Idaho prison inmates say problems continue at ISCI

By Rebecca Boone Associated Press writer

BOISE - More than 25 years after a federal judge ordered Idaho to change the way it handled medical care, overcrowding and other issues at the Idaho State Correctional Institution, attorneys for inmates say problems in some areas of the prison near Boise are just as bad.

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill will hear arguments today on whether he should close the oldest portions of the lawsuit that's become known as the "Balla case" or allow regular monitoring by the inmates' attorneys to continue.

In a 65-page status report to the court. the inmates and their attorneys say the lawsuit should remain open. To back their claims, they offer testimony from an inmate who says he nearly bled to death and required surgery after he was forced to wait for hours for treatment of a perforated

They've also provided a statement from a former doctor at ISCI who says the medical care process is downright obstructive and leaves many inmates without needed treatment and medications. Dr. Ralph Heckard wrote that psychiatric care is spotty at best and that medical procedures that should be done by physicians and nurses - like injections - are "delegated" to non-qualified workers.

It all shows that "prison officials still exhibit deliberate indifference to the serious medical needs of inmates;" the inmates' attorneys wrote.

The case began in the early 1980s, when so many inmates at the prison began filing lawsuits that the cases threatened to clog Idaho's federal courts. A judge ultimately combined them into one big lawsuit, dubbed the "Balla case" after lead plaintiff Walter Balla.

In three major rulings over the next two decades, federal judges ordered the state to stop overcrowding at the prison, provide warm clothing to inmates, improve access to medical and psychiatric care and rehabilitation programs, and to take other measures to ensure that some units of the prison would no longer be "an extremely violent place to live."

In May, Winmill said he was inclined to close the oldest portion of the case, which specifically aimed to stop rampant violence, the near-routine brutal rapes of newly arrived young prisoners, limited access to psychiatric and medical care and other problems. At the time, Winmill said changing conditions and procedures at the President Dan Pierson said city-wide poisoning isn't an option, as any pesticide released within the city to combat the tiny invaders could kill family pets or harm children.

"What can we really do about it?" he asked. "If anyone has suggestions, we'd like to hear them."

The mouse-like rodents aren't a new problem for the valley, though a dramatic increase in their population this spring has caused significant crop problems and has cost citizens thousands of dollars in poisons and alternate killing methods.

Shoshone city maintenance-crew member Parry Silva said the city has watched as the voles chew through City Park and residents' lawns. Although the city has watered the park heavily in an effort to discourage the voles, poison used by citizens can't be used in public areas because of its risk of spreading to pets and children.

"It's really up to homeowners to try to kill them," Silva said. "Some people voles out of their lawns every morning."

The pellets are a onetime-use poison. Once a vole has eaten a pellet, it releases gases in the to "blow up," Taber said. Many of the rodents crawl out of their holes to die atop the dirt, where seagulls often snatch them up.

"These fields would just be covered in seagulls the day after we treated them. It was just like a buffet for the seagulls," Taber said, standing on the edge of his hay field. "You could just walk through the field and the seagulls wouldn't even move – they just didn't the pellets.

Not only do the voles eat at crop roots and girdle around corn stalks, they are also eating desert grasses. Usually cattle graze on the wild land, but many ranchers are moving their herds to irrigated pastures to find suitable forage.

Taber isn't sure what to attribute the vole problem to. He said there hasn't been the usual amount of snakes that prey on the field mice because of the wet spring. Another factor is the large amount of "perfect habitat" for the voles to breed in, perhaps due to a newer farming method — the strip till. The method saves fuel and reduces field erosion by tilling only land used for rodent's stomach, causing it seed rows. The crevices it creates, filled with loose matter, also offer a perfect environment for voles.

Lincoln County Extension educator Christi Falen said the voles run in cycles. Last winter created a favorable environment for them to do a lot of damage to alfalfa during winter months.

"They are pretty much in everything," she said. "Hopefully we'll get some cold temperatures to kill them off."

Meanwhile, the war against the little furry beasts continues. As one

Tubbs selected ponds based on high counts in nearby mosquito traps and if they were close to where people lived and played.

At Rock Creek Park, technician Jared Evans released 15 bluegills into the mossy shallows of one of the two ponds. Blue dragonflies hovered over the new residents until they found their way to deeper water.

Tubbs said they put smaller fish, around 2 inches long, in shallower ponds, expecting they'd not be able to survive the winter. But he said he's hoping the larger fish, up to 6 inches long, will survive in ponds that won't freeze over.

"Hopefully they'll still be out there eating mosquitoes before we get out next year," Tubbs said.

Tubbs said the mosquito population was low in Mav and June but has shot up during the heat of July. The fish won't eliminate mosquitoes, but Tubbs said they're just one more way to keep mosquito numbers down. Since the team got the fish themselves and did all the work in one day, Tubbs said the whole endeavor cost only a couple hundred dollars out of his almost $500,000 budget.

"It's an experiment, but if they do their job, we'll be catching fewer mosquitoes," Tubbs said.

prison make enforcing that part of the case difficult, and he said he would reduce the long-term monitoring requirements at the lockup as long as state officials continued to "tread cautiously and show good faith in maintaining compliance."

After Winmill's ruling, Idaho Department Correction Director Brent Reinke said he was grateful the judge was acknowledging that times have changed. Reinke says the state has been "quite diligent" in its approach to dealing with the issues listed in the lawsuit.

But the inmates and their attorneys appear to be focusing in on the medical and psychiatric care at the prison, saying it's as bad or worse than it was when the lawsuit began. The doctor mentioned in the report, Heckard, said he started contract doing work with Correctional Medical Services — the private company that handles the state's prison medical care - for 2009. He chose to sever the contract after six months because he said he witnessed "rampant violations of plaintiffs' Eighth Amendment rights."

Inmates walk to the dining hall from their cell block at the Idaho State Correctional Institution outside Boise on June 15. More than 25 years after a federal judge ordered Idaho to change the way it handled medical care, overcrowding and other issues at the facility, attorneys for inmates say problems in some areas of the prison are just as bad.

