By Jim Kuhn
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Reveling over a new milestone in his presidency, a triumphant Barack Obama on Wednesday signed into law the most sweeping overhaul of lending and high-finance rules since the Great Depression, adding safeguards for millions of consumers and aiming to restrain Wall Street excesses that could set off a new recession.

The president's signing ceremony capped nearly two years of intense and partisan debate over

"Because of this law, the American people will never be asked again to foot the bill for Wall Street's mistakes. There will be no more tax-funded bailouts, period."

— President Barack Obama

In a heated midterm election season that has dented his public support, Obama sought to put the complex law in pocketbook terms. Emphasizing provisions that guard borrowers from abusive lenders, he claimed "the strongest financial protections for consumers in the nation's history."

Not everyone agreed. Republicans portrayed the bill as a burden on small banks and the businesses that rely on them and argued that it will cost consumers and impede job growth.

Rep. Mike Pence of Indiana, a member of the House GOP leadership, on Wednesday joined House Minority Leader John Boehner of Ohio in calling for the law's repeal.

The law, passed despite nearly unanimous Republican opposition, attempts to catch up to a financial system that has sped ahead of outdated regulation and slackened rules that allowed banks, traders and others to take increased risks.

Wall Street's near collapse, Obama said, "was a crisis born of a failure of responsibility from certain corners of Wall Street to the halls of power in Washington."

The new rules, however, are only at a midpoint. Banking and market regulators will have up to two years to write many of the new regulations required by the law, extending uncertainty and ushering in a Idahoans may lead the nation in their increased reliance on the federal food stamp program, but Gem State children are increasingly receiving safe, nutritious food, according to a recent study.

KIMBERLY — A green John Deere tractor rumbled across the field, stopping at a makeshift parking lot surrounded by farmland to transport people to the hub of activity at the University of Idaho Kimberly Research and Extension Center.

For those who came — more than 200 by early in the evening — the tractor ride Wednesday was an early reminder that they had come to the center's fourth-biennial Twilight Tour. The free event offered a plethora of glimpses into the agriculture world: insects, soil, nutrients and more were all on display at stands scattered around the center's grounds.

Horse-drawn wagons carted people off on tours to research plots. The event was aimed at giving both the agriculture community and those who aren't connected to the field a look at agricultural research and the center, said Don Morishita, center superintendent.

At one station, Donna Gillespie, an educator with the Minidoka County Extension office, gave safety tips and supervision to people shooting a pellet gun at a target.

Noting that the activity is part of 4-H, she said that the organization, while known for its agricultural programs, has plenty of options.

"Kids love it," she said of the pellet gun activity. "So do adults."

Education can be a powerful tool. It can prevent conflict, put an end to nuisances and even save lives. And it is with these goals that Sidney Edwards began a post-retirement job as the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office's code enforcement officer in May, a joint venture funded by the county and local highway districts. Since then, he has done more educating than citing and has focused on building relationships with farmers.

"First year here is mainly education and letting people know we're out here and

Second suspect charged in Lowe's theft scheme

Times-News

A second suspect charged with grand theft in a plot to steal goods from the Twin Falls Lowe's Home Improvement store made his first appearance in 5th District Court in Twin Falls Wednesday.

Michael Thomas Wood, 20, of Twin Falls, is accused of working with Steven Grenz, 20, also of Twin Falls, to steal more than $5,500 worth of merchandise from the store with the help of a cashier, Kourtney Scott. Scott told Twin Falls police of the scheme when confronted by a store manager in April.

Wood and Grenz are alleged to have taken merchandise without paying on three occasions through February and March. Wood was also charged with witness intimidation after allegedly confronting Scott in the Times-News' parking lot, where her husband is contracted as a paper carrier. Scott's alleged role was to alert the men to which register she was working so they could pass without suspicion. Prosecutors originally charged her with three counts of aiding and abetting grand theft, but those charges were dropped in May.

Wood's bond was set at $25,000, which was posted on July 12. He faces a preliminary hearing on July 30. Grenz's preliminary hearing last Friday is set to continue on Aug. 6.

Buhl athletic cuts considered for fall 2011

Wednesday's article about the Buhl School District's budget shortfall misstated which year officials will consider cutting middle and high-school athletics. Officials say if they can't pass a supplemental levy this year, they will have to consider cutting sports and other activities for the 2011-12 school year. School board trustees say they decided this month not to pursue similar cuts for the 2010-11 school year, other than those designated by the Idaho High School Activities Association.

Meredith Crawford, 10, of Kimberly, tried out the gun, which didn't have any kick-back. For her, it was the most fun part of the trip, though she hadn't been on a wagon ride yet with her family.

“It's an easy gun to shoot because it didn't go back,” she said, adding that it was fun to try improving her aim.

Colorado potato beetles were out on display, crawling along potato plants that showed signs of damage from the insects. Some people just looked, while others touched the beetles.

“They're not too grossed,” David Beus, a summer research assistant, said of people's reactions to the beetles.

Pamela J.S. Hutchinson, a weed scientist from the Aberdeen extension office, had weeds on display, along with pictures to teach children the names. For pig weed, there was a drawing of its namesake porker, and for witch grass, an image of a lady on a broomstick.

While focused on agriculture, the event also sought to provide useful tips to take back to the city. One stand showed pictures of what to look for in plant nutrient deficiencies. When plants have an iron deficiency, for example, there's a yellowing of the leaves, a part of nature that's the same in rose gardens as on the farm field.

nuisance to motorists and is a conservation issue — why water the road when crops could use it, he said.

“I've been to crashes that were sprinkler-related before, people trying to avoid the water and getting into accidents,” Edwards said. “Bottom line is there is a state code that talks about water on state highways.”

He's also been talking with folks about encroachment issues and making sure intersections are free of obstructions that could hinder drivers' vision. His priorities will change with the seasons and include keeping manure and mud off roadways.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Terry Kramer, who sits on the Local Emergency Planning Committee, said the position fills a need that sheriff's deputies couldn't always attend to because of other emergencies.

The code enforcement officer is not responsible for answering emergency calls, allowing him to follow up with possible code violations while giving deputies more time for criminal issues.

“Based on the amount of activities or the amount of contacts (Edwards) is making, it's turning out really well,” Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter said, noting that Edwards' wage of about $16 an hour is cheaper than repairing roads. “What I like best is not having to write any citations.”

Edwards is also in the process of building a database of who is responsible for what out in the county, which can save other deputies time when responding to complaints, Carter said.

“We're excited about (the new position),” Carter said. “It's a good deal. It's good for the county, it's good for the department and it's good for the highway districts.”

Black flies

attending the half-day session learned what the district is doing to control the insects. District Manager Kirk Tubbs said in this second year of the program, the team has been able to focus its efforts and be more efficient, thanks to lessons learned last year.

Following morning presentations on the black-fly battle, biology and background at the Murtaugh Lake picnic area, attendees piled into a yellow school bus to see the district's techniques in action.

First stop on the tour was a bridge crossing the Twin Falls Canal east of Hansen. District technicians hauled up yellow ropes that had been dangling off the bridge into the water. Female black flies are attracted to yellow-green objects when laying eggs, so rope is a convenient census tool. More larvae on the rope can mean a need for more treatment.

Pesticides, the usual treatment for flies, sometimes cause public concern — especially if used in water. But Tubbs said the abatement district uses an ingredient called “Bti,” a protein produced naturally by bacteria that is toxic only to black flies, mosquitoes and related flies. It does not remain in the water after it has dispersed.

Peering at the underside of a rope, technician Stacy King pointed out the glistening brown strands of black-fly larvae to observers. She also found a few pupa, the next step in insect development after the larval stage.

“We plan the application of Bti so it hits at the peak time of egg development because it doesn't work once they've become pupa,” King said.

Tubbs said the larvae develop over five to 10 days on average, with warmer temperatures causing faster development. So as the summer heats up, treatment becomes more frequent. But he's out on the moving water — black fly larvae need flowing water — from April until the fall, applying treatments every week or two throughout the county. Almost half of his budget goes to buying Bti.

Finally, the bus pulled up to the canal gates just below Murtaugh Lake, where the abatement team demonstrated how they treat the water with Bti. Using a nozzle that resembled that of a gas pump and wearing blue rubber gloves and a dust mask, technician Jared Evan sprayed what looked like chocolate milk into the churning canal.

tened to an Idaho State Department of Agriculture representative explain that the mask was needed to prevent an allergic reaction.

“Not at this event, but sometimes discussions pop up about regulations dealing with these activities, that they're either too lenient or too restrictive,” Church said. “I'm here because the senator can have an effect on those regulations.”

The Bti has had a positive effect in the short time it's been used, said sheep rancher John Noh. His family has ranched in the South Hills for decades, and he said some years the flies were so bad that his sheep had no lambs. His family tried to treat for flies but didn't have the reach of the abatement district.

Noh said things have improved now that the district is treating all of Twin Falls County. But Cassia County doesn't have an abatement program.

“I'd say the black fly populations have been cut at least two-thirds to three-fourths,” Noh said. “They're still a nuisance, but they're a manageable nuisance.”

Food

17th in the nation, with Virginia leading the pack in child food security.

By region, 17 southern states — led by Arkansas — are home to the most food-insecure children, at 21.8 percent. Idaho's ranking is improved from 23rd in a similar 2005-07 study and 44th in 2003-05.

Various Idaho public agencies and charities are fighting the battle against child hunger.

The Idaho Foodbank and its partner agencies delivered 8.8 million pounds of food in 2009 to residents throughout the state to help alleviate some hunger issues. Twenty-five western Magic Valley partners are served through Idaho Foodbank's Boise warehouse, while five in Mini-Cassia are served out of Pocatello.

Those partners also gather food items of their own, and many food-service charities and nonprofits have developed innovative methods to put food in Idaho youngsters' hands. The Blaine County Hunger Coalition's mobile food bank takes the hunger battle to the streets, while its backpack program sends children home from school with backpacks full of nutritious food for their families to eat over each weekend.

The Twin Falls School District's summer lunch program served 3,700 children in June — an estimated 40 percent increase from 2009.

“You don't think of a child going hungry in Idaho,” said Susan Henderson, child nutrition supervisor for the Twin Falls School District. “Food stamps just don't seem to go as far because it costs more to buy food now.”

Henderson has worked with the district for 23 years and said she's never witnessed this high of a participation rate in the summer lunch program. She blames the economy but isn't sure why children are going to sleep with growling stomachs.

The district's summer lunch program serves food free of charge for children under age 18 and offers reduced-price lunches for adults. Located in 14 sites around Twin Falls, Henderson said the federally funded program costs anywhere from $75,000 to $100,000 per month.

Its meals range from chicken nuggets to tuna sandwiches and are served with fruit, vegetables and milk. Each meal costs around $3.25, which the district pays and is reimbursed for by the federal government. Henderson said the program offers good family time and helps with food costs.

Similar programs are offered in districts across the Magic Valley.

During the school year, the Twin Falls district provides free breakfasts and reduced-price lunches for students in need at all district schools. Harrison, Oregon Trail and Lincoln elementary schools also provide fruit and vegetable programs served at afternoon recess to introduce children to new types of produce.

“We see kids in Twin that aren't being fed enough food in their homes,” Henderson said. “I have a real heart for children. I hate to think of kids going hungry.”

T.F. council to consider texting ban

Times-News

The Twin Falls City Council will look at a possible ban on texting while driving at its Aug. 9 meeting.

The city has scheduled a public hearing on the matter with a possible vote afterward. The proposed ban encompasses all writing, reading and sending of text messages, instant messages and e-mails while driving. Using the phone for any purpose related to making or receiving a call is still OK, according to the proposed ordinance.

The ordinance would not apply to emergency workers if they are using a device in relation to their job.

Violators would be fined $50 by Twin Falls police.

The council is taking up the mantle after conservatives in the Idaho House killed a statewide ban in the last legislative session.

new phase of lobbying by financial firms.

"Regulators will have to be vigilant," Obama said.

The president sought to quell public anger over the $700 billion bank rescue fund the government created at the height of the crisis to reassure the markets. While the infusion is credited with providing stability, the public recoiled at the idea of taxpayer money being used to help prop up huge banks.

The law gives regulators new authority to liquidate large, interconnected financial firms that are failing.

The law, however, does permit the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to borrow taxpayer money from the Treasury temporarily to help cover the costs of winding down a large firm. Other large banks would have to pay the Treasury back over time.

Firms have been poring over the massive bill, anxious to assess its most immediate impact. Credit rating firms, for instance, say they will no longer allow the issuers of debt-backed securities to put their ratings for them in public sale documents, wary of a provision in the law that makes it easier to sue ratings agencies.

The law assembles an influential council of regulators to be on the lookout for risks across the finance system. It also creates a powerful independent consumer financial protection bureau within the Federal Reserve to write and enforce new regulations covering lending and credit.

It places shadow financial markets that previously escaped the oversight of regulators under new scrutiny and gives the government new powers to break up companies that threaten the economy.

Major Wall Street banks have welcomed some provisions in the bill but have fiercely opposed others that would limit their banking business and cut into their profitability.

And Republicans have argued that the law will hurt rather than help people still reeling from the recession.

"Millions of Americans are struggling to find jobs, and yet all they see in Washington are Democrats passing massive bills that, at their core, seem to have one thing in common: more job loss," Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said on the Senate floor Wednesday.

Thomas Donohue, the president and CEO of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, called the law "a financial regulatory boondoggle."

The new law comes at a politically delicate time for the president. A growing number of business leaders describe his administration as antagonistic to their interests, and polls show the American public increasingly wary of his policy initiatives.

Eager to portray the law as one with broad appeal, the White House included some top bankers among those at the bill signing ceremony. They included Vikram Pandit, CEO of the financial giant Citigroup, and top executives from Bank of New York Mellon and Barclay's PLC.

Noticeably absent, however, were JPMorgan Chase & Co. CEO Jamie Dimon, a past Obama backer, and Goldman Sachs Group Inc. CEO Lloyd Blankfein. Dimon has been vocal in his criticism of some provisions in the bill.

"The CEOs who opposed reform never expected to be invited to the bill signing, and not a single one has complained to the administration," Deputy Communications Director Jen Psaki wrote in a White House Web log Wednesday.

Also in the audience were Maryland Vietnam veteran, Andrew Giordano, who was hit with bank overdraft fees, and Robin Fox, a Georgia teacher stung by retroactive interest rate increases on her credit card balance — two issues the legislation aims to remedy.

Former Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker and Elizabeth Warren, head of the panel assigned to oversee the bank bailout fund, also attended. Both have been instrumental in shaping parts of the bill.

Filer continues budgeting process

By John E. Swayze

Times-News correspondent

FILER — The Filer City Council continues moving through the process of creating its fiscal year 2011 budget.

Council members used part of Tuesday's meeting to evaluate the city's budget position over the past nine months and hear requests for funding from city departments and organizations. The new fiscal year begins in October.

Debbie Dane, executive director of Southern Idaho Tourism, approached the council with a request that her organization be considered for a $150 contribution.

"We are asking for the same amount that was given in the last two years," Dane said. "When you calculate that out, it's about 11.5 cents for one of your residents."

Southern Idaho Tourism was established in 1995 with the goal of promoting various Magic Valley attractions and other recreational opportunities.

"You may not think that Filer plays much of a role in tourism, but it's ($750 million) in economic impact on our region," she said. "And 9.25 percent of our friends and neighbors — 7,400 jobs — are employed in the hospitality industry."

Additional city budget workshops are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Aug. 3 and Aug. 10, in the council chambers on Main Street.

I-86/I-84 interchange off-ramp to close today

Times-News

The westbound off-ramp from Interstate 86 onto eastbound Interstate 84 will be closed today through late September, according to an Idaho Transportation Department release.

Westbound I-86 drivers will need to continue west along I-84 to Exit 216 near Declo, before re-entering I-84 on the eastbound lanes and backtracking to the I-84/I-86 interchange.

Signs announcing the closure will be placed at on-ramps at Raft River and American Falls. The work is part of a 15-mile, full-width rehabilitation project of I-84.

Ralph L. Wadsworth Construction Co. of Draper, Utah, is the contractor for the section containing the interchange, a $9.3 million project expected to be completed in late September.

FDIC sends insurance payouts to 9,500

By Marcy Gordon

Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Thanks to the overhaul of financial rules becoming law Wednesday, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. can truthfully say "the check is in the mail" to about 9,500 customers of banks that failed in 2008.

The agency plans to mail depositors roughly $200 million Thursday.

The maximum the FDIC would insure in any single deposit account was raised from $100,000 to $250,000 at the height of the financial crisis in October 2008, as part of the $700 billion rescue package.

The law President Obama signed Wednesday makes the higher cap permanent, retroactive to Jan. 1, 2008.

Pushing the effective date back to the beginning of 2008 gives about 9,500 customers of six banks that failed between Jan. 1 and Oct. 3, 2008, whose accounts held between $100,000 and $250,000 more money than they would have received. The FDIC said about 500 remaining customers' accounts held more than $250,000 per depositor, and they still aren't covered for that excess money.

The FDIC covers up to $250,000 per depositor per bank, including individual retirement accounts, or IRAs. Joint accounts are insured up to that amount for each owner of the account.

Twin Falls arts center deserves community’s support

When the new Twin Falls Center for the Arts was initially planned, envisioning it required a bit of imagination: a multi-purpose theater, classrooms, offices and an outdoors area where musicians and dancers could perform. All housed in a handsome building on the canyon’s rim that would include a first-class restaurant as an immediate neighbor and common space for exhibits of all kinds.

While still on the drawing board, the Magic Valley Arts Council, which oversees the center, raised more than $1 million for the project. As demonstrated in a recent tour of the facility those bold dreams have taken shape in the form of Pinnacle West, a commercial development that will be home to the center when it opens this fall. Housing a not-for-profit organization within a private development appears to be an innovative and efficient plan.

