

Rhetoric dims hope for Social Security compromise

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Prospects were bleak for fixing Social Security's financial problems as the government retirement insurance program celebrated its 75th anniversary, Saturday.

Many Democrats adamantly oppose any cut in benefits to reduce costs and some won't accept a gradual increase in the retirement age, something that was done in the last overhaul in 1983. Republicans say an increase in Social Security taxes is out of the question, even for the wealthy.

Unless Congress acts, Social Security's combined retirement and disability trust funds are expected to run out of money in 2037. At that point, Social Security will collect enough in payroll taxes to cover about three-fourths of the benefits.

The rhetoric is creating a tough environment for President

Obama's bipartisan fiscal commission to come up with recommendations to improve the government's troubled finances. Obama says everything should be on the table, and the commission's co-chairmen — a Republican and a Democrat — have asked for civil discourse.

Not likely.

Social Security has been, is and will continue to be potentially deadly for the career of any politician who dares touch it.

While Obama's commission was holding its latest meeting, dozens of House Democrats gathered on the steps of the Capitol to accuse Republicans of trying to wreck Social Security by creating private accounts, an idea with little support in Congress since former President George W. Bush unsuccessfully tried it.

"Probably the months before an election are not the time to try to negotiate Social Security," said John Rother, executive vice president of AARP.

The commission's proposals are due in December, after congressional elections in November.

Despite the rhetoric, many experts think policymakers will eventually settle on a compromise: small cuts in future benefits coupled with small tax increases.

"You could put 10 moderates in a room and they could come up with a package in a day that solved the

Shelter fundraiser offers pet psychic and pet shampoos

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Sarah "Fergie" Ferguson consulted a psychic last week and learned her money worries would end, according to a British newspaper.

On Saturday, another Fergie consulted a psychic and was told it was OK that she didn't like cats.

The namesake of the Duchess of York was an English setter whose owners were among dozens who brought their dogs to see animal communicator Robyn Romney and get a shampoo and rinse at the Pet Psychic and Dog Wash fundraiser for the Twin Falls Animal Shelter. For $5, owners could sit with Romney for 15 minutes and hear her explanations of what went through their dogs' minds.

Romney greeted many breeds, from Chihuahuas to chocolate labs, in the courtyard gazebo of the Wynwood at Twin Falls, an assisted living facility. Executive Director Sunya Grantham said her staff has organized fundraisers for many groups during the facility's 13 years as a way to give back, but this was the first with a psychic.

After one of her volunteers mentioned Romney during a spring brainstorming session, an event with Romney seemed a perfect match for the Animal Shelter, Grantham said. So she approached shelter director

Judge to hear Rock Creek lease-purchase plan
New station would cost $2.24 million over 15 years

Times-News

A state judge will hear arguments today for the Rock Creek Rural Fire Protection District's plan to enter in a $2.24 million, 15-year lease-purchase agreement for a new fire station.

The district's board of commissioners voted to pursue judicial confirmation for the debt at a June meeting. The board indicated tax rates would not rise due to the almost $150,000 annual payments on the planned 15,500 square-foot building. At the end of the 15 year agreement, the fire district would have the option of buying the building for $1.

The hearing will be at 9 a.m. at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 427 Shoshone St. N., Twin Falls.

At the June meeting, the district's lawyer said "a new fire station is simply required" to meet increasing demands. Battalion Chief Jason Keller said calls had increased 65 percent in the past three years.

The fire district covers about 200 square miles in eastern Twin Falls County and in northwest Cassia County.

The planned building would include more area for housing, more vehicle docks and more training room.

The fire district had won a $350,000 community block grant earlier this year for the project, but it will instead go toward buying a new fire engine.

Glanbia gives $1M

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Kim Koxx said the money has changed the lives of hundreds of students.

A million dollars ago in 1994, a golf tournament was started by Glanbia Foods with the expectation to raise $10,000 for a charity. They raised $20,000 the first year, and this year the cheese manufacturer reached the $1 million mark for local non-profit organizations.

"I don't know what we thought would happen after the first tournament," Glanbia CEO Jeff Williams said. "People don't seem to get tired of it and it's such a great setting down at Blue Lakes."

Today, 192 golfers, all Glanbia customers and suppliers, will play the course and know that their $500 entry fees have gone to help five different organizations. Blue Lakes Rotary Club, Twin Falls Education Foundation, Victory Home, Safe Kids Magic Valley and Mercy Housing will all receive a part of the $100,000 after the golf tournament is over.

Over the past 16 years, Glanbia has donated to more than 50 local non-profit groups.

Magic Valley School of Performing Arts received money in 2008, and Director

"It has not been our theory to hang on to the donation. We've been blessed with the money so we can bless others," Koxx said.

The school has given away somewhere between 50 to 75 individual scholarships for dance, drama and voice lessons. A group of art students were able to travel to a camp for underprivileged children in Florida to help them foster performing art appreciation.

Koxx said it has been a trickle-down effect that has not only helped children in the Magic Valley but across the nation.

Williams said the process to apply for the money is as simple as writing a statement about an organization's needs and services to the Magic Valley. The committee decides in April what charities to invite in to give presentations and then choose from there.

Williams said it has been easy to get sponsors and golfers for the event.

"In light of the current economy we filled up faster than we did last year," Williams said. "We've tried to keep it affordable for our suppliers."

Rhetoric

long-term problem and combined tax increases and spending cuts," said William Gale, an adviser to President George H. W. Bush's Council of Economic Advisers and now co-director of the Tax Policy Center. "It's not that hard to do."

Social Security's short-term finances are being hurt by a recession that shed more than 8 million jobs, reducing revenue from the payroll taxes that support the program. Social Security's long-term finances will be strained as the 78 million baby boomers reach retirement age — and live longer as life expectancy increases.

For the first time since the 1980s, Social Security is paying out more money in benefits than it collects in payroll taxes. The program is projected to post surpluses again in 2012 through 2014 but will return to permanent deficits in 2015, its trustees said in their annual report last week.

The disability program is in even worse shape. The disability trust fund is projected to be exhausted by 2018, meaning Congress will have to act soon to address it.

The combined trust funds have built up a $2.5 trillion surplus over the past 25 years. But the federal government has borrowed that money over the years to spend on other programs. The government must now start borrowing money from public debt markets — adding to the federal budget deficit — to repay Social Security.

Over the next decade, the federal government will pay Social Security more than $1.5 trillion in interest, though the transfers are essentially an accounting procedure, switching money from one government account to another.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act into law on Aug. 14, 1935. This year, more than 53 million people receive a total of $700 billion in benefits. Retirement benefits average $1,100 a month and disabled workers get an average of $1,065.

In 75 years, 122 million people — one-fourth of the U.S. population — will be drawing benefits.

Social Security is financed by a 6.2 percent payroll tax on wages below $106,800. The tax is paid by workers and matched by employers.

Older Americans can apply for early retirement benefits, starting at age 62. They qualify for full benefits if they wait until they turn 66, a threshold that is gradually increasing to 67 for people born in 1960 or later.

Social Security would be made solvent for another 75 years if payroll taxes were increased by about 1 percentage point for both workers and employers. It would also be fixed if Congress started taxing all wages, not just those below $106,800.

About 23 percent of the shortfall would be gone if Congress gradually increased the full retirement age from 67 to 68, according to the Senate Special Committee on Aging. Nearly a third of the shortfall would disappear if it was gradually increased to 70.

House Republican Leader John Boehner of Ohio recently suggested increasing the full retirement age to 70. Democrats slammed Boehner, even though House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer, D-Md., made a similar suggestion in a speech the week before.

"It's an important program for millions of Americans, tens of millions of Americans, and if we don't fix it, it will not be there," Boehner said later. "I understand that these subjects get to be rather sensitive, and especially in an election year. I was not at all surprised by the attacks that came my way."

Among the first to attack Boehner was House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif. She was asked later if she was hamstringing Obama's fiscal commission by publicly opposing an increase in the retirement age.

"That would be my goal, but I don't think I have that much influence in what they do," Pelosi said. "They are an independent commission appointed by the president. They have to do what they have to do."

Chatburn said there are still horse races along with many of the other events and activities that were held a century ago when the county fair first started in Albion.

"The face of the fair itself hasn't really changed all that much, but every aspect of it has progressed," Chatburn said. "The one thing that hasn't changed is the people who volunteer each year to keep it going."

Chatburn said everyone seems to have something that draws them into the fair each year, whether it's livestock, crops or the rodeos.

"It takes all kinds of people to make something like this work, from the women who bring in the apple pies to the people who bring in the art," Chatburn said. "People who don't take the time to look at all of the things at the fair are really missing out."

Dean and Marge Draper were chosen as Grand Marshals of the parade this year because of their years of community service, Chatburn said.

Dean Draper also served as a fair board member and as manager of the fair board and fairgrounds for several years and served as president of the Idaho State Fair and Rodeo Association.

Cassia County 4-H Program Coordinator Rosie Davids said they have introduced a couple new projects during this centennial year that include quilling, which is the art of paper filigree, and two consumer-education programs called Vintage and Nifty but Thrifty.

Cassia County Fair Open Class Superintendent Linda Renz said the open class building will be more interactive this year with special contests such as guessing how many pieces of penny candy are in a jar and a game similar to "Where's Waldo," where people will have to spot objects placed around the building for prizes.

Renz said to celebrate the centennial they will be giving out special best of division rosettes along with the 64 other awards in open class.

"I get really excited just coming and seeing how this building transforms," Renz said. "But Tuesday night is my absolute favorite. At 6:30 p.m., when we open that door, people just stream in and the children especially just run to see what ribbon they got."

Chatburn said to prepare for the 100th year anniversary the fair board created new commemorative entryways at the main entrance and the entrance on Main Street. A special waterfall was built by the Main Street entrance and will be turned on for the first time during the week.

The fair board also is selling commemorative numbered belt buckles for $125 or $150 if the buyer wants a chance at getting one of the first 10.

"To be on the fair board for this 100-year celebration means a lot to each one of us," Chatburn said. "And the one thing we are most proud of is that in 100 years no one has ever paid a dime to get into the gate."

Debbie Blackwood after Romney said she'd donate her time.

"I just couldn't believe there was an animal communicator in Twin," Grantham said. "And we know the shelters are struggling."

"Luckily, adoptions are up and we're doing OK," Blackwood said. "But I'm on pins and needles all the time."

Blackwood said the shelter's budget has been frozen for three years, and they have spent $71,000 helping animals this year. She said if the Humane Society hadn't co-sponsored the shelter, it might not have survived. Help from groups like Wynwood play a big part too.

"This event allows pet owners to gain information from a knowing person and helps homeless animals. You can't lose."

— Debbie Blackwood, director of the Twin Falls Animal Shelter

"This event allows pet owners to gain information from a knowing person and helps homeless animals," Blackwood said. "You can't lose."

Animal communicators claim to use telepathy to read animals' thoughts. While some might consider that a bit flaky, owners who talked with Romney Saturday were surprised at the accuracy of her comments. And while Romney often spoke for each person's pet, some advice dealt more with the owner than the pet.

Grantham is Fergie's owner and said she tried not to say much during her session so she wouldn't give too much away. But Romney pegged some details anyway, Grantham said.

"It all seemed to make sense to me," Grantham said. "Fergie does not like the cats — officially"

Marion Semple brought Toby, her 7-year-old bichon frise, but didn't have any specific questions.

"He seems awfully smart so I just want to find out what he thinks," Semple said.

Romney picked up Toby and said that Toby said Semple takes better care of him than herself, to which Semple answered a sheepish, "Maybe."

"He's here to teach you to love yourself as much as he loves you," Romney said. "He says when you go home, you'll cry."

Later, Semple said she was pleased with Toby's session.

"She did make me cry," Semple said. "But it was good."

Joe Hilzendager Jr., left, and his brother Ralph, reminisce at Joe's Oakhurst, Texas, home on June 21 about their deceased brother Allen who was murdered in his Point Blank, Texas, liquor store. Claude Jones was executed in 2000 for the 1989 murder.