But the state did say the best way to deal with any potential problems would be in new lawsuits - a suggestion the judge has also made. Trying to litigate the inmates' claims under the decades-old Balla case "will take longer, present more Medical care is harder to difficulty and be less effi-

They also noted that the inmates haven't asked the judge to hold the state in contempt for violating the Balla rulings. Instead, they're asking the court to appoint a special master to help them discover constitutional violations.

"One can only conclude from this that there is simply insufficient evidence to support a contempt proceeding," the state's attorneys contend.

Besides, they noted. Correctional Medical Services didn't take over the prison's medical care until after the first round of Balla rulings were made, and the state's attorneys say the company would likely object to being added to a lawsuit that was filed nearly 30 years

"In March of 2008, I decided to have my heart tested when HealthFair was conducting tests near my home. The was fun procedure and painless, but the technician told me I had a problem. My Aorta was 5.7cm, not in the danger zone, but way above normal. I went to a cardiologist to confirm these results and yes indeed I needed surgery. Three months later and I am already back at work. While I am grateful to the surgical team, I owe a big thank you to HealthFair. My father suggested I go for the test, and I am glad I did. I felt fine and there were no symptoms, but yet one day in the near future I would have died.

Funny thing is, I just had an annual checkup and was told I was fine. I suggest everyone reading this to get checked out with HealthFair. This test saved my LIFE!

I am 66 years old and went to a HealthFair screening in Plano, TX late in 2008. Your ultrasound tech discovered that my right carotid artery was 75%+ blocked. I was advised to contact my family doctor immediately. I did, and I was referred to a vascular surgeon. I was told that I needed to have surgery on my carotid artery or I would not be around for much longer.

So I am now recovering from carotid artery surgery and the right side is clear. I am on medication to help reduce the plaque on my left side. I will get checked yearly now....

All of this would NOT have been detected if it weren't for your screenings. I am not a regular at the doctor's office. "I'm not sick, I don't need a check-up!" has been my mantra for the past 20 years. Your HealthFair screening saved my life...so THANKS for being there.

Heart Disease Prevention Package

Echocardiogram Ultrasound Test

Echocardiogram is a video ultrasound of the heart. It may detect enlargement of the heart, valve abnormalities, blood clots and tumors.

Electrocardiogram (EKG) Test

EKG may detect ischemia, silent heart attack and atrial fibrillation. EKG provides a picture of the electrical activity of the heart.

Hardening of the Arteries (ASI) Test

Hardened arteries cause the heart to work harder, which leads to vascular disease. ASI test shows the degree of hardening of the arteries.

ALL 3 TESTS

These cardiac tests are painless and noninvasive. Their combined cost is more than $1,300 at most hospitals.

Stroke & Aneurysm Prevention Package

Stroke/Carotid Artery Ultrasound Test

Many strokes are associated with blockages in the carotid arteries that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm Test (4-hour fast required)

Abdominal aortic aneurysms form as a result of a weakness in the lining of the artery wall that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Blood Circulation (Arteriosclerosis) Test

Many adults have leg cramps due to poor circulation. ABI screening measures extremities for peripheral arterial disease.

These vascular tests are painless and noninvasive. Their combined cost is more than $1,000 at most hospitals.

ORLANDO, Fla. – James Gammon, a graduate of Orlando's Boone High School who became one of the top character actors in movies, television and theater, died Friday in Costa Mesa, Calif. He was 70, and also had a home in Ocala.

said actor and friend Tom Bower. "Onstage, he could do 'King Lear', but on film, he was more often thought of as the gnarly, western guy."

Gammon was a crucial influence on the playwright Sam Shepard.

"When Sam wrote a play, he thought of Jim being the lead actor," Bower said. "He thought of him as his father image. He was one of the greatest stage actors in this country"

Gammon acted Shepard's "Curse of the Starving Class," "A Lie of the Mind," "The Late Henry Moss" and "Simpatico." Gammon was nominated for a Tony for the Broadway revival of Shepard's "Buried Child" and acted in Shepard's film "Don't Come Knocking."

Theater was Gammon's first love, he told the Orlando Sentinel in 1996. "If I could make the money you make in film doing theater, I would take theater," he said. "I've always been a theater person, and you kind of pay to do that. It's a cost to you personally to indulge your art?"

Suicide bombers kill dozens of anti-Qaida militiamen in Iraq

By Mohammed al Dulaimy McClatchy newspapers

BAGHDAD – Two suicide bombers killed 46 members of a U.S. backed anti-Qaida Sunni militia in Iraq, the highest such death toll in two months, an Iraqi Interior ministry official said.

Officials blamed al Qaida in Iraq, which has frequently targeted such militiamen, though no immediate claim of responsibility was made.

The militia, called the Awakening or Sahwa in Arabic, was formed in 2006 in al Anbar Province by tribal men and former members of al Qaida and other insurgent groups who decided to join with the U.S. military to fight al Qaida. The militia was credited for much of the security improvement in the country since 2006.

Sniffing out the oil in Gulf seafood

By Bob Drogin Los Angeles Times

PASCAGOULA, Miss. -Robert Downs leads the scientists who sniff at fish.

Each day, his team of bowls of snapper, tuna and other raw seafood to test for even a whiff of the pungent oil gushing into the Gulf of Mexico.

This is not Grand Cru

"We use specific terms for the aroma," explained Downs, who supervises the seafood smellers at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's marine lab here. "Diesel oil. Bunker oil. Asphalt. Rubber-bandlike. Tar.''

Each olfactory analyst has a super schnoz, able to smell oil diluted to one part per million. That's 40 times more sensitive than your average proboscis.

It's also more sensitive than science can explain. Last month, the team caught a faint scent in a red snapper that chemists and toxicologists could not confirm despite three days of testing at an NOAA marine science lab in Seattle. The result: A rich fishing area off Louisiana's coast staved off-limits.

Strong stomachs help. The group has sniffed or tasted more than 1,000 fish in the nearly three months since the BP oil spill, and no one has gotten sick.

The fish smellers are part seven sensory experts dip of a major effort by NOAA, their noses into large Pyrex the Food and Drug Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency and state governments to ensure that the still-leaking oil doesn't pollute the nation's food supply. So far, there are no confirmed reports of contaminated Gulf Coast seafood reaching consumers.