But a final fundraising push is needed to reach the goal of $1.4 million which will cover the cost of construction, furnishings and equipment as well as initial operating costs of the arts center. “... the new center will be able to offer creative experiences to children, youth and adults that will enrich families and the community at large for decades to come,” fundraising chairmen Allan Frost and Michael McBride wrote in a recent Times-News guest column.

The council is pursuing a $100,000 grant from the Paul G. Allen Family Foundations and evidence of strong local contributions will improve its chances. Tours of the facility will continue through the summer and early fall. If you are interested in contributing — whatever the amount — and help push the campaign over the top, you’ll appreciate having a first-hand look. It’s a spectacular project from which the community will benefit for decades to come.

The Twin Falls Center for the Arts is an innovative combination of a non-profit organization and a commercial development.

Obama’s era of Big Things is over

The first long chapter of Barack Obama’s presidency came to an end last week when the Senate finally passed its sweeping financial regulation bill. Obama’s first 18 months in office produced historic legislation, but that era of Big Things is now over.

Doyle McManus

The mandate the president could claim after taking 29 states in the election and scoring an astonishing 69 percent approval rating in the Gallup Poll is mostly spent. His party’s majority in Congress, already eroding, is about to get much smaller. From now on, Obama’s presidency must focus on more modest goals — and survival.

That’s not to downplay his accomplishments up to now. The $787-billion economic stimulus package, the enactment of a national health insurance law and last week’s Wall Street reforms already rank Obama with Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lyndon B. Johnson as a president who fundamentally reshaped the federal government.

Paradoxically, though, those achievements now threaten to sink his presidency — in part because he has focused more on getting big legislation passed than on the more mundane jobs of implementing and explaining what he’s done.

Now he has no choice. His Democratic allies in Congress, their majorities at risk in an election only 107 days away, are begging for a break from Big Things and more attention to small ones, like unemployment insurance and campaign fundraising. An energy bill, if Obama gets one, will be far smaller than what he had hoped for. An immigration bill is utterly out of reach. And if this year’s Congress has turned skittish, next year’s could be positively hostile.

“He has used up his prime period of presidential power,” said Fred I. Greenstein of Princeton University, a scholar of the presidency.

“(Obama) had 18 months to find the limits of audacity. For the next 15 weeks, he must try to reignite the spark he found in his 2008 presidential campaign, only this time on behalf of congressional candidates less photogenic than he is, and against a ferocious economic headwind.”

Why has Obama fallen so abruptly back to Earth? His top strategist, David Axelrod, says it was predictable: No president’s popularity can stay at 69 percent once he begins making decisions, because every choice gives his opponents a new target. Nor can any president satisfy the yearnings of his most ardent supporters; in the 1980s, conservatives complained that Ronald Reagan had turned into a pragmatic compromiser, just as Obama’s liberal base agonizes today.

And no president can escape public frustration over a long recession, even if it predated his tenure. Obama and his aides take comfort in the fact that his standing in public opinion surveys is actually better than Reagan’s at the same point in his recession-wracked first term — and Reagan won reelection by a landslide two years later.

Still, the numbers in a CBS Poll last week were daunting. Obama’s overall job approval rating was 44 percent, respectable for a recession; but 74 percent of respondents said they did not believe his stimulus package had helped the economy at all, and more than half, 52 percent, said the president wasn’t spending enough time on the problem.

Those are frustrating sentiments to White House aides who have pushed the president to visit more factory floors and construction job sites. They planned for Obama to focus almost solely on jobs and the economy this year — but then the health care bill didn’t pass until March and the gulf oil spill ate most of May and June.

Even without those crises, it is clear the president prefers to spend his time on big, ambitious measures over small, kitchen-table problems. He has sent Vice President Joe Biden to tour construction sites where economic stimulus money is being spent the old-fashioned way, but he himself visits alternative energy projects — a weighty long-range priority rather than just the short-term problem of enduring the recession.

Now, circumstances will give Obama no choice. He had 18 months to find the limits of audacity. For the next 15 weeks, he must try to reignite the spark he found in his 2008 presidential campaign, only this time on behalf of congressional candidates less photogenic than he is, and against a ferocious economic headwind.

And what will he do in the two years after election day? Aides say there’s still a big agenda: education reform, which could be an opportunity for bipartisan legislation. More work on energy policy, which will be at most half-done this year. Perhaps most important, a battle over how to reduce the deficit after the recession is over.

But none of those match the vaulting goals of the first 18 months. And it’s unlikely that Congress will have a workable Democratic majority under any circumstances; the prospects for legislative gridlock are good. All of which means Obama will have to find more ways to govern by executive order, addressing problems incrementally rather than with sweeping change.

And that raises a question: The president has shown that he knows how to swing for the fences. But can he also play small ball?

It’s time we started to outsource government

In another country also called America, there were no credit cards and excessive debt was seen as a character flaw. In that America, my grandparents and their parents had discussions when they wanted to buy almost anything. The conversations focused on two questions: can we afford it and do we need it? If the answer to either question was “no,” they didn’t buy it.

So much of our personal and public debt in modern America comes from a refusal to ask these questions. We don’t need much of what we have and we certainly can’t afford it. But we buy it anyway.

The recession may be forcing us to come to our senses, however reluctantly. A Wall Street Journal headline on July 19 could be interpreted negatively, but to me it is a positive: “Cities Rent Police, Janitors to Save Cash.”

The gist of the story is that more cities are outsourcing some of the most basic functions of local government because they can no longer afford to provide them. This has the potential of reducing costs, improving efficiency and reducing the size and reach of government. What’s not to like?

Why do local governments need to pick up trash, run libraries, or even enforce laws if the private sector can do it just as well, or better, and at less cost to taxpayers? Unions are one reason and control by politicians is the other.

The senior policy adviser to the mayor of San Jose, Calif., Michelle McGurk, is quoted in the Journal story: “These are cases where the question is being asked, ‘Is this a core service at the city level?’ “Faced with a $118 million budget deficit,” writes the Journal’s Tamara Audi, the city of San Jose dropped its custodial staff and hired “outside contractors to clean its city hall and airport.” Estimated savings: $4 million.

Maywood, a tiny city southeast of Los Angeles, is dismissing its entire staff and contracting with outsiders to perform all city services, including the police. A major reason for the police layoff was a decision by the city’s major insurance carrier to cancel coverage because of the high number of lawsuits against the Maywood Police Department, which amounted to $21 million in legal expenses and judgments. “Without insurance, Maywood is prohibited from hiring people who work directly for the city.”

What if this practice were to catch on? It would surely boost employment in the private sector, as more businesses would take over services now performed by government. Politicians are probably not going to like this because it will likely erode their power and perks. But taxpayers should love it because it means saving money and there will be fewer excuses for not reducing taxes.

British Prime Minister

David Cameron is on a similar track, proposing “a mass transfer of power from the state to the people,” as the London Telegraph characterized it. Localities would be asked to run bus services, set up broadband Internet networks and take over recycling duties, among other tasks.

A recent Washington Post series underscored the problem of government waste. In what was formerly known as “the war on terror” the story tells of a hodgepodge of overlapping agencies and redundant work: “The top-secret world the government created in response to the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, has become so large, so unwieldy and so secretive that no one knows how much money it costs, how many people it employs, how many programs exist within it or exactly how many agencies do the same work.”

Many Americans may not understand the inner workings of government, but they understand waste and duplication. Government claims it can’t afford to cut anything, but it never asks us if we can afford to pay more taxes.

Republicans and conservatives might wish to campaign on a promise to streamline government by outsourcing work government has no business doing if it can be done better and less expensively in the private sector. The unions won’t like it, but those of us paying the bills will. So, too, would my grandparents and their parents.

What Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... it's all about revenue

Idaho State Journal, Pocatello

Having emptied the state till in order to finish the fiscal year with a balanced budget, even Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter is acknowledging that in 2011, “the Legislature is going to have an opportunity to look for additional revenues.”

And State Rep. Dennis Lake, chairman of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, predicts “2011 is all about revenue enhancement.”

Idaho actually ended its fiscal year about $8 million in the hole, but the governor dipped into permanent building funds to meet the constitutional requirement for a balanced budget. Tight-fisted agency heads and the deity also get the credit.

“All of us can thank God that we live in Idaho,” said Chief Deputy State Controller Dan Goicoechea. “There is a balanced budget.”

Democrats repeatedly have noted that the break-even numbers were achieved largely on the back of public schools. The education budget spends about $128 million less on K-12 next year, slashing total spending on public education for the first time in Idaho history.

We did not hear the governor giving any credit to the thousands of school teachers who were forced to absorb pay cuts in order to balance the state budget. They are not sharing in the celebrating in Boise.

When Otter was asked if he would consider finding new revenues or support tax increases next year, he did not totally duck — just backpedal a bit. He will look to lawmakers and the State Tax Commission for direction, he says. Assuming he wins re-election this fall, his State of the State message next January should be illuminating.

Lake, as head of the Rev Tax Committee, is more forthright. He was quoted earlier this year: “We’ve done a pretty good job of starving the beast this year, lowering the budgets to where you’re providing essential services. But you can take the government down only so far. I guess there are those amongst us who would have no government, but that doesn’t work.”

It’s a fact that Idaho has 70 to 90 exemptions to its sales tax, some far more worthwhile than others.

... Legislative committees have shirked cutting any of the exemptions, and Lake says he won’t undertake the job again until he gets specific recommendations from the Legislature.

But 2011 may be the year. With the Rev Tax chairman on board, and even half-hearted support from the governor, it looks as if “revenue enhancement” is possible, even likely, to happen.

... forgetting history

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

In rejecting their state party’s dimwitted hopes of turning back the constitutional clock, Idaho’s Republican U.S. Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch also ironically paid homage to a predecessor’s bold stand on the same issue nearly 100 years ago.

Crapo and Risch announced they definitely would not honor the Idaho GOP platform to seek repeal of the 17th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Ratified in 1913 by the states, the amendment removed the election of U.S. senators from the hands of state legislators and conveyed elections to a popular vote.

At their recent convention, Idaho Republicans embraced a crop of daffy goals reminiscent of 18th century thinking, including returning the selection of U.S. senators to ... Legislature. While Crapo and Risch stoutly refuse to support nullification of the 17th Amendment, Republican Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter declined to say where he stands.

Short on Idaho history, Republicans didn’t realize the amendment was largely the handiwork of a premier Idaho politician, William Borah, who served six terms in the Senate (from 1907 until his death in 1940), was a GOP presidential dark horse in 1936 and whose name graces the state’s highest peak, Custer County’s 12,668-foot Borah Peak.

Borah

Borah ...championed the 17th Amendment after scandals involving legislative bribery and 45 deadlocks in 20 states that left some Senate seats vacant for several years.

Although Borah had a gift for vision and foresight, Idaho’s GOP party leaders seem stuck a century in the past.

... Otter vs. tech

Idaho Statesman, Boise

... When Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter touts high-tech, he couches it in a supporting role — as another set of tools to help Idaho’s resource-based industries compete globally. Frustrated, some high-tech leaders see a slight, and evidence of a governor stuck in Idaho’s rural past and out of touch with a changing economy.

The reality does not fit tidily into either-or thinking. Idaho will never be just a high-tech state — or just a place for farming, ranching, logging and mining. Idaho is both, and its political and business leaders must advocate accordingly.

After Otter spent years peddling Idaho’s wares, both as a J.R. Simplot Co. executive and as an elected official, you would think the concept of economic diversification would be ingrained in his mindset. Yet, on a China trade mission, Otter offered this summation of Idaho economics. “You’ve got to dig it out of the ground, you’ve got to grow it, or you’ve got to cut it out of the forest.”

... Otter should not be oblivious to high-tech — after all, his chief of staff, Jason Kreizenbeck, lobbied for Micron Technology before joining the governor’s office. But Otter does not seem to get the mobile and idea-based new generation of high-tech startups.

By the same token, too many of these smart and driven entrepreneurs do not seem to get politics, ratcheting up their rift with the governor. In starting a business, brashness and impatience can be good character traits. But it doesn’t always translate well in politics ...

It will take a catalyst, or a good mediator, to build bridges between the high-tech sector and state government. The nascent Idaho Technology Council could be a candidate. For now, the council is consciously avoiding marching to the Statehouse with a list of public policy recommendations, focusing instead on encouraging independent-minded tech executives to join an organization ...

In time, the council wants to position itself as a voice for the state’s tech industry. In order to do that, the council would do well to get the tech sector and state government to communicate better with each other ...

Destroying jobs in the name of ‘shared sacrifice’

Everything you need to know about the nightmare of government-controlled businesses can be found in a damning new inspector general’s report on Dealgate. The independent review of how and why the Obama administration forced Chrysler and General Motors to oversee mass closures of car dealerships across the country reveals grisly incompetence, fatal bureaucratic hubris and Big Labor cronyism. No wonder you won’t hear much about the report’s in-depth details in the so-called mainstream media.

Michelle Malkin

auto industry models to increase profits — a recommendation hotly disputed by auto experts who questioned whether foreign practices could be applied to domestic American dealership networks.

Team Obama’s government auto mechanics also ignored the economic impact of rushing those closures. According to Barofsky, they discounted counter-testimony from industry officials that “closing dealerships in an environment already disrupted by the recession could result in an even greater crisis in sales.”

The inspector general also noted that “it is clear that tens of thousands of dealership jobs were immediately put in jeopardy as a result of the terminations by GM and Chrysler.” After extensive investigation, the watchdog concluded that “the acceleration of dealership closings was not done with any explicit cost savings to the manufacturers in mind.” Only after Capitol Hill critics started questioning the Dealgate decisions did Obama’s auto “experts” come up with market studies and estimated job loss data to assess the impact of their reckless, arbitrary orders.

In sum, the inspector general found: “(A)t a time when the country was experiencing the worst economic downturn in generations and the government was asking

Under the guise of “saving” the American auto industry through a bipartisan, taxpayer-funded bailout now topping $80 billion, President Obama’s know-nothing bureaucrats pushed the car companies to eliminate thousands of jobs its taxpayers to support a $787 billion stimulus package designed primarily to preserve jobs, Treasury made a series of decisions that may have substantially contributed to the accelerated shuttering of thousands of small businesses and thereby potentially adding tens of thousands of workers to the already lengthy unemployment rolls — all based on a theory and without sufficient consideration of the decisions’ broader economic impact.”

This is no surprise, of course, considering the amount of actual business expertise among Obama’s auto czars and key staff. That is: zero. Obama’s first auto czar, Steve Rattner, ran a private equity firm in New York before resigning his position amid a financial ethics cloud.

Rattner’s chief auto expert adviser, Brian Deese, is a 30-something former Hillary Clinton/Barack Obama campaign aide and law school grad with no business experience, who openly boasted that he “never set foot in an automotive assembly plant.”

In search of the rationale for Team Obama’s bizarre, job-killing exercise of power over thousands of small car dealerships, the TARP inspector general may have stumbled onto the truth from Bloom. Barofsky writes that “no one from Treasury, the manufacturers or from anywhere else indicated that implementing a smaller or more gradual dealership termination plan would have resulted in the cataclysmic scenario spelled out in Treasury’s response; indeed, when asked explicitly whether the Auto Team could have left the dealerships out of the restructuring, Mr. Bloom, the current head of the Auto Team, confirmed that the Auto Team ‘could have left any one component (of the restructuring plan) alone,’ but that doing so would have been inconsistent with the President’s mandate for ‘shared sacrifice.’”

“Social justice” chickens coming home to roost.

Study: Whitebark pine toll reaches 1 million acres in Yellowstone area

By Mead Gruver
Associated Press writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Whitebark pine trees in the Yellowstone area are dying at a rate approaching the acreage of all trees that burned in the region's vast 1988 wildfires, a researcher says.

The Natural Resources Defense Council released a report Wednesday on the dead and dying high-elevation forests in Wyoming, Idaho and Montana.

Aerial photographs document 1 million acres of whitebark forest dead or nearly so from mountain pine beetles and an invasive fungus, report author Wally Macfarlane said. Another 1 million acres of whitebark are at risk, he said, with scattered dead trees an ominous sign that beetles might soon take a heavy toll in those forests as well.

"The progression is one-way. As soon as the beetles get into these forests, what we've found is it pushes forward to an outbreak level," Macfarlane said.

Researchers last year flew over an area the size of South Carolina and took photos of the region's 2.5 million acres — 3,900 square miles — of whitebark.

"That system was really pretty much in equilibrium for thousands of years. It has undergone absolute, dramatic change in just six years," said Jesse Logan, a co-author of the report and former head of bark beetle research for the U.S. Forest Service.

Environmentalist David Gonzales of Jackson, Wyo., looks up at a dead whitebark pine on June 23 in the mountains east of Jackson Hole, Wyo. Mountain pine beetles killed the roughly 800-year-old tree.

"Ecologically that's an astounding event,"

The death of the forests has wide-ranging implications.

Whitebark pine nuts are an important, high-calorie food for grizzly bears, a federally protected threatened species. Whitebark forests also keep high-elevation snowfall from blowing or melting away before spring runoff provides critical water for cities and agriculture.

The researchers mapped the photographs and classified the proportion of dead and dying trees on a 1-6 scale. Forty-six percent of the whitebark forest surveyed scored 3 or higher, with beetle kill ranging from widespread to practically every tree.

The NRDC has petitioned the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to protect the whitebark pine as a threatened or endangered species. The service announced Monday it will study threats to the trees further and announce in a year whether such protection is needed.

"It's going to be pretty hard to refute the trajectory of the species. With the information that's gathered, I think they're going to have a hard time not listing the whitebark pine," said Macfarlane, with GEO/Graphics, Inc., in Logan, Utah, who coordinated the study funded by the U.S. Forest Service and NRDC.

Whitebark pines can live up to 1,000 years and thrive in higher, harsher conditions than most other trees in the Rocky Mountains. Yet their evolved defenses against beetles are limited compared to those of lower-elevation tree species, said Louisa Willcox with the NRDC.