DNA test may cast doubt on executed Texan's guilt

By Jeff Carlton

Associated Press writer

POINT BLANK, Texas — Claude Jones may have been wrongly executed for the 1989 slaying of a liquor store owner in this aptly named Texas town, but no one says he's an angel.

He was a lifelong criminal, with a rap sheet that included a murder conviction for setting fire to a fellow inmate in a Kansas prison. Two eyewitnesses and his accomplices placed him at the liquor store. And even one of Jones' attorneys says the defense had "a devil of a time finding a good character witness."

But there are new questions 10 years after Jones was executed about whether he actually killed 44-year-old Allen Hilzendager while robbing the store, and whether the testimony used to convict him was enough. A judge has ordered DNA testing on a strand of hair that prosecutors used to link Jones to the murder.

It's the second time in a year the guilt of an executed Texas inmate is in doubt. A fire expert last year said the investigation of the fire that killed Cameron Todd Willingham's three daughters was so flawed that the arson finding can't be supported. Willingham was executed in 2004. Last month, a state panel concluded that arson investigators were not negligent.

"He was no poster boy, Claude," said Jerald Crow, Jones' trial attorney. "But that doesn't matter. The law is the law, and they need to follow it."

Under Texas law, a defendant can't be convicted on accomplice testimony without corroborating evidence. The hair collected from the liquor store was the key evidence supporting the testimony of an accomplice who implicated Jones.

A DNA test that shows the hair came from someone else wouldn't exonerate Jones. But it could show the state didn't have enough to convict or execute Jones, who was put to death in 2000 at age 60.

Whether the hair was Jones' is irrelevant to Hilzendager's three surviving siblings, who live in separate homes on the family's old dairy farm. Allen's house, tucked among the trees, remains half-finished.

"There's no doubt in my mind he did it," said Joe Hilzendager Jr., 73.

Jones was guilty of plenty. Before his 20th birthday, he already was serving nine years for burglary, theft and robbery by assault. Over the next nine years, he added theft, first-degree robbery and possession of a firearm to his record.

A change of scenery didn't help. A Kansas court sentenced him to 21 years behind bars, and it was in a Kansas prison that he poured a flammable liquid on a man and set him ablaze. He was sentenced to life in prison.

A family member points out Allen Hilzendager, center, in an old family snapshot in Oakhurst, Texas, on June 21.

But by 1989, Jones was free on parole, back in Texas and hanging out with ex-con Danny Dixon, who authorities say shot a girl between the eyes and buried her in a cemetery.

They decided to rob the liquor store located just outside of Point Blank, population 559, on a rural road near the Sam Houston National Forest. Besides selling booze, Hilzendager cashed paychecks for customers. That meant he had a lot of money in the store.

Court documents and police records tell the story.

Jones, Dixon and another man drove up to the store, where Hilzendager was outside loading boxes into his vehicle. Jones got out, put his arm around Hilzendager and escorted him inside.

The first shot was to the back, severing an artery and puncturing a lung. The second hit Hilzendager in the right shoulder, likely as he was holding up his hands. The third struck him in the side as he lay on the ground.

A puddle of red spread around Hilzendager, soaking his jeans and blue plaid shirt. Blood dripped down a bottle of Seagram's gin and splattered the wall behind the shelf of Crown Royal.

Jones cleaned out the register, not seeing two bank bags stuffed with $7,000 and a firearm beneath the counter. He walked out, changed his mind and returned for a bottle of whiskey. Then the three men left.

Two witnesses, who were fixing a car across the street, identified the heavyset Jones. But it was something else that convinced Sheriff Lacy Rogers of the identity of the triggerman.

"Claude Jones was definitely the shooter," Rogers said. "(Dixon) would shoot you if you pulled a gun or something. Yeah, he'd shoot you. But Danny Dixon is not the kind of guy that shoots you in the back."

Jones was arrested less than a month later in Florida after robbing a bank. Dixon led the sheriff to the gun, which he had ditched in the Trinity River. A forensics expert said a strand of hair in the store could have come from Jones but not from the other men.

Prosecutors also hammered home Jones' brutal past. A jury quickly convicted him. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals barely upheld the conviction with a 4-3 vote.

Judge Charles Baird said the case relied too strongly on the testimony of the accomplice, "who seemed entirely capable of committing the crime himself."

"There was just something in my gut that told me this didn't pass the smell test," Baird said. "I was always afraid this was an innocent guy on death row."

Seven state and federal courts reviewed Jones' case, and none halted the execution.

Jones' final statement was an apology, but not a confession.

"To your family, ah, I hope that this can bring some closure to y'all," he said. "I am sorry for your loss and hey, I love all y'all. Let's go."

But up to his death, he denied being the triggerman to his lawyer and his son. Duane Jones of Houston said his father freely confessed to all of his past crimes. Just not this one.

The hair is being tested because Duane Jones — along with the Innocence Project, other innocence groups and The Texas Observer magazine — sought temporary restraining orders preventing its destruction.

"If you are going to be the execution capital of the free world, then you should take every opportunity available to make sure the system is above reproach," Duane Jones said.

Cowboy Field may get facelift

Times-News

Cowboy Field's baseball facilities may be getting an update this year, if the Twin Falls City Council approves an $84,000 bid from Darren Hall Construction or one of the other, more costly bids.

Original cost estimates for the project — which includes replacing the concession stand and score booth, installing a press box, replacing asphalt with concrete and paver bricks, and adding trees — put the cost at $140,000. The city set aside $70,000 to match half the costs with the Twin Falls County Youth Baseball Trust, meaning the lower estimate would put the city's tab at about $42,000.

The council will vote during its normal 5 p.m. meeting today at 305 Third Ave. E., Twin Falls.

Other agenda items include:

- A smattering of grant offers for Magic Valley Regional Airport as it embarks on a slurry seal project and a master plan update. The council will also consider making Riedesel Engineering the consultant engineering firm during the improvement projects.

- Eliminating sign fees for temporary signs for nonprofit and noncommercial events.

Free hair cuts for guardsmen

Times-News

Brad Burgess is going to be giving back by taking something away: the long locks of the civilian world.

Burgess and the Perrine Barber Shop, 115 Shoshone St. N. in Twin Falls, will be open to all guardsmen Monday for a free hair cut before their deployment. The shop is closed to all non-guardsmen.

The 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team, which includes about 1,500 Idaho guardsmen and about 200 from the Magic Valley, will begin a yearlong deployment to Iraq in September.

Burgess said he and his partner plan to give as many free haircuts as they can, despite the shop typically being closed on Mondays. Many guardsmen are regular customers and some are friends, Burgess said. The event is to show his and his partner's appreciation for the guardsmen's service, he said.

Tea party activists rally on Arizona-Mexico border

By Jonathan J. Cooper

Associated Press writer

"Mister President ... Secure This Border For America!"

A federal judge has put on hold the most contentious provisions of the law, including a section that would require officers to check a person's immigration status while enforcing other laws if they had "reasonable suspicion" that the person was in the country illegally.

Among those speaking at the rally Sunday was Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio, known for his tough enforcement of immigration laws in Arizona's most populous county. He said immigration enforcement goes far beyond the nation's border and the Mexican Government should welcome U.S. border patrol or military forces to go after drug cartels south of the border.

HEREFORD, Ariz. — Tea party groups converged on a remote section of the U.S.-Mexico border on Sunday to show support for Arizona's controversial new immigration law.

The group was gathered about 70 miles west of Nogales on a private ranch where 15-foot steel posts are set closely together to prevent people from crossing the border.

Demonstrators attached hundreds of U.S. flags with messages about curbing illegal immigration to the posts and chanted, "U-S-A," after a handful of spectators gathered on the Mexico side of the border.

One of the messages posted on the border wall read,

Workers push an overturned off-road race truck upright early Sunday after it went out of control and ran into a crowd of spectators during a race in Lucerne Valley, Calif., on Saturday. At least eight people were killed during the incident about 100 miles east of Los Angeles.

Driver, some victims identified in deadly crash in Mojave Desert

By Phil Willon and David Zahniser
Los Angeles Times

LUCERNE VALLEY, Calif. — Authorities said eight people were killed and 10 injured when a driver racing in the California 200 desert race in Lucerne Valley lost control of his off-roader, which went airborne and landed on top of spectators. The driver, who was uninjured, and seven of the eight people killed were identified Sunday by officials. The driver “got airborne and, when he landed, rolled over straight into the spectators,” said Officer Joaquin Zubieta of the California Highway Patrol, the agency investigating the deadly crash. “People didn’t have much of a chance ... to get out of the way.” Six spectators died at the scene. Nine others were airlifted to local hospitals, two of whom died later in the evening, Zubieta said. Of those hurt, five sustained major injuries and five had minor injuries, officials said. Brett M. Sloppy, of San Marcos, Calif., was the driver of the truck, according to Zubieta. Sloppy, 28, lost control of his modified 2000 Ford Ranger while he was driving 45 to 50 miles per hour. He was not arrested, and alcohol was not a factor in the crash, officials said. The San Bernardino County coroner’s office identified seven of the dead: Brian Wolfen, 27, of Escondido, Calif.; Anthony Sanchez, 23, of Escondido, Calif.; Aaron Farkas, 25, of Escondido, Calif.; Andrew Therrin, 22, of Riverside, Calif.; Zachary Freeman, 24, of Fillmore, Calif.; Dustin C. Malson, 24, of Ventura, Calif.; and Danica Frantzich, 20, of Las Vegas. Witnesses to the crash described a chaotic scene where the victims had no time to flee as the out-of-control vehicle plowed into fans. Jeff Musgrave, an off-roader from Orange County, Calif., who was watching the race, called it gruesome but defended the driver. “All I saw was the dust, and then I saw about 30 people on the ground. It was just brutal,” Musgrave, 43, told The Los Angeles Times. “The problem is the crowd was just too close. I don’t think the (racer) did anything stupid. He just hit it way too hard.” Sloppy had to be escorted away from the area after the crowd “started to get rowdy,” Zubieta said. “People were upset.” The 200-mile race, held on desolate Soggy Dry Lake on federal desert land just east of the San Bernardino Mountains, was sanctioned by Mojave Desert Racing and was part of a seven-race circuit. Off-roaders race around the 50-mile-long loop four times, reaching speeds upward of 60 mph. A photographer at the race described a scene of devastation. “There was dust everywhere, people screaming, people running,” David Conklin told The Associated Press. “When I got up to the vehicle, I could tell that several people were trapped. There were just bodies everywhere. One woman with a major head wound (was) lying in a pool of blood. Someone else was crushed beneath the car.” In the early-morning hours Sunday, the white Ford Ranger had remained at the scene, upside down, as CHP investigators crawled over the vehicle to search for any mechanical defects and to try to re-create the collision. Sponsorship decals plastered the sides of the truck. The area had been cordoned off with crime-scene tape through the night, and officers brought banks of lights to provide illumination as investigators combed the patch of desert. Officers continued to interview witnesses, competitors and race officials well into the early morning. The spot where the racer lost control was called the “rock pile.” The track snakes between giant boulders and up a small hill — sending many of the off-roaders airborne. On Saturday, hundreds of spectators had been crowded around the site where the vehicle landed, some just a few feet from the main dirt track. Empty beer bottles and water bottles littered the area where the deadly collision occurred. Online videos of previous races of the California 200 show spectators standing dangerously close to the speeding off-road vehicles, with no concrete barriers separating them from the cars.

