THE MEASURE OF THINGS TO COME

Bureau of Land Management Fuels Module Leader Joanne Anderson talks about her job as she plucks sagebrush for moisture testing west of Notch Butte, along U.S. Highway 93 on Thursday.

As sagebrush dries out, fire risk remains normal for August, BLM says

SHOSHONE — Something as simple as the amount of water in a sagebrush plant can influence spending by the Bureau of Land Management.

After collecting moisture and related data for decades, BLM fire specialists have learned which numbers mean increased fire risk and at what point they need to beef up their firefighting resources.

On Thursday, two BLM fuels crews competed in a “blitz” of nine measurement sites managed by the agency’s Shoshone Field Office. Their bi-weekly mission is to collect 10 samples of sagebrush at each of the sites within one day and measure the plants’ moisture content.

Fuels experts Erik Valdez and Joanna Anderson collected sagebrush on BLM land south of Shoshone, one of their lower sites. Valdez explained how the nine sites vary in elevation and average rainfall, allowing managers to get a composite picture of fire risk across the valley.

After six years of sampling, Valdez knew enough to look at Thursday’s sagebrush and estimate the moisture content at around 80 percent.

“That’s pretty low,” Valdez said. “Sagebrush can hold as much as 200 percent of its weight in moisture.”

Valdez said sagebrush normally

Snooker table sparks debate at senior center rattled by recession

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Retiree George Fleetwood walked into the Twin Falls Senior Center on Wednesday hoping to find someone to play snooker, a billiards-like game.

Instead, the room was vacant and the tables were covered by tarps. Even the light, a blue-gray pouring in through two windows, suggested the room’s emptiness.

Most of the people Fleetwood usually plays with are boycotting the room, instead travelling to Buhl to play. At issue is the struggling center’s board of directors ending the players’ monopoly on the room — moving one table into the general area and forcing the second, player-owned table to be removed so the room can be rented out to help pay the bills.

“It’s sad they have to take what we have,” Fleetwood said.

The heads of the cash-strapped center felt they didn’t have much of a choice — federal and state payments lagged in the spring, landing the center $20,000 in debt to two food companies and months behind on other bills, said Phillip Kottraba, who took over as the center’s director

Long, hot summer of fire, floods fits predictions

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Floods, fires, melting ice and feverish heat: From smoke-choked Moscow to water-soaked Iowa and the High Arctic, the planet seems to be having a midsummer breakdown. It’s not just a portent of things to come, scientists say, but a sign of troubling climate change already under way.

The weather-related cataclysms of July and August fit patterns predicted by climate scientists, the Geneva-based World Meteorological Organization says — although those scientists always shy from tying individual disasters directly to global warming.

No charges filed yet for Auger Falls Fire

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Questions remain over the final outcome of the Auger Falls Fire investigation.

Multiple agencies are taking a wait-and-see approach depending on what the city of Twin Falls may or may not do with information it has gathered.

The Twin Falls Police Department’s investigation into a suspect who may have started the massive fire last month is still pending, according to city spokeswoman Julie Pence. The suspect, who police are not identifying at this time, may have started the fire by discarding a cigarette, and the city is considering whether to pursue criminal or civil action.

City Manager Tom Courtney said once the police investigation is complete, the city will review the findings and discuss what kind of action to take, if any.

At this point, city officials said they believe it’s premature to talk about possible actions.

As far as the Bureau of Land Management is concerned, it will make a move only if Twin Falls does.

“If Twin Falls city decides to go forward with prosecuting an individual, BLM will seek restitution,” said spokesman Brock Astle.

He added that the federal agency is still tallying the costs of fighting the July 22 fire.

“Those numbers still haven’t been totaled,” he said. “The aviation loans cost over $10,000, but that doesn’t include trucks, engines and support staff.”

According to Capt. Tim Miller, the Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Office is not filing criminal charges against the suspect.

Auger Falls Park includes 700 acres, 550 owned by the city and 150 owned by the BLM. Nearly 85 percent of it was burned by the raging fire, just months after the city opened the park to the public.

It’s unknown how much reseedling will cost, though preliminary estimates show it could be about $45,000.

Three St. Luke’s programs find new offices

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

With a new hospital preparing to open in May 2011, other St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center programs are finding homes a little closer to, well, home.

St. Luke’s Home Care and Hospice, Safe Kids Magic Valley and St. Luke’s Health System Compliance celebrated their open house on Thursday night with members from the community and ambassadors from the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

The three different offices and 47 employees are officially moved into a 6,500-square-foot office building. Located next to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare offices on Pole Line Road, the building once served as patient financial services and was remodeled to comfortably fit the three businesses.

The ribbon-cutting allowed each department to show off its new space. Idaho State Police Capt. Rob Storm, who has served on the Safe Kids board for two years, said the work Safe Kids does directly affects his work as an officer.

“They save lives,” Storm said. “Oftentimes you will get to an accident and there will be these little kids safe in the cocoon of the car seat.”

Other stories from people who have been affected by home care and Safe Kids provided an avenue for the businesses to demonstrate the need for their services in the community, and their need for the new space.

Melissa Fenderson, manager of the home-care operation, said the new location is improved from her previous office in downtown Twin Falls.

“It puts us much closer to the hospital and it gives us easier access to the roads,” Fenderson said.

The system-compliance team, tucked into a hallway where traffic flow will be light, expressed gratitude for the ability to have their staff in a central location.

Safe Kids Magic Valley Director Page Geske said the new office gives her storefront a better look. Though she will miss being able to walk across the street to the hospital, she said, the new location suits everyone’s needs.

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

It's big doings in small towns today.

- Jarbidge Days kicks off today with a schedule full of activities, from a town tour and arts and craft sale to a giant yard sale. It continues through Saturday.

- The giant Three Island Crossing Celebration begins with events downtown and at Three Island Crossing State Park starting at 9 a.m. You've got mountain men, a quilt show, chili cook-off, street dance, interpretive center and more to call notice to the pioneers who crossed the Snake River.

- Then dance to country and rock music from The Fugitives from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at Shakers, 826 Idaho Highway 81 in Declo. No cover.

Our man in Kabul: T.F. lawyer was first U.S. envoy to Afghanistan

In 1935, Afghanistan might as well have been on the dark side of the moon.

Populated by fractious, warring tribesmen with a penchant for killing each other and any foreigners who intervened, the U.S. Department of State had long considered Afghanistan unworthy of its attention.

But the secretary of state at the time, Cordell Hull, was a global thinker, and President Franklin Roosevelt had a keen interest in central Asia — both because of its oil and its strategic location. That's one reason why Roosevelt had recognized the Soviet Union in 1933.

So 75 years ago, Roosevelt appointed the U.S. minister to Iran — William H. Hornibrook — to be minister to Afghanistan as well. Hornibrook, who 20 years before had been President Woodrow Wilson's ambassador to Thailand, presented his credentials to King Mohammed Zahir Shah on May 4 in Kabul.

Kabul is a long way from Twin Falls, where Hornibrook — a 23-year-old Iowa-born lawyer — had fetched up in 1907.

Hornibrook quickly embraced his new Idaho home and got involved in local Democratic politics. He was elected to the state Senate from Twin Falls County in 1910, and served a single term before moving with his wife to Oregon, where he was almost immediately elected to the Oregon State Democratic Central Committee.

His rise to prominence was swift enough that Hornibrook's political hero — Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan — noticed him and got Wilson to appoint Hornibrook minister to Siam. But Hornibrook lost his power base after Bryan's resignation and left Bangkok after a year, moving first to Vancouver, Wash., and then to Provo, Utah, where he practiced law.

In 1934, Roosevelt — another Democratic president — nominated Hornibrook as minister to Iran, and took a keen interest in his observations.

"As an indication of Roosevelt's special interest in Persia and the Middle East, the president requested Hornibrook periodically to submit a report directly to him on conditions in Persia," wrote Mohammad Gholi Majd in "Great Britain and Reza Shah: The Plunder of Iran, 1921-1941."

Hornibrook soon became a critic of the human rights policies of Reza, a former calvary officer who had seized power with British backing in 1925 and proclaimed himself king of the Persians.

On July 13, 1935, Reza's troops machine-gunned protesters at the Iman Reza shrine in Mashhad, killing 28 and wounding 60. The incident led indirectly to Reza's fall in September 1941, when Russian and British troops fearing Reza's ties to Nazi Germany invaded Iran and installed Reza's son, Mahmud, in his place. Mahmud became the shah who was overthrown by the Iranian revolution in 1979.

Partly in reaction to the Mashhad massacre, the U.S. downgraded its diplomatic relations with Iran.

Hornibrook was recalled to Washington in 1936 and replaced by the American mission's second-ranking diplomat in Tehran, Charge d'Affairs Gordon Merriam.

Hornibrook wasn't immediately replaced in Kabul. His successor in Afghanistan, Louis Dreyfus, wasn't appointed until 1940.

Upon his return to Washington, Hornibrook was named by Roosevelt as ambassador to Costa Rica, where he served until his 1941 retirement from the diplomatic service at age 67. He died in 1946.

Two crashes, one fatal, near Buhl

Times-News

A pair of crashes on Thursday took a life and deprived hundreds of homes and businesses of electricity in west Twin Falls County.

Alberto Flores Sr., 52, of Buhl, died at the scene of an accident around 2 a.m. at 3900 N. 1420 E., 2 miles south of Buhl, according to the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

Flores was driving eastbound when he lost control of his 2001 Ford pickup truck, which rolled multiple times. Two passengers were uninjured. Alcohol and excessive speed are believed to be factors in the crash.

Nearly 12 hours later, Luke Woodhouse, 28, of Buhl, lost control of his maroon pickup truck around 1:15 p.m. at the intersection of 1333 E. 4100 N., a few hundred yards east of Buhl Municipal Airport. He clipped a power pole, spun the vehicle and was ejected or fell out of the driver-side door.

Woodhouse was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with serious injuries.

Alcohol is also believed to be a factor in that crash.

Idaho Power Co. reported that 1,265 customers were without power for more than two hours Thursday afternoon while a repair crew worked to restore service lost due to the clipped power pole. Outages occurred between 3350 North and 4200 North, and 950 East and 1450 East.

Both accidents remain under investigation by sheriff's deputies.

Climate

next in Europe and America, under United Nations, U.S. and British government sponsorship.

"There is no time to waste," because societies must be equipped to deal with global warming, says British government climatologist Peter Stott.

He said modelers of climate systems are "very keen" to develop supercomputer modeling that would enable more detailed linking of cause and effect as a warming world shifts jet streams and other atmospheric currents. Those changes can wreak weather havoc.

The U.N.'s network of climate scientists — the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) — has long predicted that rising global temperatures would produce more frequent and intense heat waves, and more intense rainfalls. In its latest assessment, in 2007, the Nobel Prize-winning panel went beyond that. It said these trends "have already been observed," in an increase in heat waves since 1950, for example.

Still, climatologists generally refrain from blaming warming for this drought or that flood, since so many other factors also affect the day's weather.

Stott and NASA's Gavin Schmidt, at the Goddard Institute of Space Studies in New York, said it's better to think in terms of odds: Warming might double the chances for heat waves, for example. "That is exactly what's happening," Schmidt said, "a lot more warm extremes and less cold extremes."

The WMO pointed out that this summer's events fit the international scientists' projections of "more frequent and more intense extreme weather events due to global warming?"

In fact, in key cases they're a perfect fit:

RUSSIA

It's been the hottest summer ever recorded in Russia, with Moscow temperatures topping 100 degrees Fahrenheit for the first time. Russia's drought has sparked hundreds of wildfires in forests and dried peat bogs, blanketing Moscow with a toxic smog that finally lifted Thursday after six days. The Russian capital's death rate doubled to 700 people a day at one point. The drought reduced the wheat harvest by more than one-third.

The 2007 IPCC report predicted a doubling of disastrous droughts in Russia this century and cited studies foreseeing catastrophic fires during dry years. It also said Russia would suffer large crop losses.

PAKISTAN

The heaviest monsoon rains on record — 12 inches in one 36-hour period — have sent rivers rampaging over huge swaths of countryside, flooding thousands of villages. It has left 14 million Pakistanis homeless or otherwise affected, and killed 1,500. The government calls it the worst natural disaster in the nation's history.

A warmer atmosphere can hold — and discharge — more water. The 2007 IPCC report said rains have grown heavier for 40 years over north Pakistan and predicted greater flooding this century in south Asia's monsoon region.

CHINA

China is witnessing its worst floods in decades, the WMO says, particularly in the northwest province of Gansu. There, floods and landslides last weekend killed at least 1,100 people and left more than 600 missing, feared swept away or buried beneath mud and debris.

The IPCC reported in 2007 that rains had increased in northwest China by up to 33 percent since 1961, and floods nationwide had increased sevenfold since the 1950s. It predicted still more frequent flooding this century.

UNITED STATES

In Iowa, soaked by its wettest 36-month period in 127 years of recordkeeping, floodwaters from three nights of rain this week forced hundreds from their homes and killed a 16-year-old girl.

The international climate panel projected increased U.S. precipitation this century — except for the Southwest — and more extreme rain events causing flooding.

ARCTIC

spotted a 100-square-mile chunk of ice calved off from the great Petermann Glacier in Greenland's far northwest. It was the most massive ice island to break away in the Arctic in a half-century of observation.

The huge iceberg appeared just five months after an international scientific team published a report saying ice loss from the Greenland ice sheet is expanding up its northwest coast from the south.

Changes in the ice sheet "are happening fast, and we are definitely losing more ice mass than we had anticipated," said one of the scientists, NASA's Isabella Velicogna.

In the Arctic Ocean itself, the summer melt of the vast ice cap has reached unprecedented proportions in recent years. Satellite data show the ocean area covered by ice last month was the second-lowest ever recorded for July.

The melting of land ice into the oceans is causing about 60 percent of the accelerating rise in sea levels worldwide, with thermal expansion from warming waters causing the rest. The WMO's World Climate Research Program says seas are rising by 1.34 inches per decade, about twice the 20th century's average.

Worldwide temperature readings, meanwhile, show that this January-June was the hottest first half of a year since recordkeeping began in the mid-19th century. Meteorologists say 17 nations have recorded all-time-high temperatures in 2010, more than in any other year.

Scientists blame the warming on carbon dioxide and other heat-trapping gases pouring into the atmosphere from power plants, cars and trucks, furnaces and other fossil fuel-burning industrial and residential sources.

Snooker

in March. The center didn't want to cut food services, leaving new revenue streams the key to remaining afloat.

"I told (the snooker players) that if we didn't move the table, they'd be playing in the parking lot because this place wouldn't exist," Kottraba said. "I believe the future of this organization is being a little more entrepreneurial in raising money."

The pool room will be the second vacant room for groups to rent out for meetings and parties. Kottraba said seniors and their events will always take priority over outside renters.

The move is essentially a settled matter, with the board voting unanimously to approve it, said Michael Johnson, president of the board. But fervor over the move led to the board giving the boycotters 10 minutes at its Wednesday meeting to air their grievances.

Fleetwood and another snooker player, George Tracy, said they collected about 200 signatures on a petition to keep the tables around. Tracy grumbled about only having 10 minutes for their complaints and questioned even going — "They've already made up their mind and there ain't nothing we can do about it," he said.

An extra pool table in the room was sold in April, with the players saying the money was supposed to go toward re-covering the far-more-popular snooker table. It never happened, Kottraba said, because the center needed the money to keep food on the plates of seniors.

Fleetwood expressed disappointment at the "unjustified" move — the expensive table stands to get damaged during the move or in the general area, with people piling food or drink on it, and some of the players use saltier language than may be appropriate in the main hall. He said the group will probably continue playing elsewhere if it loses its room.

"I think the board has its priority to make money," he said. "If the feds paid up their end of it, we'd be OK financially, right Phil?" "We'd be better," Kottraba responded.

Kottraba said he won't think the center is in a comfortable position until it has the savings to survive another slow spring. He expects another round of holdbacks on state funding, among other issues.

Aside from helping to keep the center solvent, the moved snooker tables will become free. They cost currently $1 per day to play or $15 for a month, though Fleetwood said the players are willing to pay more if it means keeping their room.

Because of that reduced cost, "It's hard for me to get my heart around this issue," Johnson said.

As for a compromise, Kottraba said, "I'm plumb out of ideas."

Rescuers unable to reach Nev. miners

Unknown if pair are alive after shaft accident

By Adella Harding
Elko Daily Free Press

ELKO, Nev. — Rescuers searched Thursday for two miners at Barrick Gold Corp.'s Meikle underground mine who may have been killed in a shaft accident.

Barrick isn't identifying the two men or saying whether they died in the early morning accident.

"We haven't been able to make contact with the miners," Greg Lang, Barrick Gold of North America president, said Thursday evening from the Goldstrike Mine, where Meikle is located. "I don't think we will have anything new until morning."

The two miners were in what is called a cage riding down the ventilation shaft into the mine when a pipe struck the cage.

Lang said visual examination of the shaft from different levels shows a two-foot pipe that carries backfill and aggregate to the mine "broke loose from a wall and fell down the shaft, causing severe damage to the cage."

Portions of the cage are visible, but the rescue crews directed by U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration personnel haven't reached the men, he said.

"We're working with MSHA to develop a safe procedure to access the bottom of the shaft," Lang said. "The main thing now is we don't want to put anybody at risk with the recovery operation."

Barrick notified the miners' families after the 1:15 a.m. accident, but Lang said their names won't be released until the families have time to notify their relatives while the recovery teams are still trying to locate the miners.

"Our thoughts and prayers are with the families of the workers, and we will provide additional information when it becomes available," Lang said. "We will be working around the clock to resolve the situation."

Earlier in the day, Lang said that "while we don't have all of the facts at this point, what we do know about the incident is not encouraging."

Barrick shut down the Meikle Mine to all but the recovery personnel Thursday, and mining at the Betze-Post open pit was scaled back.

Lang said Barrick is aware of how upsetting the accident is to employees, "and we don't want them to work if they don't have their full attention on the job."

Elko County Sheriff Dale Lotspeich said his office is on standby to offer assistance upon Barrick's request.

Elko police Lt. Richard Genseal said the Elko Bomb Squad went to the mine with a robot that is fitted with a camera to aid in the search operation.

MSHA reported having eight agency people at Meikle.

The agency stated the hoist operator at Meikle noticed a surge of pressure on the hoist drum as the two men were going down in the cage. He called for rescue operations.

Barrick's rescue crews from all of its facilities are available, and Newmont Mining Corp. rescue teams from neighboring operations north of Carlin are backup, according to Lou Schack, Barrick's director of communications and community affairs.

The Meikle Mine hasn't had a fatality since 2004, when one miner died when pinned between his haul truck and a concreted rib.

Two died there in 2000, one when he backed a water truck into an open stope and the other when the victim was struck by the shaft-sinking bucket at Rodeo, which is part of the Meikle complex.

The Meikle underground operations also had two fatalities in 1999, one a haulage truck accident. The other fatality was a contractor who died after falling into an ore pass.

There have been no mine fatalities in Nevada this year, and 26 mining deaths in the state over the past 10 years, including at gold and copper mines and industrial minerals operations.

Rupert utility rates climb, but only a little

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — The Rupert City Council increased rates Tuesday on four utilities to meet a need for greater revenue.

Wastewater treatment, residential and commercial water, and trash collection rates will all increase starting Oct. 1. A new city budget will be voted on after a public hearing at the council's Aug. 24 meeting.

Most water rate increases were slight, coming in at less than 2 percent. But wastewater rates will increase about 4 percent — almost $2 each to $47.40 per month for residential users and $52.35 for county residents connected to city services. Those who qualify for the circuit-breaker program would pay about $1 more, or $25.62 monthly, and commercial users would pay $47.40 per residential-equivalent unit.

Trash collection will cost $28.35 monthly per single weekly pickup service, with a $9.98 charge for each additional pickup. Fees for city-owned 4- and 6-yard containers also saw small increases.

In other business, the council voted to accept an offer from Workman Pontiac, Cadillac, Buick, GMC Inc. regarding ending its lease. Workman would like to surrender the improvements made to city property in exchange for $1,000.

Councilman James Bowers stated that the improvements are more valuable to the city than $1,000, and that it would be to the city's benefit to accept the offer.

The council also agreed to accept a suggested Pershing Intermediate School lease for the Mini-Cassia Veterans Association, but also voted to let the association examine the lease more closely and provide feedback.

City Clerk Carma Maxey reported on a recent resident survey regarding Rupert's four-day workweek, which began April 5. Comments were positive, with one person noting it "should have been done a long time ago." Another similar survey will go out in three months.

Idaho Transportation Department plans I-84, U.S. 93 projects

Times-News

Jerome County traffic will soon be slowed along two commuter routes as the Idaho Transportation Department conducts seal-coat projects along Interstate 84 and U.S. Highway 93.

ITD announced that work on I-84 from mileposts 166 to 173 will begin Monday, with crews moving operations to U.S. 93 between I-84 and the Idaho Highway 25 junction as soon as Thursday. The speed limit will be reduced to 35 mph through both construction zones due to lane closures and loose gravel.

Lane restrictions will be in effect between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m. I-84 will be reduced to one lane of traffic in each direction, while U.S. 93 will be reduced to one lane with a pilot car shuttling traffic through the work zone. Drivers are encouraged to use alternate routes if possible.

