Trevino awaits extradition to Idaho

By Bradley Guire
 Times-News writer

Accused gunman Thomas Trevino Jr. remains jailed in Colorado Thursday as his eventual extradition to Idaho is ironed out.

Trevino, 30, who allegedly shot 24-year-old Jill Gelever Monday at the Comfort Inn & Suites in Twin Falls, made his first appearance in 21st District Court in Mesa County Thursday afternoon. District Attorney Pete Hautzinger said that Trevino was made aware of his rights regarding extradition and that a public defender was appointed.

Trevino's next hearing is set for 8 a.m. July 15, when he may file to either waive extradition or fight it.

"I would say 95 out of 100 waive," Hautzinger said. "But we won't know until Thursday."

If Trevino chooses to fight extradition, it would involve a lengthy process which would include warrants signed by Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and Colorado Gov. Bill Ritter, according to Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb.

"It could take a long time," Loeb added.

Once extradition is completed, the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office is responsible for retrieving Trevino from Mesa

Medicaid providers condemn Idaho's switch to new system

By Laura Lundquist
 Times-News writer

Some south-central Idaho health care providers say their finances have been left in lurch by the state's switch to a new Medicaid claim processing system.

Molina Medicaid Services took over the reimbursement system as Idaho's contracted vendor on June 7, just as the state was enacting a three-week delay in Medicaid payments to allow the Department of Health and Welfare to balance its budget at the close of the fiscal year.

Many providers expected to be paid for their back claims at the close of the three-week period, but department spokeswoman Emily Simnitt says the switch created a bit of a backlog. The problem was compounded by some providers who missed the deadline to sign up for the new system.

With the benefit of 30 years' experience, owner Kurt Hefner said Kurt's Pharmacy in Twin Falls has weathered the delay fairly well. The pharmacy does between $15,000 and $30,000 worth of business a week, but had to wait six weeks to receive its Medicaid reimbursement. Hefner went through a similar delay last year, but said this year was a harder hit.

A summer of learning

CSI summer refugee school expands in second year

By Ben Botkin
 Times-News writer

Two parallel scenes unfolded on Thursday, both with the same purpose.

Refugee children made a visit to the library at the College of Southern Idaho, where they got an introduction to computers. A group of younger refugee children learned about animals, colored pictures and sang songs at Lighthouse Christian School.

Now in its second year, a summer school program for children who enter Twin Falls from overseas via the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center has grown into a program with a larger-than-anticipated following both in enrollment and support of community volunteers.

The school aims to help refugee children become prepared for school in the fall with an early introduction to American youngsters, customs, food and English. With the program, refugee children who arrive in Twin Falls in May, for example, don't have to wait months until the start of the school year to get acquainted with education in their new country.

Judy Snider of Twin Falls, a retired teacher, saw the need for a summer program a couple years ago, after working with a refugee family. The program, which meets twice weekly, has an enrollment of almost 60 children this year.

"The overall goal is to increase the kids' vocabulary and basic knowledge," she said. "We're not teaching them to read and we're not teaching them math skills. Our main focus is fun and learning vocabulary and just the day-to-day things."

Snider, who began the program with teacher Nancy Murphy, stressed that the dozens of volunteers and community support are key to the program's success. Volunteers range in age from children aiding their peers from other countries to seasoned citizens. Lighthouse Christian School provides space in its building and bus service.

One difference this year: programs are tailored for children based on their age. For students in middle school and high school, classes are aimed at teaching social skills, computer literacy and college preparedness.

On Thursday, older students headed to CSI to learn about computers. Edit

BLM working toward wild horse and burro reform

By Laura Lundquist
 Times-News writer

At a time when government agencies are cutting back programs for people to save money, programs for other species fall under more scrutiny. The Wild Horse and Burro Program is no exception, so the Bureau of Land Management is requesting public input on a long-term plan for managing two symbols of the West.

When Congress passed a 1971 bill to protect wild horses and burros, 17,000 horses roamed 10 Western states. But now, the number of free-roaming horses has more than doubled, and that number is matched by those kept on long-term holding pastures.

"Because adoption rates have dropped and horse births have increased, the program has an unsustainable demand," said Heather Tiel-Nelson of the BLM's Twin Falls district office.

The U.S. Government Accountability Office reported that the 2009 costs of almost $30 million to care for unadopted horses accounted for more than two-thirds of the program's budget. That leaves less money to care for free-roaming horses.

Much of the public is opposed to killing horses or selling them without limitation, meaning the horses could subsequently go to slaughter. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar rejected those options. The BLM is now asking the public for help in finding other solutions.

"Emotions run very high on this," Tiel-Nelson said. "But there's definitely a need to examine how we manage the herds."

Plan proposals include options for managing the populations, including using birth control and sex ratios, varying levels of veterinary care and ways to increase forage. The BLM is accepting comments on the

NEW YORK — In the biggest spy swap since the Cold War, 10 confessed Russian agents who infiltrated suburban America were ordered to be deported Thursday in exchange for four people convicted of betraying Moscow to the West.

The 10 defendants, many speaking in heavy Russian accents despite having spent years posing as U.S. citizens, pleaded guilty to conspiracy in a Manhattan courtroom, were sentenced to time served and ordered out of the country. U.S. and Russian officials said they would be exchanged for four Russian citizens convicted of spying for the West.

The other famous writer from Gooding County worth a second look

Everybody in these parts knows about Vardis Fisher, the rough-hewn Idaho writer who built a life and a legend in Hagerman.

But nobody much remembers Glenn Balch.

That's a shame. Balch, an Idaho Statesman reporter based in Gooding from 1925-30, wrote children's stories about the West with a style few could match.

Yet his work has long been out of print, or was until a small Boise company, Limberlost Press, republished Balch's 1949 novel "Christmas Horse" — set in Owyhee County — this year. Balch grew up in Venus, Texas (population 300) dreaming of being a cowboy. He went off to North Texas State Normal College at age 16, working summers on west Texas ranches and eventually graduating from Baylor University.

At 21, he abandoned Texas and moved to Idaho to become a Forest Service fire guard in Garden Valley. At the end of the summer fire season, Balch rode a horse to Boise and applied for a job as a newspaper reporter. The Statesman hired him as its southern Idaho roving reporter based in Gooding. For five years he traveled the state, combining hunting and fishing expeditions with his newspaper work.

Eventually Balch moved to Boise and worked on the paper's copy desk, but quit in 1931 to devote his time to writing — and polo.

Yep, polo. The Sport of Sultans was remarkably popular in Idaho, drawing large crowds in the 1920s and '30s.

"It seemed easy enough," Balch recalled in a short biographical sketch issued by his publisher many years later. During the first week of his newly acquired freedom, he managed an article a day. But rejections were more frequent than acceptances, and he was often forced to turn to publicity and advertising work for money with which to eat — and buy polo bits and mallets.

Eventually The American Boy magazine bought one of his stories, "Hide-rack," about a collie in Idaho's Salmon River country. Readers liked it, so Balch got to write more than a dozen sequels for the magazine. Soon, Field & Stream magazine was using his work.

During a stint at Columbia University in New York City in 1937, Balch sold a novel, "Riders of the Rio Grande," to Thomas Y. Crowell publishing company. Several more successful books followed, after after a hitch in the Army during World War II, Balch returned to Boise and wrote novels about the West for four decades. He died in a car wreck in 1989 at the age of 86.

"Christmas Horse" and another of Balch's books, "Wild Horse Tamer," were republished for the Idaho Centennial in 1990, but they've gradually disappeared from library shelves in the years since.

Yet the Twin Falls Public Library still has a wide selection of Balch's books and the Jerome, Burley, Rupert and Ketchum libraries each have a few titles. For a copy of "Christmas Horse," contact Limberlost Press, 344-2120 or editors@limberlostpress.com.

Kids fish for fun at Jerome library

By Amy Huddleston
Times News writer

JEROME — When David Rothweiler woke up on Thursday he looked at his mom with big, expectant eyes and said, "Is today fishin' day?"

The 3-year-old donned his orange fishing hat to cover his ears from the sun and borrowed his little brother's green sunglasses. He even brought his own fishing pole to the Jerome Public Library, just in case he needed it. His father goes fly fishing so Rothweiler already knew the basics.

But for many of the estimated 200 kids at the library, Thursday was the first time they had the opportunity to catch a fish.

The weekly "Make a Splash-READ!" summer reading program put on its biggest event of the summer on Thursday. The library staff teamed up with Jerome's waterworks department to make the river day memorable by bringing in large tanks of fish for the older children to try their fishing skills. The College of Southern Idaho aquaculture program donated trout for the youth to catch and take home for dinner.

Doug Megargle, Idaho Fish and Game regional fishery manager, brought fishing poles for the event, along with an Idaho Fish and Game boat for the children to explore. He gave a short presentation on what lives in rivers and why fish are so important.

"Our goal is to get kids out and try fishing just to get them exposed," Megargle said. "We are trying to bring back and maintain the fishing tradition in Idaho."

Darbie Chocker, the library's children's program director, plans all of the summer reading program events, which typically host 150 children each week. She said Thursday was the biggest one of the summer.

"This is a lot of kids' first time seeing fish up close," she said. "Jerome waterworks was so helpful in providing this opportunity for the kids."

Rothweiler left his fishing pole in the car and opted to use one of the provided poles. He tried his hand at catching one of the trout with a couple small pieces of corn on the end of his hook. None of the children seemed to be having much luck. After a few minutes of dangling the line in one of the four tanks, he decided, "they weren't listening."

Amy Rothweiler, David's mother, said they attend the reading program every week and were especially looking forward to the river day. "It's an awesome program," she said. "I'm a working mom so it's nice to have age-appropriate activities in the summer to go to."

County. For now, Sheriff Tom Carter must await a formal extradition order "before I can go get him," he said.

Carol Bloxham, Gelever's mother, said that her daughter is "not doing well" when reached via phone Thursday afternoon, and declined to comment further on Gelever's condition.

Members of Trevino's family expressed their empathy for Gelever while asking the public to not pass judgment on Trevino before all the details are out.

proposed strategy until Aug. 3.

Managing wild-horse herds can be challenging, particularly in states like Nevada where good habitat is less available and horses have been shot by the public. But the six herd-management areas in Idaho are better off.

Krystle Pehrson, wild horse and burro specialist assigned to the Saylor Creek herd, said her office is lucky because its area has plenty of space and forage for its 180 horses. Caring for the horses presents few difficulties, unless they're threatened by wildfire as they were in 2005.

"They're looking at a lot of things at the national level, but I don't have a feel for where those are going to fall," Pehrson said.

In Idaho, two species programs may be overlapping. The last time horses were rounded up in the Challis management area, workers noticed scratches and bite marks that may have come from wolves. Wild horses haven't had any predators to keep their populations in check, but wolves may be one answer. The BLM has discussed partnering with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game to determine if wolves are pursuing wild horses.

"But right now it's all just speculation," Tiel-Nelson said.

AMC's "Mad Men" has won Emmys for the past two years for Outstanding Drama. On the series, Hendricks plays Joan Holloway, the office manager for a Madison Avenue advertising firm in the early 1960s.

Hendricks, who was born in Knoxville, Tenn., lived in Twin Falls from 1983-89. After Hendricks completed the eighth grade, her family moved to Fairfax, Va.

Seeking connection: Jerome deputy fire chief seeks more involvement

By Amy Huddleston
Times News writer

JEROME — Ladies and gentlemen of Jerome, Frank Wilson is at your service.

Jerome's new deputy fire chief starts his self-described role of acting as glue between the firefighters, the City Council and the community on Monday. He is passionate about his new job and his family and wants citizens to feel comfortable approaching him in the grocery store.

Wilson, 41, and his family — wife, Melia and sons Cameron, 15, and Tyler, 13 — moved from Silverdale, Wash. last week and plan to stay in the Magic Valley for a long time, he said.

"I am very humbled by this opportunity," Wilson said. "The Jerome firefighters are extremely well motivated and extremely passionate about the job. When I met them, I thought 'Wow! They're on fire!'"

Wilson spent eight years in the Navy serving as an electronics technician. While serving in South Carolina, he helped out with a co-worker's injury on a submarine. One of his superiors suggested he take an emergency medical technician training course, a decision that led Wilson to volunteer as a firefighter. He started as a volunteer in 1988 in Summerville, S.C. and met his wife — a fellow volunteer — when he moved to Washington.

The three things Wilson said he brings to Jerome are his passion for training, his critical view of safety and the ability to recognize that firefighting has to be a team concept.

"This first year is about demonstrating the ability to be trusted," Wilson said. "It's not just about the department. We are in a tough time right now and we need to answer the 'whys' and 'how much' questions to the community."

Wilson is enthusiastic about getting to know members of the community and changing the way people work with the fire department. He recognizes that it won't happen overnight but looks forward to getting firefighters involved in the schools in more tangible ways and eventually creating more of a relationship with other area fire departments so they can share more resources and concerns.

"I want our citizens to come by and ask me questions. I hope I can represent the fire department and the citizens well," Wilson said. Wilson can be reached at fwilson@ci.jerome.id.us.

Medicaid

"I'm not going to say it wasn't a big deal," Hefner said. "But we know we'll get it back eventually."

Hefner said new pharmacies probably had a harder time filling the temporary funding hole. Tim Brown, who has co-owned Wendell Pharmacy for a year, said he reduced orders to prepare for the delay, so some drug supplies ran low. His wholesaler carried his bill until July 1, but then he had to pay $22,000. Around 20 percent of his sales involve Medicaid.

Brown said he's received two Medicaid checks but they only reimbursed a third of his costs. He hasn't received his statement yet so he doesn't know what's been delayed.

"I thought I'd wait a little longer to see if I got the rest," Brown said. "But then I'll start being a squeaky wheel." Other providers find themselves a little closer to the edge.

Phillip Kottraba, director of the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center, said he had yet to receive a check, couldn't get the new Medicaid billing software to work and couldn't get anyone on the phone.

His weekly revenue for the 20 people who receive meals at the center is $7,000, most of which is paid by Medicaid. He said if he doesn't receive a check soon, he'll have to get credit, a suggestion the state made to senior centers.

"We've been carrying the program ourselves," Kottraba said. "We've done our part so the state should do theirs."

Staci Stevens, owner of Twin Falls-based Alliance Family Services, Inc., which deals in psychosocial rehabilitation, said part of the problem was changing billing services at the same time as the funding delay.

"It's the double whammy that's so painful, especially for small businesses" Stevens said.

Stevens filed $60,000 worth of Medicaid claims but received a check for $18,000 on Wednesday. She said she was told a system glitch meant that's all Molina could verify, which then had to cut her a paper check. She said she continues to pay her 25 employees and serve her 94 clients, but contacted her U.S. congressmen about the delay.

"We're all in a budget crisis," Stevens said. "I know the state wants to save money — and the change to Molina is supposed to do that — but sometimes cheaper is not always better."

Simmitt said the first time individuals and providers go through the system, there are some extra steps and that can make the process take a bit longer.

Any problems should be resolved in the next couple of weeks, she said.

"We haven't seen any major problems with the new system, but there are a few issues that are being worked through right now, and hopefully will be addressed as everyone gets used to operating with a new system," Simmitt said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Spies

Washington and Moscow to repair ties chilled by a deepening atmosphere of suspicion.

The 10 U.S. defendants, captured last week in suburban homes across the Northeast, were accused of embedding themselves in ordinary American life for more than a decade while leading double lives complete with false passports, secret code words, fake names, invisible ink and encrypted radio.

One worked for an accounting firm, another was a real-estate agent, another a columnist for a Spanish-language newspaper.

Attorney General Eric Holder said the "extraordinary" case took years of work, "and the agreement we reached today provides a successful resolution for the United States and its interests." White House chief of staff Rahm Emanuel said on PBS' "NewsHour" that President Barack Obama had made the decision to go forward with the arrests.

But whether the defendants provided Russia with valuable secret information is questionable.

"None of the people involved from my understanding provided any information that couldn't be obtained on the Internet," Chapman's attorney, Robert Baum, told the Associated Press.

In Russia, the Kremlin said President Dmitry Medvedev signed a decree pardoning four convicted foreign spies so they can be exchanged for the 10 U.S. defendants.

The Kremlin statement carried by the Russian news agencies says that Medvedev has pardoned Russian citizens Alexander Zaporozhsky, Gennady Vasilenko, Sergei Skripal and Igor Sutyagin.

Sutyagin, an arms analyst, was reportedly plucked from a Moscow prison and put on a plane to Vienna. Skripal is a former colonel in the Russian military intelligence, and Zaporozhsky is a former colonel in the Russian Foreign Intelligence Service.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Heyburn off-ramp closed Saturday through Monday

The eastbound Interstate 84 off-ramp to Heyburn will be closed Saturday through Monday as crews continue road rehabilitation work in the area, according to a Thursday Idaho Department of Transportation release.

Crews will complete bridge deck rehabilitation at the interchange, Exit 211, and the exit will be closed from about 4 a.m. Saturday through 5 a.m. Monday. The exit is the primary eastbound access to Heyburn, Rupert and eastern Burley. Eastbound traffic will be required to access the area from the nearby Burley or Declo exits, Exits 207 and 216, respectively.

Knife River Corporation Northwest of Boise is the contractor for the section between the Burley and Declo interchanges at a cost of $12.8 million. Drivers are reminded to yield to through traffic while entering I-84 and use caution to avoid existing potholing and rutting. The speed limit has been reduced to 45 miles per hour through the construction zone.

ITD seeks comment on improvement plan

The Idaho Transportation Department has made available its Statewide Transportation Improvement Program for fiscal years 2011-2014 for public review and comment, according to a Thursday ITD release.

The document identifies approximately $2 billion in transportation-related projects planned for construction through 2014. The document includes various projects, as well as continued authorizations of the GARVEE Transportation Program as approved by the Legislature.

The document can be viewed at www.itd.idaho.gov. Locally, it may also be viewed at the ITD office at 216 S. Date St., Shoshone.

Public comment on the STIP will be accepted through Aug. 6.

Individuals without Internet access may also contact ITD's Division of Transportation Planning for a copy of the plan by calling 332-7823, e-mailing mark.mcneese@itd.idaho.gov, or write P.O. Box 7129, Boise, ID 83707-1129.

Spy swap

Cold War rerun, but with a difference

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The spy exchange unfolding in Moscow, New York and points between evokes a bygone era when cold war teetered on the verge of hot, superpowers sniffed out each other's deadliest secrets, and the swaps even had a ringmaster in a dapper German communist.

A Russian freed in a 1976 exchange expressed surprise Thursday at the Cold War rerun. Trading prisoners should be a thing of the past, said Vladimir Bukovsky.

"It's a bit sad that everything in the world seems to end up like a blind donkey going around in circles," the 67-year-old former Soviet dissident told The Associated Press in London.

But the parallels go only so far. Espionage's new wave doesn't quite measure up to the old.

Where the Kremlin's daring agents of earlier generations ferreted out atomic bomb blueprints and infiltrated NATO planning councils, the hapless 10 of 2010 are accused of foraging for White House "kitchen rumors" and U.S. policy chatter.

And where the current swap candidates are obscure U.S. suburbanites and ineffectual operatives, the trades of that earlier time involved notorious spymasters and celebrated political prisoners.

In the last of those headline-making swaps, in a divided Berlin on a gray Tuesday in February 24 years ago, one of the Soviet Union's best-known dissidents, Anatoly Shcharansky, emerged from nine years' imprisonment to walk across the snow-covered Glienicke Bridge to freedom — and eventually, as Natan Sharansky, to a life as an Israeli politician.

The human rights activist was part of a trade also involving five alleged Soviet-bloc spies and three Pilot Gary Powers stands in front of a U-2 photo reconnaissance plane. Powers and Rudolf Ivanovich Abel were released from their prison terms for espionage and were exchanged secretly at the border between West Berlin and East Germany on Feb. 10, 1962.

Westerners held in the East. During the 45-minute exchange on the green steel bridge over the Havel River, separating West Berlin from East Germany, a balding, bespectacled man in a stylish suit and a white Mercedes drove up from the eastern side and met with the prisoners.

That affluent intermediary was the late Wolfgang Vogel, a lawyer from communist East Germany who over three decades was instrumental in brokering both spy swaps and the large-scale exit of ordinary people from East Germany, in exchange for West German government payments.

Twenty-four years earlier, in 1962, Vogel had engineered an even more spectacular — and secret — swap on the same bridge: The exchange of U.S. spy-plane pilot Francis Gary Powers, shot down over the heart of the Soviet Union, for a Soviet spy known as Rudolf Abel, who for more than a decade posed as a New York artist while running an undercover ring of spies who passed on U.S. atom-bomb secrets.

Over the years, Vogel was the go-between for the exchange of more than 150 spies and alleged spies. In 1985, the year before Shcharansky's release, he negotiated a mass swap of 23 alleged spies held by his own government for four East German agents convicted in the U.S.

Through the decades of Cold War, through the ups and downs of detente and crisis, such prisoner exchanges became almost routine.

In 1964, at West Berlin's Heerstrasse crossing to East Germany, British businessman Greville Maynard Wynne, who was at the heart of a sensational Moscow spy case, was exchanged for Konon Trofimovich Molody, whose spy ring had collected data on British submarines. Wynne was the conduit for Oleg Penkovsky, a key Russian agent for Britain's MI6 who later was executed.

