Court suspends judge disqualification rule

Attorneys will now have to state reasons for requesting removal

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The Idaho Supreme Court has suspended attorneys' ability to disqualify judges from criminal cases without stating their reasons for such a move, and Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs is less than thrilled.

On July 23, Chief Justice Daniel

Eismann signed an order suspending Section A of Criminal Rule 25, which allowed both prosecutors and defense counselors the right to disqualify a judge without cause. The order further stated that Section A "has been used excessively and abused so that the use of the rule should be curtailed and a study made of the possible modification or elimination of the rule."

Loebs on Wednesday said the suspension was "a very foolish thing to have done."

"Rule 25, as it was, is a very important safety valve for the system," Loebs said. "It protected judges from attacks by attorneys and protected attorneys from retaliation from judges."

The basis of Rule 25, which allows attorneys to file a request to attorneys seek disqualification without providing cause.

Why the change now? Eismann is out of the office this week and not available for comment, according to workers in his Boise office. And area officials who found this rule a point of contention say it has nothing to do with them.

Fifth Judicial District Judge Robert Elgee told the Times-News in 2009 that Loebs and Blaine County Prosecutor Jim Thomas were abusing the rule. Elgee, who petitioned the Supreme Court to JEROME — He stood tall in his white shirt and blue jeans. His long white beard and baseball cap would protect his face later, though his thigh-high wader boots offered cause to take pause.

Well, they weren't high enough, he said.

Rex Studyvin owns a majority of the pigs used in the Jerome County Fair's pig-wrestling event on Tuesday night. He'd pat each porker's head affectionately after it was offered to the 50-gallon barrel, and he wouldn't let people question whether grappling with four mud-splattered people was painful for the pigs.

"They're just like some people," he said, adjusting spectators packed into DePew Arena twisted into the night above Jerome, combined into an unmistakable ruckus only heard in town one night each year.

It's the top-attended night of the Jerome County Fair, said fair board member and past president Jim Pierce, as the fair has supplied wrasslin' fun for more than 10 years.

"You don't need experience, just the guts to climb over there and do it," Pierce said of the entrants.

The idea for the event was borrowed from a fair convention in Las Vegas.

County to gather comments on old hospital building

Westerra finishes study, suggests marketing push

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The five-month, $41,850 consultation by Westerra Realty Group on the soon-to-be-vacant St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center building has yielded results — hundreds of pages' worth.

The Twin Falls County commissioners don't have answers on who to court when trying to fill the building, or even how to zone the highly specialized structure. But they do have a three-inch binder filled with information on the medical center, ranging from asbestos being found in it in 1993 to how much it would cost the county to maintain it or demolish it if officials can't find a tenant to lease or buy.

The representatives from Westerra, Jeff Blick and Fran Florence, suggested next steps of seeking community input through a town hall and developing a marketing guide for the building, which they said their company could put together.

"At this point, I think (the commissioners) should just keep an open mind," Blick said of new possible tenants.

He suggested the city and county work together to zone the site as loosely as possible without breaking consistency with other buildings near it on Addison Avenue.

Commissioner Tom Mikesell said the information in the presentation wasn't a surprise because the commissioners have been meeting with Westerra monthly since hiring the group in February.

"(The building) is of grave concern to me as a commissioner," Mikesell said, adding he wants to spend as little taxpayer

Conservation program has benefits, but there are no guarantees

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Both agricultural and wildlife groups praise the potential advantages of the Conservation Reserve Program, but they'll have to hustle to realize additional benefits in Idaho.

Farmers and ranchers now have until Aug. 27 to enroll their land in the program, which pays them to not use it.

Lance Phillips, executive director of the Farm Service Agency's Twin Falls County office, said Magic Valley farmers should apply if there's even a chance that they want to rest some land. The sign-up period is a bit

Those who want to help the scorched Auger Falls area near Twin Falls now have an opportunity to do so.

The Twin Falls Community Foundation decided this week to start a fund to help rehabilitate the area, which was burned in a large blaze along the Snake River Canyon on July 22. The nonprofit organization's donation will go toward reseeding a 600-acre area, most of it city-owned and slated for improvements even before the fire.

"I think it fits very well into the city's future," said Terry McCurdy, president of the foundation, of the reseeding effort. "I think it's a pristine piece of property. I think it's a

WESTERRA REALTY'S ASSESSMENT OF OLD ST. LUKE'S BUILDING

Consultation cost: $41,850

Recommendations:

- Marketing should begin soon to minimize time paying for maintenance
- County should "keep an open mind" about new tenants
- Zoning restriction should be loose to maximize potential use

The findings assessed:

- Infrastructure access to building
- Historical findings, such as asbestos being discovered in 1993
- Cost of monthly maintenance to the building
- Traffic numbers for the area
- Property values in the area

money as possible on maintaining an empty building.

As for getting a new tenant into the building by the time St. Luke's moves to its new offices, "everything is possible," he said.

Commissioner Terry Kramer called the study a "good starting point on finding a tenant." Its point was to gather as much information as possible on the building to better pitch it to potential buyers and lessors, he said. He said Westerra was "real cautious" about not recommending uses for the building because the county intends to receive public input on its future use.

wonderful opportunity for the city. Times are tough right now. It's not a fun situation and so we want to be able to help where we can."

Auger Falls includes 700 acres, 550 owned by the city and 150 owned by the Bureau of Land Management. Nearly 85 percent of it was burned, as the fire raged during the same year the city opened Auger Falls Park.

"It's pretty devastating," Dennis Bowyer, the city Parks and Recreation director, said of the damage. "We know there's a lot of people that use that area and they hate to see it burnt out like that."

He said the new fund is an excellent idea, adding that the support is appreciated.

Bowyer plans to talk with BLM officials about what kind of native grasses to plant in the area.

It's unknown how much reseeded will cost, though preliminary estimates show it could be around $45,000. Bowyer said he's not sure yet when planting would take place.

Twin Falls Mayor Don Hall commended the foundation for its efforts.

"I am always, always pleased when organizations and private entities come to together to try to help public entities for the betterment of the community, because we can't do it all by ourselves," Hall said.

Nobody originally thought it would bring home the bacon, Pierce said, but participants and spectators have responded en masse over the years. More than 80 teams were turned away on Tuesday, leaving 70 teams to battle for prizes and bragging rights that, for one night at least, would place their lives high on the hog.

Former fair board member Mike Lancaster said many of the children participating Tuesday had parents who also were on teams.

"It's probably the only time some of these kids will touch a pig or get mud on them," Lancaster said with a laugh, watching a team of teen girls in tie-dye fall in the mud as they slipped toward a pink pig.

The teams took differing approaches on Tuesday to stowing their swine. While the children started with one hand on the metal fence and both little feet in the mud, the adults had to run from the arena fence and hurdle into the pen. The pig was often cornered and each team member took a leg, holding the pig the way one carries a roasted hog from a Hawaiian luau. Other teams scrambled after their slippery prey, hoping to grasp it in a bear — or boar — hug before attempting to heave it into the barrel.

Squeals of resistance echoed from the white trailer where the pigs rested until their time was up. And when their time came, some pigs won, leaving many contestants to wash the mud from their teeth.

Teams of 3- to 6-year-olds chased piglets to warm up the crowd, and as the night grew dark the team members, the buckets and the pigs all got bigger.

The Mini Moo Crew was among the teams determined to do well. Eight-year-old Jordan McCaughey was the only member who had participated before and said her favorite part was getting muddy.

"I had butterflies earlier, but I'm not nervous," she said before her team's try.

Meanwhile, the Valley Country Store Lady Oinkers delivered on their promise to put on a good show. The women donned feed sacks, tied with orange baling twine, and plunked the pork in the barrel in 15.99 seconds. After all of their hands were flung in the air to signify their finish, the women grabbed hands and fell over backwards into the mud.

For the pigs, the spectators and the mire-splattered teams, it was a night that will be remembered long after the bruises have faded and the mud has been washed off.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — More people are visiting Yellowstone National Park than ever before.

The park announced Wednesday that it set a new monthly record for visits during July, when more than 957,000 people came through its gates. That's nearly 60,000 more than last July, when the park's previous monthly record was set.

July usually is Yellowstone's busiest month, followed by August, June, September and May.

Yellowstone is on track to meet or exceed last year's record year. Nearly 3.3 million people visited Yellowstone — the world's first national park — in 2009. Visits for 2010 are up 5.8 percent over last year so far.

Wishful thinking in Canyon County

Canyon County, Idaho’s second-largest, is about one step away from putting thugs and rapists back on the street. Why should you care? Because the same thing could happen after November in Jerome County if its bond issue proposal for a new jail fails.

On Tuesday, Canyon County voters crushed the third attempt by the county to pass a bond issue to build a new stockade. Fifty-seven percent of voters said no.

These folks are living in never-neverland. Nampa police are already releasing multiple offenders with just a citation because there’s no room in the Canyon County Jail. The lockup is so chronically overcrowded that it’s under judicial mandate not to add any new prisoners.

What’s the alternative? Bad actors prowling the comfortable suburban neighborhoods of Nampa, Caldwell, Middleton, Notus and Parma.

Supporters of the new jail cited more than 6,000 unserved warrants and about 13,000 jail book-ins every year and criminals who remain on the street in Canyon County who shouldn’t be. Acknowledging the sluggish economy’s effect on residents, they described the need as great and said federal stimulus money could have saved taxpayers $5 million through the life of the bond.

Instead, Canyon County will be faced with the same two alternatives with which Jerome County must deal if its November bond fails: Let criminals loose or farm them out to other county jails, at a premium price to the county’s taxpayers.

Foes of the Canyon County bond issue proposal say the county should be able to get by with work-release and alternative sentencing. They’re mistaken.

Canyon County has applied all the palliatives available for its chronic jail overcrowding. It’s out of space — and therefore out of options.

So what if the same thing happens in Jerome County?

In all probably — sooner rather than later — the Jerome County Jail would be closed by the county’s insurance company because it’s too great a liability for lawsuits. If that happens, every Jerome County inmate — and it averages 65 of them a day — will have to be housed elsewhere at a cost of about $50 per day per prisoner.

We hope the Jerome County commissioners and Sheriff Doug McFall will point out the impending disaster in Canyon County when they pitch the proposal for a new jail to Jerome County taxpayers.

For the first time, Jerome County is trying the bond issue approach as opposed to the lease-purchase plan that failed twice previously.

This is as serious as a public-policy issue gets in Idaho. The safety of Jerome County’s citizens — and those beyond — is at stake in the November vote.

The enablers of Charlie Rangel

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi is the world’s worst cleaning lady. How has she fulfilled her vaunted promise to “drain the swamp” and preside over the “most ethical Congress in history”? By shrugging her shoulders, downplaying the gravity of myriad ethics charges against corruptocrat Democratic Rep. Charlie Rangel and waiting for the “political chips” to “fall where they may.” Imagine a custodial service that fixed toilet clogs by letting the overflowing waste and polluted waters “fall where they may.”

At a press conference to preempt the bipartisan House ethics panel’s announcement of 13 ethics and federal regulation charges against Rangel on Thursday afternoon, Pelosi claimed to take “great pride” in her swamp-draining record. Unblinkingly, she cited the House trial against Rangel as proof that the “process” is working. But that beleaguered panel has been pathetically understaffed, has dragged its feet for two years on the Rangel case and has administered more halfhearted wrist-slaps than all the pushover parents on a season of “Nanny 911.”

Clinging bitterly to the moral equivalence card, Pelosi carped about Bush-era GOP corruption. (Cue a chorus of “Let’s do the time warp again!”) Her lips were sealed, however, on the continuing wheeling and dealing behind the scenes between Rangel’s lobbyist-funded lawyers and the ethics panel on a deal to avoid a congressional trial.

A full-blown public trial would thoroughly air his self-dealing, habitual bad-faith failures to report income, multiple House gift ban and solicitation ban violations, flouting of franking privilege and letterhead rules, and a fundamental “pattern of indifference or disregard for the laws, rules and regulations of the United States and House of Representatives,” as the House ethics statement of violations put it. But, hey, what about that George W. Bush, eh, Pelosi?

Bush-whack all you want. The Rangel stench is overwhelming. Along the way, Rangel has obstructed House investigators, failed to produce documents and refused previous settlement offers — prompting House ethics investigative subcommittee member Rep. Jo Bonner, R-Ala., to reject the Rangel-as-victim narrative. Misfortune didn’t befall Rangel. He chose his path. While bleeding-heart lefties in the media, like The Washington Post’s Dana Milbank, mourn entrenched incumbent Rangel’s sudden fall (he “took 36 years to climb to the top, only to lose it all in an instant”), there is nothing sudden about the entitlement sclerosis that took hold of his career.

And there is nothing ethical about the Democratic enablers who have shown their own long pattern of indifference or disregard for clean, open, transparent government.

Since Day One, the identity-politics caucus that Rangel helped found has stood by his side and blamed anti-black bias for Rangel’s troubles. Rangel likened media scrutiny of his shady rent-controlled apartment deals and tax troubles to a “lynching.” CBC member Chaka Fattah, D-Pa., called it a “witch hunt.” And an unidentified, tinfoil-hatted black House Democrat told Politico: “It looks as if there is somebody out there who understands what the rules (are) and sends names to the ethics committee with the goal of going after the (CBC).”

