Fire burns 1,000 acres, damages homes near Auger Falls

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A one-inch cigarette butt possibly did this.

Around 1,000 acres in and along the Snake River Canyon burned Thursday west of the Perrine Bridge, sending smoke and hot ash into the sky and causing the evacuation of neighborhoods on the south side of the rim.

U.S. Bureau of Land Management spokesman Brock Astle said crews expected to contain the Auger Falls Fire around 11 p.m. that night, as they mopped up hot spots around 6 p.m. — nearly three hours after the fire started.

He said officials will watch the weather and monitor changes in the wind, which sent smoke east and later west while the fire burned in the afternoon.

Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall said he believes the fire was started by an individual who threw down a cigarette

“Some fellows were working on private land in that area when the fire started. One of them told me that he was a smoker, and that may have started the fire. He actually tried to put the fire out for a while before it spread.”

“Some fellows were working on private land in that area when the fire started,” McFall said. “One of them told me that he was a smoker, and that may have started the fire. He actually tried to put the fire out for a while before it spread.”

No other agency commented Thursday on a possible cause for the fire. Investigators from the Twin Falls Fire Department, BLM and the Twin Falls and Jerome county sheriff’s offices will work together as the investigation continues.

Renewal of Bush tax cuts could be only temporary

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Many Americans could be hit with a big tax increase in the next two or three years despite President Barack Obama’s repeated promises to shield the middle class from higher rates.

Democrats are hedging about making Obama’s pledge stick for more than a year or two, setting up a major battle on a super-sensitive subject just before the November elections.

With the most sweeping tax cuts in a generation due to expire in January, the Democrats are divided over whether the government can

Fire experts warn of increased grassland fire danger

By Laura Lundquist

HOLLISTER — The conditions are now perfect, and as Thursday proved, all it will take is a spark to send fires storming across the sage of southern Idaho.

After last week’s wildfire that sprinted across Idaho National Laboratory property, U.S. Bureau of Land Management officials are warning people to avoid activities that may start wildfires.

Jon Skinner, a BLM fire mitigation and education specialist, said after two years of few wildfires, fire experts are worried that the public may become complacent. With all the vegetation brought on by the wet spring and two years of previous growth, a lot of fuel awaits that first spark.

The agency is worried about a repeat of the fires of 2007, which burned 700,000 acres in southern Idaho, Skinner said.

Skinner said of the 32 fires in the district last year, more than half were human-caused.

Many are roadside fires caused by people driving or parking on dry grass.

Luna stresses value of innovation in education

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The world’s technology is rapidly changing, and innovation in education is critical to student success.

That was the message that Superintendent of Public

Instruction Tom Luna brought Thursday morning to educators attending the first Idaho Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics Institute (i-STEM) at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on the campus of the College of the Southern Idaho.

The i-STEM event is aimed at improving the ways those disciplines are taught and integrated in school classrooms.

“We’re never going to have the luxury of sitting back and saying, ‘Mission accomplished,” Luna said.

Idaho has made gains, but more work is ahead, he said. He gave examples: improved scores for eighth-grade students in National Assessment of Educational Progress test

Idaho's silent, contrarian genius

One hundred years ago, an 11-year-old boy from Garden Valley sat in the classrooms of the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind, saying nothing. James Castle was a problem in the five years that he spent off and on at the Gooding school. The youngster was deaf and mute, and it seemed to his teachers that he couldn't — or wouldn't — learn.

That was an illusion. Castle grew up to be an artist — and one of the strangest artists in history.

Using household materials, he created astonishing art — especially books. He fashioned pens from sticks, and mixed soot and saliva for ink. Paper was scavenged from cardboard cartons and cigarette packages. His books were bound with string or thread.

Castle wasn't much help on his family's ranch after they removed him from ISDB in 1915; he spent most of his time alone in an ice house. There he created books, furniture and cardboard figures.

After the family moved to Boise, Castle's nephew showed some of Castle's work to art professors in Portland, Ore. They responded positively, and Castle managed to sell some art in the Pacific Northwest before his death in 1977.

Seventeen years later, the Idaho Center for the Book on the campus of Boise State University opened and exhibited 50 of Castle's books. The world took notice, and within a few years Castle's art was shown throughout the United States. Nowadays, his reputation is worldwide.

ICB Director Tom Trusky, filmmaker Jeffrey Wolfe and others took a closer look at Castle's years at ISDB.

They found that in 1910, deaf students were mostly taught by teachers who could hear. Oralism — a teaching technique that focused on speech and discouraged signing — was the dominant pedagogy of the day. Students who didn't — or couldn't — learn were rapped on the knuckles with a ruler.

"James Castle had learned much at his schooling," wrote author Susan Schaller in the magazine Words and Conversations. "Although he didn't know that sound existed, he learned about it and the importance of ears. He learned that he was not considered equal to people with working ears. He learned about speech, and a few words, and that his hands would be hit if he finger-spelled or signed without speech ... Castle didn't strike me as someone who refused to learn. He was talking (in his art), answering many more questions than were being asked."

Sweesy called Buddecke in the afternoon to check on her and within minutes decided to head to her house in the Meander Point subdivision. Unable to get through as police blocked the roads, Sweesy said he grabbed a shovel and cut through a field to reach the area and help however he could. Buddecke rounded up neighbors' dogs for safekeeping.

"This is just a wonderful community to live in," Eldred said as she fought back tears.

Sgt. Scott Bishop of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office said that residents were allowed back into their homes around 5:30 p.m. He also reported that while there were no total losses, some homes sustained damage.

Also burned was much of the city of Twin Falls' brand-new Auger Falls Park. City Parks and Recreation Director Dennis Bowyer said mid-afternoon he'd have to speak with fire officials before knowing the state of the park, which only officially opened in April.

"I'm hoping that people will still be able to go back," he said.

McFall was present on the canyon's north side, stationed along the rim on Auger Falls Road with his deputies and officials with the Jerome Rural Fire District. From behind the Jerome County Club golf course, they kept an eye on the situation in case the hot ash set the north side alight as well.

Agents from the Twin Falls Fire Department, the Bureau of Land Management, the Forest Service and other rural fire agencies engaged the fire with multiple engines, two single-engine air tankers and one helicopter.

Danger

Roadside fires can also be started by parts of trailers, such as chains, dragging on the road.

"A $75 tune-up can go a long way to making sure tires and chains don't spark on the pavement," Skinner said.

The newest trend, Skinner said, is fires caused by people shooting guns. If the bullets are not lead, they can cause sparks when they hit metal parts. Such sparks may have started two fires last week, he said.

"We are getting into dangerous fire conditions," Skinner said. "We want to get out as many messages as we can so people start thinking about the things they do."

Specialist Jesse Bender said people can make their homes safer by thinning trees away from the house and eliminating plant debris. Salmon Tract Rural Fire Chief Rod Davis said his team found more success saving homes with a defensible space.

BLM fire experts and members of the Salmon Tract Rural Fire Department gathered in a field near Hollister to highlight the situation. Tinder-dry grass and twigs snapped underfoot as Brandon Brown, district fire-use specialist, walked to where an area of cheatgrass bordered an area of native bunchgrass.

Invasive cheatgrass adds to the fire danger, Brown said, because it forms an unbroken mat of fuel that burns easier and faster than native grasses, which grow more sparsely. For that reason, the BLM reseeds thousands of acres every year with a native seed mix, Brown said. Cheatgrass usually can't compete with native species.

Brown and other specialists regularly measure moisture and other conditions in plants, the air and the soil to help determine the fire danger. All have dried quickly during the past three weeks of 90-plus temperatures.

BLM Fire Information Officer Brock Astle said the number of fires down during the past few years, but may be unaware that the potential for wildfires is now high.

"It doesn't hit you when you're driving past in your air-conditioned car," Astle said. "But it's a little more obvious when you're out here walking in the grass and hearing it crackle under your feet."

Hazelton teen involved in I-84 rollover

A Hazelton teen suffered only minor injuries after rolling his vehicle four times Wednesday night along Interstate 84.

Jose Ayala-Mendez, 19, was wearing his seat belt, according to an Idaho State Police report. He was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls with minor injuries, though an air ambulance that responded to the crash scene blocked both westbound lanes near milepost 171 for approximately 20 minutes.

The crash occurred after Ayala-Mendez drifted off the north shoulder. He overcorrected and came back across the roadway into the median, where his vehicle began to roll, according to ISP.

Alcohol was a factor in the crash. It remains under investigation by Trooper Chris Pohanka, who was assisted at the scene by Jerome County sheriff's deputies and fire and paramedic crews from Jerome.

Snake River overlook work begins next week

Work on a new Snake River scenic overlook near the Perrine Bridge in Twin Falls will start next week, closing the parking lot and much of the area near the Buzz Langdon Visitor Center through October, the Idaho

Transportation Department announced Thursday.

Crews will install a 43-by-21-foot steel cantilever overlook by cutting out a portion of the rock wall to anchor the structure into the ground. Visitors will be required to stay out of the construction zone until the overlook and landscaping are complete.

Signs will mark a pedestrian and bicycle detour.

"Visitors to the site will enjoy the new overlook when it's complete, but during construction we have to ask everyone to stay out of the construction zone," Resident Engineer Kimbol Allen said. "For the safety of the public and the workers, we can't have people crossing through or disturbing the construction zone."

Crews will also install a new sidewalk on the west side of the new parking lot, improve Americans with Disabilities Act access, reconfigure the parking area and build a fence west of the rock wall.

Work on the $213,000 project by contractor Cannon Builders Inc. of Blackfoot is expected to be completed in late October.

U.S. 93 construction near Richfield to begin Monday

Work on a highway preservation project on U.S. Highway 93 through Richfield is scheduled to start Monday, according to the ITD.

Crews will place an asphalt overlay on Monday and follow that with a chip seal coat designed to improve roadway smoothness and longevity. Work will stretch from mileposts 177 to 183 and is expected to be completed in mid-August.

Traffic will be reduced to one lane and be piloted through the project while crews work. Drivers should watch for flaggers and prepare for delays of as much as 15 minutes.

Gordon Paving Inc. of Twin Falls is the contractor for the $560,000 project.

Filer schools prepare for fall

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — The Filer School Board is wrapping up preparations for the coming school year.

Joe Reams, with Brennan Construction in Pocatello, told the board Wednesday that district construction projects — the new $11 million intermediate school, roof repairs at Hollister Elementary and parking lot paving at the high school and middle school — are ahead of schedule and will be ready when students return to the classroom in September.

"I walked through everything today and it looks really good," he said, adding that he will provide a final update in September.

High-school softball coach Todd Mansfield asked that the board allocate funding to complete work on the junior varsity softball field. Board members in turn tabbed $40,000 that will also be used to improve existing baseball fields.

"I've been at this for some time and at my own expense of time and energy," Mansfield said. "I think by now you know I do what I say I will, and I'm just asking that you reciprocate a little."

The board also approved a flagpole for the northwest corner of the Filer High School football field. The 30-foot pole and a plaque will be placed in memory of graduate Caleb Lammers, who was killed in a 2007 car accident. Funding for the project will be taken from a $530 memorial.

In other action, board officer positions were chosen for the coming year. Zone 5 representative Aaron Williams accepted the position of board chairman and Eric William, the Zone 4 representative, was selected to serve as vice chairman. The board also voted to continue holding its monthly public meetings on the second Wednesday at 7 p.m.

15 deaths in Northwest tied to rare tropical fungus

One case found in Idaho; CDC says risk very low

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — A fungus usually found in the tropics has taken root in the Pacific Northwest and has been blamed in the deaths of 15 people over the last six years, health officials said Thursday.

At least 60 people have been sickened in four states by the fungus, Cryptococcus gattii, which grows on or around trees. Illness occurs months after people breathe in its microscopic spores, and can be treated with anti-fungal medications.

While still considered rare in North America, health officials say they want doctors to know to look for it and patients to be aware of it.

The overall risk to the public is very low, and there's no need for people to avoid going outdoors and exercising, said Julie Harris, an epidemiologist with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The fungal illness began to show up in British Columbia, Canada, in 1999, and may have spread southward, although at least one different strain has been found in the United States.

Scientists don't know why the tropical illness has appeared in the Northwest but not in other northern locations.

Since 2004, there have been 43 cases in Oregon, 15 in Washington, one in California and one in Idaho, the CDC said Thursday.

Of those 60 cases, the outcome is known in 45, and 15 ended in death. The fungus caused nine of the deaths, and was believed to be a factor in the other six, officials reported.

Symptoms include a persistent cough, headache and shortness of breath. Some cases have worsened into a pneumonia- or meningitis-like illnesses.

British Columbia has counted 272 illnesses since the first cases were detected, said Dr. Eleni Galanis, an epidemiologist with the British Columbia Centre for Disease Control. Canadian officials don't have an up-to-date count of deaths, but an earlier analysis suggested a death rate of about 9 percent.

The proportion of U.S. and Canadian cases ending in death may sound alarmingly high, but it's likely others have been infected but weren't diagnosed because they didn't develop serious illness, Harris said.

Boise National Forest plan focuses on restoration

BOISE (AP) — U.S. Forest Service officials have approved a plan for the Boise National Forest intended to restore and maintain habitat for wildlife while still allowing timber harvest.

The plan approved last month formed after meetings with local and state officials, environmentalists and the timber industry, said Boise National Forest supervisor Cecilia Seesholtz.

"The whole idea is to restore and maintain habitat across the forest," Seesholtz said. "This will help us keep a diversity of wildlife, but it also will still allow us to have timber products coming out of the forest."

The plan involves using timber harvest and a managed burning program. The Idaho Statesman reports that the plan makes restoration of low-level elevation ponderosa pine a priority. Loggers will still cut down large trees, but they'll pick trees in a way to leave space among trees and maintain diversity of the kinds of trees in the forest.

Judge hears arguments over Arizona immigration law

By Jacques Billeaud and Paul Davenport
Associated Press writers

PHOENIX — The Arizona immigration law came under new legal scrutiny in a packed courtroom Thursday as a federal judge considered whether the crackdown should take effect next week amid a flurry of legal challenges.

Judge Susan Bolton did not issue a ruling after two court hearings stemming from lawsuits brought against the law, which has reignited the national immigration debate.

The hearings drew considerable interest as Republican Gov. Jan Brewer and the Justice Department's top lawyer in Arizona both attended, along with dozens of spectators.

Seven opponents of the law were arrested after they sat in the middle of a busy thoroughfare outside the courthouse and unfurled a massive banner that said "We will not comply!"

Bolton has been asked to block the law from taking effect as she hears several lawsuits that question the constitutionality of the measure.

Opponents say the law will lead to racial profiling and trample on the rights of the hundreds of thousands of illegal immigrants in Arizona.

Supporters say the law is a necessary response to combat the litany of problems brought on by illegal immigration and the federal government's inability to secure the border.

Bolton, an appointee of former President Bill Clinton, repeatedly questioned Justice Department attorney Edwin Kneedler to explain how specific provisions of the law intruded on federal authority as he had argued.

"Why can't Arizona be as inhospitable as they wish to people who have entered the United States illegally?" she said.

Without prodding from attorneys, the judge also pointed out to lawyers the everyday realities of Arizona's immigration woes, such as signs that the federal government erected in a wilderness area south of Jorge Mendez of Phoenix, wearing a papier-mache mask and binoculars to satirize Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio, joins dozens of others to protest the SB1070 Arizona immigration law Thursday in front of U.S. District Court in Phoenix.

Phoenix that warns visitors about drug and immigrant traffickers passing through public lands.

She also noted the immigrant smuggling stash houses that are a fixture on the news in Arizona. "You can barely go a day without a location being found in Phoenix where there are numerous people being harbored," Bolton said.