When Bukovsky was released in 1976 and flown in handcuffs to Switzerland, it was in exchange for Chilean communist leader Luis Corvalan, imprisoned by dictator Gen. Augusto Pinochet after Chile's right-wing military coup of 1973.

In 1981, in another Vogel-engineered deal, West Germany released convicted East German spy Guenter Guillaume in exchange for eight captured West German, American and British spies.

The lopsided nature of that trade pointed up Guillaume's importance: As a top aide to West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, he had purloined documents relating to the NATO alliance's nuclear strategy. Brandt resigned because of the scandal.

The collapse two decades ago of the Berlin Wall, the Soviet Union and the entire Cold War ushered in a time of East-West unity in Europe, friendlier U.S.-Russian ties and, until now, a scarcity of old-fashioned spy swaps. But although swaps are fewer, the spying goes on — to obtain confidential information about diplomatic moves, trade negotiations, advanced technology and other economic and political areas, as well as the traditional defense intelligence.

Soon after the Soviet Union disintegrated, the newly branded Russian Intelligence Service established an economic intelligence unit to study U.S. economic policy via publicly available databases and "traditional intelligence methods" — that is, spies.

"Everybody steals everybody's secrets," spokesman Yuri Kobaladze told the AP at the time. "There are friendly states, but not friendly intelligence services."

Norway arrests linked to U.S., British plots

OSLO (AP) — Three suspected al-Qaida members were arrested Thursday in a Norwegian bomb plot linked to the same terrorist planners behind thwarted schemes to blow up New York's subway and a British shopping mall.

The alleged Norwegian plot, underscoring changing al-Qaida tactics in the decade since the 9/11 attacks, was said to involve powerful peroxide bombs similar to ones aimed for detonation in New York and Manchester, England.

All three plans were organized by Saleh al-Somali, al-Qaida's former chief of external operations, who had been in charge of plotting attacks worldwide, Norwegian and U.S. officials believe. Al-Somali was killed in a CIA drone airstrike last year, but officials say the three plots had already been set in motion by the time of his death.

Thursday's arrests suggested how decentralized and nimble al-Qaida has become since the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks in the United States.

The terror group has recently focused on smaller-level attacks that don't require the intricate planning that it took to hijack airplanes and fly them into buildings in New York and Washington.

Last year, when the FBI and CIA thwarted the suicide attack in the New York subway, officials called it the most dangerous plot since 9/11. And in the past two days, revelations about the related plots in England and now in Norway have illustrated the terror group's multi-country scope.

Faster oil leak fix? Allen doubts it

By Mark Seibel
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration's point man on BP's Gulf of Mexico oil disaster on Thursday dumped cold water on suggestions that BP might be able to plug the well in time for its July 27 announcement of second quarter earnings.

Speaking by conference call to reporters from Theodore, Ala., Allen said he thinks that a mid-August date is still the most realistic for a relief well to have intercepted the runaway well and killed it by filling it with heavy drilling mud and concrete.

"I've been around these folks for long enough to know that you need to under-promise and over-deliver," Allen said.

The idea that BP might be able to intercept the well earlier than August was the topic of a Wall Street Journal story Thursday that said company officials are pushing to have the relief well completed by July 27 "in a bid to show investors it has capped its ballooning liabilities." The article also said that the London-based BP was hopeful to have shown progress on the kill by July 20, when British Prime Minister David Cameron is scheduled to visit the White House.

Allen, however, said that while the first of two relief wells is a week ahead of schedule and only a few hundred feet from its intended target more than three miles below the surface of the Gulf of Mexico, the final steps in the process are complicated ones. Much can go wrong.

The relief well reached a critical stage June 23, when technicians began using specialized electronic tools to try to locate the steel pipes of the runaway Deepwater Horizon well. Since then, they have run at least seven such "ranging" tests to home in on the well and are now drilling, Allen said, in 15-foot segments. After each such segment, technicians conduct another ranging test.

Those tests, however, are inexperienced guides for the drill — enough so that Allen has said in previous briefings that BP is keeping thousands of barrels of heavy drilling mud on hand in case drillers "nick" the well prematurely.

The progress is excruciatingly slow. BP announced earlier in the week that the relief well reached a measured depth of 17,725 feet from the Gulf surface on Sunday, and Allen on Thursday gave the depth as 17,780 feet — meaning the well had been extended 55 feet in four days.

Allen said there were still several hundred feet vertically to go — and seven to 10 days of drilling — before technicians would be in a position to turn the drill bit horizontally and head directly for the well bore, which at that point may be just 15 feet away.

What happens then is unknown, Allen said, in large part because engineers do not know the condition of the wellbore and whether oil is flowing between the rock of the seabed and the pipe of the well in an area known as the annulus.

NM police say dad taught son, 6, to make bombs

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Police in New Mexico say a father taught his 6-year-old son how to build explosives, and had threatened to kill the child's mother.

Authorities arrested 44-year-old Anthony Stromberg on Thursday on one count of child abuse. He remained jailed in Las Cruces under $150,000 bond.

Detectives say he gave his son detailed lessons and that the child accompanied his father to blow up explosives several times.

They also allege Stromberg told the boy he was going to kidnap the child's mother and shoot her. The parents do not live together but share custody of the boy.

CIEDRA: Is Risch on board or not?

So does U.S. Sen. Jim Risch still support his colleague Rep. Mike Simpson's Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act bill?

Risch remains a co-sponsor of the legislation that would preserve 332,775 acres as wilderness in Custer and Blaine counties, but the Idaho Statesman reported this week that the first-term Idaho Republican has backed off his support for CIEDRA.

That support is critical if Simpson's epic 10-year-long effort at a central Idaho wilderness compromise is to become law.

It's tempting to conclude that Risch is being spooked by the recent Idaho State Republican Convention, which voted to oppose CIEDRA, and by the continued opposition of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

But the senator had months to consider the pros and cons of this legislation before he signed his name to it.

CIEDRA has been analyzed and parsed and brokered within an inch of its life. It's time the bill was passed.

Simpson made significant compromises in this version of the legislation. Off-road enthusiasts would retain access to a key recreation area, the Germania Creek trail, and restrictions on thousands of additional acres would be relaxed.

What's puzzling in Risch's case is that he understands how compromises of this magnitude happen. During his seven-month stint as governor in 2006, Risch presided over negotiations that resulted in the Idaho Roadless Rule, superseding a Clinton Administration moratorium on most logging and mining in millions of acres of rugged back-country sections of national forests.

With the support of hunters, fishermen and some environmental groups, in 2008 Idaho and the Bush administration agreed on regulatory safeguards for 9.3 million acres that had been designated as roadless areas by the Clinton Administration — and thus free of commercial activity.

The deal left 3.3 million acres of the total roadless. About 5.6 million acres enjoy similar protections, though exceptions can be made for logging in areas where fires could put communities at risk. An additional 400,000 acres is open to all development.

At this point in Risch's 40-year political career, the Roadless Rules is unquestionably the senator's biggest achievement.

It may turn out that Risch's 11th-hour reservations about CIEDRA will produce a compromise allowing the legislation to get through the Senate. We hope so.

But time is running out.

Our view: If any Idaho politician can understand what it takes to cut a public lands compromise, it ought to be Jim Risch.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

The right stuff goes wrong

Silly me. I thought America's unparalleled space program (before the present administration began dismantling it) was a triumph of American ingenuity, technology, vision and boldness. Instead, NASA Administrator Charles Bolden says its "foremost mission" is not returning to the moon, or completing a mission to Mars; rather it is improving relations with the Muslim world. Bolden says President Obama told him he also wants NASA to encourage children to study science and math, but isn't that best done by applying science and math to a robust space program?

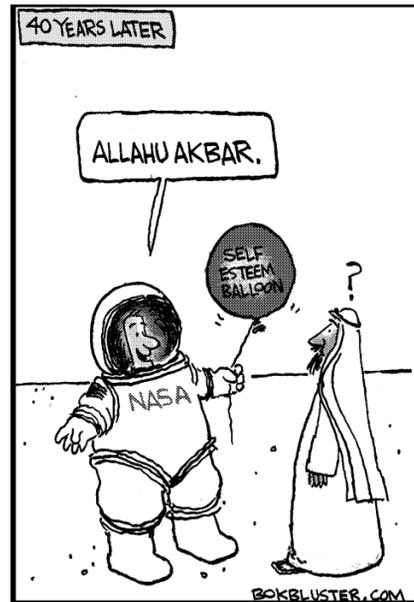

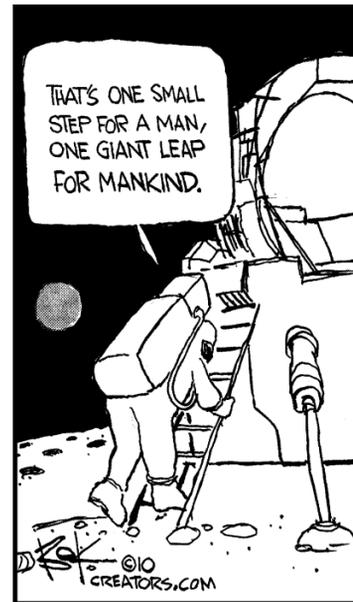

Cal Thomas

Obama is boldly going where no president has gone before. It is a continuation of the president's subjugation of himself (bowing to foreign leaders) and the country he is charged with leading by obsequiously kowtowing to a people for whom advancement to the Middle Ages would be a step up.

The president and Bolden think it will improve relations with the Muslim world if we praise them for their work in math and science many centuries ago, but what has the Muslim world done for humanity lately? Female genital mutilation? Beheadings? Stoning of alleged adulterers? Honor killings? Terrorism? Death sentences to religious converts?

Yes, Benito Mussolini was said to have made the trains run on time, so maybe previous presidents should have praised his timetable and overlooked the torture, the censorship, the holding of women and children hostage and the police state.

I'm sure if we searched long enough, we might discover a good character quality or two in Mao Zedong, a world-class mass murderer. But let's not forget China invented the compass and woodblock printing. What are a few human rights violations compared to these positive contributions?

Perhaps if President Roosevelt had looked for some good in Adolf Hitler, World War II might have been avoided. Maybe it was our fault that Pearl Harbor was bombed. We should have appreciated the Japanese contribution to America (The cherry tree? Sushi?).

What is it about this president of ours? He doesn't seem to love America, at least not the America we knew prior to his coming to office. He pledged to change the country, but growing numbers think what we have is better than what he wants. Despite its past and current problems, most Americans are justifiably proud of their country and what it has stood for over the last 234 years. Regrets? Sure, we've had a few, but then again too few to mention compared to the blessings we have received and the blessing we have been to much of the world.

On April 3, 2009, President Obama addressed an adoring crowd in Strasbourg, France. He told them the United States "has failed to appreciate Europe's leading role in the world" and that America had "shown arrogance and been dismissive, even derisive" toward its allies.

Actually, it has been the other way around. America bailed out Europe twice in the last century because it elevated evil men to leadership and they started wars that engulfed the world. And America protected European economies by paying for a nuclear umbrella that pro-ted the continent from the Soviet Union, thus allowing those who refused to pay a price or bear a burden to concentrate on their economies and self-indulgent pleasures.

If America is all that Obama makes it out to be, why do we have such an illegal immigration problem? You'd think these people would prefer Europe, or Iraq, which have contributed so much to our space program.

If NASA's "foremost mission" is no longer space, but a group-hug to Muslim nations, perhaps Congress should be asked to authorize such a change in purpose and reduce NASA's budget. Do most taxpayers want NASA to focus on inner space, rather than outer space? I doubt it. They can render their verdict on this and many other Obama policies come the November election.

Playing games with our economic future

WASHINGTON — On June 30, the Congressional Budget Office issued its long-term outlook, predicting that deficits would come down for the next few years as the need for counter-recession spending eases and revenues improve. But then, it warned, "unsustainable" red ink would flow again, creating debts not seen since World War II.

The very next day the House of Representatives passed a one-year budget resolution rather than the normal blueprint committing the government to a fiscal plan of at least five years.

For all the publicity that goes to earmarks and other spending gimmicks, this was a far worst dereliction of duty. And the cynicism of the maneuver just made it worse.

One of the casualties of this maneuver is the partnership that has developed between Kent Conrad of North Dakota, the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, and Judd Gregg of New Hampshire, its ranking Republican. In January, they were co-sponsors of the legislation to create a National Commission on Fiscal Responsibility and Reform, whose recommendations for closing the budget gap would be guaranteed an up or down vote in Congress.

The commission legislation was defeated when seven Republican senators who had initially co-sponsored it defected on the roll call. At that point, President Obama stepped in and rescued the idea, creating the commission by executive order.

Now, in a stunning reversal, the Democrats are using the existence of the commission to justify their abandonment of their long-term budget responsibilities. Speaker Nancy Pelosi brazenly hailed the one-year substitute as "another key step ... in restoring fiscal responsibility." Rep. John Spratt of South Carolina, the House budget committee chairman, more modestly termed it "the functional equivalent of a traditional budget resolution."

"These are disciplines for the short run," Spratt said, "while the fiscal commission works out recommendations for the longer run."

The Republicans, who had been rightly roasted for abandoning Conrad and Gregg on the vote to create the commission, were not about to let the Democrats pull off this bait and switch. Paul Ryan of Wisconsin, the top Republican on Spratt's committee, said in a statement: "This is not a budget. The measure fails to meet the most basic, commonly understood objectives of any budget. It does not set congressional priorities; it does not align overall spending, tax, deficit and debt levels; and it does nothing to address the runaway spending of federal entitlement programs."

When I reached Gregg by phone, he said the commission — on which both he and Ryan serve, and to which the Democrats were ostensibly deferring — "remains a hope-and-prayer exercise." Its work has barely begun and it is not due to report until December.

Gregg speculated that the reason the Democrats did not pass a real budget resolution is because "they do not want to let the American people see how bad the five-year numbers really are."

My next call was to Conrad, and I felt nothing but pity for him. He had actually passed a credible five-year budget through his committee, but deferred to the leadership and did not call it up for a floor vote. Now, he said, with the House's action, "it makes no sense. There's nothing for it to link up to."

The terrible irony in all this? More and more people are seeing that what this agonizing situation requires is a limited and temporary measure to pump more life into the economy and create jobs, along with a serious commitment to impose real spending discipline and hold down deficits in the long term — exactly what a five-year budget resolution could provide.

Gregg and Conrad agree that such a resolution could "unleash huge energy back into the economy," because corporations are hoarding $1.8 trillion in their treasuries and consumers are sitting on billions more.

Of all the times for Congress to abandon its responsibility for long-term fiscal planning, this is the worst.

Let the Treasury Dept. rescue the states

Here in California, where people tiresomely boast that the state's gross domestic product exceeds that of all but seven nations, I keep expecting a ballot initiative demanding admission to the Group of 8 industrialized nations. I'd consider voting for it, too; then maybe Washington would work as hard to synchronize its economic policy with Sacramento as it does with Tokyo and Bonn. The lack of coordination within the United States — and, equally important, the failure to recognize the states as macroeconomic players — helps explain our sluggish recovery.

To make matters worse, several states have country-sized GDP's, but none has the macroeconomic tools of an independent country. Every state except Vermont has some sort of balanced budget requirement that prevents it from weathering a recession by running up big deficits to keep teachers employed, students in college, welfare payments flowing and construction humming. Nor can New York and California stimulate their economies by, say, printing more currency. Instead, states are managing huge budget crises with the only tools they have, cutting spending and raising taxes — both of which undermine the federal stimulus.

That's why the best booster shot for this recovery and the next would be to allow states to borrow from the Treasury during recessions. We did this for Wall Street and Detroit, fending off disaster. It's even more important for states.

Here's how this would work. States already receive regular federal matching grants to help pay for Medicaid, welfare, highway construction programs and more. For instance, the federal government pays a share of state Medicaid costs, from 50 percent to more than 75 percent, depending on a state's wealth. The matching rates were temporarily sweetened by last year's stimulus.

But Congress should pass legislation that would allow a state to simply get an "advance" on these future federal dollars expected from entitlement programs. The advance could then be used for regional stimulus, to continue state services and to hasten our recovery.

The Treasury Department, which writes the checks to the states, could be assured of repayment (with interest) by simply cutting the federal matching rate by the needed amount over, say, five years. Of course, when Treasury eventually collected what it was owed, the state would have to cut spending or find new revenue sources. But that would happen after the recession, when both tasks would likely prove easier economically and politically.

Christopher Edley Jr.

What would this cost the federal government? Nothing. There would be zero risk of default, and a guarantee of full repayment plus interest equal to what Treasury pays in the bond markets to borrow.

What would this cost the federal government? Nothing. There would be zero risk of default, and a guarantee of full repayment plus interest equal to what Treasury pays in the bond markets to borrow. Congress would need only to appropriate the administrative costs of this program, which would be minimal.

It seems clearer every day that there isn't the political will for another traditional federal stimulus package large enough to be effective in a $14 trillion economy. This proposal, however, would merely shift the timing of federal payments to states to help offset economic swings. It would have the additional merit of finally forging the federal-state partnership that has been missing since 1787, when the Constitution created a federal government with sufficient legislative authority to shape a nationwide economy out of separate state economies.

Indeed, our best shot at devising United States economic policy may be to give the states the role of creating and carrying out the economic stimulus we so desperately need.

Is Petraeus Obama's U.S. Grant? Let's hope so

There must be, in the glaring light of an anxious, heat-stinging summer, an image or two from the past appearing in President Obama's White House.

As Abraham Lincoln had an Army of the Potomac that looked inert under Gen. George McClellan, Obama has an economy stalled and troubled, and two wars, one now branded as the nation's longest, its outcome never more uncertain.

Where to advance? Where to retreat? Who to fire? Who to hire? The general of the one conflict, in Afghanistan, has been removed, as was McClellan by an impatient president. But the other campaign, the one to resurrect an economy ruined by debt and unregulated greed, seems intractable.

The country is divided, with no common purpose other than revulsion at things disliked — oil in the ocean, Wall Street in its excess — and, for diversion, a man who storms a hot-dog-eating contest.

What divides us now, blue states and red states, the recovering cities and the never-going-to-rebound cities, is nothing, of course, compared to that 1860s war over America's original sin.

But history always leaves some valuable clues along the roadside. In Afghanistan, the way out has to begin with the general who is now way in, perhaps the only public figure to emerge from the Bush years with his reputation for competence intact. Gen. David H. Petraeus took command over the 4th of July holiday, saying "we are in this to win."

The general's words barely made the mid-sections of the newspapers and back ends of the broadcasts during a news-free period. At the same time, in small type and with few mentions, were the latest to die in that war — Kristopher Chapleau, 101st Airborne, from LaGrange, Ky.; Ryan Grady, 86th Infantry, from Bristow, Okla.; and David Wisniewski, Air Force, from Merville, Iowa.

In case any of us have forgotten, these dead soldiers seem to hail disproportionately from rural and small-town America. Their friends and family might ask Michael Steele, the Republican Party chairman, if they died in "a war of Obama's choosing," as he said. If the Democratic party leader had said such a thing publicly, he would be called a coward, or even a traitor, by the loudest voices in Steele's party.

The more level-headed critics look at Afghanistan, which the United States stormed into nine years ago to root out Al Qaeda, and see something closer to a civil and tribal war. The fragile society we are fighting for has yet to show that it's ready to take control of its destiny. And the most violent elements in that region, the religious nihilists whose aim is to deny human nature and love of music, beauty, pleasure — or even something so simple as allowing a girl to attend school — have fled to a lawless region of Pakistan.

If Petraeus is to become Obama's Ulysses S. Grant, he needs something to fight, something visible and full-dimensional. There is no standing army among the cave-dwelling and night-moving Taliban.

Obama has set a deadline, subject to much debate, to begin withdrawing troops by July of next year. But a mere passing of calendar months cannot do for the people of Afghanistan what they will not do for themselves. A transplant of motivation must take place, something even a highly regarded American general and his army cannot do.

The other big stall, the economic Army of the Potomac, will not respond to deadlines or firing generals. The Republican governing philosophy of a criminal deregulatory environment drove the economy into a ditch. And when they put more than a trillion dollars worth of wars on the credit card, they left future administrations with few options.

The Democratic ideas, guided by a belief that government stimulus would be worth the risk of further running up the deficit, have not sufficiently jolted the sick American economy back to life. For a while, it looked like the Obama injections of federal money were working. As of mid-April, the administration was on a pace to create more jobs in a year than Bush created in eight years. The stock market at that time was up 70 percent over 13 months. Overall tax bills were the lowest in 50 years, according to the nonpartisan Tax Foundation.

But then, just as quickly, the economy lost its loft, and Obama could only point to what he prevented, and meekly ask to stay the course. Even if the stimulus averted another Great Depression, that is a tough sell, for the public will never give a leader credit for preventing something from happening.

Job creation has now slowed to a crawl. At the current pace, it could take 10 years just to replace the jobs lost during the recession, leading credence to the idea that the boom years were all a historic aberration; the new normal is bleak.

Over the last decade, two opposing theories have been put in play, and neither has succeeded. Is there a third way? The stalled economy, kicked by both parties, has to move, on its own force. But how? Obama still hasn't found the source.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Czars lead to dysfunctional gov't

The administration's quest to dismantle our Constitution continues! At last count, there have been approximately 40 czars appointed, which leads to a dysfunctional multi-tiered government which eludes congressional oversight as liberal agendas are pursued.