"Whitebark pine is basically a sitting duck to the mountain pine beetle," she said.

Body found in field is missing Calif. girl

By Gillian Flaccus
Associated Press writer

MORENO VALLEY, Calif. — A body found in a rural field was identified Wednesday as that of a 17-year-old Southern California girl who was likely kidnapped while walking to a friend's home after a summer class.

An autopsy confirmed the identity of Norma Lopez, but investigators would not release the cause of death.

"I don't want to believe it's her," family friend Melanie Villarreal, 18, told The Associated Press. "We know she's in a better place."

Police and the FBI have not identified a suspect and have asked the public for help in the investigation.

"We do have a few leads that we're still following up ... but I wouldn't say that we're any closer," Riverside County sheriff's Sgt. Joseph Borja said.

About 2,000 people gathered around an athletic field at Lopez's school Wednesday evening for a vigil where 16-year-old friend Moises Michel remembered how Lopez loved dance, especially merengue and salsa.

"Whenever we were bored we'd just dance with each other, we'd get up and dance," he said. "I'm used to seeing her every day smiling. I'm just in shock because I can't believe it."

The discovery of the body was reported Tuesday just hours after Lopez's anguished family held a press conference to plead for her return, and authorities said they had no clues and announced a $35,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whoever abducted her.

Lopez vanished July 15 after leaving a summer school class at Valley View High School, where she would have been a senior this year. Authorities said she was heading to meet a friend.

When she didn't show up, her younger sister and a friend went to look for her, found some of her personal items in a field 1 1/2 blocks from the school, and called authorities, Borja said.

The field, a well-known neighborhood shortcut, is off a street that dead-ends at the base of boulder-studded hills cut with trails. Homes line one side, but in the blazing Wednesday heat the expanse of dirt and dry stubble was deserted.

Man charged with sex assault on young girl in Hailey family's home

HAILEY (AP) — A 25-year-old man who was renting a room from a Hailey couple has been charged with sexually assaulting their seven-year-old daughter.

Robert Cesar Cochachi-Macha was arraigned in Blaine County Magistrate Court earlier this week and is being held on a $100,000 bond.

Hailey Police Chief Jeff Gunter told the Idaho Mountain Express that Cochachi-Macha was arrested last Friday after the mother of the 7-year-old girl filed a complaint. Police say he was renting a bedroom at the family's home, where the assault occurred.

If convicted, he faces up to life in prison.

McCain Foods unveils facility upgrades

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

McCain Foods USA unveiled millions of dollars in upgrades to its Burley potato processing plant to Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and several other local and state officials.

The company has spent more than $8 million dollars annually on improvements to the plant over several years — even spending as much as $15 million during one of those years.

McCain officials would not say exactly how much they have spent on capital improvements since they purchased the Burley plant from Ore-Ida Foods Inc. in 1997. However, company officials said they have been working mostly with contractors from southern Idaho to complete the work.

Jeff McCray, plant manager, said the sprawling 476,000 square-foot processing plant, which is actually made up of two properties, was built in 1960 and has required “significant upgrades to infrastructure.”

“This is not your grandfather’s plant anymore; it requires a lot of technology.”

“This is not your grandfather’s plant anymore; it requires a lot of technology,” he said.

Inside the plant, more than 620 workers process raw potatoes of varying sizes into tater-tots, formed potato products and frozen fries that are sold to some of America’s largest quick-serve and sit-down restaurants. Some of the company’s clients include Red Robin, Sonic, Jack in the Box and Wendy’s.

The process involves a dizzying array of machines that wash, cut, sort, blanch, freeze and package the product 24 hours a day, seven days per week.

Every step of the process is customized for each client from the slicing — the plant has an entire room that custom fits slicing blades to create fries that are curly, straight, thin or thick as a bone — to the blanching.

The most recent upgrades were made to several packaging units, which reduced the number of machines needed to package the product and increased consistency.

McCray said the plant anticipates that its next significant upgrade will be to its palletization process — a project estimated to be valued at nearly $10 million.

McCain Foods has typically kept its operations off-limits to the general public, but company officials said they hope to begin a new chapter.

“McCain has been a quiet group, but we plan to change that,” McCray said. “It’s a bit of an experiment.”

Bernanke: Fed to hold off on steps to aid recovery

STEPHEN CROWLEY/The New York Times

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke testifies before the Senate Banking Committee in Washington on Wednesday. The unemployment rate in the United States is likely to remain well above 7 percent through the end of 2012 and the duration of President Obama’s current term, Bernanke told the committee.

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke told Congress on Wednesday that even though the economic recovery has weakened, the Fed plans no new steps for now to try to bolster it.

Bernanke said the Fed would consider action if matters worsened.

His comments to the Senate Banking Committee sent stocks tumbling. The Dow Jones industrial average had been up 20 points before he spoke. It fell as much as 160 points during his testimony, but recovered some losses to close down 109 points. Investors shifted money into the safety of Treasury bonds; the yield on 10-year Treasury notes fell to 2.86 percent.

“The markets are more paranoid than the Fed is about the economy’s health,” said David Resler, chief U.S. economist at Nomura Securities. Investors wanted to hear a strategy “that will make a second dip a very remote possibility.”

Bernanke downplayed the odds that the economy will slide back into a “double-dip” recession. Still, he acknowledged the recovery is fragile.

“If the recovery seems to be faltering, we have to at least review our options,” Bernanke told lawmakers.

Senate approves jobless payments to millions

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — State unemployment agencies are gearing up to resume sending unemployment payments to millions of people as Congress moves to ship President Obama a measure to restore lapsed benefits.

After months of increasingly bitter stalemate, the Senate passed the measure Wednesday by a 59-39 vote. Obama is poised to sign the measure into law after a final House vote today.

It’s a welcome relief to 2½ million people who been out of work for six months or more have seen their benefits lapse.

Under best-case scenarios, unemployed people who have been denied jobless benefits because of a partisan Senate standoff over renewing them can expect retroactive payments as early as next week in some states. In other states, it will take longer.

State unemployment and labor agencies have been preparing for weeks for Congress to restore jobless payments averaging $309 a week for almost 5 million people whose 26 weeks of state benefits have run out. Those people are enrolled in a federally financed program providing up to 73 additional weeks of unemployment benefits.

About half of those eligible have had their benefits cut off since funding expired

Eric Bilderback, left, holds his resume as he talks with Mike Watson, a business employment specialist at WorkSource Oregon, Tuesday in Portland, Ore. The U.S. Senate voted on Tuesday 60-40 to end a Republican-led filibuster of legislation that would extend unemployment benefits for an estimated 2.5 million Americans.

June 2. They are eligible for lump sum retroactive payments that are typically delivered directly to their bank accounts or credited to state-issued debit cards.

In states like Pennsylvania and New York, the back payments should go out next week, officials said. In others, like Nevada, it may take a few weeks for all of those eligible to receive benefits, said Mae Worthey, a spokesman for the Department of Employment, Training and Rehabilitation.

In North Carolina, Employment and Income

Department spokesman Andrew James says to expect a wait of two to six weeks.

The Senate continued debating the measure a full day after a GOP filibuster was defeated by a 60-40 vote. Senate rules required 30 hours of debate, but missing no opportunity to seize a political edge, Democrats attacked Republicans for not waiving them and requiring an additional day of debate.

“Republicans are declaring an all-out war on unemployed Americans,” said Jim Manley, spokesman for Majority Leader Harry Reid,

D-Nev. “Even though Democrats have the votes to give unemployed workers the safety net they deserve, Republicans are callously delaying the vote for an entire day.”

In fact, the measure could have been passed months ago had Democrats not insisted on coupling it with a host of other, more controversial legislation, such as tax increases on hedge fund managers and on some small businesses that were used to pay to renew a popular package of tax breaks for individuals and businesses.

“Even though Democrats have the votes to give unemployed workers the safety net they deserve, Republicans are callously delaying the vote for an entire day.”

— Jim Manley, spokesman for Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev.

City of Gooding joins Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization

Times-News

The city of Gooding announced Wednesday that they are joining the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization, or SIEDO, to to attract prospective businesses and tap into SIEDO’s regional marketing effort.

By joining the organization, Gooding will utilize SIEDO’s expertise in assisting them with promoting the city, as well as the region, to increase its business base.

“We’re very excited to add the city of Gooding to our organization,” said Jan Rogers, executive director of SIEDO. “Gooding’s city leaders are dedicated to improving their economic development efforts and promoting their growing community. We will serve as another asset in helping them obtain their goals.”

The city of Gooding will be incorporated into all of SIEDO’s marketing materials web site, and regional economic development efforts.

“Gooding sees economic development as a regional, not a specific town issue,” said Duke Morton, mayor of Gooding. “If you want to play in economic development, you have to get involved. We see SIEDO as an involved agency and we want to be a part of that. It will be a good thing for Gooding.”

The city of Gooding joins Twin Falls city and county, Jerome city and county, Filer, Kimberly and Mini-Cassia, as members of SIEDO.

Eastern Idaho and Utah promoters sued over investment scheme

Times-News

The Idaho Department of Finance filed a civil lawsuit Wednesday in Bonneville County District Court against Brock Bruegeman, Brian Birch, Brandon Johnson and Sonny Jensen.

Bruegeman, Birch and Johnson operated in or near Idaho Falls, Idaho, while Jensen traveled into Idaho from his business location in Utah. The complaint alleges that these defendants, acting through one or more LLCs, violated the registration and anti-fraud provisions of the Idaho Uniform Securities Act.

The department’s complaint alleges that the defendants offered and sold more than $2.1 million in unregistered promissory notes to Idaho investors and that misrepresentations and omissions of material information occurred in connection with the sale of these notes. More specifically, the defendants are alleged to have:

- Misrepresented that the

White House, Vilsack apologize to fired USDA official

By Karen Tumulty and Ed O'Keefe
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Ousted Agriculture Department official Shirley Sherrod, who was caricatured as a racist in a selectively edited Internet video, on Wednesday achieved something almost unheard of in overheated Washington: swift and utter vindication.

Two days after Sherrod was fired from her job overseeing rural development in Georgia, both the White House and Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack apologized to her. Vilsack also offered her another unspecified position with the department. Sherrod said she would consider it.

"This is a good woman," Vilsack said. "She's been put through hell. I could have done and should have done a better job. I'll learn from that experience. I want this agency and department to learn from this experience, and I want us to be stronger for it."

He was far from alone in vowing to learn from the episode that began when Andrew Breitbart, a conservative activist and blogger,

AP photo

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack tells reporters that he acted in haste in firing Shirley Sherrod, a black U.S. Agriculture Department official, after it appeared she had made racist remarks in a video posted on a conservative website, during a news conference Wednesday at the Department of Agriculture in Washington.

posted the video from a March 27 speech Sherrod gave at an NAACP event. By the time it played out two days later, it had vividly revealed how Washington's political culture is driven by impulse and self-interest — often instead of judgment.

"Members of this administration, members of the media, members of different political factions on both sides of this have all made determinations and judgments without a full set of facts," White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said at his daily briefing, which CNN broadcast on a split screen with a live shot of Sherrod watching from its studio.

In the snippet of video on Breitbart's website, Sherrod, who is black, admitted to having been reluctant to help a white farmer who sought her aid 24 years before, when she was working for a nonprofit agency established to help black farmers.

What the clip did not show was the larger point Sherrod had made, one that was the opposite of the perception it created. From that episode, she told the NAACP audience, she had recognized her own prejudice, moved beyond it to an understanding that "there is no difference between us," and ultimately had helped the white farmer save his land.

In the reaction that followed the release of the edited video, Sherrod not only was fired from her USDA post but was denounced by the Obama administration, the media and even the civil rights organization whose local chapter had invited her to speak.

Sherrod mounted her own defense in a series of appearances on CNN, and the farmer, Roger Spooner, and his family backed her up. But not until the NAACP released a video of the full speech Tuesday night did it become clear how misleading the excerpt was.

In an interview Wednesday, Breitbart said he first learned of Sherrod's speech in April, when a source he declined to name sent him a DVD copy of it. But the DVD did not work. He said he forgot about the speech until last week, when the NAACP denounced what it called "racist elements" of the "tea party" movement.

Angry at the NAACP's move, Breitbart said he contacted the source again asking for copies of the speech and obtained two edited clips over the weekend.

After Breitbart first referred to the existence of the video clip during a radio interview last Thursday, Sherrod tried to contact Vilsack and Deputy Secretary Kathleen Merrigan through e-mail accounts the department had created for employee feedback. But they are checked infrequently, a spokesman said.

As a result, USDA aides did not learn of the video clips until Monday, after Breitbart had posted them.

Obama officials rejected accusations that they overreacted out of fear of inciting their conservative critics.

Presidential aides insisted that no one at the White House pressed Vilsack to dismiss Sherrod, despite her claims that they had. But when the facts became clear, and the public view of Sherrod flipped from vilification to sympathy, the White House let it be known that someone there — it wouldn't say who or when — pressed the agriculture secretary to reconsider.

Vilsack was especially sensitive to the issue. Since taking over, he has made it a priority to rectify the injustices of a department with a long history of racial discrimination.

Justice Dept: No charges in attorney dismissals

By Richard A. Serrano
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Department of Justice announced Wednesday that "no criminal charges are warranted" against officials in the Bush administration for the firing of nine U.S. attorneys four years ago that led to allegations of improper political pressure and ultimately cost Alberto Gonzales his job as U.S. attorney general.

The decision, revealed in a letter to Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., who chairs the House Judiciary Committee, brings to a close any consideration of criminal misconduct in what became one of the most searing political controversies in the Bush administration.

Ronald Welch, an assistant attorney general, said in his letter to Conyers that Nora R. Dannehy, an assistant prosecutor from Connecticut who led the investigation, was unable to unearth enough evidence to bring criminal charges in the matter, particularly as it involved the ouster of U.S. Attorney David Iglesias in New Mexico and whether "misleading statements" from Gonzales and other top justice officials were tantamount to perjury.

Welch said the investigation did find that Gonzales made a "series of statements" that were "inaccurate and misleading" about the firings after they became a political scandal in Washington. He said Kyle Sampson, then a top Justice Department official, also made "various misleading statements."

Sherrod case shows power of conservative media

By David Bauder
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A conservative blog posts 2 minutes, 38 seconds of video clips of a black federal agriculture official saying she didn't do everything she could to help a white farmer. The blogger labels it racism. Calls grow for the Obama administration to remove her. No one at the Agriculture Department or the White House checks further. The official is forced to resign.

Monday ends, but not the story.

A complete, 43-minute version of the video surfaces the next day, Tuesday, and casts a much different light on Shirley Sherrod's comments: They were part of an NAACP speech about how she overcame her racial prejudice to help the farmer, not about prejudice that stopped her from helping him.

Now, the administration is criticized for wronging her by rushing to judgment.

By Wednesday afternoon, Sherrod is sitting at a studio in CNN's Atlanta headquarters, watching on live television as White House press secretary Robert Gibbs apologizes to her.

She accepts and says: "Being afraid of the machine that the right has put out there — that's what's driving this."

A split screen shows her face and Gibbs' in a surreal moment, concluding a whirlwind 48 hours in which conservative media had the Obama administration on the defensive.

Fox News Channel has been riding high in the ratings since Barack Obama became the nation's first black president a year and a half ago. Commentators Glenn Beck and Bill O'Reilly offer a favorite destination for many administration opponents.

The Sherrod story erupted after BigGovernment.com, a "Being afraid of the machine that the right has put out there — that's what's driving this."

— Shirley Sherrod

website run by conservative activist Andrew Breitbart, posted portions of her speech at an NAACP banquet in March.

Breitbart's story began: "Context is everything." He said he offered "video evidence of racism coming from a federal appointee," and followed with snippets of the speech.

On the video, Sherrod, hired last August as director of rural development for the U.S. Agriculture Department in Georgia, talked about her unwillingness to offer much help to a white farmer when she worked at a non-profit organization 24 years ago.

The story moved from the Internet to Fox News Channel on Monday night.

In seeking her resignation, Sherrod said, a USDA deputy undersecretary told her the story was going to appear on Beck's program late Monday afternoon. Instead, Beck didn't discuss it that day; it first appeared a few hours later on the top-rated prime-time show "The O'Reilly Factor."

Host Bill O'Reilly showed the brief portion of Sherrod's March speech where she explained that she didn't give the white farmer "the full force of what I could do."

"Wow!" O'Reilly said after the clip aired. "That is simply unacceptable, and Ms. Sherrod must resign. The federal government cannot have skin color deciding any assistance."

As he talked, Fox flashed the news on the bottom of its screen that Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack had accepted Sherrod's resignation.

Fox's Sean Hannity aired the same short snippet of Sherrod's speech shortly afterward.

"This was at an NAACP dinner, and this was racist," Hannity said.

CNN's Rick Sanchez said producers there were intrigued by BigGovernment.com's posting and immediately started reporting on it. But with all the questions involved — Was this a fair characterization of Sherrod's full speech? Can she be reached to give her side of the story? — they wouldn't be ready to discuss it on his afternoon show until Tuesday, he said.

By then, the story rushed by.

By Tuesday morning, "Fox & Friends" headlined the story "Racism Caught on Tape."

Commentator Laura Ingraham talked about "people who have burrowed their way into the Obama administration with radical outlooks, a radical agenda and, in this case, a racist sentiment. How many more like Ms. Sherrod exist in the Obama administration who weren't so stupid as she was to actually explicitly state her views on the issue of race?"

Two groups sue Nebraska town over tough new immigration law

By Margery A. Beck and Timberly Ross
Associated Press writer

FREMONT, Neb. — The two lawsuits filed Wednesday against a small Nebraska city for its ban on renting and hiring illegal immigrants worried some in the community that it would only worsen tensions over the new ordinance.