Never mind that the supposedly bigoted House ethics panel exonerated four CBC members of their participation in corporate-funded tax junkets to the Caribbean. When the polls are down and damning evidence keeps mounting, first yell “Bush!” Then yell “raaaacist!”

As last-minute deal-making between Rangel and the foxes guarding the congressional henhouse continues, more and more Americans are coming to the same conclusions: House-soilers can’t be cleaners. Voters, not Washington politicians, are the ultimate ethics committee.

Living a well-considered life: two paths

This is a column about two ways of thinking about your life. The first is what you might call the Well-Planned Life. It was nicely described by Clayton Christensen in the current issue of the Harvard Business Review, in an essay based on a recent commencement talk.

Christensen advised the students to invest a lot of time when they are young in finding a clear purpose for their lives. “When I was a Rhodes scholar,” he recalls, “I was in a very demanding academic program, trying to cram an extra year’s worth of work into my time at Oxford. I decided to spend an hour every night reading, thinking, and praying about why God put me on this earth.”

“That was a very challenging commitment to keep, because every hour I spent doing that, I wasn’t studying applied economics. I was conflicted about whether I could really afford to take that time away from my studies, but I stuck with it — and ultimately figured out the purpose of my life.”

Once you have come up with an overall purpose, he continues, you have to make decisions about allocating your time, energy and talent. Christensen, who is a professor at the Harvard Business School and the author of several widely admired books, notes that people with a high need for achievement commonly misallocate their resources.

If they have a spare half-hour, they devote it to things that will yield tangible and near-term accomplishments. These almost invariably involve something at work — closing a sale, finishing a paper.

“In contrast,” he adds, “investing time and energy in your relationship with your spouse and children typically doesn’t offer that same immediate sense of achievement. ... It’s not until 20 years down the road that you can put your hands on your hips and say, ‘I raised a good son or a good daughter.’” As a result, the things that are most important often get short shrift.

Christensen combines a Christian spirit with business methodology. In plotting out a personal and spiritual life, he applies the models and theories he developed as a strategist. He emphasizes finding the right metrics, efficiently allocating resources and thinking about marginal costs.

When he is done, life comes to appear as a well-designed project, carefully conceived in the beginning, reviewed and adjusted along the way and brought toward a well-rounded fruition.

The second way of thinking about your life might be called the Summoned Life. This mode of thinking starts from an entirely different perspective. Life isn’t a project to be completed; it is an unknowable landscape to be explored. A 24-year-old can’t sit down and define the purpose of life in the manner of a school exercise because she is not yet deep enough into the landscape to know herself or her purpose. That young person — or any person — can’t see into the future to know what wars, loves, diseases and chances may loom. She may know concepts, like parenthood or old age, but she doesn’t really understand their meanings until she is engaged in them.

Moreover, people who think in this mode are skeptical that business models can be applied to other realms of life.

The person leading the Well-Planned Life emphasizes individual agency, and asks, “What should I do?” The person leading the Summoned Life emphasizes the context, and asks, “What are my circumstances asking me to do?”

The person leading the Summoned Life starts with a very concrete situation: I’m living in a specific year in a specific place facing specific problems and needs. At this moment in my life, I am confronted with specific job opportunities and specific options. The important questions are: What are these circumstances summoning me to do? What is the most useful social role before me?

In America, we have been taught to admire the lone free agent who creates new worlds. But for the person leading the Summoned Life, the individual is small and the context is large.

The first vision is more American. The second vision is more common elsewhere. But they are both probably useful for a person trying to live a well-considered life.

Grant program to aid rural economic development

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

The efforts of rural communities to attract new businesses are often hampered by limited resources. Filer, for example, doesn't have the funds to hire and retain staff for economic development, said Mayor Bob Templeman, although it does see the need for such business growth. That's why Filer — and other rural communities in Twin Falls county — plan to take advantage of a grant program that will help pay the salary and costs of hiring a rural economic development specialist. "Simply put, smaller communities have very little resources and aren't able to focus on bringing industry and make other economic growth happen," said Region IV Development President Joe Herring. "This grant provides a great opportunity for these communities to have someone in the county making those connections happen." The state-funded development grant is providing around $27,000 for the position, which will assist county communities, excluding Twin Falls, in bringing in businesses, jobs and capital investment. "We had requested $40,000 for the position but that request was cut," Herring said. "This is a one-year renewable grant, if we're doing good, and we expect to, the grant will be supported again." Business Plus, the economic development arm of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, is contributing to the position and larger county cities, like Buhl, Filer and Kimberly will need to chip in $2,000 each. Smaller cities, like Hollister and Castleford, will have to pay $500 to be part of the program.

So far Kimberly and Filer have jumped on board and Herring said he expects many will follow suit. Templeman said Filer has a lot of marketable traits and the council unanimously supported the city's participation. "The general consensus was that (an economic development specialist) can really help move things forward," Templeman said. "They can promote not only what Filer has to offer but all of us, we all have a lot to offer." Herring said the position will likely be filled by September. The specialist will be housed with the Region IV offices in Twin Falls but will work with the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization as well. SIEDO Executive Director Jan Rogers said the multifaceted approach will boost opportunities to each participating community. Business leads coming through Region IV or SIEDO will be matched to the communities involved and the processed carried through with assistance from the rural specialist. "If a lead comes in, we'll help that community put a proposal together," Rogers said. "We'll be helping on both the front end of the proposal through the back end. We're here all the way." Rogers said this position is critical because often times cities just don't have the resources to see such opportunities through or in a timely fashion. Businesses looking at cities won't wait around for thing to happen, Rogers said, so having a person devoted to bringing about prosperity is essential for success. Blair Koch may be reached at 316-2607 or blairkoch@gmail.com

Teen stores in tight spot for back-to-school sales

By Anne D'Innocenzio and Mae Anderson
Associated Press writers

NEW YORK — Half-priced jeans and promotional freebies are already popping up at the mall with the start of school still weeks away. Teen clothing sellers may have had some misplaced optimism about the strength of the economic recovery when orders were placed in the spring, and department stores are armed with hip jeans and fast fashion of their own. The battle for back-to-school dollars is giving parents more affordable choices for back-to-school clothing. The economy, which seemed on the mend a few months ago, has hit some speed bumps, and that has some industry experts wondering if teen merchants will be able to get rid of the piles of jeans and flashy T-shirts they bought expecting a stronger consumer rebound. Stubbornly high unemployment, especially bad among teens, has shoppers keeping a lid on spending and spurring bargain-hunting in a teen back-to-school clothing market worth $11 billion, according to market research firm NPD Group Inc. Consumers have been shopping increasingly later for back-to-school needs, with the bulk of the buying in August and September. That's why stores are trying to grab shoppers now with big discounts, though they could take a hit on profits if the discounting goes too far. Often, that's what it takes to get parents to spend. J.C. Penney Co. and Macy's Inc. are taking a page from white-hot fast-fashion chains such as Forever 21 and Swedish fashion retailer Hennes & Mauritz AB by quickly changing assortments of exclusive, affordable fashions. Cincinnati-based Macy's is betting its new Material

Girl fashion line, created by pop star Madonna and her 13-year-old daughter Lourdes, will resonate with a younger generation who didn't go clubbing in sheer lace tops. The collection, a modern twist on that 1980s look, is priced from $12 to $40. Teen retailers have more to lose. They get about 25 percent of annual sales from the back-to-school season, instead of 10 percent to 15 percent for department stores, according to Kurt

Council gives $2.5M for tourism promotion

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News

Tourism revenues declined slightly in south-central Idaho as the recession prompted visitors to either cut their vacations short or in some cases avoid them altogether. Lodging revenues, an indicator of dollars spent in Magic Valley by visitors from outside the valley and the state, declined 3 percent during the 2010 fiscal year ending June 10, compared to the previous year. It marked the second consecutive year of declining tourism. However, help is on the way to promote events and attractions in Magic Valley. Southern Idaho Tourism, the marketing and promotion arm of the seven-county area, will receive nearly $207,000 in state assistance to promote tourism for the remainder of the 2010 calendar year. The money is part of $2.5 million in Idaho Travel Council grants to fund non-profit organizations that promote tourism. "We plant use the money to carry us through the rest of the year," said Debbie Dane, executive director of Southern Idaho Tourism. "It will be used to help us market events and attractions with overnight stays to people in neighboring states. She said overnight lodging, which also generates tourism revenue for restaurants and other services, is important to increasing tourism dollars in the area. New this year was the regional effort to seek one grant for various entities in south-central Idaho. Grant requests are often made by one or more organizations like chambers of commerce, associations and visitor bureaus. Southern Idaho Tourism worked with the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce to apply for one — with the money being distributed among the entities. "As far as I know, it's the first time anyone in the state has done this," Dane said. "It will help us reduce our auditing costs for the grant, so we can put more of that money into marketing our region." Tourism is a $3 billion dollar industry in Idaho. Total lodging tax collections for fiscal year 2010 were $6.26 million. Joshua Palmer may be reached at jpalmer@magic-valley.com

New business owners end up doing juggling acts

Multi-tasking is something that most people have to do at work. Those who start their own companies quickly find they have an even bigger juggling act. Many brand-new entrepreneurs try to do it all: finding new customers, doing the work when they land an account, sending invoices, keeping the books, dealing with high-tech problems. Building a new company can be exhilarating, but doing it all yourself can be overwhelming and that can lead to burnout. It may end up hurting rather than helping the business. People who have started companies usually find ways to get the work done. Often, though, it means getting some help. SHOULD YOU DIY? OR GET SOME HELP? Many entrepreneurs try to do everything themselves

Gasoline prices rise after recent rally in oil

By Sandy Shore
Associated Press writer

The recent rise in oil prices is translating into higher prices at the pump. The national average for a gallon of regular unleaded rose 2.1 cents to $2.747 a gallon, according to AAA, Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service. The average price in Idaho was $2.923 per gallon, while the average price in Magic Valley remained mostly unchanged compared to a week ago at $2.892 a gallon. Oil has traded above $82 for two straight days. It was around $77 a week ago. According to the national average, motorists are paying about 3 cents more than they were two weeks ago and 18.6 cents more than a year ago. Benchmark crude for September delivery fell 8 cents to $82.47 a barrel in early trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The price has been at levels not seen since May for three consecutive days despite ample supplies or oil in storage and weak demand for gasoline and other refined products. In its weekly report, the Energy Department said U.S. commercial oil inventories fell by 2.8 million barrels to 358 million barrels for the week that

Crush of mud finally plugs BP's well in the Gulf

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the end, it was a crush of mud that finally plugged the blown-out well in the Gulf of Mexico, three months after the offshore drilling rig explosion that unleashed a gusher of oil and a summer of misery along the Gulf Coast.

The government stopped just short of pronouncing the well dead, cautioning that cement and mud must still be pumped in from the bottom to seal it off for good.

President Obama declared that the battle to contain one of the world's worst oil spills is "finally close to coming to an end."

Yet after months of living

Oil assessment

Of the estimated 4.9 million barrels of oil leaked from BP's busted well, 33 percent was either recovered, burned, skimmed or treated with dispersants.

with lost income, fouled shorelines and dying

"I'm wondering, as smart as the people in the U.S. government are, they couldn't have done this sooner?"

— Willie Jones, a retiree from Baton Rouge, La., on the apparent success of BP's 'static kill' in plugging the Gulf oil spill wildlife, some Gulf Coast residents weren't so sure.

"I don't think we've finished with this," said 59-year-old Harry "Cho-cho" Cheramie, who grew up in Grand Isle, La. "We haven't really started to deal with it yet. We don't know what effect it's going to have on our seafood in the long run."

Still, it appeared there might finally be an end in sight to the disaster that closed vast stretches of fishing areas, interrupted the usually lucrative tourist season, and cost BP's CEO his job and the company's shareholders billions of dollars.

BP PLC said 2,300 barrels of mud forced down the well overnight — an operation called a "static kill" — had pushed the crude back down to its source for the first time since the Deepwater Horizon rig exploded off Louisiana on April 20. The explosion killed 11 workers and began the spill that sent tar balls washing onto beaches and oil oozing into delicate coastal marshes.

Later Wednesday night, National Incident Commander Thad Allen said he approved BP's plan to begin forcing cement down the well, as long as it didn't delay work on the relief well. BP officials said they planned to begin pumping cement on today.

And there was more seemingly good news: A National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration report released

Wednesday claimed that only about 30 percent of the spilled oil remains in the Gulf and is degrading quickly. The rest has been contained or cleaned up or otherwise disappeared, and the report also said the oil no longer poses a threat to the Florida Keys or the East Coast.

But some independent experts said they were concerned that the government's method of estimating the amount was too simple for such a complex spill, and even government scientists cautioned the rosy numbers do not mean the Gulf is out of harm's way.