Kloepfer Inc., of Paul, is the contractor for the $1.08 million seal-coat project, which also includes future seal-coat operations in Buhl and Twin Falls.

State scraps science test requirement

Rule required high school students to pass before graduating

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Idaho is scrapping a rule that would have required high school students to pass standardized tests in science before they graduate, starting with the class of 2013.

Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna said science classes vary from district to district and students are only tested twice — in the 5th- and 7th-grades — before they are tested by the state in the 10th grade.

“When you only test them in 5th and 7th grade, that’s not enough,” Luna said Thursday. “We have no way of identifying who needs remediation along the way.”

State education officials believe the lack of testing may explain why fewer students were proficient in science than in math and reading on the Idaho Standardized Achievement Tests this year. Public school students are tested more frequently in those subjects.

The current system is not an accurate measure of how students are performing in science, Luna said, “not to the point that we would make it a graduation requirement.”

The state Board of Education agreed, voting this week to dump the rule requiring students to test proficient in science before they graduate — at least for now.

The board instructed Luna’s department to develop end-of-course assessments in science that students will have to pass in order to graduate, according to documents provided by the board. Those assessments would take effect for the class of 2017.

“We’re not removing the science test,” Luna said. “They just won’t have to demonstrate proficiency to graduate.”

That proficiency requirement was part of an effort to boost math and science requirements in 2007, ending a yearlong battle to raise standards that divided churches, educators and some parents. It required students, starting with the class of 2013, to take more math and science classes to graduate high school.

A similar proposal failed in 2006, in part because some groups, including the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, feared it would cut into religious training after school. Others feared children would have to scale back activities like band or art. The temporary removal of the science test as a graduation requirement still has to be approved by lawmakers.

“It was a difficult battle when the increased high school gradation requirements were brought to the Legislature,” said Sen. John Goedde, a Republican who chairs the Senate Education Committee. “It’s unfortunate that we’re moving backward.”

Utah antigambling laws kill raffle for new police dog

By Doub Alden
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — A community campaign to raise money to add a drug-sniffing dog to the Lone Peak Police Department in Utah County found that even the best of intentions must follow the law.

Leaders of the effort had to change course when they discovered a raffle — no matter how well-intended — was illegal.

Utah’s strict antigambling laws prohibit giving up something of value in return for a chance at receiving something of value. And that includes raffles like the one for the police department to get the canine officer.

So sponsors Bank of American Fork and Kohler’s Food Store quickly had to pull the $1 tickets and are offering refunds to anybody who bought them. The prize was a $1,000 shopping spree at Kohler’s.

“People are responding very positively,” said Christopher Liechty, vice president of communications for the bank. “The important thing is we need to get the community the dog. That really does seem to be the emphasis.”

Liechty said Thursday that organizers and the police department realized late last week that the raffle idea, while sounding innocuous enough, was a no-no in a state that is especially strict when it comes to vices.

“This time we just got into a raffle that wasn’t the right thing to do,” Liechty said. “As soon as we found out, we turned it around.”

Lone Peak police declined comment Thursday, referring calls to the bank.

About 500 tickets were sold, but Liechty said he hadn’t heard of any refund requests. And the publicity from the stumble in an effort to help the communities of Alpine and Highland by adding the highly-trained German shepherd to the police ranks may actually turn into a good thing.

The campaign has raised about $3,500 of the $10,000 goal.

“We’re hopeful the additional awareness can get us there faster,” Liechty said.

Officials kill bear that menaced people

BOISE — Idaho wildlife officers have killed a black bear that they say had lost its of fear of people and had begun menacing them.

Idaho Fish and Game spokesman Jim Lukens says the animal had taken a swipe at a tent, and also charged at a visitor to Redfish lodge.

Lukens says the bear showed no fear of humans and an ear tag showed the animal had been captured before for similar problems.

The bear was killed in the Redfish Lake area.

Sawtooth National Forest spokeswoman Julie Thomas says as the mountains dry out bears have a harder time finding food naturally, and will sometimes try and scavenge food from campsites.

Business trade group endorses Simpson, Minnick and Crapo

BOISE — A business trade organization has thrown its support behind U.S. Reps. Mike Simpson and Walt Minnick, along with U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, in their bids for re-election.

The Idaho Association of Realtors endorsed the three members of Idaho’s congressional delegation on Thursday, saying the lawmakers have consistently demonstrated their pro-business beliefs and are a “tremendous asset” to the state.

Simpson, a six-term Republican who represents eastern Idaho, faces challenger Mike Crawford in November. Minnick, a first-term Democrat who represents Idaho’s 1st Congressional District, is being challenged by Republican Raul Labrador.

Republican Sen. Mike Crapo is seeking a third term and will go up against Democrat Tom Sullivan in November.

Judge halts panhandle timber cut

COUER D’ALENE — A federal judge has decided to put the brakes on a timber harvest project planned on more than 2,000 acres of U.S. Forest Service land in Idaho’s panhandle region.

This week’s ruling by U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge handed a victory to environmentalists and shuts down the Bussel Creek Forest Health Project, which also included more than five miles of new road construction, recreation enhancements and fire protection projects.

The Spokane, Wash.-based Lands Council sued in federal court to stop the cutting of trees, including mature stands on forest land eight miles near the small town of Clarkia. Attorneys for the group claimed that logging and other activity would have fragmented mature forest habitat critical to species like the Northern Goshawk and Pileated Woodpecker.

“The court’s order requires the Forest Service to actually search for and find key wildlife they have merely assumed still exist in a project area, before they authorize more logging and road building,” said Jeff Juel, the council’s forest policy director.

Idaho Panhandle National Forest Spokesman Jason Kircher said the agency was reviewing the decision but that one of the goals of the timber harvest was to improve overall forest health.

Juel said the ruling forces the agency to reconsider how it considers fires and fire management in future environmental studies of timber cuts and other forest projects.

The environmental group initially filed an administrative appeal of the Bussel Creek project in 2008, but lost its case at that level. The group followed with a lawsuit in federal court.

Salmon man struck by lighting, killed

SALMON — Lemhi County officials say a University of Idaho ranch employee was struck and killed by lighting during a strong thunderstorm in east central Idaho.

Sheriff Lynn Bowerman says 37-year-old Michael Haslett of Salmon was riding a horse and herding cattle at the university’s Hot Springs Ranch at about 4 p.m. Tuesday when he was struck and killed. The horse also died.

Two other people who were herding cows on the ranch about eight miles north of Salmon witnessed the lightning strike.

Bowerman says a wild weather system moved through the area Tuesday that included rain, hail and lightning strikes.

Finally, a brick through the window on moto-texting

It's not a law without flaws, but we're pleased the city of Twin Falls is the first in Idaho to ban texting while driving. The Twin Falls City Council voted 4-2 on Monday to make it illegal to operate a vehicle within the city while using an electronic wireless communications device to write, send or read a text-based communication. That includes text messaging and e-mails, and it's punishable by a $50 fine. City police will be able to stop someone for texting while driving even if he or she isn't driving dangerously.

The ordinance, which goes into effect Oct. 1, is likely to have repercussions far beyond Twin Falls. The city of Coeur d'Alene late last year drafted its own texting law, but the City Council held off to see whether the Legislature would approve a statewide ban.

The House of Representatives and the Senate both voted to do so earlier this year, but the measure was killed at the last minute in a procedural move by state Rep. — now GOP congressional candidate — Raul Labrador.

In July, the Boise Police Department banned texting behind the wheel by its police officers on city time.

Now, according to Idahoreporter.com, state Rep. Marv Hagedorn, R-Meridian, is crafting legislation to enact some type of statewide ban in the legislative session that begins in January. Hagedorn's bill, which he says is still in the works, would create a new category of offenses for those who do a number of things that lead to distracted and unsafe driving, including texting.

State law already provides for prosecution of those cited for inattentive or reckless driving, but Hagedorn's legislation would create "negligent driving," which could be used against those who text, eat, read, or practice other unsafe behaviors behind the wheel off a moving vehicle, Idahoreporter.com says. But those using cell phones or eating behind the wheel would also need to exhibit unsafe driving, such as speeding or weaving. Under Hagedorn's bill, an officer would be unable to stop someone texting while driving if that person exhibited no unsafe behavior on the road, like weaving, speeding, or making unsafe lane changes.

Twin Falls' ordinance will not be easy enforce, and most of citations are likely to be written after a driver is pulled over for other reasons or is involved in an accident.

But as Twin Falls Police Staff Sgt. Dennis Pullin said, the law is another tool in the toolbox for law enforcement officers.

"Is this ordinance perfect?" TFPD Capt. Brian Pike said. "I don't think it's perfect. It's got some vagueness to it," he said. "But it's a starting point."

The shifting ground on gay marriage

Here are some commonplace arguments against gay marriage: Marriage is an ancient institution that has always been defined as the union of one man and one woman, and we meddle with that definition at our peril. Lifelong heterosexual monogamy is natural; gay relationships are not. The nuclear family is the universal, time-tested path to forming families and raising children.

These have been losing arguments for decades now, as the cause of gay marriage has moved from an eccentric-seeming notion to an idea that roughly half the country supports. And they were losing arguments again last week, when California's Judge Vaughn Walker ruled that laws defining marriage as a heterosexual union are unconstitutional, irrational and unjust.

These arguments have lost because they're wrong. What we think of as "traditional marriage" is not universal. The default family arrangement in many cultures, modern as well as ancient, has been polygamy, not monogamy. The default mode of child-rearing is often communal, rather than two parents nurturing their biological children.

Nor is lifelong heterosexual monogamy obviously natural in the way that most Americans understand the term. If "natural" is defined to mean "congruent with our biological instincts," it's arguably one of the more unnatural arrangements imaginable. In crudely Darwinian terms, it cuts against both the male impulse toward promiscuity and the female interest in mating with the highest-status male available. Hence the historic prevalence of polygamy. And hence many societies' tolerance for more flexible alternatives, from concubinage and prostitution to temporary arrangements like the "traveler's marriages" sanctioned in some parts of the Islamic world.

So what are gay marriage's opponents really defending, if not some universal, biologically inevitable institution? It's a particular vision of marriage, rooted in a particular tradition, that establishes a particular sexual ideal.

This ideal holds up the commitment to lifelong fidelity and support by two sexually different human beings — a commitment that involves the mutual surrender, arguably, of their reproductive self-interest — as a uniquely admirable kind of relationship. It holds up the domestic life that can be created only by such unions, in which children grow up in intimate contact with both of their biological parents, as a uniquely admirable approach to child-rearing. And recognizing the difficulty of achieving these goals, it surrounds wedlock with a distinctive set of rituals, sanctions and taboos.

The point of this ideal is not that other relationships have no value, or that only nuclear families can rear children successfully. Rather, it's that lifelong heterosexual monogamy at its best can offer something distinctive and remarkable — a microcosm of civilization, and an organic connection between human generations — that makes it worthy of distinctive recognition and support.

Again, this is not how many cultures approach marriage. It's a particularly ... preserving (heterosexual monogamy) ultimately requires some public acknowledgment that heterosexual unions and gay relationships are different: similar in emotional commitment, but distinct both in their challenges and their potential fruit.

Western understanding, derived from Jewish and Christian beliefs about the order of creation, and supplemented by later ideas about romantic love, the rights of children, and the equality of the sexes.

Or at least, it was the Western understanding. Lately, it has come to co-exist with a less idealistic, more accommodating approach, defined by no-fault divorce, frequent out-of-wedlock births, and serial monogamy.

In this landscape, gay-marriage critics who fret about a slippery slope to polygamy miss the point. Americans already have a kind of postmodern polygamy available to them. It's just spread over the course of a lifetime, rather than concentrated in a "Big Love"-style menage.

If this newer order completely vanquishes the older marital ideal, then gay marriage will become not only acceptable but morally necessary. The lifelong commitment of a gay couple is more impressive than the serial monogamy of straights. And a culture in which weddings are optional celebrations of romantic love, only tangentially connected to procreation, has no business discriminating against the love of homosexuals.

But if we just accept this shift, we're giving up on one of the great ideas of Western civilization: the celebration of lifelong heterosexual monogamy as a unique and indispensable estate. That ideal is still worth honoring, and still worth striving to preserve. And preserving it ultimately requires some public acknowledgment that heterosexual unions and gay relationships are different: similar in emotional commitment, but distinct both in their challenges and their potential fruit.

But based on Judge Walker's logic — which suggests that any such distinction is bigoted and un-American — I don't think a society that declares gay marriage to be a fundamental right will be capable of even entertaining this idea.

Apology owed to Kustra, BSU, fans

The editorial published July 30 regarding BSU "being too good to play Idaho":

Has anyone on the Times-News editorial staff ever attended a BSU vs. U of I football game in Moscow? President Kustra's comments didn't even come close to describing how hateful, rude and degrading U of I students and fans treat BSU fans.

My wife and then 8-year-old son last attended in 2006 and will never subject ourselves to that atmosphere again. We have followed Bronco football to Reno, Logan, Salt Lake City, Seattle, Laramie, the Liberty Bowl in Memphis and both Fiesta Bowls and never encountered the uncivilized behavior we experienced in Moscow. Alcohol was available at tailgate parties, even served in the stadium at UNR and, yes, there are always some people that become intoxicated, rude and unfriendly, but in Moscow you can't walk in town, through the stadium parking lot or take your seat in the Kibbee Dome without constant verbal attacks and hateful comments.

What the Times-News doesn't mention is a recent article in the U of I student newspaper, The Argonaut, titled "Who we hate? Boise State." This article proves that hating BSU and its fans is not random but organized and accepted by the U of I administration. I believe U of I is still a state-funded Bronco university and The Argonaut is funded by U of I, so ultimately Idaho taxpayers are funding this hate campaign.

Maybe the editors at the Times-News should have read the article "Who we hate? Boise State" before judging President Kustra or Coach Petersen. They read it. As for an apology, the U of I, The Argonaut and the Times-News editorial staff owe President Kustra, Boise State and its fans an apology.

Effort in Pakistan doesn't work in reality

I'm not a Beatles fan and apparently neither is our government, because now we're spending an additional $500 million to expand Pakistan's social network — admittedly, all in the hope that they will take a more favorable view toward us and help in our conflict with the Taliban. We're making similar gratuitous gestures all around the globe. All in a "here's a candy bar, please be my friend" concept. That might have worked in the '50s coming from Mr.

Rogers' neighborhood, but this is real life in another century.

How about we use a better, time-proven technique — the bounty system? For every terrorist, they turn over to us (dead or alive), we pay $10,000 in the form of labor and material to build schools, hospitals, horse-drawn carriage repair shops, tent-making looms, kerosene lamp wick-trimming shops and camel foot care centers. No training of military troops or high-tech device training. No big factories or manufacturing plants that can be used to make bombs the minute we leave.

Other than a Texas strolling down the Las Vegas strip with hundred-dollar bills sticking out of his pockets, the Paul McCartney song title "Can't Buy Me Love" is right.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

By Garry Trudeau

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

Send Fannie and Freddie off into retirement

The Federal National Mortgage Association — known as Fannie Mae — and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation — Freddie Mac — were poorly structured from the time, 40 years ago, when they were set up as so-called government-sponsored enterprises.

Both of these technically private companies, designed to foster the issuance of home mortgages, enjoyed implicit federal backing in the event they got into financial trouble but only weak regulation to prevent such trouble. Essentially, the federal government insured the companies' liabilities but never charged a premium.

Fannie and Freddie had a license to print money. They could borrow at an interest rate only a bit over the Treasury rate and then accumulate large portfolios of mortgages and mortgage-backed securities earning the market rate. What a deal — borrow at the low rate, invest at a higher one, hold little capital and let the federal government bear the risk! Investors enjoyed high returns, and management enjoyed high salaries. Incidentally, politicians also got a steady flow of campaign contributions from the companies' executives.

Fannie and Freddie's risky policies led to their near collapse; in September 2008, the federal government brought them under federal conservatorship. Fannie and Freddie have cost taxpayers about $150 billion so far.

Next week the Obama administration plans to hold a conference to address the question of what to do with the two companies. Clearly, it would be an inexcusable mistake to reconstitute them as private companies in anything close to their prior form. Some people have suggested recasting them as a single new "Fannie-Fred agency" that would continue to securitize and guarantee home mortgages. It's true that Fannie and Freddie played an important role in developing the market for mortgage-backed securities. But they have completed that work, and they should not be preserved in any form. They should be thanked for their successes and gracefully retired.

Can the home mortgage market stand on its own, without support from federally sponsored mortgage companies? Experience tells us that the answer is an unambiguous yes. When Fannie and Freddie curtailed their operations after the disclosure of accounting irregularities in 2003, there was no effect on mortgage rates. We have seen how the jumbo mortgage market, for loans too large to be eligible for Fannie and Freddie purchases, has long operated efficiently, with rates only slightly above the rates on smaller mortgages. And many other asset markets, like the one for securitized auto loans, have functioned well without federal intermediaries.

If Fannie and Freddie were to continue to operate with the government absorbing all their risk, they would keep a large share of the market. But that system has been terribly expensive for taxpayers. The evidence shows that the private market can originate, securitize and distribute home mortgages efficiently on its own. While it's true that the private market brought on the financial crisis by creating so many subprime mortgages, Fannie and Freddie did not block that parade; they joined it — indeed, in some respects led it.

In principle, it ought to be possible for government financial agencies to be self-supporting. But decades of observation have convinced me that there is no practical way to prevent the government from inserting hidden subsidies and special interest mandates into the agencies' operations. If there are to be more federal housing subsidies — and I hope there are not — they should be legislated transparently.

The danger in having any new mortgage agency is that its guarantees would subsidize mortgage risk, eventually leading to further taxpayer losses. The only sure way to prevent that outcome is to phase out Fannie and Freddie. If the home finance market were fully private, then it would bear the losses from its own mistakes in pricing and insurance. The proper government role is regulatory oversight and not direct operation of financial firms.

Fannie and Freddie could not be shuttered immediately; they are too large. A sensible transition plan would have them stop buying new mortgages, and their portfolios would decline as the mortgages they own are paid down. Within 10 years, the portfolios would shrink to insignificance.

Their securitization business, whereby they purchase mortgages and issue securities against them, should likewise be wound down. A practical approach would be to set a gradually rising schedule of fees, motivating private companies to enter the securitization business.

In 10 or 15 years, the companies would be gone, closing a chapter in American financial history that enjoyed considerable success but ended very badly and at great taxpayer cost.

There is nothing funny about the U.S. Senate; too bad

The United States Senate, which still flatters itself with the misnomer "the world's greatest deliberative body," counts a former Major League Baseball player, an organic wheat farmer, far too many lawyers and a member who describes herself as a mom in tennis shoes among its select 100.

Last year, when this club added someone with a most unlikely working background — Al Franken, the professional comedian who is the junior senator from Minnesota — I thought the upper chamber would finally get something it most lacked: a sharp sense of humor.

Like many who followed Franken's career since his early days as a writer and performer on Saturday Night Live, I anticipated a flash of funny from him after he waded into the pool of poll-tested, pundit-vetted, lobbyist-cowering politicians.

Would we see a hint of the man who nailed former Sen. Paul Simon's monotone explanation for "why I wear the bow tie." Or a bit of what inspired his mock political reporter to strap a satellite dish atop his head — "the one-man mobile uplink?" Not a chance. The author of Rush Limbaugh is a Big Fat Idiot and Other Observations, the creator of the self-affirming moron Stuart Smalley, was nowhere to be found.

On the campaign trail, Franken was wonkish — understandably so. During the long recount and legal challenge of his 2008

Senate race, which resulted in Franken's win by 312 votes, people who worked with the comedian said he was intensely disciplined and focused, with nary a snarky remark, even in private.

The satirist died when the senator took office. But just as Jon Tester did not give up his lentils and wheat on the homestead in Montana when he became a senator, Franken should not forsake his field of laughs.

Thus, it was heartening to see him make at least a feeble attempt at mocking the other day, grimacing during remarks by the dour Sen. Mitch McConnell.

"This isn't Saturday Night Live, Al," McConnell scolded Franken. Franken promptly apologized. Months earlier, John McCain was upset at another Franken breach, when he refused to grant a fellow senator more bloviating time beyond his allotment.

"It harms the comity of the Senate," McCain complained.

If ever there was a place in need of more comedy, and less comity, it's the U.S. Senate.

Cobwebbed by senseless rituals, speeches which no one listens to and rules that make it all but impossible to act on the will of the people, the Senate cries for more ridicule, decorum breaches and old-fashioned wit.

Yes, they should be lauded for pulling off two of the most significant reforms of modern times, in health care and financial regulation. But those rare legislative triumphs almost didn't happen, and probably will not be repeated — by either party on any major issue — for a generation. The default mode in the Senate, less by design than by institutional arteriosclerosis, is insulated decay.

In a devastating profile this month of the broken Senate, George Packer of The New Yorker reveals a place that might as well be stuffed with mummies. Senators from opposite parties avoid eye contact, even a few feet apart. The choreography is as well-plotted as an old-style Soviet party congress — everything known in advance. Senators work a three-day week, and spend about 50 percent of their free time raising money for reelection.

Filibusters, once rare, are now used to block the most routine procedures, ensuring minimal cross-pollination of ideas. The obstructionism and crankiness are laughable. Sen. Jim Bunning of Kentucky, while vowing not to leave the chamber as a procedural move to hold up unemployment benefits for millions, complained about the personal hardship he suffered for his parliamentary stunt — missing a college basketball game on TV.