Kneedler said the law's requirements that law enforcement check on people's immigration status set a mandatory policy that goes beyond what the federal government requires and would burden the federal agency that responds to immigration-status inquiries.

Attorney John Bouma, who represents Brewer, said the federal government wants to keep its authority while turning a blind eye to illegal immigrants.

"You can't catch them if you don't know about them. They don't want to know about them," he said.

Brewer said she's confident the state will prevail, adding that Bolton "certainly understands the dangers that Arizonans face in regards to harboring illegals."

During the morning hearing, Bolton told lawyers for the American Civil Liberties Union that she's required to consider blocking only parts of the law, not the entire statute as they had requested.

ACLU attorney Omar Jadwat said the law's provisions are supposed to work together to achieve a goal of prodding illegal immigrants to leave the state. He called it unconstitutional and dangerous.

Most of the controversy about the law centers on provisions related to stops and arrests of people, new crimes related to illegal immigrants, and a requirement that immigrants carry and produce their immigration papers.

Man sentenced to 20 years in Boise stabbing
BOISE — A 32-year-old Boise man who pleaded guilty to stabbing a man to death outside a strip bar last year has been sentenced to at least eight years in prison. Tariq McWilliams was sentenced to 20 years in prison Thursday, but 4th District Judge Deborah Bail said he could request parole after eight. McWilliams pleaded guilty in April to voluntary manslaughter and using a weapon in the commission of a felony in a plea agreement with Ada County prosecutors. He was initially charged with second-degree murder for the Sept. 24 death of 30-year-old Jason R. Tipton.

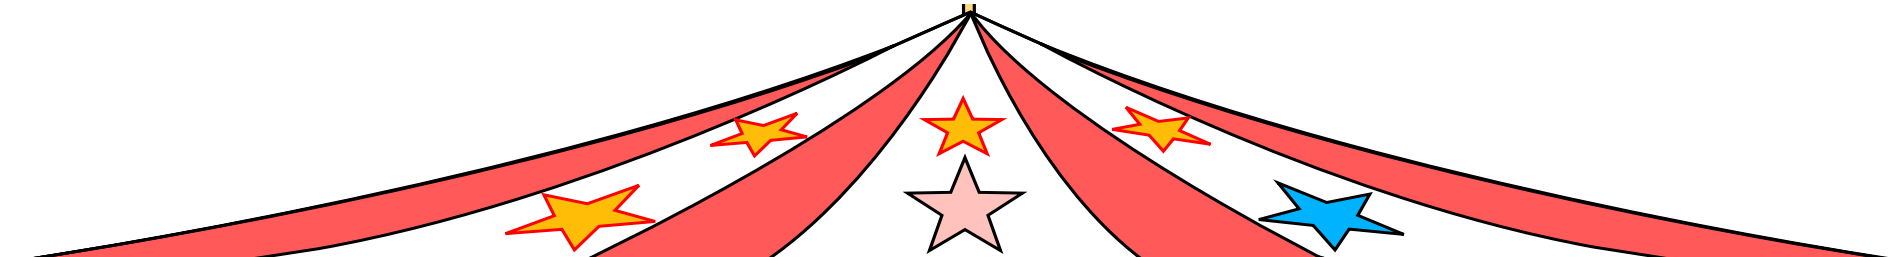

Bail said McWilliams was intoxicated on methamphetamine and alcohol when he killed Tipton. Court testimony indicated that McWilliams believed Tipton was trying to break into his car.
Lewiston bar owner fined for violating copyrights
LEWISTON — A federal judge has ordered the owner of three northern Idaho bars to pay $30,000 to Broadcast Music Inc. for playing 10 songs without permission during performances in 2008. U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill said in an order issued Tuesday that the bars owned by Jay B. Starnes “willfully infringed” on the copyright of the songwriters.

Winmill prohibited Starnes from playing more than 6.5 million songs licensed by BMI at the three bars, called the Sport Cellar, Club 301 and The Garden, operated under TTJ's Inc. BMI filed the lawsuit last year alleging Starnes and the bars hadn't acquired licenses to play the songs publicly. But Starnes told The Associated Press on Thursday that he has licenses to play the music, and the allegations stem from others who rent his facilities and hire their own bands to perform. “I'm not the guy hiring the bands, nor am I paying the bands,” Starnes said. “It's a private party.” He said he's unsure what his next move will be as he's been unable to contact his attorney.

‘Barefoot Bandit’ doesn’t seek bail, stays jailed
SEATTLE — The teenager accused in a two-year string of thefts from Washington state to the Caribbean made a brief court appearance Thursday in the state where his escapades began, and opted not to seek bail. Earlier in the day, federal prosecutors said Colton Harris-Moore, known as the “Barefoot Bandit,” posed “an extreme risk of flight” and should remain jailed until his trial. In a court appearance that lasted just eight minutes, Harris-Moore did not contest his detention and waived his right to a preliminary hearing. His next court appearance will likely come after a grand jury indictment. Harris-Moore wore a tan jail-issued shirt and pants, appeared somber, and spoke quietly with his attorney during the hearing. He answered “Yes” several times when the judge asked him if he understood the charge against him. He faces one federal charge of interstate transportation of a stolen property in the theft last year of a plane from Idaho’s panhandle that crashed north of Seattle. He faces a maximum 10-year sentence in prison if convicted. The U.S. attorney’s office said he also is the primary suspect in at least 80 crimes committed since he escaped from a group home near Seattle in April 2008.

“Because of this law, the American people will never be asked again to foot the bill for Wall Street's mistakes.”

Time to post governments' checkbooks on the Internet

It's budget season at city hall and at the county courthouse: Do you know where your tax dollars are going?

You do if you live in Twin Falls, Jerome, Burley or Hailey. South-central Idaho's four largest cities put their budgets or other financial information on their websites.

But none of the region's eight counties put current budget information online.

That's a disservice to the taxpayers, and flies in the face of elected officials' oft-stated desire to get the public more involved in the budget-making process.

On the city of Twin Falls' website, for example, you can find out how much the city plans to spend on everything from office supplies to gasoline. You can learn that the number of adults who play softball on city-owned diamonds increased 28 percent from 2008 to 2009. Or that the police department budgets about $270,000 a year on overtime.

The city of Hailey's website gives you detailed information on the city's local option tax and how the proceeds are spent. You can discover that Hailey collected $316,699 less in water hook-up fees than it had anticipated. Or that the city owns $19.9 million in capital assets.

What difference does that make?

Just this: Government budget-making is a complicated process with vast consequences. Although budget hearings are advertised in the newspaper and on most local governments' website, 99 percent of citizens don't get involved — most of them because they don't know how.

It's a different story on a local government's website, where it's clear exactly just how much the city, county or school district is spending — and in many cases what it wants to spend. If you can read your own bank statement, you can figure out the essentials of government finance.

In the past two years, the Legislature has considered bills that would require the state and all school districts with more than 300 students to post their financial information online. Neither piece of legislation passed, but not because lawmakers didn't think it was a good idea; they just didn't want to spend the money to do it during a recession.

But as the recession wanes, there's a good chance those proposals will be revisited — or that state Controller Donna Jones will unilaterally put Idaho's checkbook on the Internet.

South-central Idaho's counties and school districts — and more of its cities — should do the same.

Our beaker is starting to boil

David Breashears is one of America's legendary mountain climbers, a man who has climbed Mount Everest five times and led the Everest IMAX film team in 1996.

These days, Breashears is still climbing the Himalayas, but he is lugging more than pitons and ice axes. He's also carrying special cameras to document stunning declines in glaciers on the roof of the world.

Nicholas Kristof

Breashears first reached the top of Everest in 1983, and in many subsequent trips to the region he noticed the topography changing, the glaciers shrinking. So he dug out archive photos from early Himalayan expeditions, and then journeyed across ridges and crevasses to photograph from the exact same spots.

The pairs of matched photographs, old and new, are staggering. Time and again, the same glaciers have shrunk drastically in every direction, often losing hundreds of feet in height.

"I was just incredulous," he told me. "We took measurements with laser rangefinders to measure the loss of height of the glaciers. The drop was often the equivalent of a 35- or 40-story building."

One 1921 photo by George Mallory, the famous mountaineer who died near the summit of Everest three years later, shows the Main Rongbuk Glacier. Breashears located the very spot from which Mallory had snapped that photo and took another — only it is a different scene, because the glacier has lost 330 feet of vertical ice.

Some research in social psychology suggests that our brains are not well adapted to protect ourselves from gradually encroaching harms. We evolved to be wary of saber-toothed tigers and blizzards, but not of climate change — and maybe that's also why we in the news media tend to cover weather but not climate. The upshot is that we're horrifyingly nonchalant at the prospect that rising carbon emissions may devastate our favorite planet.

“A glacier is a giant part of the alpine landscape, something we always saw as immortal. But now this glacier is dying before our eyes.”

— Orville Schell, who runs China programs at the Asia Society

NASA says that the January-through-June period this year was the hottest globally since measurements began in 1880. The Web site ClimateProgress.org, which calls for more action on climate change, suggests that 2010 is likely to be the warmest year on record. Likewise, the Global Snow Lab at Rutgers University says that the months of May and June had the lowest snow cover in the Northern Hemisphere since the lab began satellite observations in 1967.

So signs of danger abound, but like the proverbial slow-boiling frog, we seem unable to rouse ourselves.

From our own beaker, we've watched with glazed eyes as glaciers have retreated worldwide.

Glacier National Park now has only about 25 glaciers, compared with around 150 a century ago. In the Himalayas, the shrinkage seems to be accelerating, with Chinese scientific measurements suggesting that some glaciers are now losing up to 26 feet in height per year.

Orville Schell, who runs China programs at the Asia Society, described passing a series of pagodas as he approached the Mingyong Glacier on the Tibetan plateau. The pagodas were viewing platforms, and had to be rebuilt as the glacier retreated: this monumental, almost eternal force of nature seemed mortally wounded.

"A glacier is a giant part of the alpine landscape, something we always saw as immortal," Schell said. "But now this glacier is dying before our eyes."

An Indian glaciologist, Syed Iqbal Hasnain, now at the Stimson Center in Washington, told me that most Himalayan glaciers are in retreat for three reasons. First is the overall warming tied to carbon emissions. Second, rain and snow patterns are changing, so that less new snow is added to replace what melts. Third, pollution from trucks and smoke covers glaciers with carbon soot so that their surfaces become darker and less reflective — causing them to melt more quickly.

The retreat of the glaciers threatens agriculture downstream. A study published last month in Science magazine indicated that glacier melt is essential for the Indus and Brahmaputra rivers, while less important a component of the Ganges, Yellow and Yangtze rivers. The potential disappearance of the glaciers, the report said, is "threatening the food security of an estimated 60 million people" in the Indus and Brahmaputra basins.

We Americans have been galvanized by the oil spill on our Gulf Coast, because we see tar balls and dead sea birds as visceral reminders of our hubris in deep sea drilling. The melting glaciers should be a similar warning of our hubris — and of the consequences that the Earth will face for centuries unless we address carbon emissions today.

Cultural divide: Getting at the roots of white anxiety

In March of 2000, Pat Buchanan came to speak at Harvard University's Institute of Politics. Harvard being Harvard, the audience hissed and sneered and made wisecracks. Buchanan being Buchanan, he gave as good as he got. While the assembled Ivy Leaguers accused him of homophobia and racism and anti-Semitism, he accused Harvard of discriminating against white Christians.

A decade later, the note of white grievance that Buchanan struck that night is part of the conservative melody. You can hear it when Glenn Beck accuses Barack Obama of racism, or when Rush Limbaugh casts liberal policies as an exercise in "reparations." It was sounded last year during the backlash against Sonia Sotomayor's suggestion that a "wise Latina" jurist might have advantages over a white male judge, and again last week when conservatives attacked the Justice

Ross Douthat

Department for supposedly going easy on members of the New Black Panther Party accused of voter intimidation.

To liberals, these grievances seem at once noxious and ridiculous. But to understand the country's present polarization, it's worth recognizing what Pat Buchanan got right.

Last year, two Princeton sociologists, Thomas Espenshade and Alexandria Walton Radford, published a book-length study of admissions and affirmative action at eight highly selective colleges and universities. Unsurprisingly, they found that the admissions process seemed to favor black and Hispanic applicants, while whites and Asians needed higher grades and SAT scores to get in. But what was striking, as Russell K. Nieli pointed out last week on the conservative website Minding the Campus, was which whites were most disadvantaged by the process: the downscale, the rural and the working-class.

This was particularly pronounced among the private colleges in the study. For minority applicants, the lower a family's socioeconomic position, the more likely the student was to be admitted. For whites, though, it was the reverse.

This may be a money-saving tactic. In a footnote, Espenshade and Radford suggest that these institutions, conscious of their mandate to be multiethnic, may reserve their financial aid dollars "for students who will help them look good on their numbers of minority students," leaving little room to admit financially strapped whites.

But cultural biases seem to be at work as well. Nieli highlights one of the study's more remarkable findings: while most extracurricular activities increase your odds of admission to an elite school, holding a leadership role or winning awards in organizations like high school ROTC, 4-H clubs and Future Farmers of America actually works against your chances. Consciously or unconsciously, the gatekeepers of elite education seem to incline against candidates who seem too stereotypically rural or right-wing or "Red America."

This provides statistical confirmation for what alumni of highly selective universities already know. The most underrepresented groups on elite campuses often aren't racial minorities; they're working-class whites (and white Christians in particular) from conservative states and regions. Inevitably, the same underrepresentation persists in the elite professional ranks these campuses feed into: in law and philanthropy, finance and academia, the media and the arts.

This breeds paranoia, among elite and non-elites alike. Among the white working class, increasingly the most reliable Republican constituency, alienation from the American meritocracy fuels the kind of racially tinged conspiracy theories that Beck and others have exploited — that Barack Obama is a foreign-born Marxist hand-picked by a shadowy liberal cabal, that a Wall Street-Washington axis wants to flood the country with third world immigrants, and so forth.

Among the highly educated and liberal, meanwhile, the lack of contact with rural, working-class America generates all sorts of wild anxieties about what's being plotted in the heartland. In the Bush years, liberals fretted about a looming evangelical theocracy. In the age of the Tea Parties, they see crypto-Klansmen and budding Timothy McVeighs everywhere they look.

This cultural divide has been widening for years, and bridging it is beyond any institution's power. But it's a problem admissions officers at top-tier colleges might want to keep in mind when they're assembling their freshman classes.

If such universities are trying to create an elite as diverse as the nation it inhabits, they should remember that there's more to diversity than skin color — and that both their school and their country might be better off if they admitted a few more ROTC cadets, and a few more aspiring farmers.

The world is changing so much that the state’s future

The country has now moved from the industrial age into the information age, Luna said. It’s a world where technology and information move so swift-

“That’s the world that they live in and we need to embrace it,” Luna said.

For the future, Idaho is considering adopting a common core of standards for students aimed at boosting academic expectations. The measure, which other states are also pursuing, is a voluntary effort that would require approval from the State Board of Education and the Legislature.

But Luna stressed that he didn’t want any new stan-

Tax cuts

afford to make any of them permanent — especially with voters increasingly upset over the fast-rising federal budget deficit.

Party lines are clear on part of the issue: Most Republicans want to permanently extend all the tax cuts enacted during George W. Bush’s presidency, nearly $3 trillion worth over the next decade. Democratic leaders want to let the cuts for the wealthiest Americans expire.

The Democrats want to extend them for everyone else, but perhaps only temporarily, out of concern for the rising red ink. That’s where Democratic lawmakers are struggling to find agreement.

“There are various options — permanent, two years, one year — and I think a decision on that should be made expeditiously,” says Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee. “It’s under active consideration,” he said in an interview.

