Guard brings families into the loop

Workshop gives info on Army benefits and obstacles of deployment

By Nick Coltrain

Times-News writer

In a room full of crew cuts, military pride and families, a note from a Twin Falls lawyer caught Sgt. Jered Hollibaught's attention: He could trim the interest on his debts to 6 percent while deployed.

That means extra money for school or a house, the Mountain Home-based guardsman said.

'The interest rates are going to help me save money," Hollibaught said. "The more money I save, the better off I'll be."

Hollibaught was one of the hundreds of Idaho Army National Guardsmen mandated to be at Sunday's Yellow Ribbon and about 200 from the Magic

VA stepping up services for female veterans

By Lisa Rein

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - About 1.8 million women have served in the U.S. military, and with 245,000 female soldiers, sailors, Marines and airmen deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan, it's estimated that within a decade, women will make up 16 percent of all veterans.

Yet until recently, some health clinics for veterans did not have separate bathrooms for women. Some doctors who treat returning service members haven't kept up with medical advances on issues from sexual trauma to prosthetics to menopause. Some

On Wednesday, clinicians, benefits experts, VA leaders and veterans from across the country discussed the department's stepped-up efforts and the need to do more for women.

"We are late, and the surge in women veterans has begun and will continue;" VA Secretary Eric Shinseki told the crowd of 175 gathered at the Women in Military Service for America Memorial at Arlington National Cemetery. "Time is not on our side."

The retired four-star general and former Army chief of staff has made increasing services for women a top priority, securing $217 million in gender-specific programs for the next fiscal year, a 21 percent increase from 2009. The increased investment is aimed at providing better care and more privacy and security for female patients.

Lt. Col. Michael Etcheverry, one of the early speakers at the event, said the workshop is geared toward family readiness.

'It brings the families in and allows them to experience what the soldier is going through," Etcheverry said.

Soldiers who were around for the 116th's 2004 deployment to Iraq didn't have the workshop to provide details on options available to soldiers and their families. The Yellow Ribbon event included sessions on suicide prevention, mission orientation, wills and legal assistance, financial assistance and military benefits.

Hollibaught went to the event with his brother-in-law, sister and his niece and nephew – knowing they have an idea of what the military has offered brings him peace of mind, he said.

"Soldiers don't need this while they're in Iraq," he said. "I think it would be way too stressful."

Lt. Col. Lynn Dunlop, a Twin Falls lawyer, brought together 134 lawyers from across the state to give the deploying soldiers and their families pro-bono assistance. At the event, he spoke on the different types of powers of attorney and helped many to fill out wills.

"Patriots are people who, quite simply, put love of country before all," Dunlop said at the end of his session. "You folks are all patriots and I thank you."

Oil spill

But the oil giant's engineers and petroleum experts say it's the clearest path yet to choke the blown-out well and make it even easier for the crews drilling the relief well to ensure oil can never again tinely approved BP requests erupt from the deep-sea well, which has spewed as much as 184 million gallons since the eral directive to cut its use. rig connected to it blew up in April and killed 11 workers.

The developments have the makings for an interesting week. "It could be the beginning of the end," said Darryl Bourgoyne, director of Petroleum Research Lab at Louisiana

State University. When it begins, crews will slowly pump heavy mud through lines installed last month straight down the the massive underground reservoir and scientists are confident the pressure remains stable, then engineers can pump in fresh cement to seal it.

"The only thing that separates the oil from the sea now is the valve. This puts thousands of feet of mud and cement in between," said Eric Smith, associate director of the Tulane Energy Institute. "The idea is to have as many barriers as possible between the ocean and the reservoir. We're adding an extra level of safety." Officials may then begin the process of choking the underground reservoir feeding the well by pumping mud and then cement down an 18,000-foot relief well. BP officials have long said the process is the only sure way to choke the well for good plugging up the source of the oil, not just its route to the

There's reason to hope this But critics have raised time will be different. For one, the oil is no longer freely flowing from the well, thanks to the temporary cap that has contained the out-of-control gusher for two weeks. That means that engineers won't have to pump in mud with as much force, said Kent Wells, a BP senior vice president.

There's always the risk that the pressure exerted by the mud will rupture the casing holding in the oil and potentially cause an even greater mess, but experts say it's very unlikely.

"I can't imagine it failing. It's holding pressure and there's no indication of any loss of fluid from the well," their latest bid to stymie the Smith said. "It's a vanishingly small risk of failure."

BP has had more than its share of failures experimenting with other ambitious efforts. So if the oil is already contained and the completion of the relief well appears to be just around the corner, why is the oil giant even bothering to attempt the complicated static kill?

One answer is that it should make it easier to finish the relief well, which BP and government officials have long said is the only permanent solution to the blownout well. Crews are also drilling a second, backup relief well a few thousand feet behind the primary one, which is about 100 feet from

Israel to expel hundreds of migrant workers' kids

Israel on Sunday approved new residency criteria that could result in the deportations of hundreds of children of migrant workers.