"Free smoothies for crazy people in the lobby," was Jon Stewart's suggestion to get Bunning out of the chambers, not an unreasonable idea for this gilded nursing home of people muttering into C-Span cameras.

"When I'm in the chair," Packer quotes freshman Sen. Michael Bennet on his rotation as the presiding officer, "I sit there thinking: I wonder what they're doing in China right now?"

Little has changed since Mark Twain offered this assessment: "Suppose you were an idiot. And suppose you were a member of Congress. But I repeat myself."

Center's entertainment was 'world class'

Our hats are off to the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center for its splendid presentation in the Twin Falls City Park last Friday evening (Aug. 6). Refugees from various countries put on the entire evening. They prepared and served their country's traditional dishes with loving hands. The food was tasty and oh so colorful.

Following our delicious meal, there were people in traditional costumes entertaining us with their music, singing and dancing on the stage of the band shell. The Burundian Children's Choir was truly a crowd favorite. Another highlight was the Iraqi men dancing to their traditional music. This brought much joy and a big round of applause to cap off the evening. All the performers provided "world class" entertainment for the folks of Magic Valley.

The participating countries were Thailand, Burundi, Eritrea, Iraq, Iran, Burma, Bhutan and Nepal. Many thanks for a fun and memorable night!

Annual scene of cruelty is disturbing

The Faroe Islands are a group of islands halfway between Iceland and Scotland in the North Atlantic and belonging to Denmark. Every year since 1584, it is the scene of a barbaric and cruel mass killing of Calderon dolphins and whales known as Grindadráp.

Local men use boats to herd the creatures into a cove and then kill them by hand with a custom-made tool much resembling a gaff hook. The cove turns red with the blood spilled from these gentle and intelligent creatures. Can animals feel pain? What do you think? Here is a link to this event. You will find the images disturbing and they should be.

<http://www.protectthocean.com/denmark-continues-dolphin-slaughter-warning-graphic-images/>

Animal rights activists argue that the grindadráp is not only cruel, but in view of the ample food supply in today's Faroes, completely unnecessary. Additional argumentation is supplied by the Faroese Ministry of Health which warns of excessive consumption of pilot whale meat; the blubber contains too much mercury, PCBs and DDT derivatives to be safe for human consumption.

We are talking about an event whose sole purpose is to kill living creatures in order to toughen up the virility of the Faroese youth. Watching these graphic images is so overwhelming and we can feel so helpless watching such gratuitous cruelty. It does not have to be that way. Corporate responsibility applies to Danish companies as well. American consumers routinely buy Lego toys, Hagen Daaz, Havarti, Haribo candy and Bang and Olufsen stereo equipment. Contact the retailers, Walmart, Target, Albertsons who serve as outputs for these products. Ask them to contact these makers to put pressure on the Danish government to stop these practices.

As we all know, money talks. Businesses can be instrumental in making progress. I have been encouraged by the positive response I have received from Atkinsons in the Wood River Valley. Human rights and animal rights go hand in hand.

In plain words, there is right and there is wrong. This is wrong, terribly wrong.

What really happened at council meeting

Anybody reading Sarah Blasius's July 19 letter about Burley's July 13 City Council meeting would think that Blasius must have attended the meeting. She didn't. I did. I participated. Here's what really happened.

Council Denny Curtis was asking City Administrator Mark Mitton pertinent questions about the effect on the city's poor raising certain city fees would have. While Mitton was answering Curtis' questions, Mayor Terry Greenman broke in on the exchange.

Greenman made some very disparaging remarks about the poor that cause Curtis' eyebrows to raise, his face to contort and his body to shift uncomfortably in his chair. Greenman's comments rankled me because I am one of the city's poor. (Unless I work during the winter, I would be forced to live at 70 percent of the poverty level for a single person.)

Greenman, a man with a horrible sense of humor (he once said in a City Council meeting that the city's graffiti sprayers should be shot), then offered to provide Curtis with Valium if that would make him happy — and, I suppose, turn Curtis' concern away from the poor.

It was at that point that I praised Curtis for his noble Democratic heart and then, with some well-chosen phrases hammered Greenman over his comments on the poor and his lack of understanding of the political process. (Greenman is an autocrat. He and Uncle Joe Stalin would have been bosom buddies.)

Greenman became unglued. He yelled at me and banged the table.

I'll deal with Blasius' comments about me another day.

Can't wait for 2011 band concerts in park

I can't believe that summer is about over, especially when the Twin Falls Municipal Band concerts have recessed for another season. The last notes have been played, the music has been filed away one last time, the great musicians in the band have gone their separate ways once more.

It is very hard for me to believe that 10 concerts have come and gone in this short time period. I guess I'm getting much older.

No one could ask for a nicer place to have a band concert or picnic than Twin Falls City Park. The grandeur of the trees, the neatly mowed lawn, the overall cleanliness of the park — what more could a person ask for in a park like the Twin Falls City Park?

Thanks to all the musicians, Ted Hadley, Lori

Henson, Burt Huish, all others behind the scenes for another wonderful concert season. Bravo! I can't wait for the 2011 band concerts in the city park to begin again next year.

I hope you have a grand rest of summer 2010.

Billie and Charlie Park opened their hearts

In your paper dated July 31, you had an article on Heyburn (Wayside) is going to give free citizens' meals. I give a star to Billie and Charlie Park for opening their hearts to the senior citizens. I wrote a letter about a month ago on getting wheelchairs in Deseret Industries, Dollar Stores and Walgreens. They still haven't opened their hearts. These stores can make a difference in other people's lives. Senior citizens have been denied much. I pray they read this letter and make us happy also.

God bless!

Judge keeps California gay marriages on hold – for now

By Paul Elias
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — The federal judge who struck down California’s gay marriage ban said Thursday that same-sex weddings can resume next week unless an appeals court intervenes before then.

The news raised hopes among gay couples that they soon could tie the knot after years of agonizing delays.

“We just want equal rights. We’re tired of being second-class citizens,” said Amber Fox, 35, who went to the Beverly Hills Municipal Courthouse on Thursday morning in hopes of marrying her partner. The couple wed in Massachusetts in June but wanted to make it official in their home state.

The Foxes left the courthouse without exchanging vows after the ruling by Chief U.S. District Judge Vaughn Walker in a case many believe is destined for the Supreme Court.

Walker decided to give gay marriage opponents until next Wednesday to ask the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to block same-sex weddings while it decides their appeal. If the appeals court chooses not to get involved, Walker said county clerks may begin issuing marriage licenses to same-sex couples at 5 p.m. on Wednesday.

Walker last week struck down the state’s gay marriage ban, known as Proposition 8, saying that the voter-approved law is unconstitutional.

Lawyers for gay marriage opponents filed their request with the 9th Circuit late Thursday, asking the court to block gay marriages from going forward. They argued the appeals court should grant the stay “to avoid the confusion and irreparable injury that would flow from the creation of a class of purported same-sex marriages.”

The delay disappointed dozens of same-sex couples around the state who had hoped to marry immediately.

“It’s sad that we have to wait a little longer, but it’s been six years,” said Teresa Rowe, 31, of Suisun City who went to San Francisco’s City Hall on Thursday morning with her partner to fill out a marriage license application.

California voters passed Proposition 8 as a state constitutional amendment in November 2008, five months after the California Supreme Court legalized same-sex unions and an estimated 18,000 same-sex couples already had tied the knot.

“It’s a really sad day for Californians, for families, for our future and for voters that a federal judge has trampled on the civil rights of voters,” said Luke Otterstad, 24, of Sacramento, who stood among dozens of gay marriage supporters outside San Francisco’s City Hall to protest the judge’s ruling.

Prosecutors: Doctor wrote about Smith

By Linda Deutsch
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — Prosecutors showed jurors their most explosive evidence against Anna Nicole Smith’s doctor Thursday: journal entries in which he writes of partying with her during a gay pride parade and wonders, “Can she ruin me?”

The journals, identified by investigators who found them in Dr. Sandeep Kapoor’s desk in his bedroom, also showed that Kapoor was addicted to the sleeping medication Ambien in the years just before he took over Smith’s treatment.

“Hung over. Gay pride parade,” begins the entry from June 13, 2005. “Rode in parade with Anna Nicole.”

He wrote of crowds gathering around her limousine while six police officers were keeping back the paparazzi.

He writes of drinking expensive champagne with Smith’s boyfriend, Howard K. Stern, in the limousine. “It was mesmerizing, watching the crowd wave at us, Anna and me all buffed out on the car,” the entry says.

Then there was the party at a club, he wrote: “Drinks, booze, orgy. I was making out with Anna, my patient, blurring the lines. I gave her Valium and Methodone. Can she ruin me?”

Kapoor, Stern and Dr. Kristine Eroshevich have pleaded not guilty to charges that include conspiring to provide Smith with excessive drugs, prescribing to an addict, and prescribing to Smith under fraudulent names.

Obama to sign $600M border security bill

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Determined to show a commitment to stopping the flow of illegal immigrants, the Senate convened a special session Thursday and passed a $600 million bill to put more agents and equipment along the Mexican border.

The voice vote in the nearly empty Senate chamber sends the legislation to President Barack Obama, who planned to sign it into law today. Obama had urged Congress to channel more money toward border security amid complaints from states besieged by undocumented immigrants and illegal drug trafficking.

Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., the chief sponsor, said the measure would provide Obama and Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano “with the boots on the ground and the resources necessary to combat the crime and violence.”

Obama said the bill would help protect communities along the Southwest border and across the country.

“And this new law will also strengthen our partnership with Mexico in targeting the gangs and criminal organizations that operate on both sides of our shared border,” he said in a statement.

House Democrats had also called a special session, summoning lawmakers back from their summer break Tuesday to pass the border security bill and a $26 billion aid bill to keep teachers and other public workers from being laid off. Both issues — jobs and border security — are among those expected to be on voters’ minds when they go to the polls in November.

Senate historian Donald Ritchie said it was only the second time since the August break became official policy in 1970 that the Senate had reconvened. The first time was after Hurricane Katrina in 2005.

The border security measure would fund the hiring of 1,000 new Border Patrol agents to be deployed at critical areas along the border, 250 more Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents, and 250 more Customs and Border Protection officers.

It provides for new communications equipment and greater use of unmanned surveillance drones. There are currently seven such drones along the border.

The bill is paid for by raising fees on foreign-based personnel companies that use U.S. visa programs, including the popular H-1B program, to bring skilled workers to the United States.

Wheat futures rise as report cuts production expectations

By Claudia Assis
MarketWatch writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Wheat futures rose Wednesday as the U.S. Department of Agriculture cut its world crop forecast for the grain because of the Russian drought, but also said it expects more production in the U.S.

Wheat has fetched ever increasing prices as top wheat exporter Russia, along with other neighboring former Soviet republics, have suffered from a drought this summer.

Nearby wheat for September delivery added 18 cents, or 2.6 percent, to settle at $7.13 a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade. Most-active December contract rose 19 cents, or 2.6 percent, to end at $7.44 a bushel.

Prices have rallied nearly 70 percent since hitting a three-year low June 9. Russia last week imposed a temporary ban on wheat exports, sending prices to their highest levels in nearly two years.

Wheat futures rose nearly 40 percent in July as conditions in Russia and other neighboring wheat producing countries deteriorated.

Ukraine is said to be mulling over a similar ban on wheat exports, which would apply even more pressure on the commodity.

“The market remains very nervous,” said Jerry Gidel, an analyst with North America Risk Management Services, Inc. in Chicago. Uncertainties about the planting of Russia’s spring wheat; a late wheat harvest in Canada, another top exporter; and news that Western Australia is also experiencing dry conditions have kept traders unsure about wheat supplies, he said.

The USDA on Thursday released its monthly report on agricultural supply and demand, estimating world wheat production at 645.7 million metric tons, down 2.3 percent from its July estimate.

The agency forecast wheat stocks at the end of the 2010-11 crop year would total 174.8 million metric tons, down 6.6 percent from its July forecast. World wheat production last year was estimated at 680.3 million metric tons, with 2009-10 ending stocks of 194 million metric tons.

U.S. production was forecast to be 49 million bushels higher, reflecting better yields for spring wheat. Winter wheat production was also raised slightly due to better yields in parts of the U.S.

Utah investor, out of bankruptcy in 2009, says he can bring back ID resort

By JOHN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

BOISE — A high-rolling Utah real estate investor who lost his $5 million private jet and $450,000 Mercedes sports car to bankruptcy says that’s no reason why he can’t put together a deal to revive a bankrupt Idaho ski resort.

James Thomas Bramlette, 32, is leading investors with Salt Lake City-based Pelorus Group who have offered an undisclosed sum to buy the Tamarack Resort, 90 miles north of Boise.

Bramlette, who once claimed assets in the millions but financed his lavish pre-bankruptcy lifestyle by borrowing heavily to buy cars, planes and property, thinks he’s the guy to resurrect the Idaho resort that’s languished for two years under $300 million in debt.

“If you want to refer to me as the comeback kid, you can,” Bramlette told The Associated Press on Thursday. “I’m just part of the team that’s going to pull this off. We have to go in and prove to very smart people, some of whom are fiduciaries, who have to say, ‘Yeah, they can do that.’ We pass that scrutiny.”

Bramlette, who goes by JT, has declined to name his Tamarack investors this week, but said Thursday that their purchase of the Arling Center, Tamarack’s conference center, in late July is a sign of his group’s serious intentions.

His speedy rise in real estate circles of the Rocky Mountain West seemed to parallel the industry’s mercurial growth over the last decade, fueled by low interest rates, easy money and optimism that home prices would rise forever. GM reports profit in second quarter

By Jerry Hirsch
Los Angeles Times writer

LOS ANGELES — General Motors Co. posted its second consecutive profit, saying Thursday it earned $1.3 billion in the second quarter of the year. Analysts said the results were a positive step toward an expected initial public stock offering later this year or early in 2011.

The gain, which compares with a loss of $12.9 billion the comparable period a year ago — technically a different company because of GM’s bankruptcy — demonstrated that the automaker’s restructuring plan is paying off, allowing GM to operate profitably at what remain historically low levels of U.S. auto sales.

Sales rose to $33.1 billion, from $23 billion a year ago.

GM was profitable in North America but still is losing money in Europe. It ended the second quarter with a cushion of $32.5 bil-

Treasury: Hires qualify for new tax break

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Businesses have hired 5.6 million workers under a new program that provides tax breaks for hiring unemployed workers, the Treasury Department said Monday.

The report, however, does not estimate how many of those jobs would have been added without the tax break.

President Barack Obama signed a law in March that exempts businesses hiring people who have been unemployed for at least 60 days from paying the 6.2 percent Social Security payroll tax through December. Employers get an additional $1,000 credit if new workers stay on the job a full year.

Treasury released a report Monday estimating that from February through June, businesses hired 5.6 million workers who qualify for the tax breaks. That’s up from the 4.5 million workers who were hired under the program through May.

Those businesses are projected to save $10.4 billion in taxes, if they keep three-fourths of the new workers for at least a year, the Treasury report said.

Many businesses also cut jobs during the period, though there was a net increase of about 868,000 jobs from February through June, according to the government’s business payroll survey. The economy shed 125,000 jobs in June, according to the survey.

At the start of the year, congressional Democrats said the new law would be the first of many initiatives designed to create jobs. Other measures, however, have stalled amid partisan bickering.

“The HIRE Act gives employers in states across the country an incentive to hire new workers as soon as possible because the payroll tax exemption expires at the end of 2010,” said Assistant Treasury Secretary Alan B. Krueger.

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., has proposed extending the tax cut for an additional six months. Schumer appeared with Krueger and other lawmakers at an event Monday in Albany, N.Y., to promote the tax credit.

“This tax cut has proven to be a timely, targeted and effective job creator,” Schumer said in a statement. “It’s time we extended it for six more months so more middle-class Americans can find work.”

Economists have said there is no way to know how many of the unemployed workers would have been hired without the tax credit.

Industrial, military uses seen for self-healing metal

By Rick Barrett
Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

MILWAUKEE — In the film “Terminator 2: Judgment Day,” the battle wounds of a liquid-metal man could heal themselves in seconds.

Now, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee scientists have developed self-healing metals that could be useful on the battlefield. They also could be used for quick repairs in machines ranging from automobiles to power plant turbines.

It’s all part of research taking place at UW-Milwaukee, which has received a $1.2 million U.S. Army grant to find ways that manufacturers and foundries could use advanced materials in their products.

The goal is to gear up full-scale production of some materials that, until now, have only been produced in a laboratory.

It could give Wisconsin companies a competitive advantage, said Michael Lovell, dean of the university’s College of Engineering and Applied Science.

Companies are asking for stronger, lighter, better materials they could use with processes they already have.

With self-healing metals, cracks repair themselves. The repair might not be permanent, but it’s strong enough for a temporary fix.

The gain mirrored strong results posted by Ford Motor Co., which last month said its second-quarter profit rose 13 percent to $2.6 billion.

“We cannot underestimate the value of GM being able to reorganize through bankruptcy. There was so much waste and excess that the bankruptcy process allowed GM to shed,” said Rebecca Lindland, an analyst with IHS Automotive.

After a string of 10 consecutive money-losing quarters, GM posted a profit of $865 million in the first quarter, bolstered by the improving U.S. economy and a massive restructuring that allowed the automaker to shed vehicle brands, factories and workers.

Sales have risen steadily since then, despite GM shedding its Hummer, Pontiac, Saturn and Saab brands. Through the first seven months of this year, sales of GM’s surviving Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet and GMC lines have risen 31 percent to almost 1.3 million vehicles and have surpassed the automaker’s sales of a year ago, when it still had all eight brands, by about 125,000 vehicles.

The consecutive profitable quarters have fueled interest in a GM initial stock offering that would help the federal government reduce its stake in a company that critics derisively call “Government Motors.”

Metal

The healing is accomplished by including microscopic “balloons” in metals while they’re still in liquid form. The balloons burst if the finished metal product is damaged, causing the materials inside to leak out and fill the cracked area.

Even bullet holes are healed, almost instantly, in self-healing polymers.

With self-healing concrete, cracks fix themselves. Only water and carbon dioxide are needed to trigger the process.

Some advanced materials could be good for public health and the environment. The university’s research, for example, has shown that fly ash – a byproduct of coal-burning power plants – can be blended with aluminum or lead to make inexpensive composites that are lightweight and have high-impact resistance.

The university has helped Wisconsin foundries become suppliers of composite castings.

It has produced a self-lubricating metal that could be used in engines and, on a small scale, it has produced self-healing metal.

Through the $1.2 million grant, UW-Milwaukee will seek ways to get laboratory-proven materials into full-scale production.

“It is the scaling-up process that is the challenge,” Lovell said.

Advanced materials could help sagging foundries diversify their business because the materials could be made using conventional metal-casting techniques.

“Foundries could start making these modern products without having to update their equipment,” said Pradeep Rohatgi, a UW-Milwaukee engineering professor and director of the university’s Center for Advanced Materials Manufacturing.

WASHINGTON – Growing pessimism over the weak economic recovery pushed mortgage rates to the lowest level in decades for the seventh time in eight weeks.

The average rate on a 30-year fixed mortgage hit 4.44 percent this week, mortgage buyer Freddie Mac said Thursday. And some brokers say homeowners looking to refinance have even managed to do so for as low as 4 percent.

Still, cheap rates have done little to boost the struggling housing market. Instead, they are highlighting investors’ fears that the rebound is stalling and the country could be slipping back into a recession.

Investors are shifting their money away from stocks and into safer Treasury bonds. That is sending Treasury yields lower. Mortgage rates track those yields.

And the Federal Reserve is pushing those yields down even further. The central bank said Tuesday it would buy Treasuries to help aid the recovery, using the proceeds from debt and mortgage-backed securities it bought from Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

That move alone is unlikely to push average rates down to 4 percent, said Bob Walters, chief economist at Quicken Loans. But average rates that low are still a possibility if the economic outlook worsens even further.

“The silver lining to a bad economy is that interest rates fall,” Walters said. “If you can lower your debt burden by refinancing, formal college education – but high hopes.

“I knew a couple of guys here,” Bramlette told lawyers in 2008. “I was working just any deal that I could.”

Court records show lenders gave Bramlette millions to prop up his lifestyle, which came crashing down in 2008 as creditors came calling.

According to U.S. Bankruptcy Court documents obtained this week by the AP, the Montana-born Bramlette abandoned his $5.3 million Gulfstream III to creditors after October 2008. He says he also lost millions worth of Idaho property, his Mercedes MacLaren, and a $450,000 membership in the Utah Jazz 100 club, the pro basketball team’s exclusive fan club.

The bankruptcy, from which he emerged in February 2009, is just part of Bramlette’s financial woes that includes a federal lawsuit where plaintiffs say they were misled about another Idaho development. A trial is set for October.

Twenty-seven people contend they were duped by inflated real estate appraisals in Teton Springs, among other allegations. Susan Norton, a plaintiff from northern California, told the AP on Thursday she bought into Teton Springs and loaned Bramlette $250,000 for another investment she says was supposed to pay 20 percent interest.

She said she later went on a Caribbean cruise that was paid for by Bramlette’s company to seek her money.

