on the mound, winning the opener 14-4 in six innings, and taking the nightcap 13-6.

"What we preach all year is if our pitcher can give us a chance to win, that's all we can ask," said Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeier. "They're giving us a chance, keeping us in games."

Ryan Petersen struck out six in his wild pitch and a passed ball. Game 1 start. He went five innings before Eric Harr relieved him and shut out the Spartans in the final two

In Game 2, Zeb Sneed struck out 10 every Minico batter at least once, except for Nick Salvi, who went 2-for-4 with an RBI.

Fresh off its Cowboy Classic championship last weekend, Twin Falls (25-9, 11-3 Area C) swung the bats well, but also showed patience at the plate when Minico pitchers struggled to locate. The Cowboys' six-run fourth inning in Game 2 came courtesy of four walks, three beaned batters, a

"That's what good hitting clubs do, they don't swing out of their zone and they stay disciplined and take what the pitcher gives them," said Stadelmeier.

Take away three disastrous innings, in five innings of work. He sat down and the Spartans' day could have had a different outcome, according to Minico assistant Erin Runyon.

"Twin Falls is solid, but on the other hand we've played four games with them now. In all of those we were in it at some point and then give up a huge inning," Runyon said. "We're right there, but we don't battle after bad situations. We've got to toughen up, dig

Cubs struggling and it's not just Zambrano

Zambrano's dugout meltdown last month is just one of the problems facing the Cubs as they head toward the All-Star break. What ails the longtime losers goes much deeper than that and it's on full display in Tom Ricketts' first season as owner.

Poor offensive seasons by 3-4 hitters Derrek Lee and Aramis Ramirez have helped put the Cubs into a hole that could make sellers at the trade deadline. take the good with the bad. I mean, nobody wants the bad, but at the same time it happens."

It happens often enough with the emotional Zambrano, the one-time ace who was surprisingly sent to the bullpen April 22 and finally rejoined the rotation in early June. Zambrano, who signed a five-year, $91.5 million contract in 2007, is just 3-6 with a 5.66 ERA in 22 games this season, including nine starts.

His outburst at U.S. Cellular Field was even more embarrassing because it came against the White Sox after he surrendered four runs in the first inning. He apparently was upset make diving stops on some hits, but whatever the reason the tirade has been replayed numerous times.

Zambrano was sent home by Piniella, suspended, put on a restricted list and then assigned to an unspecified treatment program. When he returns after the All-Star break, he'll be back in the bullpen.

"It was a good idea - a very good idea, actually - to wait 'til after the "I'm not a quitter," Piniella said. "In All-Star break before he came in and this business, you better be prepared to addressed the team," Piniella said.

Boozer agrees to deal with Bulls

CHICAGO (AP) - Carlos Boozer is headed to the Chicago Bulls. Now what about you, LeBron James?

A person familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press that Boozer, a two-time All-Star forward, agreed to a deal on Wednesday and is leaving the Utah Jazz after six seasons. The person, who spoke on the condition of anonymity because the contract can't become official until 12:01 a.m. today, did not reveal the terms.

Several outlets have reported it's a five-year deal, and the Chicago Tribune cited a source saying the Bulls would still have enough room to offer a maximum salary contract to another free agent. The NBA set the salary cap at $58.04 million for next season Wednesday.

Boozer becomes the latest chip to fall on a day when Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh confirmed they will play in Miami next season.

James, the jewel of this star-studded class, is still out there. While everyone awaits his announcement on tonight, the Bulls at least know they're not coming away empty-handed after landing Boozer.

Anticipating about $30 million in cap room, the Bulls were looking to make a big splash in free agency after consecutive first-round playoff exits. Adding Boozer strengthens their standing in the Eastern Conference – attractive to James, his former teammate.

His arrival gives the Bulls a formidable pair in the frontcourt with Joakim Noah, not to mention a good pick-androll partner for All-Star point guard Derrick Rose.

CELTICS RE-SIGN RAY ALLEN FOR 2 YEARS, $20 MILLION

BOSTON - The Boston Celtics' new Big Three will stay together to try for a second NBA title.