The decision by Israel's Cabinet represented a small step by Israel to clear up the status of thousands of foreign workers in Israel. Under the decision, children of migrants whose parents entered Israel legally may remain if they are enrolled in school, speak Hebrew and have been here longer than five years.

An Israeli advocacy group, the Hotline for Migrant Workers, estimates 700 of 1,200 school-age children are at risk of deportation, along with their parents.

About 200,000 migrant workers live in Israel, mostly from the Philippines, China and Africa. About half have overstayed their visas, thousands for many years. Many have children who were born in Israel and know no other home.

Some Israelis complain that illegal migrants are taking jobs away from citizens. Others worry that the non-Jewish workers could upset the Jewish nature of the society.

At the Sunday Cabinet meeting, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu agreed with the critics. "This is a tangible threat to the Jewish and democratic character of the state of Israel," he said. In another step to limit the influx of foreigners,

John Aylesworth, producer and co-creator of 'Hee Haw' dies at 81

Bv Matt Schudel The Washington Post

John Aylesworth, a television writer and producer who was co-creator of the long-running country variety show "Hee Haw," died July 28 at a hospital in Rancho Mirage, Calif. He had pulmonary fibrosis. He was 81.

Aylesworth and his writing partner and fellow Canadian, Frank Peppiatt, had never visited the rural South or Midwest before developing "Hee Haw," a fast-paced hour of cornball jokes and music, in 1969. The program, with country singers Buck Owens and Roy Clark as hosts and a stable of other comedians and musicians, aired on CBS for two years.

Despite high ratings, "Hee Haw" was canceled during a purge of CBS's rural-oriented shows in 1971. Aylesworth, Peppiatt and a business partner found advertisers and syndicated the program on their own - an unheard-of practice in TV at the time. and knew next to nothing pride in rural America. production until 1992 and, with 585 episodes, was one of the longest-running shows in TV history.

Lebron was arrested in 2001 at age 81 when she and five other people cut through a fence on the neighboring island of Vieques to protest the 1999 death of a civilian security guard killed by an errant bomb dropped during a U.S. Navy training exercise. The U.S. has since closed the Vieques bombing range. She was sentenced to 60 days in jail for trespassing.

In recent years, Lebron tempered her support for violent struggle.

"I think times have changed, and there is no need now to kill for freedom," she told El Mundo newspaper in 1998. "I would not take up arms nowadays, but I acknowledge that the people have a right to use any means available to free themselves."

Eddy McKean proved once again why he is a former NASCAR champion as he cruised to victory Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway in The Mr. Gas Late Models 50-lap main event race.

Starting from the front row, Mike Greco held the lead through lap four when Kris McKean slid over the turn three embankment, bringing out the first caution of the race.

Greco was able to hold the front-runner position until lap 10, when Eddy McKean took over, leaving Greco to deal with a determined Rick Fowble.

While McKean worked on extending his lead in the race, Fowble finally managed to get around Greco at lap 17. Eight laps later another caution would set up another restart and Fowble, wanting to add to his lead in the points standings, soon began to take on McKean.

Through the next 15 laps searching for a way to get around him but another caution set up another restart with 10 laps to go in the race. When the green flag waved the field on for the final laps. Stuart Appleby shoots 59 at Greenbrier

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. - Stuart Appleby hit golf's magic number, shooting a 59 to win the Greenbrier Classic.

Appleby's 11-under round put him at 22 under to end a four-year winless drought. Third-round leader Jeff Overton finished second by one stroke after his birdie try slid by the hole on the par-3 18th.

Appleby is the fifth PGA Tour player to reach the milestone. The Australian's round came less than a month after Paul Goydos had a 59 at John Deere Classic.

The others to shoot 59 were Al Geiberger at the 1977 Memphis Classic, Chip Beck at the 1991 Las Vegas Invitational and David Duval at the 1999 Bob Hope Appleby had nine birdies and an eagle in his round of on the Old White course. He is the first to shoot a 59 on a par-70 course.

the state's elk population. Not so much, it turns out. In its August newsletter, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game summarized recent elk studies and found only a minority of elk populations are declining and wolves are culprits in few.

One-third of elk populations are increasing even though wolves have been in Idaho since 1995. Though statewide numbers have dropped some, claims that wolves are wholly responsible for declining elk populations aren't holding up.

Craig White of Fish and Game said the agency's wildlife division conducted elk studies in 11 of the 29 state elk management areas between 2005 and 2008. The sample included five of the six areas in the state with declining populations. White said biologists tried to collar approximately 30 female elk in each area. They found that wolves killed significant numbers of collared elk in only one area, the Lolo zone along U.S. Highway 12 in north Idaho. Over the three years, the report claims wolves killed 20 percent of the Lolo sample, or about six elk. Threequarters of the collared elk survived, less than Fish and Game's survival goal of 88 percent.