WikiLeaks preparing to release more Afghan files

By Raphael G. Satter and Anne Flaherty
Associated Press writers

LONDON — WikiLeaks spokesman Julian Assange said Thursday his organization is preparing to release the rest of the secret Afghan war documents it has on file. The Pentagon warned that would be more damaging to security and risk more lives than the organization's initial release of some 76,000 war documents.

That extraordinary disclosure, which laid bare classified military documents covering the war in Afghanistan from 2004 to 2010, has angered U.S. officials, energized critics of the NATO-led campaign, and drawn the attention of the Taliban, which has promised to use the material to track down people it considers traitors.

The Pentagon says it believes it has identified the additional 15,000 classified documents, and said Thursday that their exposure would be even more damaging to the military than what has already been published.

Pentagon Press Secretary Geoff Morrell described the prospective publication as the “height of irresponsibility.”

“It would compound a mistake that has already put far too many lives at risk,” he said.

Speaking via videolink to London's Frontline Club, Assange brushed aside the Pentagon's demands that he stop publishing their intelligence. He gave no specific timeframe for the release of the 15,000 remaining files, but said his organization had gone through about half of them.

“We’re about 7,000 reports in,” he said, describing the process of combing through the files to ensure that no Afghans would be hurt by their disclosure as “very expensive and very painstaking.”

Still, he told the audience that he would “absolutely” publish them. He gave no indication whether he would give the documents to media outlets The New York Times, The Guardian, and Der Spiegel — as he has before — or simply dump them on the Wikileaks website.

The leaks exposed unreported incidents of Afghan civilian killings by NATO forces and covert operations against Taliban figures. Assange has said that hundreds of those reports should be investigated by the media for evidence of war crimes.

WikiLeaks’ supporters say the blow-by-blow account of the conflict reveal the horror of the campaign's daily grind. Detractors say the site has recklessly endangered the war effort and Afghan informants working to stop the Taliban.

The Pentagon has a task force of about 100 people reading the leaked documents to assess the damage done and working, for instance, to alert Afghans who might be identified by name and now could be in danger.

Taliban spokesmen have said they would use the material to try to hunt down people who’ve been cooperating with what the Taliban considers a foreign invader. That has aroused the concern of several human rights group operating in Afghanistan — as well as Paris-based media watchdog Reporters Without Borders, which on Thursday accused Wikileaks of recklessness.

Jean-Francois Julliard, the group's secretary-general, said that WikiLeaks showed “incredible irresponsibility” when posting the documents online.

“WikiLeaks has in the past played a useful role by making information available ... that exposed serious violations of human rights and civil liberties which the Bush administration committed in the name of its war against terror,” Julliard said in an open letter to Assange posted to his group's website.

“But revealing the identity of hundreds of people who collaborated with the coalition in Afghanistan is highly dangerous,”

WikiLeaks, through its account on micro-blogging website Twitter, dismissed the letter as “some idiot statement, based on a bunch of quotes we never made.”

While he acknowledged that some of the critiques leveled at his group were legitimate, he said the Pentagon — as well as human rights groups — had so far refused to help WikiLeaks purge the name of Afghan informants from the files.

At the State Department, spokesman Mark Toner said he was not aware of any effort by department officials to contact WikiLeaks.

Lawyer: NY flight attendant wants to return to air

By Verena Dobnik and David B. Caruso
Associated Press writers

NEW YORK — The fed-up flight attendant who set a new standard for quitting when he abandoned his job via an emergency chute apparently isn't as much of a quitter as everyone thought.

Steven Slater, 38, said through his lawyer Thursday that he loves flying and wants to go back to work.

“His hope is to return to the aviation business,” his attorney, Howard Turman, told reporters as Slater stood by his side outside his home in Queens. Flying, he added, “is in his blood.”

Slater's career appeared to end Monday when he went onto the public address system after a JetBlue flight from Pittsburgh, cursed out a passenger he said had treated him rudely, and then made an I'm-outta-here exit down an emergency chute at Kennedy Airport. He was arrested.

Asked about Slater's desire to return to work, JetBlue spokesman Mateo Lleras said: “As of right now, he has been released of duty pending the investigation. There's nothing more I can say.”

Slater's actions have prompted an outpouring of support from people who have fantasized about making a similar exit from an unpleasant job, although passengers have come forward in the past couple of days to criticize him as brusque and cranky throughout the 90-minute trip. One passenger portrayed Slater as the instigator, saying he cursed without provocation at a woman who had asked about her bag.

Slater would not talk about his actions Thursday. He smiled silently for most of the 10-minute news conference, then offered a brief thanks to the public, saying, “It's been amazing, the support and love ... everything that's been brought to me.”

Slater

Turman denied Slater was belligerent and said the entire affair can be blamed on a “lack of civility on the part of one passenger.”

Some passengers said he might have been disturbed by an injury. They said he had a large cut or welt on his head — sustained, his lawyer said, when he tried to help a passenger with a bag too big for the overhead bins.

Lauren Dominijanni, 25, of Pittsburgh, said that during the trip, when she asked Slater for a wipe to clean up coffee that had been spilled on her seat, he rolled his eyes, blurted an exasperated “What?” and gestured to the gash on his head. He then told her he needed to take care of himself first, she said.

Other passengers said that throughout the flight, he slammed galley doors and overhead bins unnecessarily and put an apparent early end to snack service.

Others said that until Slater's intercom rant, his interactions with passengers appeared curt, but not unusually so in a time when flight attendants are often asked to play hall monitor.

Stabbing spree suspect nabbed before Israel flight

By Corey Williams and Greg Bluestein
Associated Press writers

ATLANTA — Elias Abuelazam was about to board a plane for Israel when police arrested him in connection with a three-month stabbing spree that left five men dead, 13 others wounded and a Michigan city in terror. In the moments before the pudgy man in flip-flops and shorts was handcuffed, passengers saw him nervously talking on his cell phone, insisting he wasn't violent.

The Israeli citizen and legal U.S. resident was charged Thursday in just one case out of Flint, Mich., the battered industrial city where most of the stabbings occurred, but authorities said more charges are expected there and in Ohio and Virginia. At least 15 of the 18 victims were black but it was unclear whether the attacks were racially motivated.

Flint residents hope the arrest ends their summer of fear. Roughly every four days since late May on average, the killer approached men on lonely roads at night, asking for directions or help with a broken-down car. Then he'd pull out a knife, plunge it into his victim and speed away; in one case he used a hammer. The youngest victim was 15; the oldest 67.

Abuelazam, 33, was arrested late Wednesday at a boarding gate at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport shortly before his plane to Tel Aviv was to take off. Officers seized him after he was paged over the intercom and told to report at a ticket counter. He has been booked into the Fulton County Jail awaiting an extradition

Passengers on the Delta Air Lines flight were stunned but said Abuelazam appeared tense. He was talking to someone on his cell phone “about not being violent and different things like that,” passenger Eugene Williams said after the plane landed in Tel Aviv.

Abuelazam's mother, Iyam al-Azzam, told Israel Radio that she talked to her son by phone before he was supposed to board “and he sounded the same as usual, quiet and calm.”

She said she was getting ready to pick her son up at the airport when relatives told her he had been arrested. “I do not believe these charges are true,” she said. “Elias, my son, is a religious, God-fearing man who always assists anyone who needs help.”

In Ramla, a mixed Israeli Jewish-Arab working class town between Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, the shabby, two-story house where the suspect's mother and sister live was dark late Thursday. Neighbors, who refused to give their names, said the family is Christian but told reporters little else.

In Michigan, Genesee County Prosecutor David Leyton said authorities don't know the motive for the stabbings, and that despite the fact that most victims were black there is no evidence race played a role.

Killed were David Motley, 31, Emmanuel A. Muhammad, 59, Darwin Marshall, 43, and Arnold R. Minor, 49, all of Flint, and Frank Kellybrew, 60, of Flint Township. All died before Aug. 4, when Michigan authorities concluded the attacks were the work of one serial killer.

A tip late Tuesday — one of more than 500 received in the stabbings — led police to a market near Flint where Abuelazam worked. Leyton said investigators talked to employees, and a store video showed that he matched the description of the man wanted by authorities.

Antwione Marshall, the victim of the July 27 stabbing in which Abuelazam has been charged, told The Associated Press that he identified Abuelazam as his assailant when the FBI visited him at 3 a.m. to show him a photograph of the suspect.

Marshall, 26, of Flint, said he was going into his apartment building when the assailant approached and asked for help fixing his car. He was stabbed twice when he opened the hood, and now has a long scar from his chest to his pelvic area.

Marshall said he wants to “retaliate” but “I'll let God handle it. Every time I look at my scar, I get angry.”

Abuelazam was living in Flint, where his uncle owned two adjacent homes. Leyton said police searched them and removed evidence but he declined to describe it.

The suspect left his vehicle in Michigan and flew Wednesday to Louisville, Ky., and then to Atlanta, the last stop before the planned international flight. Leyton said Abuelazam's uncle bought him the plane ticket, which cost about $3,000, and is now cooperating with police.

A few dozen people who heard about the arrest gathered outside Abuelazam's former workplace, Kingwater Market in Mount Morris Township. One yelled that the owner should have been suspicious. Police cleared the parking lot.

Store manager Abdulla Farrah said Abuelazam worked there for about a month before leaving Aug. 1. He said he seemed like a “very polite, nice guy” who “didn't show any kind of racism,” but he also said, “I hope if he's the one that did this I hope they hang him, I hope he gets the death penalty.” Michigan does not have capital punishment.

India threatens to block BlackBerry service

By Muneeza Naqvi
Associated Press writer

NEW DELHI — India's Home Ministry threatened Thursday to block BlackBerry corporate e-mail and messaging services unless the device's manufacturer makes them accessible to its security agencies by Aug. 31.

The ministry said that if no technical solution is provided by then, it will take steps to block the services from the country's mobile phone network. The phones are made by Canada's Research In Motion Ltd.

Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates have also threatened to cut off popular BlackBerry services unless they get greater access to user information. Like India, they've cited security concerns in pushing for access to encrypted information sent by the cell phones that gets routed through servers overseas.

India has asked for encrypted BlackBerry communications to be made easily available to its intelligence

BlackBerry deadline

THE THREAT: India's Home Ministry says it will block BlackBerry corporate e-mail and messaging services unless the device's manufacturer makes data easily available to its intelligence and law enforcement agencies. The deadline is Aug. 31.

WHY: India says the services could be used by militant groups.

THE RESPONSE: BlackBerry maker Research In Motion Ltd. says it won't compromise on the secure nature of its corporate services and won't give any country 'special deals.'

— The Associated Press and law enforcement agencies, saying that the services could be used by militant groups.

The 10 heavily armed gunmen who rampaged through Mumbai, India's financial capital, in November 2008, killing 166 people, used cell and satellite phones to communicate with their Pakistan-based handlers, according to Indian officials.

In its response to India's announcement, Research In Motion Thursday said it has drawn “a firm line” in negotiations with governments. It won't compromise on the secure nature of its corporate e-mail and messaging service and it won't give any country “special deals.” Encryption, it said, is a fundamental technology required in any country that wants to attract and maintain international business.

India noted that it already has access to calls and text messages to and from BlackBerry phones, and to the consumer e-mail service. The threatened shutdown applies to RIM's corporate services.

Canada's international trade minister, Peter Van Loan, said the government has been “working with government officials in India to help RIM identify their concerns and find solutions.”

India's announcement came after a meeting involving India's home secretary, an official in charge of domestic security, and representatives of security agencies and the government's telecommunications department, the ministry said in a statement.

The United Arab Emirates last week called for a sweeping ban on BlackBerry e-mail, messaging and Web services, saying the devices “allow users to act without any legal accountability, causing judicial, social and national security concerns.” It plans to shut off the services in October unless it works out a compromise with RIM.

Talks between the UAE and RIM are still ongoing, said a person familiar with the issue who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The person said the UAE is pressing the company to install a data server inside the Gulf federation. That move is motivated by a desire to ensure that information sent on the devices remains protected, not to stifle the flow of information as some critics have charged, according to the person.

Local youth club learns where food comes from Kids from the Modern Woodmen of America Youth Service Club of Hazelton recently learned about dairies during the Jerome County Farm Bureau's Ag Tour at the Double A Dairy.

The Hazelton club is one of about 800 youth clubs nationwide that provide young Modern Woodmen members with opportunities to volunteer, be patriotic, learn new skills and make friends.

To get involved with the club, contact Morgan Brune at 829-5369.

SOMEBODY NEEDS YOU

Drivers — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program needs volunteer drivers, age 55 and older, in Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding to take senior citizens to medical appointments and for grocery shopping. Volunteers are reimbursed mileage and covered by excess insurance. Information: Edith, 736-4764.

Donations/volunteers — The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center is preparing for the school season. Newly arrived refugee students need school supplies, including No. 2 pencils, boxes of 24 crayons, markers, colored pencils, boxes of tissues, quart- or gallon-size Ziploc bags, Clorox wipes, glue sticks, glue, scissors, folders, highlighters, composition notebooks, loose-leaf notebook paper, pink erasers and small pencil/supply boxes. The Newcomer Centers also need playground equipment, including soccer balls, jump ropes, volleyballs and Frisbees. To donate resources or to volunteer: Michelle, 736-2166, or 1526 Highland Ave. E., Twin Falls.

Donations — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program is seeking a deluxe pedal exerciser. Information: Edith, Office on Aging, 736-4764.

WANT TO HELP?

This public service column is designed to match needs in the Magic Valley with volunteer help. If you need a volunteer, contact the Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) at 736-4764, before noon Wednesday for Friday publication. RSVP is a United Way-sponsored agency at the College of Southern Idaho.

with junior volunteers or being a friend. Information: Flo, 735-0121.

Volunteers — St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center needs volunteers to help in a variety of positions. Qualifications include being friendly, compassionate individuals; the ability to set priorities, such as punctuality, dependability and responsibility; the physical ability to walk, stand and sit for a period of time; and the ability to take the initiative and be flexible, assuming different roles as needed to provide help or comfort to patients, visitors and staff. Information: Kim, 737-2006, or St. Luke's Volunteer Services Office, Fifth Floor, 650 Addison Ave. W., Twin Falls.

Volunteers — Guardian Home Care and Hospice needs volunteers in the Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Glenns Ferry and Burley areas to assist with patient care: sit with patients, play games and read to patients, or help in the office. Information: Nicole, 736-0900.

Mentors/volunteers — The Easter Seals Goodwill

GoodGuides program is part of a national mentoring program providing guidance to boys and girls ages 12 to 17. The program has a variety of volunteer opportunities in the Magic Valley, including mentors, speakers, tutors, activity directors and mentor leaders. Teens are needed to be part of the Teen Advisory Board, which meets about every three months for one or two hours per meeting to provide input, feedback and guidance for the program. Information: Tristan or LeWayne, 736-2026 or 2469 Wright Ave., Twin Falls.

Drivers — Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center needs volunteer drivers for the home-delivered meals program for the homebound. Drivers do not have to be seniors to volunteer to drive one or two days a week for an hour to an hour and a half. The center needs people who can be relied on for their appointed routes and who care about the well-being of the elderly. Reimbursed mileage for gas is available. Information: Joanna, 734-5084, or 530 Shoshone St. W., Twin Falls.

Volunteers — Hospice Visions needs volunteers to help make a difference in the lives of caregivers and those experiencing end-of-life issues. Volunteers provide companionship, bring joy during difficult times and ease burdens by writing letters, singing, playing cards and games, reading, working with junior volunteers or being a friend. COMMUNITY NEWS

Minidoka County to host Child Find

Minidoka County School District will host Child Find on Monday at Minidoka Preschool, 310 10th St., Rupert.

Appointments may be made by calling the school at 436-6059.

Child Find is a free screening for children ages 3 to 5. The children are screened to identify needs that result from developmental delays or physical or mental concerns. The screening will include speech and language as well as physical health, gross and fine motor skills, self-help abilities, social skills, vision and hearing. Early identification of children with delays allows time to build skills the children will need to be successful in kindergarten.

CSI offers extended hours for registration

College of Southern Idaho offices that can assist with registration for the fall 2010 semester will be open additional hours each weeknight starting Monday through Aug. 27. Fall semester classes begin Aug. 23.

Most CSI offices will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., including the bookstore, business, advising, financial aid, information and records offices — most of which are located in the "Matrix" section of the Taylor Administration Building.

The CSI Testing Center in the Meyerhoeffer Building will be open until 9:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, and until 5 p.m. Fridays. The same offices will also be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 21, a Saturday.

Information: 733-9554, 732-6250 or www.csi.edu.

Bliss school registration nears

The Bliss School District will hold registration for secondary students on Monday, with 12th-grade students at 9 a.m., grades 9-11 at 10 a.m. and grades 7-9 at 11 a.m.

Elementary registration for all grades will be at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Student startup supplies will be provided by the school district. Personal supplies will be each student's responsibility.

All kindergarten and new students must provide proof of immunization at the time of registration. Kindergarten students must also provide a state-issued birth certificate.

If your child has received an immunization in the past year, please bring a current copy of the records. Information: 352-4447.

Wendell sets registration for next week

Wendell middle and high school registration dates are set for new and returning students to pick up schedules and pay fees.

On Tuesday, eighth- and 12th-grade students can register from 9 a.m. to noon, and seventh- and 11th-grade students from 1 to 3 p.m. On Wednesday, those in sixth and 10th grades can register from 9 a.m. to noon, and the fifth and ninth grades from 1 to 3 p.m. Thursday caps the week off with new-student registration for both schools from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m.

Information: Wendell Middle School, 536-5531, or Wendell High School, 536-2100.

CSI Foundation donors to be honored Tuesday

Southern Idaho residents and businesses have dug deep over the past 18 months and helped the College of Southern Idaho Foundation meet and exceed its fundraising goals.

As a thank-you, the foundation is inviting the public to a Major Gifts Campaign Celebration at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the John and Miriam Breckenridge Ag Endowment Farm on North College Road, across from the CSI Expo Center. The event will feature free refreshments and some brief comments on why the campaign was necessary and how the money will be used.

Parking at the site of the event is limited. Bus shuttles will be available from the Expo Center parking lot. CSI Security and law-enforcement cadets will help direct traffic safely back and forth across North College.

State Historical Society workshop set for Gooding

The Idaho State Historical Society will hold an all-day informational workshop from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday in Gooding. The workshop will focus on developing interpretive exhibits and funding for museums from the society, the Idaho Heritage Trust and the Idaho Humanities Council, as well as hosting Smithsonian traveling exhibits.

Speakers include: Mary Reed, former Idaho Association of Museums president and 23-year director of the Latah County Historical Society; Jody Ochoa, Idaho State Historical Museum administrator; Fred Fritchman, the museum's exhibit designer; Gaetha Pace, the trust's executive director; Jennifer Holley from the council; and Keith Peterson from the state society.

Information: 324-5641.

Snake River Riders potluck planned next week

The Snake River Trail Machine Riders will have a potluck meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the home of John and Jane Hiss, 522 800 W., west of Burger King in Heyburn. Dinner will be in the shop area of the big log home.

Please bring lawn chairs, tableware and your favorite side dish. The club will provide hamburgers and hot dogs.

Mini-Cassia Service Providers to meet on Wednesday

A Mini-Cassia Service Providers Community Resource meeting will be from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., Wednesday at Connor's Café, at the junction of Interstate 84 exit 208 and Idaho Highway 27.

D. Marian Steel, Lyle Bloxham and Kristin Beck of the College of Southern Idaho, and Stacey Ward of Guardian Home Care will give presentations. Participants should bring their business cards, flyers, brochures and other items they'd like to share.

Kids can learn smart spending with free program

Modern Woodmen of America's new financial literacy program aims to educate local children about the importance of smart spending.

The free program lays the groundwork for successful money management by helping young people gain age-appropriate knowledge and skills for today and the future.

Modern Woodmen developed "Money and You" with the idea that as a child's knowledge of money grows, so does his or her respect for money, making smart financial decisions more likely in the future. The program is divided into three age groups covering preschool through eighth grade, and meets many national teaching standards.

The new program is one of six free youth educational programs Modern Woodmen offers to schools, homeschoolers and youth groups nationwide.

Reader offers help to peripheral neuropathy sufferers

DEAR DR. GOTT: Seven years ago, I was diagnosed with peripheral neuropathy due to numbness on the bottoms of both feet. My podiatrist made the diagnosis. Because I was not a diabetic or an alcoholic, he diagnosed idiopathic PN. I was 75 at the time. He wanted to do muscle tests, which I turned down in favor of a second opinion at the local Mayo Clinic. Their tests showed the neuropathy to be present, and they suggested I take 600 milligrams per day of alpha-lipoic acid from my health-food store and exercise.

My neurologist prescribed 10 milligrams of baclofen for the few leg cramps I was getting at night. I declined after hearing the side effects from my pharmacist. Because the weather was hot, I decided to try a high-carb sports drink, which took away the cramps until the weather changed.

ASK

I have always been a heavy user of Vicks VapoRub, so I began massaging it onto both feet — bottom and top, heels and toes. My chiropractor also suggested 1/8th teaspoon of cream of tartar mixed with water at night.

Seven years later, I have a little numbness in spots but no pain and only cramps at night when my feet get cold. I also take 100 milligrams of vitamin B6 along with the alpha-lipoic acid per day. My neurologist agrees that the Vicks will keep the nerves alive, and the exercise by massaging keeps the muscles strong. Please tell people. I do. Thank you.