Summer of the spill almost over

By Joel Achenbach
The Washington Post

It wasn't quite the stake through the heart, because that stake has to be made of cement, not merely mud. And the stake might have to be driven in from below, not from the top. But on the 107th day of the Deepwater Horizon disaster, the run-away Macondo well has been rendered "static" and now looks very much like a harmless hole clogged with 13-pound-per-gallon gunk.

Meanwhile, a new federal report declares that the oil slick, the once-horrific expanse of red-orange mousse and silver sheen, has largely dissipated. Millions of barrels of oil have been dispersed by chemicals, skimmed by boats, burned, weathered, evaporated and devoured by the Gulf of Mexico's permanent oil-eating microbial workforce.

Federal waters are reopening gradually to fishing. The success of the "static kill" boosts the odds of a permanent kill from the bottom when the relief well intercepts Macondo in the coming weeks.

The crisis isn't over. But it's not the same uncontrolled calamity that it was a month ago, or two months ago, when Macondo mocked the technological skills of the world's petroleum engineers and oil was slathering birds and turtles and tarballing hundreds of miles of coastline.

Federal scientists have said that vigilance would be called for even if the "static kill" procedure worked, which, according to BP in a 2 a.m. announcement, it did.

"It'll look like it's mortally wounded but may not be dead," said Tom Hunter, former head of the Sandia National Laboratory and for months a member of Energy Secretary Steven Chu's scientific team.

Chu, like the national incident commander, retired Coast Guard Adm. Thad W. Allen, emphasized that the relief well is still the ultimate killer of Macondo. His line Tuesday is one of the more memorable spoken by officials since this crisis began: "You want to make sure it's really dead dead dead. Don't want anything to rise out of the grave."

In a sense, this will not really be over until Allen feels secure enough to take that vacation with his wife that he had scheduled for Aug. 1. Allen came close Tuesday to declaring that any premature celebration of the end of Macondo would be a federal crime.

"The static kill is not the end all be all," Allen told reporters in his Tuesday briefing. "In the long run, drilling into the annulus and into the casing pipe from below, filling that with mud and then filling that with cement is the only solution to the end of this. And there should be no ambiguity about that. I'm the national incident commander, and that's the way this will end."

The broader crisis might go on for years economically and environmentally. Deep water drilling is under a moratorium, and the oil industry has to convince the government and the public that it's safe again to puncture the seafloor at depths where only robotic submersibles can perform tricky engineering tasks.

There are multiple investigations, including a criminal probe, into what went wrong on the Deepwater Horizon. And the legal battles in civil court will probably play out for many years.

Nor does anyone know the long-term impact of the spill on marine species, deep-sea corals and marshland. The heavy use of dispersants remains highly controversial and the subject of continued investigation, though the most recent analysis by the Environmental Protection Agency essentially defended the dispersants as the right way to go.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Interior Department put out a report Wednesday estimating that three-quarters of the roughly 5 million barrels of oil gushed by Macondo has been consumed by microbes, has evaporated, or has been captured, skimmed or burned. Only 26 percent remains in the water or on the shoreline, the report says.

"The residual amount, just over one quarter (26 percent), is either on or just below the surface as residue and weathered tarballs, has washed ashore or been collected from the shore, or is buried in sand and sediments. Dispersed and residual oil remain in the system until they degrade through a number of natural processes. Early indications are that the oil is degrading quickly," a NOAA press release stated.

This should terminate, once and for all, the more apocalyptic scenarios for the demise of the gulf.

ENFIELD, Conn. — As Omar Thornton prepared to head off to work at a beer distributorship Tuesday morning, his girlfriend sensed something was wrong.

"He just kept having this dazed, confused look on his face, and I never saw him like that before," Kristi Hannah, his girlfriend of eight years, told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "I could tell something was bothering him. I asked him what was wrong a bunch of times and he said nothing was wrong with him. ... That's why he gave me a long hug and kiss before he left."

Thornton, 34, said he would call his girlfriend in a little while.

When he got to Hartford Distributors Inc., a family-owned business in the ethnically diverse Hartford suburb of Manchester, Thornton was confronted with videotaped evidence that he had been stealing beer. Company officials then forced him to resign. He responded by going on a rampage, killing eight co-workers, wounding two others and then killing himself.

Hannah said Thornton, who is black, had complained of racial harassment to her months ago and had shared with her evidence of it: photos of racist graffiti and a surreptitiously monitored conversation allegedly involving company managers.

She said Thornton called his union representative about the problems, but the official did not return his calls.

Union and company officials tell a different story. They say Thornton never complained of harassment and say there have never been reports of racial discrimination at the company.

A union official described Thornton as a dissatisfied worker whose first targets were the three people in his disciplinary meeting: Steve Hollander, 50, a member of the family that owns the company, who was shot twice but survived; Bryan Cirigliano, 51, president of Teamsters 1035 and Thornton's representative at the hearing; and Louis Felder, 50, who news reports described as the company's operations director.

Other victims were Doug Scruton, 56; Bill Ackerman,

Chris Roos, secretary-treasurer of Local 1035, tries to hold back tears Wednesday in South Windsor, Conn., as the union's lawyer tell reporters that 10 percent of the workers were killed in the shootings at Hartford Distributors on Tuesday.

Kristi Hannah, girlfriend of Omar S. Thornton, is seen at her mother's home in Enfield, Conn., Wednesday. Thornton, a driver for Hartford Distributors, killed eight people and himself at the beer distributor Tuesday.

Thornton

77, was wounded and was in serious condition Wednesday at Hartford Hospital.

What ended as a nightmare had begun as a dream job. Hannah said Thornton had been trying for about 18 months to land the job, and she recalled how excited Thornton was when he was hired about two years ago.

"He had this huge smile on his face," she said.

The only complaint Thornton ever made to the union was when he asked to be promoted from an entry-level job to a driver, said Gregg Adler, a union lawyer. The union explained to him that because of seniority rules, he would have to wait his turn until a job opened up. Eventually it did, and he was promoted about a year ago, Adler said.

Hannah said he loved being a driver. But there were problems.

She said he showed her photos he had taken with his cell phone. One was a drawing on a bathroom wall of a stick figure with a noose around the neck and a racial slur, she told the AP. Another scrawl said the writer hated black people and had Thornton's name on it, she said.

One day, Hannah said, he called her from a bathroom stall and held up his phone. She said she could hear a company official, apparently unaware Thornton was in a stall, tell someone else that the company was going to "get rid of this dumb n---."

Thornton also complained that colleagues had made racial slurs to him, she said. Co-workers would pack his truck wrong, causing him to work later, she said.

"He was being racially profiled and no one would listen to him," Hannah said. "I know what pushed him over the edge was all the racial stuff that was happening at work. I could hear in his voice it hurt him really bad. If they just listened to him they probably could have solved it."

Black tea party members deny racist claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black members of the tea party movement on Wednesday rejected charges that the group's activists are racist, saying they oppose President Obama because of his policies not his skin color.

The members gathered at a Washington news conference in the wake of allegations about its rank and file, heightened by the recent split with a Tea Party Express leader who had posted a letter on his blog written from "Colored People" to Abraham Lincoln.

The post suggested that black people would choose slavery over having to do real work.

The black members said the racism that has been attributed to the tea party movement came from outsiders who infiltrated the groups to discredit their work and it should be rejected.

"These people do not oppose Barack Obama because of his skin color. They oppose him because of his policies," said Lloyd Marcus, a spokesman for the group.

The NAACP last month approved a resolution condemning racism within the tea party movement and called on activists to "repudiate the racist element and activities" within the political movement.

At the news conference, several members assailed Obama and the Democrats, often in harsh terms.

"Democrats have re-enslaved America," said Kevin Jackson, president of the Black Conservative Coalition.

Health care insurance requirement back in crosshairs after Missouri vote

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar and David A. Lieb
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Missouri voters' overwhelming opposition to requiring nearly all Americans to buy health insurance puts one of the least popular parts of President Obama's health care overhaul law back in the political crosshairs.

Even if the vote sets no legally binding precedent, it will help mobilize foes of Obama's agenda in the fall midterm elections, and that could make a difference in some states with close congressional races that could decide the balance of power in Washington.

On Tuesday, Missouri voters cast 71 percent of their ballots in favor of a state measure to bar the government from requiring people to carry health insurance, and penalizing those who don't.

That approach is at the heart of the federal health care law that Obama signed in March. Starting in 2014, Americans would be required to carry coverage, with exceptions for financial hardship. Government would help pay premiums for millions, but those who still refuse to sign up would face a tax.

There's little chance that Missouri can wall itself off from the insurance requirement, since federal law usually supersedes state law. But sponsors of the measure were looking to send another kind of message.

"The Missouri vote is significant politically because it will help rally people who oppose the Obama administration to go to the polls in the fall elections," said Robert Blendon, a Harvard public health school professor who tracks opinion trends on health care. "It shows the debate is still alive, and that's what the sponsors wanted to do. They wanted to reintroduce the idea that there is still a debate going on."

At least two other states — Arizona and Oklahoma — have similar measures on the ballot in November. And sponsors of Florida's version are appealing to reinstate it after a state judge struck the measure from the ballot, ruling that a summary for voters was misleading.

In Colorado, supporters submitted 130,000 voter signatures to the state last week for a ballot measure challenging the insurance mandate, about 50,000 more names than are required.

Arizona, Colorado and Florida are states with House and Senate races rated as toss-ups in November. A few years ago, state ballot measures against same-sex marriage helped turn conservatives out in the contest between incumbent President George W. Bush and Massachusetts Democratic Sen. John Kerry. Bush won.

Foes of the health care law also seek to overturn the insurance requirement in federal court.

Twenty states have joined one of the cases, pending in Florida. This week, a federal judge rejected the Obama administration's request to dismiss Virginia's lawsuit, allowing the case to proceed to formal arguments.

Opponents of the mandate argue that the federal government overstepped its constitutional authority by requiring individuals to purchase a particular product, especially one that costs as much as health insurance.

Group sues to stop ground zero mosque

NEW YORK (AP) — The debate over a planned Islamic community center and mosque near ground zero became a court fight Wednesday, as a conservative advocacy group sued to try to stop a project that has become a fulcrum for balancing religious freedom and the legacy of the Sept. 11 attacks.

The American Center for Law and Justice, founded by the Rev. Pat Robertson, filed suit Wednesday to challenge a city panel's decision to let developers tear down a building to make way for the mosque two blocks from ground zero.

The city Landmarks Preservation Commission moved too fast in making a decision, underappreciated the building's historic value and "allowed the intended use of the building and political considerations to taint the deliberative process," lawyer Brett Joshpe wrote in papers filed in a Manhattan state court. The Washington, D.C.-based group represents a firefighter who responded to and survived the terrorist attack at the World Trade Center.

City attorneys are confident the landmarks group adhered to legal standards and procedures, Law Department spokeswoman Kate O'Brien Ahlers said. A spokesman for the planned Islamic center, Oz Sultan, declined to comment on the lawsuit but said organizers were continuing to work toward choosing an architect.

The mosque has become a national political flashpoint, pitting several influential Republicans and the nation's most prominent Jewish civil rights group against New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg and others.

PADDLING the SNAKE

The challenges and joys of first-time canoeists

A family rides in a canoe in mid-July on the Snake River. Canoe rentals at Centennial Waterfront Park offer individuals and families a fun trip to Shoshone Falls.

Story and photos by Andrew Weeks
❖ Times-News writer

Round and round we went for the first half hour, trying to find out how to steer the dang thing.

I paddled on the right, my wife on the left. Then we'd change sides, just like we were told. But it didn't seem to work. We'd travel straight for several yards, then work ourselves into a slow spin.

We felt like we were on a merry-go-round instead of a canoe.

Good thing we rented it for four hours. It'd take us that long just to get back to shore, I told my wife sarcastically.

Thankfully, it didn't.

Somehow we managed to make it back to the boat launch, where, to my chagrin — especially since other canoeists seemed to be having such an easy time with it — we asked for help. I'm an outdoors writer, I thought to myself. I ought to know how to ride in a canoe. It can't be that difficult.

But my previous experience on the water came in the form of motorized boats, mostly the one my dad had purchased and remodeled when I was a young boy.

Canoeing was a whole new experience for me.

My wife had an idea. "Let's trade places," she said.

We climbed out of the boat and changed positions, this time she in front and me in back. Our son, who'd come with us, sat in the middle. He was a good sport, but probably rolled his eyes a couple of times, thinking about how awkward his parents were acting.

We launched from the boat ramp once more, and this time we got into the groove and headed to the Perrine Bridge.

"I think we've got it down. That's what we should have done to begin with," my wife, Heidi, said. "We should have put you in the back."

Somehow putting the strongest person in back, where most of the steering is done, made all the difference.

A group of canoeists paddle their way out from the mossy edges of the Snake River near Waterfront Park.