And as our porous borders continue to be violated, an immigration enforcement czar has been appointed (who would not deal with inner city illegal immigration issues). A strong move will be made by the administration toward granting amnesty to illegal immigrants in order to garner their votes. This is probably the current administration's only hope of staying in power. It is noted that increasing levels of arms and munitions are coming across our border and some of the illegal immigrants are from countries that are dedicated to our destruction.

Mexico and certain South American entities are convenient assembly points. In the absence of federal control of the onslaught of illegal immigrants, Arizona has taken decisive action to protect her sovereignty. Our national parks in the border areas are deemed unsafe and the border patrol is "hamstrung" because environmental rules have not been suspended in order for them to use the needed equipment and resources!

Further, our police for legal immigration is out of touch with reality. We must realize that this republic cannot continue to be the depository for every troubled individual. Doing so will contribute to our demise. Liberal immigration policies have created havoc in France, The Netherlands and England! We will ultimately be so weakened that we will be unable to help anyone (including ourselves)!

Obama authorized 80,000 immigrants this year and now there is a move afoot to extend the duration of immigrant federal financial support. Our current administration has this republic on a steep slippery slope toward certain disaster! To paraphrase Jonathan Swift, our epitaph will read: "Here lies a once proud republic, where the indignities of Obama can no longer lacerate my soul."

Presbyterians split on gay-friendly measures

By Patrick Condon
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Presbyterian leaders have decided not to redefine marriage in their church constitution to include same-sex couples — for now.

The surprise vote to shelve the marriage issue at the Presbyterian general assembly late Thursday passed by a slim margin of 51 percent.

The vote means that the definition of marriage will remain as between a man and a woman for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). But church leaders still could take up the issue today if enough delegates agree.

If not, the matter could be shelved for at least the next two years.

Earlier Thursday, delegates had voted to allow non-celibate gays in committed relationships to serve as clergy. That vote won't become the law of the church unless it's approved by ratification votes of a majority of the 173 U.S. presbyteries.

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is ranked the 10th-largest church in the U.S. with 2.8 million members, according to the National Council of Churches' 2010 "Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches." The church's media materials tout 2.1 million members.

Earlier this week, both proposals were approved by assembly committees. The gay clergy change passed 36-16, and the definition of marriage cleared on a vote of 34-18.

$500K donated to Ariz. to defend law

By Paul Davenport
Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — Retirees and other residents from all over the country were among those who donated nearly $500,000 to help Arizona defend its immigration enforcement law, with most chipping in $100 or less, according to an analysis of documents obtained Thursday by The Associated Press.

The donations, 88 percent of which came through the Arizona defense fund's website, surged this week after the federal government sued Tuesday to challenge the law. A document from Gov. Jan Brewer's office showed that 7,008 of the 9,057 online contributions submitted by Thursday morning were made in the days following the government's filing.

Website contributions came from all 50 states, plus the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, including nearly 2,000 from Arizona. Donations ranged from $5 to $2,000, with the vast majority between $10 and $100.

The AP examined about a quarter of the fund's total contributions, and found only two that came from businesses.

The willingness of thousands of individual Americans to contribute to the Arizona fund illustrates broad concern and frustration over border security and illegal immigration. The state's legislation has since renewed calls for broader immigration changes.

The Arizona law includes a requirement that police enforcing another law generally must investigate the immigration status of people if there is "reasonable suspicion" to believe the people are in the United States illegally.

Brewer and other supporters say the law will prompt illegal immigrants to leave the state and that state action was required by a failure of the federal government to secure the border.

Opponents say the law will promote racial profiling and is unconstitutional because regulating immigration is reserved for the federal government.

Donors contacted by the AP said they contributed because the federal government should be helping Arizona, not taking the state to court.

"Arizona needs our help," said Mary Ann Rohde, a retired municipal worker who lives in Rialto, Calif., who donated $20 with her husband. "It's a disgrace what our government is doing."

Howard E. Sanner, of Houston, said Arizona's approval of its law should help prod the federal government to act on border security to help prevent criminals and terrorists from entering the country illegally.

Agreements with anaerobic digester projects OK'd

Idaho Power will buy power from three Magic Valley sources

Times-News

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission approved Idaho Power Company's requests to buy power from developers of three Magic Valley anaerobic digester power projects.

The 15-year contracts are all with a Middleton-based developer. Two of the projects are in Twin Falls County, including the 4-megawatt Rock Creek Dairy project near Filer and the 2-megawatt Swager Farms Dairy project near Buhl. The third contract will be with the 2-megawatt Double B Dairy project near Murtaugh in Cassia County.

The projects are qualifying facilities under the provisions of PURPA, the federal Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978. PURPA requires electric utilities to buy power produced by small power producers or cogenerators.

The rate paid to PURPA project developers, called an "avoided cost rate," is equal to the cost the electric utility avoids if it would have had to generate the power itself or purchase it from another source.

During the first year, Idaho Power will pay the developer of each project $75.65 per megawatt hour. The rate gradually increases over the 15 years of the contracts to $128.31 per MWh. That rate is adjusted for heavy- and light-load seasons as well as heavy- and light-load hours.

The Rock Creek Dairy project intends to deliver 1,296 megawatt hours per month, while the Swager Farms and Double B project are anticipating an output of 648 MWh per month. The combined output will be able to power 2.6 million homes for one hour.

Anaerobic digestion produces methane gas from cow manure, otherwise known as biogas. The gas is then burned through turbines, generating electrical energy.

Firms brace for end of era as labor costs climb

By Elaine Kurtenbach
Associated Press writer

SHANGHAI, China — Factory workers demanding better wages and working conditions are hastening the eventual end of an era of cheap costs that helped make southern coastal China the world's factory floor.

A series of strikes over the past two months have been a rude wakeup call for the many foreign companies that depend on China's low costs to compete overseas, from makers of Christmas trees to manufacturers of gadgets like the iPad.

Where once low-tech factories and scant wages were welcomed in a China eager to escape isolation and poverty, workers are now demanding a bigger share of the profits. The government, meanwhile, is pushing for foreign companies to make investments in areas it believes will create greater wealth for China, like high technology.

Many companies are striving to stay profitable by shifting factories to cheaper areas farther inland or to other developing countries, and a few are even resuming production in the West.

"China is going to go through a very dramatic period. The big companies are starting to exit. We all see the writing on the wall," said Rick Goodwin, a China trade veteran of 22 years, whose company links foreign buyers with Chinese suppliers.

"I have 15 major clients. My job is to give the best advice I can give. I tell it like it is. I tell them, put your helmet on, it's going to get ugly," said Goodwin, who says dissatisfied workers and hard-to-predict exchange rates are his top worries.

Beijing's decision to stop tethering the Chinese currency to the U.S. dollar, allowing it to appreciate and thus boosting costs in yuan, has multiplied the uncertainty for companies already struggling with meager profit margins.

In an about-face mocked on "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart," Wham-O, the company that created the Hula-Hoop and Slip 'n Slide, decided to bring half of its Frisbee production and some production of its other products back to the U.S. Some in research-intensive sectors such as pharmaceutical, biotech and other life sciences companies are also returning to the U.S.

"Life sciences companies have shifted some production back to the U.S. from China. In some cases, the U.S. was becoming cheaper," said Sean Correll, director of consulting services for Burlington, Mass.-based Emptoris.

Chinese labor costs have been climbing about 15 percent a year since a 2008 labor contract law that made workers more aware of their rights. Tax preferences for foreign companies ended in 2007. Land, water, energy and shipping costs are on the rise.

Makers of toys and trinkets, Christmas trees and cheap shoes already have folded by the thousands or moved away, some to Vietnam, Indonesia or Cambodia. But those countries lack the huge work force, infrastructure and markets China can offer, and most face the same labor issues as China.

But for U.S. manufacturers looking to boost sales inside fast-growing China, shifting production to the inland areas offers the most realistic alternative.

"The new game is to find a way to do the domestic market," says Goodwin.

How low can they go?

Mortgage rates drop again to new low of 4.57 percent

By J.W. Elphinstone
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Mortgage rates fell for the second straight week to the lowest point in five decades. But many people either don't qualify for new mortgages or have already taken advantage of the low rates this year.

As a result, the housing market and the broader economy may not benefit much from the lower rates.

The average rate on a 30-year fixed mortgage dropped to 4.57 percent this week, mortgage company Freddie Mac reported Thursday. That's down from the previous record low of 4.58 percent set last week.

It's the lowest since Freddie Mac began tracking rates in 1971. The last time rates were lower was in the 1950s, when most long-term home loans lasted just 20 or 25 years.

Rates have fallen over the past two months. Investors, concerned with the European debt crisis, have poured money into the safety of Treasury bonds. Treasury yields have fallen and so have mortgage rates, which tend to track yields on long-term Treasuries.

However, low rates have yet to fuel home sales. The housing market has slowed since federal tax credits for homebuyers expired at the end of April. And the latest decline in mortgage rates is unlikely to boost the market.

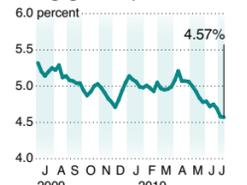

Mortgage rates have hovered near record lows for some time, so most people who can afford to buy homes or qualify to refinance their loans have already done so in the past 18 months. Doing so again wouldn't be worth the cost for most.

Meanwhile, millions of Americans are unable to take advantage of the low rates. Many have seen the value of their homes plummet and have little or no equity. Or they lack good credit or steady income to get or refinance a mortgage.

Mortgage rates fall

Rates could go to zero and still not budge the housing market. That's because a person without a job can't afford a home and a person worried about losing their job is unlikely to purchase, too, said Greg McBride, senior financial analyst with Bankrate.com.

"And if an $8,000 tax credit didn't get buyers to take the plunge, saving $50 a month on a mortgage payment probably won't either," he said.

Rates on 15-year fixed-rate mortgages increased to an average of 4.07 percent, up from 4.04 percent last week. That was the lowest on records dating to September 1991.

Rates on five-year adjustable-rate mortgages averaged 3.75 percent, down from 3.79 percent a week earlier. That was also the lowest on Freddie Mac's records.

At small businesses, summer Fridays are alive and well

Sometime after noon this Friday, employees of many small businesses will be indulging in a favorite summertime perk: They'll get to go home early.

Despite the uncertain economy, many small-business owners are still letting their staffers enjoy that extra time off at the end of the week. But Summer Fridays, as they're often called, have undergone some changes as a result of the recession. Some companies that used to shut down completely now have some workers in the office to help take care of customers or clients. That often means staffers take turns taking Friday afternoon off.

SMALL TALK

Joyce M. Rosenberg

Other companies now give employees what amounts to flex time on Fridays, letting each staffer decide how to use their time off.

Some major corporations also have early dismissal times on Fridays, including food maker ConAgra Inc.

But the practice is far from universal at big companies, and many small business owners understand that such perks can make their companies better able to compete for top workers.

A smart business practice

Karyn Ravin, president of New York-based Maletzky Media, says giving employees a few hours off is "being a smart business owner. You have to do everything you can to get people who will come to work for a small company." Summer Fridays have been common in the public relations industry for decades, partly because there is so much competition for workers. And, Ravin noted, the competition is particularly tough in New York.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

The Dow Jones Industrial rose 120.71, or 1.2 percent, to 10,138.99. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 9.98, or 0.9 percent, to 1,070.25, while the Nasdaq composite index rose 15.93, or 0.7 percent, to 2,175.40.

The yield on the 10-year Treasury note, which moves opposite its price, rose to 3.03 percent from 2.99 percent late Wednesday. The yield fell below 3 percent last week for the first time since April 2009 as investors worried about the economy rushed into Treasuries. The yield on 10-year Treasuries helps determine the interest rate on some mortgages and other consumer loans.

Four stocks rose for every one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume came to 1.2 billion shares, compared with 1.3 billion Wednesday. The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 8.61, or 1.4 percent, to 620.27. Britain's FTSE 100 rose 1.8 percent, Germany's DAX index rose 0.7 percent, and France's CAC-40 gained 1.6 percent. Japan's Nikkei stock average jumped 2.8 percent.

Fridays

Strategic Communications, which has offices in New York, San Francisco and London, calls Summer Fridays a morale builder that helps the company hold on to its staffers.

"Our assets go up and down the elevator every day," Cody said. "They're as important as our clients."

Peppercorn started Summer Fridays at the suggestion of employees, Cody said. The staff is divided into A and B teams, and workers alternate taking a half day off.

A recession-resistant perk

While PR companies were hard by the recession, many owners decided against eliminating the perk even when they were having to get by with fewer staffers.

At Welz and Weisel Communications, managers "did have a discussion around whether or not we should change the time off or limit it, and we determined that just wasn't the best path to take," said Jayna Kliner, a vice president at the Fairfax, Va.-based firm.

"We knew people have to work more hours and work harder, and we still wanted to find a way to show we appreciated the work they were doing," Kliner said.

Welz and Weisel employees can leave at 3 p.m. as long as they've finished their work. And staffers all have smart phones and access to e-mail, so clients can reach them.

Jeanne Achille, CEO of the Devon Group, a Middletown, N.J.-based PR firm, also considered ending Summer Fridays. But, she said, it was hard to see "how not doing this was going to bring us more business," especially since many clients also take time off on Fridays.

Achille, who had to lay off some employees during the recession and hold back on raises, said those painful moves made it all the more necessary to keep Summer Fridays. "It's a recognition tool, to motivate employees," she said.

J&J sales plunge as new drug recall announced

By Linda A. Johnson
Associated Press writer

TRENTON, N.J. - Sales of Johnson & Johnson pain relievers are collapsing as a string of recalls appears to have made consumers wary of once-sterling brands such as Tylenol and Benadryl.

An eighth recall, announced Thursday, could worsen consumer reaction. That wariness and the huge amount of products pulled off store shelves together look to be costing J&J tens of millions of dollars a month.

Thursday's recall by Johnson & Johnson's McNeil consumer health care unit covers 21 lots of products, including Children's Tylenol. Those were recalled because of a musty or moldy smell, extending a large Jan. 15 recall tied to a nauseating chemical on shipping pallets.

The company said the new lots were added to the recall as a precaution after an internal review

The string of recalls is an embarrassment for a company that set the standard on how to do it correctly when it rushed to pull bottles of Tylenol - deliberately poisoned by someone who was never caught - off store shelves in the early 1980s.

That's harder to forgive, particularly given that the public has little tolerance for mistakes or carelessness involving products for children, said analyst Steve Brozak of WBB Securities.

"This is pain by a thousand cuts," Brozak said of the repeated recalls.

Erik Gordon, a professor and analyst at the University of Michigan's Ross School of Business, said J&J has been too conservative about replacing those responsible.

"Heads should have rolled" and longtime CEO Bill Weldon should be taking responsibility, Gordon said. "If I were on the board, I think I would be looking for his resignation."

Weldon has turned the gold standard for handling an unsafe product "into the tin standard," he added.

Data from market research firm SymphonyIRI you Group show sales of New Brunswick, N.J.-based J&J's pain reliever pills fell 56 percent in the four weeks ending June 13, compared to a year earlier.

Its figures show that U.S. sales of pain-relieving tablets, gels and other types of pills, including multiple strengths of Tylenol and Motrin, plunged to $20.9 million in that four-week period, putting the company behind rivals Bayer Consumer Health and Wyeth Labs. Sales of private-label, or store brands, benefited the most from Johnson & Johnson's fall, jumping 23 percent to $51.9 million.

BUSINESS ROUNDUP

Jobless claims keep fluctuating as recovery slows

WASHINGTON - Applications for unemployment aid have been fluctuating from week to week, offering an uncertain view of layoffs and the job market.

First-time requests for jobless aid dropped last week to their lowest level since early May, the government said Thursday, erasing increases made in the last two months.

Still, economists say it's hard to detect a trend in one week of declines. Initial claims have seen-sawed for several weeks and are not much lower than they were in January.

NEW YORK - Stores deepened discounts more than planned in June to draw recession-scarred shoppers to buy summer tops and other merchandise. But shoppers bought mostly items they needed, resulting in small revenue gains.

The mixed results from June, released Thursday, are raising concerns about the back-to-school season and consumers' ability and willingness to hit the accelerator on spending.

The International Council of Shopping Centers' index of June retail sales rose 3 percent, the low end of its growth forecast that ranged from 3 to 4 percent. But that's compared with a 5.1 percent decline in June 2009.

Consumer borrowing down sharply in May

WASHINGTON - Consumer borrowing fell again in May, more evidence that Americans remain jittery over their finances and the durability of the economic recovery.

The Federal Reserve said

Thursday that borrowing dropped by $9.1 billion in May. It also said borrowing declined by $14.9 billion in April, revising an initial estimate that showed a gain of $995 million for the month.

Consumer borrowing has fallen in 15 of the past 16 months as households have struggled with uncertain job prospects and battered finances following a deep recession.

IMF calls for greater U.S. efforts to control deficits

WASHINGTON - The International Monetary Fund is calling for the United States to make a stronger effort to curb its budget deficits.

The IMF said Thursday that in addition to cutting government spending, the Obama administration will have to consider raising taxes to get the U.S. deficit down to a manageable level.

The IMF proposed a range of possible tax increases which would be certain to generate huge political opposition from reducing the popular tax deduction for home mortgages to instituting a national sales tax.

European Central Bank welcomes stress tests

BERLIN - European Central Bank head Jean-Claude Trichet welcomed European leaders' pledge to publish the results of "stress tests" on banks and indicated Thursday that the need to calm markets by buying troubled government bonds appears to be diminishing.

Trichet also sounded an upbeat note on the 16-nation eurozone's economy after the bank kept its benchmark refinancing rate untouched at a record low of 1 percent, saying that recent data don't support "excessively pessimistic" views.

BATTLE OF THE BOMBS

U.S. troops stay focused on finding roadside explosives

By Heidi Vogt
Associated Press writer

ARGHANDAB VALLEY, Afghanistan — The U.S. forces' enemy is almost invisible in parts of this lush valley in southern Afghanistan. It comes not as gunmen but as bombs planted on footpaths, wedged into walls, nestled in trees and hidden under bridges.

The Bravo Company soldiers of the 2nd Battalion, 508th Parachute Infantry Regiment have gotten caught up in only one significant firefight in the more than six months they've been stationed in a 1.2-square mile area just north of Kandahar city.

But nearly every day they find — or step on — homemade bombs. As a result, they've had some intense on-the-job training in bomb-spotting, so they can continue to keep patrolling and keep the Taliban from threatening local villagers.

The military operation is completely different just a two-hour hike to the north or west. In northern Arghandab, schools are being set up and agriculture subsidies are making friends of farmers. To the west, paratroopers are in nearly daily firefights with insurgents who ambush patrols and assault combat outposts.

Bravo Company's dogged fight for control of the southern end of the Arghandab river valley illustrates a key difficulty facing U.S. forces as they work this summer and fall to squeeze the Taliban out of their spiritual heartland. The battle for Kandahar city and its environs is not one fight, but many.

"You've got three different problem sets," said the top U.S. general in the south, Brig. Gen. Ben Hodges — referring to the city, lawless southern districts with vast expanses of desert, and areas like Arghandab that at least have some government presence.

So each company has to develop very localized skills for their specific fight.

For Bravo company, it's the fight against homemade bombs — known as improvised explosive devices or IEDs — which accounted for about 40 percent of U.S. fatalities in 2009, according to an Associated Press tally of NATO reports.

Three soldiers in the U.S. soldiers from Bravo Company, 2nd Battalion of the 508th Parachute Infantry Regiment of the 82nd Airborne, patrol near Combat Outpost Ware in the volatile Arghandab Valley, outside Kandahar City, Tuesday. The soldiers have been involved in only one significant firefight in the more than in the more than six months they've been stationed in a 1.2-square mile area just north of Kandahar city, but almost every day come into contact with roadside bombs.

A U.S. soldier walks on patrol near Combat Outpost Ware in the volatile Arghandab Valley, outside Kandahar City, Tuesday.

company have been killed by buried explosives, and almost every soldier has encountered one.

Typically, troops depend on ordnance disposal teams for bomb experts. Those teams are in Arghandab too, but in Bravo Company the average soldier has spent a lot of time learning to spot, or even just feel out bombs. They describe a sort of sixth sense that develops after encountering so many.

"We're looking for booby traps, trip wires, or just the absence of the normal," said Lt. Ross Weinschenker, 24, who commands one of the two platoons that patrol out of the company's main combat outpost.

And the hidden killers don't discriminate. They also accounted for 60 percent of the 600 Afghan civilian casualties from January through June this year, NATO says.

To counter the threat posed by IEDs, the U.S. Defense Department is in the process of delivering $3 billion worth of additional equipment, Ashton Carter, U.S. Defense Department undersecretary for acquisition, technology and logistics, told reporters Thursday at NATO headquarters in Kabul.

The Pentagon has doubled the number of tethered surveillance blimps being sent to Afghanistan this year to 64, providing troops a bird's eye view of certain areas, Carter said. So far, 6,700 Mine Resistant Ambush Protected vehicles have been delivered to Afghanistan and the Defense Department is continuing to send unmanned aerial vehicles so every route-clearance patrol will have the benefit of full-motion video overhead.

Such technical solutions can help, but Bravo Company has developed its own on-the-ground detection methods to save life and limb.