The American Civil Liberties Union and the Mexican American Legal Defense & Educational Fund, also known as MALDEF, filed lawsuits against Fremont, saying the voter-approved ordinance amounted to discrimination.

"I'm so disappointed that a law like this could have passed here. I always thought in this day and age laws are meant to prevent discrimination, not encourage it," said Mario Martinez, a Mexican American who lives in Fremont with his wife and young child.

The ordinance has divided much of the town. Supporters argue the measure was necessary to make up for what they see as lax federal law enforcement. Opponents say it could fuel discrimination. Both lawsuits filed Wednesday may not quell the debate, but the civil-rights groups hope they will end the ban.

"This law encourages discrimination and racial profiling against Latinos and others who appear to be foreign-born, including U.S. citizens," said Amy Miller, legal director of ACLU Nebraska. "We're going to do all we can to make sure this extreme law, which would lead to individuals losing housing and jobs because of their appearance and language ability, never goes into effect."

Fremont City Attorney Dean Skokan said early Wednesday he couldn't comment on the lawsuits because he hadn't seen them. He did not return later telephone calls. Officials, though, anticipated challenges to the ban.

"We expect a minimum of about three lawsuits," Skokan said. He did not elaborate.

The ordinance is to go into effect July 29. It put Fremont on the list with Arizona and other cities in the national debate over immigration regulations. Arizona's sweeping law also takes effect July 29 and requires police who stop people suspected of violating a law to check the immigration status of anyone they think is in the country illegally.

Fremont's ban worries Martinez.

At one time the city was a nice place, he said, but he's noticed more hostility toward Latinos in the past dozen years. And recently, it's gotten worse.

"Fremont feels like a completely different town now," Martinez said. "I'm as much a part of this community as anyone, but now I get hostile looks from people like they want me to get out, and my wife has been told to go back to Mexico because of her accent."

The ban requires employers in the city to use the federal E-Verify database to ensure employees are allowed to work. It also requires potential renters to apply for a license to rent.

Gathering storm halts work on Gulf oil well

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A storm brewing in the Caribbean brought the deep-sea effort to plug the ruptured oil well to a near standstill Wednesday just as BP was getting tantalizingly close to going in for the kill.

Work on the relief well — now just days from completion — was suspended, and the cap that has been keeping the oil bottled up since last week may have to be reopened, allowing crude to gush into the sea again for days, said retired Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen, the government's point man on the crisis.

"This is necessarily going to be a judgment call," said Allen, who was waiting to see how the storm developed before deciding whether to order any of the ships and crews stationed some 50 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico to head for safety.

The cluster of thunderstorms passed over Haiti and the Dominican Republic on Wednesday, and forecasters said the system would probably move into the Gulf over the weekend. They gave it a 50 percent chance of becoming a tropical depression or a tropical storm by Friday.

Crews had planned to spend Wednesday and Thursday reinforcing with cement the last few feet of the relief tunnel that will be used to pump mud into the gusher and kill it once and for all. But BP put the task on hold and instead placed a temporary plug called a storm packer deep inside the tunnel, in case it has to be abandoned until the storm passes.

"What we didn't want to do is be in the middle of an operation and potentially put the relief well at some risk," BP vice president Kent Wells said.

Zachary Spencer, 11, of Twin Falls jumps off a cliff Tuesday at Dierkes Lake in Twin Falls. Though many people jump off the cliffs, city parks officials say they discourage the activity because there have been injuries over the years and some fatalities.

TAKING THE PLUNGE

Cliff diving popular but dangerous

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Zachary Spencer stood on the rocky cliff, peering at the water several feet below.

“C’mon Zachary,” his grandparents called to him. “You’ve got a newspaperman watching you.”

He hesitated, and then, just before the camera focused elsewhere, he jumped.

A couple of minutes later Zachary, 11, crawled out of Dierkes Lake to say he wasn’t scared to take the plunge.

His 14-year-old brother, Matt Spencer, said he was nervous when he first dived off the cliff Tuesday, but he wasn’t nervous after doing it a few times.

Jumping off cliffs into the small Twin Falls lake is a popular pastime for many who seek respite from summer’s dry heat. Twin Falls parks officials, however, say they don’t encourage the activity, though they’ve done little to prevent it.

“There’s a 15-foot ledge that people have been jumping off of for years and years and years,” said Dennis Bowyer, city parks and recreation director. Some visitors to Dierkes trek farther east to Hidden Lakes to jump off the cliffs, he said.

Though Matt Spencer said he checked for Visitors to the Grand Teton mountains in western Wyoming look at a kiosk sign at one of the several scenic stops in Teton County, Wyo.

A DRIVE THROUGH THE TETONS

By Andrew Weeks ♦ Times-News writer

TETON COUNTY, Wyo. — If you’ve never been to the Grand Tetons, you’ve missed something. I’d missed it until last summer when I traveled through the area for the first time after returning from a trip to the Midwest. My family and I visited the Tetons again this year, on our way to family gatherings in Wyoming and Colorado.

Flowers bloom just outside Jackson, Wyo., in early July.

The iconic Teton mountains in western Wyoming.

We traveled through eastern Idaho, through Swan Valley, where the population is only 219, and into Driggs, population 840, then into Wyoming and its forest of trees and wildflowers.

Our first stop was at a little picnic spot off the highway, not far from Jackson, Wyo. What caught our attention was the field of yellow flowers that, from the highway, seemed to envelop the picnic tables.

A small pond sat between the highway and tables, and a couple groups of people had stopped to cast their fishing lines into the water.

I took a few pictures, then we got on the highway again, on our way to Jackson.

Jackson Hole, located in Wyoming’s Teton County, is an iconic little community that, when you’re waiting in line at the traffic light, doesn’t seem so small after all. It’s iconic because of its location, the distinctive-looking buildings, and the hundreds of antler racks displayed at the town center and here and there about the area.

While at a stop light, I noticed more wildflowers, this time a handful growing just off the roadway near a traffic pole — something you’re not likely to see in larger cities.

Jackson also has a museum, which offers plenty of information about the area’s wildlife, geography and other interesting tidbits.

Before long we were in Teton territory. The iconic mountains are easy to spot, set far back from the highway. But they don’t look very far away because of their stature.

The 40-mile long mountain range sits 7 to 9 miles wide, with the highest peak — Grand Teton — at 13,770 feet tall.

What might be little known to passers-by is that there are seven morainal lakes at the base of the Teton Range and more than 100 alpine and backcountry lakes.

Undercover taxidermist busts illegal Mo. hunters

By David A. Lieb
Associated Press writer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — The sign on the storefront said “Craig’s Taxidermy,” and the hunters who brought in their prized deer, turkey and fish got them back stuffed and mounted.

But they also got secretly recorded. And ultimately, many of them were busted for allegedly breaking Missouri wildlife laws.

The Department of Conservation announced Monday that it had discovered 425 wildlife violations committed by 68 people who brought animals into Craig’s Taxidermy in the rural southern Missouri town of Birch Tree.

It turns out “Craig” actually was an undercover agent.

The state Conservation Department set up the undercover taxidermy shop in 2008 after receiving numerous complaints about illegal hunting in the area, said Gary Cravens, the department’s regional supervisor for law enforcement operations. The state agency closed Craig’s Taxidermy early this year — but only after its hidden video and audio recorders captured plenty of evidence.

As customers came into the shop, “we were listening to them,” Cravens said. “They were bragging about how they shot out of so-and-so’s yard or off the road, or claiming it as archery even though it had a bullet hole.”

As it turned out, 62 percent of the wildlife brought in for mounting at the undercover taxidermy shop had been killed illegally in some manner, Cravens said.

The cases are being turned over to prosecutors in seven counties — Crawford, Dent, Miller, Howell, Iron, Oregon and Shannon — where the hunting occurred, the department said. Although the taxidermy shop was in southern Missouri, some hunters brought animals from other parts of the state.

The alleged violations involved deer, turkey, various animals hunted for their fur, fish and migratory birds. Conservation agents seized 240 items, including 90 mounted deer heads or antler racks, about 20 various smaller animals, 70 frog legs, one rattlesnake and 16 firearms.

“These violators are in effect stealing wildlife that belongs to all of us here in Missouri who obey the laws,” Cravens said, “and it’s our job to make sure that wildlife resources are protected.”

In this undated picture, a team of hikers descends the southern face of 14,150-foot Mount Sneffels overlooking Kismet Peak in the San Juan Mountain Range near Ouray, Colo. The San Juan Mountains in southwest Colorado offer a spectacular array of 14,000-foot peaks, including 14,150-foot Mount Sneffels and 14,017-foot Wilson Peak (also featured on the Coors Beer label). July is prime hiking season for mountaineers seeking the summits of Colorado’s tallest peaks.

F&G seeks info on pelican shooting

Times-News

Idaho Fish and Game is looking for information about someone who shot a pelican on the afternoon of July 10.

About 10 young adults in their early 20s in three vehicles were seen at Cove Arm on the Snake River near C.J. Strike Reservoir. Witnesses reported that one of the individuals in the group shot a white pelican with a shotgun.

Pelicans are protected under state and federal law. When they were leaving by a rough narrow road, one vehicle was damaged and had to be towed. It was a mid-2000s tan or gold Chevrolet extended cab pickup truck.

Anyone with information should contact Conservation Officer Bob Sellers at 860-0582 or the Citizens Against Poaching hotline at 800-632-5999. Callers can remain anonymous and may be eligible for a reward.

McClatchy Newspapers

ZUMBRO FALLS, Minn. — Bill Plantan has no trouble remembering the exact moment his life took a big turn.

“It was Labor Day weekend, 1984,” he said moments after sliding his canoe into the Zumbro River in southeast Minnesota.

“My friend and I wanted to do something new. We had never done any river fishing out of a canoe, so we decided to try it.

“We ended up tipping the canoe, but we caught 44 fish that day — everything from smallmouth bass to walleyes to saugers.

“Even though I got wet, I knew that was the way to go. I was hooked.”

Plantan laughs when he recalls the old canoe he once fished out of.

“I was like Red Green (TV’s famous Canadian handyman),” he said with a smile. “I held it together with duct tape.”

Look at Plantan now: He custom-makes canoes designed with fishermen in mind through his River Ridge Custom Canoes company, he is out using them every chance he gets and he runs a successful guide service.

The deep-V boats with big motors that are so common in Minnesota? They’re not for Plantan.

He would much rather be on a scenic river in his canoe, fishing for smallmouth bass or muskies.

“I don’t really care about the canoeing part of it,” he said. “When I’m out, I hardly even use my paddle.

“I use my trolling motor, which this canoe was designed for. I look at my canoe as a way to get me to good fishing spots. It’s as simple as that.

“I can get back to spots that

MCT photo

Bill Plantan, a canoe designer and guide, was at home fishing for smallmouth bass in the beauty of the Zumbro River in southeastern Minnesota.

are inaccessible to most fishermen.”

Plantan’s fiberglass, custom-made canoes feature a square stern to accommodate a trolling motor, a wide hull for stability, comfortable seats, a designated area for rods and reels, and plenty of room for gear.

Smallmouth bass aren’t safe when Plantan is around. There aren’t many places they can hide.

Plantan proved that on a recent weekday. Not long after he launched his canoe, he was enjoying great fishing in a beautiful setting.

With a bluff in the background, Plantan cast a Fluke to a pool at the edge of the current. When he jerked the plastic bait and let it flutter down, he watched a big smallmouth dart up and take it.

The bronze fish strained to get into the current, where it could get an advantage. But Plantan maneuvered his canoe so that he could fight the smallmouth and eventually won the battle.

“That fish will go 16, 17 inches,” he said, admiring his catch before easing it back into the water. “But that’s not uncommon here.

“The Zumbro has always been a very good smallmouth stream. It’s a beautiful place to float, and you can catch some big fish here, too.”

Plantan paused and took a moment to admire his surroundings. Orange Baltimore orioles flitted from tree to tree along the bank, breaking the green backdrop. Bald eagles soared overhead. And deer fed in a clearing in the distance.

It was quiet. Not another canoe was in sight. Only the sounds of gurgling riffles broke the silence.

Plantan reveled in those surroundings. For him, there’s not a better way to fish.

With Plantan using a Fluke and me working a small jigand-pig, we enjoyed steady action. Casting to current breaks, eddies, ledges and underwater boulder fields, we caught and released close to 50 fish in a six-hour float. Included were six fish that were 15 inches or larger.

He recalls a landmark moment in his life to illustrate that point.

“I was out here on Oct. 4, 2006, and I caught a 23½-inch smallmouth, the biggest one I’ve ever taken,” he said. “I was using a spinnerbait when that one hit.”

Plantan uses everything from topwater lures to crankbaits to plastic baits to lure the smallmouths. The Zumbro is his favorite stream. But he adds, “Within a four-hour radius of here, there are more streams than you can count that offer good smallmouth fishing.

“In this part of Minnesota, there are more streams than lakes. But that’s fine with me.”

Early elk seasons open in August

Some elk hunts open Aug. 1, most of them antlerless “green-field” hunts.

The early “green-field” hunts in seven elk management zones — Palouse, Weiser, Lemhi, Beaverhead, Pioneer, Snake River and Owyhee-South Hills zones — are meant to help landowners reduce crop damage.

Early archery hunts also start Aug. 1 in the Snake River elk zone, and controlled green-field hunts also open in the Dworshak and Hells Canyon zones.

The green-field hunts are open only outside the National Forest Boundary and within one mile of cultivated fields. They help reduce depredation problems and control populations causing crop damage by harvesting or discouraging animals in specific areas or portions of units.

Some elk hunts will open in August.

August hunts, however, bring concerns about waste. Hunters have an ethical and legal obligation to salvage the edible portions of their kill. But meat spoilage is an important concern during typical hot August weather.

The key to preserving meat is starting the cooling process quickly. Game animals should be skinned immediately and quartered in most cases and transported quickly to cold storage facilities.

Early season hunters may consider using large ice chests to keep game meat cool and clean. Removing meat from the bones also helps speed cooling.

When cutting up the elk carcass, hunters must be sure to preserve the evidence of sex. Antlers or horns removed from the head must be left naturally attached to the skull plate where size, point or brow-tine restrictions apply, and they must accompany the carcass or parts thereof.

Hunters must have a valid 2010 Idaho hunting license and tag in their possession.

A prominent trio of planets begins a night of planet hunting

With six planets bright enough to be seen with the unaided eye (all except Neptune and the ex-planet Pluto), on any given night there’s a good chance that one or two will be above the horizon. This week, you can see all six before midnight.

Start hunting around 9:45 p.m. The easiest quarry is Venus, the so-called “evening star” shining through the twilight low in the west.

Next is Saturn. It’s pale yellow and not as bright, less than a splayed hand at arm’s length in the 10 o’clock position from Venus.

Pale, orange Mars lies between Saturn and Venus (closer to the former), a bit below an imaginary line between them.

Venus, Saturn and Mars are easy to pick out. Over the next week Saturn and Mars will draw close together

SKY CALENDAR THROUGH AUG. 11

One hour after sunset:

Mercury: WNW, extremely low

Venus: W, very low

Mars: W, very low (very close to Saturn 7/29 – 7/31)

Saturn: W, very low (very close to Mars 7/29 – 7/31)

Moon: Full moon 7/25, 7:36 p.m. Above Jupiter 7/30-7/31. Last quarter 8/2, 10:59 p.m. New moon 8/9, 9:08 p.m.

er day by day. By the first week of August all three planets will form a tight triangle with Mars to the left, Venus to the right, and Saturn above.

Mercury is tougher. It’s a full hand span from Venus in the four o’clock position. Bright twilight may make it difficult to see, so you can wait for the sky to darken a bit. But don’t wait too long—Mercury sets just after 10 p.m.

These four planets will all have set by the time midnight nears, just about when Jupiter rises, due east. You won’t have trouble seeing it — it’s brighter than any star. Uranus is the most challenging of all. You’ll need a dark location, and fully dark-adapted eyes. Luckily, it currently lies a bit more than a thumb’s width at arm’s length from Jupiter, in the two o’clock position.

If you can’t pick it out, use binoculars — it will be in the same field of view with Jupiter, looking pale blue-green.

Fly-fishing guide Ouitdee Carson specializes in smallmouth bass

By Sam Cook
Duluth News Tribune

ON THE ST. LOUIS RIVER, Minn. — Ouitdee Carson stands on the bow deck of his boat, scanning the St. Louis River. It's dusk on an evening in July.

Carson, a Duluth fly-fishing guide, is looking for smallmouth bass. He wants to see them dimpling the surface, rolling, somehow breaking the tension of the tannin-stained water.

When he sees one, he throws long loops of lime-green line until he has measured the distance of his cast. Then he'll drop a gaudy foam popper or a seductive strip leech where the bass can find it.

Most fly fishers prefer to seek trout — brookies and rainbows and German browns. Carson, 37, will fish trout, too. But it's smallmouth he loves, and he has figured out how to find them here in his back yard.

"You can find them a lot of places, and they're always willing to bite something," Carson said, chartreuse line whisking the air over his head. "And they fight hard, even the small ones. They're the bulldog of fish."

He fishes them from Island Lake to the Cloquet River to Lake Superior's Chequamegon Bay. But the St. Louis River in Duluth is his home water. Long known as a tremendous walleye fishery, the river is being discovered by more and more anglers for its smallmouth, Carson said.

"It's getting to be a destination area," he said.

One Monday afternoon, Carson put his boat in at Boy Scout Landing, motored slowly upriver and worked his way back down. He used his trolling motor to control his drift in the current, working exposed rocks, shoreline timber and unexposed gravel bars.

The river grows some hefty smallmouth. Carson and his clients have caught plenty of 20-inchers and some 21s. The largest Carson has caught was a 22-incher.

"The population has been gradually improving over the years," said John Lindgren, a fisheries specialist with the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources at French River. "When the river was polluted, before WLSSD, there were no smallmouth down here. They were in the river above Cloquet. They sort of migrated downstream after the water quality improved."