WHEN YOU CANOE

Whether it's your first time or not, here are some techniques to remember when canoeing:

- SIT UP STRAIGHT. "Let your body paddle the canoe, and you'll find all kinds of untapped power flowing into your paddle blade."
- STABILIZE HEAD. "Visualize your head moving neither forward or back, nor side to side. A stable head encourages body rotation with each forward stroke."
- FOCUS ON ARMS. "Power comes from strong back muscles as you rotate; consider each arm to be a connector between your back and your paddle."
- GRIP HIGH. Allow "your grip hand to rise high as you reach forward with the paddle.... reach that upper hand high and plant your blade in front without leaning forward."
- FOLLOW UP. "Whether you use a high recovery (vertical paddle) or a horizontal recovery (across your body), this movement should be the 'relax' part of your stroke — while at the same time rewinding your torso to power the next stroke."

CANOE THE SNAKE

Rent canoes and/or kayaks from 3-9 p.m. Monday-Fridays and 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturdays: $15 for one hour; $30 for four hours; $45 for all day. Paddles and life vests are included with each rental. Information: Pryor Paddle Rentals at 732-8937.

The Perrine Bridge is seen in the distance as Heidi Weeks paddles a canoe for the first time in mid-July on the Snake River.

We rented the canoe from Pryor Paddle Rentals, which opened business at Centennial Waterfront Park around Memorial Day.

Owned by Tim and Monica Pryor of Twin Falls, the couple decided to open the business to give their two boys jobs and to teach them how to manage money.

"And because my husband loves to kayak and we wanted to share that opportunity with others," Monica said.

Six days a week they haul a trailer to the park and set up shop near the non-motorized boat launch. The family didn't know how they'd do, Monica said, but so far business has been good. On average, they rent two or three watercrafts — canoes and kayaks — a day, sometimes more.

Considering what a ride on the Snake River offers — a chance to see Pillar and Shoshone Falls from a different perspective — the crafts are inexpensive to rent: $30 for four hours, paddles and life vests included.

"I prefer kayaks," Monica said. "You're closer to the water ... They offer more individuality, and you have more control. Canoes are tippy because they're higher off the water."

Paddling

Brennon Edwards, 15, of Twin Falls echoed the same sentiments. Edwards has been kayaking for about two years, and sometimes helps out the Pryors.

Kayaks are easier than canoes,” she said, “and (you’re) a lot more independent. You can go anywhere and as fast or slow as you want. The water is right at your fingertips.”

• • •

Despite me steering the canoe from the back, it was my wife who seemed to grasp the concept best of all.

“Paddle left,” she’d tell me, trying to harmonize our strokes.

We had only two paddles with us, but we allowed our son to try his hand at paddling, too. He did a good job, but mostly was content to let us do the work while he took in the scenery.

It was a fun learning experience for us. Monica and the two girls who worked at the rental shop that day in mid-July, Edwards and Katie Clark, were helpful and instructive. At one point, Clark went so far as to take her own craft onto the water to give us some helpful tips.

And being on the water allowed us to see the Snake River Canyon from a perspective we hadn’t seen before — caves, marshes and areas where fish splash in the moss.

When I announced to friends that I was going to go canoeing, they laughed and said I’d probably get wet. After hearing so many of their warnings about how canoes were unstable, I felt as if a plunge into the Snake was predestined and unavoidable.

Thankfully, we avoided it.

We bumped around in the waves a bit, especially after crossing under the bridge, where the wind had picked up. And I heard my son, Brayden, shout “Oh, my gosh” a couple of times when it felt as if we’d tip over, but we never did.

My friends now will have something else to laugh about: I’m sorry to report that, because of the wind, we never made it to the falls. We started going in circles again, but finally got on course and headed back to the docks.

That was OK for these first-time canoeists. The sun had been beating down on us all afternoon, and our lungs were beginning to get sore from breathing smoke from a nearby canyon fire, the ash falling into our canoe.

It took us awhile to get back to the docks, and when we did we all decided that, as interesting and fun as our canoe trip turned out to be, the next time we visited the Snake we’d take Monica’s advice and try kayaks.

Maybe then we’d get to see the falls.

Overview of upland game changes

Q : “I see the new upland game regulations on the department website, but I’m confused about some of the recent commission approved changes.”

A : The 2010-11 upland game hunting brochure is at the printer and should be at vendors soon. The brochure in its entirety is available in digital format on Fish and Game’s website listed below.

The Fish and Game Commission acted on several upland game hunting items at its July meeting in Kellogg. I will try to summarize some of the upcoming changes.

The commission acted on both “biological” and “non-biological” upland game hunting rules. Biological rules, by definition, relate to seasons, bag limits, etc., and are exempt from traditional rule-making protocols. As such, the biological rules changed by the commission go into effect this fall.

One biological rule that was changed at the July meeting moves the forest grouse hunting season opener to coincide with the archery big game opener. As a result, the forest grouse opener will be Aug. 30.

Another biological change occurs on the opening day of pheasant hunting season. The change allows pheasant hunting to begin one-half hour before sunrise on the opening day rather than the traditional noon opener. At several Wildlife Management Areas (WMAs) where pheasants are released, hunting hours for all upland species is delayed until 10 a.m. daily. Sportsmen are encouraged to consult their 2010 upland game hunting brochure for a full list of affected WMAs.

Sage grouse seasons and bag limits will be set at the commission meeting later this month for implementation this fall. Some discussion at the upcoming meeting will include downward trends in sage grouse counts and the possibility of a hunting closure in parts of southern Idaho.

Another series of biological rule changes affects season dates and daily bag and possession limits on chukar partridge, gray partridge, and quail. The commission consolidated the openers of all three species to Oct. 1, 2011. It also reduced the limits on chukar and gray partridge to six per day, 12 in possession for each species. The quail bag and possession limits remain unchanged (10:20). While these changes are “biological” rules by definition, the commission decided to delay this change until fall 2011. Sportsmen will note these changes highlighted in yellow in the new hunting brochure.

“Non-biological” rules are not related to bag limits or season dates and include such things as methods of take and restrictions on use of motorized vehicles. Changes passed in non-biological rules must be authorized by the Legislature in January 2011, and would be implemented in fall 2011.

One non-biological rule change is a prohibition of hunting upland game birds from a boat. This was adopted as a result of unsportsmanlike conduct while shooting chukars and gray partridge from jet boats on the Snake and Salmon rivers.

Choosing optics for today’s firearms

My opinion about which sighting system is best for close-range target, hunting and self-defense firearms has transformed fundamentally. I no longer believe that iron sights are the optimum choice for these relatively short-range weapons.

Although some of this attitude adjustment is due to the fact that my 57-year-old eyes just can’t focus like they used to, recent experiences with different types of optical sights have convinced me that they possess several distinct advantages over their metallic counterparts.

Optical sights fall into three basic categories: conventional scope, red dot, and holographic sights.

CONVENTIONAL SCOPE SIGHTS

We’re all familiar with conventional scope sights, and you probably have one mounted on every big game gun in your collection. But have you ever considered scoping your rimfires, shotguns or centerfire handguns?

The scope’s primary

SHOOTING THE BULL

Rich Simpson

advantage over iron sights is its ability to enhance your view of the target. This permits more precise shot placement, especially at extended ranges, under diminished light conditions or in heavy cover. Whether your target is a pop can in the gravel pit or a cottontail trying to blend into the sagebrush, enhanced target discrimination benefits shooters of all ages and skill levels. Consider mounting a quality 1-inch scope on your favorite iron-sighted firearm and see what you’ve been missing.

RED DOT SIGHTS

Red dot or reflex sights are currently all the rage with soldiers, tactical teams, competitive and recreational shooters, and turkey, small and big game hunters.

Even paintball and air-soft aficionados have taken a shine to these illuminating sights. These innovative optics work by reflecting a reticle (dot) on a non- or low-magnification glass lens mounted in the front of the sight’s body tube. A colored LED (generally red or green) illuminates this dot, which is superimposed on the optic’s field of view.

Reticles are not limited to dots and may assume triangular shapes, lines or circles. Reticle sizes also vary, the most popular being five MOA, which is quickly acquired by the eye, but not so large as to obscure the target.

Light intensity settings are adjustable to best suit background color and ambient light conditions. This super fast sight works well in most lighting conditions and is adequately precise for shooting both stationary and moving targets.

Prices run the gamut from tens to hundreds of dollars. BSA, Trijicon, Tasco, Bushnell, TRUGLOW market descent affordable units.

HOLOGRAPHIC SIGHTS

Take all of the qualities of the dot sights, meld them into a lightweight, unobtrusive package and you’ve got a holosight. With these compact beauties, eye relief and gun mount are much less critical than with other sights. Simply place the laser projected reticle on the target and squeeze the trigger ... bullseye.

Shop wisely, as quality varies considerably within all of these sighting systems and you really do get what you pay for.

If you believed that traditionalists like ourselves were too old to change our ways, repeat after me, “Yes, we can!”

Good shooting!

Visit Yellowstone for wildlife and geysers, Cody for a taste of the Wild West

By Christopher Reynolds
Los Angeles Times

CODY, Wyo. — You know western Wyoming and dumb luck are both on your side when:

Your daughter spies three mule deer in a Yellowstone meadow. Then a moose mid-river. Then bison, fox and marmot, trumpeter swans, a wayward seagull and a grizzly family — mama bear and two cubs, romping across the high slopes, safely distant but still riveting.

You hear the word “rodeo” used as a verb. Then you attend one in Cody, about 50 miles east of Yellowstone, and see not only bucking broncs, bull-riding, barrel-racing and calf-roping but also a stunt rider who circles the ring while standing astride two galloping horses.

You look up from lunch at Buffalo Bill’s old hotel and find that Miss Rodeo Wyoming is seated at the counter, right between Miss Cody Stampede and Miss Rodeo America, all chowing down in their spangled blouses and sashes.

Old Faithful, which generally rests for 90 minutes between eruptions, starts spouting the moment you step up.

The Old Faithful Inn, whose dinner tables are often booked months in advance, has space for you the moment you step up. (It helps to step up at 10 minutes before 5 p.m.)

On a foray into Yellowstone’s Mammoth Hot Springs area, you discover an appalling array of tasteless lawn ornaments at the home reserved for the Yellowstone concessionaire’s top executive. Then they move, and you realize the elk are real. All 10 of them. They can’t resist the grass and shade, the camera-happy tourists can’t resist the elk and the rangers are forever struggling to keep the beasts with antlers separated from the beasts without.

OK, by now, you’ve realized this isn’t a multiple-choice test. It’s more a reminder: Even when fully besieged by the summering masses, Yellowstone National Park remains a wildlife parade, a geothermal freak show, an essential rite of North American tourism, a lot of fun. And a side trip to Cody can fit about as nicely as corn-bread alongside a slab of ribs.

In early July, my family and I spent five days in tiny Cody and massive Yellowstone, whose 3,472 square miles cover much of northwestern Wyoming, spilling over into southern Montana and eastern Idaho. The park — which became the first national park in the world when it opened in 1872 — had nearly 3.3 million visitors in 2009.

That was a record, but with so many Americans reconsidering foreign travel, packing up cars and heading for the parks, it might soon be broken. Yellowstone spokesman Al Nash says June was the busiest ever at the park: 694,841 visitors in 30 days. For at least a few nights of our visit, every one of the more than 2,000 hotel rooms and cabins in the park was booked.

That means a lot of traffic along the park’s 142-mile, figure-8-shaped Grand Loop Road, especially with so many animals afoot this summer, nibbling the generous growth after a wet spring. On Aug. 25, the park will add one more enticement by replacing a batch of temporary buildings with a new $26-million Old Faithful Visitor Education Center, replete with green construction elements and exhibits to show how and why the earth here spits hot water skyward.

If you enter the park from the south, the drama starts right away, with the steep slopes down to the Lewis River, the racing water and the ridgelines crowded with charred trees remaining from the fires of 1988. An estimated 36 percent of the park burned during that dry summer, and legions of skeletal lodgepole pines endure, dead sticks standing. But two decades of regrowth have brought along another generation, shorter and greener, putting visitors in the middle of an epic reminder that death and rebirth are natural neighbors.

We knew to expect big crowds and occasional traffic jams (some caused by roadwork, most caused by gawking drivers and meandering park mammals) so we didn’t mind them. Like generations of families before us, my wife, Mary Frances, and our 6-year-old, Grace, opened a notebook to count sightings of critters. Fearing the “Mona Lisa” effect (“But it’s so small!”), we didn’t expect much from Old Faithful. But when the geyser immediately leapt into action, about 100 feet high and surrounded by perhaps 1,000 expectant visitors, there was no time for letdown. We took in the spectacle and sulfurous scent for perhaps five minutes, then marched right along to the Upper Geyser Basin, following boardwalks past scores of geothermal features, from eerily colored pools to mini-mountains spouting towers of spray.

“It smells like Milo,” said Grace. (Milo is a 12-year-old yellow Lab with occasional gastric issues.)

Until you get here, it may be impossible to appreciate all the ways that water rises, falls, rushes, rests, is cooked, is chilled, is channeled and is flung in Yellowstone. There are more than 300 geysers and almost as many waterfalls, including the roaring wonders known as the Upper Falls and Lower Falls of the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone.

Different angles: Using old lures in a new way

By Ray Sasser
The Dallas Morning News

PAMPA, Texas — Dallas businessman T. Boone Pickens bought and groomed his Mesa Vista ranch for quail hunting, and it probably deserves the title “world’s greatest quail hunting ranch.”