DEAR READER: Let's start with the simple case of your leg cramps. Many people experience cramping of the feet and calves after exercising or profuse sweating because the body's electrolyte balance is disturbed. Sports drinks can help bring this back into balance, thus eliminating the cramps. Other home remedies include soap under the sheets, pickles, pickle juice, supplemental potassium and several others.

Now, on to your peripheral neuropathy. This condition is caused by damage to the peripheral nerves in the feet, legs, hands and/or arms. Causes can be untreated or poorly controlled diabetes, chemotherapy or radiation side effects, improper diet or injury. When the cause cannot be found, the condition is labeled idiopathic.

Common treatment includes prescription nerve blockers such as gabapentin. Another treatment that has received a lot of positive review is Anodyne therapy. Home remedies range from topical mentholated chest rubs to dietary vitamin and mineral supplements and topical ointments containing capsaicin. Massage may also be beneficial since it aids circulation.

The cream-of-tartar remedy offered by your chiropractor is new to me, but if it works for you, stick with it. I cannot think of any harm it could do, especially given the minimal amount used.

Alpha-lipoic acid is an antioxidant made by the body and is present in every cell. It is both fat- and water-soluble. It has been shown to lower blood-sugar levels, kill free radicals and improve symptoms of autonomic neuropathy (damage to the nerves of the heart associated with diabetes). It is currently being studied as a part of a treatment program for glaucoma, stroke, brain disorders and liver disease. It is too early yet to tell whether it is beneficial.

Because of your success, I am printing your letter in the hopes that it may help others. I also ask for feedback from my readers about their experiences.

To provide related information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Dr. Gott's Compelling Home Remedies" and "More Compelling Home Remedies." Other readers who would like copies should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order per report to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title(s) or print an order form off my website at www.AskDrGottMD.com.

Edith Marie Burden

BOISE — Edith Burden, 91, passed away Tuesday, Aug. 10, 2010, in Boise, Idaho, with family by her side.

She was born in West Plains, Mo., on March 13, 1919, and was the eldest daughter of Carson and Ella Ramsey. She spent her early years traveling and living throughout the Midwest, as her father worked construction, and finally settled back in West Plains.

In March 1946, she married George Cebert Burden, a World War II veteran and farmer in nearby Howell County, Mo. They lived there for 12 years and gave birth to five children, three daughters and two sons.

In 1958, “Ceb” used his VA benefits to apply for a homestead in Minidoka County, Idaho. After winning a homestead drawing lottery, the family moved to Rupert, Idaho, and began farming and raising their children. Many happy years and some not so happy followed until, in 1973, Ceb passed away. After renting out the farm for several years, Edith sold the property and acquired a home in Boise along with a monthly income.

In her later years, she lived in an assisted living residence in Boise until her death.

She is survived by one sister, Betty Holt of Missouri; all five of her children, Donna Petersen (Ron) of Boise, Joe Burden (Sandy) of Boise, Terry Gilpin (Rocky) of Fort Worth, Texas, Richard Burden (Karen) of New Meadows, and Betty Morin (Steve) of Heyburn. There are 16 grandchildren, 26 great-grandchildren, and numerous nieces and nephews.

At her request, there will not be a memorial service. An internment service will be held at 11:30 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 14, at the Rupert Cemetery. Arrangements are under the direction of the Alden-Waggoner Funeral Chapel in Boise.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Idaho Humane Society. She liked cats.

HAZELTON — Gary Dean Moore, 66, of Hazelton, passed away Thursday, Aug. 12, 2010, at a Twin Falls Care Center.

He was born July 5, 1944, in Wendell, Idaho. On April 9, 1992, he married Marjorie Ann Lewis in Elko, Nev. During his life, he worked as a car salesman and owned and operated Central Auto Sales and Gas in Filer, Idaho. Gary enjoyed tinkering with electronics, playing the drums and old cars. He always enjoyed music and participated in many bands and even had his own.

Surviving are his wife, Marjorie Ann of Hazelton; sons, Farron Moore of Boise, and Willis (Dorothy) Moore and Darron (Stephanie) Moore, all of Buhl; a stepson, James (Roberta) John of Hazelton; along with five grandchildren; one great-grandchild; four step-grandchildren; and five great-step-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by one brother, Jerry Moore; and a stepson, Dewey John.

He will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved him.

Friends may call from 5 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 17, at Parke’s Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. The funeral will be held 2 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 18, at the funeral home. Private family inurnment will follow at a later date.

Verdis Morgan

SPRINGFIELD, Ore. — Verdis LaVor Morgan, 81, of Springfield, Ore., and formerly of Jerome, died Sunday, Aug. 8, 2010, from complications of Alzheimer’s disease.

A funeral was held Thursday, Aug. 12, at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Springfield 2nd Ward Market Street Chapel in Springfield, Ore. Burial will be in the Jerome Cemetery in Jerome, Idaho. Arrangements are under the direction of England Memorial Chapel in Eugene, Ore. Remembrances may be sent to the Alzheimer’s Association.

He was born March 29, 1929, in Thornton, Idaho, to John and Lillie Morgan. He graduated from Jerome High School in Jerome, Idaho, with the Class of 1947. He married Barbara Stovall on Aug. 10, 1974, in Vancouver, Wash. He worked in sales and service for Viking Sewing Center in Eugene, Ore., was self-employed servicing sewing machines in Reno, Nev., and worked for H&R Block in Reno, Nev. He retired in 2005.

Survivors include his wife, Barbara of Springfield, Ore.; two sons, Larry Morgan and Stephen Morgan, both of Portland, Ore.; four stepsons, Ken Clark of Cherry Valley, Calif., Russell Stovall of Houston, Texas, Steven Stovall of Springfield, Ore., and Timothy Stovall of Houston, Texas; two stepdaughters, Pamela Bolton of Fort Mohave, Ariz., and Holly Sandercock of Portland; a brother, Melvin of Creswell, Ore.; a sister, Geraldine Johnston of Nashville, Tenn.; and 19 grandchildren; and 11 great-grandchildren.

Higgins, last AP bureau chief in Iran, dies at 66

GENEVA (AP) — Alexander G. Higgins, who covered the U.S. Embassy siege in Tehran as The Associated Press’ last bureau chief in Iran and served as a longtime AP bureau chief in Geneva, has died. He was 66.

In a 38-year career with the AP, Higgins reported from both sides of the Iron Curtain and covered the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. He was expelled from Iran by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini’s regime in 1980.

Much of his most recent work focused on explaining the significance of the $10 billion atom collider near Geneva and its search for the origins of the universe.

Higgins died Thursday of cancer in a private clinic in Genolier, Switzerland, said his wife Valerie Higgins.

Affectionately known to all as “Sandy,” Higgins was born Oct. 25, 1943, in Cape Girardeau, Missouri, the second of five sons of an American missionary and a Red Cross worker freed from a Japanese internment camp in China in a prisoner swap during World War II. His mother gave him the nickname in honor of a Scot who also was interned in China with the couple.

He earned a scholarship to study at St. Paul’s School in Concord, New Hampshire, served two years in the U.S. military and then played football at the University of Pennsylvania.

Higgins started his journalism career with WOAY television in West Virginia, sweeping floors and taking on odd work until he got his break filling in for a sick sports presenter. He would then read news and weather, too, while finishing an English degree at the West Virginia College of Technology.

He showed a sense of adventure early on in his career. When a professional wrestler pulled out of a fight that Higgins was supposed to provide commentary for, he was given a pair of tights, taught simple holds and sent into the ring.

Even in his more typical tweed and linen jackets, Higgins’ warmth, generosity and sense of humor touched colleagues, friends and government officials alike. He was known to belt out Gilbert and Sullivan tunes in a rich baritone, quote Shakespeare, and politely prod interviewees from Microsoft co-founder Bill Gates to the estranged sister-in-law of terrorist leader Osama bin Laden.

Detective who defended Ramseys dies in Colorado

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Longtime police detective Lou Smit, who first investigated and then supported JonBenet Ramsey’s parents, has died, a hospice spokeswoman confirmed Thursday.

Smit, 75, had cancer and died Wednesday at Pikes Peak Hospice in Colorado Springs. Hospice spokeswoman Robin Witten said he had a steady stream of visitors.

Smit’s long career included years as an investigator for the Colorado Springs Police Department and the El Paso County sheriff’s office, where he was captain of detectives. His dogged police work was credited with helping lock up more than 200 killers.

He became known nationally when he was coaxed out of retirement to help investigate the 1996 death of 6-year-old JonBenet Ramsey, who was found beaten and strangled in the basement of her parent’s Boulder home Dec. 26, 1996. Smit later resigned because he believed authorities were wrongly focusing on the parents, John and Patsy Ramsey.

Smit said unidentified DNA under JonBenet’s fingernails and on her underpants pointed to an intruder as the culprit, not her parents. He later worked for the Ramseys.

“The point is there is foreign DNA. There is common foreign DNA. It is not John. It is not Patsy. It is not (JonBenet’s brother) Burke,” Smit said in a 2001 interview. “So just to take this and say it’s degraded and throw these beautiful clues away, you can’t do it. You have to plug these clues into the intruder side of the story as well.”

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Republican congressional candidate Mike Pompeo apologized Thursday after his campaign posted on its Twitter feed and Facebook page a link to a blog that uses a racial slur to refer to his Democratic opponent and calls President Barack Obama an “evil muslim communist USURPER.”

Pompeo, who is running for Kansas’ 4th Congressional District, said a staffer, whom he declined to identify other than saying it was the campaign’s communications director, posted the link to the wrong Google alert on Wednesday before the campaign realized the mistake and removed the link an hour later.

From left, Lilian Sepulveda with baby Emily Marie, Saby Pazos with Abel Brian Palacios, and Leslie Pazos with Ashley Mishell Oliva, are shown Tuesday at Westlake Hospital in Melrose Park, Ill. The three sisters had babies within two days of each other. A fourth sister in California had a baby the same week.

Four sisters have four babies in four days

CHICAGO (AP) — Four sisters from one family have each given birth within four days.

That’s four sisters, four babies, four days.

The same obstetrician delivered the babies of three of the sisters — 27-year-old Lilian Sepulveda, 29-year-old Saby Pazos and 24-year-old Leslie Pazos — in the same suburban Chicago hospital on Friday and Saturday.

A fourth sister, Heidi Lopez, gave birth on Monday in California.

Family members say the women didn’t plan the timing. Obstetrician Dr. Jean Alexandre, who delivered the three babies in suburban Chicago, calls the births “very unusual but wonderful at the same time.”

ERRORS NEARLY GONE

Free giveaway of US Gov't issued never-circulated coins

9,661 already taken, only 4,907 remain; over one million readers will see this announcement today in selected newspapers across the country; all discounted Gallery Displays with 57 free coins expected to be gone before 48 hour order deadline

By J.S. Speakman
Universal Media Syndicate

(UMS) – Everyone hates making errors. But in the world of coins and currency when someone makes an error, it usually pays huge dividends to whoever finds it.

“I can’t believe errors occurred on these Gallery Displays with the tight procedures we have in place,” said Jefferson Marshall, Executive Director of the private World Reserve Monetary Exchange.

“That’s why I’ve directed our vault officials to give away all 57 never-circulated U.S. State Quarters as a reward to all readers who find at least one of the errors,” said Marshall.

There are only 4,907 of these Gallery Displays left so, “readers who want to make sure to get the complete set of all 57 State Quarters for free should closely inspect the large photo for the error and call in today,” Marshall added.

Whether or not the errors on these custom-built, museum-quality Gallery Displays will ever cause them to become sought after by collectors, only time will tell. But one thing is for sure, the quality of the construction is beyond compare. “We had a frame shop build a duplicate and the price tag was $231.00 and that was without a single coin, but because of the error we’re able to give them away fully loaded with all 57 U.S. State and Territory Quarter Dollars Encapsulated in never-circulated condition for just $88 and shipping. It’s truly the bargain of a lifetime,” said Marshall.

Starting at 8:00am this morning and ending in just 48 hours, the World Reserve Monetary Exchange guarantees that each of the last 4,907 Gallery Displays will be filled with all 57 State and Territory Quarters free with each order of the Gallery Display and shipping.

When asked how all this happened, Marshall said, “A former World Reserve proofreader failed to catch these errors and officially accepted them into our inventory.” So, now the private vaults of the World Reserve contain these frames that are perfect quality, but contain two known spelling errors.

Because of this extreme oversight, the World Reserve has quarantined these Gallery Displays.

“They cannot be sold as new because they simply do not meet our strict standards of perfection,” Marshall added. “So instead, I’ve sent a Directive to immediately discount these from their original price of $198 which you will find on our website down to just $88 and shipping for today’s readers, but just for the next 48 hours, or until they’re all gone,” he said.

Everybody loves to find the mistake. And the two mistakes in this run of the classic custom-made Gallery Display are actually somewhat challenging to find. So for readers who are struggling to find the errors, here’s a hint. One spelling error is in the second row, and one is in the bottom row.

“We’re bracing for all the calls because everyone wants to get their free coins,” said Aaron Stryker, the Director of Hotline Operations. So when the lines are busy, keep trying. “We promise to get every call,” Stryker said. “Beat the deadline and you’ll be bragging to your family and friends how you found the spelling error and got all the coins absolutely free,” he added. ■

■ VALUABLE: Never-Circulated State Quarters like these have increased up to 500% in collector value because they are a much higher quality than pocket change. That’s why everyone is trying to get the whole collection free before they’re gone forever.

■ FREE: Today’s readers who find just one of the spelling errors in the Gallery Display above and call the Toll Free Hotline at 1-866-769-6086 before the 48 hour deadline get all 57 U.S. State and Territory Quarter Dollars free with each discounted Gallery Display.

Savage sport

Mixed martial arts rises among TV entertainment

By Rebecca De Leon
Times-News writer

In boxing, a punch could fill an opponent's mouth with blood. In wrestling, a well-executed move could make a man's eyes water. In martial arts, a kick could knock the wind right out of an alert fighter.

Now, put them all together, and what do you get?

You get mixed martial arts — dubbed MMA — the brutal sport that's quickly becoming an American favorite. Like modern gladiators in an arena, two fighters stare each other down before a fight as crowd members yell to see copious amounts of blood and, eventually, a knockout.

Two tough guys from Rupert first saw the savage sport on television in the late '90s and wanted to try it.

Dan Barrera and Kyacey Uscola, both Minico High School graduates, took their combat skills to the next level — competing in the Ultimate Fighting Championship, better known as the UFC. Both became reality TV stars by competing in Spike TV's hit show "The Ultimate Fighter."

Now Czar Sklavos of Twin Falls has started training out of the Twin Falls Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu Academy. He has his eye on the prize and looks to follow his father's footsteps and become a professional fighter. Here are their stories.

Dan Barrera

"If I wanna be out, I'll be out," Barrera said in the infamous "The Ultimate Fighter" episode where he lost his fight to Ben Saunders by a controversial decision. "If I wanna push him around, I'll push him around. With a smile on my face and blood in my teeth, whatever, I'll be waiting. Waiting in the middle, ready to go another round. And lovin' it."

Barrera was born in 1980 on a farm in Rupert. He excelled in wrestling and made it to the state championships his senior year of high school, in 1999.

After graduating, Barrera joined the U.S. Air Force and took up boxing, amassing an impressive 15-win, 3-loss record, including a hard-fought loss to 2004 Olympic gold medalist Czar Sklavos, top, wrestles with his father, Carl Sklavos. Czar Sklavos has a professional fight scheduled today in Ogden, Utah. 'I'd like to go as far as I can,' he says.

Andre Ward.

The Air Force transferred Barrera to Fort Knox, Ky., where he found himself without access to a boxing gym. So he began sparring with fellow American soldiers and fell in love with the MMA style of fighting.

After his honorable discharge, Barrera worked as a firefighter in Fort Knox and lived with his new wife, Amber Barrera.

Barrera's trainer, Cyclone MMA gym owner Jason Keaton, encouraged Barrera to apply to be a contestant on "The Ultimate Fighter." Once accepted, Barrera faced a difficult decision: His boss at the fire department told Barrera that if he left he would not have a job to come home to, Barrera told a rangerup.com interviewer. Relying on his faith in God, Barrera decided to take his chances with the show and set off to Hollywood in 2007 to be a contestant in season six.

The show's viewers were baffled by Barrera's habit of waking up just after 4 a.m. to train and even more baffled when he repeatedly shadow-boxed in front of a bathroom mirror with his pants around his ankles.

However, he is most known for a telephone conversation with his wife shortly before his scheduled match against Saunders. Amber called Barrera at the contestant house right before his match and told him she was having either a seizure or a panic attack. She began sobbing and telling her husband she hadn't eaten in days and was certain she was dying. In an interview with show producers, Barrera said the phone call was hard for him to take.

After praying with his hysterical wife over the phone, Barrera entered the ring to fight Saunders. The match was awarded to Saunders after a split decision — a controversial call that led UFC President Dana White to award both fighters with $5,000 in prize money, an unprecedented gift in the UFC.

The loss eliminated Barrera from the show, so he headed to Hawaii with his wife to pursue a master's degree in fire science, work as a firefighter and continue MMA training.

Barrera now lives in Hilo, training with UFC World Champion BJ Penn at BJ Penn Mixed Martial Arts Academy, when he is not fighting Hawaiian fires. But he hasn't forgotten about his roots.

"Ah, Rupert," he said with a chuckle during a telephone interview. "Yeah, I remember growing up there. It's been a while. I got a lot of good memories of that place."

Kyacey Uscola

Barrera's compadre Kyacey "Ice Cold" Uscola was born a year after Barrera, also in Rupert.

The two men grew up together, both competing in football and wrestling at Minico High School.

"There wasn't really any rivalry between us," Uscola said. "We were always on the same team. He was a good athlete."

So was Uscola, becoming a state wrestling champion while at Minico High.

Uscola attended Southwestern Oregon Community College on a wrestling scholarship, becoming an All-American his sophomore year. Then Uscola transferred to

Can you scarf down jalapenos as if they were pickles? If so, come to the Twin Falls City Park on Saturday and Sunday to participate in a jalapeno-eating contest.

But if the thought of spicy food makes your bowels uneasy, come down anyway to enjoy the other festivities of Dos Dias en el Valle (Two Days in the Valley), hosted by Hispanic Heritage Fiesta.

The event will have the jalapeno contest, booths with gentler food, a car show, a Miss Chiquitita pageant and performances by the Hispanic Heritage Scholarship Pageant winners and participants. Los Amantes de la Sierra will headline the live music scene. Traditional Mexican and Aztec dancing will be performed by Ballet Folklorico Mexico Lindo, Danza Mexica Tonantzin and Mariachi Tleyotiltzin, all of Caldwell.

"There will be children's games, too, on Sunday," said Sylvia Renova-Gaxiola, a member of the Hispanic Heritage Fiesta fundraising committee. "We'll have craft tables set up,

Shakespeare comedy moves to Colonial America

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — To believe Shakespeare is to believe that “the course of true love never did run smooth.” And that’s why “A Midsummer Night’s Dream” has long been one of the Bard’s most endearing plays. Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival will mark its return after a year’s hiatus by staging the popular comedy this month in Ketchum. The show opens Thursday. Those familiar with the classic comedy will once again be treated to Shakespeare’s fairy kingdom where pandemonium ensues when human lovers flee to the woods.

“We have lovers learning to love in a mature way beyond puppy love infatuation — where they learn love has to do with wanting to be around someone. By the end, they’ve grown up. They realize that being in love is different than they thought,” said director Bruce Hostetler. Hostetler, who hails from the Shakespeare mecca of Ashland, Ore., has set this particular version of “A Midsummer Night’s Dream” in early 1600s America in a Jamestown-like venue. It allows for period English costumes and American accents with nasal A’s, rather than English accents. And it offers a setting at the edge of Western civilization surrounded by wilderness that people know nothing about. “It offers the opportunity to go into the very scary woods where we face monsters and the fairies,” said Hostetler. “We love stories about monsters and fairies because our culture — the European culture — grew up with fairy tales.”

LOVERS IN THE WOODS

- What: “A Midsummer’s Night Dream” by Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival
- When: 6 p.m. Aug. 19-22 and 26-29
- Where: Forest Service Park, First and Washington streets in Ketchum
- Tickets: $20 for adults, at 726-4857 or at the door; children 12 and younger admitted free
- What’s more: Bring a picnic and low-backed chairs. Bleacher seats will also be available.

Though the setting is far removed from Shakespeare’s England, the basic premise is not. It still features Duke Theseus, who is about to marry his captured Indian princess Hippolyta. And the highly authoritarian father of Hermia who insists she marry Demetrius, even though she is in love with Lysander. And Helena, who is head over heels in love with Demetrius. And the fairy king and queen Oberon and Titania who are in the middle of a monstrous marital spat involving real or imagined infidelities and the possession of a small human “changeling child.” And, of course, there’s Puck, the naughty sprite who loves to watch young lovers struggle and yell at one another. The play is hysterically funny — one of the funniest things Shakespeare ever wrote, said Patsy Wygle, who plays one of the mechanicals involved in a play within the play. But it has some enduring messages about taking another step along the path to maturity, as well, said Keith Moore, who plays Nick Bottom, a weaver who undergoes a radical transformation. “What I love about Bottom is that it’s all about him in the beginning. But he becomes King of Fairies for a while and when he becomes king he becomes so noble. It rubs off on him. And, by the end, he cares more about others than himself.”