Capt. Adam Armstrong, the company commander, said 20 of its approximately 150 soldiers stationed in Arghandab have been wounded. Many have been hit multiple times — wounded enough for a quick trip to nearby Kandahar Air Field to check on a concussion or a shrapnel injury, but nothing serious enough to keep them away more than a few weeks.

Sgt. Erik Hoeksema, a 34-year-old from Chicago, has been hit twice in two weeks. His first came when his truck struck a large bomb in April, giving him a concussion. Then on his first foot patrol after returning a fellow soldier stepped on a buried bomb. The man who took the worst impact lost his foot. Hoeksema was lucky enough to get away with just a second concussion.

Sometimes the constant vigilance wears on the soldiers.

"Hope I get deployed to Iraq after this. I could use a vacation," joked Pvt. Micah Kahn, 23, of Nashville, Tenn. "You know what you do in Iraq? Work out. Drink water. None of this losing a leg and watching it blow away."

Still, members of Bravo Company have refused to curtail their patrols because of the bombs. Instead, they've adapted to them.

Someone on the patrol always has a metal detector and everyone is on the alert. They vary their routes: always looking for the best spot to plant a bomb and then taking the other route.

Sometimes this means climbing over a 6-foot-high wall when there's an easy path through a crevice a few feet away. Sometimes it means taking a road that they've avoided for a while instead of picking their way through a bomb-laced wheat field.

Their efforts appear to be paying off. The soldiers' nearly constant patrols mean that the Taliban are less free to operate in the area.

The unit's bomb-avoidance skills mean the soldiers "are able to move in an area where they shouldn't be able to move," Armstrong says. And that means they're able to spend time with villagers whom the Taliban kept away from any contact with government or NATO forces.

In the village of Pir-e-Paymal, a local mullah tells troops on patrol that they aren't scared to go out in their fields anymore. Previously, people would come at night and plant bombs inside the village. One man hit one while riding his donkey cart down a village path. He was badly injured and the donkey was killed.

Now, the people don't worry so much about where they step, the mullah said. U.S. forces asked that his name not be used for his own safety in an area still full of Taliban sympathizers.

The buried explosives appear to have tapered off in recent weeks, following the capture of a major bomb-making unit in the area, Armstrong said. So the soldiers have had some quieter patrols.

But they're staying vigilant.

"I don't have any false ideas. They have plenty of people to replace them," Hoeksema said.

Associated Press writer Deb Riechmann in Kabul contributed to this report.

A staff member shows a coin of Tetricus I (271-274 A.D.) on display at the British Museum in London, Thursday. About 52,500 Roman coins were found in a large pot by a British treasure hunter.

UK treasure hunter finds Roman coins worth $5M

LONDON (AP) — A treasure hunter has found about 52,500 Roman coins, one of the largest such discoveries ever in Britain, officials said Thursday.

The hoard, which was valued at $5 million, includes hundreds of coins bearing the image of Marcus Aurelius Carausius, who seized power in Britain and northern France in the late third century and proclaimed himself emperor.

Dave Crisp, a treasure hunter using a metal detector, located the coins in April in a field in southwestern England, according to the Somerset County Council and the Portable Antiquities Scheme.

The coins were buried in a large jar about a foot deep and weighed about 350 pounds in all.

Crisp said a "funny signal" from his metal detector prompted him to start digging.

"I put my hand in, pulled out a bit of clay and there was a little radial, a little bronze Roman coin — very, very small, about the size of my fingernail," Crisp said in an interview with the BBC.

He recovered about 20 coins before discovering that they were in a pot, and realized he needed expert help.

Hope fades for victims of Pa. duck boat crash

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sandy Cohen looked up from the deck of a stalled tourist boat to see an enormous barge approaching fast, and it was clear it wasn't going to stop. Then came the screams.

Over the next few seconds of terror, she and other passengers fumbled to put on life jackets and ran for cover as best they could. Next came a crash, the boat flipped over, and 37 passengers were plunged into the Delaware River.

Cohen came to the surface, clinging to the life jacket she had managed to snag seconds before. A Hungarian teenager on the tour was hanging onto the jacket too.

Two fellow passengers in the U.S. for the same language class as the teenager have not been found. Hope faded for finding them alive Thursday. The search was continuing for the pair, a 16-year-old girl and 20-year-old man, but visibility in the 50-foot-deep water was too poor to send divers in.

The boat had no history of mechanical problems before it caught fire, said Chris Herschend, president of Ride the Ducks, the Norcross, Ga.-based company that owns it. The captain appears to have followed all proper procedures during the emergency, Herschend said at a news conference. The company hoped to raise the boat to the surface soon, he said.

It started out as just an inconvenience when smoke started to roll out of the boat's engine as it entered the water, Cohen, 67, told The Associated Press in a phone interview Thursday from her home in Durham, N.C. The tour guide said a tug boat would be on its way to carry passengers back to shore, she recalled. She was on the phone with her husband to let him know she'd be late, but the call ended abruptly as other passengers screamed.

"Someone said, 'Oh my God, there's a barge coming, and it doesn't look like it's stopping,'" she said.

She grabbed for a lifejacket from a hook above her seat as the boat was struck and started to sink. She was quickly underwater, grabbing the jacket with one hand as her feet tangled up with those of others.

When she surfaced, she said, she realized the girl was also hanging onto the jacket.

"I just told her, 'Don't let go,' and made sure we both stayed calm," she said.

Pool Advisory Committee honored

Recently, former members of the Twin Falls Pool Advisory Committee were presented with plaques by the Twin Falls City Council and city staff for their service. The Pool Advisory Committee was dissolved in April, and one member was appointed from that committee to serve on the City Parks and Recreation Committee.

LeWayne Jungert served for almost two years, Carolyn White served for a year and a half and Curtis Stewart served for three years. Not pictured but also receiving plaques were Carl Legg, who served for two years and has been appointed to Parks and Recreation, and Bob Blastock, who served on the pool board since it was formed in January 2007 and has served as chairman for the past two

SOMEBODY NEEDS YOU

Drivers — Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center needs volunteer drivers for the home-delivered meals program for the homebound. Drivers do not have to be seniors to volunteer to drive one or two days a week for an hour to an hour and a half. The center needs people who can be relied on for their appointed routes and who care about the well-being of the elderly. Reimbursed mileage for gas is available. Information: Joanna, 734-5084, or 530 Shoshone St. W., Twin Falls.

Donations — The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center is hosting 60 refugee children as participants in Kids Arts in the Park on Saturday. Volunteers are needed to help with supervision from station to station at the park. The center has scholarships for 48 children but needs donations for 12 more students at $5 per child. Information: Michelle, 736-2166.

Volunteers — Hospice Visions needs volunteers to help make a difference in the lives of caregivers and those experiencing end-of-life issues. Volunteers provide companionship, bring joy during difficult times and ease burdens by writing letters, singing, playing cards and games, reading, working with junior volunteers or being a friend. Information: Flo, 735-0121.

Drivers — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program needs volunteer drivers, age 55 and older, to take senior citizens to medical appointments and for grocery shopping. Volunteers are needed in Twin Falls and are reimbursed mileage and covered by excess insurance. Information: Edith, 736-4764.

Mentors — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program needs volunteers in Jerome and Twin Falls counties to mentor children with a parent in prison. Volunteers must undergo a complete background check and be willing to mentor a child for a minimum of four hours each month for one year. Information: Ken, 736-2122, ext. 2394, or kwhiting@ooa.csi.edu.

Mentors/volunteers — The Easter Seals Goodwill GoodGuides program is part of a national mentoring program providing guidance to boys and girls ages 12 to 17. The program has a variety of volunteer opportunities in the Magic Valley, including mentors, speakers, tutors, activity directors and mentor leaders. Teens are needed to be part of the Teen Advisory Board, which meets about every three months for one or two hours per meeting to provide input, feedback and guidance for the program. Information: Tristan or LeWayne, 736-2026 or 2469 Wright Ave., Twin Falls.

Volunteers — Guardian Home Care and Hospice needs volunteers in the Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Glens Ferry and Burley areas to assist with patient care: sit with patients, play games and read to patients, or help in the office. Information: Kerri, 736-0900.

Volunteers — South Central Community Action Partnership needs a volunteer to pick up donated food items on Monday and Tuesday every week from two stores in Twin Falls for about an hour to an hour and a half each day. These items supplement the emergency food program. Reliable transportation and liability insurance are required to be reimbursed mileage. Information: Leanne or Sandra, 733-9351.

Chronic kidney disease carries dietary restrictions

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been diagnosed with chronic kidney disease. I was shocked when the nephrologist told me this, as I have no symptoms. I decided I would get a second opinion. The second doctor said my first diagnosis was correct and put me on a strict low-sodium, low-phosphorus, low-protein diet with very few things I could eat. I went back to the first nephrologist, who said, with all the trials done on the kidneys, it was found that I wouldn't live one day longer on the diet. She said instead to limit my protein somewhat and to watch my sodium. What is your feeling on this strict diet? I'm a 76-year-old woman. I am having surgery soon to provide an access, as it takes six months for it to heal so I can have dialysis.

DEAR READER: Chronic kidney disease is the gradual loss of kidney

ASK DR. GOTT

menting calcium and vitamin D to protect your bones, diuretics to rid the body of excess fluid buildup or the inclusion of a low-protein diet. A dietician will likely be recommended to review your diet and suggest methods by which your kidneys will not have to work so hard. This might include reducing your salt intake and eating foods lower in potassium. What your first nephrologist recommended was to have you incorporate a diet that would reduce the amount of work required of the kidneys.

Protein reduction includes limiting the amount of red meats, eggs and milk products in your diet. It's not necessary to delete them, but to lessen your consumption. Fresh fruits, vegetables, cereals or breads might act as substitutes. Foods high in potassium include bananas, potatoes and tomatoes. An easy transition might be made to substitute apples, carrots, grapes and green beans. A sodium reduction can be accomplished by avoiding canned soups and vegetables, fast foods, processed luncheon meats, hot dogs, kielbasa, cookies made with tropical oils and countless other products. Here is where education and label-reading come into play.

Progressing to the later stages of the disease, dialysis, of which there are two types, might be recommended. The first is hemodialysis and involves pumping blood out of the body and into a machine that acts as a healthy kidney would. Once the waste is removed, the blood is pumped back into the body. The second type is peritoneal dialysis, which pumps a solution into the abdominal cavity and utilizes the body's blood vessels to transport the waste products and additional fluids to the abdominal cavity, where the solution absorbs them. That solution is then pumped out of the body, taking the unwanted waste and fluids with it. A final option is kidney transplant from a healthy donor.

Carolyn Jean Kuhn

GOODING — Carolyn Jean Kuhn, 71, of Gooding, died Wednesday, July 7, 2010, at Bridgeview Estates in Twin Falls.

She was born Jan. 28, 1939, in Gooding, Idaho, to Ivan and Marion Boyer. She grew up in the Hagerman Valley. She met Jack Kuhn when they were children and then married him on Nov. 1, 1956, on his 19th birthday. She was 17 at the time but knew he was the one. Nine months and seven days later came their first child and they proceeded to have five more. Jack's work took them to many different places through the years and then in 1985, they came back to Idaho that was home to them.

Her life was devoted to her husband, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She was there to support them whether it was sports, plays or just being with them.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Jack; and both her parents. She has left behind a legacy with her children, Steve (Cindy)

Kuhn, Todd (Brenda) Kuhn, Jack (Debbie) Kuhn, Milton (Michelle) Kuhn, Tim (Sandra) Kuhn and Caterina (Lance) Hoskovec; her grandchildren, Stefanie (Steve) Bilbao, Nicole (Rich) Bay, Sheena (Chad) Hoskovec, BreAnn Kuhn, Ashley Kuhn, Gary Kuhn, Saige Hoskovec, Jeremy Kuhn, Steven Hoskovec, Samantha Hoskovec, Brandon Weaver, Kayla Gill and Anastasia Kuhn; her great-grandchildren, Logan Kuhn, Wyatt Hoskovec, Carson Bay, Jasper Bilbao, Piper Hoskovec, Liberty Bay and Jackson Bay; and many honorary children and grandchildren that called her mom and grandma. She is also survived by her brother, Marvin Boyer; and her sister, Pat McClean.

We love you mom; be at peace with dad now. You spent your life taking care of us, now it's your turn.

A graveside memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday, July 13, at the Hagerman Cemetery; a lunch will follow immediately at the Hagerman Park

BURLEY — Sharon Ann Davidson, age 61, passed away on Thursday, July 1, 2010, at her home in Burley.

Sharon was born Aug. 6, 1948, in Alhambra, Calif., to Jack Placey Davidson and Jennie Margaret Bruce Davidson. Sharon lived all of her life in Southern California, until she moved to Burley three years ago. She attended the College of Southern Utah in Cedar City and California State College, where she graduated with a bachelor's degree in recreation.

Sharon was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, holding several positions during her life. At the time of her passing, she was a Sunday school teacher and leader of the single adults. She also had many fond memories of a mission she served in Hawaii, a place she returned to often.

Special interests and hobbies Sharon enjoyed included cross-stitch and crocheting. Family members and friends were frequent recipients of beautiful gifts created by Sharon. Traveling with her sister, Joan, was always a pleasant activity for Sharon. Together, they traveled in Europe, Scandinavian countries, Russia, countries surrounding the Mediterranean including those in North Africa, Canada and Central America. Besides Hawaii, they also traveled to Alaska and the Eastern States.

Sharon was preceded in death by her parents; grandparents; and her sister, Marilyn. She is survived by her sister, Joan (Cliff) Williamson of Temple City, Calif.; and her brother, Richard (Kathy) Davidson of Burley. While Sharon never married or had children of her own, she was loved and adored by her numerous nephews and nieces.

The funeral will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 10, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, where friends and family may call prior to the service. Officiating will be Bishop Dan Alvey.

A memorial service for Sharon will be held July 17 in Southern California for her friends and family in that area.

Esther H. Kuykendall

Esther H. Kuykendall, 96, passed away peacefully at the home of her daughter, Pat Gibson, on Saturday, July 3, 2010, in Twin Falls, Idaho, where she resided since 1999.

Esther was born Aug. 8, 1913, in Lodgepole, S.D., to Annie Conley and Silas Durk Taylor. The fourth of eight children, she was close to her parents and lovingly assisted her legally blind and deaf mother in all the household chores and caring for her younger siblings. She also loved helping her father in his work whenever possible. Esther was a quick student. She attended business college and worked as a legal secretary. Her naturally curious personality and her love for learning and reading and her quick sense of humor served her well throughout her entire life.

She married Jack M. Kuykendall on Aug. 2, 1933, in Olathe, Colo. After moving to California, Jack worked briefly in farming before beginning his own business as a logger and heavy equipment operator. Esther became his bookkeeper. They had five children whom Esther lovingly raised and cared for. They settled in Visalia, Calif., where Jack worked for the water district until his death on July 19, 1972. Esther retired from Woolworth's in 1981. She was a faithful member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and served in ward and stake positions. She served a mission for the church in the Nashville, Tenn., area.

She is survived by her children, Pat (Jim) Gibson of Twin Falls, Judy (Fred) Deneen of Seattle, Wash., Barbara Shapleigh of Seattle, Wash., and Randy (Margo) Kuykendall of El Paso, Texas. She is also survived by 20 grandchildren, 34 great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren.

Esther lived a good, productive and purposeful life. Her loving, kind, friendly and unselfish ways blessed the lives of her family and friends. She will be greatly missed by all who knew and loved her.

A graveside service will be held at 10 a.m. Friday, July 16, at the Visalia Public Cemetery in Visalia, Calif. Local arrangements are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.reynoldschapel.com.

Her family would like to express their thanks and appreciation to Ruby and Ramona from "A Caring Hand" and Home Health and Hospice with their dedicated, thoughtful employees for their kind service over the past few months.

Hailey mayor, law enforcement disagree on marijuana policy

HAILEY (AP) — A central Idaho resort town mayor is at odds with state police officials over a plan to make enforcement of laws governing pot smoking the lowest police priority.

Mayor Rick Davis announced last month that officers in this city just south of Sun Valley would essentially look the other way if they found evidence that an adult had less than 3 ounces of marijuana — unless they also discovered signs of another crime. This comes after city voters twice passed a slate of initiatives aiming to ease marijuana laws.

Now, the Idaho Statesman reports state law enforcement agents are concerned with Davis' approach.

Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling says his officers will continue to enforce marijuana prohibitions.

And Bingham County

Sheriff Dave Johnson, vice president of the Idaho Sheriffs Association, said drug and alcohol abuse is at the root of at least three-quarters of his inmates' crimes. Johnson wants Attorney General Lawrence Wasden to intervene.

"For a community to make marijuana a low priority, it seems to me they're opening the door wide open to more problems," Johnson said. "Tell me it's not going to hit the streets and kids aren't going to try it if it's out there rampant, like they want to make it in Hailey."

Davis says he was only hoping to find a solution to a three-year conflict between city leaders and citizens about how Hailey enforces Idaho's anti-marijuana laws. Since 2007, voters approved several pro-marijuana initiatives: One to allow medical marijuana, another to legalize industrial hemp and a third to make enforcement of anti-pot laws the lowest priority for Hailey police.

The initiatives were largely gutted by a court earlier this year, when Fifth District Judge Robert Elgee ruled in 2009 that cities cannot pre-empt state drug laws. But an oversight council was created to pursue resolution of the issue.

"I find this whole thing a real pain in the keister, if you want to know the truth," Davis said Wednesday. "I was trying to find a way to appease those who voted for making marijuana enforcement the lowest priority and at the same time keep my officers following their oath of office."

Hailey Police Chief Jeff Gunter says Davis is on the right track. Gunter says he'll still go after minors, public pot smokers and people who are suspected of other crimes; adults lighting up behind closed doors can largely breathe easy.

"It's what the voters voted for, and we still are able to do our job," he said.

Others aren't convinced. Soda Springs Police Chief Joe Rice, president of the Idaho Chiefs of Police Association, is among those who think Hailey's policy will encourage people to puff.

"Marijuana is a gateway drug, always has been. And when you start to look at it like it's no big deal, well, then what's next?" Rice said, adding he plans to raise the issue when the police chiefs meet later this year.

For his part, Wasden says he's staying out of the public fray, on grounds that he may be called to intervene officially.

"It's best I not say anything in order to protect my ability to call balls and strikes fairly and squarely," Wasden said.

Accused LA serial killer said to visit prostitutes

By Thomas Watkins
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — To many of his neighbors and customers, Lonnie Franklin Jr. was just a friendly mechanic who often stopped to chat as he tinkered on cars in the front driveway of his mint-green house on 81st Street.

But after police identified him as the serial killer "Grim Sleeper" on Wednesday, other neighbors recalled traits that suddenly seemed chilling.

Franklin, 57, was charged Wednesday with 10 counts of murder, one count of attempted murder and special circumstance allegations of multiple murders that could make him eligible for the death penalty if convicted. He was arraigned Thursday. Many of his alleged victims were prostitutes and all but one were women.

Police detectives are re-examining at least 30 unsolved killings of women in South Los Angeles, seeing if they can link any of the homicides to Franklin.

Sources with the Los Angeles Police Department told the Los Angeles Times that the 30 cases share similarities to the slayings linked to Franklin. Some neighbors said Franklin made no secret of enjoying the company of sex workers, who he would often bring back to a camper parked in his backyard filled with old cars and junk.

Tasha Cole said he would point out different prostitutes when they would walk by and talk about them disrespectfully.

"He knew all of them and their stories," she said. Another neighbor, Sherwood Howard, said Franklin would show off nude photos he took of the women from the neck down and talk about his exploits. He kept the pictures in the garage.

Los Angeles Police Department have charged Lonnie Franklin, Jr., 57, in the murder of 10 women.

"He'd go and mess with women all night long," Howard said. "We knew he was kind of weird, but he was a regular person. We never suspected he was killing them."

Detectives have spent years investigating the slayings that occurred between 1985 and 2007. The attacker was dubbed the "Grim Sleeper" because he was thought to have taken a 14-year hiatus from his crimes, from 1988 to 2002.

The victims were shot, strangled or both, usually after some kind of sexual contact.

The break in the case came after Franklin's son was arrested and swabbed for DNA, said Donnell Alexander, brother of victim Monique Alexander, who was given a briefing on the case by robbery-homicide detectives.

Franklin

Using a controversial technique known as a familial DNA search, the sample was flagged as similar to evidence in the serial killings, leading police to investigate relatives of Franklin's son.

Detectives later swabbed a cup used by Lonnie Franklin Jr. at a restaurant and confirmed his DNA matched that in the serial killings, police said.

District Attorney Steve Cooley said he believes the "Grim Sleeper" case was the first time a familial DNA search has been used successfully in California.

Los Angeles city personnel director Maggie Whalen said Franklin was hired in 1981 as an attendant at a Los Angeles Police Department garage, where he helped work on cars.

The following year, he moved to the sanitation department, where he worked a number of jobs before becoming a refuse collector. He left city employment in 1989.

Franklin's mint-green house is nestled amid a row of stucco homes, most of them single-story, in this working-class community where many neighbors know each other.

The house is within blocks of the alleyways where some of his alleged victims were dumped.

