T.F. roads in disrepair spur discussion from councilmen

By Nick Coltrain

Times-News writer

Falls Twin Councilman David Johnson issued a stony warning at a meeting last week: If the city doesn't pay more attention to some of its streets, namely in residential areas, they could go to gravel before long.

It was pure hyperbole, said City Engineer Jackie Fields – who gave Johnson the idea but not one without a grain of

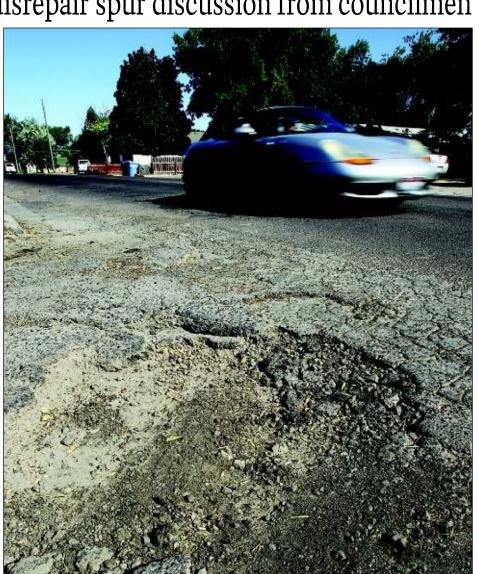

"It's a very dramatic turn of phrase that I use seldomly and cautiously," Fields said this week. But it's also accurate in that her department can't keep up with street maintenance at the current rate of funding, she continued.

The city had a plan in place to put a new seal coating – a form of preventative maintenance and smoothing - on residential streets seven years. But it recently discovered it was not keeping up with its plans. And tightened funding put most of its other plans in a similar situation, Fields said.

"We don't have enough money funded to be able to keep a seven-year seal coat cycle going, to plan on doing a milling or inlay or overlay on our roads on a 10-to-20-year cycle, and to reconstruct our ancient pavements," she said. "We just don't have the funding in the budget. So we make the stretch the best we can and we try to pay enough attention to the heaviest loads that'll see the damage the most, the heaviest and highest volume."

It's something the council is thinking about as budget season approaches, with some broaching the idea of collecting more taxes to make sure roads in the city are maintained to an acceptable level. Twin Falls Mayor Don Hall said extra money needs to come from somewhere, but this economic environment, stressed that no particular proposal has been brought forward.

"Of course, the additional revenue option is not an

MORNING BRIEFING

Pat's Picks Three things to do today Pat Marcantonio

• The Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival presents one of my favorites, "A Midsummer's Night Dream," at 6 p.m. at the Forest Service Park, First and Washington streets in Ketchum. The setting: early 1600s America. Tickets are $20. Lowbacked chairs and picnics welcome; bleacher seats are available. It also runs Friday through Sunday and Aug. 26-29. This is one fun play.

• The Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce Hot August Nite features food, music, games and a raffle for really cool stuff, like a trip for two to Ireland. The event runs from 5 to 9 p.m. at the Twin Falls City Park. Tickets are $7 to $10.

• Visit the tallest spot in Idaho, Mount Borah at 12,662 feet. It is magnificent. If you're going to climb, plan for all day, but if you're staying on the ground, it is still a nice view. For more info on conditions and climbing, contact the Lost River Ranger District in Mackay at 588-3400.

the concrete of the 2,000foot spillway and canal headworks has deteriorated to the point where it could fail soon. The headworks lead to canals that service the Burley and Minidoka irrigation districts.

According to the review, the improvements will allow Reclamation to increase flow through the spillway and avoid the need to drop the water level behind the dam in the winter. Construction should take less than three years, with most of the work done outside of the irrigation season.

The federal agency began developing different options in 2000 and submitted a draft impact statement December 2009. All comments from a public comment period that closed in February were included in Tuesday's final review.

In response to concerns voiced in those comments, Reclamation will monitor the environmental effects of the construction over a four-year period to make sure they correspond to predictions in the review. If not, changes will be made and monitored.

Funding for the $50 million project will come from several sources, including both irrigation districts. But financial support seems harder to find for increasing the dam's storage capabilities.