Kentucky bans insurers from keeping survivors’ cash

By David Evans and Hui-yong Yu
Bloomberg News

Kentucky’s insurance regulator has prohibited life insurers in the state from automatically retaining death benefits in their corporate general funds and issuing so-called checkbooks to the survivors. “We believe in consumers having choices,” said Kentucky Insurance Commissioner Sharon Clark in an interview at the National Association of Insurance Commissioners meeting in Seattle Saturday. “We’re trying to be as proactive as we can.” Regulators are under pressure to change industry practices after Bloomberg Markets magazine reported in July that carriers profit by holding and investing $28 billion owed to beneficiaries. Retained-asset accounts allow insurers to keep the proceeds of a life insurance policy in their general corporate accounts, earning investment income, while providing the beneficiary with a checkbook account that’s not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Clark issued her advisory opinion in Kentucky on Aug. 13. Under it, insurance companies also are required to provide a new contract with complete disclosure on retained-asset accounts. Unless beneficiaries agree to that contract, payment must be made by check, rather than by setting up a retained-asset account, she said. Clark said her office will consider it to be an “unfair claims settlement practice” for an insurer to place life insurance proceeds in a retained-asset account without a beneficiary’s consent. Bloomberg reported this is a common practice among life insurers, including the nation’s largest, MetLife Inc. and Prudential Financial Inc. The NAIC on Aug. 6 formed a special task force to consider retained-asset accounts. The joint working group, which includes representatives of the NAIC’s life insurance and annuities committee and the market regulation and consumer affairs committee, will meet today. “If anything comes out of (today’s) meeting, my best guess is it would be a recommendation for a uniform disclosure agreement regarding the options for consumers,” said Brian Kreger, an insurance lawyer and founding partner of Kreger Beeghly PLLC in Seattle. Kentucky’s Clark said she’s concerned that she doesn’t know how much beneficiary money is held in the state by life insurers. She said she’s begun talking to state legislators about enacting a law requiring insurers to disclose that data. A group of state lawmakers, the National Conference of Insurance Legislators, announced an “opt-in proposal” on Aug. 12 that would require insurers to provide beneficiaries with immediate lump-sum payments. Insurers would be permitted to hold funds in retained-asset accounts only if clients specifically requested them. The proposed legislation would protect consumers, said Robert Damron, a Kentucky representative and president of the lawmaker group. “If the states don’t act, the feds will,” Damron said in an interview at the NAIC conference. “I don’t think any of us want the federal government engaged in regulating these insurance contracts.” Prudential said the accounts help the “vast majority” of survivors who get them. They “provide a place for beneficiaries to safely keep their money while they decide what do with it,” Newark, New Jersey-based Prudential said in an Aug. 12 statement. Prudential said it tells customers that the accounts aren’t insured by the FDIC and that state guaranty funds back the accounts for at least $250,000. The accounts “are backed by the financial strength of Prudential,” the company said.

Kaymer wins PGA in playoff; Johnson out on late penalty

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. — Martin Kaymer won his first major Sunday in a PGA Championship that will be remembered as much for the guy who tied for fifth.

The final stroke of this most bizarre major was Kaymer tapping in from 2 feet to win a three-hole playoff over Bubba Watson.

Equally significant was the 4-iron that Dustin Johnson gently placed in the sand behind his ball on the final hole of regulation at Whistling Straits, unaware that he was in one of more than 1,000 bunkers that litter this lunarlike landscape.

Johnson had a one-shot lead playing the 18th hole when he drove it well right into a tiny patch of sand where the gallery had been walking all week. He grounded his club, thinking it was grass that had been killed under a week's worth of foot traffic. Fans were packed so tight around him that he never gave it another thought.

“Walking up there, seeing the shot, it never once crossed my mind that I was in a sand trap,” Johnson said. “It’s very unfortunate. The only worse thing that could have happened was if I had made the putt on that last hole.”

He missed the 7-foot par putt to seemingly slip into a three-man playoff with Kaymer and Watson. But the two-shot penalty turned his 71 into a 73, and instead of going to a playoff for redemption from his U.S. Open meltdown, Johnson tied for fifth and headed home.

As Johnson was leaving the course, Kaymer was coming up clutch again.

The 25-year-old German holed a 15-foot par putt on the 18th hole in regulation for a 2-under 70 to join Watson (68) at 11-under 277. One shot behind in the playoff, Kaymer made another 15-foot putt for birdie on the par-3 17th, then watched Watson implode.

Watson went from the right rough into the water, then over the green into a bunker. His bunker shot hit the flag, and he tapped in for double bogey. Kaymer chipped out after seeing Watson go in the water, and he hit 7-iron to 15 feet for a two-putt bogey.

“I don’t realize what happened,” Kaymer said. “I just won my first major. I’ve got goose bumps just talking about it.”

It was the cruelest ending to a major since Roberto de Vicenzo signed for a higher score in the final round of the 1968 Masters that was won by Bob Goalby.

Watson was only disappointed for a few minutes until learning he had played his way onto the Ryder Cup team.

For Johnson, this might take far longer to recover from the U.S. Open, where he had a three-shot lead going into the final round, took triple bogey on the second hole and shot an 82.

The final major of the year proved to be the most thrilling over the final hour, even with Tiger Woods long gone before all the excitement began. Woods closed with a 73 and tied for 28th.

For all the clutch putts by Kaymer, however, this PGA Championship came down to the bunkers.

The PGA of America posted a notice in the locker room and on the first tee throughout the week, reminding players that all bunkers will be treated like hazards — even though the ropes go right through the middle of some of them, and fans can pitch a lawn chair in them.

Six years ago in the PGA Championship at Whistling Straits, Stuart Appleby was unaware of the rule and assessed a four-shot penalty.

Johnson never disputed that he grounded his club, yet he was no less stunned to realize he was in a bunker. Inside the scoring room, he could be seen erasing the 5 on this scorecard and changing it to a 7.

49ers rally for 37-17 win over Colts; Tim Tebow makes debut

INDIANAPOLIS — Colts quarterback Peyton Manning made things look easy Sunday. Sixteen plays, 10 points, take a breather.

Everyone else found out how tough the NFL really can be when you’re not the four-time league MVP — even if it is only the pre-season.

Running back Michael Robinson fumbled on the 49ers first play, David Carr was sacked three times and the San Francisco receivers struggled to hold onto Alex Smith’s passes.

Fortunately for San Francisco, Manning’s backup, Curtis Painter, played even worse. The 49ers took advantage of Painter’s three interceptions and a botched hand-off late in the first half, scoring 34 straight points to rally for a 37-17 victory at Indy.

“I think he didn’t play as well as he’d like to, but he needed some help, too,” Colts coach Jim Caldwell said of Painter. “The things that are hidden, dropped passes, the things you need to extend drives, you need guys to do their jobs and we certainly didn’t play as well as we wanted.”

The game did rekindle some old memories, though.

Manning was in mid-season form, going 8 of 10 for 91 yards and leading the Colts to scores on their first two drives just minutes after accepting the MVP trophy.

Smith, who finally emerged last season as the quarterback the 49ers expected, was 3 of 9 for 37 yards and managed only two first downs.

Carr, like Manning and Smith was a No. 1 pick in the draft, finished 9 of 11 for 98 yards with one TD, but was sacked three times and nearly a couple of more — reminiscent of his early days in Houston.

Then there was Painter, whom Colts fans booed mercilessly after he made his NFL debut in December’s loss to the Jets. He was 9 of 19, recovered one fumble, had one tackle and endured even more boos from the half-full stadium just before halftime.

The 49ers actually had more return yards on Painter’s interceptions (11) than Painter threw for (64), and, as Caldwell, noted, it wasn’t all Painter’s fault.

“I thought we were tough physically and mentally and we ran to the ball,” 49ers coach Mike Singletary said. “I thought the guys did a good job overall.”

Clearly, this was not what the Colts wanted to see.

Then again, Indy has never made preseason games a priority.

Pohlman, Shirley victors at Magic Valley Speedway

By Linda Brittsan
Times-New correspondent

Jeff Pohlman may have thought he had been struggling lately with the Mr. Gas Late Models, but it didn’t show at all in Saturday night’s main event race at Magic Valley Speedway.

Pohlman led all but the first eight laps of the 50-lap main event race after taking over from Norm Hatke, who led for the first seven laps and Bruce Quale who led for one.

Linda Brittsan/Times-News

Saturday night’s Quale’s Electronics Jr. Stingers main event race is one that driver Miguel Zapata will not soon forget. After flipping and rolling, Zapata’s car landed upright and fortunately he was able to walk away under his own power with no serious injuries.

Eddy McKean, who was coming off two straight main event wins, had to exit to the pits at lap two with a flat tire and would not be a factor for the remainder of the race.

Bruce Quale was Pohlman’s biggest concern during his sprint to the finish. Tension was high for Pohlman as Quale shadowed throughout the event.

“We have mirrors on the sides of our cars and to see Bruce Quale there every lap, every corner, you know you have to hit your marks. You cannot make any mistakes with Bruce Quale behind you or you’re done. When I caught up to lap traffic those guys were battling for position so I just tried to see who was doing what, and luckily it worked out. It was so nice to have Robbie (Hyde, spotter) on the radio to help remind me to hit my marks and to keep digging.”

Quale’s plan for when he and Pohlman caught up to lap traffic didn’t quite go his way.

“For awhile when they were racing side-by-side in front of me I thought Jeff was going to go one way, and I would go another,” Quale

Woods thinks he could help U.S. Ryder Cup team

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press writer

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. — Tiger Woods still thinks he can help the U.S. Ryder Cup team. It might be the only thing that could salvage yet another year without a major.

Woods matched the longest grand slam drought of his career when he failed to win the PGA Championship. He didn’t even finish seventh or better, which he needed to have any shot of playing his way onto the Ryder Cup squad. U.S. Ryder Cup captain Corey Pavin is to announce his four captain’s picks Sept. 7.

“I think I’ve got a chance of maybe helping out in singles,” Woods said, drawing laughter. “No, I feel like my game is a lot better than it was obviously last week. And given a little bit more time it’s starting to head in the right direction now, which is good. Hopefully Corey will pick me on the team.”

Woods finished at 2-under 286 after a 73 Sunday, his worst round of the week.

The turmoil in Woods’ personal life has spilled over onto the golf course, and he arrived at Whistling Straits following the worst performance of his career. He shot a whopping 18-over 298 and beat only one player in the 80-man field at Firestone — and that’s a course where he’s won seven times.

But Woods got in plenty of practice before the tournament began — Sean Foley, swing coach for Sean O’Hair and Hunter Mahan, was often at his side — and is optimistic he was making progress. He made a brief appearance on the leaderboard Thursday, and his 71 that day was the first time in eight rounds he’d broken par.

He followed that with a 70 in the second round, the first time since the Memorial he’d broken par in consecutive rounds.

But he backed up Saturday and couldn’t maintain his quick start Sunday. After birdies on three of his first four holes, he “hit it awful.”

“I hit my irons really good today. I drove it terrible. Couldn’t quite get it,” Woods said. “I was able to hit my 3-wood well. I just couldn’t get a feel with the driver on how to do that. I was doing it on the range pretty good, but just couldn’t carry it through.”

Still, Woods saw progress in his game. He said he plans to meet with Foley again before deciding whether to work with him on a regular basis. Woods has been without a coach since he parted ways with Hank Haney in May. They had worked together for six years.

The only other coach the world’s No. 1 player employed as a professional was Butch Harmon, which lasted until 2003.

“I like some of the things he had to say about my golf swing and where I needed to go,” Woods said of Foley. “I like the direction because I was able to hit the shots that I used to be able to hit feel wise. The shape of shots, too, which was great. So when you get that kind of contact again it’s good.”

Woods has now gone 10 straight majors with a victory, matching the longest dry spell in his career. He is also winless at any tournament since that Thanksgiving Day car crash that led to tawdry revelations about his rampant infidelities.

Asked if it was too much to ask that he win a major in such a tumultuous year, Woods said no.

Harvick passes Hamlin, holds on to win

By Chris Jenkins
Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — He already had horsepower, handling and the points lead. Now Kevin Harvick has a win this season at a track other than Talladega or Daytona.

Harvick passed Denny Hamlin with 11 laps to go Sunday, then held on to win the NASCAR Sprint Cup series race at Michigan International Speedway.