Passing only a temporary extension would open majority Democrats to claims they are planning middle-class tax hikes in the future — after the extension expires. Making any of the tax cuts permanent could increase complaints about a national debt that already exceeds $13 trillion.

Republican leaders have opposed much smaller spending bills that would add to the national debt — most recently a $34 billion extension of unemployment benefits, approved by Congress on Thursday. But they endorse more federal borrowing to make all the tax cuts permanent.

The tax cuts were enacted in 2001 and 2003 after Bush made them the centerpiece of his election campaign. They provided help for rich and poor alike, reducing the lowest marginal rates as well as the top ones and several in between. They provided a wide range of income tax breaks for education, families with children and married couples.

Taxes on capital gains and dividends were reduced, while the federal estate tax was gradually repealed, though only for this year.

Obama wants to make the tax cuts permanent for middle- and lower-income taxpayers, allowing the top rates to increase next year for individuals making more than $200,000 and couples making more than $250,000.

Obama’s plan would cost $2.5 trillion over the next decade, including the cost of an annual fix that spares the middle class from being hit with the Alternative

“If you want a jobs bill, the fastest way to create jobs would be to extend the tax cuts. One of the reasons people aren’t being hired is there’s so much uncertainty.”

— Sen. Chuck Grassley of Iowa, the top Republican on the Senate Finance Committee

Minimum — a hit of about $3,700 a year.

It would cost $2.9 trillion over the next decade to extend all the tax cuts, including AMT relief, according to estimates from the Tax Policy Center, a Washington think tank.

House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer, D-Md., first raised the possibility of a temporary extension during a speech in June about the budget deficit. In the Senate, Finance Committee Chairman Max Baucus, D-Mont., favors a permanent extension of the middle-class tax cuts, but the issue is not settled.

Finance Committee Democrats circulated a proposal Thursday that would let tax cuts for the wealthy expire next year while permanently extending the middle-class tax cuts. It would patch the AMT for two years and extend the estate tax for two years with a top rate of 45 percent. The cost: $1.55 trillion over the next decade.

Committee members met behind closed doors for more than an hour Thursday to discuss the tax cuts. Afterward, Baucus said no decisions had been made.

Some rank-and-file Democrats are arguing to extend all the tax cuts, including those for high earners, for a year or two until the economy recovers. But House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., said Thursday she won’t consider extending the tax cuts for the wealthy.

The debate is playing out as lawmakers move toward an election that will determine whether Democrats keep their majorities in the House and Senate.

Democratic leaders believe they have a winning message of fiscal responsibility while making the rich pay more after years of relative prosperity. GOP lawmakers say it’s a familiar debate: Democrats favor tax increases while Republicans oppose them.

“I think we’re ready to do battle on that issue,” Levin said.

Rep. Dave Camp of Michigan, the top Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, said, “We should not allow the Democrats’ 2011 tax hikes to take effect.”

Republicans say any tax increases — even those affecting only high-income taxpayers — would hit small business owners struggling to create jobs in a down economy.

Only 3 percent of taxpayers who report business income on their individual tax returns would face a tax increase under Obama’s plan. Those taxpayers, however, account for half the business income reported on individual returns, according to the nonpartisan Joint Committee on Taxation.

“If you want a jobs bill, the fastest way to create jobs would be to extend the tax cuts,” Sen. Chuck Grassley of Iowa, the top Republican on the Senate Finance Committee, said in an interview. “One of the reasons people aren’t being hired is there’s so much uncertainty.”

Some Democrats like the idea of forcing Republicans to vote on a bill that would extend tax cuts for middle- and low-income families while leaving the tax rates to increase for high earners.

GOP lawmakers say they will try to amend the bills to extend all the tax cuts. But if they are unsuccessful, would Republicans vote against tax cuts for the middle class?

your question.”

Camp said it would be difficult to block a bill extending middle-class tax cuts, even if it doesn’t stop tax rates from increasing for high earners.

“I’ll probably vote for it myself,” Camp said.

Injured climbers are helped from a rescue helicopter Wednesday in Grand Teton National Park near Jackson, Wyo. Seventeen climbers in three separate parties on the Grand Teton required assistance after a thunderstorm and lightning struck the area Wednesday morning.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Rescue workers on Thursday found the body of a missing climber who fell from a cliff when a thunderstorm struck his climbing party on an exposed mountainside in Grand Teton National Park.

Searchers using a helicopter found the body of 21-year-old Brandon Oldenkamp, of Sanborn, Iowa, in an area off the north-west face of Grand Teton mountain, park officials said. Rescue workers recovered his body in the early afternoon and brought it to the Teton County coroner, a park spokeswoman said.

Oldenkamp, who was climbing with six other people, fell about 2,000 feet during the midday storm Wednesday, according to park officials. Authorities don't know whether he died from a lightning strike or the fall.

"His climbing party simply reported to us that when the lightning hit, they looked back and saw him falling away and out of sight," park spokeswoman Jackie Skaggs said. "We'll be able to analyze his climbing harness and rope and come up with a possible reason for his fall, but at this point, our understanding was it was related to the storm and not related to anything Mr.

Oldenkamp had done."

A severe thunderstorm moved across the Teton Range on Wednesday, unleashing multiple lightning strikes on the 13,770-foot Grand Teton mountain. Three separate climbing parties at elevations above 13,000 feet called for help.

The 16 surviving climbers suffered moderate or severe injuries from indirect electrical charges radiating from the lightning, according to park officials. The injuries included burns and varying levels of neurological problems such as numbness.

Rangers reached seven of the climbers by climbing to them and then hooked them to cables so they could be flown to an aid station at an elevation of 11,600 feet, Skaggs said.

Two of the climbers were able to descend to the station on their own, and the remaining climbers were reached by professional guides, who escorted them down to the aid station, Skaggs said.

Skaggs said 83 people participated in the rescue, making it one of the largest missions conducted by the park's staff.

Oldenkamp was a student at Dordt College in Sioux Center, Iowa, where he would have been a senior this fall, according to a tribute posted on the college's website Thursday.

He was an accounting major and played for the Dordt basketball team, where he was twice a Great Plains Athletic Conference honorable mention honoree.

"The loss of a vigorous young man in the midst of a joy-filled excursion is a tragedy that stuns our whole campus," Dordt College President Carl E. Zylstra said in a written statement. "Brandon was an integral part of our campus, whether in the classroom, on the basketball court, or as part of our summer maintenance team."

All three climbing parties trapped by Wednesday's storm were private groups that were not climbing with professional guides that lead trips in the park, Skaggs said.

The routes up Grand Teton are challenging and technical climbs that require ropes and climbing skills, said Paul Horton, a manager and former climbing guide at Jackson Hole Mountain Guides.

The best thing to do when a storm with lightning hits is to try to descend, but that can be a slow process on difficult terrain, said Horton, who didn't know the victims.

Crews continue to fight 525-acre Yellowstone fire

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — About 170 firefighters are making slow progress in trying to contain a 525-acre wildfire burning in the backcountry near the center of Yellowstone National Park.

Containment increased slightly to 25 percent on Thursday morning. Fire crews were focusing on building control lines around the west and southern flanks of the fire. The weather is expected to be a bit cooler and more humid, which will help in the firefighting effort.

Officials don't know yet how the fire started and no trails or campsites are threatened.

Ameristar to offer medical benefits to part-time workers

Casino operator will pay half of workers' premiums

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Ameristar Casinos, Inc. said Thursday it will begin subsidizing medical coverage for part-time employees after researching methods for reducing part-time employee turnover. The company, which owns and operates Cactus Petes Resort Casino and the Horseshu Hotel & Casino in Jackpot, Nev., will pay one-half of the premiums for part-time employees working less than 30 hours per week and their dependents. "We recognize the importance of medical insurance for our team members and their families," Gordon R. Kanofsky, Ameristar's chief executive officer, said in a written statement. "This is another way we can show team members we appreciate their commitment to delivering outstanding service to our guests." Ameristar hosted focus groups with part-time employees to gauge how effective the program will be, officials said. Employee feedback led to Ameristar's decision to make the care plan available to all part-time team members. Kris Ann Brown, public relations manager for Cactus Petes Resort Casino, confirmed that part-time employees at its properties in Jackpot, Nev., will be eligible for the program.

Ameristar selected CIGNA company, which administers the health benefits plan for Ameristar's full-time employees and is also the insurance carrier for Ameristar's life, accident and disability coverage. "They have one of the largest national networks of physicians, hospitals and other healthcare providers," said Cynthia Mercer, Ameristar's Chief Human Resources Officer. "We are pleased to add this to the other benefits currently offered to our valuable part-time team members: paid time off, educational assistance, our 401(k) plan and the employee assistance program." She said coverage will begin Sept. 1.

Gas powered or hybrid at the SAME PRICE

A new Lincoln MKZ Hybrid is unveiled at the New York International Auto Show in New York. Ford Motor Co. will soon have a first in the U.S. auto market: a hybrid sedan that costs the same as the gas-powered version.

Ford matches prices on two styles of Lincoln sedan

By Dee-Ann Durbin
Associated Press writer

DEARBORN, Mich. — For the first time, an American automaker plans to sell a hybrid car for the same, lower price as its gas-powered counterpart, removing at least one obstacle for drivers who want a greener ride. At a little more than $35,000, the 2011 Lincoln MKZ sedan won't be cheap, but the decision by Ford to match the prices of the two styles could lead competitors to follow suit with future models. The hybrid MKZ, debuting this fall and running on both gas and electric power, will be a bargain after factoring in savings at the pump. It gets more than double the mileage of the traditional version in city driving. While automakers won't reveal what they spend to install a hybrid system in a car, the final product usually costs several thousand dollars more than a gas-powered version of the same car. The Lexus HS 250h, the MKZ's closest competitor, costs about $2,500 more than the Lexus IS, a similar, small, gas-powered sedan. Ford charges $8,840 more for the hybrid version of its Ford Escape SUV. The MKZ can still make money even if Lincoln doesn't charge more for the hybrid, said Erich Merkle, president of the consulting company Autoconomy.com. Luxury cars are sold at a significant premium, he said, ensuring a profit for Ford.

Lincoln can also borrow the hybrid system from the Ford Fusion, its corporate twin, and save on development costs. "Conventional wisdom is that the hybrid should be priced higher, but there's not really anything to say that a hybrid has to command a higher price," Merkle said. Besides, Ford had to keep the price down, said Jessica Caldwell, an analyst for Edmunds.com. If it had sold for more than $40,000, it would have faced tougher competition from luxury cars like the Mercedes E-Class or the Audi A6, she said. "It's going to take moves like this one to break into the luxury market," she said. Other automakers may not try to match Lincoln's move if it is limited to the MKZ, but they will have to take notice if Lincoln uses the same strategy with future hybrid models, said Aaron Bragman, an analyst with IHS Automotive. John Felice, Lincoln's marketing manager, said pricing strategy is an opportunity to get buyers interested in the Lincoln brand. Even after a complete revamp of its cars in the past few years, Lincoln still lags behind other luxury brands. Lincoln sales were up 7.5 percent in the first six months of this year, compared with 17 percent industrywide. Lincoln is also trying to make up for the sales it is losing by phasing out its Mercury brand, which includes two hybrids.

U.S. Chamber of Commerce puts up big fight against Obama

By Dan Eggen and Michael D. Shear
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Over the past year, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce has spent nearly $3 million a week in opposition to President Barack Obama's major agenda items, breaking all previous lobbying records and placing a political bet on the Republican Party. But so far, it's not clear how well the gamble has paid off. The Chamber's formidable lobbying prowess — about $150 million spent since Obama took office — did not stop passage of the administration's two signature achievements: the health-care overhaul and the Wall Street reform bill the president signed into law Wednesday. The nation's largest business group has lost battles over, among other things, student-loan legislation, credit-card reforms and a landmark measure that expand workers' rights to sue for equal pay. The business lobby, which vows to spend $75 million or more on November's midterm election cycle, also has struggled to pick winners in this year's primaries. More than half a dozen Chamber-backed GOP candidates have gone down to defeat. But the Chamber also has had success in blocking

GM to pay $3.5B for auto financing company

DETROIT — General Motors Co. will buy AmeriCredit Corp. for $3.5 billion, a deal that allows the automaker to expand loans to customers with poor credit and offer more leases, key areas where GM must grow to accelerate its car sales. But the acquisition of the independent auto financing company also means that GM, which is 61 percent owned by the U.S. government, is getting back into the business of making risky loans. GM said it advised the U.S. Treasury Department of the acquisition, although government approval was not required. GM executives have said for months that they were missing sales opportunities due to lack of credit for lease deals and financing for subprime buyers, those with credit scores below 620 on a 300-to-850-means that GM, which is 61 percent owned by the

New entrepreneurs can keep startup costs down

Starting a business can be expensive, as people find when they become entrepreneurs after losing their jobs. But many of these brand-new company owners have also found ways to keep those costs down. The biggest money saver is working out of your home. Asking friends and family to refer good but low-cost help, from accountants to graphic artists to lawyers, is another way. Keeping startup costs down is essential when a business is young and money isn't yet flowing in. But always watching your expenses and being sure they don't get out of hand is a good way to help any company weather the downturns. "We didn't have a choice" but to keep costs low, said Michael Volpatt, co-owner of the public relations firm Larkin/Volpatt Communications. "What I've learned in the last 10 years is that financial stability is about sustainability." And that, Volpatt said, means making sure a business isn't ever undermined by costs. Here's a look at ways that new entrepreneurs can keep their startup costs down:

ECONOMIC INDICATORS MIXED

WASHINGTON – A flurry of strong earnings reports renewed Wall Street's optimism in the economic recovery, even as new data Thursday showed homes sales sinking and claims for unemployment benefits rising.

Sales of previously occupied homes fell 5.1 percent in June to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 5.37 million, the National Association of Realtors said.

Meanwhile, new claims for unemployment insurance jumped by 37,000 to a seasonally adjusted 464,000, the Labor Department said.

Separately, the Conference board, a private research group, said its gauge of future economic activity dropped in June. It was the second decline in three months.

BERNANKE URGES MORE STIMULUS

WASHINGTON – Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke told Congress Thursday that the fragile economy needs government stimulus spending to strengthen the recovery and help reduce unemployment.

Testifying before the House Financial Services Committee, Bernanke urged lawmakers to come up with a credible plan to reduce the government's record-high budget deficits in the long run.

But he said they shouldn't move now to slash spending or boost taxes in the near future.

other pieces of Democratic legislation or, in the case of health-care reform and financial regulation, shaping the final bills to the group's liking.

Thomas Collamore, the Chamber's senior vice president of communications, highlighted the group's efforts against a pro-union "card check" bill, cap-and-trade climate legislation and a proposed public-insurance option.

"The Chamber's playing a critical role as the leading advocate for the business community in Washington," he said in a statement.

In addition to victories on union and environmental legislation, the Chamber has helped stall White House-backed legislation in the Senate that would require greater disclosure of political spending by corporations.

"They have in fact sought to defend and act from the principles which they believe in," said Dirk Van Dongen, president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors and a longtime GOP lobbyist. "I think that's gutsy – win, lose or draw. ... My gosh, we are not here to wind up in the Rose Garden as trees and shrubs for signing ceremonies of

Obama signs extension of emergency jobless benefits

By Lori Montgomery
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Obama on Thursday signed a six-month extension of emergency jobless benefits for the long-term unemployed, hours after the House approved the measure on a vote of 272-152.

The bill will revive a program that provides income support to those who have exhausted state benefits, restoring aid to nearly 3 million people who have seen their checks cut off since the program expired June 2. It would provide a total of up to 99 weeks of support, including the state aid. Advocates for the unemployed said checks in some states are likely to go out quickly; in others, people can expect a delay of several weeks.