Montana sets this year's hunt quota at 186 wolves

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Montana wildlife regulators on Thursday set this year's wolf-hunt quota at 186, more than doubling 2009's quota, with the aim of reducing the state's wolf population for the first time since they were reintroduced to the Northern Rockies in 1995.

Advocates for the wolf hunt hailed the decision, although some said they would still like to see a bigger number.

But whether a hunting season actually happens may be in the hands of a federal judge. U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy is expected to make a ruling after hearing arguments last month in a lawsuit brought by environmental groups seeking to restore Endangered Species Act protections for wolves in Montana and Idaho.

Opponents of the wolf hunt argued the FWP commission should end the hunt before the courts act.

"We think any wolf hunt is premature," said Matt Skoglund, with the Natural Resources Defense Council. "We don't think the wolf population has recovered yet."

The Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks Commission also created an archery hunt for 2010 and increased the number of management areas from three to 13 to have more control over the number of wolves killed in a given region.

Licenses go on sale Aug. 23 for the archery season that begins Sept. 4, the rifle season that begins on Sept. 15 in some backcountry areas and the general season that opens Oct. 23.

University of Idaho, retirees settle lawsuit

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho and more than 250 retired employees have settled a lawsuit over changes to the retirees' insurance benefits.

The settlement was approved by the Latah County District Court on Thursday, and it says that barring a financial emergency, health insurance premiums for retirees won't increase by more than 10 percent over the previous year. The settlement also holds that life insurance benefits won't drop below $10,000.

The terms of the settlement were short of what retirees had hoped for, but it means they won't have to pay the university's attorney's fees.

The retirees had originally contended that the school agreed to pay the full tab for medical and life insurance premiums, but later revised the benefits. But the school maintained — and a judge later agreed — that it had reserved the right to change the benefits.

Coroner: Teen's 'huffing' contributed to drowning

BOISE (AP) — Authorities say a 15-year-old boy who drowned in a landscaping pond in Star was intoxicated on freon fumes before he went swimming.

The Ada County Coroner on Thursday declared the death of Cody Liedle an accidental drowning.

Liedle was found Tuesday night submerged and unconscious in a small, landscape pond across from his home in Star. He never regained consciousness and was pronounced dead an hour later.

The autopsy shows the teen was intoxicated when he went swimming in the pond. Detectives are investigating reports Liedle and a friend were huffing freon from air conditioners earlier in the day.

Freon is a refrigerant used to cool down air conditioners, and huffing, or inhaling, freon can create temporary sensations of euphoria.

The autopsy report shows the intoxication contributed to the drowning.

Lindsay Lohan's defense attorney resigns from case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lindsay Lohan will be going to jail without one of her biggest advocates — her attorney.

The actress' attorney, Shawn Chapman Holley, resigned from the case shortly after releasing a statement Thursday calling a judge's 90-day jail sentence for Lohan "harsh and unfair."

No reason for her withdrawal from the high-profile case was given, and her replacement has not been announced.

A representative for the seasoned defense attorney, who fought to keep the "Mean Girls" star out of jail during a daylong hearing Tuesday, said her earlier remarks about Lohan's sentence remained valid.

"Ms. Lohan and I are extremely disappointed in the sentence handed down by Judge (Marsha) Revel," Holley's statement had read. "We believe that the penalty is far harsher than what others would have received under similar circumstances.

"The reality is that Ms. Lohan, like most defendants, had to balance work commitments with court

Arts center takes shape on canyon rim

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Sawdust is in the air at Pinnacle West, and an identifiable floor plan has taken shape.

It's a welcome sign of progress for Magic Valley Arts Council, which will make its new home at the commercial development. After years of planning, fundraising and delays, the council is eyeing an October opening for its Twin Falls Center for the Arts.

But that's $300,000 away.

Money matters

In the past several years, the arts council has raised more than $1 million for the new center, and it has about $300,000 to go before reaching its $1.4 million goal. The final fundraising push is separated into three stages, said Mike McBride, co-chairman of the capital campaign for the arts center. Organizers hope to get the first $100,000 in the next 30 days from local businesses, then the second $100,000 through a grant from the Paul G. Allen Family Foundations; the center is in the process of applying for the grant and needs evidence of strong local contributions first. The third $100,000,

GET INVOLVED

McBride said, will probably come from the public in $50 or $100 donations.

A portion of that $1.4 million is an escrow fund for the center's operating costs during its first year. After that, the arts center will make its own money by renting out the facility for business meetings, parties or weddings. Magic Valley Arts Council will still be a 501c3 non-profit organization, McBride said, because the money goes back to art programs and facility operating costs. The setup allows the arts council to explore programming that previously was out of reach financially.

"They need to make money so they can pay the bills," McBride said.

Delayed gratification

The arts center opening will be more tardy than planners first anticipated.

In January 2009, former Magic Valley Arts Council director Stacy Madsen predicted the center would open in January 2010. Later that year, arts council leaders pushed that date to spring 2010 after the economy forced developers to redesign the building. The council now plans for an October opening.

The timeline wasn't the only thing affected by the economy.

Original plans for Pinnacle West included an additional two floors for residential space, but developers

A drafted idol's one last kiss

Conrad Birdie, played by Casey Tindall, is surrounded by fans during a 'Bye Bye Birdie' rehearsal June 30 at Howells Opera House in Oakley. The show opens Thursday.

How 'Bye Bye Birdie' brings a community closer

By Rebecca De Leon
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — Howells Opera House is filled every weekday evening with cast members, directors and various stage hands working together to produce a show that will bring the house down. But there's an extra element they added to the sweat and grueling hours under hot stage lights:

Love.

Behind the love-struck characters on stage is real-life love and respect among cast members and stage hands.

"This is a great group of people," said Kyrstin Tindall, 20. "We went from not knowing anyone to knowing just about everybody here."

Oakley Valley Arts Council on Thursday will open its production of "Bye Bye Birdie," a story inspired by singer Elvis Presley's draft notice into the Army in 1958. Tindall plays the character Kim, a lucky 15-year-old, small-town girl scheduled to receive a kiss from the heart-breakingly handsome Conrad Birdie, played by Tindall's husband, Casey Tindall, 27.

The young couple married just three months ago, and their newlywed spark follows them onstage.

"I didn't know how to act before this," Kyrstin Tindall said, smiling. "I auditioned for this play as a joke. This was something that he was auditioning for, and I was just there to make him laugh." She motioned toward her husband, who chuckled softly.

"She knows how to act," he said, smiling and winking. "I'm learning," his new wife insisted.

"She's really good," Casey Tindall persisted.

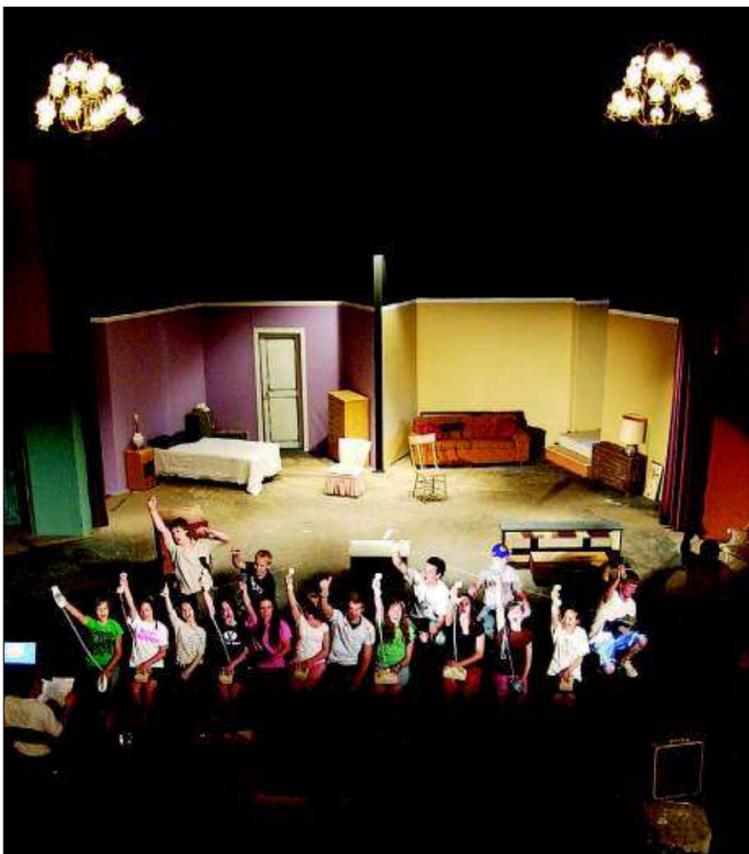

"Casey's a natural," she said, squeezing her lover's arm. The two gazed at each other and smiled for a moment before being called back to rehearsal.

On stage, the cast held hands, danced and sang together. Actors and actresses range from 4 years old to deep in their 50s and come from Oakley, Burley, Rupert and Malta. Many of the cast members are related, and those who don't share bloodline are close friends anyway.

Expect 'soul-wrenching human emotion' from melding of memorable operas

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley Opera will take a huge leap Sunday when it presents a semi-staged production, "MIZ Saigon," with costumes, a 70-voice chorus and an orchestra.

Four opera singers and one musical theater actress will sing selections from "Les Miserables," "Miss Saigon" and "Madame Butterfly."

"This is a huge stride for the opera," said Marsha Ingham, who co-founded the opera nine years ago. "And it should be an absolutely gorgeous evening as both 'Les Miz' and 'Miss Saigon' are full of memorable, haunting melodies that are recognizable even to people who don't pay attention to opera. The storylines in both are very compelling, too; they deal with soul-wrenching human emotion. That's why they've been popular for so long."

"MIZ Saigon," presented by Sun Valley Opera and Sun Valley Resort, will start at 8 p.m. Sunday at the Sun Valley Pavilion. Tickets are $28, $49 and $76, at sunvalleypavilion.com or 622-2135.

The story of "Miss Saigon" is also the story of "Madame Butterfly," with one set in Vietnam and the other in China, said Frank Meyer, Sun Valley Opera president.

Puccini's opera "Madame Butterfly" was based on a true story about an American officer who went to Asia, where he fell in love with an Asian girl. She always dreamed he'd come back to take her and their baby to America. But when he returned, he brought a wife with him.

The opera features the famous aria "One Fine Day" and "I Still Believe," a duet performed by the Asian girl and the American girl.

"Les Miserables," often dubbed "Les Miz," is based on Victor Hugo's 1862 novel about a variety of French people struggling to get by in the shadow of the French revolution. Several artists have recorded its "I Dreamed a Dream" including Neil Diamond, Aretha Franklin and British Idol Susan Boyle.

"The music of both is very powerful and beautiful. No matter what one's musical tastes it's music everyone loves," Meyer said. "And now we're able to work with lighting and sound technology we didn't have 10 years ago."

Tenor Dennis McNeil, a perennial favorite of Sun Valley Opera audiences who has sung for five U.S. presidents, will sing as Jean Valjean.

Singer/actress Shawna Masuda, a Hawaiian of Japanese and Filipino origin, has sung the lead roles in both of the famous

  - Tickets: $28, $49 and $76, at sunvalleypavilion.com or 622-2135
- For information about the Diva Orchestra Tier and Saturday's Diva Party, go to www.sunvalleyopera.com

The singers will be accompanied by members of the Boise Philharmonic under the direction of Brett Strader, a San Franciscan whose original choral and orchestral works have been heard by worldwide audiences.

A 70-voice choir made up primarily of singers from Brigham Young University-Idaho, Ketchum's Caritas Chorale and local church choirs will bring the evening to a rousing climax, said Mary Jo Helmeke, Sun Valley opera's executive director.

There will be a Diva party for $125 ticket holders in a private home Saturday, where the stars of "MIZ Saigon" will each sing a favorite song that's not in either "Miss Saigon" or "Les Miserables." Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served; the party starts at 6 p.m.

At tree-inspired art exhibit, ponder environment, reality and moods

Times-News

Sun Valley Center for the Arts this summer will display artwork inspired by — and often made from — trees at both its Ketchum and Hailey venues and at the site of its future home in Ketchum.

"Beam, Board, Breath: An Investigation of Trees" will open at the center in Ketchum today, featuring artwork by six contemporary artists.

"I began to notice more and more artists who were making work about trees, but not just about their beauty or variety," the center's Kristin Poole said in a press release. "They were using trees as a way to explore different aspects of our lives and how we interact, for better or worse, with our environment."

Poole eventually selected six artists for the exhibition: Paul Bergeron is represented by a group of paintings of trees, originally done for his graduate project, that sometimes include human figures.

Jason Middlebrook paints planks of wood with geometric patterns and leans them against the wall. Like snowboards or skateboards, the polished planks are painted with bright, unnatural colors that highlight the contrast between the natural and the artificial.

William Smith's charcoal drawings, with their gorgeous surfaces and abstracted images, are more about sensation and mood than about trees or forests.

Joseph Smolinski contributes finely wrought ink/graphite/watercolor paintings, including two of pine beetles — with oil company logos on their bodies — made for the Sun Valley Center show.

Jennifer Steinkamp's animated projection of a tree — named Miss Znerold in honor of a first-grade teacher who admired her sponge-painted trees — looks like a tree but is strangely colored and clearly an example of what the artist calls "fake nature."

Mary Temple is painting a subtle, dappled pattern of trees on the interior walls of the center's project room as if sunlight and shadow are coming through a window.

The center will offer free guided tours at 5:30 p.m. July 15 and Aug. 19, and at 2 p.m. July 27; enjoy a glass of wine while you tour the exhibition with curators and docents. The gallery will also be open late for Gallery Walk on Aug. 6 and Sept. 3. To make arrangements for tours at other times or in Spanish, call 726-9491.

"Beam, Board, Breath" continues through Sept. 3. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. Admission to the galleries is always free.

Also in Ketchum: Artist Patrick Dougherty will create a monumental, site-specific installation at the site of the center's future home at Second Avenue across from the Ketchum post office. Dougherty will speak about his work at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday at the center in Ketchum. His talk is free to the public.

Meanwhile, in Hailey: An open exhibition of work from more than 20 local artists — dubbed "Timber!"

— and outdoor installations by Jill Fitterer and Nickolus Meisel are on display at the center's Hailey facility.

The rubber plantation you never knew about

My summertime reading usually leans towards light fiction — “beach books,” as dubbed by the publishing world. But after I stumbled across this intriguing nonfiction title, those beach books were relegated to the to-be-read stack.

Mention Henry Ford's name and most everyone (at least over the age of, say, 25) can recite some factual tidbits. But how about Fordlandia? I had never heard of it, either, but what an amazing, unbelievable story it is!

“Fordlandia: The Rise and Fall of Henry Ford's Forgotten Jungle City” (Picador, $16), a National Book Award finalist by New York University's Latin American history professor Greg Grandin, proves once again that truth is stranger than fiction.

Fordlandia was Henry Ford's ill-conceived and catastrophic attempt to transform a tract of the Amazon River Basin — twice the size of Delaware — into a highly producing rubber plantation. Ford envisioned an operation that would run with the efficiency of his auto assembly lines. But along with the raw materials, this vision also included claiming the hearts and minds of the locals.

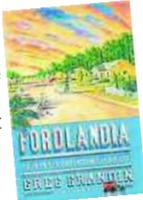

To do this, a typical Midwestern American “town” was built for the native workers, with rows of matching homes surrounded by white picket fences, sidewalks dotted with fire hydrants, a golf course, churches, movie theaters, stores, a large and well-equipped hospital and a community center for square dancing. Workers would be paid the unheard-of sum of $5 per day, then spend it in the company-owned businesses. In short, Ford was trying to construct an agricultural and industrial utopia.

Why Ford did not hire native naturalists at the very beginning of the project is one of the biggest questions at the heart of this story. They certainly would have been able to advise him on where and how to raise rubber in the region. An even bigger question is why Ford never set foot there. But 18 years and a quarter of a billion dollars (in today's money) failed to produce a viable plantation. Instead, Fordlandia succeeded in wreaking havoc on the area's ecosystem and indigenous people.

The book is well researched, with several pages of footnotes and an index. But readers will find themselves poring over the numerous fascinating photos and perhaps, like me, shaking their heads in disbelief.

Now I can hardly wait to get my hands on the highly praised “Fordlandia: A Novel” by Argentinian writer Eduardo Sguiglia, published in 2000, which is the tale of Horacio, a worker on the plantation. The book is out of print, but used copies are available on Amazon.com.

Judi Baxter owned and operated Judi's Bookstore in downtown Twin Falls from 1978 to 1992. From 2000 to 2004 she wrote a twice-weekly column for Publisher's Weekly's online edition called “Reviews in the News.”

For the past 18 years, Kids Art in the Park has taught children artistic skills in the inspirational beauty of Twin Falls City Park.

And it's back again on Saturday. Kids Art in the Park is unlike the similarly named Art in the Park — instead of vendors selling wares, Saturday's event features local volunteers with booths to teach different kinds of artmaking to kids in kindergarten through seventh grade.

“I just love that it keeps going,” said Karen Fothergill, a Filer High School art teacher who will teach “Watercolor Creatures and Aliens” to kindergartners through second-graders at the event. “A lot of kids come every year, and in that regard you kind of get to know them after a while. ... It's so popular.”

Kathy Dabestani, a math teacher at Canyon Ridge High School, will run a workshop for grades three through five, showing them how to make candle-holding lanterns using wax paper and tongue depressors.

“Finding a project is the hardest part,” Dabestani said. “I had to find something that would be fun for both boys and girls of that age group.”

Kids from the College of Southern Idaho's refugee center have attended Kids Art in the Park for years. Maryam Jumah, an 8-year-old refugee from Iraq, participated last year.

“I liked that it's so easy to paint,” the girl said. “I felt really creative. If you like to go to the park, it's trouble paying the fee, we can waive that fee for them. We receive funding from local sponsors; this is really just to teach art to the kids.”

A special performance at noon Saturday will feature young singers, musicians, dancers and actors, both impromptu and prepared. This showcase is free, and all ages may attend.

Kids Art in the Park has never turned away children who want to participate, even if they don't register on time, according to Carolyn White, program director for Magic Valley Arts Council.

“Parents can stay with their kids if they want to,” White said. “In fact, for the Happy Hands Preschool Session, it's required. But we could always use parents to volunteer or serve lunch!”

“I have enjoyed working with the kids,” said Dabestani, who is preparing for her second year running a Kids Art in the Park workshop. “I appreciate the town trying to get more involved with the arts around here.”

The one-day event helps fill what some see as a gap.

“There's a need for art education for kids because elementary schools don't have art teachers,” Fothergill said. “And this is relatively cheap. Parents basically just pay for the supplies. But if there's a family that has Kyrstin Tindall works at A+ Solutions, offering counseling and therapy while nearing graduation from Idaho State University with a degree in social work. She and her husband recently moved from Boise to Burley for her husband's job as a crop adviser for J.R. Simplot Co. They chose this play as a good way to maintain talents refined in high school and college.

"We've made our family here," Casey Tindall said. "Everyone knows everyone. For us it's kind of cool how a community can come together and have a fun time. And in the summer-time, it gives kids something to do."

"Everyone who is here is a volunteer," said Brendon Gorringer, who co-directs the show with his wife, Lisa. "There are about 60 to 65 people working to put this show together. We have rehearsals three or four times a week for three to four hours at a time. ... My wife is directing and makes costumes. There are a lot of people pulling double duty to put this together."

Center

Continued from Entertainment 1 scaled back the plans from five floors to three. The new design eliminated residential areas and focuses entirely on commercial space after developers determined the Twin Falls market couldn't support the high-end units.

The delay hasn't scared off businesses and donors who pledged large sums, McBride said.

"It was always a question mark as to when we were going to be able to raise the funds and when we were going to get the total financial package together," he said.

Proof of progress

Although there is plenty more construction to do before the October opening, Pinnacle West is starting to come to life. McBride and Al Frost, fellow co-chairman of the capital campaign, gave a tour Tuesday, walking visitors through empty areas that will house the arts council's theater, three classrooms and two offices.

The theater will have unfixed seating, allowing for dinner shows with table seating or chairs set up in rows. An audiovisual room upstairs will overlook the audience, and the stage will feature a grand piano, a drop-down screen, and a proscenium, or apron around the stage.

On the second floor, two classrooms separated by a foldable wall overlook the theater. A separate third classroom has large windows that are perfect for painting classes, McBride said.

Outside, a stage and lawn will provide performance spaces for musicians and dancers and areas for markets to set up. McBride hopes the area will beckon the public to sit and enjoy the space.

Magic Valley Arts Council is still planning its programs for the next year, said Robin Baumgartner, the arts center program coordinator. What she knows for sure: The center will be home to classes for creative minds of all ages. Think Kindermusic in the afternoon, creative writing in the evening and high school

The arts center will share the building with other private businesses, including a restaurant, Westerra Real Estate, Milestone Builders and law offices. Shared spaces include an atrium in the main entrance, hallways and an elevator.

Arts center neighbor

Sharing the first floor with the arts center is a Tom Nickel-owned restaurant, yet to be named. Nickel, who owns three Wood River Valley restaurants, said the Twin Falls business will serve creative American cuisine.

The arts center and restaurant are separate entities but will work together for events. Nickel may use the arts center's facilities, or the arts center can use the restaurant for catering, McBride said.

"The synergy between the restaurant and the arts center will be great for Twin Falls," Nickel said.