It's yet another sign that Richard Childress Racing is back after a disappointing 2009, and Harvick is the championship favorite with only three more races left before the Chase.

"Everybody was embarassed last year, and we've really been running pretty well since probably the last six or eight weeks of last year," Harvick said. "It didn't just happen today."

Harvick's No. 29 team gambled by staying on the track instead of making a pit stop during a late caution. It paid off with Harvick's third win of the season and his first this year on a non-restrictor plate track.

The victory was another significant step in the resurgence of Richard Childress Racing — and it came at a track where RCR typically hasn't been very strong.

"Somebody's got to beat Jimmie (Johnson) this year, and it might as well be RCR," Childress said.

AP photo
Kevin Harvick races during the NASCAR Sprint Cup race at Michigan International Speedway in Brooklyn, Mich., Sunday.

Hamlin finished second, followed by Roush Fenway Racing drivers Carl Edwards, Greg Biffle and Matt Kenseth.

Team owner Jack Roush

was back at the track this weekend, days after his release from a hospital following serious injuries in a plane crash.

"It's great," Edwards said.

"We really wanted to get a win for him today, but that's a strong performance for us."

Edwards has finished seventh or better in six straight races and he likes his chances going into the Chase. But nobody has been as consistent as Harvick this season.

"I really don't see how he can't be, really, the favorite going into it," Hamlin said.

With the Chase looming, Hamlin acknowledged that his Joe Gibbs Racing team is lagging behind Harvick and RCR.

"Those guys, they're tough," Hamlin said. "They've really got everything working right now. Their cars are handling really well, and they've got horsepower. Those are two things that are tough to beat."

Harvick isn't embracing the role of championship favorite, saying Johnson is the driver to beat until somebody actually beats him.

"Until you beat that guy, there's no reason to put that pressure on yourselves," Harvick said.

It was a rough day for several Chase contenders. Kurt Busch blew an engine, Mark Martin damaged his car early and spent most of the afternoon running outside the top 30, and Jeff Gordon was in the top 10 when he had a flat tire with 47 laps to go.

Gordon finished 27th, Martin finished 28th and Busch finished 40th.

Hafner's slam helps Indians beat M's

CLEVELAND — Travis Hafner preferred facing hard-throwing Felix Hernandez to a rehab assignment in the minors. Maybe not a smart move, but gutsy.

Hernandez (8-10) walked Shin-Soo Choo to get to Hafner with the bases loaded in the seventh inning. Gutsy, but definitely not smart.

Hafner hit a grand slam in his first game off the disabled list to spur the Cleveland Indians to a 9-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners on Sunday.

BRAVES 13, DODGERS 1
ATLANTA — Troy Glaus hit a three-run homer and finished with four RBIs to lead Atlanta to the big win.

Alex Gonzalez also drove in four runs for the Braves, who improved the majors' best home record to 41-16. Jair Jurrjens (5-4) gave up one run in seven stellar innings.

ROCKIES 6, BREWERS 5
DENVER — Troy Tulowitzki rescued Colorado with a game-ending RBI single after Milwaukee tied it with two unearned runs in the ninth.

NATIONALS 5, DIAMONDBACKS 3
WASHINGTON — Ian Desmond hit a tiebreaking single in the seventh inning, sending the Nationals to the victory.

With the game tied at 3, Adam Kennedy led off the seventh with a single off Jordan Norberto (0-2). He advanced on pinch-hitter Alberto Gonzalez's sacrifice and, after Roger Bernadina popped out, Desmond singled to right for the lead.

ASTROS 8, PIRATES 2
HOUSTON — Pinch-hitter Pedro Feliz hit a two-run double in Houston's four-run sixth inning and the Astros extended Pittsburgh's skid to seven games.

Hunter Pence and Chris Johnson had three hits apiece for Houston, which trailed 2-1 after five innings. Jeff Keppinger had two RBIs.

PHILLIES 3, METS 1
NEW YORK — Kyle Kendrick toyed with New York's sputtering offense into the seventh inning, and the Philadelphia Phillies ended the Mets' miserable week by beating them 3-1 on Sunday night.

ROYALS 1, YANKEES 0
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bryan Bullington, the No. 1 overall draft pick in 2002, threw eight crisp innings for his first major league win, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 1-0 victory over the New York Yankees on Sunday.

Bullington (1-2) allowed two hits, walked one and struck out five to outpitch A.J. Burnett (9-10), who yielded four hits and one run in eight innings. Joakim Soria finished the two-hit-ter, extending his club record with his 26th consecutive save.

TWINS 4, ATHLETICS 2
MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Slowey held Oakland without a hit for seven innings before reliever Jon Rauch gave up the no-hit bid in the eighth as the Twins finished their fifth series weep.

RAYS 3, ORIOLES 2
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jeremy Hellickson threw six sharp innings to become the first Tampa Bay pitcher to win his first three major league starts.

Hellickson (3-0) allowed one run and three hits, and has given up three runs and nine hits over 20 innings in the majors. Carl Crawford homered and drove in two runs to support him.

BLUE JAYS 4, ANGELS 1
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Ricky Romero pitched seven solid innings one day after signing a multiyear contract extension, and Adam Lind homered to lead the Blue Jays.

Romero (10-7) allowed six hits, struck out four and walked three. The only run off the left-hander came in the fifth, when Mike Napoli hit his 19th homer, one shy of last season's total.

RANGERS 7, RED SOX 3
ARLINGTON, Texas — C.J. Wilson dominated into the eighth inning and the AL West-leading Rangers used small ball to go ahead before Michael Young's big hit against Boston.

Young hit a three-run homer in the seventh off Manny Delcarmen to make it 5-0.

TIGERS 13, WHITE SOX 8
CHICAGO — Johnny Damon hit a go-ahead, two-run triple in the eighth inning, Jhonny Peralta homered twice and the Tigers rallied to beat the White Sox.

PADRES 8, GIANTS 2
SAN FRANCISCO — Yorvit Torrealba homered and Miguel Tejada hit a two-run single to back Wade LeBlanc, and the first-place San Diego Padres took a key series from the San Francisco Giants with an 8-2 victory Sunday.

CUBS 9, CARDINALS 7
ST. LOUIS — Derrek Lee homered his first two at-bats, helping Chicago pummel Kyle Lohse and knock St. Louis out of first place in the NL Central.

REDS 2, MARLINS 0
CINCINNATI — Miguel Cairo hit a two-run homer and Homer Bailey filled in admirably for the suspended Johnny Cueto, throwing six impressive innings to help Cincinnati complete the three-game sweep.

The Reds bounced back from getting swept by the Cardinals in their show-down series earlier in the week. Cueto got a seven-game suspension for kicking Cardinals during a said. "I hate to be the leader in those things because you have to make the first move, but he made the right choice. I was looking forward to that, and I thought it would work out."

Kris McKean came through with a last ditch effort to come in second followed by Quale.

Clint Kidd, in his first Late Models race of the season finished fourth just ahead of John Newhouse. Points leader Rick Fowble placed sixth.

BUDWEISER SUPER STOCKS DRIVER SHIRLEY MAKES FIRST TRIP TO WINNER'S CIRCLE

Steve Edens kept his foot on the accelerator to lead the main event for the first half of the Super Stocks race, thwarting off Jimmy Hall's attempts to pass for several laps.

Daniel Shirley, who had earlier set the fastest qualifying time for the night, had worked himself up in the field and took over the challenge for the lead at lap 18.

Appropriately, the No. 23 car of Shirley's was able to take over the front runner position at lap 23.

With Shirley in the lead, the battle for second raged between Edens, Hall and Jeff Pohlman.

Just as Shirley began to have visions of doing victory doughnuts on the front stretch, the caution waved for the spinning car of Kris McKean with just five laps to go. Fortunately for Shirley, he was able to hold off Jimmy Hall after the restart and once he took the checkered flag, the doughnuts were preformed with perfection by the young driver.

"I was a little bit worried when that last caution came out but not too worried," Shirley said. "I didn't think he (Hall) could get me on the outside. But there was dirt or something on turn four and every time I came out of the turn I was afraid I was going to get loose or somebody was going to hit me, but I held on to it. It was a good race. All that was going through my mind at the end was, 'I am going to do a doughnut.'"

HENRY CAPTURES FIRST WIN OF THE SEASON WITH NAPA STREET STOCKS

Vincent Orr stayed out front for the first six laps of the main event but Bruce Henry took over for the remainder of the race.

However, it was no cake walk for Henry as he was stalked by Chase Carraway lap after lap until Carraway spun out late in the contest. John Newell then challenged Henry to the checkered, but would have to settle for second at the finish line.

QUALE'S ELECTRONICS HORNETS DRIVER PECK BACK IN VICTORY LANE

Racing on the full one-third mile oval, Jeff Peck zeroed in on leader Jenna Quale early but couldn't catch up to her until the half-way mark of the main event race.

Andy Brennan was Peck's closest rival throughout the final laps, but Peck would nip Brennan at the finish line by just under one-half second.

Bob Gilligan, who was leading the division in the standings, pulled off the track just two laps into the main event. With a fourth place finish, Ty Garibay has now taken over the lead in the points standings.

QUALE REBOUNDS FOR QUALE'S JR. STINGERS WIN

Jason Quale took the lead of the main event race at lap six, lost it five laps later to Doug Brownfield but muscled his way back to the front with three laps remaining for the win.

The seven young entrants ran an event-filled race with Kristan Gillogly's airbag deploying after a hard hit and later a wild flip and roll in the infield preformed by Miguel Zapata. Although a bit shaken up, Zapata was able to walk away from the incident. Gillogly was later taken to the hospital for observation but was treated and released.

Cincinnati Bengals.

Tebow went 8 of 13 for 105 yards in the second half, with most of the completions and yards coming on the final drive against a soft defense. That one ended with Tebow scrambling 7 yards for a touchdown, running over safety Kyries Hebert to score as time expired.

Kyle Orton was impressive in his preseason debut, throwing two touchdown passes in three series and reminding Broncos fans that he's the one running the offense if not selling the most jerseys.

The Broncos have set several attendance records at training camp — a measure of how quickly Tebowmania has caught on. His No. 15 jersey was already one of the NFL's top sellers before he appeared in his first game on Sunday.

Eight fans clustered around the Broncos' entrance to the field before his debut, decked out in his No. 15.

When he took off his horse-head helmet, Tebow showed a new look. The friar haircut was gone.

Teammate Wesley Woodyard buzzed the top of his head in a rookie ritual during camp, giving him a tonsured 'do that was instantly circulated in the media. For his debut, he trimmed the sides of his head as well, a more traditional look.

Tebow got onto the field late in the third quarter. Receiver Jabar Gaffney gave his fellow Gator a funky handshake on the sideline, and Tebow headed onto the field to loud boos — those Ohio State and University of Cincinnati fans remember how he demolished their teams in bowl games.

A bunch of them snapped photos of the moment, too.

Albertson Foundation saves the day – again

Where would Idaho’s schools be without the Albertson Foundation? Consider this: In the five years before the Great Recession began in 2008, charitable giving in Idaho increased by 239 percent. But excluding grants from the Albertson Foundation, it grew just 70 percent. As meager as things are for Idaho education right now, our state would be trailing Mississippi without the support of the 44-year charitable trust set up by grocer Joe Albertson and his wife Kathryn. The latest case in point: a $100,000 contribution from the Albertson Foundation will allow Idaho high school students to take advanced classes online this fall through the Idaho Digital Learning Academy. The added money will head off unprecedented caps on enrollment imposed because of a 22 percent cut in state funding for the academy. Many Idaho school districts — including several in south-central Idaho — don’t offer Advanced Placement or dual-credit courses, for which students earn both high school and college credit. Others have limited offerings. For these students and others, the IDLA will offer 47 AP or dual-credit classes in the coming school year, ranging from calculus to psychology. But that’s just the tip of the balance sheet for the Albertson Foundation:

- Earlier this year, the trust donated $3 million to help keep the Idaho Education Network afloat.
- In December, it awarded $925,000 grants to nine charter schools in Idaho, including two in the Magic Valley.
- In November, the foundation passed out $11 million in college scholarships — including $1 million to the College of Southern Idaho — as part of its $20 million “Go On” campaign to encourage Idaho high school students to attend college.