White said deteriorating habitat in the Lolo zone has contributed to declining elk numbers since at least 1988, before wolves entered the picture. The population dropped by 40 percent during the severe winter of 1996-97 alone. Bears and cougars also kill many elk. Just across the border, Montana biologists are starting a similar collaring study in Ravalli County, where one factor of elk decline may be high human population growth.

The report said wolves caused the highest number of deaths in two other areas with declining populations. But in the Smoky Mountain zone west of Ketchum, where wolves were said to have killed 5 percent of about 30 collared elk, other predators and hunters together killed 7 percent. The Sawtooth zone, west of Stanley, had similar results.

Conversely, the report showed that hunters were the biggest cause of elk kills in two other areas with declining populations: the Pioneer zone east of Ketchum, and Island Park near Rexburg. In the Island Park zone, hunters killed 17 percent of collared elk while wolves killed none.

The conclusion that wolves don't have a greater effect on elk runs counter to the expectations of many. In July 2009, an informal Fish and Game survey of 2,500 out-of-state hunters found that three in 10 didn't plan to visit Idaho because of the perceived effect of wolves on elk populations.

In the late '90s, even ecologists like Scott Creel of Montana State University expected wolves to kill a lot of elk. But after eight years studying the Greater Yellowstone ecosystem where wolves are numerous, he's learned that other factors are more likely to reduce elk populations.

Before wolves were reintroduced, elk populations were larger and elk stayed in the open, which is what hunters got used to, Creel said. Now, he said, elk may be acting like they did before wolves were eliminated.

"No predator has ever eliminated its food," Creel said. "Change is always the most dramatic at the beginning, then population numbers settle."

There's still a legitimate argument to be made that wolves have no place in Idaho. But let's get the facts straight first.

he waterfall of leaks on Afghanistan underlines the awful truth: We're not in control. Not since Theseus fought the Minotaur in his maze has a fight been so confounding.

The more we try to do for our foreign protectorates, the more angry they get about what we try to do. As Congress passed $59 billion in additional war funding last week, not only are our wards not grateful, they're disdainful.

Maureen Dowd

Washington gave the Wall Street banks billions, and, in return, they stabbed us in the back, handing out a fortune in bonuses to the grifters who almost wrecked our economy.

Washington gave the Pakistanis billions, and, in return, they stabbed us in the back, pledging to fight the militants even as they secretly help the militants.

We keep getting played by people who are playing both sides.

Robert Gibbs recalled that President Obama said last year that "we will not and cannot provide a blank check" to Pakistan.

But only last week, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton arrived in Pakistan to hand over a juicy check: $500 million in aid to the country that's been getting a billion a year for most of this decade and in 2009 was pledged another $7.5 billion for the next five. She vowed to banish the "legacy of suspicion" and show that "there is so much we can accomplish together as partners joined in common

Gibbs argued that the deluge of depressing war documents from the whistle-blower Web site WikiLeaks, reported by The New York Times and others, was old. But it reflected one chilling fact: the Taliban ably lame, even when we has been getting better and better every year of the insurgency. So why will 30,000 more troops help?

We invaded two countries, and allied with a third all renowned as masters at double-dealing. And, now lured into their mazes, we still don't have the foggiest idea, shrouded in the fog of wars, how these cultures work. Before we went into Iraq and Afghanistan, both places were famous for warrior cultures. And, indeed, their insurgents are world class.

But whenever America tries to train security forces in Iraq and Afghanistan so that we can leave behind a somewhat stable country, it's positively Sisyphean. It takes eons longer than our officials predict. The forces we train turn against us or go over to the other side or cut and run. If we give them a maximum security prison, as we recently did in Iraq, making a big show of handing over the key, the imprisoned al-Qaida militants are suddenly allowed to escape.

The British Empire prided itself on discovering warrior races in places it conquered – Gurkhas, Sikhs, Pathans, as the Brits called Pashtuns. But why are they warrior cultures only until we need them to be warriors on our side? Then they're untrainspend $25 billion on building up the Afghan military and the National Police Force, dubbed "the gang that couldn't shoot straight" by Newsweek. Maybe we just can't train them to fight against each other. But why can't countries that produce fierce insurgencies produce good standing armies in a reasonable amount of time? Is it just that insurgencies can be more indiscriminate?

Things are so bad that Robert Blackwill, who was on W's national security team, wrote in Politico that the Obama administration should just admit failure and turn over the Pashtun South to the Taliban since it will inevitably control it anyway. He said that the administration doesn't appreciate the extent to which this is a Pashtun nationalist uprising.