Lindgren said he has seen more anglers targeting smallmouth in the past five years.

The average size smallmouth in the river is not as big as, say, Chequamegon Bay of Lake Superior, but big ones can be found.

"You have a chance at a 20-plus-inch fish almost every night," Carson said. "But you've got to give them exactly what they want. The little guys aren't as picky."

Carson picked his first little guy of the evening off the front side of an exposed rock. It was a 12-incher that fought with the heart of a giant, as all smallies do.

Carson prefers to fish early mornings and late evenings, especially evenings. If the wind lies down, he can see the bass sipping on the surface.

Using an 8-weight fly rod with 15-pound-test tippet, he typically throws a Dahlberg diver or a foam popper to see if the bass will come to the surface for them. He prefers darker colors, often something that imitates a frog. If the bass won't come up, he'll switch to a rod with sinking-tip line and drop a dark strip leech down to them.

It has taken Carson time to learn the spots that bass frequent on the river. Most of it was discovered by trial and error.

"The only way to do it is to cover water," he said. "You've got to put in your time."

They key is gravel and rock, which will be no surprise to smallmouth anglers. To find it, Carson said, you must read it on your fish locator or get out and wade it.

This time of year, the bass often move into shallows to feed on shiner minnows or crayfish. Carson fishes water as shallow as a foot deep or even 6 inches deep.

He'll sometimes find smallmouth in the weeds, too, as long as there's a gravel bottom beneath the weeds.

At one point on Monday, he threw a popper beneath some overhanging ash trees. The popper disappeared in a sucking swirl of water. Carson waited at least a second or two, taking up slack. Only then did he set the hook. The fight was on. The bass took Carson to some timber and broke off the popper.

Re-rigged, Carson began laying out more casts. He would lift the popper from the water and send it behind him with a firm backcast. He carved graceful lime loops overhead, then shot the cast forward. The line unfurled in front of him, and at the last moment, the clear leader unfolded and dropped lightly on the water.

There are plenty of ways to catch smallmouth, but surely none is more elegant than this. Unlike walleye fishing on the river, the bass angler is apt to have the waterway mostly to himself. We see only three or four other boats all evening.

In the last hour, Carson took several more bass. The largest was a modest 15-incher, but it was broad of back and incensed about having a strip leech in its lip. He fought with attitude until Carson slipped a thumb and forefinger over its lower lip.

He took the bass, and another almost its twin, from a foot of water along a gravel flat. In all, Carson probably boated eight or 10 bass. Not a fast night, but there are nights like that.

"Some days it's going to be fabulous. Some days it's not," Carson said.

The origin of banded geese

Question: "I turned in a banded snow goose I harvested during the spring hunting season, but haven't heard anything. Do you know anything about the origin of some of these banded geese?"

Answer: Idaho had its first spring light goose, or snow goose, season in February and March. Several hunters were successful taking fowl in the Magic and Treasure valleys.

The department's Boise headquarters received some band return information from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Bird Banding Lab in Patuxent, Md.

Nine banded snow geese were turned in to the lab. Three were harvested in the Magic and Raft River valleys and six were taken in the Treasure Valley.

The three birds taken in the Magic and Raft River areas included one banded on the north slope of Alaska in 2008 as an adult male. The other two were banded on Banks Island in the Northwest Territories. One of those was banded as a 2-year-old female in 2000 and the other was a 2-year-old male banded in 2007.

Of the six birds taken in the Treasure Valley, one was banded on Banks Island in the Northwest Territories as an adult male in 2008. Two others were adult males banded on the north slope of Alaska the same day in 2008. Three others were banded on Wrangell Island, Russia. One was a young female banded in 2009, another was banded as an adult male in 1998, and the last one was banded as a young male in 1995.

Significant issues from this preliminary band return information includes the fact that only one of the birds harvested was a juvenile bird. Most biologists would expect a high percentage of young birds in the harvest. A second issue is the appearance of birds banded on Wrangell Island, Russia. In Utah, where they have hunted spring light geese for two years, they have never documented birds from Wrangell Island.

ASK THE OFFICER

Snow geese from the northwest tundra appear to be longer lived than I would have expected. Three of the nine geese harvested were more than 10 years old, and one of those was 15 years old. If you think about it, that means those birds made more than 10 trips back and forth between their northwest tundra nesting grounds and their wintering grounds along the southern Gulf coast and into Mexico.

Like salmon and steelhead returning to their spawning grounds in Idaho after several years in the Pacific, the migration of these geese show how interconnected wildlife and fisheries populations are on this globe and the wonder of Mother Nature.

A last note for hunters that drew big game controlled hunts, don't forget to purchase your tags before Aug. 1 or you'll lose the opportunity. All tags not purchased before then will be made available to the public during the second drawing.

Gary Hompland, regional conservation officer for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, may be reached at 324-4350 or gary.hompland@idfg.idaho.gov.

Upcoming outdoor events in south-central Idaho

Pomerelle to host Star Party

The Herrett Center for Arts and Science has joined the Magic Valley Astronomical Society to plan the fourth annual Star Party atop Pomerelle ski mountain south of Albion Saturday, Aug. 7.

Chris Anderson, coordinator for the Herrett's Centennial Observatory, says the event will begin at 3 p.m. at the Pomerelle ski lodge with solar viewing and water-bottle rocket-building and launching. These activities will go until 5:30 p.m. at which time visitors can have dinner at the lodge or picnics with food they bring.

Anderson will present a free Astronomy Talk, "Idaho Summer Skies," from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the lodge. At 8:30 p.m., the Pomerelle chair lift will begin special nighttime operation to take people to the mountain top where free telescope viewing will run until midnight.

The chairlift will stop operation just after midnight. The cost for chairlift rides will be $8 for everyone age 12 and older. Kids 7 to 11 can ride for $5 when accompanied by an adult. Chairlift rides are free to children 6 and under who can ride with an adult.

F&G Commission to consider waterfowl seasons

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission will consider waterfowl seasons and limits during a special meeting Aug. 16 in Idaho Falls.

Fish and Game officials plan regional meetings in August to gather public comment on waterfowl seasons. Hunter comments collected from across the state will be summarized and presented to the commission in August.

ANDREW WEEKS/Times-News

Bison graze in a field in Teton County, Wyo., in early July. The buffalo are one of six species of hoofed animals reported living in the scenic wonderland.

Tetons

According to National Parks statistics, the Teton area is home to three species of rabbits and hares; four species of reptiles; five species of amphibians; six species of bats; six species of hoofed animals; 16 species of fish; 17 species of carnivores; 22 species of rodents; and 300 species of birds and a number of spiders.

There's also seven species of coniferous trees and more than 900 species of flowering plants.

At one stop we saw a dozen or so bison grazing — some lying — in a field. We stopped at the fenceline to watch them for a few minutes, but couldn't get too close.

Both times I've been to the Tetons there were dark thunderheads that loomed overhead, mixed with sunshine and a few cotton-like clouds. The contrast adds an interesting, albeit beautiful, contrast to the scenic landscape.

There also was a nice breeze, which teased the grassy fields and wildflowers.

After stopping at several locations to read kiosk signs and take pictures, we kept on the highway, traveling farther into Wyoming, leaving the beautiful Teton mountains behind. But the way the road turned, I'd see them every now and then in our car's side mirrors, looking smaller, distant. I knew it was a perspective, an illusion, because these mountains are anything but small.

Plunge

rocks before he jumped, Bowyer said over the years there have been several cliff-diving injuries and some fatalities, especially at the taller cliffs at Hidden Lakes.

According to Times-News archives, a 19-year-old man suffered head injuries after diving off a cliff in the vicinity in June 1999. A 22-year-old man died, his body found several hours after his plunge, after jumping off a 60-foot cliff in July 2001. A 20-year-old man broke a leg from a dive in July 2003.

"When someone goes under the water, it's hard to find them," Bowyer said, as visibility under the water is only about 5 feet. The murky water also makes it difficult for would-be cliff divers to see rocks and other obstacles below the water's surface.

A lifeguard, usually a high school student, is on duty at the Dierkes swim area from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. from about June through the end of August, Bowyer said. But there's no life guard to watch people who dive at Hidden Lakes.

"We don't encourage people to jump off the cliffs," he said, noting it's an activity that's difficult to regulate.

Don't be discouraged, as there are plenty of other things to do at Dierkes, such as canoeing, fishing and swimming.

"We've modified the swimming area, made it safer for the user," Bowyer said. "And we've put in a dock for people to walk out on. We know a lot of people take advantage of those docks, though we'd rather not have people go fishing off them — we don't want the hooks left around the swimming area — but we know it's really impossible to stop that."

Great Adventure Race is Saturday

The College of Southern Idaho's Great Adventure Race will start at 8 a.m. Saturday.

The race is billed as a new and exciting urban adventure local race that anyone can participate in. Teams will solve 12 clues and complete fun challenges while discovering the city of Twin Falls in a different way.

Each team will visit six parks around town: Shoshone Falls, Dierkes Lake, Rock Creek Park, Centennial Park, the CSI Challenge Course and the CSI Fitness Trail. Each team member will receive a "Great Adventure Race" T-shirt. Proceeds will go to revitalize the CSI Fitness Trail.

The objective of the race is to properly complete all the clues first. The team that collects all the markers and makes it back to the finish line wins the grand prize. The cost is $75 per team, which consist of four members each in men's, women's and co-ed divisions.

Competitors need a cell phone that sends and receives pictures and text messages, for direction to and from local businesses and parks.

For information or to register: Scott Rogers, 732-6470, CSI Student Recreation Center or www.recreation.csi.edu.

CSI student wins silver in national baking contest

College of Southern Idaho Baking and Pastry Arts student Lisha Whitehead won the silver medal in the post-secondary commercial baking competition at the national Skills USA event in Kansas City. Whitehead, far left, competed against 22 other contestants from around the nation. She was awarded five specially embroidered jackets from 'New Chef', a $200 Visa gift card and an all-expense-paid trip to the International Baking Exposition in Las Vegas in September.

T.F. Senior Center shares transportation program guidelines

The Twin Falls Senior Center has announced its program guidelines for the Trans IV bus service.

- Cost is $20 per month, payable the first of each month in advance. Payment can be made to the Trans IV driver, or the client can be billed each month.

- The monthly payment only covers rides to and from the Twin Falls Senior Center; any additional stops are $5 each. Linc Cards for additional rides are also accepted.

- All rides are to be scheduled one day in advance. Call Trans IV at 736-2133 to set up service and schedule ride days and times.

- This transportation service is offered Monday through Friday only.

- At this time, the senior center's hours of operation are limited, but they will expand as clientele grows.

- People using the bus service should try to be prompt and ready to travel at their appointment times, since the drivers must transport a number of clients in a fairly short period of time. In order to remain on schedule, clients are advised to be ready three to five minutes before their scheduled pickup time.

Information: 734-5084.

Six compete for Oakley Royalty

By Judy Albertson
Times News Reporter

Six girls will vie for Oakley Royalty titles Friday and Saturday, with the winners named each evening at the Oakley Rodeo.

Running for queen are Samantha Ward and Koryl Wadsworth. Danielle Tolman is reigning queen.

Running for teen queen are Maquel Peterson and Sara Bayless. Lainey Owen is reigning teen queen.

Running for princess are Holly Ward and Sky Pruett. Kaylie Sneddon is reigning princess.

Samantha Ward is the 17-year-old daughter of Steve and Tonya Ward of Almo. She received her Certified Nursing Assistance license this year. She graduated from Raft River High School and plans to attend Utah State University to pursue her study in health care. She is currently employed at Almo Outpost.

S. Ward

Koryl Wadsworth, 21, is the daughter of Jeff and Marion Wadsworth of Oakley. She is currently working toward a bachelor's degree in dance with a minor in business from Brigham Young University. Her studies have taken her as far as China, where she rode with Mongolian horsemen.

Wadsworth

Maquel Peterson is the 13-year-old daughter of Nels and Cherie Peterson of Oakley. She will be in the eighth grade at Oakley Junior High School. She participates in volleyball, basketball, track and rodeo.

Peterson

Sara Bayless is the 15-year-old daughter of Mike and Amy Bayless of Rupert. Her favorite activities include riding horses, dance, swimming, camping and spending time with friends and family.

Bayless

Holly Ward is the 11-year-old daughter of Steve and Tonya Ward of Almo. She will be a sixth-grader at Raft River Elementary School, where she plays basketball and runs track. She also enjoys snowboarding and swimming.

H. Ward

Sky Pruett is the 11-year-old daughter of Calvin and JoNae Pruett of Norland. She lives on a small farm and enjoys country life, riding horses and caring for "critters." She enjoys baseball, camping and trail riding.

Pruett

The princess and teen queen will be crowned during Friday night's activities at the rodeo, and the queen will be crowned Saturday night.

Differences between the two types of diabetes

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been a type 2 diabetic for four years now. What is the difference between type 1 and type 2 diabetes?

DEAR READER: Diabetes is a disorder in which blood-glucose levels are above normal. People develop diabetes either because the pancreas doesn't produce adequate insulin or because the cells in the muscles, liver and fat don't use insulin properly. This results in glucose remaining in the blood and elevating levels at the same time cells crave the energy necessary to function properly.

There are two types of diabetes, type 1 and type 2, with the latter being most common. Type 1 indicates

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

a person is dependent on insulin and requires regular injections that are self-administered because the body fails to produce enough, if any, insulin. This form generally develops before the age of 30 and affects about 10 percent of all diabetics. Type 2, on the other hand, signifies insulin resistance. These people produce adequate insulin levels, but the body is unable to use it properly. Some may even need insulin injections in order to stimulate the pancreas. This form can occur in people of all ages and is more prevalent in obese people, Hispanics and Native Americans. Some cases of type 2 diabetes have a strong genetic basis while others do not. There does appear to be hereditary susceptibility, but this is not always the case in those who develop diabetes.

Symptoms include fatigue, an increase in hunger and thirst, blurred vision and skin ulcers that don't heal well. Complications can be serious and can include heart disease, stroke, poor vision, kidney failure, nerve damage, poor circulation and a host of other conditions.

Prevention is key with the disorder to prevent your diabetes from progressing to type 1. If appropriate, try to lose weight, since excess weight can keep your body from making and using insulin properly. Reduce your salt and alcohol intake. Make better choices when grocery shopping. Keep fresh vegetables such as carrot and celery sticks readily available to snack on while watching television. Eat properly and coordinate a program of regular exercise, such as riding a bicycle or golfing. A simple walk around the block daily is good. Ask your physician or endocrinologist if referral to a dietitian would help. If you have a community center nearby, sign up for swimming or aerobics classes. Get a friend to join you. There's more incentive if you have company.

If medication is appropriate, take it according to your physician's directions. Follow my No Flour, No Sugar diet. I have received countless communications from readers stating they have brought their diabetes, cholesterol levels and hypertension under control and have been able to discontinue their medication while on my diet. Stay active and in control. With a little motivation, help and direction, you should see amazing results.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Living with Diabetes Mellitus." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Greenpeace/AP photo

A firefighter rushes to help colleagues struggling in thick oil as they try to fix an underwater pump Tuesday in Dalian, China. Crude oil started pouring into the Yellow Sea off the busy northeastern port after a pipeline exploded late last week.

Large China oil spill threatens sea life, water

By Cara Anna
Associated Press writer

BEIJING — China’s largest reported oil spill emptied beaches along the Yellow Sea as its size doubled Wednesday, while cleanup efforts included straw mats and frazzled workers with little more than rubber gloves.

An official warned the spill posed a “severe threat” to sea life and water quality as China’s latest environmental crisis spread off the shores of Dalian, once named China’s most livable city.

One cleanup worker has drowned, his body coated in crude.

“I’ve been to a few bays today and discovered they were almost entirely covered with dark oil,” said Zhong Yu with environmental group Greenpeace China, who spent the day on a boat inspecting the spill.

“The oil is half-solid and half liquid and is as sticky as asphalt,” she told The Associated Press by telephone.

The oil had spread over 165 square miles of water five days since a pipeline at the busy northeastern port exploded, hurting oil shipments from part of China’s strategic oil reserves to the rest of the country.

State media has said no more oil is leaking into the sea, but the total amount of oil spilled is not yet clear.

Greenpeace China released photos Wednesday of inky beaches and of straw mats about 21 square feet in size scattered on the sea, meant to absorb the oil.

Fishing in the waters around Dalian has been banned through the end of August, the state-run Xinhua News Agency reported.

“The oil spill will pose a severe threat to marine animals, and water quality, and the sea birds,” Huang Yong, deputy bureau chief for the city’s Maritime Safety Administration, told Dragon TV.

At least one person died during cleanup efforts. A 25-year-old firefighter, Zhang Liang, drowned Tuesday when a wave threw him from a vessel, Xinhua reported.

Officials, oil company workers and volunteers were turning out by the hundreds to clean blackened beaches.

“We don’t have proper oil cleanup materials, so our workers are wearing rubber gloves and using chopsticks,” an apparently exasperated official of the Jinshitan Golden Beach Administration Committee told the Beijing Youth Daily newspaper.

Ellen Elizabeth Reiss

Ellen Elizabeth Reiss, 90, of Twin Falls, Idaho, passed away peacefully in her sleep Monday, July 12, 2010, at Helping Hands Care Center in Gooding, Idaho.

Ellen was born Jan. 2, 1920, in Glen Elder, Kan., to Oscar and Mina Dalphine Gish Merritt. Ellen was the fourth of 11 children, six sisters and five brothers. Ellen married Virgil Groves in 1937, and they had four children. They moved to Twin Falls in 1948 and later divorced.

Ellen married Bernie L. Reiss in 1964, and they were together until Bernie’s death in 1995. Ellen loved working at the Depot Grill for many years in the buffet room. She enjoyed the friendships she made while waiting tables and would often share stories of those days working.