The restaurant has space for a bar, dining room and patio. Large windows provide indoor diners with a gorgeous view of the Snake River Canyon, and the patio's design will preserve much of the scenery. Instead of safety rails, the finished deck will use planters along the edge to keep customers safe, said developer Fran Florence.

Nickel and McBride couldn't be happier with the killer view.

"My jaw still hits the ground whenever I show up to the work site," Nickel said.

Enjoy found-object artist's work among Ketchum Arts Festival booths

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — You might say Gail Leach just can't leave well enough alone.

A doll she picks up at a garage sale soon grows a flower pot on its head, and the pot gets two tiny roses. Before Leach is done with it, she's made a swimsuit for the doll.

She covers a wooden horse she picked up in Sweden with beads, and a glass head with a flapper hat she made out of found objects. She tops a wooden heart with a doll head and dangles arms and legs from it — all embellished with yet more objects.

Even a tree root isn't safe around Leach, who naturally endows it with eyes, a mouth, a string of pearls and the hairdo of an eccentric old lady.

And her plastic bathroom shower? Well, it's loaded with pockets decorated with knickknacks.

"Everything she creates makes me smile. She's very clever," said Ketchum artist Diana Fassino. "I love the way she finds all these things and turns them into something different."

Leach will be one of 115 artists who will show their wares at the Ketchum Arts Festival today through Sunday.

The festival, now in its 11th year, includes professional and non-professional artists and craftspeople and an eclectic selection of high-end, sophisticated art and affordable arts, including Russ Lamb's larger-than-life bronze animals, Sally Kern's colorful windsocks, in-laid furniture, handmade hula hoops, jewelry and paintings, said Lisa Horton, one of the organizers.

Leach is looking forward to it. Last year — her first with the festival — brought her some high-profile customers, including Warren Buffett's daughter, who went home toting some of Leach's handmade flowers.

Leach didn't used to consider herself an artist. In her mind, she was just someone who filled up her homes in Sun Valley and the San Juan Islands with such things as miniature chairs made out of pencils and chopsticks, or a wooden duck embellished with the letters "Quack" written with beads from Hong Kong and bone beads from the Great Wall of China.

BELOW: People often ask Leach whether she has worn this hat. It's glued onto the glass head, she tells them.

Her creative foray started innocently enough 30 years ago with a group of women who decided to make six Christmas ornaments — one for each woman. Once Leach's mind started thinking of the possibilities, she couldn't turn it off. And she was only encouraged when friends began clamoring to buy her pieces.

Now she can't help herself. Every piece of driftwood, every shell, every trinket she picks up at the Gold Mine thrift store or at her son's home in Denmark becomes fodder for delightful, crazy inventions.

"My son said, 'Mother you can make something from nothing,'" she said. "Every piece is an original. I never duplicate anything because I never have any duplicate parts."

Boy Scouts celebrate centennial, salute National Guard

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Pull that old Boy Scout sash out of the closet or attic, and count the number of merit badges sewn on. If you were a Scout in south-central Idaho, those badges are part of more than a million earned by more than 70,000 Scouts since the Snake River Council received its charter from the Boy Scouts of America in 1922.

The national organization is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year, and across the country local councils are honoring current and former Scouts and other patriotic organizations. The Snake River Council will hold a bigger-than-usual version of its annual Cabaret on Aug. 7, featuring The Osmond Brothers — just Merrill, Wayne, Jay and Jimmy — in their first Twin Falls appearance.

The Osmonds, who gained pop status in the 1960s on the Andy Williams Show and went on to earn nine gold records in 1971, are still performing together regularly in their adopted hometown of Branson, Mo. They have long exemplified the principles of patriotism, family and faith that the Boy Scouts emphasize, said Snake River Council vice president Jim O'Donnell.

"They seem to represent the good old classic American pie values," O'Donnell said. He said the Osmonds will design a program featuring songs with patriotic themes as well as the standards they have become beloved for.

Finding performing groups that haven't succumbed to the hazards of a life of popularity hasn't always been easy for the Boy Scouts, said McKay

SCOUTING FOR TICKETS?

Tickets for the Aug. 7 dinner and The Osmond Brothers show are available at srCouncil.org/tickets or at these locations: Book Plaza in Burley; Welch's Music in Burley, Twin Falls and Boise; Crowley's — The Quad in Twin Falls; Everybody's Business in Twin Falls; Ron's Car Care in Jerome; and Snake River Council Service Center, 2988 Falls Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

CENTENNIAL SCHEDULE

This year's Snake River Council Cabaret on Aug. 7, featuring The Osmond Brothers, will begin with dinner, followed by a patriotic celebration and fireworks, all at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer.

5:30 p.m. — Plated dinner. Includes a meet-and-greet with the Osmonds and entrance to the show. $200 per couple.

7:30 p.m. — Flag ceremony featuring the 116th Idaho Army National Guard, military jet fly-over, Osmond performance and closing fireworks. $20 before July 31, $25 after July 31.

Lundgren, Snake River Council vice president of fundraising.

But the annual local Cabaret has always managed to put together a fun concert, with past artists including the Bar J Wranglers, ReGeneration and the New Christy Minstrels. The event has earned between $25,000 and $60,000 each year, and with the draw of the Osmonds and the capacity of the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds, Lundgren said, the Scouts are hoping for record receipts from this year's concert.

The event is also planned to include a military jet fly-over, a color guard from the 116th Idaho Army National Guard, skydivers and a fireworks show, and a plated dinner for an additional charge.

The salute to the 116th, which will deploy to Iraq this fall, is an extension of the Scouts' core values, said O'Donnell, whose son is a member of the brigade.

"This is a way for us to express our appreciation for them, and the underlying patriotism (of Scouting)," he said.

Over the past hundred years, Scouting has gone through significant changes, Lundgren said, including a struggle to embrace technology and engage modern Scouts — with the new geocaching merit badge, for example — without losing its values.

"The hallmark of what we do is still patriotism and duty to God and much of that, the schoolroom for everything we do, is the outdoors and nature," Lundgren said. "We're trying to build boys rather than mend men. We have too many broken men, and if we can get to these boys early on and teach them what it means to be a husband, a father, a citizen, a business person, what your word and your honor are all about, we're going to be so much better off."

Although the Scouts do engage in some large-scale efforts of community service, such as annual Scouting for Food drives and Johnny Horizon trash pick-ups, most community members will have seen examples of that service in the very local projects that each advanced Scout takes on to achieve Eagle status.

About 500 Scouts earn Eagle each year from the Snake River Council, and each project represents between 100 and 300 man-hours, Lundgren said. The projects vary from building and installing bluebird houses to repairing Forest Service bridges, from repainting a playground to adding crosswalk flags in a school neighborhood.

"That's the quiet, unsung heroes," Lundgren said.

Knowledge earned as a Scout can also have a dramatic, immediate effect — even saving lives, O'Donnell said. He learned cardiopulmonary resuscitation as a Scout, and said he has used it five times during his adult life, including once on his son.

Passing on those values and knowledge is the key to Scouting, Lundgren said.

"The oath that every Boy Scout and volunteer leader takes is 'On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country,'" he said. "That's what we're teaching these young men so they can be great citizens to carry on the torch in the next generation."

LeBron makes his pick: He's going to Miami

By Tom Withers
Associated Press writer

See ya, Cleveland. Sorry, Chicago, New York and New Jersey. Maybe next time around, Clippers.

LeBron James chose superstar help over the comforts of home and is heading for Miami because he wants to win a championship with Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh.

NBA, get ready: A superstar trio has just been born.

Ending weeks of will-he-or-won't-he speculation, the two-time MVP said Thursday night that he's decided to join the Heat and leave the Cavaliers after an unsuccessful seven-year quest for the ring he covets.

"I can't say it was always in my plans, because I never thought it was possible," James said on a made-for-Lebron live show on ESPN. "But the things that the Miami Heat franchise have done, to free up cap space and be able to put themselves in a position this summer to have all three of us, it was hard to turn down. Those are two great players, two of the greatest players that we have in this game today."

Olympic teammates in Beijing, James, Bosh and Wade all helped deliver gold medals.

This time, it'll be about a gold trophy, the NBA championship one — the one Wade got in 2006, the one that James and Bosh have yet to touch.

"Winning is a huge thing for me," James said from a studio in Greenwich, Conn., where an audience of kids from the Boys and Girls club was present for the announcement.

It's a huge victory for the Heat, which got commitments from Wade and Bosh on Wednesday. That duo,

Cleveland fans anguished

By Meghan Barr
Associated Press writer

CLEVELAND — Cleveland fans gathered around televisions and yelled in anguish Thursday night as LeBron James announced he will leave the Cavaliers and sign with the Miami Heat.

At a shopping area in suburban Westlake, a loud "No" was heard the moment after James said on ESPN that he was going to South Beach. Hundreds of people who had clamored to see the announcement turned their backs and headed home in droves.

"I'm really stunned, I never thought he'd leave," said Tom Sheehan, 15, of Westlake, who wore a James Cavaliers jersey as he watched the announcement. "It's like we just lost a championship on the final shot at the buzzer. It's so disappointing."

Jerseys were burned by fans outside a bar in suburban Lakewood, according to WEWS-TV of Cleveland. Footage on the station's website shows a fan taking off a T-shirt reading "Please stay LBJ" and laying it atop a pile of burning No. 23

Tricked out

Annual Wake in the Snake catches some air Saturday

By Ryan Howe

WAKE IN THE SNAKE

Wakeboard Competition
Burley Golf Course Marina
Saturday: Competition starts 9 a.m.
Free for spectators
Note: The ramp and water will be closed to the public, 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

BURLEY — Go big or go home. As the 12th Annual Wake in the Snake gets rolling Saturday on the Snake River, all competitors will have their sights set on high-flying Braxton Tomlinson.

"He explodes out of the wake on every trick. He takes all his tricks so big," said Zac Davis, a rider from Wendell. "He had a double-up earlier this year that was probably the biggest double-up I've ever seen. He's not afraid to take his tricks huge."

Last year's outlaw division champion, 17-year-old Tomlinson of Mud Lake will be back to defend his Wake in the Snake title.

"He's definitely been the guy that everybody's chasing," said Davis. "Hopefully this year everybody else will be able to step up and make it a closer race."

One of Tomlinson's biggest competitors, however, won't be challenging him this year. Andrew Wallace of Aberdeen, who was runner-up in 2009, suffered a broken arm while riding last week.

That could leave the door open for riders like Davis to chase a top-3 finish. Last year, Davis' run was marred by two falls as he stumbled to eighth place.

"I didn't do so hot last year," said Davis, who is a student at Boise State. "I'm hoping to get a whole run in, knock down some tricks and see where we stand after that."

About 40 to 50 riders will have their best tricks dialed in at Saturday's competition, which is sponsored by Idaho Water Sports. Registration is $50 and check-in for riders is at 7:30 a.m., followed by a mandatory riders' meeting at 8:30. Competition begins at 9 a.m.

The competition is divided into classes: outlaw, women, advanced, intermediate, novice and grom (9 and under). Part of the proceeds will be donated to Pomerelle Ski Patrol.

Highly-regarded head judge Ryan Shimabukuro is back for his seventh Wake in the Snake. Shimabukuro has judged pro and amateur wakeboard tournaments since 1999, including prestigious events such as the Gravity Games, Pro Wakeboard Tour, Malibu Open, USA Nationals and Collegiate Nationals.

"The riders respect him and respect his word," said Carol Warr, business manager of Idaho Water Sports. "We're really fortunate to have him."

The event is free to the public, and spectators are invited to watch the competition from the grassy, spectator-friendly bank. There will be games and activities courtesy of Play and Trade and Adam Haynes of State Farm Insurance.

Recreational boaters should be aware the Burley Golf Course Marina and its surrounding waters will be closed to the public on Saturday from 6 a.m. until the event concludes, approximately 6 p.m.

Mark Cavendish wins 5th stage at Tour de France, Armstrong 30th

By Jamey Keaten
Associated Press writer

MONTARGIS, France — Cycling's "bad boy" just made good.

British sprint star Mark Cavendish broke down in tears after overcoming a Tour de France victory drought by winning the race's fifth stage on Thursday.

France's sports minister said her heart was warmed and fellow riders reached out to Cavendish as he cried. He said he had learned to come down from his "cloud" — where both elation and high expectations reside.

With the pack close on the heels of Cavendish, the overall standings didn't change on the hot and mostly flat 116.3-mile trek along wheat fields from Epernay in Champagne country to Montargis.

Gerald Ciolek of Germany was second and Norway's Edvald Boasson Hagen third.

Fabian Cancellara retained the leader's yellow jersey, defending champion Alberto Contador of Spain was 19th in the stage, and seven-time tour winner Lance Armstrong finished 30th.

With the Tour headed across the flats of northeastern France, sprint specialists like Cavendish get their chance to shine. When the race heads to the Alps starting Sunday, they're all but certain to fade into the back-

The 25-year-old Briton, known nearly as much for his dazzling promise as a sprinter as for his hot temper, made it look easy behind a splendid performance by his HTC-Columbia teammates, finishing the stage in 4 hours, 30 minutes, 50 seconds.

While he won three stages in races this year — and even won the final Tour stage in 2009 — Cavendish suggested it felt like an eternity since he'd won on cycling's biggest stage.

"It's incredible, it's been a long time," said Cavendish of his 11th career stage win at the Tour. "Yesterday wasn't that great for us. I let the guys down."

In Tuesday's fourth stage, Cavendish lost out to Italian veteran Alessandro Petacchi — even though the Briton had a near picture-perfect lead-out from his team — and hurled his bike in frustration afterward.

Cavendish's image also took a blow this spring after he was fined by international cycling's governing body for making a finger gesture that was deemed unsuitable after he won a sprint finish in a Tour de Romandie stage.

Holding his face in his hands and breaking down in a TV interview, Cavendish admitted the "pressure was immense," said he had been through a lot and denied that he had thrown his bike down a day earlier.

"I just want to thank all the people who supported me," he added.

Class A

COWBOYS THROTTLE IDAHO FALLS
The Twin Falls Cowboys Class A American Legion Baseball team pounded Idaho Falls in both games of a doubleheader on Thursday, winning the opener 11-1 and the nightcap 13-0.

Casey Merritt doubled in both games for the Cowboys.

"Both of our pitchers did a good job of spotting up the ball and their pitchers really struggled," said Twin Falls coach Mark Schaal. "We are playing really well right now."

HAWKS FALLS TO POCATELLO

Scott Speer's home run wasn't enough for the Twin Falls Hawks to get a win at the ballpark as they lost 17-4 and 4-3 to the host Pocatello Razorbacks.

The Hawks bounced back in Game 2 to tie the game 3-3 but lost on a heartbreaking error.

"Scott Speer hit about a 360-foot home run and had five RBIs in the two games," said Twin Falls coach Brady Madsen. "This team really bounced back from their beating in Game 1 and held the lead. They played really well in that second game."

Rockies pitcher Jimenez earns 15th win

DENVER — Ubaldo Jimenez became the first pitcher to reach 15 wins before the All-Star break in 10 years and Colorado beat St. Louis 4-2 on Thursday.

Jason Giambi went 4 for 4 with two RBIs and Dexter Fowler had two hits for the Rockies, who swept the three-game series.

Huston Street worked the ninth for his third save.

Jon Jay doubled twice for the Cardinals.

Jimenez (15-1) was dominant over eight innings, allowing one run and three hits. He struck out six and walked one.

Chris Carpenter (9-3) gave up nine hits, struck out three and walked two in six innings.

GIANTS 9, BREWERS 3

MILWAUKEE — Aubrey Huff homered and drove in four runs, and rookie Buster Posey homered as San Francisco's bullpen held on to complete a four-game sweep.

Andres Torres homered in the eighth and Posey homered for the fourth time in the series in the ninth. The Giants outscored the Brewers 36-7 in this series for their first four-game sweep in Milwaukee.

Huff drove in runs with a single in the first, a two-run homer in the third and a sacrifice fly in the fourth off Brewers starter Manny Parra (3-6) as the Giants built a 6-0 lead.

ASTROS 2, PIRATES 0

HOUSTON — Roy Oswalt allowed only a first-inning single to Neil Walker, and Lance Berkman provided the power with two home runs as Houston completed a three-game sweep.

Oswalt's seventh career shutout and 19th complete game finished the Astros' third sweep of the season — second over the Pirates, the only team in the NL Central with a worse record than

PADRES 7, NATIONALS 1

WASHINGTON — Mat Latos threw seven shutout innings and had two hits, including one of San Diego's four homers.

Latos (10-4) won his career-high fifth consecutive decision. He gave up five hits and two walks, with eight strikeouts.

He hit his first career homer off Luis Atilano (6-6) in the fourth inning, then singled and scored in the seventh.

PHILLIES 4, REDS 3, 12 INNINGS

PHILADELPHIA — Brian Schneider hit a game-ending homer in the bottom of the 12th inning, giving Philadelphia a victory over the NL Central-leading Cincinnati.

Shane Victorino had a solo homer for the struggling Phillies, who had lost seven of 10. They overcame another blown save by Brad Lidge to win this one.

Joey Votto hit his league-leading 22nd homer hours

WHITE SOX 1, ANGELS 0

CHICAGO — John Danks held Los Angeles hitless for six innings before finishing with a two-hitter Thursday, and Chicago won 1-0 for a four-game sweep and its 22nd victory in 27 games.

Danks (8-7) gave up a lead-off single to Reggie Willits in the seventh. After yielding another single, he pitched out of trouble and got his first major league shutout.

Chicago won its fifth straight and moved within one-half game of Detroit for first place in the AL Central.

RAYS 5, INDIANS 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Carl Crawford hit two two-run homers and Wade Davis stopped his six-game winless streak.

A-Rod approaching milestone of 600 home runs

By Jane McCauley
Associated Press writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — For years, Alex Rodriguez has been proclaimed baseball's future home run king. He has cleared the fences at such a remarkable rate, reaching many milestones more quickly than any other slugger of any generation.

He also has long been among the most closely scrutinized figures in his sport, practically from the day he took his first swing in the majors on July 8, 1994, 19 days shy of his 19th birthday, to his days as one of the game's richest stars.

As he approaches his next significant accomplishment — career home run No. 600 — the focus on A-Rod figures to intensify even more, and not just because he will become just the seventh player to reach the hallowed mark. He will be the first admitted steroid user to get there.

After hitting two homers on Tuesday in Oakland, the Yankees star was three away at 597 entering a four-game series in his old Seattle stomping grounds starting Thursday night that takes New York into the All-Star break.

Getting to 600 used to come with an automatic spot in Cooperstown at the Hall of Fame. Yet it's unclear how Rodriguez will be received when he does it — especially if he does it this weekend back in the Northwest city where his career took off in the mid-90s.

New York Yankees third baseman Alex Rodriguez is closing in on 600 career home runs.

Jumbotron every game," Rodriguez said of his total. "It's hard to ignore it but I'm looking at 600 as first base. I want to run right through it and use it as a platform and a springboard for more to come."

From his pro baseball beginning with the Mariners to that monster $252 million, 10-year contract he received from Texas for his first free-agent deal at age 25, A-Rod's career — not to mention his personal life — has been closely watched. Then came the pressures and spotlight that followed his move to the Bronx, where he was supposed to help George Steinbrenner's club get back to regularly winning the World Series. It took until his sixth season in pinstripes to capture that elusive ring.

While home run chases generate their share of national attention and interest — think Mark McGwire-Sammy Sosa, Barry Bonds-Babe Ruth and Bonds-Hank Aaron — there's no countdown at Yankee Stadium as Rodriguez closes in on his latest feat. The hype is minor compared to the excitement about the defending World Series champions sending the majors' biggest contingent to Tuesday's All-Star game in Anaheim.

Still, there's no denying it takes some serious production to clear the fences 600 times.

"Wow, it's a Hall of Fame career," Yankees manager Joe Girardi said. "It's incredible production. It's consistency for a long time to get to that point. It's not something you see very often. Alex has been a superstar for a long time. I don't know where the ceiling is (for him)."

Rodriguez doesn't even turn 35 until later this month, on July 27.

That leaves plenty of years for more longballs — at least that's what everybody expects from him.

"Al's going to hit 800 home runs," Hall of Famer Reggie Jackson said. "He's got (nearly) 600 now, he's (almost) 35. He's going to play five more years if he stays healthy. He's going to hit another 150, so he's going to hit 750, probably more."

Jackson has been around a few of those other guys in the elite 600 — or 700 for that matter — club. He hit 563 career homers in his 21-year career.

BLUE JAYS 8, TWINS 1

TORONTO — Jose Bautista hit one of Toronto's five homers and Brett Cecil snapped a four-start winless skid.

Fred Lewis, Adam Lind, Jose Molina and Lyle Overbay also went deep for the Blue Jays, who hit 10 homers in the three-game series and lead the majors with 130. Bautista leads the majors with 23 homers and eight Blue Jays have at least 10 home runs before the All-Star break, a club first.

Cecil (8-5) won for the first time since June 10 at Tampa Bay, allowing one run and four hits in seven innings. The Blue Jays won consecutive games for the first time since June 18-19 against San Francisco.

ORIOLES 6, RANGERS 4

ARLINGTON, Texas — Craig Tatum drew a bases-loaded walk in the eighth inning to force in the go-ahead run and Scott Moore and Felix Pie homered for Baltimore, which rallied from a four-run deficit.