This is the same non-profit largely responsible for putting computers in every public school classroom in the state.

Idaho kids are incredibly lucky to have this asset, and so are the Legislature and the state’s education policymakers. The foundation’s board has been willing to step in time and again when budget constraints threatened critical elements of Idaho public education — and never more so than in the past year. One reason the Albertson Foundation giving is so effective is that the institution gets its priorities right, focusing at the moment on Idaho’s dismal retention rates for the state’s high school students who go on to college. About one Idaho high school student in seven will actually go on to earn a degree from one of the state’s public colleges. That’s one reason why we as a state are so ill-prepared to attract the high-tech jobs of the future. And it’s also a reason why higher education isn’t a more urgent priority for Idaho legislators, only 28 percent of whom hold degrees from Idaho colleges and universities. The Albertson Foundation is about leveraging success, and Idaho higher education may be its biggest challenge yet.

Lousy lawmakers, not low taxes, created our woes

You can have low taxes, or you can have an economic recovery, but you can’t have both. That’s the message the administration is hammering this summer. Democrats argue in particular that extending the George W. Bush rate cuts on people in the top tax brackets will damage the budget to such an extent that our economy will suffer.

Amy Shlaes

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner, for example, said that sustaining the Bush tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans would “hurt economic recovery by undermining confidence that we are prepared to make a commitment today to bring down our future deficits.” Some centrists, and even a few conservatives, are talking a similar line. Former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan went further recently, saying all the Bush tax cuts, even those for lower earners, should expire as scheduled at year’s end, since it is wrong to live “on borrowed money.” The argument that we have to choose between keeping the Bush rates on the one hand and achieve an economic recovery on the other is hypocritical. You know that’s true because our leaders aren’t alleging the same trade-off when it comes to federal expenditures. The tax cuts Geithner would like to see expire, those for top earners, cost taxpayers by his own estimate $700 billion over 10 years. Plenty of other items in the federal budget cost $700 billion over 10 years, or a much shorter period. Yet you don’t hear the administration positing apocalyptically that those outlays will darken the future. Only lower tax rates can hurt us, Democrats

In the 1980s, 1990s and the early part of this decade, the supply-siders who had advised President Ronald Reagan made their own case that tax cuts would be partially or completely offset by growth. That turned out to be true. The Reagan tax cuts may have contributed to the deficits of the period, but they more than compensated by speeding growth over all and restoring U.S. competitiveness around the world.

want us to believe. When politicians first announced the entitlement of prescription drugs for seniors, they said it would cost $700 billion over 10 years, for example. President Barack Obama’s stimulus package prices out at about $819 billion. The Democrats’ health-care legislation is supposed to cost $940 billion. Yet you don’t hear the meds or the Obama health-care bill are holding the economy hostage. The reason for the emphasis on taxes is simple: Democrats aren’t willing to consider changes in non-tax areas that might also improve the federal budget. Hiding behind John Maynard Keynes, they argue that the stimulus will generate growth and are therefore worthier than tax cuts. When it comes to entitlepled with enough tax cuts.” But there’s a more accurate rendering of the reality than Stockman’s version: in the past, Republicans liked their tax cuts so much that they neglected to marshal political capital to achieve two of their secondary goals, controlling spending and reforming entitlements. The Grand Old Party failed to stop Congress from increasing outlays one year over the next. More important, Republicans failed to push through entitlement reform when it would have been much easier. This failure, combined with the Democrats’ spending, hurt the economy. Both parties have squandered many chances to undertake entitlement reform. Democrats squandered the opportunity in the 1990s. The nation’s real ailment comes from having swallowed entitlement poison pills, not annual budgeting or even financial crises. Yet lawmakers and commentators are not talking about fundamental entitlement reform. Democrats are scolding tax cutters in the hope of diminishing Republican chances in the next election. What a shame. Taxes aren’t the economy’s big problem.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Children, snakes not meant to mix

The Creepy Crawly article on the Times-News front page is sending the wrong message! Children do not and should not be taught to handle snakes; snakes are not children’s pets. We know you don’t send a child into the street to play or give them a box of razor blades to build a road. Be a parent; use your head. JEAN MUELLER

Right to Work brought freedom of choice

The Times-News’ Monday editorial (Aug. 9) on Right to Work was reminiscent of its editorials on the issue during the heat of the legislative and ballot campaign battle a quarter-century ago. Those of us on the Right to Work Committee and campaign staff used to joke about the Times-News’ editorial support for Right to Work and how predictable it was. Each editorial started out “We support Idaho’s Right to Work legislation, but ...” followed by the entire remainder of the commentary committed to lambasting those of us actually responsible for getting it enacted for having offended the editorial board’s tender sensibilities in one way or another. Similarly, Monday’s editorial once again whined and complained about the tactics and tone of the Right to Work campaign 25 years ago and about the political and economic effects of its passage, without mentioning even once the driving principle and primary motivation behind the law. Individual freedom of choice. It used to be legal in Idaho to discriminate against and fire an individual for refusing to join or pay dues to a union, even when union officials routinely used their compulsory dues to finance candidates and causes the individual forced to pay did not support. Thanks to those of us who ignored the Times-News’ incessant editorial whining about “tone” and “tactics” back in the day, such “pay up or you’re fired” job discrimination is now prohibited by law, and Idahoans are free to choose for themselves whether to join or pay dues to a private association without fearing the threat of being fired either way. Had it been left to the tender souls on the Times-News’ editorial board of the 1980s, or to Steve Ahrens, the former

Idaho Statesman political reporter quoted Monday as sharing your distaste for those who actually got the job done, this landmark individual freedom, civil rights and economic growth legislation would never have been passed. However, we’re deeply grateful to Magic Valley voters who also ignored the Times-News’ constant complaints and voted overwhelmingly in favor of Right to Work in 1986, and we’re gratified that they’ve enjoyed the individual freedom of choice and job growth it’s brought to Idaho in the quarter-century since. GARY GLENN

U.S. Navy says 4 ships robbed off Iraqi coast

By Kim Gamel
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — Gunmen robbed four commercial ships anchored near the southern oil hub of Basra in a rare attack off the Iraqi coast, the U.S. Navy said Sunday.

Two men armed with AK-47 rifles boarded the American ship Sagamore in the vicinity of an Iraqi oil terminal in the northern Persian Gulf at 4 a.m. on Aug. 8, taking computers, cell phones and money from crew members before fleeing the vessel after about 40 minutes on board, according to Lt. John Fage, a spokesman for the Navy's Fifth Fleet in Bahrain.

He said three other ships — the Antigua-flagged Armenia, the North Korean Crystal Wave and the Syrian Sana Star — were also robbed under similar circumstances during a two-hour period starting about 2 a.m. the same day.

Fage said he had no other information about the attackers or their nationalities.

Salah Aboud, head of the country's ports agency, said two Iraqis were arrested after Iraqi naval forces found a boat holding some of the stolen materials during a search of a nearby area.

The seaborne robbery occurred about 20 miles off the port of Umm Qasr in an area patrolled jointly by the U.S. Navy and Iraqi sailors. American vessels in the area for routine security operations, including a guided missile destroyer, responded to the attacks, Fage said.

The attack reflects concerns about an increase in crime in Iraq even as political violence ebbs, but Fage played down concerns it signaled a new threat to commercial traffic in the Gulf.

On July 28, a Japanese oil tanker elsewhere in the Gulf was damaged and one crew member was injured in what the United Arab Emirates said was a suicide bombing.

"We do maintain a constant presence. We do maintain a high state of vigilance in conducting security operations with our Iraqi partners," Fage said in a telephone interview.

Basra, Iraq's second-largest city, which is located near Umm Qasr, has been relatively quiet since a 2008 military crackdown that ended three years of Shiite militia rule, rampant crime and turmoil. The area and the surrounding province contain about 70 percent of Iraq's proven oil reserves of 115 billion barrels.

Violence has dropped sharply in Iraq, but Iraqi security forces and civilians continue to face daily attacks.

At least 14 people were killed and 30 wounded in violence Sunday, according to Iraqi police and hospital officials, speaking on condition of anonymity because they weren't authorized to release the information.

Three leaders of a government-backed Sunni militia that fights al-Qaida in Iraq were killed and a fourth wounded in a drive-by shooting as the men were leaving a mosque in the town of Jurf al-Sakhr south of Baghdad after their morning prayers, officials said.

U.N. chief: Never seen anything like Pakistan floods

By Chris Brummitt
Associated Press writer

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said Sunday he has never seen anything like the flood disaster in Pakistan after surveying the devastation and urged foreign donors to speed up assistance to the 20 million people affected.

Ban's comments reflect the concern of the international community about the unfolding disaster in Pakistan, which is battling al-Qaida and Taliban militants, has a weak and unpopular government, and an anemic economy propped up by international assistance.

"This has been a heart-wrenching day for me," Ban said after flying over the hard-hit areas with President Asif Ali Zardari. "I will never forget the destruction and suffering I have witnessed today. In the past I have witnessed many natural disasters around the world, but nothing like this."

Ban visited Myanmar after Cyclone Nargis devastated the country in May 2008, killing an estimated 138,000 people. He also flew to China's Sichuan province just days after an earthquake killed nearly 90,000 people in March 2008.

The floods that began more than two weeks ago in Pakistan's mountainous northwest have now hit about one-quarter of the country, especially its agricultural heartland. While the death toll of 1,500 is relatively small, the scale of the flooding and number of people whose lives have been disrupted is staggering.

The world body has appealed for an initial $460 million to provide relief, but only 20 percent has been given.

Once the floods recede, billions more will be needed for reconstruction and getting people back to work in the already-poor nation of 170 million people. The International Monetary Fund has warned the floods could dent economic growth and fuel inflation.

"Waves of flood must be met with waves of support from the world," said Ban. "I'm here to urge the world to step up assistance," he said.

President Zardari has been criticized for his response to the disaster, especially for going ahead with a state visit to Europe just as the crisis was unfolding. Zardari has visited victims twice since returning, but images of him at a family owned chateau while in France are likely to hurt him for months to come.

In his first comments to the media since returning, he defended the government.

"The government has responded very responsibly," he said, saying the army, the police, the navy and officials were all working to relieve the suffering. "I would appeal to the press to understand the magnitude of the disaster."

Zardari said it would take up to two years for the country to recover.

Ban said visa restrictions had been eased for humanitarian workers and they now could get visas on arrival at Pakistan airports.

On Saturday, the prime minister said 20 million people had been made homeless in the disaster.

The monsoon rains that triggered the disaster are forecast to fall for several weeks yet, meaning the worst may not yet be over.

U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon talks to children at a camp during his visit to flood affected areas in Muzaffargarh, in central Pakistan on Sunday.

Over the weekend, tens of thousand of people were forced to flee their homes when they were inundated by fresh floods from the swollen River Indus.

While local charities and international agencies have helped hundreds of thousands of people with food, water, shelter and medical treatment, the scale of the disaster has meant that many millions have received little or no assistance. The U.N. has voiced fears that disease in overcrowded and unsanitary relief camps may yet cause more deaths.

Earlier Sunday, survivors fought over food being handed out from a relief vehicle close to the town of Sukkur in hard-hit Sindh province, ripping at each others' clothes and causing such chaos that the distribution had to be abandoned, according to an Associated Press reporter at the scene.

"The impatience of the people has deprived us of the little food that had come," said Shaukat Ali, a flood victim waiting for food.

Waters five feet deep washed through Derra Allah Yar, a city of 300,000 people on the border of Sindh and Baluchistan provinces, said government official Salim Khoso. About 200,000 had fled the city and Khoso said he did not know how they would be fed.