With unemployment at 9.5 percent, both parties agreed that aid should be extended to people who have lost their jobs. But until the Senate passed it on Wednesday, the legislation was mired for months in an increasingly bitter election-year battle over whether the government should add to an already bloated national debt to bolster the sluggish economic recovery.

Republicans said no, saying that the nation should pay for the $34 billion extension with unexpended funds from last year's economic stimulus package.

"I haven't heard anybody say we shouldn't be extending unemployment benefits. The difference is one side wants to borrow 34 cents on the dollar, mainly from the Chinese, and send the bill to our children and our grandchildren," said Rep. Jeb Hensarling, R-Texas

Democrats argued that emergency benefits have never been paid for — even during the Reagan administration — and accused Republicans of trying to undermine public faith in the Obama administration.

"They'll say it's because of the deficit. But in reality, they're simply trying to make this president fail at any cost," said Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., who accused the GOP of trying to "infect" voters with "fiscal fear."

"The Republican leadership in Congress has decided that the way to get the White House back is by denying unemployment benefits to people who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own and show them that this government doesn't work," he said.

The extension was first introduced in a nearly $200 billion package of a variety of other economic measures sought by the Obama administration, including fresh aid to state governments and extended health insurance subsidies for the unemployed.

Republicans blasted the spending plan, and conservative Democrats revolted, demanding that the package be scaled back.

House panel: Rangel broke ethics rules

By Carol D. Leonnig and Paul Kane
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A House ethics subcommittee announced Thursday that it found that Rep. Charles Rangel violated congressional ethics rules and that it will prepare for a trial, probably beginning in September. The panel is expected to make the details of his alleged violations public next Thursday.

Rangel, D-N.Y., has been under the House ethics committee's microscope since early 2008 after it was reported that he may have used his House position to benefit his financial interests. Two of the most serious inquiries have focused on Rangel's failure to declare $239,000 to $831,000 in assets on his disclosure forms, and on his effort to raise money for a private center named after him at City College of New York using his congressional letterhead.

In March, Rangel reluctantly stepped down as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee — a week after the ethics panel ruled in a separate case that he had broken congressional gift rules by accepting trips to conferences in the Caribbean that were financed by corporate interests.

The panel said that, at a minimum, Rangel's staff knew about the corporate backing for the 2007 and 2008 trips — and that the congressman was therefore responsible.

Rangel, 80, said he welcomed the opportunity to respond to the allegations. "At long last, sunshine has pierced through this cloud that has been over my head for more than two years," he said when asked about the panel's decision.

Sources familiar with the case said that Rangel could have avoided this showdown by accepting the subcommittee's findings. As required by House rules, he was briefed in recent weeks on the allegations against him, and he rejected them.

Key ships ordered to leave spill site

ON THE GULF OF MEXICO (AP) — Key ships stationed over BP's crippled well in the Gulf of Mexico were ordered to evacuate Thursday ahead of Tropical Storm Bonnie, but engineers have grown so confident in the leaky cap fixed to well head that they will leave it closed while they are gone.

Tropical Storm Bonnie, which blossomed over the Bahamas and was to enter the Gulf of Mexico by the weekend, could delay by another 12 days the push to plug the broken well for good using mud and cement, retired Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen and BP officials conceded. Even if it's not a direct hit, the rough weather will push back efforts to kill the well by at least a week.

"While this is not a hurricane, it's a storm that will have probably some significant impacts, we're taking appropriate cautions," Allen said in Mobile, Ala.

Allen issued the order Thursday night to begin moving dozens of vessels from the spill site, including the rig that's drilling the relief tunnel engineers will use to permanently throttle the free-flowing crude near the bottom of the well. Some vessels could stay on site, he said.

"While these actions may delay the effort to kill the well for several days, the safety of the individuals at the well site is our highest concern," he said in a statement.

A week of steady measurements through cameras and other devices convinced Allen they don't need to open vents to relieve pressure on the cap, which engineers had worried might contribute to leaks underground and an even bigger blowout. The cap was attached a week ago, and only minor leaks have been detected.

Allen said crews expected sustained winds above 39 mph at the spill site by early Saturday. Seas already were choppy in the Gulf, with waves up to five feet rocking boats.

Obama apologizes to fired official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flooded with apologies from everywhere, Shirley Sherrod got the biggest "I'm sorry" of all Thursday — from a contrite President Obama, who personally appealed to the ousted worker to come back.

Sherrod, who was forced to resign on Monday because of racial comments she made at an NAACP gathering, was asked by Obama to rejoin the federal government and transform "this misfortune" into a chance to use her life experiences to help people, said White House press secretary Robert Gibbs.

Obama had stayed out of the public brouhaha that followed Sherrod's ouster from the Agriculture Department after a conservative blog posted a clip of the black woman's comments and portrayed her as racist. Once it became clear that the speech in question was advocating racial reconciliation, not racism, Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack apologized to her and offered her a new job Wednesday.

Gibbs also apologized publicly "for the entire administration."

Thursday morning, Obama spoke by phone with Sherrod and said he hoped she would accept Agriculture's offer of a new position, Gibbs said. He added that Obama thought Sherrod was "very gracious."

PAINT MAGIC

Filer fireman Lonnie Brutkie, left, and Shania Mullen joined other volunteers July 15 in painting the Filer home of Shirley Baxley during Paint Magic. Baxley was one of 25 homeowners in eight counties who received freshly painted homes for the event’s 25th year. Her green and white exterior came courtesy of the Filer Fire Department and the Filer Kiwanis Club. “I’ve lived here for 28 or 29 years and this is the first time it’s been painted since we bought the place,” Baxley said. “This is an awesome blessing to these people doing this kind of thing. I think I’m dreaming and can’t believe it’s happening to me.”

Dedication ceremony will honor Turner

A dugout dedication at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Filer City Park will be held in memory of Scott Turner.

Turner was killed in an automobile accident in January 2006. He is a Filer High School graduate and spent many hours at the city park, at the baseball fields and in the dugouts. His family set up a memorial to be used for improvements at the ball fields and wanted to dedicate the dugouts in his memory.

The home dugouts were built with the memorial fund and many volunteers. The visitor’s dugouts were built as Andrew Peterson’s Eagle Scout project with the help of the memorial fund, local donations and Troop 7.

The public is invited to Thursday’s ceremony, as are all coaches and players who use and have used the fields.

ACES looking for families to host students

American Cultural Exchange Service local coordinator Sandlee Fairbanks is looking for a host family for a Brazilian high school exchange student coming to Twin Falls High School for the coming school year.

Victor loves to play soccer and the guitar. He is very family oriented and wants to learn about the “real” U.S. life. He has never been outside of his country, she said, so he is very excited about his adventure and to be able to share his culture, food and customs with the Idaho community.

Students arrive in August, speak English, and have their own spending money and insurance. This program is a 10-month home stay with typical American families, where students will attend high school full-time, join in the community and integrate into American lifestyles.

Host homes need to provide a separate bed and in-home meals. Information: Fairbanks, 324-4695, artfair4jc@yahoo.com, www.explorettheworld.org or 800-661-2237.

Age spots are harmless, but they can still be treated

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 50-year-old light-skinned black female with dark spots on my face. My doctor says they are age spots. I have never smoked or consumed alcohol, nor have I ever worn makeup. Is there any over-the-counter product that is affordable you might recommend?

DEAR READER: Liver spots, also known as age spots, are common in people who are over the age of 40 and in those who may have had chronic sunlight exposure without protective sunscreen. The spots are harmless and do not require treatment. They typically appear on light-skinned people but can affect anyone. Exposure to ultraviolet light speeds up the production of melanin, the dark pigment in the outer layers of skin that give it color. Additional melanin is what creates the darker color, primarily in Caucasians, known as a tan. When melanin clumps into higher-than-normal concentrations, age spots appear. What many of us fail to realize is that people of African descent are as susceptible to sun damage as are fair-skinned Caucasians.

If you are put off by the appearance of the spots, start with a referral to a dermatologist. There are several treatment possibilities. Prescription creams that bleach the skin might fade the spots over a period of several months. There are many choices from which to choose and this is the least expensive therapy, depending on how often the cream is applied and how dark the spots are. In order for treatment to be successful, the cream or lotion must penetrate through the top layer of skin where the excess pigment is located. This method of treatment might take weeks or months before progress is seen.

Beyond creams and lotions, cryotherapy applies a freezing agent such as liquid nitrogen to the spots, breaking up the areas that contain the excess pigment. Laser therapy, while expensive, can destroy the excess melanocytes that created the darkened areas of pigment. There is no damage to the surface of the skin with lasers, and results are apparent over a period of several weeks or months. Chemical peel involves applying an acid application to the outer layer of the skin where the age spots appear. The skin then peels, new skin forms and the spots are no longer present.

Dermabrasion sands down the surface of the skin with a brush that rotates rapidly. Again, this removes the surface skin, a new layer grows, and the spots disappear. This process may leave temporary scabbing and redness.

To avoid future age spots, protect your skin — primarily that on the backs of your hands, face, shoulders and upper back — with a sunscreen applied about a half-hour prior to exposure. Then reapply it in a timely manner according to the manufacturer’s recommendations. Wear protective clothing when out of doors that might include a wide-brimmed hat, long-sleeved shirts and long pants.

Should any of your lesions change in color, enlarge, raise or modify in unusual ways, be sure to return to your physician for evaluation because skin cancer can develop from long-term sun exposure.

Former Nevada Gov. Kenny Guinn dies in Las Vegas

By Ken Ritter
Associated Press writer

LAS VEGAS — Former Nevada Gov. Kenny Guinn, a two-term moderate Republican whose tenure marked a prosperous era in a state now facing severe budget problems, died Thursday after falling from the roof of his Las Vegas home while making repairs. He was 73.

The predecessor to current Gov. Jim Gibbons was pronounced dead at University Medical Center, where he was taken after the fall, Coroner Mike Murphy said. Authorities were investigating whether the death was from natural causes or an accident.

Billy Vassiliadis, a friend and spokesman for the Guinn family at the hospital, said Guinn had been on the roof making repairs. He said Guinn’s wife, Dema Guinn, found him and called 911. Police received the call just after 10:30 a.m.

“She lost her best friend this morning,” Vassiliadis said.

Gibbons ordered flags at state buildings to be lowered to half-staff and issued a statement saying, “On behalf of all Nevadans, I extend our deepest sympathy to his family and friends.”

The state Senate minority leader, Bill Raggio, R-Nev., called Guinn “undoubtedly one of the best public servants who has ever served and one of the best governors we’ve ever had.”

“He was an example of someone who was committed to working with others across the party lines,” Raggio said, choking on his emotions during a telephone interview. “He still had so much to offer.”

Guinn, a former Clark County school superintendent and millionaire bank chairman, was a Democrat-turned-moderate Republican who served two terms as governor, from 1999 to 2007. His tenure marked a prosperous time in a state now facing huge tax deficits, record unemployment of 14.2 percent, and the most home foreclosures per capita in the nation.

The product of a migrant family that moved to Nevada from California’s San Joaquin Valley, he married his childhood sweetheart, worked his way through college as a teacher, and won the support of casino bosses and Capitol visitors with silver-haired grace, affability and resolve.

“No matter where we went, my parents always made sure we went to school, even if it was a short period of time,” Guinn told The Associated Press in 1999. “I knew full well I wanted to do something besides what my family had been doing all those years.”

After his terms as governor, Guinn served on the board of MGM Resorts International, a Fortune 500 company and Nevada’s largest employer.

“Kenny led a life of enormous accomplishment as a trusted leader both in the private and public sectors,” said James Murren, company chairman and chief executive.

Nevada Press Association chief Barry Smith remembered Guinn giving an impromptu building tour and lesson in Nevada history to two tourists at the state Capitol. One of the men noticed Guinn’s picture and did a double-take.

“Are you the governor?” he asked.

“That’s what they tell me,” Guinn replied.

Senate Dems abandon plans for energy bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats on Thursday gave up plans to attempt to pass an energy bill that caps greenhouse gases blamed for global warming, abandoning a priority of President Obama.

Obama had hoped to add a climate bill to the two biggest legislative successes of his presidency, a comprehensive health care bill and a broad reform of the U.S. banking and financial sector.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said no Republican was willing to back a comprehensive energy bill, a development he called “terribly disappointing.”

Democrats have been trying for more than a year to pass a plan that charges power plants, manufacturers and other large polluters for their heat-trapping carbon emissions, which contribute to global warming. The House voted 219-212 last year for a “cap and trade” plan featuring economic incentives to reduce carbon emissions from power plants, vehicles and other sources.

British may have found sister monument to Stonehenge

By Raphael G. Satter
Associated Press writer

LONDON — Scientists scouring the area around Stonehenge said Thursday they have uncovered a circular structure only a few hundred yards from the world famous monument.

There’s some debate about what exactly has been found. The survey team which uncovered the structure said it could be the foundation for a circle of freestanding pieces of timber, a wooden version of Stonehenge.

But Tim Darvill, a professor of archaeology at Bournemouth University in southern England, expressed skepticism, saying he believed it was more likely a barrow, or prehistoric tomb.

Darvill did say that the circle was one of an expanding number of discoveries being made around Stonehenge which “really shows how much there is still to learn and how extensive the site really was.”

“In its day Stonehenge was at the center of the largest ceremonial center in Europe,” he said.

The stonehenge that is visible today is thought to have been completed about 3,500 years ago, although the first earthwork henge on the site was probably built more than 5,000 years ago.

Although antiquarians have been poking around the area since the 18th century, excavations are now tightly restricted. So archaeologists have been scanning the surrounding fields and pastures with magnetic and radar sensors pulled across the grass by tractors or all-terrain vehicles.

The new structure was found when scans identified a cluster of deep pits surrounded by a ring of smaller holes a little over half a mile from Stonehenge and within sight of its famous standing stones.

University of Birmingham archaeologist Henry Chapman said he was convinced the small holes were used to secure a circle of wooden poles which stood “possibly three or more meters (10 or more feet) high.”

The timber henge — a name given to prehistoric monuments surrounded by a circular ditch — would have been constructed and modified at the same time as its more famous relative, and probably had some allied ceremonial or religious function, Chapman said in a telephone interview from Stonehenge.

Exactly what kind of ceremonies those were is unclear. The new henge joins a growing complex of tombs and mysterious Neolithic structures found across the area.

The closest equivalent is probably the nearby Woodhenge, a monument once composed of six rings of wooden posts enclosed by an earth embankment. Excavations there in the 1970s revealed the body of child whose skull had been split buried at the center of the henge — hinting at the possibility of human sacrifice.

Arts on Tour season is all about fusion

Times-News

They mix bluegrass with ancient Chinese strings. They dance to Mendelssohn and The Zombies. They blend Bach with eight-cello hip-hop.

And they're all coming to Twin Falls for Arts on Tour's 2010-11 season.

The series announced a seven-show lineup of performers from Africa to Oregon. Full-season subscriptions, which go on sale Aug. 2, offer a savings of 20 percent over buying tickets for individual events. Subscriptions, which include tickets for all seven Arts on Tour programs, are $132 for adults, $95 for children or $104 for seniors — unchanged from last year.

For tickets or a season brochure, call 732-6288, visit the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Box Office or log on to csi.edu/artsontour.

Mini-subscriptions, featuring four to six of the seven performances, will go on sale Aug. 16, and tickets for individual performances on Aug. 25.

Four years ago, Trey McIntyre Project debuted its fresh choreography at The Vail International Dance Festival. The dance company is led by choreographer Trey McIntyre, whose work has been commissioned by American Ballet Theatre, Stuttgart Ballet and other top ballet companies. The company will perform three pieces including "Wild Sweet Love," a loosely narrative ballet about a lonely woman and her search for love featuring the music of Queen, Lou Reed, Roberta Flack, Jose Alfredo Jimenez, The Partridge Family, Felix Mendelssohn and The Zombies.