Though Pickens readily admits he’s not much of a fisherman, he took advantage of the enormous Ogallala Aquifer hidden just under the surface in the Canadian River bottom, constructing a chain of lakes that seems unworldly in this otherwise sere landscape.

What was once a busy place during hunting season has thus become a year-round outdoor playground — a veritable Disney World for hunting, fishing and wildlife watching.

It’s also a great place to test fishing lures. The fish are easy to locate and there are lots of them, so you know that you’re showing the lure to fish on a regular basis. It’s a matter of whether the fish will bite.

By the same token, you can figure out new ways to fish old lures, which is what my wife, Emilie, and I did recently.

Since they first came onto the market, I’ve been a huge fan of topwater plastic frogs. These are lures designed to buzz across the surface with their legs kicking like Michael Phelps swimming for Olympic gold.

There’s something about the fast-moving frog that elicits explosive strikes from largemouth bass, but only when the bass are in an aggressive mode. When Emilie and I fished at Mesa Vista, the fish were definitely not aggressive.

That became apparent while I was trying to catch fish by buzzing a frog along the surface in a crystal clear lake. The water was so clear that fish were readily visible, which creates another unusual learning experience.

Bass would turn to look at the surface commotion and maybe even move on a collision course with the speeding lure, only to turn away at the last moment. Out of frustration, I paused the lure near a three-pounder and allowed it to sink. The fish swam up casually, flared its gills and ate the frog.

For whatever reason, the vast majority of those bass did not want the frog fished on the surface. Slow down the retrieve so the lure was swimming beneath the surface like a soft plastic crankbait, and it was a different story.

Another effective subsurface tactic was fishing the frog like a jig, allowing it to sink beside cover, then twitching and swimming it a few feet before letting it sink again.

Since the buzz frogs first became available in the form of a Zoom Horny Toad, I’ve heard from anglers who fished them beneath the surface, but I was so hung up on the big surface bite that subsurface fishing didn’t appeal to me. That’s still true as long as the topwater bite works.

Any soft plastic lure can be made to do things it’s not designed to do, sometimes with amazing success. I frequently catch fish on a big plastic lizard swum near the surface, for instance. Like the plastic worm, the plastic lizard is intended to be fished with a slip sinker on or near bottom.

My favorite lizard is Strike King’s Iguana, a 10-inch, slow-sinking chunk of plastic with a curly tail that undulates whenever the lure is moved. Rigged with an eighth-ounce sinker or no sinker at all, the lizard swims efficiently through thick vegetation without hanging up.

I often get bites well away from the cover, probably from fish that followed the lure until they could no longer resist it. If you stop the retrieve periodically and let the lure sink slowly, that unexpected change of pace often triggers a bite.

These are basic principles that fishermen tend to forget. We all have favorite lures and favorite methods of fishing those old standards. Changing the pace can make a big difference. Of course, it’s easier to figure that out when you can see what the fish are doing.

Fishing report

Fishing at Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir has been great for walleye at the upper end between Goose Island and Norton Bay. Anglers have been trolling or drifting jigs or worm harnesses at around 12- to 20-feet deep. Crank bait and Rapalas have been successful. Walleye fishing in other parts of the reservoir is slowing down, but perch and crappie are still showing up.

Shore fishing for trout has been slow to fair from the bank. Trout are being caught at the dam and at Greys Landing. Anglers have been using PowerBait or night crawlers with a white marshmallow. Fly fishing has been productive for anglers in a float tube or from a boat. Anglers are using woollybuggers, zug bugs, leeches and any other bait fish imitation.

Most of the fishing success being reported is from anglers fishing from Grey’s Landing to the upper end of the reservoir.

At Magic Reservoir most fishing success is coming from boat anglers who are trolling. They are using a chartreuse wedding ring with a night crawler and are catching 1½- to 3-pound trout. There are no reports of perch or bass being caught.

Anglers say fishing at Roseworth Reservoir has been very slow.

Little Wood Reservoir: no report.

Lake Walcott and Sublett Reservoir: no report.

Anderson Ranch: no report.

Water levels on the Big Wood River have dropped dramatically. Mornings and evenings are by far the best times to go fishing, with caddis and PMDs bringing good success. Afternoons are still productive using Pink Alberts, Parachute Adams and PMDs. Mornings at Silver Creek is fairly active with anglers using PMDs and tricos.

Summer Flows on the South Fork of the Boise River makes walking and wading difficult. Most fishing is being done by driftboat and using elk hair and Goddard’s caddis in the evenings, pink Alberts in the afternoon.

Reader loses weight, gains life and health with special diet

DEAR DR. GOTT: I just wanted you to know that I have lost 155 pounds using your no-flour, no-sugar diet. I think I should be your spokesperson!

Seriously, I am a 56-year-old female teacher, and I wanted to get in shape before I retired a year ago. I also wanted to be healthier and have a long retirement life. At my previous weight, I was unhappy, unhealthy and unfit to do anything physical, so I tried your diet plan. It worked and it has just kept on working. It took me two years to get the weight off, and I still have around 27 pounds to go, but my doctor says I have probably added 10 years to my life. I used to be on three different high-blood-pressure medications and had to use a c-pap machine every night because of sleep apnea. Now I am medication-free, and my sleep apnea has disappeared.

I have taken up walking each day now, and last week, even at my age of 56, was able to walk 34 miles! I truly believe you have saved my life, so I wanted to send you my belated thanks. You rock, Dr. Gott!

DEAR READER: Congratulations! You have made a remarkable change in your life, and I commend your efforts. Making the decision to turn your life around and work toward better health is often the most difficult part of losing weight.

Healthful weight loss will not happen overnight. It takes time to gain weight and it takes time to lose it. You averaged a weight loss of about 1-1/2 pounds per week, which is appropriate.

I am pleased to hear that you are now able to be more active. If you continue to walk four to five miles a day, you will increase your muscle tone and further improve your health.

Keep up the good work and enjoy your retirement. You deserve it.

Readers interested in learning more about my no-flour, no-sugar diet should order my Health Report “A Strategy for Losing Weight:

Effort to save state jobs clears Senate roadblock

By Lori Montgomery and Jenna Johnson
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — An emergency plan to save the jobs of tens of thousands of public school teachers and other government workers overcame a key Senate hurdle Wednesday, and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said she would summon lawmakers back from their August break to finish work on the measure.

Two Republicans crossed party lines to advance the $26 billion package, handing President Barack Obama a victory in his campaign to bolster the shaky economy. With many governors struggling to close gaping budget deficits, administration officials feared a fresh round of state layoffs or tax increases could knock the nation's wobbly recovery off-course.

The aid package would not entirely close those budget gaps. Hampered by election-year anxiety over the mounting national debt, congressional Democrats were forced to slash Obama's original request for state aid nearly in half and come up with a plan to pay for it. Meanwhile, lawmakers in both parties signaled that the measure probably marks the end for spending bills aimed at boosting economic activity.

"I think that this should be sort of the final down payment," said Sen. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, a key swing vote who helped break the impasse Wednesday and overcome a Republican filibuster. Sen. Susan Collins, also of Maine, provided the second Republican vote, allowing the package to clear its last major hurdle on a vote of 61-38.

Obama hailed the vote as "an important step towards ensuring that teachers across the country can stay in the classroom and cash-strapped states can get the relief they need."

Even as the federal government is preparing Friday to release new unemployment figures likely to underscore the weakness of the economic recovery, a separate jobs bill aimed at spurring hiring by small businesses was stalled in the Senate and unlikely to move until after Labor Day.

Obama urged the Senate to quickly wrap up work on the package. Aides said a final Senate vote is likely Thursday afternoon.

The package would then go to the House, whose members will return to Washington on Tuesday, House leaders said.

"As millions of children prepare to go back to school — many in just a few days — the House will act quickly to approve this legislation once the Senate votes," Pelosi, D-Calif., said in a statement.

House members left town last week, and many rank-and-file Democrats looked forward to the break as a chance to defend dozens of seats at risk in the November elections. But aides said many lawmakers will welcome the interruption, viewing it as a chance to score a fresh legislative victory for teachers and public-service unions, an important Democratic constituency. The House had earlier approved the state aid, though in a different form.

Republican leaders criticized the package as a give-away to labor and an underserved bailout for profligate state governments. Even though the final version of the bill would reduce deficits by $1.4 billion over the next decade, according to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, Republicans also argued that the measure would darken an already grim federal budget outlook.

"Washington needs to take care of its own fiscal mess, not deepen it by bailing out the states," said Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky.

Trial of boyfriend, doctors opens in drug overdose death of Anna Nicole Smith

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Two doctors violated their responsibility to protect Anna Nicole Smith by prescribing massive amounts of drugs with the connivance of her lawyer-boyfriend, even though they knew she was addicted to painkillers, a prosecutor argued Wednesday.

But a defense attorney for Howard K. Stern said he loved Smith and depended on doctors to prescribe the right medications for her chronic pain. He said she was not an addict.

Smith's mother, Virgie Arthur, was in the courtroom with other relatives — a reminder of protracted court battles in the Bahamas and Florida after Smith died of a drug overdose in February 2007.

The contentions of Deputy District Attorney Renee Rose came during opening statements at the conspiracy trial of Stern, Dr. Sandeep Kapoor and Dr. Khristine Eroshevich, who are accused of providing vast amounts of powerful opiates and sedatives for the Playboy model under multiple names.

Howard K. Stern eats lunch at the courthouse in Los Angeles on Wednesday. Stern, Dr. Sandeep Kapoor and Dr. Khristine Eroshevich are accused of providing vast amounts of powerful opiates and sedatives to the late Anna Nicole Smith under multiple names.

"None of it could have happened without Mr. Stern," Rose added during her two-hour presentation in Superior Court.

Stern's attorney, Steve Sadow, was the first to present the defense position. He said Stern was many things to Smith — lawyer, adviser, friend, manager and boyfriend.

"He cared for her and cherished her. He loved her," said Sadow. "Witness after witness will tell you that."

He said jurors would not be able to find a bad motive for Stern's actions. But he separated him from the other defendants.

"Howard K. Stern relied in good faith on the medical judgment of her doctors. He relied on their judgment on what was medically right and necessary for Anna Nicole Smith. Anna Nicole had pain, real pain, chronic pain."

Sadow stressed that Stern is not a doctor and suggested there was no conspiracy because, "If you don't know there's something wrong with what you're doing, there can't be an illegal agreement."

Stern and the doctors have pleaded not guilty to conspiracy to illegally furnishing the drugs. Each could face more than five years in prison if convicted, and the doctors would lose their medical licenses.

They are not accused of causing Smith's 2007 overdose death at age 39 at a Florida hotel.

Lawyers for the doctors and Stern have suggested they were desperately trying to save the doomed model during a period when she gave birth to a daughter and lost her grown son to a drug overdose.

Rose displayed pictures Wednesday on a courtroom screen of prescriptions that included methadone and Dilaudid, a drug known as "hospital heroin."

"Anna Nicole Smith took a lot of methadone for pain and she took Dilaudid on top of that," Rose said.

Kapoor's lawyer, Ellyn Garafalo, said Wednesday that Kapoor's prescriptions were appropriate and "he managed her pain and he acted in good faith."

"We're talking about long-term unrelenting pain," she said, "We don't look at how many pills are in the bottle. We're looking at whether a patient can live a normal life without pain."

Prep volleyball, softball tournaments scaled back

Proposal to move Class 4A/5A golf to fall survives first vote

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

More change hit the Idaho high school sports scene Wednesday. The sand still isn't done shifting.

As expected, the Idaho High School Activities Association voted in its Wednesday board meeting to reconfigure the state tournament brackets for softball and volleyball, beginning with the upcoming school year. The moves potentially save both the IHSAA and its member schools — at least those participating in either tournament — several thousands of dollars.

There was a separate vote for each sport, and both passed by a greater than 3-to-1 margin despite strong opposition from some athletic directors and coaches.

"It's a tough issue for some ADs and most coaches, but given the times it's probably something that's necessary," said Jerome athletic director Ty Jones, a member of the IHSAA's board of directors. "We'll do it for the next classification cycle and see where it goes."

Jones said two kinds of cost savings will be effected with the changes. Schools will potentially save on overnight bus costs, hotel rooms and meal money, primarily with a new two-day softball tournament schedule as opposed to the previous three-day format. The IHSAA will save money by requiring fewer officials and game workers, as well as less time demanded of a site manager.

The changes will be implemented on a two-year trial basis, something of a compromise measure between proponents of a permanent change and dissenters who thought it would damage the integrity of finding the truly best team in the respective tournaments.

"I guess I can understand everyone trying to save a few bucks, but my thing for softball and for volleyball is that if they're trying to really save money, you could condense it down. Eight teams in a true double-elimination tournament, you can easily do that in two days," said Twin Falls softball coach Ken Johnson. "You look at some of the recent state champions (in volleyball or softball) and they've come from the loser's bracket. I can see both sides of it. Obviously they're doing everything they can do to save money, but this impugns the integrity of the tournament a little bit."