Ray Allen confirmed to The Associated Press on Wednesday night that he has agreed to a two-year, $20 million contract to return to Rivers also agreeing to in March. return, the Celtics can keep together the core of the 2008 NBA champions for at least two more years.

Allen's agent, Lon Babby, told the AP that the second year is a player option. NBA teams are not allowed to sign free agents until Thursday.

The deal was first reported by ESPN.

Allen, who turns 35 this last season as the Celtics reached the NBA finals for the second time in three years. After Boston lost to the Los Angeles Lakers in seven games, Allen said, "It's obvious I don't want to be anywhere else."

DURANT REACHES 5-YEAR DEAL WITH THUNDER

OKLAHOMA CITY -Kevin Durant didn't go for a spectacle in announcing where he'll be for the next bracing for last summer. five years.

Carlos Boozer is headed to the Chicago Bulls. A person familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press that the twotime All-Star forward agreed to a deal on Wednesday and is leaving the Utah Jazz after six seasons.

Instead, Durant simply posted an update on his Twitter page Wednesday, saying he'd agreed to a fiveyear contract extension with the Oklahoma City Thunder. Durant can't sign the deal until today and team spokesman Brian Facchini said he could not confirm the deal under NBA rules.

"Exstension for 5 more years wit the thunder....God Is Great, me and my family came a long way...I love yall man forreal, this a blessing!" Durant tweeted.

CLIPPERS HIRE DEL NEGRO AS THEIR NEW COACH

LOS ANGELES - Vinny Del Negro could have taken it and maybe makes them more easy after being fired by the Chicago Bulls. They still owe him money, so there was no Boozer averaged 19.5 points pressing need to jump back and 11.2 rebounds last season. on the NBA coaching carousel.

Still, he couldn't resist.

Del Negro agreed to a three-year deal to coach the Los Angeles Clippers on Wednesday, taking over a team that went 29-53 last season and missed the playoffs for the 15th time in 17 years.

"I know how difficult it is, I know the challenges that we have, but that's what makes it interesting, that's what makes it fun for me," he said. "Ilove the competition, Ilove the challenge."

MORE THAN EXPECTED NEW YORK - The NBA salary cap for next season was set Wednesday at $58.04 month, averaged 16.3 points million, a higher number than projected that could help Miami fill out a roster around Dwvane Wade, Chris Bosh and perhaps even LeBron Iames.

> The cap goes into effect at 12:01 a.m. today, ending the league's moratorium period and allowing free agent contracts to be signed.

Prosecutor: Vick in confrontation before shooting a birthday party said Wednesday night that Michael Vick was involved in a confrontation before a shooting following his birthday bash.

Commonwealth's Attorney Harvey L. Bryant told The Associated Press Wednesday night in a telephone interview that Vick was not involved in the shooting and that he left the nightclub "in the 3 to 5 minute range" before it occurred.

Bryant would not go into detail about the confrontation, but said there was no evidence the Philadelphia Eagles quarterback was involved in "anything that would amount to aggressive or assaultive conduct."

"He's an athlete and an entertainer, but he's also a human being, and things that would tick you and I off would tick him off," Bryant said. "But he extricated himself from those things and left with the help and encouragement of some of his friends and supporters."

Police have said Vick was not the shooter. Bryant said the investigation also shows that Vick "was not aware of whether or not anyone was going to be shot, was threatened to be shot or anything to do with any of that business."

Neither Vick's attorney, Larry Woodward, or his agent, Joel Segal, returned phone messages Wednesday night. Bryant, who has declined to press charges at this time against anyone in the shooting, said the victim and witnesses have not cooperated. He would not confirm a police statement made Tuesday that they know who the shooter is, but did say that the case remains open. The victim has not be identified by police, but Woodward, said it was Quanis Phillips — a co-defendant in the federal dogfighting case that landed Vick in federal prison. Phillips, who Woodward said was not invited to the party and did not interact with Vick

The shooting occurred a block away from the nightclub where Vick was celebrating his 30th birth-

Vick was interviewed by detectives in the case a few days later.

"He has sat down with Virginia Beach detectives and answered all their questions and, in our view, has been cooperative ... and I should say cooperative and truthful," Bryant said.