Eastern Oregon University to play football. He neared completion of a bachelor’s degree in business management when he, also, faced a difficult decision. Uscola had taken an interest in MMA fighting while in college. He fought in four amateur master tournaments before turning professional. “That’s when I started to see the money, and I had to make a decision,” Uscola said. “Did I want to go for the 9 to 5 kind of job, or did I want to take a chance on this fighting thing?” With just a few semesters left for a degree, Uscola took his chances on the fighting thing. Four years ago, Uscola’s father committed suicide. “It was a tough pill to swallow,” Uscola said. “I didn’t see it coming. It was the hardest day of my life. He was my biggest fan — he never missed one game while I was growing up. He was a devoted father and a devoted coach. It was just a sad deal. I knew he was going through a rough time, but nobody expected this.” However, Uscola pushed through the pain and kept fighting. After two years of amateur and four years of professional fighting, Uscola became a contestant on “The Ultimate Fighter’s” 11th season this year. He was Light Heavyweight Champion and decorated UFC fighter/trainer Tito Ortiz’s second pick for his team. “He’s legit,” Uscola said of Ortiz. “He’s a cool dude. I met him before the show and he picked me second because he knew me and he saw me fight before.” Although he went far in the season, the show wasn’t all fun for Uscola, either. “To be honest with you, it’s a tough task because every freedom is taken away from you,” Uscola said. “You can’t have anything to comfort you; no cd player, no magazines, nothing like that. That part was tough.” Uscola lost his fight against Kris McCray by submission and was eliminated from the competition just before reaching the quarter-finals. But he has not stopped fighting. The professional MMA fighter boasts 18 wins and 15 losses, with no ties. Five months ago, Uscola’s longtime girlfriend, Jessica Vasquez, gave birth to their son, Charles Champ Uscola. Soon after, Uscola made headlines again when he was attacked by dogs and had his penis bitten all the way through. In April, a group of Akitas attacked Uscola while he walked near the “Ultimate Fighter” contestant house. Instead of fleeing, Uscola fought the dogs, which resulted in chunks of flesh ripped off his body in several places, a gash in his knuckle and the infamous injury. After time in rehab, Uscola is back to training in California. “It’s almost completely healed,” he said. “But there’s always going to be some things, you know. Some complications.”

Czar Sklavos

Uscola’s former trainer Tom Supnet now trains Czar Sklavos, a promising 28-year-old fighting out of Twin Falls. Sklavos currently trains under his father, Carl Sklavos, an International Sport Karate Association World Flyweight Champion, out of his house in Twin Falls and at the Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu Academy, where both he and his father are MMA student instructors. Czar Sklavos was born in Twin Falls and went to Twin Falls High School but did not graduate. “I wasn’t a very good kid,” he said. “I got into a lot of trouble. I wasn’t very focused.” Like Barrera and Uscola, Czar Sklavos has a criminal record, but he said he has cleaned up his life and now lives for his family. Czar Sklavos currently works for Loomix West LLC and trains in his spare time, when he’s not taking care of his 3-year-old daughter, Charlie. He keeps himself busy working, training and preparing for a baby boy, due later this month. Czar Sklavos’ professional career is just starting — he has only one professional fight to his name, which he lost by decision. But he has another professional fight scheduled today in Ogden, Utah. Though his future in professional MMA fighting is not certain, he remains hopeful. “I’d like to go as far as I can,” Czar Sklavos said. “He has potential,” Supnet said. “That’s why him and his dad gave me a call. They said he doesn’t want to look back and say that he put it (fighting) on the back burner and never got around to giving it a try. He’s one of those kids that’s very lightweight but proves the value of Brazilian jiu-jitsu on the ground.”

Hear rare arrangements of favorite songs at Saturday benefit

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Be ready to hear more than music at Richard Glazier's concert Saturday evening.

The program, "From Gershwin to Garland: A Musical Journey with Richard Glazier," explores songs from the Great American Songbook. Funds from the pay-what-you-can concert will benefit the Twin Falls Center for the Arts, which is under construction on the Snake River Canyon Rim and scheduled to open in October.

Glazier, a classically trained pianist who lives in California, will play music made popular by Ira and George Gershwin, Judy Garland and Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, among others. The concert will feature multimedia presentations, like movie trailers correlating to soundtrack songs. Silent footage of stars walking the red carpet for the 1954 premier of "A Star is Born" accompanies the song "The Man That Got Away" from the same movie. Other songs include "Embraceable You," "Over the Rainbow," "Where or When," "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" and "Swanee."

At pianist Richard Glazier's Twin Falls concert, you'll see movie trailers and silent footage of stars walking the red carpet.

Saturday night will sound different than most other musicians' performances of the same songs. Glazier plays rare arrangements of the classic pieces that he found in libraries and collections.

The pieces are interspersed with personal stories, like the time Glazier performed for Ira Gershwin when he was 12 years old, and behind-the-scenes anecdotes from interviews and research.

"It's wonderful, wonderful music," Glazier said.

This isn't Glazier's first foray in Idaho. He performed twice in Burley in the past 10 years and has played

"I will have about eight to 12 dancers," said Monique Michel-Duarte, director of Ballet Folklorico Mexico Lindo. "They're mainly kids from 8 to 15 years old."

Ballet Folklorico Mexico Lindo has participated in Dos Dias en el Valle for the past five years. This year, the group will bring two other dance troupes that focus on slightly different styles of dance. Danza Mexica Tonantzin performs traditional Aztec rather than Mexican dances.

Angel Avila, 19, started Danza Mexica Tonantzin only five months ago, as a way to focus on his creative dancing.

"Ever since I was little, my brother told me about the Aztecs and how great they were," Avila said. "The type of dance that we're doing is a traditional dance between a man and a woman. It represents masculinity and femininity. It's the good and bad, earth and wind."

From artisan leather to light-catching aluminum

You'll find impressive variety at Sun Valley art festival

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — This weekend's Sun Valley Center Arts and Crafts Festival is like a wedding of artists.

There's something old and something new ... and, of course, plenty that's blue.

One of the 130 artists who will show at the juried festival in Ketchum's Atkinsons' Park today through Sunday is Willy O'Neal of Lava Hot Springs, who has been making custom-fit, hand-sewn shoes since 1959. Eschewing mass-produced footwear, he crafts shoes in a variety of styles and colors, soles and leathers, using exotic textiles that he gets from managed game preserves.

Calf skin linings are soft and breathable, he says. Elephant and rhino leathers are extremely durable. And ostrich and caiman crocodile skins offer a beautiful textured look.

Sun Valley artist Sue Dumke, in contrast, utilizes a much more modern medium.

She embeds digital photographs of blue bora bora lilies, orchids and Buddhas into coated aluminum. The process makes the colors richer. And the image takes on a reflective 3-D quality that changes with the light. The photographs are waterproof and protected against UV rays so they can be mounted outdoors in gardens and courtyards, as well as inside.

Dumke says she first saw the technique used in a small picture of a smile in a dental office. "I thought, 'What a perfect match for displaying the energy of my Buddha photographs and the flowers."

The Sun Valley Center Arts and Crafts Festival, now in its 42nd year, is considered one of the top 100 outdoor juried festivals in the nation.

It draws artists from all over the nation, including several Idaho artists: O'Neal, Dumke, Hailey glass maker Paul Downey, Hailey painter Debbie Edgar Sturges, Boise glass artist Lisa Stover, Boise earring maker Karen Klinefelter, Boise painter Janey Seda, Boise fly-fishing artist Josh Udesen and Victor necklace artisan Jody Petersen.

"The quality of work in this show is really good," said Angela Tsai, a longtime attendee of the festival. "And it features artists from all over the United States so it's fun to walk around and see beautiful things that you might not have seen in this area before."

Free artist demonstrations will be offered from 1 to 4 p.m. each day. Today, Mitsuru Brandon will demonstrate bookmaking; on Saturday, Susan Perin will show watercolor techniques, and on Sunday, Lauren Street will demonstrate ceramics.

The free kids' activity area will be open from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day. Kids will get to make flag books today, masks on Saturday and sun hats on Sunday.

Eagles guitarist plays Sun Valley cancer benefit

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Don Felder hemmed and hawed when his celebrity friends tried to persuade him to join them in Sun Valley for a golf tournament to raise money for cancer research.

Who wants to go to a place known for potatoes, mused the former lead guitarist for The Eagles.

After several years, Felder relented. And he was so impressed with Sun Valley and the golf tourney that he's been back ever since.

Last year he offered to play a benefit concert for St. Luke's Mountain States Tumor Institute and University of Minnesota Cancer Research at the Sun Valley Pavilion after seeing the pavilion under construction. He'll play an encore performance there Wednesday.

Felder proved a hit to more than 1,300 young and old fans last year as he sang a couple of hours' worth of Eagles hits, sounding very similar to the original recordings.

"I thought it was great — he had great songs, a great voice. And he had the history, too, having written such songs as 'Hotel California,'" said Carrie Westergard of Hailey.

Georgia Fenton jumped at the chance to bring Felder back this year. "So many people said they wished they had gone to his concert. He said he would love to come back, and the ticket sales are ahead of last year."

Felder co-wrote "Hotel California," which was the most successful song the Eagles recorded and, as far as he knows, the only song recorded twice by the group. Both times it was nominated for a Grammy Award.

"I think it struck a chord with people because everyone has an image of California with its palm trees, movie stars. So when you say California, it's an easy icon to identify," he said.

Felder plays a dozen fundraisers a year for everything from autism to children's charities.

"I was fortunate enough to be given a gift. And to be able to use it to play for good causes and make people happy is icing on the cake," he said.

Felder said he plays about 50 shows a year, including a lot of private corporate events and casinos from Las Vegas to Hawaii.

"More than that and it seems too much like work," he said.

Touring would also keep him from finishing his new CD, which he describes as "round and 6 inches across, silver and shiny on one side."

Felder said he might play one of the new tunes — if he thinks the audience is patient and polite enough to sit through a song it doesn't know.

"A lot of times the audience just wants to hear the hits," he said. "And I'm happy to give that to them."

Drink in book's history and geology along Highway 93

It was late summer 1971. After two months working in the wilds of Los Angeles, I was looking forward to the saneness of southern Idaho. I pointed my shiny new, bright-yellow Ford Pinto northeast towards Twin Falls and hit the road. It was 109 degrees as I passed through Las Vegas with no air conditioning, and I eyed the thunderclouds building in the west with anticipation, hoping for cooler weather. I had just passed the junction of Highways 93 and 318 when the storm hit.

The deluge erupted as I passed the "Flashfloods Area" sign. Thunder and lightning hit in a synchronized duet, and the windshield wipers were losing the race. I didn't know whether to stop or continue to creep along, anxiously peering through the sheets of water for a glimpse of the road.

Finally, after the longest hour of my young life, I crept into the gas station in Caliente, Nev., just as the end of the tempest passed over. The attendant approached my car, but I couldn't seem to unclench my white-knuckled hands from the steering wheel. When at last I was able to roll down the window, he gave me a wide smile and said, "Just come through the storm, did ya?" Such was my first experience on U.S. Highway 93.

This memory came flooding back as I perused a remarkable new book, "A Geologic and Natural History Tour through Nevada and Arizona along U.S. Highway 93" from the Nevada Bureau of Mines and Geology and the University of Nevada, Reno ($27.95). The authors, Joseph V. Tingley, Kris A. Pizarro, Christopher Ross and Philip A. Pearthree, have compiled a definitive guide, replete with stories of the historical places, plants, animals, rocks and events along the highway between Wickenburg, Ariz., and Jackpot, Nev.

The book, published in an 8.5-by-11-inch landscape, spiral-bound format, is filled with more than 200 black-and-white photos, dozens of sketches and detailed maps, 12 stunning color plates, a glossary, index, bibliography and table of GPS coordinates.

In addition to the information on sites along the highway, the authors have also provided details of side trips which take readers to recreation areas, Great Basin National Park, mining towns, museums and Area 51, which boasts The Extraterrestrial Highway.

But the historical tidbits are what captivated me. I enjoyed reading about the government experiment using camels for military purposes in the area around Kingman, Ariz. About the rock murals outside Chloride, Ariz., and the Ward Charcoal Ovens built by Italian-Swiss charcoal workers. The Lincoln Highway; the sheep industry in early Nevada; Spruce Mountain, a "sky island" in the desert; and the large ranches once owned by Jimmy Stewart and Bing Crosby.

Of course, I was especially interested in the history of Caliente. It began as a ranch in the early 1860s, then became a Union Pacific Railroad town in 1901. In its heyday, Caliente boasted more than 5,000 residents. The impressive mission-style building that served as the train depot for many years is now a beautiful, restored landmark and houses the town's city government offices, the library and a local community college. I doubt that the gas station where I stopped so many years ago is still in operation, but you never know!

Highway 93 may not have the notoriety of Route 66, but this book will certainly boost its visibility. We can only hope that the authors are working on a second volume, covering the route from Jackpot through our own beloved part of Idaho, and on up to the Montana-Canadian border at Port of Roosville.

Variety is the spice of entertainment in Mini-Cassia Community Concerts' performers expected to appeal to many

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

The four performances chosen for this season of Mini-Cassia Community Concerts are likely to get memories rolling — both memories of the past, for those who remember seeing similar performances in decades past, and memories made at the King Fine Arts Center in Burley for younger listeners.

Either way, there's enough variation in genres to keep season ticketholders coming back for more, said Susan Tuft, president of the MCCC, which will mark 64 years in its 2010-2011 season.

"We try to have a fair amount of variety in our programs," she said. "We are trying to bring people new things they haven't heard before."

Oct. 1: New Christy Minstrels

This group started out on the Andy Williams Show in the 1960s and went on to earn gold records and numerous awards, and to perform at such venues as the White House. Throughout, their roster has remained stable, so the performers who will entertain in October are almost all the same ones who premiered on prime-time television so many decades ago.

"People in the baby boomer generation will recognize that group, and the songs they sing like 'Green, Green,'" Tuft said.

Featuring banjos, guitars and other stringed instruments, the Minstrels are expected to perform many of the same songs that helped make them famous, but with better equipment and more practice than they had back then.

"It's more fun than any older person ought to be allowed to have, and we love what we're doing," said lead performer Randy Sparks, 75, in a press release. "In fact, I'm thinking we'd likely have a glorious future, if we weren't so darned old!"

Nov. 13: Legacy of Floyd Cramer

With the vintage appeal of keyboardist Floyd Cramer, who performed at such Nashville institutions as the Grand Ole Opry and Music City Tonight, Cramer's grandson Jason Coleman is continuing in his grandfather's tradition.

"He grew up into a handsome young man who will play his grandfather's songs the way grandpa used to," Tuft said.

When his age was in the single digits, Coleman appeared with Cramer in several performances, he made his own Opry debut at 17, and today he leads the musical element of his Baptist church's contemporary services as well as performing in secular venues.

Coleman has released several instrumental albums, including "Legacy," a collection of Cramer's best-known songs, such as "Last Date," as well as other country standards.

March 12: Buddy Jewell

After winning the television reality competition Nashville Star in 2003, Buddy Jewell has continued to appeal to lovers of country and western music. He has earned Academy of Country Music honors as Best New Artist, took the Country Music Awards' Horizon award and was nominated for a Grammy for his contributions to a gospel compilation, "Amazing Grace III."

"We have a lot of folks who really enjoy country and western around here, and he seemed like an up and coming young fellow with a nice, nice voice," Tuft said.

Among the songs he will likely perform in Burley is his hit "Sweet Southern Comfort," available on the Sony label. He later left that label to start his own, Diamond Dust Records, on which he has released a new album, "Country Enough."

April 29: Barbra & Frank, The Concert That Never Was

Barbra Streisand and Frank Sinatra never performed together, in part because of the generational gap between them, but two tribute impersonators have put together a show imagining what might have been.

"They have a huge following, both of them do, and we figured it would have a broad appeal," Tuft said, recalling the success of Beatles impersonators in a recent MCCC season.

Sharon Owens performs as Streisand, while Sinatra is portrayed by Sebastian Anzaldo, who earned second place for his impersonation on the ABC show "The Next Best Thing."

"They're dead ringers for both of them, they look like them and sound like them," Tuft said.

A quick romp through the Bard's work

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Thirty-seven plays, 154 sonnets, a little swordplay, a shipwreck ...

... "Titus Andronicus" portrayed as a cooking show, "Othello" done as a rap and "Hamlet" performed backwards.

Is William Shakespeare turning over in his grave yet?

Three local thespians — Steve d'smith, Matt Gorby and William Hennings — will present "The Compleat Wrks of Wlrm Shkspr (Abridged)" in 97 minutes this week and next.

The fast-paced, irreverent romp through the Bard's life work is being billed as a little culture — very little culture, as a matter of fact.

"It's clever and it's wild fun. It can be really fun if you know some of Shakespeare's plays. But it's fun even if you don't," said Patsy Wygle, a member of the Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival.

"Compleat Wrks" was written by three American Shakespeare students who figured out a way to perform "Hamlet" in 43 seconds.

After a few reincarnations, the show ended up off-Broadway and in London where it ran nine years — the longest-running comedy the city has ever seen.

Ward, Clayson battle way back to field for ISU

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — Bryant Ward wasn't thinking about the pain, or what that pain meant for the rest of his 2009 season.

When Ward's leg broke in two places after a reception against Montana last November, one thing dominated his thoughts.

"I was thinking about my mom," he said. "She was at the game watching me and I knew that if I started to freak out that she would too so I just tried to be as calm as I could."

Ward

Ward, a former Twin Falls High School star, still has a metal rod and three screws in his leg. Rehabilitating the leg enough to return to the field this fall became the focus in the weeks and months that followed the injury.

"I did a lot of running and cutting over the summer so I knew that would be fine but I was nervous when I started hitting people and getting tackled after a catch. I had to think about what I was doing at first. Now it's full go. I went through all the work I did to get back on the field because I wanted to still play."

Ward is lining up at full-back, but in the Bengals' new offense he'll move around all over the field as he looks to build on last year's nine-catch season.

Former Burley High

standout Braeden Clayson, a mammoth offensive tackle, had a different set of off-season circumstances to deal with. He wasn't hurt in a game, but had his appendix removed during the winter. Following the surgery he suffered a sports hernia, another piece of bad news for a guy who has to be physical and take a lot of punishment for 60 minutes each game.

Clayson said the mental aspect of the setbacks was the biggest hurdle.

"My rehab was a lot easier than anything else," he said.

"The mental part was so much harder. We got a brand new offense this year and I couldn't do anything in the spring. I'm standing there on the sidelines and tried to learn what I could, but it's not the same as going out there and playing while you learn."

Clayson watched a lot of film in the spring and went to meetings trying to understand bits and pieces. When he finally got out on a field, teammate Mitch Rudder helped him through the rough spots during summer conditioning work.

"Mitch was like my personal trainer. He went through everything with me to try to get me up to speed on what we're doing," said Clayson.

Clayson moves to right tackle this year and like Ward and the rest of the Bengals, he vows to be better this year than the last two.

"We're embarrassed," Clayson said. "We're trying to forget the past two seasons to be honest with you. So far I can see all the guys stepping up. We're going to be a better team on the field this time."

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News Writer

Sometimes all it takes to lift a team's spirits during the pain and punishment of two-a-days is a game of tug-of-war.

Twin Falls High School's first football practice Thursday ended in a strong-willed grudge match pitting the up-and-coming sophomores against the established juniors.

Dozens of teammates hooped and hollered, cheering on their respective classes.

Using that excitement and energy, the sophomores finally tugged the juniors across the cone for the victory.

"That's probably the best conditioning they've had all summer," joked head coach Allyn Reynolds. "The juniors got their pride hurt a little bit, but you've got to have a little bit of that in a team. That's the fun part of it."

A visit from Boise State head coach Chris Petersen two years ago inspired the Twin Falls coaching staff to incorporate fun competitions every day in practice.

"They were doing fun, goofy things at practice every day," Reynolds said. "These were college kids running around playing capture the flag and doing tug-of-war and Petersen said how much the players enjoyed the light-hearted competition."

The Bruins started incorporating some sort of fun competition in every practice last season and Reynolds said it's a great way to break up the monotony football sometimes bring. At some point this fall camp, offensive linemen will get the chance to catch a punt.

"That will be something to watch," Reynolds said. "Football's got to be fun. Kids got to have fun doing something."

The rest of Thursday's practice was not as much fun.

With 50-yard sprints, pushups, reaction drills and shuttle runs, conditioning was the primary focus of Thursday's sessions.

"It feels really good to be out here playing ball, but right now we're just trying to get in shape," said junior receiver

After quick start, Woods fades at PGA

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. — The fog finally lifted over Whistling Straits and revealed a stunning vista.

Tiger Woods' name was atop the leaderboard. Just not for long.

At the end of opening day in the PGA Championship, he wasn't near the names of Bubba Watson and Francesco Molinari, who each opened with a 4-under 68; or Ernie Els, Matt Kuchar and Nick Watney, who also were at 4 under when it became too dark for them to finish the first round.

Woods, who made three birdies inside 12 feet on the opening four holes, had to birdie his final hole just to break par, a 1-under 71. That used to be considered an ordinary start in a major. Considering his recent woes, this was nearly cause for celebration.

"To shoot something under par, that was the goal today," Woods said.