In August 2008, the Idaho Department of Water Resources contracted with Reclamation to study raising the dam five feet, both to increase its capacity and add to aquifer recharge. While the study found raising the dam was feasible, such work was projected to cost $150 million if built in conjunction with the spillway work and $205 million if built separately.

Leonard Beck, a member of the Idaho Water Resource Board from Burley, said Wednesday that raising the dam is on hold for now.

"At our January meeting, we talked about the economics," Beck said. "But no one is stepping forward with the review, the public will no money, so we're at a stand-

Arraignment set for Thomas Trevino Jr.

By Bradley Guire Times-News writer

Accused killer Thomas Trevino Jr. is set to be arraigned at 9 a.m. on Aug. 30 in 5th District Court in Twin Falls.

Trevino's first-degree murder case was sent to district court earlier this week by Magistrate Judge Roger Harris, who initially did not set a date for the formal arraignment.

The 30-year-old Twin Falls man allegedly shot Jill Gelever, 24, in the back of the head on July 5 at the Comfort Inn & Suites. Gelever died 10 days later.

At Monday's preliminary hearing, Harris heard testimony from multiple witnesses and believed there to be enough evidence to charge Trevino with murder.

Gooding airport project receives federal funding boost

Bv Blair Koch

Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The Federal Aviation Administration is sending the city of Gooding more money than expected for its municipal airport renovations.

The additional $200,000 brings the total FAA grant funding to $2.3 million, said Public Works Director Todd Bunn.

"This is very good news," Bunn said. "Now we'll be able to do all three phases of the project."

The funding boost was discussed during Monday's scheduled a work session on those costs." City Council meeting.

Construction includes work on the runway, apron and building additional taxi lanes. Had the city not received additional funding, the apron would have been renovated next year.

"This is helpful because we won't have to shut down the airport a year from now to make those additional improvements," Bunn said. "Now, we can complete the project all at once."

The project, contracted to Twin Falls' Gordon Paving, is expected to begin any day and should be completed in October. Bunn said the timeline won't change because of the expanded project scope.

Council President Vern France said the city will benefit from the project.

"In my opinion, the airport is one of the bright spots of the city, and its growth over the past few years has been phenomenal." France said. "We've seen an increase in the number of pilots from the Wood River Valley who are using our airport because it is more affordable, and the airport is

CSI Foundation comes up big in scholarship campaign

ood causes always go begging in hard Almost always. But not the College of Southern Idaho Foundation's drive for scholarships.

Its major gifts campaign, starting at the beginning of 2009 just as the Great Recession was hitting south-central Idaho's economy hard, raised $10.25 million in 18 months.

That's remarkable.

If you think not, consider the dairy industry's three-year effort to raise $5 million for the planned

University of Idaho livestock research center in the Magic Valley. The total so far is $1.57 million, not including Elanco's recent pledge of $1 million over five years.

The foundation's executive director, Curtis Eaton, says very few folks who CSI fundraisers pitched said no.

"Some people said,
'Come back later and we'll see if we can do more?"

That says two things about CSI.

The first is that the school is a deeply valued asset in the eight counties of the Magic and Wood River valleys, touching the lives of thousands of peo-

The second is that south-central Idahoans recognize CSI as the effective economic development engine it is.

The $10 million – and the interest the money earns — will go toward scholarships. That means more students who are least able to go to college will be able to do so. Many of these young and middle-aged adults couldn't afford to attend Boise State, Idaho State or the University of Idaho, especially after two years of sharp tuition increases. But by getting a foot in the door of higher education at CSI, they'll be able to leverage their associate degrees into four-year diplomas from those same four-year schools. Or consider a single mom with two kids who's working in retail or food processing for $8 an hour. Within two years, she can earn a nursing degree and find a job that pays upwards of $40,000 a year.

CSI, with its focus on accessibility, is the education model of the future for higher ed in Idaho. And it's probably the state's best chance of improving the dismal rate - about 14 percent, at the moment - at which Idaho high school students earn four-year degrees from Idaho colleges.

Eaton says the foundation initially thought it could raise $7 million to $9 million in the major gifts campaign. But it exceeded expectations, with 1,900 pledges - large and small.