Jets, Ferguson agree to extension

Pro Bowl left tackle D'Brickashaw Ferguson agreed Wednesday to terms on a contract extension with the New York Jets, a person familiar with the deal told The Associated Press.

A second person familiar with the negotiations said it's a six-year deal for $60 million. Both people requested anonymity because the deal had not yet

Ferguson, selected to his first Pro Bowl last season, is one of the anchors of an offensive line that helped the Jets lead the league in rushing a year ago. Ferguson was the team's first-round draft pick, fourth overall, in 2006. He was entering the fifth year of his $37.5 million rookie deal.

He was one of four key players looking for new deals this offseason, along with cornerback Darrelle Revis, center Nick Mangold and linebacker David

Patrick Ewing, son aim for NBA jobs

By Antonio Gonzalez Associated Press writer

ORLANDO, Fla. – The lifelong basketball journeys for Hall of Fame center Patrick Ewing and his son, Patrick Ewing Jr., are at a crossroads this week at the NBA's Orlando summer league.

They're both leading the Orlando Magic's squad — one on the sideline, the other on the court — and making strides toward their ultimate goals.

Father and son.

Coach and player.

Two dreams so close to reality. "Wouldn't that be great? I'm waiting for the day we do it," said the elder Ewing, now 47. "I'm chomping at the bit."

The former New York Knicks great, Ewing heads into his sixth season as an NBA assistant coach. The last three have been with the Magic, helping mold Dwight Howard into an All-Star center who has won two straight defensive player of the year awards.

Ewing is still hoping to land his first head-coaching job, believing it's only a phone call away and he merely has to pay his dues as an assistant. Despite several openings this offseason, though, that call didn't come again.

"I'm waiting," he said, smiling. Ewing Jr. has never shied away from his father's shadow.

The overall standings remained the same after Wednesday's 95.4-mile ride from Cambrai to the champagne capital Reims – a mostly flat trek that was tailor-made for sprinters.

2 former Kansas officials charged

WICHITA, Kan. - Two former University of Kansas athletics officials tied to a $1 million ticket scalping scandal at the school have been charged as part of a federal probe into the scheme, according to court documents made public Wednesday.

Brandon Simmons, the university's former assistant athletic director for sales and marketing, was charged with one count of misprision of a felony. Prosecutors allege he knew tickets were stolen from the university, concealed that fact and did not report it to authorities, according to a criminal information document filed in federal court in Topeka.

Jason Jeffries, the assistant director of ticket operations, was charged last week with the same felony, which carries a maximum sentence of three years in prison.

Jeffries' charges also were cited in a criminal information document, which is typically filed with the consent of the defendant and is commonly the first step toward entering a guilty plea. Both men are scheduled to appear in court next week.

Simmons, Jeffries and four other former university employees have been accused in an internal investigation of an alleged scheme to sell at least $1 million in basketball and football tickets to brokers. The university determined that thousands of tickets were used or sold by several school staffers for personal purposes.

Simmons' attorney, Mark Bennett Jr., said his client hasn't decided whether to plead guilty. He said Simmons cooperated with the university investigation, but it has "yet to be determined" whether he will cooperate with federal prosecutors.

Jeffries cooperated with investigations from the beginning because "he has nothing to hide," said his attorney, Tom Haney. Jeffries is considering pleading guilty to the charge and is not accused of profiting from the alleged scheme, Haney said.

USC APOLOGIZES TO FLORIDA, ALABAMA, WASHINGTON

Southern California has apologized to Florida, Alabama, Washington, Oregon and Fresno State for accusing those schools of breaking NCAA rules by contacting one of the Trojans' players without permission.

In a letter dated July 1 and addressed to Florida athletic director Jeremy Foley, USC AD Mike Garrett said freshman running back Dillon Baxter confirmed to Garrett that the player "did not receive a call from your institution."

"I apologize for any inconvenience or embarrassment this matter has caused to you and your institution," Garrett wrote in a hand-signed let-

The letter to Foley was obtained by The Associated Press. Alabama, Washington, Oregon, and Fresno State also confirmed Wednesday that their athletic directors received apology letters from USC.