Partially because of the sniffers, NOAA has banned fishing in more than onethird of the Gulf of Mexico, 81,181 square miles in all. State officials also have barred fishing along more than 550 miles of beaches and bayous from Louisiana to northern Florida.

"We have found tainted fish," said John Stein, who runs the BP oil spill seafood safety testing program for NOAA. "It's not uncommon."

Stein spoke beside a huge chart of the Gulf of Mexico marked with scores of Xs. These looked suspiciously like the Xs that mark dead fish eyes in cartoons, but Stein insisted his Xs show where NOAA has caught live fish for baseline studies and surveillance testing.

Longshot dominates British Open

By Doug Ferguson Associated Press writer

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland -Louis Oosthuizen walked over the Swilcan Bridge toward a victory that was never in doubt Sunday at St. Andrews, another big moment in sports for South Africa.

This celebration, though, carried a different tune.

The drone of vuvuzelas, all the rage at the World Cup, was replaced by the skirl of bagpipes coming from behind the Royal & Ancient clubhouse. For the 27-year-old South African, the sound could not have been

With a performance that rivaled the dominance of Tiger Woods at the home of golf 10 years ago, Oosthuizen led over the final 48 holes and blew away the field by seven shots to capture the British Open.

"To win an Open championship is special," Oosthuizen said. "But to win it at St. Andrews ... it's something you dream about."

The timing could not have been better - one week after South Africa concluded a wildly popular World Cup, and the day Nelson Mandela celebrated his 92nd birthday.

"It felt a bit special, really," he said. "When I walked down birthday?

By then, the hard work was done. Oosthuizen made only two bogeys over the final 35 holes in a strong wind that swept across the Old Course. He closed with a 1-under 71 for a seven-shot victory over Lee Westwood, who was never in the

The only challenge came from Paul Casey, who got within three shots after the eighth hole, then drove the green on the par-4 ninth. Oosthuizen answered by hitting driver onto the green and knocking in a 50-foot eagle putt to restore his cushion.

Three holes later, Casey hit into a gorse bush and made triple bogey, while Oosthuizen holed an 18-foot birdie putt.

Armstrong: LeMond claim about payoff is 'nonsense' missed as "nonsense" a reported claim by Greg LeMond that the seven-time Tour de France champion tried to pay someone $300,000 to say LeMond used a banned drug.

LeMond, a three-time Tour de France champion, told the German newspaper Sueddeutsche Zeitung's weekend issue that Armstrong tried to implicate him "by all means" in a scandal involving EPO, a performance enhancer.

LeMond refused to reveal the identity of the person who was allegedly offered money by Armstrong, saying he still works in cycling.

Armstrong dismissed the accusation after Sunday's 14th stage of the Tour.

'That's absolutely nonsense — $300,000?" Armstrong said, when asked by The Associated Press about the allegations. "Come on. I know (about the report). But he says a lot."

emember that task force appointed last year by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter that's supposed to figure out a solution for fixing Idaho's transportation funding

Don't expect much.

It's apparent from discussions with legislators that there is little appetite for raising the gasoline tax or increasing registration fees. And that, effectively, rules out most potential additional funding.

After the first of the year, the

If so, it couldn't come at a worse time.

Nearly half of Idaho transportation money comes from the federal government, and Congress reluctantly extended the Highway Trust Fund through the end of this year. After Jan. 1, debate will begin on a new, multi-year transportation bill, and the Highway Trust Fund is likely to change — for the worse from Idaho's perspective.

That's because, under the feds' funding formula, Idaho is a "donee" state — it receives $1.57 for every dollar paid by Idaho motorists. The donor states — California, Texas, Florida, Illinois and Ohio among them — have more than enough votes in Congress to change the equation.

Which will mean, inevitably, fewer highway dollars for Idaho than it would get under the present system.

Complicating matters is the Connecting Idaho project, the seven-year enterprise to build highways by borrowing money through the Grant Anticipation Revenue Vehicles. The debt service on GARVEE now consumes about $1 of every $3 that Idaho has to spend on roads, and although that debt service percentage is capped by law the Legislature could remove the limit.

More significantly, GARVEE has caused a serious rift between urban and rural lawmakers - and sewn mistrust with the Idaho Transportation Department - because the bulk of the GARVEE projects so far have been in Ada and Canyon counties.

Meanwhile, Idahoans are driving fewer miles meaning they're paying less in gas taxes. The state's gas tax revenue fell 8 percent in fiscal 2009, to $155 million.

So what's Plan B?

We'll find out when the task force releases its report next year, but it's hard to escape the conclusion that sooner or later Idahoans will be paying higher fuel taxes or registration fees.

But while the need may be clear, the consensus isn't. State Rep. JoAn Wood's modest proposal for a 2 cent-per-gallon gas tax hike last year failed 32-37 in the House of Representatives. Her legislation to boost vehicle registration fees by $6 a year didn't even make it out of the House Transportation Committee that she chairs.

But the money will have to come from somewhere, and the longer Idahoans wait the more they will pay.

Unfortunately, Otter ran into a buzzsaw in the House on this issue in 2008. So it's unclear where the leadership to change will come from.

It's always the economy, stupid ith merely five months before the election and the outlook grim for Democrats, we're starting to hear rumblings of a fight within the White House. The political side, we're told, wants to focus on the swelling deficit, which it believes is contributing mightily to the public's sense that the economy isn't being effectively managed. Karl Rove, who's been on the political side of a White House himself, agrees with them: "People's concern about the spending and the deficits and the debt and the out-of-control government have been growing and growing and growing," he said on Fox News. "And it's one of the key drivers in the 2010 election."

Ezra Klein

The economists disagree: They see a weak economy that still needs government support. And if the government fails, and the economy worsens, the midterms will be a massacre. Richard Trumka, president of the AFL-CIO, joins them in this view: "The jobs hole – and the decades-long stagnation in real wages — are the source of the anger that echoes across our political landscape."

Beneath all this sits an age-old tension: The job of governing is different than the job of getting re-elected. What do you do when good politics and good governance point you in the opposite directions?

But maybe we don't have to choose. For decades now, political scientists have been building election models that attempt to predict who will win in November without making any reference to candidates or campaigns. They can generally get within two percentage points of the final vote, and they don't need to know anything about the ads, the gaffes or the ground games to do it. All they really need to know about is the economy.