We keep hearing that the last decade of war, where we pour in gazillions to build up Iraq and Afghanistan even as our own economy sputters, has weakened al-

Pakistan's tribal areas "remain the greatest danger as these are strategic footholds for al-Qaida and its senior leaders, including Osama bin Laden and Ayman al-Zawahiri," the blunt four-star general wrote, adding that they "remain key to extremists' efforts to rally Muslim resistance worldwide."

Questioned by John McCain, Gen. Mattis said that we're not leaving Afghanistan; we're starting "a process of transition to the Afghan forces." But that process never seems to get past the starting point. During the debate over war funds last week, Rep. Iim McGovern, a Massachusetts Democrat, warned that we are in a monstrous maze without the ball of string to find our way out.

"All of the puzzle has been put together, and it is not a pretty picture," he told the New York Times' Carl Hulse. "Things are really ugly over there."

Why is Idaho giving Areva an overpass?

Really? $750,000 for an overpass to connect a nonexistent factory with, what?

The road out of Idaho? In a time of increased budget cuts and in a state that professes fiscal conservatism and responsibility, I find it shocking that the state of Idaho has provided enormous tax exemptions and awarded large grants to Areva, a financially overextended company. Frenchowned Areva wants to build a uranium enrichment facility outside of Idaho Falls. Of all the projects in Idaho needing money, Idaho gives Areva an over-

The Idaho Statesman's Kevin Richert, in his recent commentary, made a good point: why is an allegedly underfunded Idaho Transportation Department putting precious funds now toward a facility which has not even been licensed and would not be operational until 2014?

I can think of many other pressing things our state needs rather than a road which will dead-end in sagebrush for years and maybe forever. I'm going to be bringing my questions to the Environmental Impact Statement meeting being held in Boise on Aug. 9 from 7 to 9:30 pm. This hearing, and the one in Idaho Falls, will be Idaho's only chance to share concerns about licensing the Areva enrichment factory with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Police don't have priorities straight

So let me get this straight: I can call the police and try to get them to control the cars going down Fillmore Street at 40 mph. This is a residential street with a 25 mph limit with children that need to cross this street. The police say they don't have the manpower and the city refuses to post extra signs reminding drivers that this is a 25 mph zone with children. But, some "third party" can call Health and Welfare and complain that children are "playing" in the street (when in actuality they were just trying to cross the street) and the police show up within minutes.

Talk about a backward use of manpower. Let's not monitor the real offenders but harass little children?

Oh, and by the way, I have also complained about the drug deals going on at Fillmore and Addison and the police refuse to randomly park and monitor that activity as well. Go figure why this city is going to hell

We are losing our great nation, and I feel so help-

I just finished reading the Constitution of the United States of America again. It is a powerful document. And I would guess many of our citizens haven't even read it.

I would suggest everyone and especially the president and members of Congress read it or reread it. It may help them make better decisions and find out they have not been following the guidelines as set forth in the Constitution.

For example, Section 4 of Article 4 states very clearly the duties of the president and Congress: "The United States shall guarantee to every state in this union a Republican form of government and shall protect each of them against invasion and, and on application of the Legislature or of the executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence."

Gov. Jan Brewer should suggest Obama read Section 4 of Article 4 and try to understand what it says.

Hundreds of new wildfires scorch Russia

By Mikhail Metzel

VORONEZH, Russia - Hundreds of new fires broke out Sunday in Russian forests and fields that have been dried to a crisp by drought and record heat, but firefighters claimed success in bringing some of the wildfires raging around cities under control.

The firefighters got much-needed help from residents desperate to save their homes, who shoveled sand onto the flames and carted water in large plastic bottles.

The wildfires that began threatening much of western Russia last week have killed 28 people and destroyed or damaged 77 towns or villages, the areas in the path of flames, but no deaths have been recorded since late Wednesday.

New Iraqi government figures tell a different story, however, showing civilian casualties hitting their highest level in more than two years - figures the U.S. rushed on Sunday to dispute. The rejection of the figures, compiled by the Iraqi ministries of defense, interior and health, comes at a delicate time. The American military has pronounced Iraq's security as stabilizing and is going ahead with plans to send home all but 50,000 troops by the end of the month, leaving Iraq's nascent security forces in control. The last American soldier is due to leave by the end of 2011. Things were not much better in July for the Americans in Afghanistan – where U.S. losses were the highest for any month of the war. In Iraq, the July death toll - 532 – was the highest of progress in their other since May 2008 when 563 died, heightening concerns over the country's precarious security even as a political deadlock persists nearly five months after a parliamentary election produced no clear winner.

The new figures suggested that a resilient insurgency is successfully taking advantage of the political deadlock and shows the difficulties of achieving a political solution in a polarized society like Iraq's, where ethnic and religious groups compete for power regardless of where national interests lie.