He joined 21 others among the 78 early starters who completed the first round, which was delayed by more than three hours because of fog. Still to be determined is whether he can back that up. It was the first time in eight rounds that Woods had broken par.

And there were enough errant shots, including one that went so far left it found a marsh he didn't know was there, that Woods had to make an 8-foot birdie on the final hole to avoid wasting a day in which he appeared to make progress.

"I've played too good not to shoot under par," Woods said. "It would've been very disappointing and frustrating to end up at even par as well as I played today. To make that putt — to shoot under par — just feels like that's what I should have shot the way I played today. And that's a good feeling."

Since when is shooting 71 a good feeling for a guy with 14 majors?

When he's coming off the worst tournament of his career, an 18-over 298 at Firestone to beat only one player in the field, raising questions that ranged from whether this would be his last PGA Tour event of the year in America to whether he belonged in the Ryder Cup.

"Welcome to golf, you know?" Woods said.

The fog delay meant none of the late starters could finish the opening round.

Els, desperate to make sure another year doesn't end without a major, played bogey-free through 14 holes and was at 4 under, making a 7-foot par save on the 14th shortly before the horn sounded. Also at

Mets' Rodriguez freed without bail Thursday

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Suspended Mets closer Francisco Rodriguez was released without bail Thursday and ordered to stay away from his girlfriend's father, whom he is accused of attacking outside a family lounge at Citi Field.

Rodriguez was arrested and charged with third-degree assault after New York's 6-2 loss to Colorado on Wednesday night. The team put him on the restricted list without pay for two days, costing him more than $125,000.

The 28-year-old reliever

is accused of grabbing 53-year-old Carlos Pena, hauling him into a nearby tunnel, hitting him in the face and banging his head against the wall. Pena went to a hospital with a scrape and swelling above his right eyebrow.

Rodriguez did not enter a plea. Held overnight at Citi Field, he wore jeans, a white dress shirt and sneakers in a Queens courthouse. He did not speak, but nodded as the judge spoke to him.

"Ownership and the organization are very disappointed in Francisco's inappropriate behavior and we take this matter very seriously," Mets chief operating officer Jeff Wilpon said.

Said star center fielder Carlos Beltran: "No one should act like that."

TFHS grad Matkin to play at Tallahassee CC

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Staying home didn't end up as the right fit, so Devan Matkin's going about as far away as she can.

The former Twin Falls High School basketball standout and College of Southern Idaho guard confirmed Thursday that she's headed to Florida to play her sophomore season at Tallahassee Community College.

CSI head coach Randy Rogers told the Times-News on Tuesday that Matkin wouldn't return to the program. Matkin said she committed to Tallahassee a little more than a week ago.

She said while things didn't work out at her hometown school, she was already looking forward to her next move.

"It just wasn't the right fit

(at CSI)," Matkin said. "I think (Tallahassee) is a great opportunity. I took a visit and really enjoyed the coach and the girls and didn't have any reservations about it."

In her lone season with the Golden Eagles, Matkin averaged 4.9 points, 2.6 assists and 2.6 rebounds in 30 games.

Matkin said she'll return to the shooting guard role that she thrived in as a junior at Twin Falls High, where she led the Bruins to the third-place game of the Class 5A state tournament in 2008.

Braves' Chipper Jones likely out for year with knee woes

ATLANTA (AP) — Chipper Jones may have played his last game in the major leagues after tearing up his left knee while fielding a ground ball.

The Atlanta Braves said Thursday that the 38-year-old third baseman tore his anterior cruciate ligament and will need surgery. The estimated recovery time is six months, short enough to be ready for the next opening day — if Jones decides to return in 2011.

He had already said he would consider retirement after a season that's now ended sooner than expected.

"I'm sure as the next couple of days go by, those are things we'll discuss and he'll discuss with his family," his agent, BB Abbott, told The Associated Press. "It's not something he'll decide immediately. He's going to need to hear everything about the injury and rehabilitative process. He'll probably make his decision from there. I can assure you it's not something that's going to be a knee-jerk decision."

Jones was hurt in Tuesday night's game at Houston. He fielded a routine grounder by Hunter Pence, jumped in the air while making the throw to first, then collapsed to the ground for several minutes.

After an MRI exam, Jones met Thursday with the team doctor, Marvin Royster, who delivered the grim diagnosis — and a major setback for the NL East leaders.

"Obviously, he's very, very disappointed. I would almost describe it as numb," Abbott said. "He knows this will be a big blow to the team. Obviously, he has been going very well recently and felt like he was really contributing to the team's success. This is real disappointing for him."

Jones feared something was seriously wrong after he walked off the field gingerly under his own power.

"It's hurt," he said in Houston. "I heard a distinct pop."

The Braves were actually hopeful when the knee didn't swell as much as one would expect after an ACL injury, especially when Jones was able to handle some routine flexibility drills. But the MRI showed a partial tear, plus some stretching of the ligament, making it impossible for him to come back without surgery.

"We were cautiously optimistic," general manager Frank Wren said. "When we got the news this morning, I was actually pretty shocked."

Jones had bounced back from a slow start and was hitting .265 with 10 homers and 46 RBIs for a team that had a 2½-game lead in the NL East on two-time defending league champion Philadelphia. The Braves will have to carry on with Omar Infante and Brooks Conrad sharing third base, though neither has Jones' power.

Coming off a poor 2009 season, Jones got off to a miserable start this year and said in June that he was considering retirement. A few days later, he backed off and said he would wait until after the season to make a decision. He had been playing much better since then, raising his average some 30 points and showing more power.

Lewis, Blue Jays rally past Red Sox

TORONTO — Fred Lewis hit a sacrifice fly that capped a four-run rally in the ninth inning and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Boston Red Sox 6-5 Thursday.

The Blue Jays trailed 5-2 before Jose Bautista chased Red Sox starter John Lackey by leading off the ninth with his major league-leading 36th homer. Jonathan Papelbon (4-5) came on and blew his sixth save try of the season, and his first in 25 career chances against the Blue Jays.

INDIANS 4, ORIOLES 1

CLEVELAND — Rookie Jeanmar Gomez remained unbeaten and the Indians defeated Baltimore, handing Buck Showalter his first road loss as manager.

Gomez (3-0) gave up one run and six hits over six innings, leaving after Adam Jones led off the seventh with a bunt single. The 22-year-old native of Venezuela struck out three without a walk in his fourth career start to beat veteran Kevin Millwood (2-12).

YANKEES 4, ROYALS 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — CC Sabathia picked up his 15th victory, Austin Kearns homered and the Yankees held off the Royals.

Sabathia (15-5) is tied with Tampa Bay left-hander David Price for the most victories in the American League. Sabathia, who is 11-2 in his past 14 starts, gave up three runs and 10 hits, while walking two and striking out three in 8 2-3 innings.

TWINS 6, WHITE SOX 1

CHICAGO — Jason Kubel hit a three-run home run and Francisco Liriano pitched in and out of trouble to help the Twins beat the White Sox and move into first place in the American League Central.

Orlando Hudson also added a solo homer for the Twins, who took two of three games from their division rivals to move one game ahead in the division.

NATIONAL LEAGUE METS 4, ROCKIES 0

NEW YORK — Johan Santana pitched a four-hit shutout to make a closer unnecessary a day after Francisco Rodriguez was arrested on a charge of assaulting his girlfriend's father at Citi Field.

BREWERS 8, DIAMONDBACKS 4

MILWAUKEE — Casey McGehee set a franchise record with his ninth straight hit, going 4 for 4 and leading the Milwaukee Brewers over the Arizona Diamondbacks. McGehee had a solo homer, a two-run double, an RBI single and another single.

GIANTS 8, CUBS 7

SAN FRANCISCO — Pinch-hitter Andres Torres hit a bases-loaded single in the bottom of the ninth inning to send the San Francisco Giants over the Chicago Cubs.

Pat Burrell hit a grand slam and solo home run and Pablo Sandoval also homered to snap a drought of 178 at-bats without a longball.

PADRES 3, PIRATES 0

SAN DIEGO — Ryan Ludwick hit a two-run homer while Jon Garland and three relievers combined on a four-hitter to lead the Padres to a victory that completed a three-game sweep of the lowly Pirates.

The Padres protected their 2½-game lead over the Giants in the NL West going into a weekend showdown at San Francisco.

PHILLIES 10, DODGERS 9

PHILADELPHIA — Carlos Ruiz's game-winning two-run hit in the ninth inning capped a frantic rally to help the Phillies beat the Dodgers.

Ruiz's shot bounced off the left-center field fence off Dodgers closer Jonathan Broxton, scoring Jayson Werth and Ben Francisco. The Phillies entered the eighth inning trailing 9-2.

"I wanted all the doors open so I didn't set any restrictions on (location), and I ended up going as far away as I can possibly go, but I'm excited," she said. "I'm just happy for the chance to get to go down there and improve my game even more."

Zayne Slotten.

"My arm is going to be a little sore," senior quarterback T.J. Ellis added.

That's because the offense spent an expansive period in 7-on-7 drills with Ellis firing short passes to wide outs, tight ends and slot receivers. With many skill players returning, including Ellis in his third year under center, the Bruin offense could be dangerous this season.

"We have so many guys back on offense so we don't need to spend as much time working on formations and routes right now and instead can just go out and do it," Ellis said.

The team is confident after getting a piece of the Great Basin Conference title last season and advancing to the Class 4A state semifinals, but Reynolds said the team needs to take a step off the pedestal and keep grounded.

"We may be a little bit over-confident. We haven't done anything this year," Reynolds said. "Everyone is excited. The attitude is great. It always is. But it's the third or fourth day when we find out if these kids are ready to buy in and play."

Reynolds said the team is about four days ahead of where it was last year at this time thanks to a week of practice this spring. By its first game against Skyview Aug. 27, the team should have all its offensive and defensive schemes installed.

But accompanying that learning, the coaching staff will work in some fun every day in practice. Boise State does an annual dance competition at its fall camp.

"I don't think you're going to see me dancing," Reynolds said.

Saints fall in preseason opener

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — The Super Bowl champion New Orleans Saints are leaving New England with a loss in their exhibition opener.

The team that won its first NFL title with the help of big plays couldn't stop them Thursday night. Stephen Gostkowski kicked a 28-yard field goal with 53 seconds left to give the Patriots a 27-24 win.

The kick was set up by a short pass by Zac Robinson that Darnell Jenkins turned into a 52-yard gain. The Saints also allowed kickoff returns of 52 and 50 yards by first-round draft pick Devin McCourty.

On his first series since being voted Super Bowl MVP, Drew Brees threw an incomplection and was sacked for a 10-yard loss. But on his third and final possession, he led a 20-play, 86-yard march that lasted 10:01 and ended with a 2-yard scoring run by Reggie Bush that cut New England's lead to 10-7.

Brees completed 9 of 13 passes for 55 yards.

Tom Brady, a two-time Super Bowl MVP, played New England's first two series and went 5-for-8 for 67 yards.

RAVENS 17, PANTHERS 12

BALTIMORE — Joe Flacco guided Baltimore's retooled offense to a pair of scores, and the Ravens held Carolina without a touchdown.

Flacco went 8 for 12 for 120 yards and a touchdown. He produced a field goal in his first series, then went three-and-out before directing a 96-yard drive that ended with a 30-yard touchdown pass to Mark Clayton.

Carolina quarterback Matt Moore,

New England Patriots' Julian Edelman (11) carries the ball ahead of New Orleans Saints' Jabari Greer (33) in the first half of an NFL preseason football game Thursday in Foxborough, Mass.

hindered by poor protection and three penalties against left tackle Jordan Gross, failed to produce any points during his three possessions.

Backup Jimmy Clausen went 8 for 15 for 80 yards and an interception in his informal NFL debut. He was sacked twice.

A torrential rain began in the third quarter, causing a sloppy game to become even messier.

Carolina's lone touchdown came when C.J. Wilson took a fumble by fourth-string running back Jalen Parmele into the end zone from 31 yards.

Baltimore's Prince Miller broke seven tackles during a 57-yard punt return that set up an 8-yard touchdown run by Troy Smith for a 17-9 lead.

RAIDERS 17, COWBOYS 9

ARLINGTON, Texas — The Dallas Cowboys were within 16 yards of the end zone on four drives against the Oakland Raiders on Thursday night, yet managed only three field goals. It came back to bite them when the Raiders got two touchdowns and a field goal in the final 4:58 to win 17-9.

Dallas (1-1) had snaps from Oakland's 16, 13, 9 and 10 without getting into the end zone. One of those drives was stopped on downs, and the others were settled by David Buehler making kicks of 42, 27 and 28 yards.

Pat Tillman's family hopes to get truth in own way

NEW YORK — Mary Tillman doesn't want any more congressional hearings or official inquiries.

She still doesn't believe she's been given anything close to satisfactory answers as to how her son died, or why the circumstances of his death were reported incorrectly for so long. But she knows it's unhealthy to keep pushing, and Pat Tillman wouldn't have wanted that for his family.

Of course, if new information were to come out because of the documentary being released this month, the Tillmans would take up the cause again. Yet that's not why they agreed to cooperate with the making of "The Tillman Story," which opens in limited release Aug. 20.

The film chronicles how the Arizona Cardinals safety abandoned NFL riches in 2002 to join the Army Rangers. He was killed in Afghanistan in April 2004 — in an enemy ambush, the military told the world. It wasn't until five weeks later the truth was revealed that he was a victim of friendly fire.

His mother sees the story as far bigger than that of one very famous soldier.

"It's happening to other soldiers," Mary Tillman said Thursday in a phone interview with The Associated Press. "It's a systemic problem."

Last year, Tillman's family raised objections when Lt. Gen. Stanley McChrystal was facing Senate confirmation to lead military operations in Afghanistan. It was McChrystal who approved paperwork awarding Tillman a Silver Star even though he suspected he had been killed by friendly fire, according to Pentagon testimony later obtained by the AP. In 2007, the Army overruled a Pentagon recommendation that McChrystal be held accountable for his "misleading" actions.

Mary Tillman conceded she felt "validated" in her perception of McChrystal when she read the arrogant comments in the Rolling Stone article that ended his military career. She said she didn't necessarily believe his role in the handling of Pat's death disqualified him from the position, but that he needed to be questioned about his actions.

JETS' RYAN APOLOGIZES FOR 'HARD KNOCKS' PROFANITY

CORTLAND, N.Y. — Rex Ryan's mother has already scolded him. A little soap might be next for the New York Jets' foul-mouthed coach.

After a Rex-pletive-filled appearance in the premiere episode of HBO's "Hard Knocks" on Wednesday night, Ryan got a call from Mom. And, then, like a good son, he said he was sorry. "Sometimes you get rolling and that's what happens," the usually brash Ryan said Thursday. "I don't know why. I apologize if I offended more people than I usually offend."

Not that he'll be cutting down on the colorful language anytime soon. Whether Mom's watching or not.

"That's just the way it is," Ryan said, "but, I'm going to be myself."

Swearing is nothing new for NFL coaches — or coaches in other sports, for that matter. It's just rare for fans to hear it on national TV. "Hard Knocks" is an uncensored look at the Jets through training camp.

"You don't even realize you're saying it," said Ryan, whose father, Buddy, was known to toss around a choice word or two during his NFL coaching career.

"My Mom's the only one really disappointed that I care about."

players, who said that's just who Ryan is.

"Skip the F-bombs and everything else," defensive lineman Sione Pouha said. "You can really feel that this guy is passionate about what he does and is passionate about his players."

TOMLIN: NOT CERTAIN IF ROETHLISBERGER WILL PLAY

LATROBE, Pa. — Ben Roethlisberger is permitted to play in all the Pittsburgh Steelers' preseason games before his suspension begins. That doesn't mean he will.

Coach Mike Tomlin wouldn't say Thursday whether Roethlisberger will take a few snaps with the starters during Saturday night's exhibition game against the Detroit Lions — the first time the quarterback will appear before his home crowd since being suspended for six games.

"We're going to make you come to the stadium to check that out," Tomlin said.

Because the starters will play only eight to 12 plays, it is unlikely both Roethlisberger and Byron Leftwich will get on the field, unless it's for a few downs apiece. Leftwich will be the starter when the season opens and Roethlisberger's suspension begins.

"I want to play — I want to be out there with the guys. I'd like to play the whole game," Roethlisberger said. "If coach says I'm not going to play, it's his call."

SEAHAWKS LB HILL OUT A FEW WEEKS WITH KNEE INJURY

RENTON, Wash. — Seahawks linebacker Leroy Hill's rocky 2010 has hit another bump with news he's likely to be out until at least September with a sprained knee.

Coach Pete Carroll said after practice on Thursday that Hill is going to be out "a few weeks."

injury.

"It's going to be a bit," Carroll said. "It's going to be a few weeks probably before our guys will want him to go out full speed. We got to make sure and do this right, because there is a little something that happened there."

Seattle's five-year starter got probation on a plea agreement for a marijuana charge in Georgia. The NFL suspended Hill for the Sept. 12 season opener.

BEARS PLACE RB UNGA ON IR

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — The Chicago Bears have placed rookie running back Harvey Unga on injured reserve, meaning he won't play this season.

Taken in the seventh round of the supplemental draft last month, Unga signed a four-year contract but has been bothered by a hamstring injury.

SABAN: COACHES, ADS HAD CALL WITH NFL ON AGENTS

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Alabama coach Nick Saban says he and other college coaches have talked to NFL and NFL Player Association representatives about agents and their contact with players.

Saban said Thursday that NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell was involved in a conference call on the subject. Florida coach Urban Meyer and Ohio State's Jim Tressel were also on the call, the schools confirmed to The Associated Press.

The NCAA has been investigating alleged improper contact between agents and players at Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Florida and North Carolina.

Saban has temporarily closed practices to NFL scouts, but says that wasn't because of the agent problem.

Kyle Orton (8) and Tim Tebow (15) watch an intra-squad play during practice Tuesday at Denver Broncos training camp at Dove Valley.

Orton quietly shines amid Tebowmania

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — When the Denver Broncos' practice at Invesco Field was over, thousands of fans who had been incessantly chanting Tim Tebow's name pushed toward the railings to beg for his autograph.

They clicked photos of the hideous haircut that linebacker Wesley Woodyard had buzzed into his head that afternoon in a rookie ritual, the friar-like images, like everything Tebow, going viral on the Internet.

Female fans fawned over Brady Quinn, the ruggedly handsome quarterback who arrived in Denver just ahead of Tebow's selection in the first round of the NFL draft this spring.

Kyle Orton? He slipped out a side exit almost unnoticed.

Nothing new there — at the team's headquarters in suburban Denver, the boisterous cheers from Tebowmaniacs begin the second the former Florida star steps out onto the football field to start stretching. They don't end until he's done meeting and greeting his fixated fans, which, during two-a-days, can be just before darkness descends upon Dove Valley.

Usually drawing quite the crowd himself is Quinn, the former first-round pick of the Cleveland Browns.

Orton, meanwhile, doesn't rate a single display jersey at the satellite trailer the Broncos team store is operating inside the parking lot at the club headquarters, where dozens of Tebow jerseys — already the top seller in the NFL — are going fast.

Many days, Orton can slip past the media horde hanging on Tebow's every word and head right into the locker room without breaking stride, nobody bothering the starting quarterback for his thoughts.

This for an incumbent who is so far ahead of the others in both understanding and execution of Josh McDaniels' intricate offense has been relegated to this: Who will serve as Orton's backup in 2010?

Even if the more-experienced Quinn gets that nod, Tebow figures to see plenty of action in special packages such as the Wildcat formation or in the red zone, cameo appearances that will have to satisfy the Tebowmaniacs while Orton quietly leads the Broncos offense.

Almost nowhere else in the NFL is the starting quarterback so stealthy, solitary or secluded as Orton is in Denver, where he signed a one-year, $2.621 million tender as a restricted free agent this offseason because the Broncos weren't willing to give him a long-term deal despite his 29-19 record as a starter in Chicago and Denver.

So, where's the love for Kyle Orton?

"I don't need love," Orton insisted. "I just need wins."

Orton doesn't seem the least bit fazed by the hoopla surrounding Tebow or the lack of devotion he's getting from the fans or the front office.

"I come out here every day and try to get the team and the offense to where we can win games. That's really my main focus," Orton told The Associated Press.

For those actually paying attention, Orton has been worth noticing during training camp. His comfort level and accuracy of his throws are way ahead of Tebow and Quinn. His teammates look at him as their unquestioned leader, with co-captain Champ Bailey declaring, "He's my guy."

McDaniels' too.

Ever since bringing in Quinn and Tebow, McDaniels has insisted Orton is still the starter — but that he'd have to fend off his rivals in training camp.

While Tebow blows away the competition in post-practice wind sprints, Orton's doing the same at quarterback, even if Broncos fans aren't paying close attention.

"He's not under the radar on our team, I know that," McDaniels said. "He's started off extremely well. He's accurate. There's nothing in our scheme that he can't execute. He gets us in the right play 99 out of 100 or 100 out of 100 times and the ball's going to the right place."

It's not just a mental leap but a physical one.

Orton is more mobile in the pocket and is stepping into throws with the good mechanics and proper footwork that eluded him almost all last season.

"Physically, I'm healthy finally," Orton said. "When I came over from Chicago I was still battling my right ankle and never really got that right. ... I'm just happy I'm feeling good for the first time. When you're a quarterback and you're not playing with your feet it's a tough situation."