That's a ringing endorsement of all that CSI does - for students and the wider community.

Obama's learning curve on Social Security

resident Barack Obama is making some costly mistakes. One example is calling his administration's Keynesian spending spree an economic recovery. An even bigger error is his refusal to climb the Social Security learning curve.

Shlaes

The president advertised that refusal while commemorating the 75th anniversary of the public pension program. "We have an obligation to keep that promise, to safeguard Social Security for our seniors, people with disabilities and all Americans today, tomorrow and forever," Obama said in his weekly address on the radio and

The Social Security learning curve is like a hill all federal politicians must learn to climb. Lawmakers who are just beginning to make their way up the curve tend to cling to political doctrine for dear life.

The Democratic doctrine requires doing everything possible to preserve Social Security in its current form. That includes using sentimental rhetoric to trumpet good news while obscuring any bad news, such as acknowledging that this year the vaunted program will pay out more than it takes in.

The Republican doctrine requires not lifting a finger to get in the way of Democrats' preservation effort.

Eventually, after studying the Social Security reforms crafted by the late Democratic Senator Daniel Patrick Movnihan and others, and making their way though demography charts, politicians in both parties recognize Social Security as the easiest entitlement program to reform.

As they make their way up the curve, our leaders start as president someone who hasn't thought much about the economy or entitlement reform."

working on bipartisan solutions to the program's demographic challenges. After more learning and cogitation, they get close to seeing one of the many sensible reform ideas become law.

That moment tends to arrive at about the time they leave office. That's what happened with President George W. Bush, who talked about plans for reforming Social Security, and even created a commission to review it, in his first term. The need for reform became clearer to him over time. His own actuaries warned that the program's deficits would exceed receipts while he was still young enough to mountain-bike.

In the days after his reelection, Bush was ready to spend political capital, as he put it, to reform the program. But he found himself forced to instead spend that capital on maintaining support for the war in Iraq. The legislation he roughed out never went anywhere.

More poignant is the story of President Bill Clinton. Like support Archer's Social Bush after him, Clinton more or less blew off Social Security during his first term. But soon after being re-elected, he phoned the lawmaker charged with overseeing any such reform, Bill Archer, then chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Archer says he was decorating his Christmas tree when the phone rang. "Rush Limbaugh was on the radio, and we had to turn it down," Archer recalls.

Archer's reform plan called for allowing Americans to get a refundable tax credit that flowed into private accounts. Upon retiring, people could take either the private-plan money, or the traditional Social Security payment, whichever was higher.

The Archer plan was modeled on a successful Chilean plan. Clinton liked this idea, according to Archer, and the two held many discussions on the topic.

Then came the Monica Lewinsky scandal. Clinton needed union support to survive impeachment efforts, and unions didn't Security plan. There wasn't even sufficient support for it among conservatives. They made the good the enemy of the best and failed to support the Archer plan, preferring purer proposals for wholesale privatization.

What about Obama? If he climbs the learning curve at the rate of his predecessors, and if he wins re-election, it'll be Christmas 2012 when he has his epiphany. Yet the president's words signal he may be nowhere near beginning to climb. He talks like he's still campaigning. That suggests he may not even get as far as Bush or Clinton.

What's disconcerting here is that rather than start to ascend this curve, Obama acts like there's nothing more to learn about Social Security. This world-is-flat executive is the price we pay for electing as president someone who hasn't thought much about the economy or entitlement reform. This failing matters because the politician who can't engage on reforming Social Security, an elementary task, can't even begin to attack the advanced steepgrade challenges that Medicare and Medicaid rep-

Head Start chief clarifies name confusion

On Aug. 16, 2010, in the Times-News, a woman by the name of Mary Katherine Marshall was charged with theft. I am Ellen Marie (Mary) Marshall, and I am not the woman whose name appeared in the paper nor am I related to her.

My reason for clarifying this confusion is twofold: I am the director of the College of Southern Idaho Head Start/Early Head Start Program currently and I have worked for the program for 21 years. I do not want readers to be confused as to the leadership of the wonderful Head Start/Early Head Start program. For the sake of the staff, children and families I want them to rest assured that they have a principled leader.