ESPN.com reported USC filed a complaint with the Pac-10 in June about several schools tampering with Baxter after the Trojans were hit with NCAA sanctions.

Pac-10 spokeswoman Danette Leighton told the AP in an e-mail that it was the conference's policy not to comment on enforcement matters.

USC received a two-year postseason ban, a loss of scholarships and was forced to vacate victories from the 2004 and '05 seasons for NCAA violations involving former star tailback Reggie Bush.

"Therefore, acknowledge your error and be attentive."

— Christopher Marlowe

At the Dyspeptics Club, whenever South becomes declarer, his partner — a man of almost legendary impatience and acerbity puts down his dummy and ostentatiously focuses on a spot in the middle distance. His explanation is that he does not want to watch his partner butcher the hand, but somehow he always has a biting comment ready for the post-mortem.

Today's deal was no exception. South played three no-trump by winning the opening diamond lead cheaply in his hand and playing two rounds of hearts to East. That player continued the attack on diamonds, and declarer finessed again, letting West win and clear the suit. Declarer now realized that leading a low spade from hand to dummy's jack could not win. His only chance of success was to find the spade queen doubleton. But his luck was not in: he emerged with only six tricks.

Before South could claim that he was unlucky, North inquired whether a 100 percent chance was not good enough for him. Can you see what he meant?

South should have won the first trick with the diamond ace, sacrificing a potential diamond trick to ensure that he had an entry to dummy in diamonds. Now he simply wins the heart king and leads another heart. By leading his low diamond to dummy's 10 at his next opportunity, he can be assured of two diamond tricks, four hearts, and his three black-suit winners.

On July 8, 1950, President Harry S. Truman named Gen. Douglas MacArthur commander-in-chief of United Nations forces in Korea. (But Truman ended up sacking MacArthur for insubordination nine months later, replacing him with Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway.)

${f T}$ ODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1663, King Charles II of England granted a Royal Charter to Rhode Island.

In 1776, Col. John Nixon gave the first public reading of the Declaration of Independence, Philadelphia. In 1853, an expedition led by Commodore Matthew

Perry arrived in Yedo Bay, Japan, on a mission to seek diplomatic and trade relations with the Japanese. In 1889, The Wall Street Journal was first published.

In 1907, Florenz Ziegfeld

staged his first "Follies," on the roof of the New York Theater. 1919, President Woodrow Wilson received a tumultuous welcome in New York City after his return from the Versailles

(vehr-SY') Peace Conference in France. In 1947, demolition work began in New York City to make way for the new permanent headquarters of the United Nations In 1958, President Dwight D. Eisenhower began a visit to Canada, where he conferred with Prime Minister John Diefenbaker and addressed the Canadian Parliament. In 1989, Carlos Saul Menem was inaugurated as president of Argentina in the country's first transfer of power from one democratically elected civilian leader to another in six decades. In 1994, Kim Il Sung, North Korea's communist leader since 1948, died at age 82. Ten years ago: Venus Williams beat Lindsay Davenport 6-3, 7-6 (3) for her first Grand Slam title, becoming the first black women's champion at Wimbledon since Althea Gibson in 1957-58. The Pentagon's missile defense project suffered its latest setback when a rocket that had taken off from Kwajalein Atoll in the Pacific failed to intercept a target missile launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

Five years ago: Group of Eight leaders meeting in Gleneagles, Scotland, unveiled a $50 billion package to help lift Africa from poverty and pledged new joint efforts against terrorism in response to the deadly London bombings the day before. Hurricane Dennis pounded Cuba, resulting in 16 deaths. One year ago: Group of Eight leaders, including President Barack Obama, pledged to dramatically cut greenhouse gas emissions by 2050 as they met in L'Aquila, Italy. South Korea blamed North Korea for cyber attacks targeting its Web sites as well as those in the U.S.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18year-old woman and have been with my fiance for 2 1/2 years. I love him and can't picture my life without him. However, over the last six months he has become emotionally abusive. He's never wrong, gets mad if I disagree with him about anything, and he yells at me over every little thing.