"In presidential elections," Princeton political scientist Larry Bartels says, "a 1 percent boost in election-year income growth has typically increased the incumbent party's vote share by about 2 percent. So an incumbent party that won 51 percent of the vote in an average economic year like 2004 would be expected to win only 46 percent in a recession year like 2008." Which is, as you may remember, pretty much exactly what happened.

Congressional elections are a bit more difficult because they're more local, but they end up being predictable, too. Gary Jacobson, a political scientist at the University of California at San Diego, has a model that uses the number of seats the majority party holds, the approval rating of the president and the change in real disposable income, and predicts about 70 percent of the change from one election to the next.

All of this suggests political scientists have a pretty good handle on what wins elections, so I began asking them the question that some say is bedeviling the White House: Should the White House focus on polls or paychecks?

The answers were unequivocal: "A policymaker reading polls who finds that people are concerned about the deficit and says I should rein in spending and I'll get credit for that, I don't think there's evidence that'll move voters," the University of Denver's Seth Masket says. "You want to get as much money in voters' hands in the months before the election as possible."

We think of campaigns in terms of people, but they're often decided by circumstances. "The media and the popular mind really think that candidates and the campaigns make a huge difference," says Michael Lewis-Beck, author of "Forecasting Elections." "But it's not as big a difference as the fundamentals operating behind the scenes every day." In some ways, that's comforting: Politicians are judged more on the condition of the country than on the elegance of their campaign.

GOOD NEWS

PASSENGERS,

OUR RATE OF DESCENT HAS

SLOWED ...

But for the Obama administration, it's likely chilling: The economy is still weak, and there aren't 60 votes in the Senate for further stimulus spending. And even if there were, it is too late for them to make a major difference in the economy before November. Democrats needed to pass a bigger stimulus back in 2009, not in late 2010. What they do from here might help the economy, but it's not likely to affect their re-election.

If it's any comfort to the economic team, however, the political team isn't in any better shape: Focusing on the deficit won't make a difference, either. The White House may as well just govern.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Many questions about story of B-24 navigator

On May 31, 2010, the Times-News editorial, "Into thin air: an Idaho Memorial Day," detailed the life and death story about a B-24 navigator, 2nd Lt. Hans Niichel, whose plane was – sadly – shot down by Soviet pilots flying four P-39 Aerocobras, Lend-Lease American fighters.

The B-24's pilot, Wes Bartelt, stated, the "Germans didn't fly fourengined bombers," and described the incident "as deliberate." Leaving readers with the inference the Soviet pilots were knowingly engaging an American bomber and gunned it down with malice toward Americans. Nonsense! The Americans were highly respected and appreciated by the Soviet people (including Stalin) until Truman became president.

Next, the Germans in World War II did indeed fly four-engine bombers, the most notable was the Junker 290/390, all variants had twin tails and significantly resembled the B-24. Secondly, the German four-engined bombers, Messerschmitt Me264 resembled the B-29. and the Focke-Wulfe Condor resembled the B-17.

Were the attacking ships P-39s? Maybe. Maybe not. Most lend-lease P-39s were shot down or removed for training by the time the Soviets entered Poland and had been replaced by the "remarkable" IL-2 Sturmovik fighter. Also, the German Heinkel 100 and the Focke-Wulfe 190 extended model, as well as the Soviet MIG-3, could have easily been identified as P-39s.

Was the shoot-down "deliberate": most likely. I'm certain the pilots engaging the B-24, whoever they were, were deadly serious. But understand those pilots, if friend, were charged with defending a piece of airspace and did so.

Also, why didn't Mr. Bartelt, the pilot, put his B-24 down in a field and surrender to the Soviet army rather than take it to an airfield where the chances of being shot at by air field defenses and local combat air patrols would be very high? Lastly, who gave the bail-out order at such a low altitude?

Rant only disrupted Burley city budget planning session

It finally happened at the most recent Burley City Council meeting. John Walsh of Burley reduced himself to the category of "buffoon." After observing his shenanigans over the past few years, I found myself thinking of the title of a tune popularized by Judy Collins, "Send in the Clowns." Mr. Walsh has himself used the clown image to disparage a former city mayor by publishing a cartoon depicting that individual as a clown, a cartoon published in sitting City Councilman Jay Lenkersdorfer's newspaper, The Weekly Journal.

Such tactics are extreme, to say the least, but do not match the lack of respect portrayed by Mr. Walsh in his rant — delivered without permission from the floor of the meeting room. In other words, Mr. Walsh rudely interrupted a special city budget meeting by standing up and delivering his own agenda – not scheduled, by the way, by the council, and not recognized by Mayor (Terry) Greenman.

The lack of decorum did not seem to deter Mr. Walsh's delivery of personal grievances, which succeeded only in interrupting a session scheduled to establish a working budget for the city - one of the tasks relegated to the council by Burley voters. To my knowledge, Mr. Walsh is not, nor has he been, a member of that elected body. I don't recall seeing his name on the ballot.

I would suggest that he take his bombastic language back to his native England and elect himself to the British Parliament. His oratorical talents might be more appreciated there in one of their give-and-take sessions, some of which might lend themselves to the antics of a buffoon.

Most of us who are residents of this city would prefer to have our elected council members conduct our city business — not the self-appointed Mr. Walsh.

Clinton pushes for greater Afghanistan-Pakistan cooperation

SLAMABAD — Pakistan and Afghanistan sealed a landmark trade deal Sunday as U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton pushed the two neighbors to step up civilian cooperation and work together against al-Qaida and the Taliban.

Shortly after kicking off a South Asia trip aimed at refining the goals of the increasingly unpopular war in Afghanistan, Clinton looked on as the Afghan and Pakistani commerce ministers signed the trade agreement. It was reached only after years of negotiation with recent and very active U.S. encouragement.

The pact, which eases restrictions on cross-border transportation, must be ratified by the Afghan parliament and Pakistani Cabinet. U.S. officials said they believe it will significantly enhance ties between the two countries, boost development and incomes on both sides of the border and contribute to the fight against extrem-

"Bringing Islamabad and Kabul together has been a goal of this administration from the beginning," said Richard Holbrooke, the U.S. special representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan. "This is a vivid demonstration of the two countries coming closer together.