"We are here like beggars," said Mukhtar Ali, a 45-year-old accountant living on the side of a highway along with thousands of other people. "The last food we received was a small packet of rice yesterday and 15 of us shared that."

Soldiers carry a glass crypt holding the bones of Mexico's national heroes to the National Palace in Mexico City, Sunday.

Mexican founders' bones displayed for bicentennial

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico is displaying the bones of 13 of its founding fathers — and one founding mother — at the National Palace as part of its yearlong bicentennial celebrations.

Hundreds of soldiers accompanied the skeletal remains to the Palace on Sunday from Chapultepec Castle, where experts conducted tests confirming they were indeed those of the heroes of the 1810-1821 independence movement.

The bones were removed from crypts under Mexico's Independence monument in May and will be returned in 2011.

Parade watchers tossed flowers at the procession and yelled "Viva Mexico!" as a military band played.

President Felipe Calderon called the celebration of Mexico's heroes an inspiration for citizens to work toward a better nation.

Independence Day is Sept. 16.

"In March of 2008, I decided to have my heart tested when HealthFair was conducting tests near my home. The procedure was fun and painless, but the technician told me I had a problem. My Aorta was 5.7cm, not in the danger zone, but way above normal. I went to a cardiologist to confirm these results and yes indeed I needed surgery. Three months later and I am already back at work. While I am grateful to the surgical team, I owe a big thank you to HealthFair. My father suggested I go for the test, and I am glad I did. I felt fine and there were no symptoms, but yet one day in the near future I would have died.

Funny thing is, I just had an annual checkup and was told I was fine. I suggest everyone reading this to get checked out with HealthFair. This test saved my LIFE!

Peter Maurer

I am 66 years old and went to a HealthFair screening in Plano, TX late in 2008. Your ultrasound tech discovered that my right carotid artery was 75%+ blocked. I was advised to contact my family doctor immediately. I did, and I was referred to a vascular surgeon. I was told that I needed to have surgery on my carotid artery or I would not be around for much longer.

So I am now recovering from carotid artery surgery and the right side is clear. I am on medication to help reduce the plaque on my left side. I will get checked yearly now....

All of this would NOT have been detected if it weren't for your screenings. I am not a regular at the doctor's office. "I'm not sick, I don't need a check-up!" has been my mantra for the past 20 years. Your HealthFair screening saved my life...so THANKS for being there.

ULTRASOUND TESTS OF THE HEART & ARTERIES

Heart Disease Prevention Package

Echocardiogram
Ultrasound Test

♥ Echocardiogram is a video ultrasound of the heart. It may detect enlargement of the heart, valve abnormalities, blood clots and tumors.

Electrocardiogram
(EKG) Test

♥ EKG may detect ischemia, silent heart attack and atrial fibrillation. EKG provides a picture of the electrical activity of the heart.

Hardening of the Arteries
(ASI) Test

♥ Hardened arteries cause the heart to work harder, which leads to vascular disease. ASI test shows the degree of hardening of the arteries.

ALL 3 TESTS

♥ These cardiac tests are painless and non-invasive. Their combined cost is more than $1,300 at most hospitals.

Stroke & Aneurysm Prevention Package

Stroke/Carotid Artery
Ultrasound Test

♥ Many strokes are associated with blockages in the carotid arteries that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Abdominal Aortic
Aneurysm Test
(4-hour fast required)

♥ Abdominal aortic aneurysms form as a result of a weakness in the lining of the artery wall that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Blood Circulation
(Arteriosclerosis) Test

♥ Many adults have leg cramps due to poor circulation. ABI screening measures extremities for peripheral arterial disease.

ALL 3 TESTS

♥ These vascular tests are painless and non-invasive. Their combined cost is more than $1,000 at most hospitals.

More than taste goes into picking eyewear

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Is it the right color? Will you be happy wearing it every day for the next year? Do you like it because it's trendy, or because you really like the way it fits your face?

Those with less-than-perfect vision know the anguish of selecting the perfect frame. Few other accessories are so prominent.

But those cursed with blurry vision are not alone. Employees at optometrist offices are trained to help, taking into account face shape, skin tone, hair color and other factors when advising customers who are selecting eyewear.

Terry Tranmer, owner of Mountain West Optical in Twin Falls, said the first thing his employees look at is a patient's prescription.

"If somebody's wearing a very strong prescription, we would probably want to keep the frame as small as possible," he said. Strong prescriptions require thick lenses, and the bigger the frame, the more overwhelming the lens will be. Small frames help customers avoid the Coke-bottle lens look.

Bifocals and trifocals need slightly deeper lenses than most other prescriptions, rendering some frames off-limits.

"They don't need to be really big, but a little depth helps," said Teresa Major of optometrist Gary Walker's office.

Once the selection is narrowed down, the next step is figuring out style. Lots of factors play into frame selection, said Ann Braga, owner of Ann's Eyewear Boutique in Twin Falls, including natural hair color, skin tone and eye color.

Braga picks frames with the help of software that combines a picture of the customer with the frames. The software shows whether a model's bridge placement is too high or whether the color is too heavy in some places.

"You can see that all in a photograph," Braga said, who declined to name the software.

Tranmer's employees are trained to match frames with skin tone, face shape and hair color. As a general rule, he recommends people stay away from frames that are similar to their face shapes. If a person has a triangular face, for example, a frame that is wide on top and narrow on the bottom will accentuate the chin.

At Walker's office, employees help pick out frames but encourage customers to get feedback from others. Clients can borrow frames from the shop to get input from friends and family, Major said.

But getting opinions from others is sometimes a detriment, Tranmer said. Often, family members are used to seeing their loved one with a specific frame and will unconsciously tell them to go with a similar one, whether it looks good or not.

Another mistake people make is not spending enough on frames.

"They will have $1,100 boots on their feet and they will want to spend 50 bucks on their face,"

Tranmer said.

Personal style plays a role in frame selection. Two men with identical face structures and skin tones might warrant two different frames, depending on their professions and personalities. A banker should avoid any type of tinted lens, which some consider to be shady, Tranmer said, and a car salesperson should have fashionable frames.

"If he's wearing an old, beat-up frame ... it's going to be harder for him to sell a high-end vehicle," he said.

And fashionable frames aren't reserved for big-city customers. Braga travels to conventions in Italy and France once a year to select European eyewear for her store. Braga declined to name the brands she carries, but her website and Facebook page show Robert Cavalli, Coach, Face a Face and Yves Cogan among the designers.

Tranmer has a few European imports as well, like Morel of France.

Running with the Weenies

Running team, Rim 2 Rim linked for nearly a decade

By Amy Huddleston
and Eric Larsen
Times-News writers

Team Weenie.

As monikers go, it's pretty good — snappy, memorable and able to evoke a mental image or two.

But the ever-expanding Twin Falls-based running group is more than a catchy name. What started in 2001 as a quartet of Independent Meat Co. workers who loved to run is now a multistate amalgamation of more than 200 members who've turned distance running into a practice that's as social as it is physical.

"We have members in Alaska, Fort Lauderdale (Fla.), Georgia and Oregon and Washington," Team Weenie founder Bill Greene said. "It just grew and grew. I didn't really push it. It just happened."

As members of the group prepare for this year's Rim 2 Rim race on Sept. 18, they'll continue to look to their 64-year-old head Weenie for guidance and motivation. Greene, who first ran the 7.5-mile Rim 2 Rim race in 1998, is a committee member for the Habitat for Humanity of the Magic Valley fundraiser.

Greene will cheer on the Weenies as they cross the finish line this year in their distinctive red mesh tank tops sporting the Falls Brand logo over the Team Weenie name. The jerseys are a welcome gift to new members, some who run or walk one race per year. Others like Greene, who ran 13 races last year, enter as many as they can.

Mixed into that sea of red jerseys and the up to 325 racers in this year's Rim 2 Rim will be Times-News employees Amy Huddleston and Eric Larsen. We're each running the race for the first time, hoping to get in shape, raise money for Habitat for Humanity, and have some fun along the way.

In the Aug. 30 Healthy & Fit section of the Times-News, Huddleston will take readers into the world of group running, where a little external motivation can help boost results. On Sept. 13, Larsen will take readers along the journey of preparing for that first distance run solo — a pursuit of both mental and physical endurance.

The journey will culminate with the 33rd running of the Rim 2 Rim, which started in 1978 as a fundraiser for the College of Southern Idaho's cross country program.

Karl Kleinkopf, former CSI cross-country coach, said the idea for the event originated with his athletes while they trained in the Snake River Canyon, something he said made his distance runners much stronger.

Kleinkopf said he ran the race four or five times himself across his 25 years of running. While his involvement in its organization ended in 1984, he's glad to see Rim 2 Rim live on and benefit housing efforts in the Magic Valley.

"It couldn't go to a better cause," he said.

Frames

Other designs include Juicy Couture, Armani, Jimmy Chu and Oakley.
While the designers are popular, flaunting them isn't. Displaying brand names on frames was in style two years ago, but now, more and more Mountain West customers ask for eyewear that doesn't say Dior or Gucci, Tranmer said. They do, however, opt for stylized sides of the frames, whether they're jewels or cutout designs.
"But they don't want the bling to say a name,"

Tranmer said.
Thin metal sides have also fallen out of favor, Tranmer said. Thick, heavier frames — a geeky look, Tranmer said — are in. Bright, bold colors are also showing up in eyewear collections.
But in the end, nothing matters more than the person's tastes, Major said.
"You can tell them what you like," she said. "But when it comes down to it, it's what they actually like."

Choosing the right painkiller doesn't have to be a headache

By Melissa Bell
The Washington Post

You've got a headache. What do you do? Among your choices are Tylenol, Advil, Aleve and Bayer. Plus the generic acetaminophen, ibuprofen, naproxen and aspirin. Which one should you take? It's enough to make that minor pain in the neck a full-blown migraine.
The over-the-counter painkillers all fight low fevers and reduce muscle pain, headaches and menstrual symptoms. Choosing between the different types can simply be a matter of personal preference. Each person will likely have one that works slightly better because, contrary to what the Declaration of Independence tells us, all people are not created equal, says Simeon Orekoya, a pharmacist at Morton's Care Pharmacy in D.C. "All body systems are not the same. I can take something and feel nothing. You can take something and feel nauseous."

For most customers, the choice between generics and name brands usually comes down to a question of price or perception. "Generics are oftentimes less expensive, so many patients choose them for cost reasons," D.C. internist Elliot Aleskow says. Others prefer the security of a big-name company manufacturing their medicine. Generic brands can differ by about one-tenth of a milligram in their makeup from name brands, Aleskow says, a difference that is minuscule.

To determine the best painkiller for you, Ariel Green, an internal medicine resident at Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center, says to look at the potential side effects. Though side effects are rare, each medicine can cause different reactions according to a person's medical history or lifestyle choices. For example, acetaminophen can damage the liver, so it's best avoided if you're consuming alcohol, Green says. If you're prone to ulcers, take acetaminophen, because aspirin, naproxen and ibuprofen can cause stomach bleeding.

WHICH PAINKILLER IS BEST FOR YOU?

Here are some guidelines to help you choose which painkiller is best for you:

Generic name: Aspirin
Branded as: Bayer, Bufferin
Best for relieving: Fever, headache

Be careful if:

- You have hemophilia, because aspirin thins the blood and prevents blood clotting.
- You have gastrointestinal bleeding, because aspirin prevents the stomach lining from protecting itself.
- You have children, who should not take aspirin because it has been associated with Reye's syndrome, a potentially deadly disease.

Details: Aspirin is the oldest pain reliever in the gang, patented by Bayer in 1900. Aspirin can be very effective in preventing heart attacks, as it thins the blood. Doctors advise people with a history of heart disease to keep a bottle at hand.