MacMaster and Leahy are celebrated Celtic fiddlers — and married to each other. ## Portland Cello Project, Nov. 4

This indie cello orchestra has risen in the vibrant Portland, Ore., music scene, collaborating with a list of Portland musicians. Eight-cello PCP performances are eclectic, as likely to mix a Salt N Pepa cover with Bach and follow the medley with something sublime by Arvo Part or WEINLAND, as they are to enlist beatbox-comedian-playwright Reggie Watts to collaborate on stage, improvising a cover of a Britney Spears song. Each show is a one-time affair; the group writes almost entirely new arrangements for every performance cycle. You might see symphony-loving old ladies nodding their head to cello hip-hop, young children playing air cello, hipsters too-cool-for-school mesmerized by Arvo Part or members of the Decemberists playing late 19th century Russian compositions.

Arts council hopes to fill executive director opening soon

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Magic Valley Arts Council aims to have a new person in charge in time for its October move to the Twin Falls Center for the Arts.

At a Wednesday-night meeting, the arts council's board of directors approved a job description for executive director, a position that has been vacant since late 2009.

According to the description written by the board, the executive director will be in charge of board administration and support; program and service delivery; managing facilities, membership, human resources and finances; community and public relations; and fundraising.

Arts council board president George Halsell said the duties are similar to what former executive Stacy Madsen did for the arts council, with a few exceptions. The new director will still oversee operations and financial management, but will no longer handle grant-application writing. With the addition of the executive director, the arts council will have three employees. Before, the staff consisted of just Madsen and program director Carolyn White. The new executive director will also oversee a larger facility than Madsen did.

"There will be probably a greater amount of facilities management because we've got the new facility," Halsell said.

While the council has fielded inquiries about the job vacancy, its has not accepted any resumes, Halsell said Thursday. Since Madsen left, White and arts center project coordinator Robin Baumgartner have shared executive director duties.

The board hopes to fill the position within the next few weeks, Halsell said, although Baumgartner stressed the council wants to find the right applicant.

"We're not going to rush it just to fill a hole," she said. The council hopes to have an advertisement for the position in the Sunday Times-News.

The job is budgeted as a part-time position for now. Although the board discussed salary ranges on Wednesday night, both Baumgartner and Halsell declined to disclose that range.

"That we'd like to wait to discuss with the applicants themselves," Halsell said, adding that the salary range won't be in the advertisement. According to the arts council's tax forms posted on Guidestar.com, a site tracking nonprofit organizations, Madsen earned $29,120 in 2008 for the part-time position.

"We've got a couple of ideas in mind as far as how to make the position more attractive without busting our budget," Halsell said.

Because of the upcoming arts center opening, there is a lot of room for growth in the job, Halsell said.

"If our membership grows and programs go as we expect them to, it could very well turn into a full-time position," he said.

In the meantime, Magic Valley Arts Council is exploring its programming lineup for the new arts center, which is under construction on the Snake River Canyon rim. Because school art programs are facing cutbacks, the center hopes to tackle children's classes first, White said.

"We don't have it really scheduled," White said. "We've worked on trying to identify what we want to do." Options include painting, photography and drawing.

As the programs get started, the council will add adult classes to the lineup. The council is also working on recruiting art teachers from Magic Valley schools for its classes.

"We're sort of working on multiple fronts right now," White said.

Is it still comedy if nobody's listening?

By Rebecca De Leon
Times-News writer

Four Idaho comedians came to the Turf Club on July 2 with one goal in mind: To bring tears of laughter to city residents' eyes.

Unfortunately, Twin Fallsians didn't get the memo.

Only 16 people came to watch the show.

But, in true comedian form, the small group of friends and family dealt with the disappointing turnout by shooting jokes at each other.

"So many punch lines, so little time," said headlining comic Jen Adams of Boise.

Jen's younger brother, Josh Adams of Boise, brought a light, positive energy to the group. The other comedians dubbed him the "ping pong ball on fire."

The featured comic for the show, Danny Amspacher of Boise, is not related to the other two comics, but definitely fit comfortably in their tight circle.

"It's hard to sum up my comedy in one word," Amspacher said as he thoughtfully chewed on mixed nuts. "I would say it's blue collar, observational kind of comedy. It's kind of philosophical." The group named Amspacher the "firecracker."

Jen Adams, accurately nicknamed the "M-80" of the group, is known for her unapologetic, edgy approach to comedy.

"I'm a big proponent of truth," Jen Adams said in an earlier interview. "My comedy isn't silly humor. A lot of it is autobiographical. I believe that people need to laugh when they hurt and need relief and it's kind of spiritual that way. When you laugh, it's a release and the hurt doesn't have power over you anymore and that's a beautiful thing."

As the comedians sat and chatted about the seriousness and hilarity of life, manager Tim Pakutka of Caldwell and master of ceremonies John "Honest John" Parry of Wendell continuously gazed at the nearly empty house with disapproving looks.

"If I had a pen now, I'd quit," Pakutka said, joking with the comedians.

"I put out 300 fliers, we went on the radio station, I mean, what more do you need?" said Parry, who organized the show and named it Mayhem Comedy.

Meanwhile, the comedians kept the smiles going backstage by recounting funny stories from the road.

"We got so bored that we wrote a cartoon," Jen Adams said. "We were on the road for so long, we got what we like to call 'Road-tarded.' We made up these cartoon farm animals and made them all like famous gangster rappers. Like, LL Blue Jay."

"The Beastie Bulls," Amspacher said. "Mousy Elliott," Josh Adams added.

"We're on the road for so long, we get sick of ourselves," Jen Adams said. "One time, Tim spoke with an English accent for hours and we almost left tle brother said. "I look up to many famous comedians, but I'm here because of her. She's the reason I do this."

"I tell him I think he's funnier than me," said Jen Adams, who has more than a decade of stand-up comedy experience. "In a few years, I'll be opening for him, and I'll be more than happy to do it."

"You don't know the love we have," Amspacher said.

As the show began, each comedian supported the others with laughs and claps. The intimate setting allowed them to try out new material, their manager said.

After the show ended and the audience left, the comedians stayed behind for some drinks, bonding and critique from their manager, who took notes during the show.

"You have great stage presence," Pakutka told the relatively inexperienced Josh Adams. "But sometimes, it seems like you have too much movement. Don't force the energy from the crowd with movement."

Josh Adams received the critique with a nod. "That's good advice, thanks."

After more jokes, the group got in their car and headed for the next destination, still anxious to spread the smiles.

"I remember this one time," Josh Adams said with a grin. "We went to this place in Malad called Critters Lounge & Sporting Goods." "Yeah, they were connected together," Amspacher said.

"Not even a wall separating the two," Jen Adams said. Amspacher got a shirt, Josh Adams said. "It's sleeveless, of course. But the edges were hemmed! He got the fancy one." The comedians burst into laughter.

"These two have a bromance going on," Jen Adams said, motioning toward her brother and their manager, Pakutka. "Getting romantic with the old manager, Josh? You're like Mariah Carey in her early days."

Right before the show started, the comedians' tone shifted.

It's symphony season in Sun Valley

The Sun Valley Summer Symphony will embark on its 26th season on Aug. 1. You'll pay for that concert, but all the ones that follow are free.

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

All eyes have been focused on the Sun Valley Summer Symphony's upcoming gigs with country music legend Garth Brooks and violinist Itzhak Perlman.

But the 26th season, which begins Aug. 1 and runs through Aug. 16, will feature a full slate of remarkable, free concerts.

Among them, a concert featuring renowned pianist Emanuel Ax on Aug. 7; a "Broadway Rocks!" Pops Night with three Broadway vocalists on Aug. 8; and a concert with baritone Nathan Gunn singing "Shenandoah and "Poor Wayfarin' Stranger" on Aug. 13.

"Hornucopia" will bring 16 French horn players to one stage on Aug. 15. And the finale, Richard Strauss' "An Alpine Symphony," will feature those same 16 French horns, plus a wind machine and a thunder maker.

"An Alpine Symphony" has everything except the kitchen sink," said Alasdair Neale, who will embark on his 16th season conducting the Sun Valley Summer Symphony. "And Sun Valley is the perfect setting for this piece."

That piece gave rise to Hornucopia, "a really spectacular concert" that you'll likely not encounter elsewhere because you don't often get that many French horns under one roof, Neale said.

To justify bringing in the horns for "An Alpine Symphony," Neale created the previous day's horn concert just for them. The horns will perform classical and pop pieces, including "Danny Boy," "Malaguena," "Bohemian Rhapsody," "Amazing Grace" and "Roman Carnival Overture." The musicians will play under the direction of William VerMeulen, principal horn of the Houston Symphony since 1990.

PREVIEWS

The Sun Valley Summer Symphony will present free 45-minute concert previews at noon Aug. 4, 5 and 7, as well as a special "Meet the Composer" concert preview at 11 a.m. Aug. 13. All concert previews will be held at the Community School Theatre at 181 Dollar Road in Sun Valley.

recently performed with Yo Yo Ma in a celebration of composer Felix Mendelssohn's 200th birthday.

"It's so interesting to have two of those three performing here in a span of six days," said Jennifer Teisinger, the symphony's executive director.

The symphony is bringing a 14-by-25-foot LED screen from San Francisco to mount on the left side of the lawn to accommodate 4,000 people who bought lawn tickets for the Garth Brooks concert. The symphony board voted to keep the screen an extra night, in anticipation of heightened interest in Itzhak Perlman's concert, said board president Martha Reed.

Reed said the board is considering this a trial run for the screen but could not keep it longer because of the expense involved with bringing in a camera crew and operators.

"We can't keep it. But we are so proud to be able to enhance the lawn seating with the large screen," she said. "It can be seen from everywhere."

Reed called the upcoming season "a dynamic one filled with innovative programming" and offering something for everyone from children's night to pop night.

"And the closing night will be a barn buster!" she added.

Next week's three free chamber concerts kick off symphony season

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

The Sun Valley Summer Symphony will conduct its 26th season this year with a star-studded roster that includes country legend Garth Brooks, violinist Itzhak Perlman, pianist Emanuel Ax and baritone Nathan Gunn.

But all big concerts typically begin with a warm-up group. And so it is with the symphony.

The Edgar M. Bronfman Chamber Music Series will take the stage of the Sun Valley Pavilion on Monday under a new director. Sun Valley Summer Symphony principal violist Adam Smyla will take the reins as the eclectic series opens for its 16th season.

The free hour-long concerts founded by Sun Valley philanthropist Edgar M. Bronfman will start at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and July 30 at the Sun Valley Pavilion.

"It will be a fantastic series," said Martha Reed, the symphony's board president. "It'll be a great way to lead into the season."

Though chamber music series often play second fiddle to bigger orchestral productions, they can offer an enjoyable intimate music performance, said Ketchum violinist Sue Mendelsohn.

"They started in Mozart's time when people met in a living room or salon to enjoy small groups of music makers," said Mendelsohn. "They might be made up of all strings or they might include woodwinds. Or they might be made up of a harp-

The schedule

Monday: Pianist Shai Vosner will perform Brahms Piano Quartet No. 1 in G. Minor, Opus 25. Chamber musicians will perform Schubert's String Trio No. 1 in B-flat Major, D 471.

Wednesday: Double bass player Stephen Tramontozzi will be featured in Shostakovich's String Quartet No. 7 in F-sharp Minor, Opus 108. Pianist Shai Vosner will perform Schubert's Piano Quintet in A Major D. 667, "The Trout."

July 30: Mozart's String Quartet No. 17 in B-flat Major, D 458, "The Hunt." Tchaikovsky's String Quartet No. 3 in E-flat Minor, Opus 30.

sichord and strings."

Smyla began capturing the ear of the music world at age 17 when he won first prize at the National Viola Competition in his native Poland. Within six months he had earned a spot as the youngest member of the Polish National Radio and Television Orchestra.

He traveled the world for a decade with the Penderecki String Quartet, averaging between 50 and 80 concerts a year in such cities as London, Paris, Berlin, Rome and New York. He has been with the San Francisco Symphony for the past 10 years.

Joining him on stage as a guest artist next week will be pianist Shai Vosner, who has been hailed by the Financial Times as "an artist to follow keenly."

Vosner first performed for the Edgar M. Bronfman Chamber Music Series in 2006. He is a student of world-renowned pianist Emanuel Ax, who will perform with the symphony Aug. 7. He also has performed in recital with violinist Jennifer Koh, who will perform with the symphony Aug. 5.

This will also be Sun Valley Summer Symphony fans' first chance to see the symphony's new principal cellist, Amos Yang, said Jennifer Teisinger, the symphony's executive director.

Other members of the Sun Valley String Quartet who are featured throughout the chamber series are violinists Jeremy Constant and Paul Brancata.

Constant, the assistant concertmaster and a long-time member of the Sun Valley symphony, will fly himself and his Stradivarius violin to the concert in a home-built RV-7A kit aircraft that he built expressly to fly to his annual Sun Valley Summer Symphony gig.

He has been featured in several flying publications, including Flying magazine.

"It's highly unusual for someone who has a full-time job in an orchestra to find the time and energy to build an airplane," said Teisinger. "He apparently has other airplane-building friends who come to Sun Valley to hear him perform."

SUN VALLEY WELCOMES JOHNNY WEIR

July 24

3x US Champion and World Bronze Medalist performing at the Sun Valley Ice Rink. All shows start at dusk. For tickets, seating and event information, call 208.622.2135 or visit mySVfun.com.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

Sun Valley Summer Symphony concerts start at 6:30 p.m., with the exception of the 2 p.m. Family Concert on Aug. 14. Concerts are held in the Sun Valley Pavilion near Sun Valley Lodge. All concerts are free, with the exception of the Aug. 1 Garth Brooks concert — a benefit for the symphony. A few $500 tickets still remain for that concert and will include cocktails and hors d'oeuvres.

Major benefactors get first dibs on Pavilion seats but must reserve them in advance. Open seating is available at the east entrance (West Lake Road) beginning at 5:30 p.m.

The symphony has been able to seat those wishing open seating for all but a few major concerts since the Pavilion opened two years ago, said Jennifer Teisinger, executive director of the symphony.

Audience members are asked to refrain from placing low-back chairs and blankets on the lawn before 4 p.m. Outside food and beverages are welcome on the lawn. Food is not permitted inside the Pavilion.

Sun Valley Resort is expanding parking in the Pavilion parking lot (formerly the Horseman Center lot) across from Sun Valley Lodge. It will also open additional lots for the bigger concerts. Information: svsummersymphony.org

Local authors offer novels, collection of nature columns

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

In books recently released by southern Idaho writers, you'll find murders, drunken drivers, domestic violence and extraterrestrial war — but also crimes solved, self-confidence regained and peace advocated for. And that's just in the novels.

If your tastes run more to nonfiction, a collection of columns about nature and the outdoors — including the Magic Valley landscape — from a former Times-News columnist and environmental reporter may get your feet itching to walk those same paths.

Either way, make room in your summer book bag for another tome, and get ready to enjoy the imagination and observations of your neighbors in print.

'Back Road Daydreams'

By Nils Nokkentved, $14.95, self-published via Amazon.com; available at Amazon.com and BarnesandNoble.com and at locations in Boise.

Back when Nokkentved worked for the Times-News (1988-2001), he always relished the opportunity to get outdoors and explore the landscape. He wrote occasional columns about his experiences, encouraged by the response he got from readers.

After leaving for jobs in Washington and Oregon, he continued to write and save the columns, eventually collecting enough that continued to resonate that he gathered them into a book.