The U.S. military countered that its own data showed only 222 Iraqis had been killed in July. "We do our very best to be vigilant to ensure the numbers we report are as accurate as can be," spokesman Lt. Col. Bob Owen said in defense of the military's own numbers.

An Associated Press tally indicated that at least 350 Iraqis were killed in July, but this figure is considered a minimum, based on AP reporting. The actual number is likely higher, as many killings go unreported or "In March of 2008, I decided to have my heart tested when HealthFair was conducting tests near my home. The was fun procedure and painless, but the technician told me I had a problem. My Aorta was 5.7cm, not in the danger zone, but way above normal. I went to a cardiologist to confirm these results and yes indeed I needed surgery. Three months later and I am already back at work. While I am grateful to the surgical team, I owe a big thank you to HealthFair. My father suggested I go for the test, and I am glad I did. I felt fine and there were no symptoms, but yet one day in the near future I would have died.

Funny thing is, I just had an annual checkup and was told I was fine. I suggest everyone reading this to get checked out with HealthFair. This test saved my LIFE!

I am 66 years old and went to a HealthFair screening in Plano, TX late in 2008. Your ultrasound tech discovered that my right carotid artery was 75%+ blocked. I was advised to contact my family doctor immediately. I did, and I was referred to a vascular surgeon. I was told that I needed to have surgery on my carotid artery or I would not be around for much longer.

So I am now recovering from carotid artery surgery and the right side is clear. I am on medication to help reduce the plaque on my left side. I will get checked yearly now....

All of this would NOT have been detected if it weren't for your screenings. I am not a regular at the doctor's office. "I'm not sick, I don't need a check-up!" has been my mantra for the past 20 years. Your HealthFair screening saved my life...so THANKS for being there.

Heart Disease Prevention Package

Echocardiogram Ultrasound Test

Echocardiogram is a video ultrasound of the heart. It may detect enlargement of the heart, valve abnormalities, blood clots and tumors.

Electrocardiogram (EKG) Test

EKG may detect ischemia, silent heart attack and atrial fibrillation. EKG provides a picture of the electrical activity of the heart.

Hardening of the Arteries (ASI) Test

Hardened arteries cause the heart to work harder, which leads to vascular disease. ASI test shows the degree of hardening of the arteries.

ALL 3 TESTS

These cardiac tests are painless and noninvasive. Their combined cost is more than $1,300 at most hospitals.

Stroke & Aneurysm Prevention Package

Stroke/Carotid Artery Ultrasound Test

Many strokes are associated with blockages in the carotid arteries that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm Test (4-hour fast required)

Abdominal aortic aneurysms form as a result of a weakness in the lining of the artery wall that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Blood Circulation (Arteriosclerosis) Test

Many adults have leg cramps due to poor circulation. ABI screening measures extremities for peripheral arterial disease.

Type 2 diabetes prompts many to change lifestyles

By Ariel Hansen Times-News writer

A few generations ago, a diagnosis of Type 2 diabetes meant your life was turned upside down. Treating it meant weighing your food and avoiding all sugars, and odds were you'd lose a limb to amputation or go blind before you died.

Today, the disease is often diagnosed much earlier, when patients can make lifestyle changes that are sometimes enough to keep the disease from progressing. Medication can also help, and most Type 2 diabetics who follow their doctors' advice are able to delay or avoid the worst complications.

Take Sally Fullmer. During a panel of routine tests about 15 or 20 years ago, her doctors discovered she was diabetic.

"I teased my doctor, you're dying to find something wrong with me," said the Twin Falls woman, 72, recalling the time. "I was really disappointed and upset because I thought I'd have to give up every-

The diagnosis scared her, because her grandfather died of Type 2 diabetes, her uncle died of Type 1 diabetes, and both of her sisters and her brother have Type 2. But her relatively early diagnosis has meant she has dealt with her disease with exercise, nutritional changes and medication.

"We tried to control it by diet for a while, but it got to the point where tions," Fullmer said. "It's manageable. You'd never choose to have it, but I can't complain."

Fullmer recently had a checkup and was told she is in good shape – which she attributes to regular walks to Walmart, watching her weight, avoiding refined sugars and taking her medications.

Because of diabetes' genetic component, Fullmer has encouraged her three sons, ages 43-50, to make sim-

What is diabetes?

The disease comes primarily in two types, 1 and 2.

Type 1, also called juvenile diabetes because it primarily affects younger people, is the less common type. People with Type 1 don't produce enough insulin naturally and must get it from an outside source, usually via injection. Without additional insulin, Type 1 diabetics can experience symptoms up to coma and death. Type 2, which affects 90 percent of those who suffer from diabetes, is caused by resistance to insulin or relatively low levels of insulin (not as low as in Type 1), and usually worsens over time if it is not treated. This type can lead to heart attacks, strokes, vision problems, kidney failure and amputation of limbs.