Despite the agreement, Clinton faces challenges in appealing for greater cooperation between the neighboring nations on the nearly 9-year-old war, pressing Pakistan for more help in taking on militants accused of plotting attacks on the U.S., including the failed Times Square bombing, and stepping up action against extremists along the Afghan border.

Afghan government to ask donors to put money behind Afghan priorities

KABUL — At an international conference on Tuesday, the Afghan government will ask donors to put 80 percent of aid money behind programs that the Afghans — not foreign capitals — deem important to

It's a high-stakes meeting for the Kabul government, which wants to show the world leaders attending that it's making strides toward running its own affairs.

Displaying a new streak of independence, Afghan officials are seeking to take the driver's seat to guide their nation out of three decades of conflict. Having spent billions and lost so many troops in nearly nine years of war, the international community remains uneasy about letting go of the wheel. Still, the U.S. and other donor nations believe that strengthening the Afghan government is the only way to end their military involvement in Afghanistan.

If after the Kabul Conference, we do not embark on the delivery of the things that we promised to deliver, then the donors as well as everybody else has every right to complain about us and tell us we are not serious," said Afghan Finance Minister Omar Zakhilwal

Staffan de Mistura, the top U.N. official in Afghanistan who is cochairing the meeting, said there is much work to be done to increase the capacity of the Afghan government.

Fun along the Maine coast ends for Obamas after weekend of hiking, biking

BAR HARBOR — President Barack Obama and the first family said goodbye to Maine on Sunday after a weekend vacation along the

The president, first lady Michelle Obama and daughters Malia and Sasha boarded a small military jet serving as Air Force One and took off from the Bar Harbor airport, returning to the White House by midday.

The Obamas spent much of their time hiking and biking in Acadia National Park. They also played tennis, went boating and enjoyed the food in the resort town of Bar Harbor. From the moment they arrived on Friday, it was clear they were determined to make the most of their time, much of it spent in the park.

The Obamas set the tone right away, motorcading straight from the airport to a park bike trail for an hour of cycling. What followed was a whirl of outings, as their motorcade crisscrossed Mount Desert Island. They went boating on Frenchman Bay, hiked on a park nature trail, played tennis, hung out at the pool, toured a lighthouse, had lunch and dinner at harborside restaurants and — of course — stopped for ice

CALIFORNIA Growers warn of 'McDonald's-ization' of marijuana under plan to tax pot cultivation

OAKLAND — After weathering the fear of federal prosecution and competition from drug cartels, California's medical marijuana growers see a new threat to their tenuous existence: the "Walmarting" of weed.

The Oakland City Council on Tuesday will look at licensing four production plants where pot would be grown, packaged and processed into items ranging from baked goods to body oil. Winning applicants would have to pay $211,000 in annual permit fees, carry $2 million worth of liability insurance and be prepared to devote up to 8 percent of gross sales to taxes.

The move, and fledgling efforts in other California cities to sanction cannabis cultivation for the first time, has some marijuana advocates worried that regulations intended to bring order to the outlaw industry and new revenues to cash-strapped local governments could drive small "mom and pop" growers out of business. They complain that industrial-scale gardens would harm the environment, reduce quality and leave consumers with fewer strains from which to choose.

"Nobody wants to see the McDonald's-ization of cannabis," Dan Scully, one of the 400 "patient-growers" who supply Oakland's largest retail medical marijuana dispensary, Harborside Health Center, grumbled after a City Council committee gave the blueprint preliminary approval last week. "I would compare it to how a small business feels about shutting down its business and going to work at Walmart. Who would be attracted to that?"

Pilloried for nearly three months as it tried repeatedly to stop the leak, BP PLC capped the nearly mile-deep well Thursday and wants to keep it that way. Idahoans set to get free air cooling units

A new miracle air cooler is actually being given away free to the first 1,578 readers who call to beat the order deadline for their first miracle air cooler to stay cool for just pennies a day

Save money: uses 95% less electricity to blast out cold air with no windows, no vents and no freon

R.K. Berry Universal Media Syndicate

UMS - Everyone wants to stay cool this summer. But just turning on your air conditioner sucks the money right out of your pockets.

Well today, for the first time ever brand new MIRA-COOL™ air coolers are actually being given away free to the general public for the next 48 hours starting at precisely 8:00am this morning.

The only thing today's readers have to do is call the Toll Free Hotline with their order for their first MIRA-COOL air cooler before the 48-hour deadline. The first 1,578 readers who do are instantly getting their second MIRA-COOL air cooler absolutely free.

This is all happening to announce the MIRA-COOL air cooler which actually rolls from room-to-room so you can turn down the central air conditioning and stay cool anywhere. That way, everyone who gets them first can beat the sweltering heat and immediately start saving on their electric bills.

Just in time for the unbearable summer heat, MIRA-COOL portable air coolers are being delivered directly to the doors of all Idahoans who beat the deadline.

The good news is the MIRA-COOL portable air cooler is not an air conditioner, so it only costs about a penny an hour to operate.

These remarkable air cooling units are being called a miracle because they use 95% less electricity than a typical room air conditioner, yet blast out ice cooled air without any windows, vents or freon.

They even come with two sets of reusable ice blocks. Everyone is getting the MIRA-COOL because all you do is fill it up and plug it in to stay cool for just pennies a day.

So what's the catch? "Well, only the first 1,578 readers who call 1-866-964-2336 to beat the order deadline for their first MIRA-COOL air cooler are getting their second one free," said Chris Gallo, Operations Director.

"We're sorry, but we just can't afford to give any more than that away free to readers of today's publica- Gallo. tion," Gallo said.

"We can barely keep up ever since we started giving the MIRA-COOL summer electric bills and still stay air coolers away free. With the dog days of summer everyone's trying to get them," said Gallo.

You just won't find these MIRA-COOL air coolers in the national chain stores. That makes the first MIRA-COOL air cooler a real steal for just two hundred ninetyeight dollars and shipping since when you cover only shipping of the second MIRA-COOL air cooler the entire cost is free.

This free giveaway is the best way to slash summer cooling bills and stay cool all summer long. The MIRA-COOL air cooler rolls from room-to-room to keep you cool so you can turn down the air and save a ton of money on cooling bills.