"A lot of the material was inspired by my outdoor adventures in southern Idaho," said Nokkentved, now a communications specialist for Idaho Fish and Game in Boise. "No matter where I go and what I do in other places, that's really special to me."

For example, he was around to see the Perrine Bridge begin to attract BASE jumpers.

"I was paddling down there one day, and all of sudden I heard a strange, loud pop right over my head," he said, describing the sound of an opening parachute in the spring of 2000. "It scared the bejeebers out of me!"

Nokkentved's writing easily combines history and science with personal observations, and often the sort of philosophical considerations that cross one's mind while alone in the wilderness. While some of the columns are set in other states, the Magic Valley and its surrounding area are featured in the book's second section.

"Reading his columns would allow readers to see familiar landscapes through new eyes — gentle, thoughtful and observant eyes," said William Brock, who used to write about natural resources and edit the Outdoors section for the Times-News, and now writes in Pullman, Wash. He said Nokkentved's writing is ambassadorship for outdoor adventure in the Magic Valley.

"(Nils) really gets it that the quality of your outdoor experience is not a function of how much horsepower you can bring to bear, but rather your powers of observation, how well you see and hear and smell and feel things," Brock said. "His writing shows an atavistic connection to the Earth and its natural systems, and that's something we've kind of lost in the last few decades. He reminds me of what the world used to be."

Nokkentved said he hopes his book will encourage locals and visitors alike to get out into the hills to experience nature more closely.

"I hope this encourages people to recognize that outdoor adventure doesn't have to cost a lot, nothing but time," he said.

'Dismissed with Prejudice'

By Chris Topher Meyerhoeffer, $27.99 from Tate Publishing; available at Dick's Pharmacy, Kurt's Hallmark, the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center gift shop, the College of Southern Idaho bookstore and Hastings Books in Twin Falls, and Iconoclast Books in Ketchum. Also available from a variety of online sellers.

A lawyer and legal professor at the College of Southern Idaho, Meyerhoeffer had long been bored by academic writing. When he started penning "Dismissed with Prejudice," set in fictional Monroe County between Jerome and Hailey, though, he was hooked.

"It's always something I've wanted to do," Meyerhoeffer said. "Since then I've written a sequel to it, and I'm in the midst of a third one right now."

Readers of the first novel, which begins with a lawyer returning home after successfully prosecuting a case to find his wife murdered and his daughter kidnapped, will cheer that the characters live in more than one book, said Tony Mannen, theater and communications professor at CSI, who helped Meyerhoeffer proof the novel.

"You'll finish the first book, and you'll want to know what will happen in the second book," Mannen said, praising the book's recognizable setting, identifiable characters and unpredictable plot. "I truly hope that in five or six years, Chris has seven or eight of these books and we'll be able to say, I knew him when."

Meyerhoeffer said publishers have compared his writing to that of James Patterson or John Grisham, but he feels his style is distinct. Those in the south-central Idaho legal community will likely recognize pieces of each other in the supporting cast, and Meyerhoeffer uses the Idaho landscape to ground his plot.

"A lot of characters were based on people I knew in law firms; some of the not-so-good guys were clients or cases I worked on," he said. "I used the desert, I used the canyon, I used the mountains up in Wood River."

The sequels, which are tentatively titled "Sins of the Brother" and "Sons of the Revolution," may not come out of the same publishing house as "Dismissed with Prejudice," Meyerhoeffer said, citing potentially controversial subject matter as the reason for the change.

'Creeton' and 'Dream Wanderer'

By Boyd London, prices vary from $7.95 to $19.95 depending on binding, from Publish America; available at Hastings Books in Twin Falls and online at publishamerica.com. London will sign books at Hastings, 1-3 p.m. Aug. 7.

London, a distant relative of the famous author Jack London, has authored two novels aimed at the young adult market, both written during his recovery from a car accident.

The Idaho native and current Fairfield resident was inspired by that accident in "Dream Wanderer." In it, a high school football star is struck by a drunken driver and sent into a coma, where he finds himself in a world of dreams.

"The only way for him to come out of his coma and be able to come back to his life on Earth is for him to make his way through the dream world," London said.

He hopes the book will be picked up by high school reading programs as a deterrent against drinking and driving.

"Creeton" was triggered by the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, after which London felt moved to write a story about peace. He set it primarily on another planet, Creeton, where the peaceful inhabitants are set upon by a group of lizard-like aliens. The plot sends two Earthlings accidentally to Creeton, where they help the residents defend against their attackers.

"Since we helped them, they're going to help us to try to change our ways and learn how to live peacefully," London said. "At the very end of the book, they end up at the White House, and I imagine they'll be talking to the leaders in charge of things."

'Smoking Mirrors'

By Shelley Walden, $24.95 from Publish America; available at Hastings Books in Twin Falls and online from a variety of sellers including publishamerica.com. Walden will sign books at Hastings, 1-3 p.m. Aug. 14.

Walden, who previously authored "Bound by Hatred," a novel about a relationship destroyed by domestic violence, stays with that theme in her latest novel, which does not feature the same characters. Although "Smoking Mirrors" is not explicitly set in Idaho, it is informed by Walden's personal experience with how the Idaho court system treats victims who are still connected to their abusers through shared children.

"It pretty much encompasses my frustrations when it comes to domestic violence," she said, describing how she had to refight for custody when she moved to Twin Falls from Colorado about 15 years ago.

"It doesn't end once you leave; there are still numerous obstacles you have to overcome, especially when there's a child involved."

Walden advocates for victims to leave their abusers, but she hopes "Smoking Mirrors" will be a warning that in many cases victims will have to continue to fight for themselves after the immediate physical danger has passed.

Get caught up in the Old West

Gather up the family to watch shooting exhibition

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Hold onto your hats. The cowboys are coming to town.

If you want to see some real Old West action in the form of cowboy and cowgirl mounted shooters competing for top honors and cash, the place to be is the Cassia County Fairgrounds on July 31 and Aug. 1.

The Idaho Regulators, a local affiliate club of the Cowboy Mounted Shooting Association, will attend the Idaho State Championship event with lots of fast shooting and riding.

"The CMSA is the national organization that governs the sport of cowboy mounted shooting. It's been called the 'ultimate western shooting and riding challenge,' for shooters and horsebackers who want the romance of the Old West, with the excitement of a high-speed shooting and riding competition," said Mary Ann Spaulding, secretary of Idaho Regulators.

Imagine riding a horse at full speed while blasting 10 balloon targets with a pair of six-shooters while racing against the clock. That's what this equestrian and shooting sport is all about, Spaulding said.

"Cowboy mounted shooting is a full-tilt timed event where contestants gallop their horses through varied courses that require firing frontier-era single-action revolvers, while putting their mounts through some rodeo-style barrel racing, pole bending, some reining competition and a lot of speed," Spaulding said.

Many of the cowboys and cowgirls will be dressed in colorful western clothing reminiscent of the late 1800s, when exhibition shooting was popular. Then, performers like Kent Spaulding rides in the rifle competition.

Buffalo Bill Cody, Pawnee Bill and Annie Oakley thrilled audiences with their shooting and riding ability.

"In the past 10 years, cowboy mounted shooting has grown from small exhibitions with a handful of competitors to full-scale competitions with 300-plus contestants," Spaulding said. "We have four generations of mounted shooters in our family — my father, husband, daughter and granddaughter all ride. This is truly a family sport," Spaulding said.

Competitors use specially loaded, arena-safe blank cartridges, which can break a balloon at a distance of about 15 feet, with five-second penalties for missed targets and penalties for mistakes. Spaulding said the action is non-stop, with a rider racing through the course about every 60 seconds.

The Burley competition begins at 8 a.m. July 31 and runs all weekend at Cassia County Fairgrounds. The competition will have six stages — three Saturday and three Sunday. The event is open to spectators throughout the weekend at no charge, and they can come and go as they like.

"The highlight is always the rifle event, which will be after the main match. The wranglers (kids) shoot all six stages with the adults. They will ride last on the first stage and first on the second stage, then first again on the third stage. This will be the same on both days," Spaulding said.

Cash prizes and belt buckles will be awarded to winners.

"It's a sport that combines a wild West show, a horse race and a rodeo — all rolled into one exciting competition that the entire family can enjoy watching," Spaulding said.

Show your crazy feats of strength and flexibility

Sure, being in shape has its own benefits — a ripped body, a healthy weight, a feeling of wellness. That should be enough for most people, right? But that doesn't mean you can't show off. We're looking for fit folks who can demonstrate feats of strength and agility. We're talking tricks: super-flexibility, tipping over cars, doing a ridiculous number of pushups in a row. Interested? # CSI volleyball adds 13th recruit for 2010

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Thirteen down, one to go. College of Southern Idaho volleyball coach Heidi Cartisser confirmed Wednesday that the school has picked up its 13th commitment for the 2010 season, adding Reno, Nev., outside hitter Scharae Steel to the fold as the Golden Eagles go in search of their 10th NJCAA Division I championship and second in succession. Steel originally signed for Pac-10 outfit Washington State, which qualified for the NCAA Division I Tournament a season ago. But after a long back-and-forth, it appeared all involved parties saw CSI as a better short-term fit. “Scharae’s signed to go to the Pac-10, and I think that speaks loudly. She’s a very strong outside hitter and has played a high level of club (volleyball). She’s well-coached,” Cartisser said. “She’s a great get. We’ve been waiting for a long time, very fortunate to get her.” Steel, a four-year varsity player at Damonte Ranch High School in Reno, was a four-time first-team all-league selection and helped the Mustangs to the Class 4A state championship as a freshman. She was nominated by PrepVolleyball.com as a national freshman-of-the-year finalist that season, and last year was both named the Sierra League’s player of the year and was a finalist for the Nevada Gatorade Volleyball Player of the Year award. Cartisser said all that’s left for CSI in the recruiting department is to finalize its third and final allotted international scholarship. Elisa Brochado and Barbara Alcantara, both of Brazil,

ROUGH DAY AT THE YARD

Buhl only team left, but Tribe falls into loser's bracket

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

AMERICAN FALLS — One rotten inning spoiled the whole bunch. A Buhl error in the third inning led to three unearned runs by Blackfoot, and that was the difference in the Tribe's 4-1 loss in the American Legion Baseball Class A Area C tournament semifinals Thursday. “We had one bad inning, and that cost us the game,” said Buhl pitcher J.D. Leckenby, who was credited with his first loss in two years. “We’re playing to not lose and we need to play to win like we’ve done all season.” Buhl had its 18-game winning streak snapped despite a fine performance from Leckenby, who pitched a complete game with five hits, seven strikeouts and two walks. He also went 2-for-4 at the plate with a pair of doubles and scored Buhl’s only run. The Tribe’s hopes of making next week’s state tournament are still alive, but they need three wins to do so. Buhl faces the Idaho Falls Rangers in the consolation Fonzie Sanchez hit three home runs in Burley's two games Thursday at the Area C district tournament in American Falls.

tion bracket at noon today. A win there puts Buhl in a 3 p.m. showdown with the Skyline-Bonneville winner. “We’re going to have to do it the hard way, but this group of kids, if they show up and play the way they’re supposed to, we’re not counting ourselves out yet,” said Buhl coach Brady Swallow. “There are no more second chances.” Buhl unraveled in the third inning after the would-be third out grounder was mishandled, resulting in two runs scored, and then the next Blackfoot batter roped an RBI single. Buhl had several opportunities to get the runs back, but failed to come up with timely hits. The Tribe’s best chance came in the fourth inning when they loaded the bases with no outs, but came away with nothing. Buhl also came up empty in the bottom of the seventh after bringing the tying run to the plate with no outs. Blackfoot pitcher – and Treasure Valley Community College-bound – Alex Jones struck out eight and got himself out of the aforementioned jams.

“Our bats have been dead for two days,” Swallow said. “We’ve got to come better prepared to see good pitching in the district tournament.” With the district championship now out of reach, Buhl’s focus turns to winning two games today, with hopefully enough left in the tank for a runner-up game on Saturday with a trip to state on the line. “We’ve been in this position before in high school,” Leckenby said. “We just

HGH testing to start in minor leagues

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball implemented random blood testing for human growth hormone in the minor leagues on Thursday, the first professional sports league in the United States to take the aggressive step against doping. The blood testing becomes part of the Minor League Drug Prevention and Treatment Program, which commissioner Bud Selig introduced in 2001 to test for performance-enhancing drugs. “The implementation of blood testing in the minor leagues represents a significant step in the detection of the illegal use of human growth hormone,” Selig said in a statement. “HGH testing provides an example for all of our drug policies in the future.” Testing will be limited to players with minor-league contracts because they are not members of the players’ association, which means blood testing is not subject to collective bargaining. “Obviously, we make a separate decision with regard to the minor-league program, but the Major League Baseball Players Association has been proactively engaged in conversations with us on the scientific and logistical issues associated with blood testing at the major league level,” said Rob Manfred, executive vice president labor relations for Major League Baseball. The players association has long been against blood testing. “The union’s position on HGH testing remains unchanged,” union executive director Michael Weiner said. “When a test is available that is scientifically validated and can be administered safely and without interfering with the players’ ability to compete, it will be considered. “We have been engaged with the Commissioners’ Office on this subject for several months, though they have not shared with us the specifics behind their decision to begin blood testing of minor leaguers,” Weiner said. “We look forward to further discussions.” Outside experts have long questioned the union’s logic against blood testing. Told of baseball’s announcement, Gary Wadler, who chairs the committee that determines the World Anti-Doping Agency’s banned-substances list, said it was “a significant step forward.” “One important thing is, as young players evolve through the minor leagues, the concept of a blood test will no longer be alien to them,” Wadler said. “It will be easier to implement it in the major leagues as more players in the minor leagues recognize it makes sense.” Travis Tygart, the CEO of the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency, also welcomed the news. “This is another important step in the fight to return all of the playing fields in the U.S. to clean athletes,” he said. “We applaud MLB’s efforts in this regard.” Tigers president and GM Dave Dombrowski said in an e-mail to The Associated Press: “Seems like a positive step for the game.” Dodgers manager Joe Torre said: “Whatever has to be done to gain the full trust

Schleck wins stage 17 but Contador poised to defend Le Tour crown

By Jamey Keaten
Associated Press writer

COL DU TOURMALET, France — Alberto Contador never wavered. Under a blistering attack from Andy Schleck, the Spaniard tightened his grip on a third Tour de France title in four years by matching every acceleration his rival threw at him during the ride up a fabled Pyrenean climb in Thursday’s 17th stage. Schleck delivered on his promise to ride well on the last mountain of this year’s race. It just wasn’t enough to shake Contador. Schleck set a punishing pace up the last 6 miles on the ascent of the Col du Tourmalet, but the Spaniard shadowed him wheel-to-wheel the whole way. In the end, Schleck won the 108.1-mile trek from Pau by a half bike-length, but failed in his bid to take the yellow jersey from Contador and gain time on his rival ahead of Saturday’s time trial. “I did short accelerations really many times, it was the only possibility I had to try to drop him,” Schleck said. “But he was too strong.” The Tourmalet was the last of three tough climbs in the stage made in cool temperatures under a drizzle and fog. Frenzied fans — including some near-streakers — ran alongside the duelists on the ascent, at least once seeming to irk Schleck. On the second climb, the Col du Soudor, a flock of sheep strayed into the road, causing some riders to swerve, brake and stop, though no one crashed. With only three days of racing left before Sunday’s finish in Paris, and two of the stages unlikely to alter the top of the standings, the two men knew that Thursday’s leg was crucial. Schleck had vowed to make an all-out effort.