Pregnant mothers may also experience gestational diabetes, which is sometimes a precursor to the development of Type 2.

Symptoms of all kinds of diabetes include frequent urination, increased thirst and increased hunger, and it is often not diagnosed early. However, lifestyle changes can often delay or prevent the onset of full-blown Type 2 diabetes if prediabetic conditions are detected early enough.

Who does Type 2 diabetes affect?

Type 2 diabetes affects one in 15 adult Idahoans, and two out of five Idahoans over the age of 65. In 2008, 76,000 Idahoans reported having the disease, with an average age

In the United States, 24 million adults have it (5.7 million don't know they do), while 57 million have prediabetes and are at risk for developing the full-blown disease. It is the seventh-leading cause of death in this country.

The major risk factors for Type 2 diabetes are genetics and lifestyle; obesity, smoking, unhealthy diets, high blood pressure, high cholesterol, use of certain medications and lack of exercise are all known to play a role.

"We know there are these contributing factors, we just don't know the intricate interplay of all these things," said Nancy Dettori, registered nurse and certified diabetes educator at St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center. Native Americans, blacks and Hispanics are at greater risk of developing Type 2 diabetes, as much as double that of Caucasians.

According to the Centers for Disease Control's estimates of the percentage of adults with Type 2 diabetes in 2007, Cassia, Minidoka, Jerome and Twin Falls counties had rates of 7.5 percent to 7.9 percent; Gooding, Camas and Lincoln counties were at 7 percent; and Blaine County was at 4.6 percent.

In 2004, Cassia was at 5.9 percent; Minidoka, 6.2 percent; Jerome, 6.7 percent; Twin Falls, 7.1 percent; Gooding, 7.5 percent; Camas, 6.3 percent; Lincoln, 6.5 percent; and Blaine, 5.4 percent. The overall rise in these numbers over the three years reflects a national trend.

"Idaho is not unlike the nation at a whole; our rates of increase have gone up dramatically since a decade ago," Dettori said. "This is not some fluke right now that we're seeing. It's truly pandemic: Diabetes is on the rise."

they finally did put me on medica- ilar lifestyle choices. She describes them as "very, very active," and so far none have gotten the disease, but one granddaughter has Type 1.

> Fullmer admits she could be more active herself and owns up to indulging her chocoholism with occasional dark chocolate, but she said she feels lucky to live in a time when there are food alternatives that don't require deprivation, and medications that help her live a basically ordinary life.

For some Type 2 sufferers, diet and exercise alone are enough to achieve control over the disease.

John Beer's eye doctor began to suspect he might have diabetes nine years ago, and sure enough, his doctor confirmed the diagnosis.

A retired saw sharpener, Beer lost 40 pounds initially, by walking three miles four days a week, getting on the treadmill or bicycle regularly,

Two Times-News runners court the Snake River Canyon

By Amy Huddleston and Eric Larsen Times-News writers

As we hug its curves, breathless and sweating, we know our advances are unremarkable to the Snake River Canyon. Still we push through our boundaries and fears, hoping to be accepted.

The canyon - like the 7.5-mile Rim 2 Rim race it hosts – has seen generations of suitors, each hoping to make it their next conquest. Some have claimed as much. Many others have failed, their shortcomings keeping a once-held dream forever out of reach.

To us, the canyon is new, exciting. We bought special outfits and shoes, hoping to impress. On Sept. 18 we -Times-News reporter Amy Huddleston and City Editor Eric Larsen – will both run the Rim 2 Rim race for the first time, in hopes that the canyon accepts our initial overtures in this new relationship.

And we need your help.

Rim 2 Rim started more than 30 years ago as a College of Southern Idaho cross country program fundraiser. Since, race promotion has changed hands various times, most recently transferring to Habitat for Humanity of the Magic Valley in 2006. It remains a major fundraiser for Habitat's efforts to provide housing for area families, typically garnering between $18,000 and $26,000 per year in conjunction with a related auction, said Rim 2 Rim chairwoman and Habitat director Linda Fleming.

"It is such a community event," Fleming said. "People look forward to it every year."

The run raised $17,000 for Habitat in 2008, Fleming said, though that total dropped to $13,000 last year. We hope to help reverse that trend, and we'll compete with other runners to see who can gather the most pledges for the run. So if you have a nickel or two to spare, we'll let you know how to put it behind your favorite of the two Times-News employees or behind another friend, neighbor or

Paleo diet encourages prehistoric eating

By Anna Tong McClatchy Newspapers

Our Stone Age ancestors lived in an uncomfortable world, spending their 30year life spans hunting and gathering without air conditioning or heat.

But some say the cave men ate better than we do.

That's the premise behind the Paleo diet, a health and weight-loss trend that encourages people to eat modern-day versions of Paleolithic food.