"You see, with a central air condiof your home that you're not using. And window air conditioners are even worse because they weigh a ton so they're a hassle to move," said

Gallo.

But the MIRA-COOL air cooler actually rolls from room-to-room so it's easy to stay cool in any room of the house for just pennies a day.

And here's the best part. Readers of this publication who beat the 48 hour order deadline are getting one free. The MIRA-COOL air cooler only uses about 1¢ an hour of electricity, so the potential energy savings are absolutely incredible.

"We're trying to make sure no one gets left out, but you better hurry because we only have 1,578 MIRA-COOL air coolers to hand out to today's readers for free," confirms Getting the MIRA-COOL air cooler is the smart way to slash cool all summer long. And getting the second one free is like putting around three hundred bucks in your pocket and you can keep everyone in your family cool.

"We're bracing ourselves for all the calls because everyone wants to save on their electric bills and stay cool this summer. But those that really want to stay cool will be telling our operators they want two and they'll get two more free," said Gallo.

"So when lines are busy keep trying or log onto www.MIRA-COOL.com. We promise to get every call. Then we'll have a delivery truck out to you in no time at all so you can stay cool and start saving on your energy bills right away," Gallo said.

"You'll instantly feel the ice cooled tioner you are paying to cool areas air in any room. You will never have to be hot and miserable again," he

When you feel the burn in your feet, think 'blister'

By Vicky Hallett The Washington Post

This time of year, the heat is blistering. Literally.

Because high temperatures and oppressive humidity make you sweat so much more, your feet are likely to get wet when you're walking, jogging or hiking. That moisture isn't just uncomfortable; it's also the source of friction. "That's why it's so hard to take off wet clothes," explains Mary Mundrane-Zweiacher, an athletic trainer from Dover, to an article in the June issue of Podiatry Today, the uncomfortable bumps are the most common sportsrelated foot ailment. They usually fall in the boo-boo category: Although you whine about them, you're probably not going to seek medical attention.

Even if you are able to use an afflicted foot, a blister can throw off your gait. "You're going to try to avoid pain, so you're going to try to run without putting pressure on that spot," Mundrane-Zweiacher says. Landing differently can mess up your body's natural shock absorption system, creating a domino effect of problems up your leg.

That's why Stephen Pribut, a Washington podiatrist specializing in sports medicine, advises you take it easy a day or two after a nasty blister. A short break is unlikely to destroy your training regimen, and you won't risk having to cool it for a much longer time.

The worst-case scenario, of course, is that your blister gets infected and you don't do anything about it. "Then your foot could get gangrene and fall off," Pribut says. That fate is fairly blister sound like a preferable course of action?

Prevention

Start by checking your gear. Everyone has probably experienced new-shoe woes at some point: They're stiffer and more likely to rub you the wrong way. Specialty running stores try to ensure you have a proper fit, which will minimize these problems. But even in the perfect pair, you should avoid going too far in your first few runs, says Chris Farley, owner and general manager of Pacers, a D.C. area chain.

Sock choice is key as well. "Wearing socks made of cotton with new shoes is a recipe for blisters," Pribut says. Or as Farley puts it: "Cotton is the enemy." Instead of cotton, which captures water and compresses unevenly, go with a wicking fabric such as Coolmax or Smartwool, which makes for a less bumpy ride.

Trusted, tested footwear Here's how to keep them at can still act up on seriously swampy days, so for those runs, Farley takes extra precautions. His feet get a liberal application of Body Glide anti-chafe balm, and he uses an anti-blister powder to keep his shoes dry. He also recommends toting a spare pair of socks so you can change. Mundrane-Zweiacher's favorite way to avoid blisters is by monitoring her foot temperature. If she feels excessive heat building up in her shoes, that's a sign to stop. Even though she's a regular runner, the method has kept her blissfully blister-free for years.

Treatment

Most active people are bound to experience the agony of the feet, so it helps to know how to treat the condition correctly. Ideally, that means doing nothing.

Blisters are basically tears between layers of skin that fill with a clear fluid. As long And don't consider going as they're intact, they're not end of summer.

There's the rub that can unlikely, since you'd be in without socks. Farley, an infected. That can change if you get a hankering to pop the blister or stab something into it. And ripping off the top layer of skin, which might seem like the next logical step, is just asking for trouble. "It's acting like a raincoat," Pribut says. Once it's gone, vou're much more susceptible to infection. Plus, it'll hurt like crazy.

A better plan is to ice the area, which can reduce the swelling, Mundrane-Zweiacher says. Then give the blister relief by surrounding it in a doughnutshaped pad or moleskin.

Draining the blister is a last resort that's best performed by a pro. But if you feel you must do it on your own, don't rely on just anything lying around the house. Sterilizing with alcohol or a flame isn't particularly effective, Pribut warns, so your best bet is to get a needle from the drugstore that's sealed in packaging. Try to pierce just the top layer of skin. Going any farther will be painful and possibly cause other dam-

This was a statistic Morris had to change.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention "did a follow-up study in 2006," Morris said in an interview. "Idaho was still 50th out of 50 states. The mammography rate percentage had gone up a little, but not much. It wasn't good enough."

Since the 900 Women Project's inception four years ago, Morris said, it has provided funding for 990 mammograms. A 2010 study by Kaiser Family Foundation has Idaho ranked 46th out of 50 for mammogram 40 pounds in 40 days?

HCG diet has backers, detractors

By Betsy Friauf McClatchy Newspapers

It's a familiar story. She tried over and over to lose weight. Sometimes she succeeded, but it always came back.

And it seemed so unfair because she didn't want to get as skinny as a supermodel, just a healthy weight, 145 or 150

Then Patti Dingler found the HCG Diet. She eats only 500 calories a day, and she and her husband have bumped up their walking regimen to five miles daily near their home in Wise County, Texas. Definitely a recipe for weight

She shed 25 pounds in her first 30 days on the diet.

And after just the first week, "I felt 10 years younger," says Patti, 49, a contract specialist in the Federal Aviation Administration's Fort Worth, Texas, office. "I had energy, and I breathed

Most diet regimens allow about 1,200 calories a day for the average woman. Patti's getting far less. So how is she staving off hunger and fatigue?