"I kind of wish they would

WAC FOOTBALL PRIMER

Kickoff for the 2010 college football season is less than a month away. To get you ready, we present a three-day series looking at the nine teams in the Western Athletic Conference. Today we look at the teams forecast to finish Nos. 4-6 by the league's media.

4. Idaho

2009 Record: 8-5 (4-4 WAC)
Starters Returning: 18 (offense – 7; defense – 11)
Key Returnees: QB Nathan Enderle (Sr.), RB Deonte Jackson (Sr.), SS Shiloh Keo (Sr.), DT Jonah Sataraka (Sr.)
Key Losses: OG Mike Iupati, WR Max Komar, RB De'Maundray Woolridge
Key Games: at Nebraska (Sept. 11), at Colorado State (Sept. 25), vs. Nevada (Nov. 6), vs. Boise State (Nov. 12)

Idaho was the surprise darling of the WAC in 2009, but if the Vandals maintain their newfound success, it won't be a surprise this season. Under the inspiration of fiery head coach Robb Akey, the Vandals have slowly transformed into a competitive program after years of ineptitude. At the center of the turnaround is quarterback Nathan Enderle.

Enderle has emerged as a strong leader and one of the WAC's impressive class of quarterbacks in 2010. Though he was dinged up last season and missed the Boise State game, he was impressive in his 11 starts, including a memorable game-winning drive to help the Vandals stun Bowling Green in the Humanitarian Bowl. Enderle will miss his favorite target in Max Komar, but he will still have some weapons to work with in the receiving corps, including Preston Davis and Daniel Hardy. Losing most of the offensive line, including first-round NFL draft pick Mike Iupati, is cause for concern.

The Vandals' defense, which returns 10 starters, must improve drastically from last season. Idaho finished last in scoring defense in the WAC, yielding more than 30 points per game. Idaho's experienced defensive unit must grow up fast or else it will struggle in mediocrity in 2010.

5. Louisiana Tech

2009 Record: 4-8 (3-5 WAC)
Starters Returning: 18 (offense – 8; defense – 10)
Key Returnees: S Tank Calais (Jr.), LB Adrien Cole (So.), QB Ross Jenkins (Jr.), OL Rob McGill (Jr.)
Key Losses: TE Dennis Morris, RB Daniel Porter, DT D'Anthony Smith
Key Games: at Texas A&M (Sept. 11), vs. Utah State (Oct. 9), vs. Fresno State (Nov. 6)

Louisiana Tech's record last season under head coach Derek Dooley looks like the Bulldogs struggled. But a closer look shows this team may be closer than anyone else thinks to breaking through and possibly becoming the "next Boise State" in the WAC. A year ago, the Bulldogs had Boise State on the ropes and were beating LSU late before succumbing in both contests. They also lost three games by two points or less in a five-game losing streak.

With Dooley's departure as the head coach, the son of another coaching legend, Sonny Dykes, takes over the program — and it's hardly a bare cupboard. Dykes also brings in spread offense guru Tony Franklin to help revamp the Bulldogs' offense. Louisiana Tech has three transfers from SEC schools, including running back Lennor Creer, who figures to be a major factor in the Bulldogs' offensive plans. Ross Jenkins looks to be the team's starting signal caller, but he will face some stiff competition in fall camp.

Louisiana Tech lost some key players on defense and will turn to Adrien Cole and Tank Calais to solidify the linebacking corps and secondary, respectively. However, how quickly the Bulldogs develop some playmakers on the defensive line will determine just how stout their defense will be.

6. Utah State

2009 Record: 4-8 (3-5 WAC)
Starters Returning: 18 (offense – 8; defense – 10)
Key Returnees: QB Diondre Borel (Sr.), WR Stanley Morrison (Jr.), RB Michael Smith (Sr.), LB Bobby Wagner (Jr.)
Key Losses: S James Brindley, WR Omar Sawyer, RB Michael Turbin (injury)
Key Games: at Oklahoma (Sept. 4), vs. BYU (Oct. 1), at Louisiana Tech (Oct. 9), at Boise State (Dec. 4)

While star running back Robert Turbin wasn't expected to return to Utah State's lineup for at least a month, the bombshell out of coach Gary Anderson's mouth was that the team expects to sit Turbin out and get him a medical redshirt. Turbin led the Aggies with nearly 1,300 yards on the ground with 13 TDs a year ago and was a perfect complement to dual threat quarterback Diondre Borel. Borel and Turbin were expected to be the heart and soul of this Aggie team, but with the two split up for 2010, the leadership mantle rests squarely on Borel's shoulders.

Borel will get some help at the receiver position with junior college transfers Matt Austin, Xavier Martin and Dontel Watkins. Utah State will need Michael Smith to fill the gaping hole left by Turbin's absence.

All-WAC linebacker Bobby Wagner and an experienced secondary will be the small nucleus of a nearly non-existent defense from last season. And if the Aggies hope to emerge as a surprise out of the WAC in 2010, they will need Wagner's leadership and some younger players to step up.

Writers take on Haynesworth's conditioning test

And on my third day of work, I ran. Who knew this sports writing gig would leave me sweating profusely and gasping for air at the office?

One night this week, sports editor Mike Christensen, sports writer David Bashore and I discussed the now infamous Albert Haynesworth conditioning test.

Here's the scoop.

Haynesworth, an NFL defensive lineman for the Washington Redskins, skipped out on the team's offseason conditioning program much to the dismay of new head coach Mike Shanahan. The 300-pounder, who signed a seven-year, $100 million contract before last season, has been held out of practice at training camp until he proves he's in football shape. He can re-join the team when he passes Shanahan's conditioning test.

The test consists of two timed 300-yard shuttle runs performed 3 1/2 minutes apart. Each back-and-forth sprint is 50 yards. The first timed run must be completed in 70 seconds and the second in 73 seconds.

Haynesworth hasn't passed in three attempts spread over seven days.

So, naturally, we had to see how hard this test actually is.

The Times-News sports staff trotted onto the Twin Falls High School practice field in our athletic shorts and running shoes, bottles upon bottles of water in hand and oozing with confidence.

I take back the confidence part.

Bashore limped out of the car worried about his tight calf.

Christensen was worried about being too old and stiff.

I knew I would pass just fine.

Of course for an event as grand as three sports writers actually doing something athletic (typing 60 words a minute doesn't count), we brought the video camera.

We marked out the 25 yards, stretched our tender muscles and said our prayers.

Six times we would run back and forth between the 25 yard markers.

It was time to be timed.

The three of us took off. The first two down-and-backs were cake for each of us.

Then the fatigue started to set in. The legs started to get tight. The 90-degree heat was taking its toll.

Bashore and Christensen fell behind, while I kept pace and easily finished under the acceptable time at 65 seconds.

Christensen gave a valiant effort and finished in 72 seconds.

Iupati making strides early in 49ers camp

The Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Just four days into training camp, Mike Iupati already has become one of the most prominent and talked about figures on the San Francisco 49ers' revamped offensive line.

That's sort of the way both Iupati and the 49ers had it planned when the team made the former Idaho star the No. 17 overall selection in the draft this spring. They just didn't expect it to happen this soon.

But now that the rookie is settling in at left guard and taking most of the snaps with San Francisco's first-team offense, coach Mike Singletary can't deny he's pleased with Iupati's progress.

"I'm liking what I'm seeing there," Singletary said Wednesday. "He's very mature, he's hungry and he wants to play. He wants to take advantage of every opportunity he gets."

Iupati is getting plenty of opportunities during the early stages of camp after the

CSI to start volleyball season atop rankings

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team will start the 2010 season where it ended 2009: at the top.

CSI begins its quest to repeat as NJCAA Division I champion atop the preseason national poll, released Wednesday.

The Golden Eagles went 32-6 in claiming their record ninth national title last November, and though some key components of that team are off playing NCAA Division I volleyball this fall, the Eagles are optimistic about their chances to pull off the back-to-back act.

Finally! A-Rod hits No. 600

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez added his own memento to Monument Park, even though retirement remains years off.

After struggling to hit his 600th home run, A-Rod reached the milestone with his usual dramatic flair. He became the youngest player to attain the mighty mark and did it by driving a pitch over Yankee Stadium's center-field fence and into the area where the pinstriped greats are remembered. And remarkably, he did it exactly three years to the day after his 500th homer.

“That’s amazing,” Rodriguez said. “To the day!”

His two-run, first-inning drive off Toronto's Shaun Marcum put New York ahead, and the Yankees coasted to a 5-1 victory over the Blue Jays on a sweltering Wednesday afternoon. The win ended the Yankees’ three-game losing streak.

Rodriguez went 9 for 46 after homering on July 22, the longest stretch between Nos. 599 and 600 for any of the seven to reach the mark. He was hitless in his last 17 at-bats.

“It was a relief just to put it past me,” he said. “There’s no question I was pressing ‘cause I wanted to get it out of the way.”

A-Rod reached the milestone after a 12-game drought, connecting with a 2-0 pitch over the middle of the plate for his 17th home run of the season.

At 35 years, 8 days, Rodriguez joined a club that includes Barry Bonds (762), Hank Aaron (755), Babe Ruth (714), Willie Mays (660), Ken Griffey Jr. (630) and Sammy Sosa (609). The next youngest was Ruth at 36 years, 196 days, in 1931, though he did it in 183 fewer games.

He raised a hand slightly in triumph as he rounded first base, then completed his trot to the roar of the crowd of 47,659. He was greeted at home plate by Yankees captain Derek Jeter, both slapping outstretched hands above their heads.

Jeter also had been on base for his 500th homer.

“A lot of good things for him to come. He’s got another 15 years,” Jeter said. “You never know how many he’d going to hit.”

Rodriguez was greeted after the homer by the rest of the Yankees. After stepping off the field, then coming out for a curtain call, he kept on receiving congratulations in the dugout.

Toronto manager Cito Gaston was playing for the San Diego Padres the day Mays hit his 600th in 1969 — although Gaston didn’t get into that day’s game.

“I don’t think too many guys can say they saw a 600th homer hit by two different guys,” he said.

Rodriguez rated the experience under winning the World Series last year — and even not as significant as passing players on the career list.

“We’re fascinated by even numbers. The real milestone is when you start surpassing some of the all-time greats,” he said. “No personal achievement can compare to celebrating on the mound and being the last team standing.”

Q&A with Idaho QB Nate Enderle

Times-News: As you enter your senior season, there have been times when fans and pundits have wanted you out as the starting quarterback. Have you relished being able to have the chance to prove the skeptics wrong?

Enderle: When your team first starts losing a lot of games, it’s easy to throw the quarterback out there as the problem. But I think it’s faulty to assume that the quarterback plays in a vaccum. ... I’ve definitely capitalized on my opportunity. I think by this point in my career I’ve learned to relish the small victories.

T-N: When you were growing up in Nebraska, did you dream of getting to play for the Huskers?

Enderle: Everybody in Nebraska is a Husker fan, so of course I wanted to play for them. But as I got older, I realized that my drop back style of quarterbacking wasn’t going to fit in with their offensive philosophy. So, I knew I had to look elsewhere. I’m definitely excited about playing in Lincoln. The only game I went to was in 1997 when Daunte Culpepper and Central Florida played at Nebraska. So, it’ll be a great opportunity for my whole family to see me play. I’m going to have a few uncles who will still be wearing Nebraska red, but that’s OK.

Q&A with Utah State QB Diondre Borel

T-N: What has changed the most in the culture of Utah State football since coach Gary Anderson took over last year?

Borel: I think we’re more of a family than we were before. Everybody’s trying to stick together more and help each other out. Before, it wasn’t like that. We didn’t really have a true sense of what it means to be a team. But the town has also really gotten behind us. They are really supporting us in ways they didn’t before when I first got here.

T-N: Coach Anderson talked about how you have emerged as a team leader. How has he encouraged you to do this?

Borel: Coach tells me all the time, “This is your team.” And he tells me and some of the other seniors that we need to be more vocal in our leadership. I think in the past, I’ve just been kind of a quiet leader, you know the kind of player who lets his actions speak for themselves on the field. But I realize I need to speak out more and help rally the team.

T-N: A lot of people are pegging Utah State to be the surprise team in the WAC this year. Do you feel like the program is on the rise?

Borel: We’re definitely making some strides. Last year, even though we didn’t have a winning season, I think we could tell that we were improving. We lost some games, but we were more competitive — and now more people are wanting to find out what we’re about in the community.

Q&A with Louisiana Tech OL Rob McGill

T-N: You lost your head coach during the off-season and get a good replacement in Sonny Dykes. How have things changed for you?

McGill: It’s definitely different, but the basic foundation that coach Dooley tried to lay is still there. Coach Dykes is just trying to build on that and help get us to the next level. We’re happy that we could get a coach the caliber of coach Dykes.

T-N: You grew up near New Orleans and were a big Saints fan — and you still are. How did the Saints winning the Super Bowl impact the entire state of Louisiana ?

McGill: Well, it just seems like nothing ever goes right in Louisiana . When disasters hit, the place gets ignored. We moved away after Hurricane Katrina. And then look what’s going on with the oil spill there in the Gulf. So, the Super Bowl was just a moment to put all that aside and celebrate something good for the city and the state of Louisiana . It inspired us all — even folks living in the northern part of the state where we are.