I also serve as the chairman of the Idaho Children's Trust Fund by appointment of the governor. Once again, it is important that the governor has full faith in me as a freedom. U.S. history is leader.

The second reason for clarifying is that I'm a wife and mother in addition to a relative of the Charlie Marshall family in Jerome. I have spent my life building a reputation of honesty and integrity; it's important to me that there be no confusion as to either of those things.

ELLEN MARIE (MARY) MARSHALL Jerome

U.S. citizens face losing their freedom

We are doomed to lose our freedom and independence if we don't learn from past history! Citizens in 19 of 21 great civilizations lost their freedom from within due to evil, power-grabbing elitist rulers in their own countries.

It is extremely naïve to feel that all Americans are on the same side and cherish individual liberty and filled with traitors who have tried to prevent our independence from England and presently are trying to destroy our constitutional republic and individual freedom.

Obama and his unconstitutional unelected czars have nearly destroyed our economy while increasing the unsustainable deficit to more than $13 trillion. Millions are unemployed and losing their homes. The Constitution provides for a separation of powers in the legislative, executive and judicial branches. Obama is consolidating all powers in the executive branch with Congress becoming irrelevant due to executive orders and bureaucratic unscientific Environmental Protection Agency regulations like the $23 million Twin Falls residents are being extorted to spend to comply on arsenic reduction or lose federal grants.

The Boy Scouts of America, celebrating their 100th anniversary, were snubbed by Obama as he refused to become their honorary president, which every president since 1912 has become. Obama has refused to sign Eagle Scout certificates which all presidents have done since 1916. He felt it more important to appear on The View in New York City to promote himself than to attend the Scout Iamboree in Washington. D.C., where the Scouts promote honor, integrity, service, love of country and a belief in God.

Unless Obama's socialist/Marxist policies are reversed, we will lose our independence and freedom and become serfs to the elitist's oligarchy under United Nations bureaucratic tyranny!

Get involved and elect and re-elect only pro-constitutional candidates.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... behind the Molina mess

Lewiston Tribune

Idaho's budget is broken. Or its politics is dysfunctional.

Maybe both. However it happened, Idaho's patina of rugged individualism has been ripped away, exposing a social safety net that is both brittle and spare. Case in point: Idaho's Medicaid program.

To patch together a tight budget, Idaho lawmakers and program administrators have put hundreds of health care providers ... in distress.

First, to "balance" a budget without raising taxes, lawmakers opted to delay $70 million worth of last year's Medicaid claims until the current budget cycle began July 1. For some providers, that required waiting two months to get paid.

Then, to save $1 million a month, the state opted not to keep its old computerized billing system up and running ... while it launched a new computerized program operated by Molina Healthcare. Such a fail-safe isn't cheap. The pot of money to pay for Medicaid operations is relatively small, about $5 million. No federal help is available to pay for the redundancy.

That left Health and Welfare with the option of asking the Legislature, which was in no mood to spend the money. Health and Welfare didn't ask.

Molina's start up has been a mess. Maybe two-thirds of the 15,000 providers serving 215,000 people have been reimbursed. Others are at least big enough, such as hospitals and large nursing homes, to absorb even more delayed payments.

But it's the small operator who provides multiple services to clients entirely dependent upon Medicaid - such as the developmentally disabled or the mentally ill — who has been clipped. To survive, some providers have been burning through savings. Others have taken out loans or mortgages.

There are lessons to be learned here ... It comes down to seeing the faces behind the budget sheets.

It means recognizing that

Idaho is a state with more poverty than it cares to acknowledge ... It requires admitting there are limits to how much politicians can saw away at programs for the needy in the name of fiscal austerity.

Eventually, this game is going to hurt somebody or worse.

... stop dithering on airport

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

The clock is ticking on relocating Friedman Memorial Airport from Hailey to a site that can accommodate state-of-theart aircraft. The evidence for relocation is becoming impossible to ignore.

The airlines that serve the Sun Valley area, Delta and Horizon, long ago put the area on notice that they would be changing out their fleets of turboprop planes and replacing them with smoother, larger, regional jets that need longer runways and wider safety zones for operation.