He used to treat me great, and now this. I miss how it used to be, and I cry almost every day. In the past I always told myself I would never put up with something like this, but I have been and it gets harder every day. I know it's not physical, but emotional abuse counts for something, right? Or am I overreacting? Please give me some advice. I need to know there IS a light at the end of the tunnel.

- SAD IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR \mathbf{A} BBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR SAD: You're not overreacting. What you are experiencing now is a preview of how the rest of your life will be if you stay with him. When a partner becomes controlling and emotionally abusive, in most cases it's only a matter of time until the physical abuse begins. If you're smart, you will put an end to this NOW. The "light at the end of the tunnel" is the sunshine you'll see once you exit this relationship and slam the door behind you.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please say something about the practice of choosing teams for group games by having team captains select individuals through the process of elimination?

As a child, I was always the person chosen last, and it happened again at a recent community function. I found it just as humiliating and hurtful as an adult.

We were asked to stand and then sit down as our names were called. I was the last person standing in a room of 60 people, and it felt like I had just been pronounced the least popular and desirable person in the

THE OUTCAST IN ALLEN PARK, MICH.

DEAR "OUTCAST": I'm glad you wrote. When choosing teams for group games, most savvy educators separate students into "odds" and "evens" - or divide them alphabetically rather than using the old man standing" method. That this would happen in a room full of adults shows extreme insensitivity, and I don't blame you for being upset.

DEAR ABBY: My mom recently married a man with daughters whose upbringing was very different than mine. Most of the time the "culture clash" doesn't bother me, except when we get into trouble.

When I stay out after my curfew, I am grounded for two weeks. When they do it, they get a minor scolding. While I understand that we were raised with different standards, I resent it when my punishment is worse than theirs. How can I make ANGRY IN THE WEST DEAR ANGRY: Yours is a problem that occurs in many families when they become blended — and you are right; the situation is unfair. That's why I hope you will show this item to your parents. Family counseling can help them arrive at a fair solution and head off resentments before they explode.

IF JULY 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This month, your head is in the clouds, perhaps because amorous fires are burning brightly or because you are enthralled by some inspiring idea. Take a vacation or get away to some exotic location over the weekend while your ability to enjoy life is at high tide. Singles aren't likely to meet the person of their dreams this month, but you can act out a few of your fantasies. September is a good time to make business or career decisions, or to create a successful strategy. Plan ahead so that you won't need to begin anything of importance November or December when you are temporarily under stressful cosmic weather and you could be criticized for mistakes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't put any more irons into the fire because you will only stir things up. Keep striving to reach the objectives you already have in place. This is not a good time to have a heart-toheart discussion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sympathy for the underdog can undermine your efforts. If you are overly sympathetic and see both sides of a problem, you are less likely to compete successfully in the dog-eat-dog business world.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): There is a tendency to look on the dark side. If you focus on being the soul of will kindness, others respond in kind and you will overcome hidden doubts. Don't dwell on the past; consider the future.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A new relationship begun now could prove disappointing. Pass up an invitation for a date, lunch or even the first cup of coffee together. This could be a good time to follow up with past clients.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work hard to wrap up important business issues early in the day so you have plenty of time to spend with family and friends. Surprise visits or invitations could be in the stars. Avoid major expenditures.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Just because you are on track does not mean you can see which way the train is heading. A romantic mood may make you less discriminating than usual so avoid hooking up with new part-

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you are vague, you will be misunderstood. Don't be so caught up in your own viewpoint that you forget to explain yourself. You may be surprised to find that trusted companions see things differently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If it looks too good to be true, just fill in the expected blanks. Your enthusiasms could be misplaced and your motivations misguided. Be as nice as possible because people might hide their true feelings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid costly mistakes. Abstain from making investments of time, money or emotions under today's celestial conditions. This is not a good time to successfully discuss your feelings or future plans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hold off on making big-ticket purchases or investments. You could find it difficult to come to a meeting of the minds with anyone. Starting new projects or hookups could quickly become costly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may feel more appealing romantically or become absorbed by a creative effort. An existing hookup could vibrate with greater harmony, but you must be careful not to tread on tender toes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Perform a balancing act. Don't take sides in disputes or get involved in discussions that may leave someone with hurt feelings. Your intuitions could be off base so when in doubt ask for clarification.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