Baltimore loaded the bases in a three-run eighth against Frank Francisco (6-4). Darren Oliver relieved and hit Pie with a pitch to force in a run and tie it at 4. Oliver then walked Tatum to force in pinch-runner Cesar Izturis, giving Baltimore a 5-4 lead.

Julio Lugo's RBI single off Darren O'Day made it 6-4.

along with James, formed the upper echelon of the most-celebrated free-agent period in league history.

Heat president Pat Riley landed them all, a three-pack of stars to help shape his quest for a dynasty in Miami.

"There's magic in the number three," Wade said, a nod to his jersey number.

And for Cleveland, a city swayed for generations by some of sports' biggest let-downs, James' long-awaited words represented a defeat perhaps unlike any other.

James is gone. Home sweet home no more.

He said he made the decision Thursday morning and knows it won't go over well in Ohio.

"They can have mixed emotions, of course," James said, adding that Akron will "always be home for me."

His new home — part-time or otherwise — wasted no time in beginning the celebration. Horns honked outside the arena and on Miami Beach, where Wade was watching the announcement with members of his inner circle.

"It's going to be crazy," Wade said.

In Cleveland, the immediate reaction was predictably filled with outrage. Television images showed at least one fan burning James' No. 23 wine-and-gold jersey.

"I can't get involved in that," he said. "I wanted to do what was best for LeBron James ... At the end of the day, I feel awful. I feel even worse that I wasn't able to bring an NBA championship to that city."

"To my real fans out there, I hope that you'll continue to support me all the way to Miami."

James met with six teams on the free-agent recruiting circuit, and said the process was "everything I thought, and more."

"We are disappointed that LeBron James did not pick the New York Knicks, but we respect his decision," Knicks president Donnie Walsh said.

Added Mikhail

Prokhorov, the new owner of the New Jersey Nets, another club that swung and missed on landing James: "We have a vision of a championship team and need to invest wisely and for the long term. Fortunately, we have more than one plan to reach success, and, as I have found in all areas of my business, that is key to achieving it."

And Bulls general manager Gar Forman said he was convinced his organization "made the strongest of bids to acquire LeBron James during this free agency period."

James, Bosh and Wade entered the pros in the same year, the respective Nos. 1, 4 and 5 picks in the 2003 draft. They went their separate ways: James to Cleveland, Bosh to Toronto and Wade to Miami, where he won a championship partnered with center Shaquille O'Neal in 2006. That year, James, Bosh and Wade all signed matching contracts to make sure they were all unrestricted free agents at the same time.

Season-ticket sales for the Heat's coming 41-game season were suspended Thursday afternoon after the entire supply of available seats were sold out. Not every seat has been released for sale yet and some will be held back for single-game purchases at the 19,600-capacity arena.

"I'll believe it when I see it," Louisville coach Rick Pitino said while attending that," he said. "I wanted to do what was best for LeBron James ... At the end of the day, I feel awful. I feel even worse that I wasn't able to bring an NBA championship to that city."

Believe it.

The Cavaliers, a franchise that was in ruins before winning a lottery drawing and bringing James up Interstate 77 from his Akron home, have had the upper hand — until now. They were able to offer him more money — $30 million more — than any other team.

This wasn't about money, though.

Wade and Bosh both said they would take fewer dollars to make this happen.

Cavaliers jerseys.

In downtown Cleveland, police had additional patrols to deal with crowds, but Patrol Officer Nancy Dominik said no problems were reported.

At the Harry Buffalo bar across the street from the Cavs' Quicken Loans Arena, fans fell silent as the announcement was made, with some covering their faces and looking as if they were crying. Some yelled "Turn it off" and others shouted profanities aimed at James.

Within five minutes, the packed bar was nearly empty.

At The Purple Shamrock bar's two locations, owner Frank Borally had promised to pick up patrons' food tabs if James had chosen to stay with the Cavs.

"I would have paid it threefold ... if he would have stayed," Borally said. "It's bad, it's not good. We'll deal with it. It's Cleveland, it's typical Cleveland."

Bar-goers had started making reservations for tables of eight and 10 by mid-afternoon.

"We were packed, and then everybody left," he said.

He said James' presence kept his business going when Cavs' fans went to the games, especially during cold-weather months.

"I hope Mr. Gilbert has a good plan set up, but we need a miracle," he said, referring to Cavaliers owner Dan Gilbert.

In Berea, at a bar about a half mile from the Cleveland Browns' training camp, fans in Browns jerseys were asked if what James did is worse than Art Modell, who took his Browns franchise to Baltimore in 1995, where the team stayed until fans in Cleveland fought to get it back.

"No way. LeBron did us a favor," said Fred Sczerpak of Berea. "He's a loser. He turned his back on us and good riddance."

"The difference is, Modell took a team everybody loved. That's why we hate him even more."

GOLF ROUNDUP

Goydos shoots 59 at John Deere Classic

SILVIS, Ill. — After four months of pretty lousy play on the PGA Tour, Paul Goydos managed to turn things around just a bit — he shot a 59.

Out of nowhere. “Today was a nuclear bomb,” Goydos said. “I don’t know where it came from. If I knew that, I wouldn’t be able to touch it.”

Perhaps just as amazing, Goydos held only a one-stroke lead Thursday after an incredible opening round at the John Deere Classic.

Defending champion Steve Stricker shot a 60, making for the two lowest scores ever in a single round at a PGA event. And he just missed tying Goydos on the last hole.

With the par-71 TPC Deere Run course softened by three days of intermittent rain, a lot of golfers were expected to go low. But the fourth 59 in tour history and then a 60 on the same day?

No one could have expected that.

“You’re 12 back before you even step on the first tee. That’s tough to swallow,” Stricker said. “That’s why you’ve got to get into a little different thought process and get in your own little world and chip away.” “The course is ripe for scoring,” he added.

Michael Letzig, Matt Jones, Aaron Baddeley and James Nitties all finished at 7-under 64. Jay Williamson, Daniel Chopra, Scott McCarron and Charley Hoffman had 65s.

All paled in comparison with Goydos’ stunning 59.

He has missed (seven) almost has many cuts as he’s made this year (10). He hasn’t had a top 40 finish since early May. He led the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in February by a stroke with five holes to play, only to tumble out of contention with an quadruple-bogey 9 on No. 14.

“I’ve been very good at playing poorly now for the last 10 tournaments or so,” Goydos said. Not anymore.

His tee shots found the middle of the fairway. His approaches stuck on the green. And, most important, his putts found the middle of the cup again and again.

Goydos, who hasn’t won on the tour since 2007 and has just two victories in 18 years overall, needed only 22 putts to dominate the soggy course (Stricker needed 25).

Paul Goydos watches his shot from the No. 18 tee during the first round of the John Deere Classic golf tournament Thursday in Silvis, Ill. Goydos became only the fourth player in tour history to shoot a 59.

With such wet conditions, golfers were allowed to lift, clean and place balls on the fairway.

The 59 was the first on the tour since David Duval’s memorable final round

LANG PROVES OAKMONT CAN GIVE UP LOW SCORES

OAKMONT, Pa. — Temperatures were in the 90s. Michelle Wie was in the 80s. On a demanding day when tough old Oakmont Country Club illustrated again that playing par golf can be an achievement, only Brittany Lang was in the 60s.

Lang withstood Oakmont’s slick, sun-browned greens and the unrelenting heat to shoot a 2-under 69 on Thursday and take a one-shot lead over 2008 champion Inbee Park, amateur Kelli Shean and three others in the first round of the U.S. Women’s Open.

“You said it couldn’t be done, but on any golf course you can shoot a low number,” Lang said. “If you’re hitting the ball good, you can for sure shoot a low score out here. But if you’re not on your game you can shoot a big one.”

Rolling in a 40-foot putt on the 442-yard No. 15 to seize a two-shot lead before giving up a stroke at difficult No. 18, Lang managed to shoot the round of the day at a time of the day — late afternoon and early evening — when Oakmont’s greens were chewed up and as unpredictable as ever.

Shean, a South Africa native who was pushed to become a world-class golfer by idol Ernie Els, and South Korea’s Park were joined at 1-under 70 by two other Korean golfers, M.J. Hur and Amy Yang.

Sakura Yokomine of Japan and Scotland’s Mhairi McKay, who teed off at a yawn-producing 7 a.m. EDT as part of the first threesome on the course, were alone at even-par 71.

Cristie Kerr, America’s first world No. 1-ranked golfer following her monumental 12-shot win at the LPGA Championship two weeks ago, was among a more-than-crowded group of 14 at 1-over 72.

CLARKE LEADS AT SCOTTISH OPEN

LUSS, Scotland — Darren Clarke upstaged fellow Northern Irishman Graeme McDowell with a 6-under 65 to take a one-shot lead after the first round.

McDowell, returning to tournament golf and his European Tour roots for the first time since his win at the U.S. Open, shot a 71 on a blustery day at Loch Lomond.

McDowell birdied his final two holes to finish alongside Phil Mickelson, who was making his first appearance in Europe since winning the Masters in April.

USC ineligible for coaches’ poll for 2010 season

LOS ANGELES — Southern California is ineligible for the USA Today coaches’ poll for the upcoming season.

Grant Teaff, the executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, issued a statement to USA Today on Thursday confirming that his organization’s members aren’t allowed to vote for any school on major probation, such as a bowl ban.

USC is appealing some aspects of the numerous penalties handed down by the NCAA last month, but agreed to serve the first year of its two-year bowl ban after the upcoming season. Any hearing of the Trojans’ appeal is unlikely until next year.

The coaches’ poll is part of the BCS formula used to determine its national champion.

ACC, ESPN REACH 12-YEAR TV RIGHTS DEAL

RALEIGH, N.C. — The Atlantic Coast Conference and ESPN have agreed to a 12-year deal that would give the network exclusive rights to conference football and men’s basketball games.

A person familiar with the agreement told The Associated Press that it’s worth $1.86 billion over the 12 years. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because financial terms were not released when the two sides announced the deal Thursday.

That would double the league’s annual TV revenue when the contract begins in the 2011-12 season. It would also give ESPN syndication rights that would allow Raycom Sports to carry games and maintain its long-running regional broadcasting relationship with the league.

Partnering with ESPN ends talk for now about the ACC following the lead of the Big Ten by creating its own television network. Commissioner John Swofford said the league did its “due diligence” by researching the issue, but said the ACC opted to avoid the upfront startup costs and the financial risk in favor of utilizing ESPN’s in-place broadcast and multimedia outlets.

“When you go with somebody for that kind of money with no financial risk and they have the extensive platforms they have to distribute your games — plus they have the technology and the desire to be on the cutting edge with new media — it really begs the question: why would you need your own network?” Swofford said.

The agreement marks the first time the ACC has negotiated one contract to bundle broadcasting rights for football and basketball. The previous deal brought in an average of about $72 million in TV money annually, which the league distributes evenly among its 12 members — an average of about $6 million per school.

By contrast, the ESPN deal would bring an average of $155 million in TV money per year, an average of more than $12.9 million per school. Those payouts don’t include money from bowl games, NCAA tournaments or any other revenue the league distributes to member schools.

Thursday’s announcement comes after 15 months of negotiations and a season in which league schools won a record eight national championships, with Duke’s NCAA title in men’s basketball marking the ACC’s fifth crown in 10 seasons. It also comes despite the national economic downturn and the recent possibility of widespread conference expansion and realignment — which ultimately amounted only to a handful of schools.

NATIONAL CHAMPION DUKE LEADS CBE CLASSIC FIELD

PRINCETON, N.J. — National champion Duke and NCAA tournament teams Kansas State, Gonzaga and Marquette have been selected as the regional hosts for this year’s CBE Classic college basketball tournament.

There will be three teams in each of the four regionals and the hosts, regardless of winning or losing, will advance to the semifinals and finals, Nov. 22-23 in Kansas City, Mo., it was announced Thursday.

Joining Duke in its regional are Princeton and Miami of Ohio; Kansas State hosts James Madison and Presbyterian; Marquette hosts Bucknell and Wisconsin-Green Bay; and Gonzaga hosts IUPUI and San Diego State.

Ainge: Celtics to sign C Jermaine

Boston Celtics general manager Danny Ainge confirmed that the Celtics have agreements in place with Paul Pierce and Ray Allen that would keep Boston’s new Big Three intact for a run at a third NBA finals in four years. Ainge also said he expects to sign free agent center Jermaine O’Neal to fill in while center Kendrick Perkins recovers from knee surgery.

“We intend to sign him,” Ainge told reporters. “Our priorities to start the offseason were obviously Paul, Ray, and to strengthen our center position in light of Perk’s injury. Hopefully by tomorrow we’ll have these things taken care of and then we can continue working.”

Ainge said he thinks Boston remains the team to beat in the East, regardless of who comes out the winner in the LeBron James sweepstakes that was scheduled to end with a televised announcement on Thursday night. James was reportedly leaning toward signing with the Miami Heat, who have already agreed to terms with top free agents Chris Bosh and Dwyane Wade.

“I have a great deal of respect for all those guys — all the top-notch free agents,” Ainge said in Orlando, Fla., where the Celtics are playing in a summer league. “Whatever happens, I know that it’s going to be a challenge. The East is going to be stronger. But I think everybody that’s worth their salt thinks they can beat somebody.”

Ainge said Perkins tore his ACL and also injured the MCL and PCL; he could miss half the season or more. Surgery is scheduled for Monday, having been postponed at least twice to allow the swelling to go down and give him a chance to strengthen the muscles in his leg before the operation.

A six-time All-Star, O’Neal has averaged 14 points and 7.5 rebounds in a 14-year career for Portland, Indiana, Toronto and Miami. With the Heat last year, he averaged 13.6 points and 6.9 rebounds in 28 minutes.

BULLS ACQUIRE F CARLOS BOOZER

CHICAGO — Carlos Boozer is now officially a member of the Chicago Bulls.

The two-time All-Star forward is going to the Bulls in a sign-and-trade with the Utah Jazz, giving them the dominant big man they’ve craved for years.

He and the Bulls agreed Wednesday to what several outlets reported was a five-year deal worth roughly $75 million dollars. Shortly after Chicago announced the signing on Thursday, Jazz spokesman Jonathan Rinehart said Utah sent him along with a future protected second-round pick to the Bulls for a trade exception.

The deal gives the Jazz salary cap flexibility while the Bulls get a major presence inside.

“I feel we have the talent here to begin competing for a title and I cannot wait to get started,” Boozer said.

The Bulls also confirmed the draft day trade that sent Kirk Hinrich and his $9 million salary along with the rights to No. 17 pick Kevin Seraphin to Washington. They received the rights to 2006 second-round pick Vladimir Veremeenko in return. But more important, that deal put them in position to sign two major stars.

They already had an All-Star point guard in Derrick Rose and one of the

AP SOURCE: C HAYWOOD STAYS WITH MAVS FOR $55M

DALLAS — Brendan Haywood is coming back to the Dallas Mavericks — as the starting center.

Haywood agreed Thursday to a $55 million, six-year contract, according to a person familiar with negotiations. The person spoke to The Associated Press on Thursday on the condition of anonymity because details were still being finalized.

Dallas acquired the 7-footer from Washington as part of a blockbuster deal at the trade deadline last season. He was a big part of the Mavs getting on a roll soon after, but down the stretch he lost playing time — and his starting job — to Erick Dampier.

The Mavs have been planning to trade or cut Dampier for salary cap reasons. While Dampier could end up re-signing with Dallas, this deal should make Hayward more comfortable about his spot in the team’s hierarchy. He also has to like the Mavericks making him their next move after convincing franchise icon Dirk Nowitzki to stick around. In fact, coach Rick Carlisle visited Hayward in North Carolina right at the start of free agency, while other members of the front office were focused on Nowitzki.

CLIPPERS SIGN FREE AGENTS FOYE, GOMES

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Clippers have signed free agents Randy Foye and Ryan Gomes.

The deals were announced Thursday night, shortly after LeBron James said he was leaving Cleveland for the Miami Heat. The Clippers were among the teams that made a pitch to James.

Foye, who has played for four seasons, averaged 10.1 points, 3.3 assists and 1.9 rebounds in 70 games for the Washington Wizards last season.

Gomes, who has played for five seasons, averaged 10.9 points and 4.6 rebounds in 76 games for Minnesota last season. He was traded by Minnesota to Portland on draft day last month, and was waived by the Trail Blazers on June 29.

LAKERS SIGN G STEVE BLAKE

LOS ANGELES — Guard Steve Blake has signed with the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Lakers announced the deal Thursday after agreeing to terms with the veteran guard last week. Blake got a four-year contract worth $16 million from the two-time defending NBA champions.

Blake finished last season with the Los Angeles Clippers after arriving in February in a trade with Portland. He averaged 8.6 points and 4.8 assists in his seventh NBA season.

Blake could be an important part of the Lakers’ rotation next season, particularly if point guard Derek Fisher leaves Los Angeles as a free agent.

CORONER: EX-KENTUCKY STAR TURPIN COMMITS SUICIDE

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Mel Turpin, former NBA player an All-American Kentucky center, committed suicide Thursday, authorities said. He was 49.

Police and the coroner were called to his North Lexington house Thursday afternoon on a personal injury call. They found Turpin dead.

Coroner Gary Ginn says that Turpin had committed suicide, but would not say how. He also would not say whether Turpin left behind a suicide note.

Margaret Burrus, his sister, tearfully told reporters outside her home that her brother was diabetic and trying to keep it under control.

“I didn’t know he was depressed or anything,” she said. “I would have never said that he would have done this.”

Turpin was the youngest sibling among six, Burrus said. Just two are still living.

“We had a big family and it’s now whittling away,” she said.

Burrus said Turpin’s wife had a heart condition and authorities said she was not at home at the time of the death.

Neighbor Amanda McFadden said Turpin always seemed happy.

The 6-foot-11 Turpin, dubbed “The Big Dipper,” was an All-Southeastern Conference player for the Wildcats from 1980-84. He led Kentucky to the SEC championship in 1984.

DURANT SIGNS CONTRACT WITH OKLAHOMA CITY THUNDER

OKLAHOMA CITY — The Oklahoma City Thunder have formally signed forward Kevin Durant to a multi-year contract extension.

Team executive vice president and general manager Sam Presti announced the deal Thursday night, but didn’t disclose any terms.

Durant’s spokeswoman, Mary Ford, said Wednesday that Durant would receive the maximum deal possible, $85 million over five years.

Small group of World Cup champs ready to open door

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press writer

JOHANNESBURG — The World Cup champions are an illustrious and exclusive bunch. Only seven countries belong, and just twice in the last 40 years have they welcomed anyone new.

Well, start making way. On Sunday, there's going to be another name on that list.

Spain and the Netherlands are each seeking their first title in the World Cup final at Soccer City. The Dutch have had two cracks at it already, earning that dreaded "best team never to have won the World Cup" title after coming up short in 1974 and again four years later. Spain has had its own issues, underachieving at major tournaments for 44 long years before winning the European title two years ago.

"The group deserves this, but we want more," sublime Spanish striker David Villa said. "We are happy to be in the final, that was our objective. But now we want to be champions."

For all the hype over the South Americans and hope about the teams from Africa, the final will be a Europeans-only party for a second straight World Cup. And few should really be surprised that it's come down to Spain and the Netherlands.

Spain is, of course, the reigning European champion, the game's second-biggest title after the World Cup. It's lost just two matches since November 2006, and its playing style bears a striking resemblance to Barcelona, which has run roughshod on just about everyone the last few years.

When it's on, Spain is awe-inspiring. Its backline of Carles Puyol, Gerard Spain's Carles Puyol, third center, celebrates with teammates after scoring a goal in their World Cup semifinal win over Germany in Durban, South Africa, Wednesday.

FIFA World Cup

Final
Netherlands vs. Spain
12:30 p.m., Saturday, ABC

Pique, Sergio Ramos and Joan Capdevila is more like a wall — and just try getting anything by goalkeeper Iker Casillas. Any team would be thrilled to have any one of Villa, Xabi Alonso, Xavi, Andres Iniesta, Fernando Torres or Cesc Fabregas, let alone all of them.

Opponents know Spain's game is based on possession and flow, and good luck trying to disrupt that. When someone does, the Spanish are like a swarm of bees until they get it back. Germany seemed to be the class of the World Cup after routing

England and Argentina by a combined 8-1 in the knock-out rounds. But the Germans had only a handful of chances in Wednesday night's semifinal loss, and looked out of sync all night.

"I am sure the Spanish can win any game," Germany coach Joachim Loew said, "because they are dominant and it's hard to contain their attack."

The Dutch aren't exactly slouches, though. They won all eight of their qualifying matches, and are perfect in South Africa, too. Not since Pele's brilliant Brazil squad in 1970 has a squad had a chance at winning the World Cup with an unblemished record.

"We play well," Netherlands coach Bert Van Marwijk said. "Spain plays well, but they are more attractive and this is where we want to get, too."

Neither has looked particularly flashy here. At times, in fact, both Spain and the Netherlands have been downright tough to watch. One of Spain's two losses came in the group-stage opener to Switzerland — Switzerland! — and it needed a late Villa goal to get past Paraguay in the quarterfinals after both teams missed penalty kicks. It has seven goals in its six games, and Villa has been responsible for all but two of them.