Once or twice a day, she puts several drops of a nearly flavorless liquid under her tongue. She says it keeps her feeling good, mostly, although about one day in seven she is more tired than normal.

The important ingredient in those drops is a nonprescription, homeopathic form of HCG, or human chorionic gonadotropin. Naturally occurring HCG is a hormone that is produced in quantity during pregnancy. It's made by cells that form the placenta, which nourishes a fertilized egg after it attaches to the wall of the uterus.

Patti's form of HCG is the homeopathic, or "look-alike" version. Some people following the HCG diet use the actual hormone, prescribed by a doctor and injected with a syringe every day. Either way, plenty of people are willing to call HCG a godsend.

HCG for weight loss isn't new; it was first popularized in the 1950s by British physician Albert Simeons and enjoyed a resurgence in the '70s.

But lately it has made a huge comeback. It's on the Internet, billboards, TV and fliers you find on the windshield after you grab a pizza.

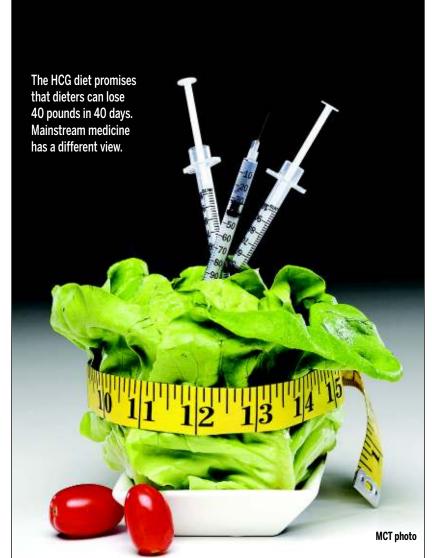

Patti's husband, Wes Dingler, is a believer. After some hesitation, he went on the diet, too.

"It was time for drastic measures;" says Wes, a 45-year-old avionics manager. His doctor warned him that he was in danger of developing adult onset diabetes. "I was on double cholesterol meds. The doctor said that on my next visit, if my blood sugar's still high, I'll have to go on insulin."

Wes says a pound or a pound and a half per week for weight loss is a good goal. His wife says he's "into instant bad breath," says Keri Gans, regisgratification," and that's one of the reasons he and so many people love the HCG diet.

"I'm dropping about a pound a day, 33 pounds already," Wes says. He started at 241 and wants to get down to 175 pounds on his 5-foot-11 frame.

The diet lays out a maintenance plan for the six weeks after discontinuing HCG. The do's and don'ts are similar to the 500-calorie diet: no processed foods, no starches or sugars, about 1,500 calories daily consisting mainly of fruit, vegetables, fish and chicken.

Wes and Patti like the idea that they'll keep eating healthy after they stop taking HCG. In fact, they like everything about the HCG diet.

Mainstream medicine has an entirely different view.

Most doctors' and dietitians' views can be summed up in three phrases: placebo, peril and put-it-back-on.

"I don't believe it to be efficacious. Either shots or drops, it's a placebo," says Dr. Craig Primack, a bariatric (weight-loss) doctor inn Phoenix and a spokesman for the American Society of Bariatric Physicians. "Not many doctors commonly known as weight-loss doctors are using this."

The 500-calorie diet doesn't provide enough carbs or protein and will send the body into a state called ketosis. Ketosis is a natural appetite suppressant, Primack says, so he believes that is what banishes hunger, rather

In ketosis, the body burns stored fat, but if it's extreme, it can lead to problems. The blood pH can change, making blood too acidic and essentially corrosive to internal organs.

"The short-term ketosis problem is tered dietitian and spokesperson for the American Dietetic Association. "Over an extended period, kidney stones and gallstones are common side effects, and also fatigue."

Injectable HCG is FDA-approved for some uses, but not for weight loss. It was first used in the 1950s to boost testosterone production in boys who should be entering puberty but weren't, says Primack. It's also sometimes used to treat infertility and some cancers in men.

Doctors can legally prescribe a substance such as HCG for "off-label" use, such as weight loss, Primack says. Dr. Kenneth J. Heinrich, an ASBP spokesman and medical director of Physicians for Weight Loss in Chicago, says he knows of no obstetrician-gynecologists who recommend the homeopathic drops for "label" use.

There's also controversy about just how dangerous off-label HCG injections can be, Heinrich says. "There are life-threatening effects, some say, but there are no studies documenting the frequency of adverse effects. The more common are headaches and excessive acne and hair growth."

HCG also can cause prostate problems in men, and, in women, it may bring on ovarian hyperstimulation syndrome, or excessive ovulation, he says.

Teenagers shouldn't use a very lowcalorie diet at all unless they've reached their full growth, Heinrich

HCG dieters are setting themselves up for ultimate failure, Gans and "It's not a long-term solution to weight loss," says Gans. "There are not enough carbohydrates — that's the major fuel for our bodies?"

Getting to the right weight is about eating healthy, she says, "eating plenty of fruits, vegetables and 'good carbs' like whole grains, oats, barley, quinoa, buckwheat, beans, other legumes high-fiber carbs."

Primack agrees: "We live in a carb society. As soon as they're off the diet, most start gaining again."

Gans recommends losing much more slowly, 1 to 2 pounds a week. "The key is to not gain it back and wait for the next diet fad to come along?"

Attention coffee lovers! That habit may not be so

Drinking coffee, a lot of it, may help prevent type 2 diabetes, a disease affecting millions and on the rise across the globe, according to a new study published in the American Chemical Society's Journal Agricultural and Food Chemistry.

It's the caffeine, say scientists from Nagoya University in Japan.

The scientists fed either water or coffee to a group of lab mice, a common standin for people in such studies. more study to come.

The coffee consumption prevented development of high blood sugar and improved insulin sensitivity in the mice. That means lower risk of diabetes.

There were also other benefits from drinking coffee, including improvements in fatty liver, which is a disorder where fat builds up in liver cells, primarily in obese people. That further reduces the risk of diabetes, the scientists said.

Other studies in the lab showed that caffeine may be "one of the most effective anti-diabetic compounds in coffee," according to the scientists.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"War has been, and still is, the school of collectivism, the warrant of tyranny."