Phelps wins, Peirsol upset in U.S. nationals

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Michael Phelps won the 200-meter freestyle at the U.S. national championships, then came back less than an hour later to win the 200 butterfly on Wednesday night.

Phelps led all the way in the 200 free and touched in 1 minute, 45.61 seconds — fastest in the world this year — to earn a spot on the U.S. team for the Pan Pacific championships later this month.

“Still slower than I want to be,” the Olympic champion said. “I wanted to step on it in the first 100, then hopefully hold them off coming home.”

Ryan Lochte finished second in 1:47.78, the second-quickest time in the world. It was a two-man race to the finish between the Olympic teammates.

Peter Vanderkaay, the Olympic bronze medalist, was third in 1:46.84.

Phelps was last off the blocks in the 200 fly, but he led all the way again and easily won despite what he called “probably the worst 200 fly I’ve swum in my life in terms of strokes and turns.”

He touched in 1:56.00 — 4.49 seconds slower than his world-record time at last year’s world championships in Rome.

“I didn’t feel good at all,” he said. “I chopped two of my walls. It’s a lot of small things. It’s going to come back to being in shape.”

Second-place Mark Dylla finished well back in 1:57.08, and Tyler Clary was third.

to him.

“This is the first race I made the international scene in,” he said. “I wanted to make sure I secured a win. That’s my race.”

World recordholder Aaron Peirsol was upset in the 100 backstroke, narrowly losing to David Plummer, a 24-year-old swimmer from Minnetonka, Minn., who won the first national title of his career.

“It makes me think I can be the best in the world one day, and that’s every swimmer’s dream,” he said. “You can do it from anywhere. You don’t have to train next to the best in the world to be the best in the world.”

Peirsol still earned a spot on the Pan Pacs team. He had won the event at every nationals he had competed in since 2000. He lost the same event to Thoman at the Charlotte UltraSwim in May.

“I was happy for Dave. He’s been swimming a long time,” Peirsol said. “Races like that can go either way.”

IGA takes Carter Cup lead

Times-News

The Idaho Golf Association team held a 20-10 lead over the Snake River Chapter of the PGA after the first day of the Carter Cup at Jackpot Golf Course in Jackpot, Nev., Wednesday.

The IGA team enjoyed early success in the Ryder Cup-style competition against golf pros from across the region, taking a 10-5 win in both foursome and four-ball play.

Unlike the Ryder Cup, where one point is awarded per match, there are three points awarded per match — one for winning the front 9, one for winning the back 9 and a third for winning the overall match. Ties result in half a point being awarded to each team.

The championship will be decided today with singles play.

Bashore did his best Haynesworth impression and didn’t finish.

We needed every second of that 3 1/2-minute break.

Bashore collapsed to the ground while Christensen and I sucked air.

But we had another run to complete. I was determined. Christensen? Not so much.

I finished the second leg of the test one second faster than my first, while Christensen trailed behind the allotted time again.

Bashore sat this one out.

Easy I thought. Way too easy.

“I understand what Albert is going through,” said Bashore, still lying on the ground.

I don’t. Haynesworth gets paid to be in shape. I get paid to write about athletes in shape.

I shouldn’t pass this test so easily.

Haynesworth’s weeklong saga with the test is an embarrassment for a pro athlete.

But at least it made for a fun third day on the job.

good girls coming back and I think our recruits are solid so we’re excited about everything”

CSI returns three starters from the championship team in setter Barbara Alcantara, outside hitter Elisa Brochado and middle blocker Alyssa Everett.

Typically the reigning champion receives the distinction of topping the pre-season poll the following season, though that is not always the case. Cartisser said the vote is a mixture of respect for last season’s accomplishment and recognition that this season’s team will be expected to perform well — but the Golden Eagles have to make sure the future respect is merited.

“It’s a nice respect, but in three months we’ll be even happier if we’re in the same spot,” she said, referring to November’s national tournament.

Missouri State University-West Plains, the national runner-up in 2009, checked into the preseason poll at No. 2. CSI’s Scenic West Athletic Conference rival Salt Lake Community College, a national semifinalist in 2009, was No. 3, with Miami Dade and national third-place winner Western Nebraska rounding out the Top 5.

CSI begins the season by hosting an invitational tournament Aug. 27-28.

have explored some different options instead of going zero to 60 in five seconds. Everyone’s hitting the panic button and everything’s going a little bit faster than we’re all used to. Like everything else, it comes down to money. But we’ll adapt.”

The other hot topic on Wednesday’s agenda was an initial vote about moving Class 4A and 5A golf competitions to the fall, while leaving Class 3A and 2A competition in the spring. The vote passed by a 9-3 count.

Jones said the idea behind it is a greater availability of some courses in the fall. Leaving 3A and 2A golfers in the spring, however, will allow smaller football and volleyball programs to draw numbers without creating much of a conflict, with 4A and 5A programs more able to take the hit.

There is some concern about a possible mid-October state tournament, but the initial vote was a hit with at least one long-time proponent.

“I’ve been trying to get it moved for about 10 years,” said Twin Falls High School golf coach Mike Hamblin, who is also the golf pro at Twin Falls Golf Club. “I think it’s better for the golf courses ... the weather is 10 times better in the fall than the spring and the courses are in better condition.

“When we hosted the state tournament a couple years ago, Coeur d’Alene came down and they’d been on their course all of once before the state tournament. The teams in the north and east are so behind the 8-ball in the spring and they have no chance.”

Moving part of golf to the fall would also allow those golfers to participate in the IGA Juniors program during the summer and lead right into their high-school competition, Hamblin added.

The final vote on golf is scheduled for the IHSAA’s next board meeting, set for Sept. 28.

Agent, coach: Favre will play if ankle is healthy

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — Brett Favre's flip-flopping is at full throttle, the surest sign yet that training camp is under way in Minnesota.

Vikings offensive coordinator Darrell Bevell and Favre's agent, Bus Cook, said Wednesday that the veteran quarterback plans to return to the team if he is healthy. The 40-year-old Favre is still rehabbing his surgically repaired left ankle that he injured in the NFC title game loss at New Orleans.

"I know it's a decision that he wrestles with," Bevell said after a morning practice as Favre was throwing the ball around with high school students in Mississippi. "He's a great player. He's a great competitor. He mulls things over. He's an emotional guy.

So he thinks things through long and hard and takes his time with his decision. So I'm not surprised that things started to come out. We just have to wait and see."

A day earlier, Favre texted some teammates and Vikings officials to say that his ankle was not healing like he had hoped and that he planned to retire. Favre denied sending any such messages and there was no explanation for the discrepancy.

Bevell, who became close friends with Favre during three years as his quarterbacks coach in Green Bay, said he has spoken to Favre recently, but not in the last 24 hours. He said it's been his understanding that if Favre's ankle heals, he will return to play for the Vikings this season.

"That's what I've been getting all along," Bevell said.

Cook told The Associated Press that Favre will visit his surgeon, Dr. James Andrews, next week for an evaluation.

"He's working out really hard and everything seems to indicate that if he is healthy and can contribute and play at the level that he has become accustomed to, he will play," Cook said.

The two-year, $25 million contract Favre signed last year calls for him to make $13 million this season. Cook said there have been no negotiations on any adjustments to the deal.

"If they want to reward him, nobody's going to walk away from that," Cook said. "But it's not a factor in his decision."

Outside Oak Grove High School in Hattiesburg, Miss., Favre told reporters his decision is "not about the money." He also said he has been in touch with the team and "they know what's going on with me."

On Tuesday, a person with knowledge of the situation told The Associated Press that Favre had contacted teammates and team officials to tell them his ankle was not healing well enough and that he wasn't going to return for a second season in Minnesota. Tight end Visanthe Shiancoe confirmed the report, saying Favre "told a couple guys on our team he's going to retire."

Shiancoe said Wednesday he still had not heard from Favre directly and declined further comment.

The drama is nothing new for the Vikings, who have been answering questions about Favre's intentions for three years. Favre told the Vikings just before training camp last year that he was staying retired, only to change his mind and join the team before its second pre-season game.

An entire advertising campaign has been built around his indecision and his teammates have become accustomed to hourly changes in his status.

"It's been about three years now I've been getting asked the Brett Favre questions," said a grinning Tarvaris Jackson, who would take over as the starter if Favre does not return. "It's kind of part of my life now. I actually might miss it."

Favre has considered retiring every summer since 2002. The famous waffling helped prompt the Packers to trade him to the Jets in 2008. After a so-so season in New York, he announced his retirement in early 2009 for the second time, then wound up signing with the Vikings.

He had one of his best seasons last year, with career bests in completion percentage (68.4), quarterback rating (107.2) and fewest interceptions (7), while throwing for 33 TDs and 4,202 yards to lead the Vikings (12-4) to an NFC North title. Most people around the NFL figured he'll come back for another run at what would be a third Super Bowl appearance.

Goodell wants testing for HGH

ASHBURN, Va. — NFL commissioner Roger Goodell says the league wants to test players for human growth hormone "to protect the integrity of our game."

In an interview with The Associated Press while riding with former NFL coach and TV broadcaster John Madden on the Madden Cruiser between visits Wednesday to the Ravens and Redskins training camps, Goodell called the HGH issue a key element of ongoing labor negotiations involving owners and the players' union.

"It's very important. It's about the integrity of the game. It's about player health and safety," Goodell told the AP. "It's about making sure that we're doing everything to protect our players and to protect the integrity of our game."

Suh sighting

Detroit Lions defensive tackle Ndamukong Suh (90) works out during NFL football training camp in Allen Park, Mich., Wednesday, a day after the No. 2 pick in the draft signed his contract and ended a four-day holdout. Suh took a flight from Nebraska to Michigan on Wednesday, signed his contract, passed a conditioning test and joined his teammates for drills on a muggy afternoon, jumping right in with the first-string defense.

players with minor-league contracts because they are not members of the players' association, which means blood testing is not subject to collective bargaining.

During his appearance at Redskins camp, Goodell said NFL staff contacted Santana Moss about the Washington receiver's connection to a Canadian doctor charged with smuggling and supplying HGH.

Moss has told teammates he received treatments — not involving banned substances — from Dr. Anthony Galea.

KNEE STILL KEEPING REDSKINS' HAYNESWORTH FROM TEST

ASHBURN, Va. — On the seventh day, Albert Haynesworth rested again.

This time, he had some company, and he also got to chat with the commissioner.

The fitness of the Washington Redskins defensive lineman remains unresolved one week into training camp. Haynesworth did not attempt the team's conditioning test Wednesday morning for the second straight day, and won't be allowed to practice until he passes the test.

He's been hampered in recent days by a sore left knee and isn't expected to try the test again until the problem subsides.

"The knee's still getting a lot of treatment," coach Mike Shanahan said. "He's in here early, getting treatment three times a day, he's got a lot of work on that treadmill, so hopefully he passes it in the near future."

Haynesworth's last attempt came Monday, when he pulled up after 150 yards of sprints because of irritation in the knee.

For a change, Haynesworth wasn't the only player standing around watching practice. Shanahan gave several older veterans — including Clinton Portis, Larry Johnson, London Fletcher, Joey Galloway, Santana Moss and Phillip Daniels — a day off from contact.

FORMER SEAHAWK BEEDE IS NFL TEACHER OF YEAR

SEATTLE — Former Seattle Seahawks offensive lineman Frank Beede has been named the NFL's teacher of the year.

The league announced Wednesday it had honored the former Seahawk guard, who played five seasons before retiring in 2000, with its annual award recognizing a former NFL player who is now a teacher.

Beede told The Associated Press in a phone interview minutes after he received the award inside the cafeteria at Freedom High School in Oakley, Calif., that he had no idea he was even nominated. His principal called him to the school for a meeting Wednesday, then told the 10th-grade world history instructor "by the way, you are the NFL's teacher of the year."

He says the Seahawks will honor him by having him raise their "12th Man" flag representing their fans at the Aug. 14 home preseason game against Tennessee.

GIANTS DE OSI UMENYIORA PLAYING HURT WITH BAD HIP

ALBANY, N.Y. — Two-time Pro Bowl defensive end Osi Umenyiora has put his disagreements with the New York Giants behind him.

While he wants to return to the starting lineup, the eight-year veteran says if the Giants want him coming off the bench, that's fine with him. He just wants to win, especially after a disastrous 8-8 season in which he turned into a distraction instead of a playmaker.

Umenyiora's concern is about his hip. While he won't say which one is bothering him, doctors and trainers have told him that he's going to need surgery at some point to fix it.

Umenyiora says it won't be anytime soon because he's not looking forward to another surgery.

"It's something I've been managing for the last couple of years," Umenyiora said on Wednesday in his first interview since reporting to training camp at the University at Albany on Sunday. "It's something that I'm going to continue to manage."

Umenyiora's problems date to a hip flexor injury in 2006. The pain has flared up in spurts.

SEC teams once again chasing Tide, Gators

By John Zenor
Associated Press writer

Take heart, Southeastern Conference: Tim Tebow and Mount Cody are gone.