The Netherlands has squandered all kinds of chances in front of its net, often winning by just a goal. It beat Uruguay 3-2 in the semifinals, but the game was in doubt far longer than it should have been. Perhaps the best thing you can say about the Dutch is they've had one heck of a party in South Africa. No matter where they've played, an Oranje Crush of fans has followed.

"We have been messy," Van Marwijk said. "We've had spells with brilliant attacks, yet we forgot to score. That though, can change within a match."

And all that really matters is, whenever they've needed them, Spain and the Netherlands have found ways to score the big goals.

After falling behind to Brazil in the quarterfinals, little Wesley Sneijder came up big with two goals to shock the five-time World Cup champions. In the 3-2 win over Uruguay in the semifinals, Sneijder and Arjen Robben broke through a stifling defense to score three minutes apart.

With Spain locked up tight with Paraguay in the quarters, Villa scored in the 83rd minute, banking in a goal off not one, but both posts. And against Germany, Puyol scored in the 73rd minute on a thunderous header that sent his shaggy locks flying.

"We've shown that in the big moments we can grow even more," Villa said. "We should have scored more goals, but one from Puyol has put us in the final."

A final that could showcase everything that makes the World Cup so magical. And a final with only one certainty: the club of world champions is about to grow.

Semenya to make comeback at July meet in Finland

HELSINKI (AP) — Caster Semenya will make her comeback in Finland at the Lappeenranta Games on July 15.

"She is really looking forward to the competition but is not expecting anything great," her manager Jukka Harkonen said. "She's in the middle of her training right now, but needs the experience of competing again."

Semenya, who has not raced competitively since winning the 800-meter world title in Berlin in August 2009, was cleared to return Tuesday by the International Association of Athletics Federations. That ended an 11-month stalemate over her status following gender verification tests and means she can continue running as a woman.

Later Thursday, the 19-year-old Semenya appeared relaxed and happy as she trained with a group of young athletes on a grass track at her regular base at the High Performance Center in Pretoria, South Africa.

Semenya laughed and joked with fellow runners as they performed stretches and warmup exercises. Wearing a bright pink top, she then ran alongside other athletes in a series of 200-meter drills before ending with a light jog around the track.

The training session was conducted by Semenya's coach, Michael Seme.

Seme said Wednesday that the 800-meter world champion was not fit enough to compete at the world junior championships in Canada from July 19-25.

Semenya ran two 600-meter trials in Pretoria but her times were "not good enough for an 800-meter runner," according to her coach.

Seme said she was looking to run in "one or two" smaller meets in Europe before making her return to major competition at the African championships in Kenya, which begin July 28. "We can't go straight to a big meeting," Seme said in South Africa, "so we are preparing for one or two races before that."

Harkonen said they had chosen Lappeenranta because the venue was "suitable."

"I suppose there is also a link, what with me being a Finn and her manager," Harkonen said.

Jarmo Viskari, a spokesman for the meet in southeastern Finland, said Harkonen was closely connected to the one-day competition.

"We have a long history with her manager and he felt that the Lappeenranta Games is nice because it's not too big but there are enough international athletes," Viskari said. "We are now expecting a lot of spectators."

Harkonen said that Semenya might also make an appearance at the Lapinlahti Games on July 17.

THE EFFICIENT PERFORMER!

Roadworthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

The evolution of the popular Tacoma pickup continues to add to Toyota's rich truck heritage that began over 40 years ago. Available in some eighteen model configurations, the compact Toyota truck is offered in Regular Cab, extended Access Cab with dual access doors and tumble flat rear seats and the full four-door Double Cab.

The Tacoma features two- and four-wheel drive configurations, while PreRunner models combine the two-wheel drivetrain with the raised riding stance and styling of the four-wheel drive models.

Available in all three cab types, PreRunner combines up to 12-inches of ground clearance, beefed-up suspension, larger brakes and rugged styling of the 4x4 in a more affordable, more fuel-efficient two-wheel drive platform.

Leading the Tacoma line in performance and style is the X-Runner model that blends concept-truck design with sports car performance and a specially tuned chassis. The X-Runner's Access Cab design incorporates full-vehicle-surround ground effects, a hood scoop and integrated fog lamps. It is offered in just three colors - Radiant Red, Black Sand and Speedway Blue - on its color-keyed monochromatic exterior.

The X-Runner suspension is lowered one inch versus the standard Tacoma and rolls on 255/45R18 Bridgestone Potenza performance tires wrapped around 18-inch alloy wheels. The exclusive X-Runner suspension incorporates firmer and shorter springs, specially tuned Bilstein gas shock absorbers positioned outboard of the frame rails for increased stability, rear stabilizer bar with firmer bushings and a specially tuned steering response. Available exclusively with a six-speed manual gearbox, X-Runner is also equipped with a limited-slip differential.

Last year Tacoma offered the STAR Safety System™ of dynamic control technologies as standard equipment in all models and grades. In addition, front seat-mounted side airbags, curtain side airbags are standard across the Tacoma line-up and active front headrests are standard on all Access and Double Cab models.

The Toyota Star Safety System™ includes the anti-lock braking system (ABS), Electronic Brake-force Distribution (EBD), Brake Assist (BAI), Vehicle Stability Control (VSC) and Traction Control (TRAC). An Automatic Limited-slip Differential (Auto-LSD), which uses brake intervention in place of a mechanical-type LSD to help reduce tire slippage at the rear wheels, is standard on all Tacoma models (with the exception of models equipped with TRD Off-road packages, which are equipped with a separate locking rear differential). The Auto-LSD replaces the mechanical LSD in all applications where it was previously available.

The Tacoma also delivers enhanced value with interior and exterior revisions this model year. All models feature an argent painted grille, while the TRD Offroad, TRD Sport and Tacoma X-Runner models are distinguished by new smoked headlamp trim. All models have restyled LED tail lamps, and Access Cab and Double Cab models can accommodate an available backup monitor system.

Power for Tacoma is generated by a large 2.7L four-cylinder engine and a strong 4.0L V6 prime mover. Both engines feature variable valve timing and electronic throttle control. Torque is communicated to the ground through several transmission choices: a five-speed manual or four-speed automatic for four-cylinder models or a six-speed manual or five-speed automatic gearbox for six-cylinder models.

All Tacoma models employ a double wishbone coil-spring front suspension and leaf spring rear suspension with staggered gas-filled shock absorbers for secure axle control.

headliner, behind the rear seats and better-insulating carpeting help to provide a quiet cabin while exterior aerodynamic details help reduce wind noise.

The standard audio systems are satellite radio-ready. The optional Premium JBL audio six-CD system is now Bluetooth® compatible and has an integrated satellite radio system, which includes a three-month free trial subscription to XM® Satellite Radio.

A three-pod instrument gauge panel lends a sporty look in all models. The center console includes three integrated cupholders, two that can accommodate extra-large containers. All models provide dual bottle holders in driver's and passenger-side doors.

ORDINANCE NO: 504-2010

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF WENDELL, IDAHO, REPEALING ORDINANCE 403 AND AMENDING SECTION 11, CHAPTER 2 OF THE WENDELL CITY CODE; ESTABLISHING PARKING RESTRICTIONS WITHIN WENDELL CITY BOUNDARIES; SETTING FORTH DEFINITIONS; ESTABLISHING PARKING VIOLATIONS FINES AND PROCEDURES FOR PAYMENT; PROVIDING FOR THE ISSUANCE OF AN INFRACTION FOR FAILING TO PAY PARKING FINES; PROVIDING THAT THE REGISTERED OWNER OF A VEHICLE IS PRIMA FACIA RESPONSIBLE FOR PARKING VIOLATIONS; REPEALING CONFLICTING PROCEEDINGS; PROVIDING SEVERABILITY, AN EFFECTIVE DATE AND ESTABLISHING A PENALTY AND ADDITIONAL COURT COST FEES FOR FAILURE TO PAY WITHIN TEN (10) DAYS THEREOF.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF WENDELL, IDAHO:

Section 1: When the following words or terms are used in this ordinance they shall have the following meaning:

Official Traffic Control Devices: The phrase "Official Traffic Control Devices" shall mean all signs, signals, markings and devices placed or erected by authority of the City of Wendell or by any other official having jurisdiction, for the purpose of regulating warning or guiding traffic.

Operator: The word "Operator" shall mean any person who shall drive or operate a vehicle upon any street or alley in the City of Wendell or is in actual physical control of the vehicle.

Park or Parking: The work "Park or Parking" shall mean the standing of a vehicle, whether occupied or not, other than temporarily for the purpose of and while actively engaged in loading or unloading goods, merchandise or persons.

Vehicle: The word "Vehicle" shall mean every device in, upon, or by which any person or property is, or may be, transported or drawn upon a street or alleyway, except devices used exclusively upon stationary rails or tracks.

Section 2: Any person, within the City limits of Wendell, Idaho, violating any provision of Idaho Code regarding parked vehicles within the City limits of Wendell, Idaho, shall be cited pursuant to Section 3 of this ordinance.

Section 3: The City of Wendell, through its Police Department, has the authority to issue parking tickets in Wendell, Idaho, which tickets shall be administrative and payable through the Wendell City Clerk's Office.

Section 4: It shall be the duty of the Wendell Police Department, upon observing a vehicle parked in violation of this ordinance, to leave upon such a vehicle a separate notice (parking ticket) for each posted time period or as frequently as every two (2) hours that such vehicle has been parked in violation of this ordinance. Each notice (parking ticket) shall bear the date and hour of leaving the same at or upon the vehicle, the make of the vehicle, the vehicle's license number or VIN, the specific section of Wendell City Code violated and the amount of the penalty (fine), and shall instruct the owner or operator of such vehicle to pay the penalty at the Wendell city Clerk's office, on or before a certain date. One (1) copy, or an automated record, of each notice (parking ticket) mentioned herein shall be filed with the Wendell City Clerk's office.

Section 5: No person shall park any Commercial vehicle with four (4) or more axles or that is capable of having a gross weight capacity in excess of sixteen thousand (16,000) pounds, or is registered to transport sixteen thousand (16,000) pounds or more, whether attended or unattended, upon any streets or alleyways in any residentially zoned area within the City limits, except:

A. For the purpose of loading and unloading materials or merchandise or, B. For any purpose incident to any lawful construction project located within the immediate vicinity of such parked vehicle; or,

C. For any purpose incident to a lawful commercial operation located in any residential or commercial zone within the immediate vicinity of such parked vehicle.

D. For unloading passengers and/or equipment from vehicles rated for passenger transportation.

E. For less than fifteen (15) minutes on Idaho Street between Avenue D and 4th Avenue between the hours of 05:00 a.m. until 11:00 p.m.

Section 6: In order to eliminate burdening courts with violations of this ordinance and to eliminate, as far as possible, public inconvenience, each person receiving a parking ticket pursuant to this ordinance, whether the ticket is left upon his or her vehicle or delivered to him or her personally, shall pay the fee(s) indicated on the written notice (parking ticket) within fifteen (15) business days of the date of such notice.

Section 7: A. All parking violations under this chapter shall be a Twenty Five dollar ($25.00) fee or assessment.

B. In the event a parking ticket is not paid within fifteen (15) business days, an additional Five dollars ($5.00) shall be added to the penalty for each notice (parking ticket).

C. The failure of any owner or operator to make such payment to the City of Wendell within thirty (30) days shall render the owner or operator therefore subject to an infraction as set forth in Section 9 of this ordinance.

Section 8: If any vehicle is found stopped, standing or parked in any manner violating any part of the provisions of this ordinance, and the identity of the operator cannot be determined, the owner in who's name the vehicle is registered or the named lessee in a rental or leased vehicle, shall be held prima facie responsible for such violation.

Section 9: Any owner or operator who shall stand, stop, or park a vehicle in violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be deemed to have committed a parking violation. The administrative procedure for payment of parking tickets for violations is set out in sections 5, 6, 7, and 8 of this ordinance. In the event of nonpayment in accordance with the administrative procedure set out herein above, an infraction, citation, or complaint for a parking violation or failure to pay a parking penalty may be filed in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court.

Section 10: All Ordinances, resolutions, and parts thereof in conflict with the provisions of this Ordinance to the extent of such conflict, are hereby repealed.

Section 11: If any section, paragraph, clause or provision of this ordinance shall be held to be invalid or unenforceable, for any reason, the invalidity or unenforceability of such section, paragraph, clause or provision shall in no manner affect any remaining provisions of this ordinance.

Section 12: This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage, approval, and publication.

PASSED BY the Wendell City Council and approved by the Mayor of the City of Wendell, Gooding County, Idaho, this 24th day of June, 2010.

Bobby Wolff

"How slow
Behind the course of thought, even sick with speed,
Lags leaden-footed time!"
— Percy Bysshe Shelley

An unfortunate incident that occurred during the Venice Cup in Bermuda 10 years ago was that a Danish star, Charlotte Koch-Palmund, took ill and had to return home in midtournament. Her presence was sorely missed, although the Danes did go on to win the bronze medal.

When Denmark met France in the early stages of the Venice Cup, Charlotte had a chance to break one of the cardinal rules of defense — but it just happened to be the only way to set the hand! Put yourself in the West seat to see what I mean.

Charlotte (West) led out three rounds of clubs against four spades. When declarer ruffed and played a heart to dummy's king to run the spade jack, Charlotte pitched a diamond. Now declarer correctly decided to repeat the spade finesse, and when East covered the spade seven with the eight, declarer won in hand and led a low diamond up.

Charlotte hopped up with the king and led another club. This key defensive play broke all the rules by giving declarer a ruff and discard — a discard she did not need. The trump in dummy had to be preserved for the spade finesse, so declarer ruffed in hand, but that gave East the chance to discard her last diamond. Now, when South tried to cross to dummy with a low diamond for the trump play, East ruffed in for one down.

ANSWER: You could simply jump to four spades now, but that would be highly premature. With your aces and your diamond fit, you might make seven diamonds if your partner had the spade king, the club ace and decent diamonds. Start the exploration by setting up a forcing auction: cuebid two hearts, planning to support diamonds, and see what develops.

Today is Friday, July 9, the 190th day of 2010. There are 175 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in:
On July 9, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was read aloud to Gen. George Washington's troops in New York.

On this date:
In 1540, England's King Henry VIII had his 6-month-old marriage to his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves, annulled.

In 1810, French Emperor Napoleon I annexed the Kingdom of Holland.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1816, Argentina declared independence from Spain.

In 1850, the 12th president of the United States, Zachary Taylor, died after serving only 16 months of his term. (He was succeeded by Millard Fillmore.)

In 1896, William Jennings Bryan delivered his famous "cross of gold" speech at the Democratic national convention in Chicago.

In 1918, 101 people were killed in a train collision in Nashville, Tenn. The Distinguished Service Cross was established by an Act of Congress.

In 1947, the engagement of Britain's Princess Elizabeth to Lt. Philip Mountbatten was announced.

In 1951, President Harry S. Truman asked Congress to formally end the state of war between the United States and Germany. (An official end to the state of war was declared in Oct. 1951.)

In 1974, former U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren died in Washington, D.C. at age 83.

In 1982, a Pan Am Boeing 727 crashed in Kenner, La., killing all 145 people aboard and eight people on the ground.

Ten years ago: The 13th International AIDS Conference opened in Durban, South Africa. At least 12 people died in a soccer stampede set off when police fired tear gas at bottle-throwing fans during a World Cup qualifier between Zimbabwe and South Africa in Harare, Zimbabwe. (South Africa's 2-0 victory over Zimbabwe was ruled official.) Top-seeded Pete Sampras won his seventh Wimbledon title as he defeated Patrick Rafter, 6-7 (10), 7-6 (5), 6-4, 6-2.

Five years ago: A purported Taliban spokesman in Afghanistan said the group had beheaded a missing American commando, but he offered no proof and the U.S. military said it was still searching for the Navy SEAL. (The body of the commando was found the next day; officials said it appeared he died as a result of fighting, and was never abducted.) Hurricane Dennis dealt a glancing blow to the Florida Keys. A panda cub, later named Tai Shan, was born at the National Zoo in Washington.

One year ago: The Group of Eight industrialized nations opened their summit in L'Aquila, Italy, to Group of Five developing countries Brazil, China, India, Mexico and South Africa, as well as Egypt. The Dutch government turned over dozens of antiquities stolen from Iraq to Baghdad's ambassador. Two suicide bombers killed at least 38 people in northern Iraq. A massive bomb blast in central Afghanistan killed 25 people, including primary school students. Michael Phelps broke the world record in the 100-meter butterfly at the U.S. national championships in Indianapolis, swimming the two-lap final in 50.22 seconds.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF JULY 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may be caught up in achieving a dream this month. It might be romantic but it could just as easily be a business achievement or hobby that fascinates and motivates you. Write down your ideas because they may be useful in the future or give you a boost when you are down. September is a good month for business, career and financial decisions because you are wise to the ways of the world. Don't waste time in groups or organizations that could sidetrack you from success. In November, your business savvy seems to have evaporated temporarily, so avoid making changes to bank accounts or investments. February is a good time to take a romantic holiday cruise or plan for a fabulous Valentine's Day treat.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Listen for practical suggestions that ring with the sound of truth. Don't plan on starting major projects or new hookups over the next few days, as they could end up being more trouble than they are worth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Instead of viewing opposition from others as a thrown gauntlet look at it as a time when you need to use kid gloves. These celestial conditions are not favorable for making agreements or signing contracts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): People don't always say what they mean. Confusion and misunderstandings are possible, so wait until next week to nail down an important deal or have a heart-to-heart discussion with a loved one.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Appealing to someone's sympathy might backfire. You will do quite well simply resting on your laurels, as meddling won't win any Brownie points. Don't let extra money burn a hole in your pocket.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What inspired you yesterday may not hold up under careful scrutiny. This isn't the time to take up a new hobby or pastime or to be impatient with your friends. Stick with the tried and true this week-end.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Screw down the lid on your piggy bank. Career matters require immediate attention, so you might overlook an unexpected drain to your resources. Sidestep starting new projects if at all possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You usually make a good mediator when trouble erupts. Avoid situations that may require you to take sides or give opinions, as there could be some fallout from feuds. Don't put your cash on the line.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid conflicts by remaining safely on your own turf. This is not a good time to trespass on anyone else's territory or to give in to impulse. Be aware that others can be provoked into action if challenged.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't jump the gun. The atmosphere may encourage impulsive action. If you have an important project to launch, it is best to hold off until next week, especially if it involves the general public.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get by with a little help from your friends. Make the best of the week-end by spending time with like-minded people that you can depend on in a pinch. Get in touch with pals who have moved away.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A sweet deal could turn sour. Someone could be determined to win at all costs and unexpectedly turn the tables on you. Wait out a brief period of turbulence before making irrevocable decisions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): True wisdom may consist of knowing how to make a point without making an enemy. Your desires could conflict with those of others and it might be difficult to communicate in reasonable terms.

Repairs

PAPA JOHN'S REPAIR

DEAR ABBY: Last year, my husband of 36 years died. My pastor came over a few days later to help me clean up my yard because my husband was a pack rat. I did not realize that some of the items I thought were junk were valuable. My pastor took the items, sold them for scrap and kept the money for himself. He also took my husband's truck to his shop, stripped it and sold the parts. I have tried calling him but he won't answer or return my calls. I tried talking to him after church only to have him shut the door in my face. I have written him a letter — no response.

Abby, I don't want to take my pastor to court. I'm beginning to lose my faith. What should I do?

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR LOSING YOUR FAITH: My gut reaction is to scream, "Call the cops!" The man you have described is a wolf in shepherd's clothing and it could save other trusting widows from being fleeced as you have been. If you can't bring yourself to take that "pastard" to civil court, at least report these thefts to the judiciary or regional board of your denomination so they can deal with him.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married 30 years and have had issues with my mother-in-law since before the wedding. She didn't want me to marry her son and has criticized my hair, my weight, my child-rearing, etc., during my entire marriage. Of course, she never says these things when my husband is within earshot. I didn't discuss it with him because we don't see her often.

We're planning a one-week visit with them, and my 50th birthday will occur during the visit. My husband told me I could do whatever I wanted on my birthday and mentioned including his parents. I told him I didn't want to spend the day with them and now he's mad at me.

I realize this may seem petty to you, but this is a milestone birthday that I'm not really looking forward to. What do I do? Do I "suck it up" and deal with her presence on my birthday or stand my ground?

— DREADING IT IN ALAMOGORDO, N.M.

DEAR DREADING IT: Remind your spouse that he SAID you could do anything you wished on your birthday, and that you didn't realize that telling him you wanted to spend this milestone without his parents would upset him. Then tell him that because he feels obligated to include his parents, of course, you won't object — as long as he's willing to celebrate the occasion the way YOU would like after you return from the visit.

P.S. It's too bad you didn't tell him his mother was "gunning for you" decades ago, because he might have been able to nip it in the bud.

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago my wife conceived a child with an old boyfriend who had been after her for quite a while without my knowledge. I adopted the child after he left her.

I have tried to convince my wife to tell our daughter the truth for medical reasons, but she refuses. She feels if she tells our daughter the truth, she will be disgraced forever. What is your opinion?

— LOVES MY DAUGHTER IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR LOVES YOUR DAUGHTER: Your daughter should have been told the truth years ago — and it is still not too late to do so. My concern is that she may eventually hear it from some other relative or a close family friend who assumes she already knows. These kinds of family secrets invariably have a way of slipping out, and better that your daughter hear the story from her mother than someone else.