— Charles William Eliot

One aspect of good declarer play is to make life as difficult as possible for the defenders. And one way to do this is to try to put the defenders on the spot before you have revealed too much about your hand.

Against today's three notrump, West led the club four to East's eight and declarer's jack, leaving the position in that suit unclear to both defenders. Declarer then cashed four rounds of diamonds, followed by three rounds of hearts. When that suit did not break, he led a spade from the table. It was not difficult for East to realize that if he ducked this, that would be declarer's ninth trick, so East won the spade ace, cashed the heart jack, and returned a club, allowing West to take his club tricks and defeat the

Declarer in the other room made it more difficult by leaving diamonds alone. Of course, he did not want to go down when the contract was laydown, so he started by playing three rounds of hearts, but when they did not break, he led a spade immediately. It was now more difficult for East to rise with his ace since he did not know where declarer's tricks were coming from. Whether or not he got it right, the fact remains that he played low on the spade, and declarer took the trick and ran for home with nine win-

ANSWER: In this auction, partner has not promised club length, so a club lead is no safer or more dangerous than any other suit. When, as here, you have a sequence, my first thought would be to lead it. Accordingly, I would try

DEAR ABBY: I am being married in October and asked my best friend of 19 years to be my maid of honor. "Brianna" likes to dye the bottom of her hair red. I asked her to take the red out of her hair for the wedding, but she flat-out refused! When I told her that it is MY wedding and I don't want any red hair because it won't match my color scheme, her exact words were, "I don't care."

Am I wrong for asking Brianna to remove the dye? How do I get her to realize this is my wedding and I don't want to be upstaged! Please help me.

 SEEING RED IN MARYLAND

DEAR \mathbf{A} BBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR SEEING RED: I'll try. When you picked your best friend of 19 years to stand up with you at your wedding, you knew what she looked like. Either you should have picked another color scheme for the production, or chosen a cast member who was suitably mousy that she wouldn't dim your spotlight. Please note that I am using theatrical terms because you have lost sight of what a wedding really should be. What a shame.

DEAR ABBY: I am 20, and my life seems to be going nowhere. I graduated from high school two years ago and have put off going to college. I am obese and have no willpower to exercise to get healthy. I'm constantly thinking about the past. In high school I had few friends, none of whom keep in touch with me.

I recently bumped into a former guy friend at a store. We were close during my junior year, but he ignored me in my senior year. At the store, he didn't speak to me, which was hurtful. It reminded me of the pain I felt back in school. I always felt so alone.

My dream is to be an actress, go back to school and lose weight. But I can't actually see myself accomplishing any of it. I don't know what to do with myself anymore. Can you offer me some guidance?

GOING CRAZY IN PHOENIX

DEAR GOING CRAZY: I'm glad you wrote, because you may suffer from longterm depression. Please schedule an appointment with a doctor and tell him or her exactly what you have described to me. With help, you may be able to stop needing to comfort yourself with food and find the energy you need to become more active. If you want to be an actress, see what acting classes are available in Phoenix and if there is any regional theater. Not all actresses have to be skinny.

And one more thing. The former classmate you saw in the store may not have seen you, which is why he didn't say hello, or he may not have matured since graduation. This is not a reflection of what you are worth - it's a reflection on

DEAR ABBY: It is picnic and barbecue season, and I would like to inform you of a disturbing trend that seems to be growing. When guests arrive at gatherings, they tend to prepare "to go" plates as soon as they arrive, take the plates to their cars, and then return to eat as if they had just arrived.

My mother-in-law thinks this practice is just fine. I think it is tasteless, to say the least. Will you please settle this disagreement between is a "trend," this is the first time I have heard about it. You may feel that taking food from a party to a hot car and returning to attend the gathering is "tasteless." I think it's downright dangerous because it could lead to food poisoning. The time to take leftovers is at the END of the party.

IF JULY 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may be inspired this summer to try something new and different. Write down your ideas, as they can bear fruit as the year unfolds. Don't be fooled, however, into thinking that a passing fancy is worthwhile in August. Wait until September or early October to make key decisions about romantic attachments. If you are single, you might find someone who will fulfill your dreams. If you need a job, September is an excellent time to go on interviews or to begin an apprenticeship. Your popularity grows by leaps and bounds through January, so don't be bashful if the cameras are turned your way or if a new circle of friends start lining up at your door.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): if you know people are shallow or judgmental, you must ask yourself if you want those people as friends. While it is possible to work on yourself and refine your own attitudes, you can't change others.

TAURUS (April 20-May Slip-ups happen. Have faith and confidence in the knowledge that there will be someone there to grab your hand if you slip on a banana peel. It will still be wise however to watch where you walk.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It is tempting to take sides, but the middle is the safest place to be. You might hope to charm your way into someone's heart but you might find that your efforts to win praise simply backfire

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't believe everything you think. Those sudden impulses to act on a little bit of information can cause a whole lot of heartache. During the week to come, adopt the attitude that only "time will tell."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Know your enemies. Associate with the people who share your values, but get to know the people who hold opposing views, too. You can't know what you truly believe until you test it in the real world.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your imagined limitations can define you. Rather than letting criticism mold you into someone afraid to break with tradition, try focusing on ways to realize your dreams as well as your potential.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are too well bred to complain. When everyone else is griping about politics or policies, you tend to back away from the conversation. You will steer clear of trouble if you maintain your own counsel.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dig into your pile of merit. You can rely on past performance when you are less than perfect in the present. Rather than making big changes or sudden moves, simply ride out a brief dip in your luck.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Schools can teach children facts - as well as to obey. You may experience a rebellious mood that begs you to play hooky from organized structures in your life. Pay attention to important lessons.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Question your own assumptions. You might have met a person who has grown on you like barnacles on a rock. But, the cement that has welded the two of you together can be chipped away today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Comparison shopping is more useful than comparison thinking. Be content with what you have. People really won't think less of you if you don't drive a luxury car or don't sport designer

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go gentle into that good night. If you want to develop something lasting, don't nip potential in the bud by crushing it under your fist. Try a little more finesse and avoid the strongarm tactics.

SUDOKU

Suddku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