Generic name: Ibuprofen
Branded as: Advil, Motrin
Best for relieving: Swollen muscles, arthritis

Be careful if:

- You have kidney problems. Ibuprofen is metabolized by the kidneys and can damage the organs if taken too often.
- You have hypertension. You should take it sparingly, because it can cause high blood pressure.
- You have diabetes. You can take ibuprofen, but not too often, because diabetes weakens the kidneys.

Details: Take extra care to avoid ibuprofen if you haven't eaten because it can easily irritate the stomach lining.

Generic name: Acetaminophen
Branded as: Tylenol
Best for relieving: Fever and pain
Be careful if:

- You have liver damage or any liver disease. The liver metabolizes acetaminophen, and too much can exacerbate liver damage.
- You are drinking alcohol. The liver also metabolizes alcohol, so if taken in combination with acetaminophen, it can overwhelm the liver.

Details: Ariel Green, a Johns Hopkins resident, says acetaminophen is often her first choice when a patient complains of pain or fever. "It has the least side effects. ... It's our go-to."

Generic name: Naproxen
Branded as: Aleve, Naprosyn
Best for relieving: Menstrual pain
Be careful if:

- You have gastrointestinal problems, because naproxen can irritate the stomach lining.
- You have kidney problems, because naproxen is metabolized by the kidneys and can damage the organs if too much is taken.

Details: Naproxen can be used for sore muscles, but pharmacist Simone Orekoyadoes not think it is as effective as ibuprofen. For women with menstrual pain, he suggests a naproxen with sodium, which will make the medicine more soluble.

Aleskow says that people often forget that over-the-counter medicine can have side effects, especially if taken while they're on other medication. "Being a good consumer means talking with your doctor frankly about the side effects," he says.

Habitual high-heel wearers, your attention, please. You know that feeling you get when you first slip off those impossibly high stilettos (the feeling after relief)? That tightness in your Achilles' tendons as feet assume a natural position, with heels on the floor? Researchers think they may know the reason for that.

A new study in the Journal of Experimental Biology tried to determine why women feel that tautness in the backs of their ankles after wearing high heels for long periods of time. Researchers focused on 11 women who were regular high-heel wearers, and a control group of nine women whose footwear consisted of flats.

The women's calf muscle size was measured via MRI, but no differences were noted, although researchers thought that might be the culprit.

"We were expecting slightly smaller muscle volumes in the high-heel wearers because we thought that if the muscle is in a shortened position then you are loading it less and the muscle volume should be smaller," one of the study's authors, Marco Narici of Manchester Metropolitan University in the United Kingdom, said in a news release.

Instead, ultrasound tests found that the muscle fiber length in the high-heel wearers was 13 percent shorter than in the control group. MRI scans also revealed that the Achilles' tendons in the high-heel-wearing women were thicker and stiffer than in the flats wearers. That may have compensated for the shortened muscle fibers while allowing calf muscles to function at their best while walking. Yet this thickening also caused some pain when the women changed from high heels to walking on flat feet.

Narici says he doesn't think women need to give up their sky-high heels (OK, you can exhale now), but he does recommend some stretching exercises to avoid those aches.

How to exercise while watching television

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

The average American watches about five hours of television a day, industry studies have shown. Instead of being a total couch potato, fitness experts say, try these moves to torch calories at the same time:

Keep equipment on hand. Stash small weights, resistance bands, yoga mats and fitness DVDs in your TV stand or in a nearby container so you can grab them quickly during a favorite show. If you have a stationary bike or other machine at home, set it up in front of a television.

Take advantage of commercials. If you get up and move during each break, your exercise minutes will add up quickly.

Create competitions. See how many sit-ups, push-ups, crunches or jumping jacks you can do during a commercial break, and try to top your best number every time.

Wear a pedometer. Walk or jog in place throughout a show — or just during commercials — and track how many steps you can take. You can also do some shadow boxing.

Sit on a stability ball. These large inflatable balls help improve balance and posture and work abdominal muscles — as opposed to the couch, which does nothing for you. Large stores such as Dick's Sporting Goods or Sports Authority carry them.

Find a good music channel. Put on your favorite genre (there are many choices on cable) and dance away.

Fidget. People who move around even while they're sitting can burn hundreds of extra calories a day. Tap your feet, shake your legs, stretch your arms and rotate your neck regularly.

Clean. Get some housework done during commercials. Dust the room you're in or run upstairs and see how much you can finish before the break is over.

For older adults, few medicines work as well as exercise

By Jane Glenn Haas
The Orange County Register

We all know we're supposed to exercise, to move our muscles and be strong.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control estimates about three-fourths of older adults are sedentary, despite informative articles insisting activity helps prevent many related ailments, from coronary artery disease to cognitive decline.

Dr. Sheldon Zinberg, founder of the Nifty After Fifty workout centers, insists people are reluctant to put a name to their problem:

"We're talking about sarcopenia, or age-related muscle wasting. All of us are familiar with the long words like osteoporosis or menopause, but, for whatever reason, we are not familiar with the major culprit that affects aging. Sarcopenia.

"Starting at about age 40, we lose 1 percent of our muscle mass each year. That accelerates to 1.5 percent at age 60, which means we're half as strong as we should be by age 80.

"Try it in this context — if you weigh 150 pounds at 40, that's like doubling your body weight. Imagine carrying 150 pounds on your back!"

Zinberg operates 22 fitness centers in California, Arizona, Las Vegas and Texas.

Q. Seniors don't pay attention to the benefits of exercise?

A. No. They can improve their muscle strength from 48 to 100 percent — although few make it to 100 percent. By improving sarcopenia, they also improve bone mineral density, cognitive decline. They will decrease falls and obesity, improve their glucose metabolism, decrease hypertension and diabetes. That's why some medical groups make exercise programs available to seniors.

Q. Isn't it the American College of Sports Medicine that said "exercise is medicine?"

A. Yes. That's why there are special exercise programs for chronic disease states such as disabling COPD and congestive heart failure.

Doctors are taught the value of exercise, but not all of them internalize it. In one week, improved insulin sensitivity, decreased glucose and improved muscle metabolism of glucose can be measured.

There is no medicine more important to seniors than exercise. Why, exercise even reduces the likelihood of falls and fractures.

Q. So a walk every day is great?

A. A walk every day is good, but there is a difference between a customized exercise program or a group or club membership. The vast majority of seniors are not fitness savvy. They think anything is better than nothing. But if you really want bang for your buck, you need a customized program.

Q. Do you see exercise programs as being included in the new health-care reform?

A. I can see prescribed fitness as part of that reform. I would hope so. Exercise is cheaper than any medicine you can prescribe.

Q. What makes working with a personal trainer or kinesiologist important?

A. Well, let's just take one exercise — lifting weights. Increasing the stress when lowering the weight actually more rapidly increases muscle development. This is called "eccentric muscle training" and not many seniors know about that.

Of course, I believe in a customized, progressively improving exercise program that is computer-monitored to achieve maximum individual effect. Constantly evolving exercise programs are important as we gain more scientific evidence on the value of specific exercises.

Q. Do you expect the boomers, just reaching 65, to be more attuned to staying in shape than their parents?

A. They certainly know what they should be doing. We'll have to wait and see if they are better at keeping in shape than many in the older generation.

Why sadness and sickness go hand-in-hand

By Shari Roan
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — It's a baffling yet all-too-common occurrence: People who have been dealt an emotional blow or who suffer from chronic high stress often develop physical ailments. The grieving widower who dies shortly after his wife dies. The woman who has a heart attack after losing her job. The teenager whose asthma worsens following her parents' divorce.

A fascinating new study has mapped possible connections to this mind-body response by focusing on the body's inflammatory response to injury.

Researchers subjected 124 healthy young adults to social stress; the participants had to give an impromptu speech or perform difficult mental arithmetic in front of a nonresponsive, socially rejecting panel of raters. The subjects' saliva was collected to analyze markers of inflammation (which consisted of a receptor for tumor necrosis factor- α and interleukin-6). Researchers also had 31 volunteers undergo functional MRI brain scanning while playing a computerized game in which the participants were ultimately excluded by two other supposed players (thus causing the volunteer to feel rejected).

The results showed that social rejection caused increases in the inflammatory markers, meaning the body triggered a response to fight off a threat. Chronic inflammation, however, is linked to the development of numerous disorders including asthma, arthritis, heart disease, depression and some types of cancer. The imaging studies showed greater activity in a part of the brain that has been linked to processing rejection-related distress and sadness. The findings then, suggest a specific neurocognitive pathway that links social stress and depression to inflammation.

The big question, said the authors of the study, from the Cousins Center for Psychoneuroimmunology at UCLA, is why neural sensitivity to social rejection is linked to an inflammatory response. One possibility "is that brain regions involved in processing social rejection-related information are associated with a variety of biological responses to social and physical threat," the authors wrote.

Now, if someone could only find a way to prevent hurt feelings from doing damage elsewhere in the body.

Loosen up before taking the court

You need to be able to lunge suddenly and change direction quickly to play tennis, squash, racquetball or the other racket sports.

These stretches will loosen muscles and prepare you to play

Inner thigh and back stretch

- Knees straight, but not locked, and feet comfortably spread
- Hold racket on floor and lean forward

Chest stretch

- With arm almost straight, put one palm against wall
- Keep hand in place and turn slightly away from wall

Side stretch

- Hold both ends of racket overhead
- Feet apart, arc body to left, bending right knee slightly and keeping left leg straight
- Repeat on other side

Shoulder and chest stretch

- Hold racket behind you
- Twist body from waist up

Forearm and calf stretch

- Lean against wall with back of hands
- Keep rear leg straight
- Lean gently — don't bounce — toward wall

Muscles may get a boost from cool palms

By Jeannine Stein
Los Angeles Times

You're going for one last set of bench presses, but fatigue is setting in. Do you reach for a sports drink? Look to your trainer for motivation? A new study suggests you may want to cool your palms.

Cooling muscles between weight-lifting sets has shown in some studies to be helpful in tamping down muscle fatigue. But researchers wanted to know if similar results could be achieved by cooling an area that doesn't include active muscles — the palms.

The study included 16 men in good health who had been involved in regular, intense weight training for at least five years. For the exercise portion of the study, the participants did three series of bench presses at 85 percent of maximum effort. In one scenario, in between sets their palms were cooled for 2 1/2 minutes at 50 degrees, in another they were heated at 113 degrees, and in another they went through no changes in temperature.

The men were also asked to rate how hard they thought the workout was. Gel electrodes were placed on various muscles to determine their electrical activity.

Cooling the palms between sets allowed the participants to significantly increase bench press repetitions to exhaustion compared with the other scenarios. Having cooler palms also resulted in lower heart rates and a lower level of perceived exertion than the other conditions.

Researchers believe that cooling the hands may supersede feelings of fatigue during intense sets of exercise.

"The practical application of our findings might be to improve the quality of resistance training and, subsequently, enhance training adaptations and performance during strength or power activities," the study authors wrote.

They added that the findings could have applications in exercise therapy, perhaps improving results.

The study appears in the journal Medicine & Science in Sports & Exercise.