That's right, there will be no Tebow barreling over defenders for Florida, and no Cody clogging up the middle for Alabama.

"The two teams that lost the most just on paper is probably Alabama and Florida," Crimson Tide coach Nick Saban said.

But that was expected, since those two teams arguably had the most to lose.

However, they're still the odds-on favorites to meet in the SEC championship game for a third straight year, with the winner likely competing for a national title — again.

Florida and Alabama have combined to win the BCS championship three of the last four years; the other one went to SEC rival LSU.

As an added treat, Florida and Alabama meet on Oct. 2 in Tuscaloosa. That at least guarantees they couldn't play as unbeaten in the SEC title game.

Chasing the defending champion Tide in the Western Division will be two teams led by transfer quarterbacks, Arkansas and Ryan Mallett and Mississippi and newcomer Jeremiah Masoli. Not to mention an LSU team trying to get back on top and Auburn playing catch-up with in-state rival Alabama.

"Every team on our end of it is going to improve," Saban said.

Florida could face a challenge from Georgia and receiver A.J. Green. South Carolina's Steve Spurrier has Stephen Garcia back running his offense.

"The East is completely wide open," Gators coach Urban Meyer said.

There was plenty of turnover around the league in the two most high-profile positions: Head coach and quarterback.

Tennessee replaces Lane Kiffin with coach Derek Dooley. Vanderbilt welcomes first-time college head coach Robbie Caldwell — thanks to Bobby Johnson's midsummer retirement — and Kentucky's Joker Phillips got to remove the in-waiting part of his title.

With Tebow in the NFL, Mallett is the only bona fide returning star at quarterback, though Alabama's Greg McElroy still hasn't lost as a starter since eighth-grade.

The Tide's stingy defense must replace two-time All-America noseguard Terrence "Mount" Cody and Butkus Award-winning linebacker Rolando McClain. But there's still running back Mark Ingram — the Tide's first Heisman winner — and fellow Alabama offensive threats Julio Jones and Trent Richardson.

Woods has high hopes ahead of Bridgestone

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A two-hour window Wednesday provided a snapshot of a strange year for Tiger Woods.

The guy famous for sweeping dew off the grass with his crack-of-dawn practice rounds arrived shortly before lunch on the eve of the Bridgestone Invitational to play nine holes at Firestone. That's not terribly unusual, for Woods knows Firestone as well as any other course, and it's where he made history last year as the only player to win a PGA Tour event seven times on the same course.

One tee shot into his practice round, the siren sounded because of bad weather.

He wound up playing only four holes.

This year has been anything but routine. Woods didn't start until the Masters while coping with the fallout from his extramarital affairs. He has gone seven tournaments without winning, the longest drought at the start of any season since he turned pro.

And in comments that were veiled yet somewhat revealing, Woods said the distractions he faces in his personal life affect him as much during practice as they do during tournaments.

"I haven't been able to practice as long as I normally have when I've been out here," Woods said. "People have been wanting more of my time. I've had more things going on once I'm at a tournament site than I have in the past, and for different reasons. That's obviously taken a little bit of a toll on my preparation."

"Things are starting to normalize," he said. "And that's been a good sign."

Who wants more of his time? Woods didn't elaborate.

He has refused to answer questions about his personal life. Notah Begay, one of his best friends, mentioned last month at a press conference that Woods is going through a divorce, which most have suspected.

That would be one thing that Woods couldn't turn over to his business team to handle.

"It's been difficult," Woods said. "It's been a trying time for a lot of people who are friends of mine and who know me."

Iupati was drafted to challenge Baas for a starting role as the 49ers look to upgrade a unit that has been one of San Francisco's primary weaknesses in recent seasons.

Singletary already has stated that he expects Iupati and the team's other first-round pick, No. 11 overall selection Anthony Davis, to become starters at some point during their rookie seasons.

Iupati already is there, at least while Baas continues to sit out practice on a day-to-day basis. Could Iupati already be there to stay?

"I can't control that," Iupati said. "That's the big man's call. There's a lot of training camp to go and there are a lot of things I need to work on. But it's intense and it's physical out there, and I'm having fun. This is an early opportunity for me, and I just have to get better every day and keep on grinding."

Iupati's ability to grind in the trenches has been one of his most impressive qualities. The 331-pound mauler has displayed the power and strength that made him one of the top line prospects in the draft, smothering linebackers more than a few times during team drills.

That's exactly what the 49ers want but haven't been getting enough of in recent seasons.

"We were not good enough up front (last year)," Singletary said. "It's as simple as that."

Iupati and Davis were brought in to change that, and so far the results have been promising.

The 323-pound Davis is on a more gradual learning curve at right tackle, where he's expected to challenge incumbent Adam Snyder for the starting role. But Davis took most of the first-team snaps Wednesday with Snyder moving to right guard in place of regular starter Chilo Rachal.

Rachal collapsed during Tuesday afternoon's practice and was motionless on the turf before he was taken to the locker room on a cart suffering from what the team called dehydration. Rachal watched practice from the sidelines Wednesday and is listed as day to day.

Snyder has previous starting experience at guard, so Davis could see his first-team work increase if Snyder is needed there. But in the early going, Iupati is the rookie lineman who has created the biggest waves.

Tucked in between left tackle Joe Staley and center Eric Heitmann — the two most distinguished veterans along San Francisco's offensive line — Iupati already looks something like a natural.

"All I can say about Mike is he's going to be a great player, and he's already doing a really good job for us right now," Heitmann said. "Obviously, he has all the physical tools he needs to be successful at this level and he's got a great attitude. The more experience he gets, he's just going to keep getting better."

DEAR ABBY: When I went to visit my mother, I found her lying on the kitchen floor. I asked her what she was doing there, and she said the floor feels cold and hard and soothes her back.

Abby, my mother has two very expensive beds in her home, and there is no reason for her to lie on the floor. It could be embarrassing if a friend or neighbor should pop in and find her there. How do I get her off the floor?
— NOT BEDRIDDEN

IN FLORIDA

DEAR NOT BEDRIDDEN:

You should be more concerned with how things are than how they "might" be perceived by others. If your mother is having back trouble, encourage her to discuss it with her doctor or a chiropractor so she can be examined to make sure nothing is wrong. But if nothing is, then leave your poor mother alone. She's in the privacy of her own home, and she is hurting no one.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: We have an ongoing discussion in our office. What color ink is proper for signing birthday cards, sympathy cards, farewell cards, etc?

One co-worker continues to use colors other than blue or black. An older co-worker says it's inappropriate to use any other colors. I have searched for an answer to this question with no luck. Can you help?

— SEEING RED
IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR SEEING RED: You seem to have a lot of time on your hands in that office. What is being conveyed is more important than how it looks. To sign a sympathy card in bright red might be inappropriate because it is jarring. For cards celebrating happy occasions, colored ink is acceptable — the exception being fluorescent ink because it is hard to read.

DEAR ABBY: My aunt and uncle are "large" people. In the past we have had to be extremely cautious about where they sit when they come visit. Our furniture is mostly hand-me-downs and not overly sturdy.

They have, on occasion, broken the furniture because of their weight. We have had to have our kitchen chairs reglued, and once a chair was destroyed beyond repair. They have never ever offered to make amends for the furniture they have damaged.

We are about to order a new dining room set and living room furniture. Naturally, we don't want these broken. My husband has suggested giving them only sturdy folding chairs to sit on, but I don't want to embarrass them or make them feel unwelcome.

Is there a way to protect our furniture without hurting or offending my aunt and uncle? We don't have the money to constantly replace broken items.

— STRICTLY ANONYMOUS IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR STRICTLY ANONYMOUS: To drag out folding chairs for your aunt and uncle to use would be glaringly obvious. Consider buying a couple of sturdy chairs (and possibly have them reinforced with metal bracing) for them. When you know they're coming, "guide" them toward the chairs you want them to use. If you are questioned about it, explain (kindly) that in the past your chairs have been broken or needed repair — so these were bought with them in mind because they are sturdier and you want them to be comfortable.

If they take offense, then please realize that the problem is theirs. To prepare for guests with "special needs" is an example of good hospitality, not rudeness.

Today is Thursday, Aug. 5, the 217th day of 2010. There are 148 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Aug. 5, 1962, actress Marilyn Monroe, 36, was found dead in her Los Angeles home; her death was ruled a probable suicide from an overdose of sleeping pills.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union Admiral David G. Farragut led his fleet to victory in the Battle of Mobile Bay, Ala.

In 1884, the cornerstone for the Statue of Liberty's pedestal was laid on Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor.

In 1924, the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," by Harold Gray, made its debut.

In 1933, President Franklin D. Roosevelt established the National Labor Board, which was later replaced with the National Labor Relations Board.

In 1953, Operation Big Switch began as prisoners taken during the Korean conflict were exchanged at Panmunjom.

In 1960, the West African nation of Upper Volta (now Burkina Faso) became fully independent of French rule.

In 1963, the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union signed a treaty in Moscow banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere, in space and underwater.

In 1968, the Republican national convention convened in Miami Beach.

In 1969, the U.S. space probe Mariner 7 flew by Mars, sending back photographs and scientific data.

In 1984, actor Richard Burton died in Geneva, Switzerland, at age 58.

Ten years ago: President Bill Clinton vetoed a Republican-sponsored tax cut for married couples, describing it as "the first installment of a fiscally reckless tax strategy." Actor Sir Alec Guinness died at a southern England hospital at age 86.

IF AUGUST 5 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Home, family, education and excursions to foreign lands, either mentally or physically, could be topics that spark your interest for the next several weeks. Take pride in your good fortune and enjoy the respect of other members of your community. You should write down your ideas and put them to good use next spring. By the beginning of next year, your attention could shift as it becomes more important to use your street smarts and business sense. If you need to change jobs or ask for a raise the best time is late March when your professional demeanor will impress everyone you meet.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may crave excitement but label it as self-improvement. Rearranging furniture, meeting new people, or getting a drastic new haircut is fine as long as you realize your tastes may change in the future.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Fairy tales can come true — it can happen to you. An unexpected meeting might be just what you hoped for, but go slowly as it could disrupt the even tenor of your life. Avoid making drastic choices.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Home is where you find harmony. Consider yourself part of the family. It might be parents, your spouse and kids, or it could be your neighborhood that gives you the feeling of being "at home."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you fly, you must land. You don't need a neon sign to attract new friends or admirers. You will want to be sure that old pals are still around after a brief flurry of social butterflying calms down.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may need to climb over mountains of meekness. You are exceedingly capable of handling any contingency at work or home but could have trouble asserting yourself.. Be sure to get extra rest and sleep.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put your very best foot forward. You might not know who is watching or assessing you from across the room. New friendships or partnerships forged now could prove fleeting or to not last.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Nail down the facts before you fantasize. Your cheerful, optimistic style can't be applied to finances. Balance the checkbook and scrutinize receipts. You might find little mistakes that add up in your favor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Opposites attract. The very thing that seems most alluring now might fall out of favor after the weekend. Some surprising factors could come into play while forging an alliance or a compromise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Remember the old adage about changing horses in midstream. This isn't the time to alter your long-term financial goals or to burn any bridges. New information or details might arrive next week.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): People don't change, but attitudes do. If you are tense or find it difficult to settle down try reading the "Serenity Prayer." It is necessary to be versatile and adaptable as the week-end unfolds.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are more popular when you are less particular. Stress intuitive understanding and place emphasis on creating an atmosphere of serenity. Anticipate unexpected shifts of opinion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loving 'em without leaving 'em, that is the issue. Latching onto a committed relationship may be difficult. You enjoy having your freedoms and might not be able to sustain a new partnership.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"When they are there, I neglect God and his angels for the noise of a fly, for the rattling of a coach, for the whining of a door."

— John Donne

In today's four-heart contract from Julian Pottage's "Win the Big Match" (available from www.sterlingpub.com), you know West holds both minor-suit aces, so there is little point in leading a club up to the king. Can you instead organize a throw-in on West?

It looks natural to win the heart in hand, cash the spades, then lead the heart six to dummy's king. Now you may put West on play by running the diamond jack — but what good does that do? West wins with the diamond queen, cashes the ace, and exits with a third round, leaving you with two club losers. Instead, your exit has to take place in clubs.

Strip off the spades and trumps as before, but then lead a low club from dummy. If East plays low on the trick, you must restrain yourself from rising with the king — West might win with the ace and get off play with a low club to East. Instead, insert the club eight. If the cards lie as you hope, West can win the club cheaply, but now what? A diamond or spade lead will eliminate a diamond loser. Cashing the club ace provides a temporary escape, but with the club jack falling from East, West is then really stuck. Whether he leads a low or high club, one ruff sets up the suit, giving you two diamond discards on the clubs since you can lead your heart two to dummy's three.

Partner is likely to have extra shape, additional high cards or both, for his takeout double. Given that you did not act at your first turn, you have a decent hand, but not enough to invite to game with a three-heart bid. Since your most likely game is in hearts, not clubs, try to bid two hearts without giving away that you have a problem, and hope that partner can act again.