Ellen was an excellent cook, knowing all her favorite recipes from memory. She also loved to sew and would mend her children’s clothes as well as make them. Ellen baked a variety of special pies for the family which were always greatly anticipated during special occasions and the holidays, especially for her grandsons, Darby and Thad Heidemann.

Survivors include one sister, JoAnn McCombs of Granger, Ind.; one daughter, Karon (Larry) Amen of Twin Falls; one son, Terry Groves of Twin Falls; nine grandchildren; and numerous great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren. Ellen was preceded in death by her husband, Bernie Reiss; two sons, Gary and Ronnie Groves; her parents; five brothers; four sisters; and two granddaughters.

No funeral service will be held. A cremation service has been provided by Parke’s Magic Valley Funeral Home in Twin Falls. Condolences and memories may be shared at www.magicvalley-funeralhome.com.

Australian inventor of ‘black box’ recorder dies

SYDNEY (AP) — David Warren, an Australian scientist who invented the “black box” flight data recorder, has died, defense officials said. He was 85.

Warren, who died Monday, came up with the idea for the cockpit voice recorder after investigating the crash of the world’s first commercial jet airliner, the Comet, in 1953, the Department of Defence said in a statement. He thought it would be helpful for airline accident investigators to have a recording of voices in the cockpit.

He designed and constructed a black box prototype in 1956, but it took several years before officials understood just how valuable the device could be and began installing them in commercial airlines worldwide.

Warren was born in 1925 in a remote part of northeast Australia. In 1934, his father was killed in a plane crash in Australia.

He became the principal research scientist at the Defence Science and Technology Organisation’s Aeronautical Research Laboratories in Melbourne from 1952 to 1983.

“Dr. Warren’s flight data recorder has made an invaluable contribution to safety in world aviation,” the defense department said in a statement.

Conrad Roy Futrell

LIBBY, Mont. — Conrad Roy Futrell, 97, of Libby, Mont., died Tuesday, July 20, 2010, at the St. John’s Lutheran Hospital. Conrad had been a resident of the Libby Care Center.

He was born Oct. 25, 1912, in Cadiz, Trigg County, Ky., the son of Charles Albert Futrell and Zephia Sedelia Jones. He was the oldest of six children.

He migrated west to Brigham City, Utah, with the CCC camps, where he met and married Nola Ramsay. He worked at several jobs, including trucking, powderman and oiler. Conrad served in the United States Navy at the end of World War II. He lived in Buhl, Idaho, with his family for many years, moving to Hells Canyon, Ore., to work on the Hells Canyon dam in 1966. In 1968, he moved his family to Libby to work on building the Libby dam. This area appealed to him and he retired here.

Romanian officials exhume graves of former dictator Ceausescu, wife

By Alison Mutler
Associated Press writer

BUCHAREST, Romania — The mystery of where former Romanian dictator Nicolae Ceausescu and his wife, Elena, were buried moved closer to resolution Wednesday after forensic scientists dug up their official graves in a hunt for DNA.

Ceausescu ruled Romania for 25 years with an iron fist before being ousted and executed during the 1989 anti-communist revolt in which more than 1,000 people were killed.

Many Romanians have doubted for years that the Ceausescus were really buried in the Ghencea military cemetery in west Bucharest. Still, they were shocked by the unannounced early-morning exhumation, part of a five-year lawsuit.

“I never thought this would happen,” said Ioan

Mirichi, 81, a former engineer visiting a family grave early Wednesday. “I didn’t believe the rumors he wasn’t buried here ... but I suppose the family must decide.”

Conspiracy theories have ranged from the graves being empty to the Ceausescus’ bodies being spirited off by supporters and replaced in their coffins by anonymous victims of Europe’s bloodiest anti-communist revolt.

By the end of the day, one theory had been ruled out.

“There weren’t empty graves, there were bodies,” Valentin Ceausescu, the couple’s 62-year-old son, told The Associated Press. He declined to participate in the exhumation.

“I don’t know what the graves look like because I have never been there,” he said. “We are not looking for revenge. We just want to find out the truth.”

As news of the exhumation broke, officials rapidly closed the cemetery.

Journalists were barred from the exhumation but an Associated Press reporter was the only one to enter the cemetery while the operation was taking place. A few elderly people already in the sprawling cemetery were kept away from the exhumations by guards.

A team of pathologists and cemetery officials hoisted the wooden caskets of Ceausescu and his wife out of their graves, took DNA samples from the corpses, then reburied the coffins. The process took over two hours.

The AP reporter saw a dirty cloth being removed from Ceausescu’s alleged remains and what looked like a thick gray fur hat at one end of the coffin.

Mircea Oprean, the couple’s son-in-law who witnessed the exhumation, said a belt and hat worn by Ceausescu meant it was “likely” the couple were buried in those graves.

Semi-pro football returning to Mini-Cassia

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY – The Rocky Mountain Football League is back in Burley. The Mini-Cassia Diggers are set to compete in the RMFL starting with the 2011 season. The Diggers will become the second team from the area, and hope to forge a rivalry with the Magic Valley Bulldogs, which are stationed in Jerome. Mini-Cassia Diggers organizers Kit Carney and Todd Christiansen are former Bulldawg players.

Carney said the Diggers are in negotiations to play home games at Burley High School’s Skaggs Events Center. “I wanted to start a team in Burley again, because that’s where the Bulldogs started,” Carney said. “When they were there, they had a lot of community support. I thought it would be a good idea to put a team back in the Burley area and get the Mini-Cassia guys fired up again about it.” While Carney hopes Mini-Cassia competes with the Bulldogs on the field, he doesn’t plan to encroach on what that club has already established. “I don’t want to pull (players) from the Bulldogs because we’re going to need them. We’ll want a rivalry within the Magic Valley,” Carney said. “We don’t want to take anything away from the Bulldogs – they run a good organization. We’re just looking to move away from them and do our own thing now.” The RMFL is a recreational tackle football league for players age 18 and older made up of 34 teams from Idaho, Utah, Wyoming and Montana. Its season runs from April to June. There will be a players’ meeting Aug. 28. Carney said the Diggers are looking for players with any level of experience. “It’s a competitive league with playoffs and a championship at the end of the year,” Carney said. “We’re looking for some competitive guys at any level. This gives us a chance to go out there and play a sport we all love and compete against people from all different levels.” In addition to players, Carney said the Diggers will need everything from sponsors to game filmlers to ticket takers. Anyone who wants to be involved with the team can call Kit Carney at 431-8151 or e-mail kcarney@rocky-mountainfootball.com.

Help for Haiti

A Haitian youth soccer player applauds as he returns to the field after a break in his team’s match against an Edina, Minn., youth team during the USA Cup soccer tournament in Blaine, Minn., on July 14. The team of 14 and 15-year-old Haitian players was brought to Minnesota with money raised by a foundation and the Los Angeles Galaxy of Major League Soccer to play in the largest youth tournament in the country.

BLAINE, Minn. — Josue Alexi has been on the losing end nearly all of his 14-year-old life. He’s been beaten by poverty. By hunger. And, most recently, by the magnitude-7 earthquake that leveled much of Haiti, his country, in January. Little Josue’s joy was buried underneath the rubble, right next to homes, vehicles and as many as 300,000 people who died. “Nobody smiled,” said Tony Sanneh, a former Major League Soccer player who traveled to Haiti with the Los Angeles Galaxy in March. “The people were just sad. They were just trying to get by.” Josue found his smile on the lush, green soccer fields of suburban Minneapolis, thanks to the Galaxy and the Tony Sanneh Foundation, which brought the boy and 14 teammates here to participate in the largest youth soccer tournament in the country. It only got better for the Haitians as the tournament progressed, culminating with a victory on Saturday for the Schwan’s USA Cup weekend championship in the Gold Flight, which is just one step below the elite level at a tournament that features more than 900 teams. The 15 boys, all under the age of 15, were winners for the first time in their lives. They danced on the podium as gold medals were draped around their necks and sang songs as they were presented the trophy. One thing stood out more than any to Stephanie Pereira, a manager for L’Athletique d’Haiti — they all had smiles on their faces. “To say it was happiness, it goes beyond that,” Pereira said. “For these kids to smile, it takes a lot.” Josue and his teammates were able to just be kids for a few weeks and forget about the devastation at home. They arrived in the Twin Cities on July 9 and will start heading home next week to Port-au-Prince. Families here opened their homes, swimming pools and refrigerators to a group of kids who, even before the earthquake, had spent their lives struggling. “It’s only been four days

Rehab-first promising for amateur athlete ACL tears

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Attention, weekend athletes: Don’t be too quick to agree to surgery for a common type of knee ligament tear. A study of Swedish amateur athletes — mostly soccer players — found that those who got an ACL reconstruction right away plus physical therapy fared no better than athletes who started out with rehab and got the surgery later if they still needed it. Of those in the rehab-first program, fewer than half went on to get the surgery within two years, researchers reported in Thursday’s issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. “It seems that if you start out with rehabilitation only ... you have a good chance of ending up with an equally good outcome as if you had early ACL surgery,” said Richard Frobell of Lund University Hospital in Sweden, an author of the work. “Maybe we will be surprised that a lot of people actually do not need an ACL reconstruction.” Frobell stressed that the study did not include professional athletes. They usually seek surgery to get back into action quickly rather than waiting to see if rehabilitation works. About 200,000 Americans each year have surgery to replace the anterior cruciate ligament, or ACL, which is crucial for knee stability. It can get torn in sports like football and soccer that require planting the foot and pivoting. Doctors already knew that not

Saban tees off on agents

By John Zenor
Associated Press writer

HOOVER, Ala. — Nick Saban didn’t pull punches Wednesday when discussing the improper contact with athletes by unscrupulous agents, comparing their behavior to that of a “pimp.” The Alabama coach was upset about the rash of recent agent-related incidents that have resulted in NCAA investigations at several Southeastern Conference schools. “I don’t think it’s anything but greed that’s creating it right now on behalf of the agents,” Saban said in a rant at the SEC media days. “The agents that do this — and I hate to say this, but how are they any better than a pimp?” “I have no respect for people who do that to young people. None. How would you feel if they did it to your child?” Agents, not national titles, was the primary topic on Day 1 at the Wynfrey Hotel. Three SEC teams —

Florida, Alabama and South Carolina — are investigating allegations involving improper contact with an agent. Saban and SEC commissioner Mike Slive both emphatically said it was time for a change to NCAA rules governing agents. Saban confirmed that Alabama is looking into a trip defensive end Marcell Dareus took to an agent’s party at Miami’s South Beach. South Carolina is looking into claims from the same South Beach party with tight end Weslye Saunders. Georgia associate athletic director Claude Felton confirmed that the NCAA requested permission late Wednesday afternoon to conduct an inquiry on the Bulldogs’ campus. He would not say what the inquiry was about or whether it was related to the South Beach party. “This is all we can say,” Felton said. Florida and the NCAA are reportedly investigating whether offensive lineman Maurkice Pouncey — now

CSI takes new fall baseball approach

Sometimes you’ve got to just throw all the ingredients into the blender and see what comes out. That’s more or less the approach the College of Southern Idaho baseball team will take heading into the fall. It’s part of what head coach Boomer Walker hopes is a different path to success in the spring.

David Bashore

Walker typically likes having 24 to 26 players at his disposal and uses the fall season to develop the talent into the spring. This season he looks set to have 32, and the Golden Eagles look to have taken the Seattle Seahawks’ approach of intensive competition at every position. In fact, Walker said with nearly three dozen players the team can more or less have an intra-squad scrimmage every single day of fall practice. Competition against the returning sophomores — particularly against a pitching staff that mostly dazzled as largely freshmen last season — will only bode well for the newcomers. The Golden Eagles endured an inconsistent 2010 while relying on a number of freshmen in key positions. Now those guys — all but four of whom will return (Jean-Guy Bilodeau, D.J. Nelson, Philip Valos and Brock Alexander won’t be back) — are the experienced ones expected to lead the charge next spring. It doesn’t hurt that some of the 18 newcomers are used to college-level competition either. Among those joining the program is Timberline grad Preston Minter, most recently of the Boise State football program. After a season in Bronco blue he’s evidently decided baseball is a more viable path. The same goes for Parker Webster of Alta High School in suburban Salt Lake City—he played football for Ohio Dominican last season. The crop coming straight from high school isn’t too shabby either. West Jordan, Utah, grad Chandler Allen is built like a physical wide receiver with speed to match, and his cross-town rival, Copper Hills catcher Luke Miller, only hit two walk-off homers at the end of his senior season and led his team with doubles. Among those coming to

Curtis' bizarre first homer vaults Yankees

NEW YORK — Mark Teixeira and Robinson Cano supplied the early offense that ended Joel Pineiro's seven-game winning streak, and the New York Yankees beat the Los Angeles Angels 10-6 Wednesday to split their two-game series.

Colin Curtis, who inherited an 0-2 count after Brett Gardner was ejected, added a three-run homer in the seventh inning that made it 10-5. Cano and Juan Miranda also connected for the Yankees, who finished 4-4 against the Angels this season after defeating them in last year's AL championship series.

Pitching on 10 days' rest, Javier Vazquez (8-7) nearly squandered a six-run cushion, withering quickly in the sweltering humidity on an 88-degree afternoon. But the right-hander hung on just long enough for his 150th career win, becoming the third active pitcher to beat all 30 major league teams.

Bobby Wilson and ex-Yankee Hideki Matsui each hit a two-run homer for Los Angeles.

ATHLETICS 6, RED SOX 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Matt Watson hit his first career homer and Jack Cust added a two-run shot that helped Oakland win its third straight series.

Gio Gonzalez (9-6) pitched six innings and Rajai Davis hit a two-run single for the A's, who have won seven of eight to move above .500 for the first time since June 11.

TWINS 6, INDIANS 0

MINNEAPOLIS

— Francisco Liriano worked out of trouble while throwing seven effective innings and Minnesota salvaged the final game of a frustrating series, snapping the Indians' six-game winning streak.

Liriano (8-7) allowed 10 baserunners but stayed poised and benefited from three double plays. He struck out eight, including rookie Carlos Santana with runners at the corners to finish the third inning.

RAYS 5, ORIOLES 4

BALTIMORE

— Evan Longoria homered, drove in two runs and scored twice, and Tampa Bay blew a four-run lead before rebounding to get the win.

Willy Aybar had two hits and an RBI for the Rays, who took two of three to improve their major league-leading road record to 31-17. Tampa Bay is 7-2 against Baltimore, including 5-1 at Camden Yards.

AP photo

New York Yankees outfielder Colin Curtis salutes the crowd after hitting his first career home run Wednesday against the Los Angeles Angels in New York.

ROYALS 5, BLUE JAYS 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Zack Greinke won for the fifth time in six decisions and seldom-used catcher Brayan Pena had a career-high three hits for the Royals.

Greinke (6-9), the reigning AL Cy Young Award winner, allowed two runs and six hits in eight innings, striking out nine without a walk. The right-hander improved to 5-1 with a 2.89 ERA in his last seven starts, a stretch that includes 47 strikeouts and just eight walks.

TIGERS 4, RANGERS 1

DETROIT

— Max Scherzer threw seven scoreless innings and Gerald Laird hit a two-run homer to help

Detroit snap a seven-game losing streak.

Magglio Ordonez and Miguel Cabrera drove in runs in the seventh to give Detroit a four-run lead.

NATIONAL LEAGUE NATIONALS 8, REDS 5

CINCINNATI — Stephen Strasburg tamed the NL's top offense and Washington's offense finally came around behind Cristian Guzman's homer.

A day after he turned 22, Strasburg (5-2) pitched beyond his years again, passing one of his toughest tests.

The Reds lead the league in batting average, hits and RBIs. They can manhandle pitchers at homer-friendly Great American Ball Park, where even a tiny mistake often ends up in the seats.

Strasburg struck out seven and gave up three runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings, outdueling Bronson Arroyo (10-5), who had allowed only three runs in his last three starts, winning them all.

Guzman's two-run homer put the Nationals up 3-1 in the fifth, and Nyjer Morgan added a two-run single for a 7-1 lead.

PIRATES 15, BREWERS 3

PITTSBURGH — Pedro Alvarez hit two home runs for the second consecutive game for Pittsburgh, which has won four of five.

The Pirates' rookie hit a two-run homer to center in the fifth and a solo shot off the right-field pole in the eighth.

MARLINS 5, ROCKIES 2

MIAMI — Gaby Sanchez hit a three-run homer and Ricky Nolasco pitched eight innings for Florida.

Dan Uggla and Jorge Cantu hit RBI doubles for the Marlins, who have won four of five.

CARDINALS 5, PHILLIES 1

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Jaime Garcia stymied Philadelphia for seven innings and Matt Holliday's homer leading off the bottom of the seventh was the go-ahead hit for St. Louis in its eighth straight win.

ASTROS 4, CUBS 3, 12 INNINGS

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Jason Michaels delivered a two-out, two-run double in the top of the 12th inning for Houston.

PADRES 6, BRAVES 4, 12 INNINGS

ATLANTA — Atlanta reliever Billy Wagner blew a two-run lead in the ninth inning, and pinch-hitter Nick Hundley's two-run double in the 12th lifted San Diego.

Cowboys win one, lose one to open Area C tourney

Times-News

The Twin Falls Cowboys Class A American Legion baseball team opened the Area C Tournament in American Falls with a spirited rally Wednesday, but blew it early in its second game and fell into the loser's bracket.

The Cowboys scored four times in the bottom of the sixth inning of their opener to beat Hillcrest 6-4, stringing hits at the right time to punish a few mistakes from Hillcrest.

In the second game Skyline, the East Division's top seed, scored seven runs in the first two innings to chase starter Damon Jones and earn a 7-4 win to reach the championship semifinals.

Michael Garcia allowed just one hit in relief, but the Cowboys left eight runners on base.

"We had our chances; three times we had the bases loaded and we only got two runs out of it all," said Twin Falls assistant coach Allyn Reynolds. "It was a pretty clean game, we just spotted them too many runs."