Several weeks ago, one group of health-conscious Californians took on the Paleo diet and planned to spend nine weeks eating like cave men. That means consuming only animals, vegetables, fruits, nuts, seeds and mushrooms, said Rick Larson, co-owner of CrossFit West Sacramento, the gym running the challenge.

"A lot of people at our gym were getting good workout results, but I knew they weren't supporting it with their diets," Larson said. Because other gyms in the CrossFit family have had success with the Paleo diet, Larson decided to test it at his gym. Fifteen people took the bait.

Like any diet, the hardest thing about the Paleo diet is what you can't eat.

Glucosamine found ineffective for back pain

By Rob Stein

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON Glucosamine is a dietary supplement that many people take to treat arthritis. But does it really work? Not according to the first large. long-term study testing it on people suffering from chronic lower back pain caused by arthritis.

The theory is that glucosamine alleviates back pain by restoring cartilage and reducing inflammation. But the evidence for its effectiveness has been mixed. So researchers at Norway gave 250 patients suffering from chronic lower glucosamine or a placebo every day for six months.

After six months, the no significant difference in lemit is.

People who have chronic available through the College Southern Idaho.

Seventeen volunteers completed training offered by Stanford University to become trainers for Stanford's Chronic Disease Self-Management program, a CSI press release said.

CSI's version will be known as Living Well in Idaho.

Jan Mittleider, who oversees the program and the grant that funds it, said this is a tool to help people, primarily those older than 60, stay active and engaged in life as whatever conditions they have. The program, she said, will be an enhancement to the college's long-running Over 60 and Getting Fit program that operates at locations throughout southern Recreation Center. Idaho.

Although your doctor is the best professional to help you manage your specific disease, self-education is important, said Nancy Dettori, registered nurse and certified diabetes educator at St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center.

She noted that doctors often don't have the time to fully educate their patients, and recommended that patients turn to reputable websites like diabetes.org (the American Diabetes Association) or healthandwelfare.idaho.gov (search "Diabetes Alliance of Idaho" on the home page), or call their local public health district to be directed to other local resources. How to understand your doctor

By Alison Johnson Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

Many people leave their doctor's office feeling, in a word, confused.

Here are ways to improve your odds of grasping the facts: Write out questions in advance. Go into an appointment with a list of subjects or symptoms you want to cover. That way, you don't have to waste any brainpower thinking about what else you need to bring up; you can just listen.

Take notes. Write down the name of any new diagnosis, medication or treatment option and show it to your doctor to make sure the spelling is correct. Also record any instructions or tips given, after repeating them aloud for confirmation.

Keep asking questions. If you don't understand something, don't be afraid to say so. If there's a particular word or phrase you don't recognize, ask about that specifically. Doctors may forget that you don't know some common medical terms.

Bring backup. Have a family member or friend come to your appointment to give you an extra set of ears. Or ask if you can use a tape recorder to record the conversation.

BIRTHDAY: You may be all wrapped up in achieving an impossible dream this month. You may be inspired to visit an exotic location or hook up with someone who is not quite right, but rings your romantic chimes anyway. Enjoy vacation time or romantic moments during the next few weeks, but do not make major investments or purchases this month or in September because you may overlook the fine print. It may seem that all of the fun has vanished from your life in the fall, but if you work long and hard in November you might earn some trust and recognition that leads to major opportunities in March. March is the best month to make key decisions, launch plans or receive beneficial advice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Grab your water wings before you step into the pool. It would be wise to take precautions before attempting something risky. People in general may seem somewhat argumentative and compet-

TAURUS (April 20-May It is difficult to climb up on a high horse when you are sinking in the mud. You may feel it necessary to defend yourself from unwarranted abuse. You may be challenged if you act like you are above it all.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't pretend to have something you don't or be someone you're not. You might think you can get away with striking a pose that will seem a bit silly in hindsight. Avoid confrontations and hostilities.

CANCER (June 21- July 22): Tell people you are on a flirtation mission. It won't hurt to ask friends if they will help you achieve your goal of meeting someone new. You might be able to join a group that shares your interests.

LEO (July 23- Aug. 22): Aggressiveness and rudeness won't win friends or influence people. It may be necessary to stand up for your rights today, but you shouldn't throw down the gauntlet. Start no new rela-

VIRĜO (Aug. 23- Sept. 22): Breeze past trouble. Plug in the fan and keep the air of communication circulating. Someone close may need to be cooled down or appeased. Look the other way if people seem quarrelsome for a while. LIBRA (Sept. 23- Oct. 22.): It may be difficult to make schedules mesh. You might become involved in an endless game of phone tag or have trouble pinning someone down to a day or time. Face facts if the time isn't SCORPIO (Oct. 23- Nov. 21): The tortoise could move much more quickly than the hare thought. In the same way, you might underestimate how fast bad news travels. Partners, coworkers or even cabbies could seem irritable today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could be too eager to part with your pennies. You may want the best that money can buy, but at the same time might think that price represents value. Keep your credit card on the CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Act with forethought. It is best to be cautious about how you react to a challenge or confrontation. Remain stoic and businesslike when faced with opposition to your plans. Hold off on decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20- Feb. 18): You might be tempted to put too many pokers in the fire. You could be too eager to take charge or inadvertently offend someone with inappropriate enthusiasms. Stick to business as usual PISCES (Feb. 19- Mar. 20): You shouldn't gambol out for a gamble. You could easily act on the instinct to trust to luck just when your luck is at its lowest point. You might exaggerate your importance or position to someone today.