LeBron, Carmelo, Wade attend NBA negotiating session

NEW YORK (AP) — LeBron James, Carmelo Anthony, Dwyane Wade and Chris Paul were among the players who attended a negotiating session between the NBA and the union Thursday.

"It's important for me that all of us, as being the faces of the NBA, to be involved in the negotiations and what's going on," Anthony said as he left. "Our future is in jeopardy if we can't come into a mutual agreement"

Chauncey Billups and Joe Johnson also attended. Paul is the only one of the All-Stars who was scheduled to be there as a member of the players' executive committee.

Players' association executive director Billy Hunter said 14 players participated in the meeting in Manhattan. The sides agreed to hold another session before training camp so players can take part again.

The current collective bargaining agreement expires June 30, 2011.

"It was great conversation, great dialogue going back and forth," said Anthony, the Denver Nuggets star. "The communication was great. Hopefully we can come to an agreement soon."

The four-hour bargaining session Thursday was the first since February's All-Star weekend, when the players — also strengthened by the surprising attendance of some big names — rejected the owners' proposal. The union recently submitted its own proposal, but commissioner David Stern has indicated it's similar to the current CBA, and the owners are seeking significant changes to the system.

Stern has estimated the league will lose about $370 million this season, which the union disputes. The sides began discussions last year but remained far apart, creating fears of a lockout next summer.

But they were striking a cooperative tone after Thursday's meeting, issuing a joint statement praising "constructive dialogue and a productive exchange of information."

"While we still have much work to do," the statement said, "it was encouraging how many players and owners participated in the process and all pledged to continue to work together."

Huge ice island could pose threat to oil rigs, shipping

By Karl Ritter
Associated Press writer

STOCKHOLM — An island of ice more than four times the size of Manhattan is drifting across the Arctic Ocean after breaking off from a glacier in Greenland. Potentially in the path of this unstoppable giant are oil platforms and shipping lanes — and any collision could do untold damage. In a worst case scenario, large chunks could reach the heavily trafficked waters where another Greenland iceberg sank the Titanic in 1912. It's been a summer of near biblical climatic havoc across the planet, with wildfires, heat and smog in Russia and killer floods in Asia. But the moment the Petermann glacier cracked last week — creating the biggest Arctic ice island in half a century — may symbolize a warming world like no other. “It's so big that you can't prevent it from drifting. You can't stop it,” said Jon-Ove Methlie Hagen, a glaciologist at the University of Oslo. Few images can capture the world's climate fears like a 100-square-mile chunk of ice breaking off Greenland's vast ice sheet, a reservoir of freshwater that if it collapsed would raise global sea levels by a devastating 20 feet. The world's newest ice island already is being used as a powerful emblem in the global warming debate, with U.S. Rep. Edward Markey of Massachusetts suggesting it could serve as a home for climate change skeptics. Researchers are in a scramble to plot the trajectory of the floating ice shelf, which is moving toward the Nares Strait separating Greenland's northwestern coast and Canada's Ellesmere Island. If it makes it into the strait before the winter freeze — due to start next month — it would likely be carried south by ocean currents, hugging Canada's east coast until it enters waters busy with oil activities and shipping off Newfoundland. “That's where it starts to become dangerous,” said Mark Drinkwater, of the European Space Agency. The Canadian Ice Service estimates the journey will take one to two years. It's likely to break up as it bumps into other icebergs and jagged islands. The fragments would be further ground down by winds and waves and would start to melt as they move into warmer waters.

Mighty mangoes

Exports of tasty, popular fruit offer hope for Haiti

By Tamara Lush
Associated Press writer

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Former President George W. Bush ambled into a steamy, fragrant mango warehouse in Haiti on Tuesday and surveyed several long tables neatly packed with the luscious fruit. He clapped Ralph Perry, the warehouse owner, on the shoulder. He shook hands with farmers, dressed in button-down shirts and ties for the occasion. Then Bush — who is co-leading a fund to help Haiti since the Jan. 12 earthquake, along with former President Bill Clinton — talked of rebuilding. He confidently said that mangoes will help the country “grow into prosperity” and spoke of a half-million dollar grant to help 25,000 mango farmers. In Haiti, the mango is a symbol of both the country's potential, and its dysfunction. There are 10 million mango trees in Haiti, and tens of thousands of mango farmers scattered about the country. Mangoes are the Caribbean nation's second-biggest export, behind coffee, and are a $10 million a year industry. Fruit industry leaders think they have the potential to blossom into a tasty, $90 million a year export business. Most of Perry's mangoes are exported to New York and Miami, home to large Caribbean populations that grew up with the fruit. But Perry and others say there are vast untapped markets of future mango lovers elsewhere in the United States and that the fruit is also growing more popular in Europe.

Former President George W. Bush, right, shares a moment with workers at a mango warehouse Tuesday in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Bush arrived in Haiti on Tuesday to visit organizations supported by the Clinton-Bush Haiti Fund, and to reassure investors that the money spent would help the nation 'get back on their feet.'

“Twenty years ago, mainstream America didn't know what a mango was,” Perry said. Yet bruising and a lack of irrigation thwart many crops. Bad roads and the unavailability of seemingly simple tools such as plastic crates have also threatened the success of the country's mango export in recent years. In 2009, only about 10 percent of the crop was shipped abroad. And that was before the quake. Now a number of groups, businesses and people — from Bush to the Coca-Cola Co. — are trying to rebuild Haiti with the mighty mango. Haiti grows a specific variety that is indigenous to the country. Called the “Madame Francis,” it is juicy and sweet, and a bit fibrous. “It is most appreciated by the mango connoisseur,” said Jean Bateau, a mango exporter in Port-au-Prince. Perry, who also has an export business that ships to stores such as Whole Foods in the United States, said there are many obstacles from getting the fruit from “tree to truck.” Sometimes farmers sell too early, allowing it to be picked when unripe. In other cases, they lack proper pruning tools. And the fruit is often so damaged that 20 percent to 40 percent of the harvest is lost somewhere between picking and exporting. And Perry knows that customers at Whole Foods, who pay $2 a mango, don't want bruised fruit. Another knotty problem is transportation. Even before the earthquake, most roads were a disaster; today, piles of rubble, demolished cars and construction trucks clog traffic.

“We need to fix the roads and have better transportation conditions to the warehouses,” acknowledged Haitian Agriculture Minister Joanas Gue. In spite of the setbacks, Haiti actually produced a decent mango crop this year, which gives exporters hope. “If you had asked me in January, February, after the earthquake, if we were going to have some kind of a season, I would not really think so,” Perry said. “We're lucky and maybe next year we will get a better one.” Perry will work closely with TechnoServe, the non-profit group receiving the $500,000 grant from the Clinton Bush Haiti Fund. The money will go to help Haitian farmers with everything from improving their crop yields to building regional drop-off centers where they can sell the fruit to exporters.

Blogger beats news blackout on Mexican drug war

By Olga R. Rodriguez
Associated Press writer

MEXICO CITY — An anonymous, twentysomething blogger is giving Mexicans what they can't get elsewhere — an inside view of their country's raging drug war. Operating from behind a thick curtain of computer security, Blog del Narco in less than six months has become Mexico's go-to Internet site at a time when mainstream media are feeling pressure and threats to stay away from the story. Many postings, including warnings and a beheading, appear to come directly from drug traffickers. Others depict crime scenes accessible only to military or police. The mixed content suggests that all sides are using the blog — drug gangs to project their power, law enforcement to show that it too can play rough, and the public to learn about incidents that the mainstream media are forced to ignore or play down. In at least one case Blog del Narco may have led to a major arrest — of a prison warden after a video posting detailed her alleged system of setting inmates free at night to carry out the killings for a drug cartel. The mysterious blogger hides his identity behind an elaborate cyber-screen. The Associated Press wrote to the blog's e-mail address, and the blogger called back from a disguised phone number. He said he is a student in northern Mexico majoring in computer security, that he launched the blog in March as a “hobby,” but it now has grown to hundreds of postings a day and 3 million hits a week.

President Felipe Calderon has heard complaints that his government is not putting out enough information to allow people to function and stay safe. The violence has killed more than 28,000 people and made Mexico one of the world's most dangerous countries for journalists, which explains why Blog del Narco zealously guards its anonymity. “For the scanty details that they (mass media) put on television, they get grenades thrown at them and their reporters kidnapped,” the blogger said. “We publish everything. Imagine what they could do to us.” Among his postings: • A video of a man being decapitated. While media only reported police finding a beheaded body, the video shows the man confessing to working for drug lord Edgar “La Barbie” Valdez Villareal, who is locked in a fight with both the Beltran Leyva and Sinaloa cartels; • The prison warden affair, which unfolded in a video of masked members of the Zetas drug gang interrogating a police officer, who reveals that inmates allied with the Sinaloa cartel are given guns and cars and sent off to commit murders. At the end of the video the officer is shot to death; • Links to Facebook pages of alleged traffickers and their children, weapons, cars and lavish parties; • Photos of Mexican pop music stars at a birthday party for an alleged drug dealer's teenage daughter in the border state of Coahuila, across from Texas.

2010 DODGE DAKOTA PICKUP

VERSATILITY & CAPABILITY!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

Boasting the most interior room of any midsize truck and a number of best-in-class features and capabilities, the Dodge Dakota is designed to broaden its appeal to younger customers with active lifestyles. Minor changes for the new model year include three new exterior colors: Bright White, Flame Red and Mango Tango. These colors replace Stone White Clear Coat, Detonator yellow and Sunburst Orange.

Offered in ST, Big Horn, TRX4 or Laramie trim levels and two or full-time four wheel drive configurations, the midsize Dodge pickup is available in Extended Cab and Crew Cab body styles. Extended Cab models feature a 6' 4" cargo bed, while Crew Cab is outfitted with a 5' 3" bed.

Power for the Dakota is generated by a 3.7L V6 or an E-85 capable 4.7L V8. Torque is transferred to the ground through the standard 42RLE four-speed or 5-45RFE five-speed automatic transmissions.

The core strength for all Dakota pickups begins with a hydroformed, durable and fully boxed ladder-type frame mounted on rubber isolators. Sophisticated suspension hardware delivers improved ride refinement and best-in-class towing capability. Front control hardware consists of upper and lower "A" arms, coil-over gas-pressure shock absorbers and a link-type stabilizer bar. Rear suspension bits include a live axle, multi-leaf two-stage setup with longitudinal springs, staggered gas-pressure shock absorbers and a link-type stabilizer bar.

The optional power driver's seat provides short drivers with a command view with great outward visibility. Hand grips at both sides of the Cab in the "A" pillar facilitates entry and exit. Modern, roomy interiors provide above average comfort. The Extended Cab is the base offering, with forward-facing rear seating and standard rear-hinged access doors. For added versatility, the 60/40 flip-up folding rear seat cushions provide 30 cubic feet of storage behind the front seats.

2010 Dodge Dakota Pickup By The Numbers

Said property contains 6.09 acres more or less.

Such lands are located within the Residential/Agricultural zone. Pursuant to the Cassia County Zoning Ordinance a Conditional Use Permit is required for development in said zone.

The applicant will appear at this hearing to provide the Cassia County Planning & Zoning Commission all the information required for issuance of a Conditional Use permit for the proposed use under the Cassia County Zoning Ordinance, before such permit can be issued.

A copy of the Application for Conditional Use Permit, including relevant maps and drawings, and information concerning the hearing process is available for review by the public at the office of the Zoning Administrator, Room 4 in the basement of the Cassia County Courthouse, 1459 Overland Ave., Burley, Idaho, prior to the hearing.

All other interested persons are invited to attend the hearing on the question of issuance of the requested conditional use permit. Such other interested persons are advised that in order to participate in the hearing, the following regulations apply:

A. Written Statements of Support or Objection: All persons to whom notice is mailed shall be advised in that notice that they and others who can establish that their substantial rights would be affected by the approval or denial of the permit may file written objections or supporting statements with the planning and zoning commission secretary no later than ten (10) days prior to the hearing setting forth in that writing that person's support or objection to the issuance of the new conditional use permit.

1. Written objections shall set forth each requirement of law (local, state or federal) which the objecting party believes the conditional use permit would violate.

2. Written statements shall also set forth either that the party making the statement owns property within one (1) mile of the external boundaries of the conditional use permit described in the application and/or otherwise setting for the substantial rights that would be affected by the approval or denial of the permit.

3. Additionally, any party desiring to file any document(s) exceeding one (1) one-sided, 8 ½" x 11" sized page, shall file such document(s) at least ten (10) days prior to the hearing, with the planning and zoning commission secretary. The planning and zoning commission reserves the right to reject any proffered documentation that violates the intent of this regulation.

B. Providing Testimony at the Public Hearing: Any person who files a statement in support or objection to the issuance of a new conditional use permit shall indicate in such statement whether or not such person desires to testify at the hearing.

1. Prior to the hearing the planning and zoning commission shall determine which of those persons who desire to testify will be permitted to testify at the hearing.

2. All statements of support or objections shall be made a part of the record at the hearing, but no person except the applicant shall be permitted to testify at the hearing unless they have previously filed a written statement of support or objection to the issuance of the permit.

DATED this 10th day of August, 2010.

Today is Friday, Aug. 13, the 225th day of 2010. There are 140 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Aug. 13, 1910, Florence Nightingale, the founder of modern nursing, died in London at age 90.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1521, Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured Tenochtitlan (teh-natch-teet-LAHN'), present-day Mexico City, from the Aztecs.

In 1624, King Louis XIII of France appointed Cardinal Richelieu his first minister.

In 1846, the American flag was raised for the first time in Los Angeles.

In 1860, legendary sharpshooter Annie Oakley was born in Darke County, Ohio.

In 1932, Adolf Hitler rejected the post of vice chancellor of Germany, saying he was prepared to hold out "for all or nothing."

In 1934, the satirical comic strip "Li'l Abner," created by Al Capp, made its debut.

In 1960, the first two-way telephone conversation by satellite took place with the help of Echo 1. The Central African Republic became totally independent of French rule.

In 1981, in a ceremony at his California ranch, President Ronald Reagan signed a historic package of tax and budget reductions.

In 1989, searchers in Ethiopia found the wreckage of a plane which had disappeared almost a week earlier while carrying Texas Congressman Mickey Leland and 14 other people — there were no survivors.

Ten years ago: On the eve of the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles, 3,500 protesters demonstrated against police brutality and in support of Mumia Abu-Jamal, on death row for killing a Philadelphia police officer. Somalia swore in legislators for its first central government after almost a decade of internecine warfare.

Five years ago: The Pentagon said for the second time since the Iraq war began that it was replacing body armor for U.S. troops in Afghanistan and Iraq, citing a need for better protection. Former New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange died in Auckland at age 63.

One year ago: The Philadelphia Eagles signed Michael Vick to a one-year deal, prompting criticism from animal rights activists over his role in a dogfighting ring. NFL commissioner Roger Goodell suspended Cleveland Browns receiver Donte Stallworth for the entire season after Stallworth served 24 days in jail for DUI manslaughter in the death of 59-year-old Mario Reyes in Miami. Guitar virtuoso Les Paul died in White Plains, N.Y. at 94.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Live as long as you please, you will strike nothing off the time you will have to spend dead."

— Michel de Montaigne

All instruction books on card play are unanimous on the importance of thinking before you play to trick one, particularly from dummy. Would you have gotten today's hand right? Look at just the North-South hands while forming your plan.

Against your no-trump game, West leads the heart king. If you duck, as you should, West will switch to the spade 10. Suppose you win and play three rounds of diamonds. West wins the third round and presses on with a second spade. You win in dummy and duck a club. East takes this and plays a third spade. You win this, take the club ace, cash your good diamond, and lead dummy's heart nine, ducking it to West. He will be endplayed, forced to lead into your heart tenace to give you nine tricks. Nicely played! Well, not so nicely, because West meanly allows your heart nine to hold the trick. This is your eighth trick only, and all dummy has left are clubs, so East must make the last two tricks.

Technically, you could have avoided this by ducking a club before playing on diamonds — but why would you do that? No, the simplest thing of all would have been to unblock dummy's heart nine at trick one under the king. After all, when you think about it, it is a card that is not likely to be useful to you. Now, in the ending, when you lead a heart to West, he can no longer duck the trick and is endplayed.

ANSWER: Facing a takeout double of a weak-two bid, you have the values for game, but no reason to assume that your hand is overburdened for defense against diamonds. Passing might work out, but the middle-of-the-road action is just to bid three no-trump.

IF AUGUST 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next month, you would be extremely wise to concentrate on business, career and finances and put your love life temporarily on the back burner. Acting on impulse can turn off loved ones and a minor misunderstanding can get blown out of proportion unless you bend over backward to be accommodating. A new hookup could endlessly complicate your life. Luckily, you seem to have an angel on your shoulder guiding you to make the right decisions. Throughout the winter months you must thoroughly explain your motives and actions to significant others to prevent misunderstandings. You might be overly sensitive to your surroundings as well as to chemicals so cut your aspirin dosage in half if dealing with vague people gives you a headache. Next May is the very best time to lay out future plans and make crucial decisions.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are about to embark upon a journey of self-discovery and exploration. Spend time getting to know new people so that you may better understand yourself. Get the most out of what others say.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Doors to new experiences are opening all around you. Any knowledge gained is good knowledge, so don't be too picky about where your travels take you. Acquire some names to put in that little black book.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Everyone always roots for a winner. You are surrounded by those who hope that your good fortune and strong outlook will rub off on them. Don't be a wallflower; accept invitations for a night out and have some fun.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): After a busy workweek, it's time to kick back and relax. Surround yourself with loved ones and enjoy the simpler pleasures in life. Romantic escapades can be spiced up with spontaneity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. There's no need to go out of your way to try and improve a situation that's already fine the way it is. Your adventurous nature may lead you to exotic new places.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be one of the gang. Those who ring you on the phone or show up at your door will act as a healthy tonic for your mental well being. Enjoy an adventure out on the town with a group of good friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep your eyes peeled. Tonight you are on the hunt for new hookups or contacts — and especially those tuned in to their surroundings will find success. Use your gift of gab to the fullest advantage.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): All work and no play makes you dull. File away work until Monday and dedicate time to the art of fun. Meet a special someone for a quiet rendezvous or live it up with the old gang.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Whether you think you can or you think you can't, you are correct. Success depends on your attitude today. Stay focused on discovering beneficial situations or people who can offer valuable aid.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money won't burn a hole in your pocket, but it may collect cobwebs. It will be worth it to spend a few bucks on something frivolous or fun simply for the value of the break it creates in daily monotony.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can't always have it your way. Don't take it as an act of war simply because someone doesn't want to go along with your plans. Live and let live. Give a loved one a little room to roam.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): In the kingdom of the blind, the one-eyed man is king. Take full advantage of any inside information you can access and hold power over those around you. Be objective where business is concerned.

DEAR ABBY: My 6-year-old daughter, "Meg" has severe eczema. She's highly allergic to a long list of things, including dogs. Recently, at a basketball court and at an outdoor restaurant, we encountered some dog owners who refused to pull their dogs back after I informed them about her allergy. Both said, "It's a public place!" as if my daughter should not be in public. One man even argued that my child "couldn't possibly" be allergic to his poodle.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I take my children out in public often, and I never allow them to touch other people. Why can't dog owners understand the concept? Other than avoiding public areas that are dog friendly, and pulling my daughter away whenever she's touched by a dog, what can I do?

— MOM KNOWS BEST, IRVINE, CALIF.

DEAR MOM: The idea that dog owners would fail to pull their animals back after being told someone was highly allergic shocks me. However, because you can't make everyone behave responsibly, you will have to "dog proof" your daughter.

At 6, she's old enough to understand the reason she's broken out and itching is because she came in contact with one of the things to which she is allergic. Teach her to stay out of reach and to announce loudly, "Please hold your dog back! I'm allergic!" when the situation calls for it. And if you are with her and see someone with an animal approach, YOU should take the initiative and say emphatically, "My daughter is highly allergic to dogs. PLEASE keep it away from my child!"

And while I'm at it, no child — or adult — should ever touch a strange dog without the owner's permission because you never know how the animal might react.

DEAR ABBY: I work at the front desk of a construction company. My work area is located in the lobby. I'm responsible for greeting visitors, answering the phone, typing letters and other administrative tasks. The only thing separating me from the visitors is a 12-inch-high counter that surrounds my desk.

Quite often, visitors must wait several minutes for the person they're seeing to come to the lobby. When they do, they often plant both arms on the counter, drape themselves over the top and scan every piece of paper on the surface of my desk, including what's showing on my computer screen. They also try to converse with me while I'm trying to work and answer the phone. I find this rude, inappropriate and an invasion of my personal work space.

How can I convey this to visitors without coming across as rude and jeopardizing the company's relationship with them? Desk modifications are not an option.

— BITING MY TONGUE IN UPSTATE NEW YORK

DEAR BITING YOUR TONGUE: Ask your boss how sensitive the correspondence you are handling is, and explain that it is being viewed by clients who walk in. Some offices handle the problem by keeping documents face down when they are not being worked on. Also, consider tilting your computer monitor and installing a privacy screen to block the view.

Because client relations is part of your job description, do not allow your annoyance at chatty clients to show. Smile and say, "I'd love to talk, but I have a ton of work I have to finish. Would you like a magazine-newspaper-water while you wait?" If that doesn't do the trick, find out from your boss which of your tasks takes precedence.