On the Tourmalet, he repeatedly turned around, at times speaking to Contador or trying to catch his gaze in an attempt at mind games. The Spaniard never took the bait. “I wanted him to pass, I wanted to be behind and attack him, but of course, he’s very smart, and I knew that he only had to stay in my wheel,” Schleck said. “I think Alberto did the right thing, he’s a great professional.” Every time Schleck made a burst, Contador was right there, dancing lightly side to side up out of his saddle in a smooth rhythm. Contador did what he needed to, and appeared to slow at the end, leaving Schleck to win his second stage this Tour, in 5 hours, 3 minutes, 29 seconds. “He was really so strong and at the end, the sprint for me was not the most important thing,” said Contador, who finished in the same time to remain in front by Saturday’s 32.3-mile time-trial, a discipline in which Contador excels. Schleck said before Thursday’s stage

Phillies end Cards' win streak in extras

ST. LOUIS — Placido Polanco homered leading off the 11th inning, and the Philadelphia Phillies survived another poor offensive showing with a 2-0 victory that ended the St. Louis Cardinals' eight-game winning streak and averted a four-game sweep on Thursday.

Cole Hamels allowed one hit in eight innings, a solid single by Matt Holliday leading off the fourth, in 91-degree heat and high humidity. Four relievers, including Chad Durbin (2-1) did not allow a hit over the final three innings to finish the one-hitter.

Brad Lidge worked the 11th for his eighth save in 11 chances.

Cardinals starter Adam Wainwright missed a chance to match Colorado Rockies ace Ubaldo Jimenez as the majors' lone 15-game winners. Kyle McClellan (1-3) took the loss.

MARLINS 3, ROCKIES 2

MIAMI — Ronny Paulino hit the winning single with the bases loaded and none out in the ninth inning to send the Rockies to their fifth loss in seven games since the All-Star break.

Pinch hitter Emilio Bonifacio hit his first triple of the year to start the bottom of the ninth against Jhoulys Chacin (5-8), and Paulino brought him home after two intentional walks.

Florida's Josh Johnson struck out 11 in 6 1-3 innings and allowed only one run, on a homer by Ian Stewart in the second inning. Johnson lowered his ERA to 1.61, best in the majors.

Colorado tied the game in the eighth, but Leo Nunez (4-2) struck out the side in the ninth.

BRAVES 8, PADRES 0

ATLANTA — Tim Hudson dominated San Diego again, Alex Gonzalez finished his first home-stand in Atlanta with four hits and the Braves rolled to an easy win over the Padres.

Gonzalez had hits in his first four at-bats to give him a streak of hits in six straight at-bats over two games, four shy of the Atlanta record. He struck out in the eighth to end it.

Hudson (10-5) allowed only four hits in seven scoreless innings. He is 5-0 in nine career appearances against the Padres, including two wins this season.

NATIONALS 7, REDS 1

CINCINNATI — Adam Dunn hit a two-run homer off Edinson Volquez, who had a rough time in his second start since elbow surgery, and the Nationals earned a four-game series split.

Volquez (1-1) dominated Colorado last Saturday in his return from reconstructive elbow surgery. He had control problems this time, giving up six runs in only 2 1-3 innings.

Livan Hernandez (7-6) allowed seven hits during his second complete game, getting his first victory since June 21. He also singled home a run off Volquez.

BREWERS 3, PIRATES 2

PITTSBURGH — Yovani Gallardo came off the disabled list and pitched six shutout innings to lead Milwaukee.

Prince Fielder and Rickie Weeks both homered for the second time in the series for the Brewers, who allowed a combined 26 runs in losing the previous two games.

AMERICAN LEAGUE YANKEES 10, ROYALS 4

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez hit his 599th home run, Derek Jeter had an inside-the-park shot and the Yankees won on another strange night in the Bronx.

Jorge Posada had a go-ahead double and a bizarre throwing error that cost New York a run and put Yuniesky Betancourt on second after striking out. But the Yankees rebounded with enough offense to help CC Sabathia (13-3) win his ninth straight decision.

Rodriguez hit a solo homer to right field in the seventh inning, putting New York ahead 6-4 and leaving him one shy of becoming the seventh major league player to reach 600.

RANGERS 3, ANGELS 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Cliff Lee allowed five hits over 8 1-3 innings to outpitch fellow All-Star Jered

Weaver and give Texas a six-game lead over the second-place Angels.

Lee (9-4) struck out four and didn't walk a batter in his third start since he was acquired from Seattle in a six-player deal on July 9.

TIGERS 5, BLUE JAYS 2

DETROIT — Miguel Cabrera started a three-run eighth inning with an RBI double, and Justin Verlander settled down after a rocky start to go eight innings on the mound.

Verlander (12-5) struggled the first two innings but ended up allowing only two runs on eight hits. He walked two batters in the first but didn't issue another base on balls.

Ricky Romero (7-7) took the loss, giving up three runs on seven hits in seven-plus innings.

TWINS 5, ORIOLES 0

BALTIMORE — Carl Pavano pitched a five-hitter to earn his career-high seventh straight victory.

Pavano (12-6) struck out four and walked one in his fifth complete game of the season and 12th of his career. The right-hander is 7-0 in nine starts since June 3.

The Spartans had reached the matchup with the top-seeded Cowboys by virtue of an 11-7 win over Idaho Falls earlier in the day.

Twin Falls plays Pocatello, which throttled Jerome 31-5 in the semifinals, for the area title this morning and an automatic berth to the Class AA state tournament next week in Boise.

Minico will face Upper Valley, which lost 11-1 to Jerome in the opening game.

Armstrong takes legal counsel

NEW YORK (AP) — Lance Armstrong says hiring a criminal defense lawyer in the face of a federal investigation for possible fraud and doping violations is merely a matter of protecting himself.

BURLEY BOUNCED FROM TOURNEY

The Burley Green Sox broke a 6-6 tie with an eight-run fifth inning to advance in the consolation bracket of the Area C Class A tournament with a 14-7 win over Hillcrest on Thursday at American Falls.

Joe Ferrin batted 3-for-4, Jake Mills had three RBIs and Fonzie Sanchez drove in two runs in the victory.

However, Burley's run ended later Thursday after a 17-4 loss to Bonneville eliminated the Green Sox from the tourney.

The Green Sox, whose pitching staff wasn't at full strength, gave up 11 runs in the first inning.

"I'm disappointed by the way we pitched today, obviously we're all sore," said Burley's Fonzie Sanchez, who homered three times on the day. "We didn't throw strikes. It was rough."

Burley ended its district tournament with a 2-2 record but, despite losing out, will compete at the Class A state tournament next week as the host team.

"There was no pressure coming into this weekend because we get to play next week," Kunz said. "We got some things done, played some good teams and we're looking forward to state. We've got to get some arms healthy."

TWIN FALLS, OTHERS OUSTED

The Twin Falls Cowboys were knocked off 6-0 by Bear Lake on Thursday, ending their season. Also knocked out were Kimberly and Wood River, who both lost in elimination play.

"Had a pretty good run there for a while, but as baseball goes it's a streaky game and we hit the valley there at the end," said Twin Falls coach Mark Schaal, whose team finished 28-18.

Three golfers share lead at Senior British Open

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland — Jay Don Blake shot a 4-under 67 to lead a strong American showing in the opening round of the British Seniors Open at Carnoustie on Thursday.

Blake is in a three-way tie at the top of the leaderboard alongside Germany's Bernhard Langer and England's Carl Mason.

Below that trio the only non-American in the next 17 places was Scotsman Sam Torrance.

Carnoustie, widely rated as the toughest links layout on the British Open championship rotation, is vastly different from most of the courses on the Champions Tour.

"It's a golf course where you can't be aggressive because you can't fly the ball at flags like we are used to over in the courses we play in America," said Blake, who had six birdies and two bogeys. "I have had to learn a whole new game, which is fun. It's exciting, but it's tough."

"I just tried to stay out of the death bunkers, as I call them, because it's a certain one-shot penalty getting in them."

Mason, playing in the afternoon after wind had subsided, was the only player to get to 5 under after a run of five birdies in six holes. However, his chances of an outright lead were ruined when his 3-iron approach to the 10th hole ended with his ball plugged in the steep face of a greenside bunker.

"It was so bad, there was no way I could get the ball out at the first attempt," he said after taking a double-bogey 6.

Among the Americans chasing the leaders were U.S. Ryder Cup captain Corey Pavin (69) and former captain Tom Lehman (71).

Of the three former European captains in the field, only Torrance emerged from the first round under par. He's hoping to complete a golfing double for his 78-year-old father.

Bob Torrance was the coach who built Padraig Harrington's swing before his 2007 victory at Carnoustie in the British Open.

With his game in poor shape, Sam went home this week to seek some fatherly advice.

"He's a great coach," Sam Torrance said. "He sees things that nobody else sees. He gave me a great swing thought and it worked. I would love to win here now at Carnoustie, but there is a long way to go."

PRESSSEL TAKES LEAD AT EVIAN MASTERS

EVIAN-LES-BAINS, France — Morgan Pressel of the United States birdied the first three holes and finished with a 6-under 66 Thursday to lead after the first round of the Evian Masters.

Melissa Reid of England and Sun-Ju Ahn of South Korea each birdied the last hole to join her in the lead.

Pressel started on the back nine and her birdie streak ended with a bogey on No. 13.

"It was a very solid day," Pressel said. "The only fairway I missed was on the last hole, and it was because it kind of got a weird bounce. I hit 15 greens. I felt like I was striking the ball well and gave myself a lot of chances."

Reid finished with eight birdies and two bogeys on a cool and rainy day.

The 22-year-old Reid won her first pro title in May at the Turkish Airlines Ladies Open. She's aiming for another strong showing against a tougher field at the Evian Masters.

"You play an event like this and you see how you compare against the big girls," she said. "So it was quite nice to shoot 66 today. I proved to myself that I can do it."

DELAHOUSAYE LEADS CANADIAN OPEN

TORONTO — Brent Delahoussaye shot an 8-under 62 on Thursday to match the Canadian Open record, making an eagle, seven birdies and a bogey in perfect scoring conditions at historic St. George's.

Delahoussaye, the 29-year-old former Clemson player whose lone professional victory came in the 2006 Hooters Tour Classic, teed off on the ninth hole and played the front nine — his first and last eight holes — in 6-under 28.

If seedy agents are pimps, what are quick-buck coaches?

Pimps? Really, Nick?

If agents are no better than pimps, what does that make you and all those other suddenly sanctimonious college coaches who lie to kids while recruiting them in the first place?

Nick Saban took home $4 million or so last year from Alabama, which has collected more probation-worthy violations (three) than any other high-profile football program in the country over the last two decades. The SEC used to be the runaway leader in the category but was doing a pretty good job cleaning itself up.

At least until last week.

That's when a raft of accusations about players receiving "extra benefits" from an agent — beginning with a player at ACC school North Carolina — detoured quickly into SEC waters. In short order, South Carolina, Florida and Alabama all learned they were officially under suspicion by the NCAA — Georgia was added to the list Thursday — prompting the tirade from Saban at the conference's annual media days festivities.

"I don't think it's anything but greed that's creating it right now on behalf of the agents. The agents that do this — and I hate to say this, but how are they any better than a pimp?"

"I have no respect for people who do that to young people. None," Saban continued. "How would you feel if they did it to your child?"

Oh, I don't know, maybe the same way some parents felt when their son came home and told them you were leaving Akron behind for Michigan State, then Michigan State for LSU, then LSU for the Miami Dolphins.

And don't even get us started about leaving the Dolphins in the lurch, since you flat-out lied about leaving Miami. Loyalty can be a funny thing, no?

So spare us the lecture about how much you care. Most coaches genuinely care about their guys, Saban included, and would love to see them graduate. It makes life easier all the way around.

But the No. 1 priority for those at Saban's level is to win, and make plenty of money doing it. No one should have any illusions about that. At the very top of Division I football, everyone is using everyone — the suits who run the Bowl Championship Series, the university presidents, coaches, athletic directors and yes, those evil agents — and all of them are getting paid except for the kids.

To be fair, the kids are plenty culpable. They know the rules, and the overwhelming majority abide by them. On top of that, every big-time athletic program has at least one full-time compliance officer, and some employ as many as seven or eight. No one is forcing them to go to parties, drive cars they can't afford or take envelopes stuffed with cash.

And Saban is right in one important way about the greaseball agents and their runners. They know the temptations they're dangling could not only derail a kid's career, it could put an entire program underwater for years to come, a la Southern California after Reggie Bush.

Everyone hates agents — even scrupulous agents — unless they have one. The problem with making unscrupulous agents the villains in this drama is that just like the kids they pick off, they're only the low-hanging fruit. Considering the way college football is structured, it's nothing short of laughable to hear the coaches and conference commissioners occupying the branches above to suggest the rot could be stopped there.

Big-time college football is effectively running a minor-league system for the NFL, and they're doing it largely on the backs of kids whose football school-work is so demanding that many will never be able to take advantage of the scholarship that gets thrown in with it.

It's not about the scholarships, anyway.

As incoming Notre Dame coach Brian Kelly noted not too long ago, both of his predecessors routinely boasted some of the best graduation rates in the nation and both got fired. But not surprising, the most honest assessment of the whole mess was uttered by Steve Spurrier.

When asked about how best to go about cleaning it up, the old ballcoach admitted he didn't have a solution, then added:

"I guess sometimes the lure of taking some cash right away affects all of us." Perfect.

Source: Paul requests trade from Hornets

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Chris Paul has requested to be traded and the New Orleans Hornets have scheduled a meeting with the star guard on Monday, according to a person familiar with the situation.

Paul will sit down with new head coach Monty Williams, new general manager Dell Demps and team president Hugh Weber in New Orleans, the person told The Associated Press on Thursday. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the team had not made plans to meet with Paul public, and because Paul has not publicly demanded a trade.

The person also said that Paul, through his representatives, has told the Hornets he would prefer to be dealt to one of only a handful of teams, including the New York Knicks and Orlando Magic.

Paul, 25, cannot opt out of his contract for two years. However, he said at a recent charity golf tournament that he will be unhappy playing for the Hornets if they fail to demonstrate a commitment to winning immediately.

The only free-agency move the Hornets have made this offseason so far is resigning reserve center Aaron Gray.

The Hornets also have made it clear they have no intention of trading Paul.

Weber said earlier this month, while attending a community service event with Paul, that there was "no question" Paul would be in a Hornets uniform when next season opened. As recently as Tuesday, Weber also said that an exchange of text messages gave him the impression that Paul approved of the recent hirings of Williams and Demps.

After the Hornets came within one game of advancing to the 2008 Western Conference finals, Paul agreed to a four-year, $68 million extension that went into effect last season includes a player's option for the fourth year.

Since then, however, the Hornets have traded center Tyson Chandler and fired coach Byron Scott, who both were close with Paul, all while the club's performance went into steady decline.

The Hornets were bounced from the first round of the 2008-09 playoffs, then missed the playoffs entirely last season, during which Paul missed 37 games with three separate injuries.

Earlier this month, Paul cut ties with his basketball and marketing agents at Octagon and joined LRMR Marketing, an agency founded by his close friend and NBA superstar LeBron James.

Meanwhile, the Hornets have made several key changes since June, starting with the hiring of Williams, a former NBA player and first-time head coach. Williams has said Paul's presence on the Hornets' roster was one of the main reasons he wanted to start his head coaching career in New Orleans.

On Wednesday, New Orleans hired Demps, a first-time general manager who was a front-office executive for the past five years at San Antonio. Demps replaced Jeff Bower, who served as both coach and general manager last season after Scott was fired.

Cowboys, 1st-round pick Bryant agree to deal

IRVING, Texas (AP) — With all the stories about Dez Bryant being a character risk, and then with him picking the same agent his buddy and fellow receiver Michael Crabtree had during a hold-out that lasted nearly until Halloween last season, plus there being all sorts of labor uncertainty complicating the signing of all draft picks, some Dallas Cowboys fans worried whether he'd ever show up.