Twin Falls plays Bear Lake in a knockout game this morning.

BURLEY SPLITS FIRST TWO

The Burley Green Sox advanced out of the first round of the Class A

American Legion Baseball Area C district tournament with a 4-1 win over Bear Lake on Wednesday at American Falls.

Later on, however, the Green Sox fell to Blackfoot 11-0 in six innings.

"You have to give credit to Blackfoot," said Burley coach Devin Kunz. "We lost our composure in that second game and didn't fight like I'd like to see. We're a better team than that."

In the win over Bear Lake, Burley pitcher Fonzie Sanchez had seven strikeouts and one walk while giving up six hits. Sanchez also hit a double and scored a run.

In the loss, Blackfoot's Zac Reay pitched a no-hitter while his team took advantage of a short porch and belted four home runs.

Today, Burley will play Hillcrest at noon in the consolation bracket. If the Green Sox win, they will play again at 6 p.m.

BUHL ADVANCES, KIMBERLY SPLITS

Buhl defeated Kimberly 3-1 in the second round of the tournament to advance to a semifinal date with Blackfoot tonight.

Seth Champlin had a no-hitter heading into the fifth inning with a 1-0 lead but the Tribe got it going and rallied for the win.

Kimberly, which defeated Idaho Falls 11-0 to open the day, will play

Bonneville in an elimination game at noon today. The Bees were shock losers to Wood River, which won 6-4 before falling to Pocatello 9-1.

No other details were available on the other four games.

Wood River plays Idaho Falls today at 9 a.m.

ZOLLINGER, STEELE OUT AT NATIONALS

Declo's Stirland Zollinger went two-and-out at 105 pounds in the USA Wrestling Cadet National Freestyle Championships in Fargo, N.D., Wednesday.

Justin Steele of Gooding was also eliminated, going 2-2 at 160 pounds.

Will Keeter of Twin Falls and David Borden of Minico are expected to compete starting today in the Junior division event. Jerome's Riley Argyle, who was injured and missed the Greco-Roman segment, hopes to be ready to go as well.

CROSSLAND THIRD AT IGA EVENT

Buhl's Kade Crossland shot a first-round 69 to stake himself to a share of third place at the IGA/PGA Treasure Valley Championship Wednesday at BanBury Golf Course in Eagle.

Crossland is tied with Boise's Tate Cowley in the Boys 15-18 age division, with Kimberly's Gage Huft a stroke behind and tied for fifth.

Jenna Sharp of Twin Falls shot a 76 to tie for fourth after one round in the Girls 15-18 age division.

The second round is today.

The first go-round of the National High School Finals Rodeo was rough on local cowboys and cow-girls.

The second hasn't been much better so far.

Kolton Hubert placed ninth in the opening session of the second go-round Wednesday evening in Gillette, Wyo., scoring a 54 in bareback riding.

Hubert had a score of 43 in the Wednesday morning session, good enough for ninth in the session. The score placed him 58th after one go-round, meaning his rodeo is almost certainly over.

The only rider in real contention of reaching the championship round is Kindee Wilson of Filer, who sits sixth after the first go-round in goat tying.

CSI with Idaho ties are Meridian's Andrew Freter, Centennial's Chase Harris, and Caldwell's Bryce Hughes. There's also the Gatorade Idaho Baseball Player of the Year, catcher Devon Austin of Coeur d'Alene.

The promise of these newcomers — among baseball scholarship recipients from Idaho prep players, Walker said he felt CSI got all the best ones not named J.D. Leckenby — is clear to see.

What's coming back — six experienced pitchers, including four starters, a drafted closer and the reigning conference reliever of the year, a steadying influence behind the plate and two defensive aces in the infield — will only make it more exciting.

With an in-flux Scenic West Athletic Conference seemingly there for the taking in 2011, Walker's certainly hoping most of what gets flung at the wall in the fall sticks in the spring.

an NFL rookie with the Pittsburgh Steelers received $100,000 from a sports agent's representative between the SEC championship game and the Sugar Bowl.

Pouncey denied the allegation.

"I did not accept $100,000, it is an absolutely ridiculous claim," he said in a statement through his attorney. "I have completely cooperated with the investigation and answered any and all questions put to me."

Florida coach Urban Meyer said the Gators support Pouncey.

"If something happened, we should be punished severely," Meyer said. "If it didn't happen, then it's nonsense. I heard his denial today and we stand by Maurkice Pouncey."

The player's twin brother, Florida offensive lineman Mike Pouncey, said they have both cooperated with investigators.

"I talked to my brother and it's not true," Mike Pouncey said. "He pretty much cleared that up in his statement. I feel bad about it because they're ruining somebody's name and they really don't know who my brother and I are. We pride ourselves on having a good, clean name. It's just hard right now.

"I'm just ready to be done with it."

Saban said he wants the NFL Players Association to get involved and suspend agents whose dealings help cost players eligibility, sending a message through their bank accounts.

"That's the only way we're going to stop this happening, because it's ridiculous and it's entrapment for young people at a very difficult time in their life," the former Miami Dolphins coach said. "It's very difficult for the NCAA to control it, and it's very unfair to college football.

"I think we should look into doing something about that."

Meyer said it's impossible for a coach to keep agents or their "runners" off campus and said they need to be "severely punished" by either state laws or the NFL for wrongdoing.

"It's epidemic right now," he said. "It's always been there, but I think we've reached a point where the magnitude of college football is really overwhelming."

"They treat me very well and make me very happy," he said through a translator.

An estimated 1.6 million Port-au-Prince residents remain homeless or living in tarps and tents. Most have no electricity or running water and the rebuilding effort has barely started.

In Minnesota, these kids got a taste of middle class living, playStation, air conditioning and Josue's new favorite food.

"Hot dogs!" he said.

They were honored during an Olympic-style opening ceremony that included fireworks and sky divers, cheered wildly by more than 1,000 people.

"Here people were rooting for them and they were like, 'What's wrong with them?'" Pereira said. "I told them, 'They're happy for you! You have to smile too.'"

It didn't take them long to get the message.

"They are very loving," Anderson said. "They put their arms around you and we walk together and say je t'aime. I love you. Every day I try to have them teach me some new words. Explain what we're eating."

After the earthquake, the boys recalled eating maybe once a day, rice and beans at L'Athletique d'Haiti, a sports program based in Port-au-Prince aimed at getting children from the poorest areas of town off the streets. Here, they got pizza, spaghetti, hot dogs and Pop Tarts, major food groups for most American teenage boys.

"It's unbelievable how much they eat and what they eat," said John Schinnick, a local youth soccer coach and host. "They'll grab eight slices of bread and pile it up. Pizza, bread on that and rice on that and ketchup over everything."

Eventually, Schinnick said, "they laid off piling it so high because they realized it was going to keep coming. They could eat four or five times a day if they wanted."

Remarkably, or perhaps fright-eningly, life in Haiti seems back to "normal" for one many of the 14-year-olds who have grown up in one of the world's poorest nations.

"It wasn't too hard," goalkeeper Anel Pierre Jr. said of putting the earthquake behind him. "I tried to find a way to take the stress out and soccer was one of the ways to do that."

L'Athletique d'Haiti has received help from the Galaxy, the Sanneh Foundation and other organizations to outfit more than 600 kids with soccer equipment and give them something to fill their day, and a meal to fill their stomachs.

"That's one of the things we wanted, to start playing again right away," Pereira said. "When you're playing, you concentrate on the game, you don't concentrate on the problems necessarily.

"It helped the kids refocus again. It was their routine. It helped them go back to what they were used to, which is an important thing."

Now that the tournament is over, the kids will spend the rest of their time here at lake beaches and an amusement park. Pereira said very few are ready to go home even though they have been away from their families for more than two weeks.

In her eyes, that's not a bad thing.

"Socially, it's a very good experience," she said. "They've never traveled. They've never seen what else is around them. It helps them open their vision, their minds, to seeing other things and how life can be different."

Gordon gunning for return to Victory Lane at Indy

By Will Graves
Associated Press writer

Don't let the flecks of gray framing his still-boyish face fool you, Jeff Gordon still wants to win. Badly.

Though his balky back appears to be holding up this season, the four-time NASCAR Sprint Cup champion is well aware he's closer to the end of his brilliant career than the beginning. Gordon turns 39 next month, and Sunday's race at Indianapolis will be his 601st Cup start.

While still considered one of the cleanest racers in the series, there's an urgency to his driving these days as he tries to end a 49-race winless streak, the longest of his career.

He angered seemingly half the field at Sonoma last month, Martin Truex Jr. in particular, while attempting to bull his way to the front. He called the move to dump Truex "a mistake" without exactly apologizing for it.

"We're not out there to be all buddy-buddy," he said. "We're out there to race hard, win races. If that puts on a great show for the fans, I think it's a win-win for everybody. But it's also going to make some enemies for you out there that you're going to have to deal with going forward."

NASCAR Sprint Cup Series driver Jeff Gordon waves as he signs autographs for fans at ChicagoLand Speedway in Joliet, Ill., July 10.

It's a scenario Gordon didn't have to deal with much a decade ago, partly because the rest of the field had trouble catching him. Things are different now. It's been nine long years since Gordon has won a championship. In the interim he's ceded the stage as the face of Hendrick Motorsports to teammate and former protege Jimmie Johnson. The two friends raised eyebrows earlier this year following a couple of highly publicized run-ins on the track.

They have since patched things up and find themselves side-by-side in the standings behind points leader Kevin Harvick. Gordon is in second, trailing Harvick by 103 points, with Johnson third another 85 points back.

Yet even though he's arguably the hottest driver in the series at the moment after posting five straight top-five finishes, Gordon isn't exactly satisfied. He knows barring a massive collapse he's a lock to make NASCAR's Chase for the Championship for the seventh straight year.

He also knows that until he finds a way to win, he's going to be on the periphery of the title discussion.

"We know we're capable of winning," he said. "It's definitely getting down to crunch time for us getting in the Chase. ... We need those bonus points (from winning a race) to really prove to ourselves and everyone else that we can compete for this championship."

Indy would be a good place to start.

Gordon is the only driver to win at the historic 2.5-mile oval four times, yet it's been six years since he and the members of his No. 24 Chevrolet crew have puckered up to kiss the yard of bricks after taking the checkered flag.

"It would be a huge, huge victory for us," Gordon said. "We're knocking on the door. The timing might just be right."

Winning is the only thing Gordon hasn't done this year. He's had his chances, most notably at Las Vegas, Phoenix and Texas.

He led 219 laps in Las Vegas, but a wrong call on tires late in the race cost him. He had an opportunity to steal one in Phoenix, but struggled off a late restart, relegating him to second. He appeared to have the best car in Texas, leading 124 laps before getting caught up in a crash with 17 laps to go.

Bad racing luck? Maybe. But then again he knows the best way to take luck out of the equation is by having a faster car.

"I'd like to get back to being more dominant," he said. "That's what's going to get us back into Victory Lane. I feel like we're right there, though. We're just so close."

Judge: Cheerleading can't be used toward Title IX

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Competitive cheerleading is not an official sport that colleges can use to meet gender-equity requirements, a federal judge ruled Wednesday in ordering a Connecticut school to keep its women's volleyball team.

Several volleyball players and their coach had sued Quinnipiac University after it announced in March 2009 that it would eliminate the team for budgetary reasons and replace it with a competitive cheer squad.

The school contended the cheer squad and other moves kept it in compliance with Title IX, the 1972 federal law that mandates equal opportunities for men and women in education and athletics. But U.S. District Judge Stefan Underhill disagreed in a ruling that those involved say was the first time the cheerleading issue has been decided by a judge.

"Competitive cheer may, some time in the future, qualify as a sport under Title IX," Underhill wrote. "Today, however, the activity is still too underdeveloped and disorganized to be treated as offering genuine varsity athletic participation opportunities for students."

Quinnipiac has 60 days to come up with a plan to keep the volleyball team through next season and comply with gender rules.

"The athletes all look forward to getting back on the volleyball court for pre-season in three weeks," coach Robin Sparks said. "As their coach, I feel fortunate to be able to work with such strong young women who are not afraid to stand up for their principles. It will be a joy to be back in the gym with them this fall."

School officials responded to the ruling by saying they would start a women's rugby team, but they refused to answer any questions, discuss the future of other athletic teams or say whether they would continue offering scholarships to competitive cheerleaders.

An activity can be considered a sport under Title IX if it meets specific criteria. It must have coaches, practices, competitions during a defined season and a governing organization. The activity also must have competition as its primary goal — not merely the support of other athletic teams.

Quinnipiac and seven other schools recently formed a governing body, the National Competitive Stunts and Tumbling Association, to govern and develop competitive cheer as a college sport.

Previously, competitive cheerleading championships were put on by two private organizations with ties to Varsity Brands Inc., which makes cheerleading apparel and runs camps.

Bill Seely, the executive director of USA Cheer, a national governing body for both sideline and competitive cheerleading, said he believes the ruling represents only a minor setback for the efforts to make cheer an intercollegiate sport.

"It's an opportunity to look at what hasn't worked and find what will work, so we are creating more opportunities for young women and not affecting other female sports," he said. "It's an opportunity to tweak some things."

During the weeklong trial last month, Quinnipiac had argued that if it could not count competitive cheerleading as a sport it might be forced to shut the program down, eliminating 36 positions on the squad.

Quinnipiac spokeswoman Lynn Bushnell said the school was disappointed its cheer team will lose varsity status.

"We will continue to press for competitive cheer to become an officially recognized varsity sport in the future," Bushnell said in a statement. "Consistent with our long-standing plans to expand opportunities in women's athletics, the university intends to add women's rugby as a varsity sport beginning in the 2011-2012 academic year."

The cheerleading issue was one of several Underhill was asked to decide as he considered whether the school had improperly manipulated its rosters.

He also found the school was underreporting the participation opportunities for its male athletes and overstating the opportunities for women.

Evidence presented to support an injunction a year ago showed the men's baseball and lacrosse teams would drop players before reporting data to the Department of Education and reinstate them after the reports were submitted. Conversely, the women's softball team would add players before the reporting date, knowing the additional players would not be on the team in the spring.

School officials have said any improper manipulation of the rosters has stopped. Underhill said things have gotten better, but the school "is still continuing to deflate the size of its men's rosters and inflate the size of its women's rosters."

Underhill also agreed with the plaintiffs' argument that female runners who participate on school's indoor, outdoor and cross country track teams should be counted just once for Title IX purposes. The men have just a cross country team.

He said the women's indoor and outdoor track teams were "in essence, an adjunct of the cross-country team."

The judge had made the case a class action for all female athletes at the school, and the plaintiffs attorneys said it would have an impact far beyond Quinnipiac.

"This is a victory not only for the student athletes and their coach, but for women's collegiate sports generally," attorney Jon Orleans said. "We look forward to discussing with Quinnipiac its plan for compliance with the court's ruling."

600 a bogus milestone for A-Rod

Sometime over the next few games or perhaps the next few weeks, Alex Rodriguez will find a pitch he likes and make history.

His name will go up among the greats of the game. His accomplishment, though, will always stand alone.

Yes, six others are already in the 600 home run club. But how about a big hand for the first admitted steroid user to take his place among the slugging elite?

Yankee fans undoubtedly will give A-Rod just that when he becomes the youngest ever to reach the milestone. Remember, he was only juiced (or so he says) before he put on the pin-stripes.

Forgive me, though, if I don't stand up and cheer. Because we've all seen this act before.

A magical mark. A tainted player.

Another entry into the record books we can't believe.

About the only thing missing is an immense, shaven head and the traveling circus that always seemed to surround it. Say what you will about Barry Bonds, he always made for entertainment.

There's nothing terribly entertaining about A-Rod reaching 600. It's a joyless occasion for all but the most blinded Yankee fans.

The worst thing about it all is this: We're now forced to begin the long countdown to 763 that seems as inevitable as it will be uncomfortable.

Having Bonds make a mockery of one of baseball's most sacrosanct records was bad enough. But at least with Bonds there was always a shred of deniability about steroids to hang onto even if the circumstantial evidence pointed to something else.

With A-Rod, there is no guessing. He cheated and was forced to admit it.

Cowboys camp begins hopeful championship road home

IRVING, Texas (AP) — For the Dallas Cowboys, the road home could lead to the next Super Bowl.

Since the end of last season, and even before that, Jerry Jones has constantly reminded his Cowboys that Super Bowl XLV will be played at their own stadium in February.

"Our owner lets us know the game is at Cowboys Stadium and he would love his team to play in it," Pro Bowl linebacker DeMarcus Ware said. "We are doing everything we can get to get there."

But long before the possibility of being the first host team ever in a Super Bowl, or even playing a 2010 regular season game, the defending NFC East champion Cowboys have quite a summer trip.

Training camp begins Saturday at the Alamodome in San Antonio. That begins a five-week stretch in which the Cowboys will travel more than 6,500 miles, practice in three different cities and play preseason games in four stadiums.

"We're America's team, everybody wants to see us," receiver Roy Dallas Cowboys quarterback Tony Romo walks off the field at the team's training facility during NFL football practice in Irving, Texas, June 12.

Williams said.

Dallas will be the first full squad to begin camp, but Cleveland rookies report Friday. Rookies for New England and San Diego report Sunday, and every NFL team will be in camp by Aug. 1.

For the third time in four years, 17 of the 32 teams will conduct training camp at home. Just nine years ago, only five of 31 teams stayed home for preseason workouts.

Super Bowl champion New Orleans opens camp at home July 29. But before the Saints won the title last year, the previous three Super Bowl winners — Pittsburgh, Indianapolis and the New York Giants — had all held camp away from home.

For the Cowboys, the climate-controlled Alamodome will be their base for two weeks before going to Canton, Ohio, to play in the Pro Football Hall of Fame Game. A few days at home and a preseason game at Cowboys Stadium follows that.