DEAR ABBY: Summer is the season for celebration – beach trips, picnics in the park and barbecues. But it can be a dangerous time for

Every year, thousands of dogs die after being left in overheated parked cars. Heatstroke can come on quickly and result in brain damage or death. Dogs are prone to heatstroke because they can cool themselves only by panting and sweating through their paw pads.

If you see a dog left in a car on a warm day, take down the car's color, model, make and license plate number. Have the owner paged inside nearby stores and call local humane authorities or the

If you see a dog exhibit any of the following symptoms: restlessness, excessive thirst, a rapid pulse, heavy panting, lethargy, lack of appetite, dark tongue, rapid heartbeat, fever, vomiting or lack of coordination - get the animal into the shade immediately and call the veterinarian.

YOU can save a dog's life! - LAURIE IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR LAURIE: Thank you for an important letter. I recently read that so far this year, 19 CHILDREN have died after being left in automobiles! During the summer months, leaving any living creature in a car — even with the windows cracked - is an invitation to a heartwrenching tragedy.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 15 years. My parents did not attend my wedding because my mother's job was more important - so my father never walked me down the aisle.

My brother is now being married for the first time. It will be his fiancee's third trip to the altar. Her father died years ago and they have asked my father to walk her down the aisle without even considering how I might feel about it. When I explained to Dad how hurt I feel, he didn't understand. But he told me he would not walk her down the aisle if it caused me pain. Now my brother and his fiancee are upset with me. Abby, can a groom's father ive away the woman his son is about to marry? Am I being selfish in suggesting she walk down the aisle by herself just as I did? RESENTFUL IN MICHIGAN DEAR RESENTFUL: The answer to both of your questions is yes.

DEAR ABBY: My 8-yearold daughter "Gwen" has friends whose parents allow them to watch movies I prefer my daughter not see specifically, scary movies. The parents of one of the girls have invited Gwen to a sleepover. I have been making excuses because I don't want Gwen having nightmares.

Would it be wrong or impolite to tell these parents that I don't want her watching scary movies? I don't want to appear to be dictating to them what they can or should this be handled?

DEAR you know Gwen would love to participate, but that you prefer that she not see scary films. If the mother can guarantee that none will be viewed that night, give your permission. Making your preference known is neither rude nor overbearing, so

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"He is all fault who hath no fault at all."

Alfred, Lord Tennyson

In today's deal South employed some finesse in the auction, but fell down in the play.

After North's light but entirely sound jump-raise to three hearts, South's fancy turned immediately to thoughts of a grand slam. He asked for aces, then bid five spades over the response to get his partner to bid five no-trump. At this point the six-club call asked North to bid the grand slam with a third-round club control. Had South bid six clubs over five hearts, that would have focused on the second-round club control.

As a general rule, after asking for aces, you should use five notrump directly to ask for kings (either specific or the number of kings) and direct-suit bids to look for second-round control in the named suit. The indirect route followed in today's auction asked for third-round control in the named suit.

Seven hearts looked like an excellent spot. Declarer won the opening heart lead, drew trumps, then went after clubs. The 5-0 split now proved too much for him, leaving an inescapable spade loser at the end.

Unlucky — but there was a simple, and painless, route to 13 tricks. Win the heart lead in dummy, immediately play to your spade ace and ruff a spade. Cross back with a second trump, ruff a second spade, and come back to hand with a diamond to draw the last trump. You can safely claim the rest now, without needing the clubs to split.

ANSWER: There is some temptation to lead the spade ace, but that would be necessary only if the defense needs to cash out at once (perhaps if dummy has a long suit). I suggest defending along passive lines, which argues for a trump lead. My second choice would be a small diamond rather than the 10. It is likely that someone holds a singleton or doubleton diamond honor.

WARNING When purchasing a vehicle, make sure that the title is in the name of the seller. Under Idaho motor vehicle code a vehicle cannot be sold unless the title is in the name of the seller (exception: Idaho licensed dealer). The seller shall provide the new purchaser a signed bill of sale showing the following: Full description of the vehicle, vehicle identification number amount paid and name(s) and address of the new purchaser. The bill of sale must be signed, dated and show actual mileage at the time of sale. If you have any questions, please contact your local assessor's office.