Well, guess what: Bryant signed Thursday, becoming the first first-round pick in the entire NFL to strike a deal. The contract is for $11.8 million over five years, with at least $8.3 million guaranteed.

The key is that the deal is done in time for Bryant to be in San Antonio for the start of training camp Friday and, of course, the first practice Saturday. By the end of training camp, he might even be pushing Roy Williams for the starting job opposite Miles Austin.

"This was very important to me to be able to get this done in time for the first practice," Bryant said in a statement released by the team. "I want to help this team. I want to compete. I can't wait to start playing football again."

Bryant played only three games for Oklahoma State last season, then was dogged by all sorts of questions about his integrity, starting with an NCAA suspension for lying to investigators about a meeting with former Cowboys star Deion Sanders.

There was talk of him skipping meetings and classes, and being late to games. There were concerns about his mother's private life, enough that Miami Dolphins general manager Jeff Ireland asked if she ever was a prostitute. After he skipped the NFL combine and held his own pro day, there were whispers that he forgot to bring the right cleats.

But the Cowboys did their homework and wanted Bryant so badly that when they saw him slipping in the draft, they moved up to No. 24 and nabbed him. Team owner Jerry Jones also laid the foundation for Thursday's announcement before ever making the pick.

Speaking with agent Eugene Parker while the Cowboys were on the clock, Jones said: "We want a commitment here that we're going to work to get this done. We don't want a repeat of what happened last year"

Tour

a chance of victory.

It was a day of scaled-down and revised expectations.

"I changed my mind when I crossed the finish line today," Schleck said. "We will see in the time trial"

"My dad always used to say that the one who did a good time trial, he fell off the bike when he finished," Schleck said, "and that's what I plan to do on Saturday"

Seven-time champion Lance Armstrong, who finished 4:12 behind the leading duo in 17th place, again revised down his hopes at the Tour.

At the start of the three-week race, the 38-year-old Texan had hoped to be a contender in his last Tour. That aspiration vanished in the debut in the Alps in Stage 8, when crashes slowed him down three times and he lagged in the climbs.

Then, Armstrong began angling for a stage victory.

His last big chance for that came in Tuesday's 16th stage, but he came up short in a final sprint among breakaway riders to finish sixth.

After Thursday's final mountain day, his expectations came down again. Asked what the chances were now of winning a stage, Armstrong replied: "Slim to none."

He's now focused on making sure his RadioShack squad maintains its lead in the team general classification.

"The most important thing was that we stay ahead in the team GC, and that's what we did," Armstrong said. He's in 23rd place overall — 37:58 behind Contador.

By finishing more than a minute ahead of everybody else, Schleck and Contador gave themselves a cushion for their drive to the Champs-Elysees podium.

They're now poised for the same 1-2 finish they had last year.

While 8 seconds is minimal, it seems Contador would have to have a bad day Saturday, Schleck an incredible one, or the Spaniard would have to crash for the Luxembourger to take the yellow jersey.

"It is possible to lose it at any time. Andy is very strong and you can expect him to do a really good time trial," Contador said.

"But the situation today of course is very good."

HGH

of the fans, we have to do what we can."

Blood samples will be collected after games by the National Center for Drug Free Sport, the organization that currently collects urine samples in the minor leagues. The blood samples will be taken from the non-dominant arm of players who are not members of a major league team's 40-man roster, and sent to a testing laboratory in Salt Lake City for analysis.

Dr. Gary Green, the medical director for Major League Baseball, called the testing "a major development in the detection of a substance that has previously been undetectable."

"The combination of widespread availability and the lack of detection have led to reports of use of this drug amongst athletes," Green said. "This is the first generation of HGH testing and Major League Baseball will continue to fund the Partnership for Clean Competition for ongoing research to refine testing procedures in this area."

The Partnership for Clean Competition is a coalition of MLB, the NFL, USADA and the U.S. Olympic Committee that funds research for drug testing.

The NFL doesn't currently conduct blood tests for performance-enhancing drugs. But the league has recently said it would like to begin such tests, while the union has long been against them. With the current collective-bargaining contract due to expire in March, the issue is expected to be a key point in upcoming negotiations.

Tropical storm moving toward oil spill

By Juan McCartney
Associated Press writer

NASSAU, Bahamas — A rainstorm in the southern Bahamas accelerated into Tropical Storm Bonnie on Thursday while following a course that could take it over the site of the Gulf of Mexico oil spill.

Rain and lightning raked the low-lying Turks and Caicos Islands and the Bahamas, and forecasters at the U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami said the storm could reach the Gulf of Mexico by Saturday.

By Thursday evening, the center said Bonnie had maximum sustained winds of 40 mph, and was centered about 200 miles southeast of the Bahamian capital of Nassau. It already had caused flooding in Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic and Haiti.

As the storm advanced Thursday, skies darkened and people stocked up on water and food in the southern Bahamas and Turks and Caicos, island chains that are well-accustomed to rough weather. Many businesses remained open, but schools were already closed for the summer.

Shannelle Lightbourne, 27, shopped at a market in the island of Providenciales in Turks and Caicos after hearing warnings that it would rain heavily.

"I am stocking up what I can," she said. "I may not be able to leave my house."

Donna Musgrove, a businesswoman in Providenciales, said some streets were flooded. "It's raining from one end of the island to the other," she said. "The skies are completely dark."

The tropical depression did not pose a threat to tourist resorts in the islands.

Tourist Ezra Uzzel, 45, of North Carolina, said he would not cut short his two-week vacation in the Turks and Caicos.

"This if our third day, and if the reports are right, by the weekend we should have good weather again," he said.

"It's raining from one end of the island to the other. The skies are completely dark."

2010 HYUNDAI GENESIS SEDAN FLAGSHIP LUXURY!!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

The new Hyundai Genesis sedan created quite a stir when it was introduced to the American marketplace last year. And well it should. With capabilities and features comparable to the world's leading premium sports sedans, the new full-size sedan is built on Hyundai's all-new, performance-driven rear-wheel-drive architecture.

"While Genesis will compete for customers with cars like Lexus ES, Chrysler 300 and Cadillac CTS, our engineering benchmarks were Mercedes E-Class, BMW 5-Series, Infiniti M and Lexus GS," said John Krafek, vice president, product development and strategic planning, Hyundai Motor America. "Genesis provides a potent combination of performance, luxury and value. We think it has the opportunity to be an extremely disruptive force in the large sedan and near-luxury segments."

Genesis offers two powertrains, the Lambda 3.8-liter V6 engine, and Hyundai's all-new Tau 4.6-liter V8 engine. Torque is communicated to the pavement for the V6 powerplant through an Aisin 6-speed B600 SHIFTRONIC automatic transmission that features an overdrive lock-up torque converter for improved highway fuel economy. The transmission offers smooth shifts and a wide spread of ratios that ideally suit the engine's characteristics including a tall-overdrive sixth gear for quiet, efficient highway cruising. The V8 prime mover is bolted to a ZF 6-speed ZF 6HP26 automatic transmission with SHIFTRONIC® manual control

The new rear-wheel-drive architecture is the first application in a U.S. Hyundai model. Genesis boasts a near ideal 52/48 front-to-rear weight distribution for exceptional handling and more refined steering characteristics. The rear-wheel-drive layout allowed engineers to position the car's front wheels farther forward delivering outstanding handling and steering performance. Standard Electronic Stability Control (ESC), the industry's most important new safety technology, further enhances the vehicle's driving confidence.

The Hyundai luxury sedan features a suspension design that is among the most sophisticated and refined anywhere, at any price. The front five-link suspension features upper and lower arms linking the front wheels to the chassis. This artfully articulated arrangement creates a virtual king pin axis that dramatically reduces unwanted kickback through the steering wheel as well as improving responsiveness. The five-link independent rear suspension is equally sophisticated, enabling precise suspension geometry for a premium ride and engaging handling prowess.

Inside the cabin, its quickly obvious that the Genesis is the most advanced Hyundai ever. From its design and spaciousness to its technology and appointments, it delivers a wealth of features and performance befitting flagship European and Asian brands, but delivers them at a much more accessible price point. Starting with its Lexicon® state-of-the-art audio system featuring LOGIC 7® technology, Genesis offers an extraordinary combination of technology, premium appointments, and value. Standard is a soft-touch instrument panel with woodgrain accents, Bluetooth® hands-free mobile phone interface, and USB/iPod® auxiliary inputs. A state-of-the-art navigation system with an eight-inch display is available. The navigation unit is accessed by a user-friendly multi-media controller that also controls the radio.

Seating is comfortable front and rear, with impressively roomy accommodations for back seat passengers.

For the 2010 model year, Hyundai ups the competitive ante with the available convenience of Smart Cruise Control, touch-screen navigation and an electronic parking brake with automatic vehicle hold. In addition, a 90-day subscription to XM radio and XM NavTraffic is also now part of the Technology Package. Due to consumer demand, touch-screen navigation has been added to the base Genesis 4.6 and is now standard on Genesis 3.8-liter models equipped with the Premium Navigation Package.

The new seven-inch touch-screen navigation system complements the highly acclaimed eight-inch screen Ultimate navigation system that is still a key part of the Technology Package. Ultra-premium leather seating surfaces are also now standard on Genesis 3.8 models equipped with Premium, Premium Navigation and Technology Packages.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"A wise player ought to accept his throws and score them, not bewail his luck."

—Sophocles

In today's deal the methods played by North-South accidentally nullified the effect of the transfer system they were playing over two no-trump. Because South was marked with at least a five-card heart suit and probably a lack of entry cards, it was clear for North to convert back to four hearts rather than passing three no-trump, and indeed the suit game looked comfortable enough.

However, the defenders were on the ball, and the combination of an accurate defense and the bad trump break was enough to doom the contract.

After winning the diamond king, East knew that the contract could not be set unless West had the spade ace, and the auction had marked West with that card. If South had two spades, the contract could be set no matter which spade East led. But if South had only one spade, East saw that he had to lead the spade king first and then continue leading spades.

South had to trump the second spade, and was down to four hearts. When East won the heart ace, he could lead a third spade and force South to ruff again, setting up his long trump for the setting trick.

Note that if East's first lead is a low spade, dummy's queen and jack of spades are equal against East's king. South will get to ruff away East's honor. He cannot be forced to ruff a second time, and so can draw trumps with impunity.

ANSWER: For the time being you have no problem; your partner has shown a good hand with long clubs and four hearts. You can give preference to three clubs and leave it up to your partner whether he wants to bid on. Do not bid no-trump — you have no idea where your tricks will come from, despite your diamond guard.

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

Seven Lawn Ornaments

These seven little "cut-ups" won't nibble your lawn, dig up your flowers or put a bite in your budget (they're made from scrap plywood). They will add a touch of whimsy anywhere they're displayed, and they're so easy to make that the whole family can join the fun.

Simply trace the full-size patterns onto plywood, cut them out and decorate following detailed painting instructions. Apply a sealer and enjoy them for years in the yard or garden, as a weather vane or even on the nursery wall.

The plan includes full-size traceable patterns and painting guides for a calf, a duck, a pig, two puppies, a rooster and a squirrel and range in size from 12 inches to 16 inches tall.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has a long history of lying in what appears to be her attempt to manipulate others. She is now 75, and my siblings and I know not to accept anything she says as the truth, and to always check with each other in order to find out the whole story.

The other day she lied to me about a doctor's appointment. Shortly after I talked to her, my sister called me, furious about what Mom had really done. I called Mom back that evening to give her a chance to tell the truth. Instead, she made up another lie to cover up what she had done. That's when I told her I had already spoken to my sister.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

The whole situation makes me very sad, which I told her. I let her know I am "on to her" and have decided to give both of us some time to think about the situation. I know you can't teach an old dog new tricks, and I have given up trying.

I love Mom, but her continued manipulation of others has driven me away from her. Is there any way for her to see how much her inappropriate behavior affects those of us who care about her?

— SAD SON
IN AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR SAD SON: No. And by cross-checking whatever your mother tells you with your siblings, you are handling a difficult situation as well as you can.

DEAR ABBY: Our 19-year-old son is home from college for the summer and he "knows everything." His father and I have told him to wash all fruits and vegetables we buy fresh from the market before eating them. He feels this is not important and continues to eat apples, strawberries and lettuce directly from the container or plastic bag without rinsing them.

Please let me know if our fears are real. I have always been told washing is necessary. I would love to show him something on this subject because he thinks I'm silly and overprotective.

— MOTHER KNOWS
BEST IN TEXAS

DEAR M.K.B.: If seeing it in print will get your son's attention, I'm happy to oblige. Have him try this experiment: The next time he decides to eat a nice, shiny apple, have him soak it for 5 to 10 minutes in water to which several tablespoons of vinegar have been added. This will remove the waxy coating that is usually sprayed on them, and with it any dirt or "little critters" that may have become attached.

Also, periodically on the nightly news we hear announcements of FDA recalls because of salmonella or E. coli that has been discovered on various vegetables. Although some are packaged as ready-to-eat, they, too, should be rinsed before using. Consider it "health insurance."

DEAR ABBY: I am the parent of a child with special needs. To an outsider he looks different; adults and children stare at him when we're out.

My son is not aware of their impolite behavior, but I am — and it really irks me. What should I say to these insensitive people?

— BOILING MAD
IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR BOILING MAD: I don't think you should say anything. It is not unusual for individuals of every age to do a double take when they see someone — or something — that is "different." Of course staring is impolite, but unless someone makes a remark or asks a question about your son, you should ignore the person.

IF JULY 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Reach for your dreams. You may be inspired to try your luck at something new during the next six to eight weeks. Even if your goals are not firmly rooted in reality you will probably be steered in the right direction by helpful friends and well-wishers at the end of August or beginning of September. During January and February, your popularity hits a high note, so that is a good time to seek a new job, ask for a promotion or to make a romantic commitment. If you are single, someone who will make a lifelong companion could enter the picture.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Channel your desires into something that pleases a significant other. You might find that your better half is in the mood to do something wild or witty tonight. Singles can mingle and make new friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Singles might find a romantic ship that passes in the night. You possess the celebrity sparkle that attracts others so this is a good time to go out with the crowd, hit the happy hour trail or do something wild.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tell it like it is. Powerful friends or allies may offer needed support during key discussions. Speak your mind and persuade others to join you; you have the ability to put your point across succinctly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Break away from routines and experiment with something new. A significant other can take precedence over business affairs or a new hookup may cross your path. Your love light might glow brighter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sail with the current, not against it. The latest news, the most popular fads and the most up-to-date technologies may attract you. Some peace and quiet may be required to master a new computer skill.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Experience is often the best teacher. Don't discount your backlog of knowledge and hands-on testing. Entertainment is often valued more than education, but entertainments can teach something of value.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could be, as the financiers say, bullish on the future. You have a sparkle in your walk and a wink in your talk that makes others sit up and take notice today. Go ahead and be a social butterfly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Escape from work early to spend quality time with a loved one this evening. Plan an exotic dinner for two or an unusual special treat. Spur-of-the-moment amorous escapades can prove satisfying.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The hands on the clock are counting down your 15 minutes of fame. You may get attention while in public or a pat on the back from the boss. This is a good day to ask for favors or advice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Remain alert for valuable new hookups and helpful connections. Your knowledge and lively repartee are assets. This is a great time to try the latest "hot" nightspot or a new restaurant.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get out and about and mingle if you are single. The door may swing open upon exciting experiences. You may stumble upon a new friend or add important names to your networking notebook.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Genius can be gregarious. To be seen as truly original and shine in the spotlight, you should seek out other brilliant companions. Don't be impatient or unkind towards those with lesser skills.