Kevan, a married man, contracting as his sole and separate property, who acquired title as James Kevan, a married man, contracting as his sole and separate property, and Rhonda C. Kevan, a non vested spouse, as husband and wife, as grantors, to Wells Fargo Financial National Bank, as Trustee, for the benefit and security of Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., as Beneficiary, dated 05/09/2006 and recorded on 06/07/2006, as Instrument No. 484948, of Official Records of Minidoka County, Idaho. Please Note: The above Grantors are named to comply with section 45-1506(4)(A), Idaho Code, No representation is made that they are, or are not, presently responsible for this obligation set forth herein. The Default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, under Deed of Trust and Note dated 05/09/2006. The monthly installments of principal, interest, and impounds (if applicable) of 270.08, due per month for the months of 11/20/2009 through 6/16/2010, and all subsequent installments until the date of sale or reinstatement. The principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $75,000.00, plus accrued interest at the rate of 4.24% per annum from 10/20/2009. All delinquent amounts are now due, together with accruing late charges, and interest, unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, and any amounts advanced to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee, and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On the 23rd day of November, 2010, at the hour of 10:30 a.m. of this day (recognized local time), in the office of First American Title Company, 199 Country Lane, Jerome, Idaho 83338, in the County of Jerome, State of Idaho, TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash or cashier's check (cash equivalent), in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale in compliance with Section 45-1506(9) Idaho Code, the following described real property, situated in Jerome County, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:

Lot 13 in Block 1 of North Ridge Subdivision Phase 3, according to the official plat thereof, recorded October 23, 2003 as Instrument No. 2036726, Jerome County Records.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113, Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed that according to the County Assessors office, the address of Bare Land, Jerome, ID, 83338, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Paul Lloyd Builders & Developers, Inc., as Grantor(s), to TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, and Gerald Martens and Judith Martens, as Beneficiary, recorded October 18, 2007, as Instrument No. 2076339, in the records of Jerome County, Idaho.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION (45-1506(4)(A), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The beneficiary hereby gives notice that a breach of obligation for which said transfer in security has occurred, the nature of the breach being:

a) Failure to pay when due, under Deed of Trust Note, the entire loan balance immediately due and payable in the amount of $60,000.00, for Principal, due and payable on or before October 17, 2009, as evidenced by a Promissory Note dated October 17, 2007, with unpaid accrued interest owing in the amount of $17,636.09, as of May 26, 2010.

b) The failure to pay past due real property taxes in Jerome County for the years of 2007, 2008 and 2009, in the amount of $1,852.06, including late charges and interest, and failure to bring said real property taxes current.

All amounts are now due, together with unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, costs and advances made to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

The nature of the operation is a Dairy Farm.

The total number of animal units to be confined on the above site is: 1,920.

Such lands are located within the Prime Agricultural and Multiple Use Zones.

The applicant will appear at this hearing to provide to the Cassia County Planning & Zoning Commission all the information required for issuance of a confined animal feeding operation permit under the Cassia County Zoning Ordinance, before such permit can be issued.

A copy of the Application for Confined Animal Feeding Operation Permit, including relevant maps and drawings, is available for review by the public at the office of the Zoning Administrator, Cassia County Courthouse Room #4, 1459 Overland Ave., Burley, Idaho, prior to the hearing.

All other interested persons are invited to attend the hearing on the question of issuance of the requested confined animal feeding operation permit. Such other interested persons are advised that in order to participate in the hearing, the following county regulations apply:

A. Written Statements of Support Or Objection: All persons to whom notice is mailed shall be advised in that notice that they and others who can establish that their substantial rights would be affected by the approval or denial of the permit may file written objections or supporting statements with the planning and zoning commission secretary no later than ten (10) days prior to the hearing setting forth in that writing that person's support or objection to the issuance of the new CAFO permit.

1. Written objections shall set forth each requirement of law (local, state or federal) which the objecting party believes the CAFO permit would violate.

2. Written statements shall also set forth either that the party making the statement owns property within one (1) mile of the external boundaries of the CAFO site described in the application and/or otherwise setting forth the substantial rights that would be affected by the approval or denial of the permit.

3. Additionally, any party desiring to file any document(s) exceeding one (1) one-sided, 8 1/2" x 11" sized page, shall file such document(s) at least ten (10) days prior to the hearing, with the planning and zoning commission secretary. The planning and zoning commission reserves the right to reject any proffered documentation that violates the intent of this regulation.

B. Providing Testimony at the Public Hearing: Any person who files a statement in support or objection to the issuance of a new CAFO permit shall indicate in such statement whether or not such person desires to testify at the hearing.

1. Prior to the hearing the planning and zoning commission shall determine which of those persons who desire to testify will be permitted to testify at the hearing.

2. All statements of support or objections shall be made a part of the record at the hearing, but no person except the applicant shall be permitted to testify at the hearing unless they have previously filed a written statement of support or objection to the issuance of the permit.

DEAR ABBY: When my two boys were young, I agreed to a reduction in child support payments with the understanding that my ex would help later with their college tuition. This was not put in writing.

Now both my boys are in college and their father is refusing to help. When I asked him to at least help with the costs of their books, he said, "That's what child support was for." I guess I should have seen this coming, as he has been cruel and unreasonable toward me for the past 22 years.

What's more hurtful is my sons have adopted their father's attitudes. They have told me their child support should have been saved for college. I always put my children first and feel that all the hours I have worked to pay for college means nothing to them. Have you any advice for me?

— UNAPPRECIATED IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR UNAPPRECIATED: Yes, Your first mistake was not getting the agreement with your ex in writing. The second is in continuing to foot the entire bill for your sons' college education. It's time they applied for scholarships, student loans and part-time jobs. Close your checkbook and make an appointment with a lawyer, because your ex may not be off the hook regarding paying for the boys' education to the extent that he thinks he is.

DEAR ABBY: "Chad" and I have been married for six years. While we were dating, I asked him if he was done being in a band and in the club scene. He said yes.

My dilemma is he has now been asked to be in a band, and he wants to do it. He told me he won't accept the offer if I don't want him to, because the issue was important to me when I was considering marrying him. Now I find out he has been telling me one thing and the band guys another. He is planning to join.

Am I wrong to be livid about this? I know he enjoys playing, which is why he was drumming at church. But why join a band now? Abby, he's 45! I'm upset but don't know if I'm justified in being so.

— NOT A BAND WIFE IN TEXAS

DEAR NOT A BAND WIFE: You are upset because you know your husband hasn't been truthful with you — telling you one thing and his prospective band mates another. Also, the role of "band wife" is one you specifically wanted to avoid.

Not knowing Chad, I don't know whether he loves music or enjoys being in the spotlight. That's not something that fades with age. Because you can't stop him, be a sport and let him shine. If he's good, enjoy the extra income. If he's not, this gig won't be forever.

DEAR ABBY: I am an only child who was very close to both my parents. When my son was born, he completed our happy circle. When Mom died unexpectedly early this year, it was a painful shock. Life hasn't been the same without Mama here.

One afternoon, I was missing my mom and prayed for a sign that she was still watching over us. The next morning in church, she was still on my mind. During the sermon I quickly wrote a check for the offering, but didn't rip it out. I then placed my checkbook down next to me.

When the ushers began passing the plate later in the service I reached for my checkbook. A shiny new dime was sitting on top of it! It was my sign from Mama telling me that yes, she's watching over me and my son and continues to be part of our lives.

— PAM IN OHIO

DEAR PAM: Of course she does. Not even death can break a loving mother-and-daughter bond. It's touching that she let you know that in church, a place that must have held special meaning for both of you.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Today is Monday, Aug. 16, the 228th day of 2010. There are 137 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Aug. 16, 1977, Elvis Presley died at his Graceland estate in Memphis, Tenn., at age 42.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1777, American forces won the Revolutionary War Battle of Bennington.

In 1812, Detroit fell to British and Indian forces in the War of 1812.

In 1858, a telegraphed message from Britain's Queen Victoria to President James Buchanan was transmitted over the recently laid trans-Atlantic cable.

In 1894, George Meany, first president of the AFL-CIO, was born in the Bronx, New York.

In 1948, baseball legend Babe Ruth died in New York at age 53.

In 1954, Sports Illustrated was first published by Time Inc.

In 1956, Adlai E. Stevenson was nominated for president at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

In 1960, Britain ceded control of the crown colony of Cyprus.

In 1978, James Earl Ray, convicted assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., told a Capitol Hill hearing he did not commit the crime, saying he'd been set up by a mysterious man called "Raoul."

In 1987, 156 people were killed when Northwest Airlines Flight 255 crashed while trying to take off from Detroit.

Ten years ago: Delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles formally nominated Al Gore for president. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., was diagnosed with a second bout of melanoma (the cancer was later surgically removed, with no sign that it had spread).

Five years ago: Hundreds of defiant Jewish settlers hunkered down in advance of a midnight deadline to leave Gaza. A plane carrying vacationers home from Panama to Martinique crashed in western Venezuela, killing all 160 people on board. Two transport helicopters carrying NATO peacekeepers crashed in western Afghanistan, killing 17 Spanish troops.

One year ago: Negotiators averted a strike against the San Francisco Bay Area's commuter rail hours before a midnight deadline. Y.E. Yang of South Korea became the first Asian player to win one of golf's majors with a three-stroke win over Tiger Woods at the PGA Championship in Chaska, Minn. Usain Bolt ran to another world record, winning the 100-meter race in 9.58 seconds at the world championships in Berlin.

IF AUGUST 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are on top of your game during the next several weeks, especially when pursuing career, job, or financial success. Participation in group outings, club events and community functions might boost your ambitions as well as your status. Your leadership qualities might be in demand during November and a lucky break could set you on the path towards some life improvements. You may be challenged next March by a lack of business skill or interpersonal finesse, so wait until April or early May to make life altering decisions or a romantic commitment.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mix business with pleasure. You can be assertive in such a polite way that people will welcome sales calls or business meetings. This might be a good time to wedge your foot in a profitable door.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do what you want to do. Work only counts if it produces the result that you have decided you want. First and foremost, you must decide what it is you want to accomplish so be sure to make a list.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your powder dry. It is wise to adopt a professional stance and take steps to protect your assets as well as your family. There might be sunny skies now, but you don't know what the future holds.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Expect close encounters of the personal kind. Collaboration on a work project or business deal can lead to further collaboration in the affection department. A few kind words can easily go a long way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sit up and beg. Like Pavlov's dog you have been trained by your experiences to react to stimuli in a predictable way. It would be a good idea to examine any knee-jerk reactions before acting on them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Paying a compliment might lead to a way to pay your bills. You might need a figurative "mop" to clean up mistakes of the tongue, but you can't go wrong if you strive to be polite and gracious.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22.): You stand up for yourself in the most unusual ways. You could flaunt your activities in the face of disapproval. When you see someone you know, you might wave the whole hand or just one digit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Words of multiple syllables aren't a necessity. You can get your point across without picking up the dictionary or thumbing through the thesaurus. Kindness and consideration can count in business.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): One and one make two. You can add up the things that make financial sense and subtract the activities that don't from your schedule. Just don't use business rules to run your love life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are adept at dealing with people with weather-vane temperaments. You seem to adroitly focus on the direction dictated by your own inner moral compass. Fine tune business relationships.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Grease the social wheels and line your pockets at the same time. Inner emotional ups and downs should be ignored if you want to succeed in the dog-eat-dog world. Courtesy wins the day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Even in the fame-obsessed culture surrounding you, success can be as short-lived as anonymity. You might find it is difficult to escape the eye of public opinion so ply compliments with a heavy trowel.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"Let such teach others who themselves excel,
And censure freely who have written well."*

— Alexander Pope

In today's deal South plays four spades after he opened a strong no-trump and Stayman located the 4-4 fit. Put yourself in East's seat: your partner leads the heart three, and you must plan the defense.

Since South has shown a balanced hand, he cannot have a singleton heart. Your partner would have led the top of a doubleton; thus he has clearly led a singleton heart — but don't give him a heart ruff straightaway. If you do so, you can count on three tricks for your side, but you will have no likelihood of a fourth winner, unless partner's meager assets include the club king.

The key point to remember is that there is no hurry to give your partner the ruff, because you have the trump ace. Win the heart ace and switch to your singleton diamond. When you win the ace of trumps, you will be able to play the heart nine as a suit-preference signal for the higher of the two nontrump suits. West will give you a diamond ruff for one down.

The lesson from today's deal is that although it is a priority to give partner a ruff as soon as you can, if your side has a control in the trump suit, you will sometimes be able to work out that other actions should take precedence over immediately giving or taking a ruff.

ANSWER: It's a close choice between a spade and a club, and either declarer or dummy could turn up with length in either black suit. That said, I prefer a club lead. Your holding in the suit is better, and you are more likely to catch partner with a decent unbid club suit than a decent unbid spade suit.