Then comes two weeks in Oxnard, Calif., a stretch that includes a game at San Diego. They break their West Coast camp and head to Houston for a game before finally getting to settle in at their Valley Ranch facility to prepare for the home preseason finale and the start of the regular season.

"I've had some pretty strange years, but not moving like that," said 13-year veteran Keith Brooking, going into his second season with Dallas. "I played in the Tokyo Bowl, 16-hour flight or whatever it was two weeks into training camp and still having four preseason games to play. But never two weeks at camp, then moving."

"Nobody cares where we practice. People care about whether we win," linebacker Bradie James said.

Jones raised the Lombardi Trophy three times in a four-year stretch in the mid 1990s. But the five-time champions have gone 14 seasons without winning a title and didn't even win another playoff game until last January.

The 20-year owner could think of no better way to end the championship drought than by winning a Super Bowl at his $1.2 billion stadium that opened last season.

"They have the potential to get there," said NFL career rushing leader Emmitt Smith, the three-time Super Bowl champion with the Cowboys who will be inducted into the Hall of Fame next month. "Hopefully those guys have taken this offseason and said next year should be our time."

Rehab

every patient with a torn ACL needs surgery; a middle-aged jogger or cyclist can often get by with a knee brace and rehabilitation, experts say. Frobell said his work suggests that the same strategy might work for athletes who want to return to more strenuous sports like soccer, at least on lower competitive levels.

Some patients with a damaged ACL can cope well at a high level. But doctors can't reliably predict which ACL patients will turn out to be "copers," and Frobell acknowledged his work doesn't help with that.

Doctors and patients currently decide on whether to do the surgery depending on individual factors like just what physical activities the patient plans to pursue and the overall health of the knee, said Dr. Bruce Levy, a Mayo Clinic surgeon.

The operation is an outpatient procedure that involves replacing the ACL with tissue from the patient or a cadaver. Risks include infection and stiffness that may require more surgery. The surgery costs $10,000 or more, depending on whether cadaver tissue is needed.

The new study focused on 121 Swedish amateur athletes, ages 18 to 35, mostly soccer players with some volleyball players. They had new, complete ACL ruptures. Half were randomly assigned to get surgery right away plus physical therapy, and the other half to start with the rehab to improve the knee. The rehabilitation required about 60 sessions on average, two or three times a week, Frobell said. That works out to about five to seven months.

Two years later, both groups reported about the same amount of improvement in ratings for things like pain, performance in sports and how much their knee interfered with their lives. And about 40 percent of each group had returned to their previous level of sports intensity, as measured by that activity's stress on the knee.

Among those treated with physical therapy first, those who eventually got the surgery turned out no better than those who didn't.

Levy urged "a little bit of caution" in interpreting the study.

For one thing, he said, the patients were followed for only two years, so "we really don't know long-term the benefits or consequences of each of the two strategies they tested."

Some 40 percent of the group that began with rehabilitation went on to have the surgery within the two years, and more will probably do so after that, he said.

What's more, the rehabilitation group showed more signs of trouble with the meniscus, a rubbery, cushioning disc in the knee, noted surgeon Dr. Kurt Spindler of Vanderbilt University. That could raise their risk of eventually getting osteoarthritis, he said.

Frobell said researchers will also study five-year outcomes, and look for early signs of arthritis with X-rays and other medical imaging.

The work was financed by government grants and private foundations.

NOTIFICATION OF A NOTICE OF INTENT

The Department of Energy (DOE) Naval Nuclear Propulsion Program (NNPP) has issued a Notice of Intent (NOI) to generate an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) on the recapitalization of the infrastructure supporting the handling and examination of naval spent nuclear fuel at Idaho National Laboratory in Idaho. Infrastructure recapitalization (e.g. new or updated facilities and equipment) is needed to support naval nuclear-powered operations and missions for at least the next 40 years, due to the aging of existing infrastructure. In addition, the recapitalization infrastructure will support the Navy's commitments, as identified in the 1995 Idaho Settlement Agreement (amended in June 2008) between the State of Idaho, the DOE, and the Navy.

The recapitalization effort is expected to be carried out as two Recapitalization Projects. The first Project will be the Spent Fuel Handling Recapitalization Project, which will focus on the receipt, handling, preparation, and packaging of naval spent nuclear fuel; the second Project will be the Examination Recapitalization Project, which will focus on recapitalizing naval spent nuclear fuel and irradiated materials examination capabilities. The proposed EIS will consider the environmental effects related to siting and construction of new facilities for both of the Recapitalization Projects.

The NNPP proposes to evaluate three Alternatives, along with a No Action Alternative.

Alternative 1 – Locate the Spent Fuel Handling Recapitalization Project and the Examination Recapitalization Project at the Naval Reactors Facility (NRF) at the Idaho National Laboratory (INL).

Alternative 2 – Locate the Spent Fuel Handling Recapitalization Project at NRF and the Examination Recapitalization Project at the Advanced Test Reactor (ATR) Complex at the INL.

Alternative 3 – Locate the Spent Fuel Handling Recapitalization Project at NRF and the Examination Recapitalization Project at the Materials and Fuels Complex (MFC) at the INL.

No Action Alternative – Overhaul the Expanded Core Facility (ECF). Overhauling includes continuing to maintain and operate the ECF in an environmentally responsible manner and to perform maintenance, repairs, refurbishments, and upgrades as needed to maintain NNPP high standards for protecting the environment.

For each of these alternatives a number of practical locations are available for the facilities. These location options will be assessed within each alternative.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries that there is a need to protect migrating adult Kokanee salmon from harvest and harassment in the Deadwood River from a posted boundary 100 yards upstream of the IDFG Kokanee trap to a posted boundary 100 yards downstream of the Kokanee trap. These fish are vital to the statewide fisheries needs.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36, 106(e)8A, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby closes fishing in the Deadwood River from a posted boundary 100 yards upstream of the IDFG Kokanee trap to a posted boundary 100 yards downstream of the Kokanee trap beginning August 17, 2010. This closure will end September 15, 2010 at midnight, Mountain Daylight Time.

Copies of Order 10-22 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, PO Box 25, Boise, Idaho 83707.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On November 2, 2010, at the hour of 11:00 o'clock AM of said day, at First American Cassia County, 1650 Overland Ave., Ste. 15, Burley, ID, JUST LAW, INC., as Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Cassia, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:

Exhibit "A"

ALL THAT PARCEL OF LAND IN THE CITY OF ALBION, CASSIA COUNTY, STATE OF IDAHO, AS MORE FULLY DESCRIBED IN DEED INST. #242932, ID #12S24E016800, BEING KNOWN AND DESIGNATED AS:
TOWNSHIP 12 SOUTH, RANGE 24 E.B.M., CASSIA COUNTY, IDAHO, SECTION 1: PART OF THE SE¼SW¼, MORE PARTICULARLY DESCRIBED AS FOLLOWS: BEGINNING AT THE SW CORNER OF THE SE¼SW¼ OF SAID SECTION 1, SAID CORNER MARKED BY A 5/8 INCH REBAR, WHICH SHALL BE THE POINT OF BEGINNING; THENCE N. 00°06'47" E. ALONG THE WEST LINE OF THE SE¼SW¼ FOR A DISTANCE OF 836.36 FEET TO A ½ INCH REBAR; THENCE N. 89°13'24" E. FOR A DISTANCE OF 878.10 FEET TO A ½ INCH REBAR; THENCE S. 14°07'39" W. FOR A DISTANCE OF 627.22 FEET TO A ½ INCH REBAR; THENCE S. 00°06'47" W. FOR A DISTANCE OF 230.16 FEET TO A ½ INCH REBAR ON THE SOUTH LINE OF THE SE¼SW¼; THENCE S. 89°13'24" W. ALONG SAID LINE FOR A DISTANCE OF 726.19 FEET TO THE POINT OF BEGINNING.

BY FEE SIMPLE DEED FROM KEN COOPER AND SUSAN COOPER, HUSBAND AND WIFE, AS SET FORTH IN DEED INST #242932, DATED 05/02/1996 AND RECORDED 05/23/1996, CASSIA COUNTY RECORDS, STATE OF IDAHO.

According to the County Assessors Office, the above described property is commonly known as: 990 East 900 South, Albion, ID 83311.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of 990 East 900 South, Albion, ID, is sometimes associated with the said real property.

This Trustee's Sale is subject to a bankruptcy filing, a payoff, a reinstatement or any other conditions of which the Trustee is not aware that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, this sale may be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Trustee and the Beneficiary shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possessions or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Thomas DiGrazia, aka Thomas Joseph DiGrazia and Ina P. DiGrazia, husband and wife, as Grantor(s) with PHH Mortgage Corporation aka Coldwell Banker Mortgage as the Beneficiary, under the Deed of Trust recorded June 10, 2003, as Instrument No. 289226, in the records of Cassia County, Idaho.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay the amount due under the certain Promissory Note and Deed of Trust, in the amounts called for thereunder as follows:

Monthly payments in the amount of $1,492.29 for the months of February 2009 through and including to the date of sale, together with late charges and monthly payments accruing. The sum owing on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $173,778.07 as principal, plus service charges, attorney's fees, costs of this foreclosure, any and all funds expended by Beneficiary to protect their security interest, and interest accruing at the rate of 5.811% from January 1, 2009, together with delinquent taxes plus penalties and interest to the date of sale.

The Beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

Dated this 28th day of June, 2010.

In the front office of Land Title & Escrow, 211 West 13th St. Burley, ID 83318, on 11/15/2010 at 10:00 am, (recognized local time) for the purpose of foreclosing that certain Deed of Trust recorded 11/09/2001 as Instrument Number 278155, and executed by JULIE M SMITH, AN UNMARRIED WOMAN, as Grantor(s), in favor of MAGIC VALLEY BANK, as Beneficiary, to RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A., the Current Trustee of record, covering the following real property located in Cassia County, state of Idaho: LOT 2 OF THE FIFTH AVENUE SUBDIVISION, CASSIA COUNTY, IDAHO, AS THE SAME IS PLATTED IN THE OFFICIAL PLAT THEREOF, NOW OF RECORD IN THE OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF SAID COUNTY, RECORDED JANUARY 7, 2000 AS INSTRUMENT NO. 266765; RE-RECORDED FEBRUARY 22, 2001 AS INSTRUMENT NO. 273430, RECORDS OF CASSIA COUNTY, IDAHO. The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purpose of compliance with Idaho Code, Section 60-113, the Trustee has been informed that the street address of, 542 CONANT AVENUE, BURLEY, ID 83318 is sometimes associated with said real property. Bidders must be prepared to tender the trustee the full amount of the bid at the sale in the form of cash, or a cashier's check drawn on a state or federally insured savings institution. Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in that certain Deed of Trust. The default for which this sale is to be made is: Failure to pay the monthly payment due 09/01/2008 of principal, interest and impounds and subsequent installments due thereafter; plus late charges, with interest currently accruing at 8.000% per annum; together with all subsequent sums advanced by beneficiary pursuant to the terms and conditions of said Deed of Trust, and any supplemental modifications thereto. The principal balance owing as of this date on said obligation is $12,966.31, plus interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder and in this sale, together with any unpaid and/or accruing real property taxes, and/or assessments, attorneys' fees, Trustees' fees and costs, and any other amount advanced to protect said security, as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust. Therefore, the Beneficiary elects to sell, or cause said trust property to be sold, to satisfy said obligation. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THIS FIRM IS ATTEMPTING TO COLLECT A DEBT AND ANY INFORMATION OBTAINED WILL BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE, AND THAT THE DEBT MAY BE DISPUTED. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a) IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION. DATED: 07/06/2010 Name and Address of the Current Trustee is: RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A. 1800 Tapo Canyon Rd., CA6-914-01-94 SIMI VALLEY, CA 90028-1821 PHONE: (800) 281-8219 RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A. ## I have an opening

We recently hired our online specialist at the Times-News. Julie Vasquez attended our Career Fair and College Expo in April. She spoke with our Human Resources Director and handed in her resume saying that she was interested in a position with the newspaper as she had recently graduated from Idaho State University with a degree in Advertising/Public Relations. Julie interviewed with us about a position with the Times-News. With her natural curiosity, strong work ethic, organizational and communication skills she will be a real asset to the Times-News. The Career Fair and College Expo works!

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1587, an English colony fated to vanish under mysterious circumstances was established on Roanoke Island off North Carolina.

In 1796, Cleveland, Ohio, was founded by General Moses Cleaveland (correct).

In 1916, a bomb went off during a Preparedness Day parade in San Francisco, killing ten people.

In 1933, American aviator Wiley Post completed the first solo flight around the world as he returned to New York's Floyd Bennett Field after traveling for seven days, 18 and 3/4 hours.

In 1937, the Senate rejected President Franklin D. Roosevelt's proposal to add more justices to the Supreme Court.

In 1942, the Nazis began transporting Jews from the Warsaw Ghetto to the Treblinka concentration camp.

In 1943, American forces led by General George S. Patton captured Palermo, Sicily, during World War II.

In 1946, Jewish extremists blew up a wing of the King David Hotel in Jerusalem, killing 90 people.

In 1975, the House of Representatives joined the Senate in voting to restore the American citizenship of Confederate General Robert E. Lee.

In 1995, Susan Smith was convicted by a jury in Union, S.C. of first-degree murder for drowning her two sons. (She was later sentenced to life in prison, and will not be eligible for parole until 2024.)

Ten years ago: President Bill Clinton, in Japan for a Group of Eight summit, addressed U.S. troops on Okinawa, where he said they "need to be good neighbors" with the island's residents.

Five years ago: Jean Charles de Menezes, a Brazilian electrician, was shot to death by London police who'd mistaken him for a terrorist. A labor agreement ended an NHL lockout that canceled the previous hockey season.

One year ago: President Barack Obama told a prime-time press conference that Cambridge, Mass. police had acted "stupidly" in the arrest of prominent black scholar Henry Louis Gates Jr., and that despite racial progress, blacks and Hispanics were still singled out unfairly for arrest. Earlier, the president met at the White House with Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki. # THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"True wit is Nature to advantage dressed, What oft was thought, but ne'er so well expressed."
— Alexander Pope

Today's deal comes in the form of a problem. South is in six spades, West leads the trump 10, and East will follow suit to the first trump. Clearly this contract will never go down if the club finesse succeeds. But how can declarer make this contract even with the club king offside?

The answer is that on careful play the contract will always come home, provided West has the diamond ace in addition to the club king.

South wins the trump in hand and plays the diamond six out of his hand at once. If West rises with the ace, the club jack will later be discarded on dummy's diamond king. So West ducks his ace, and the diamond king wins the trick. Declarer returns to hand in trumps and now throws two low diamonds away on the top hearts. He ruffs the third heart in dummy and exits in diamonds to endplay West. If East holds the diamond ace, the club finesse will be needed.

Note that it would do declarer no good to play a diamond toward the queen at an early stage of the hand. Either West has the diamond ace — in which case he can exit with a diamond safely — or East has the diamond ace. In the latter case East will be able to obtain the lead later on in the hand and exit with a club to force declarer to take the finesse.

ANSWER: When your partner failed to compete to two hearts over two diamonds, he suggested a minimum hand. Although there seem to be a lot of high cards in the deck, the opponents obviously have a decent spade fit, and hearts do not rate to be splitting for your side. Pass, and take your medicine.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old female who has recently come to terms with the fact that I am bisexual. My problem lies in the fact that I am strongly attracted to one of my best friends. I have liked her for several years, and she is a large part of the reason I discovered I was bisexual. I know she is straight and won't ever feel the same about me, but every time I'm around her, my romantic feelings for her start up again.

It has reached the point where I'm considering avoiding her to stop these feelings. None of my close friends are gay, and I don't feel comfortable discussing this with them. Is there any way I can still be friends with her without being so intensely attracted to her?

— ATTRACTED TO MY BEST FRIEND

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ATTRACTED: You can do something about your actions, but not about your feelings. You will probably always be attracted to your friend. You will be less attracted — and better able to handle your feelings — once you have become involved with someone else.

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing "Rodney" for four months. He is very nice, and we get along well. My problem is I am not totally attracted to him because of some dental issues.

Shortly after we started dating he told me he chews tobacco, which has contributed to his yellowing teeth. Because of this I find it hard to kiss him. Rodney has noticed it, but I told him I am not big on kissing — which is really not the case.

How should I approach the subject with Rodney? This issue keeps me from completely falling for him. Please offer me some advice if you can.

— TURNED OFF IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR TURNED OFF: If you truly care about Rodney, confront the subject directly, because if he doesn't do something about his addiction to tobacco, your romance won't last. Tell him you weren't honest about how you feel about kissing and that his breath and yellow teeth have kept you from fully enjoying it.

Most people don't realize how dangerous and addictive chewing tobacco is. Studies show that the amount of nicotine in the bloodstream of "chewers" is twice as great as for smokers. Chewing tobacco is a cause for cancer of the mouth, lip, tongue, cheek and throat, heart disease, tooth decay and receding gums, as well as halitosis (bad breath). Nicotine gum can help Rodney quit and possibly save his life. So speak up — for his sake. And yours.

DEAR ABBY: When I was in college, I dated "Alex." Three months later I found out he had a steady girlfriend, "Jane." Over the next two years Alex continued to cheat on Jane with me because Jane wouldn't have sex with him. I finally told her what had been going on because I was angry, and I ended the relationship with Alex.

Ten years have passed, and I hear they are being married. Do you see anything weird/strange/wrong with that? If a man cheated on me and later proposed marriage, I wouldn't accept because the thought of the other woman would always be on my mind. Would you share your thoughts?

— DUMBFOUNDED IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR DUMBFOUNDED: OK. I think it's time you stopped obsessing about a relationship that ended 10 years ago. It appears Jane has waited a long time for Alex to get serious — and now he has. What happens after they marry will be her problem, not yours. Let it go and concentrate on your own life.