They weren't kidding. Today, nearly every airline in the country is rapidly replacing turboprops with regional jets.

For example, Delta

Connection's SkyWest terminal — with its long hallway of gates at the Salt Lake City airport where flights to Sun Valley depart – was once surrounded by ... turboprop planes. This summer (it has) become populated primarily by sleek regional jets that are more attractive to and comfortable for passengers ...

Meeting passenger expectations for comfort and scheduling is going to be key to generating business in the Sun Valley-area's resort economy over the long run. Thus, the ability of the area's airport to handle regional jets and larger aircraft is also key because otherwise passenger numbers may not rise to profitable levels for the airlines that fly them.

That's challenging in mountain resorts, to say the least ...

The Sun Valley area has already experienced curtailments of air service and can ill afford to experience more

The Federal Aviation Administration is evaluating locations for a new airport. ... the sooner a new allweather modern airport is built, the better.

... failing Robert Manwill

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Systems fail. When they do, we should be able to expect professionals to examine what went wrong.

But the state Department of Health and Welfare's handling of the Robert Manwill case is inexcusable on two levels. First, department employees and contractors missed warning signs in the months preceding the 8-year-old boy's murder. Second, the department has not completed a written review of the case and that's shocking.

When a child dies under the state's watch, the state must launch a thorough written review. If Health and Welfare doesn't act of its own accord, the Legislature should require it. Doing anything less trivializes tragedy, and jeopardizes the welfare of other children.

If ever a case deserved unflinching review, it is this one. Police say Robert was killed in July 2009, after weeks of escalating abuse. Robert's mother, Melissa Jenkins, and her boyfriend, Daniel Ehrlick, now face first-degree murder charges - and neither were unknown to the state's caseworkers. But the very workers entrusted with child welfare committed serious mistakes ...

• They failed to enforce a court order banning Jenkins from living with Ehrlick, an order issued after Jenkins fractured the skull of Robert's infant brother ... • They failed to examine Robert for signs of abuse, even though policy requires Health and Welfare caseworkers to see children during home visits.

• They got involved only after the injury to Robert's brother, not acting on three earlier reports about Jenkins and her family.

As bad as all this is, the department's followup is no better.

While written reviews are standard procedure in many other states, Health and Welfare has completed only a verbal review. Agency director Dick Armstrong says he is satisfied with that review – a predictable but less-than-reassuring assessment ...

A written review ... (focuses) on lessons learned, on better practices. The product is not a "gotcha" document so much as it is a "never again" document. By protecting other potential victims, it honors the memory of one young victim.

Mystified by judge's wolf decision

It is difficult to understand the Honorable Judge Molloy's decision on wolves.

First, there is nothing wrong with the wolves' reproductive capacity. Two transplants of approximately 35 wolves each took place, one in Yellowstone National Park and one in the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness. In about 12 years or so, the wolf numbers grew to 1,400. Next, consider the land mass of Idaho, Montana and Wyoming of which a large portion is more than suitable as wolf habitat. Within the heart of this area is Yellowstone National Park, a wolf's paradise — plenty of easy-to-come-by food, elk calves, buffalo calves, deer fawns, etc. The wolf is the top of the food chain as humans are not allowed to hunt them there. Yellowstone can provide wolves for ever. At the present time, wolves cannot be hunted in Wyoming as they were not delisted, thus providing more buffer for wolf perpetuation. So why are there no regulated wolf hunts in Idaho and Montana? Was the no hunting decision a maneuver to get Idaho and Montana to put pressure on Wyoming to bring its wolf management plan in conformance? Hopefully not, as judges are not to be politically motivated; maybe to bring pressure on the federal Fish and Wildlife biolo-

By not allowing limited hunting in Idaho and Montana, Judge Molloy is doing the wolves no favor. The wolves will become unwary of humans, a bad situation for all. When wolves run free in Central Park, it will prove there is no bias toward people living in the Rocky Mountain West.

Stevens always held true to his word, Biden said Wednesday at the funeral for the Senate's longest serving Republican.

"His word was his bond," Biden said. "His personal generosity was surprising in how quickly it was offered."

Biden said he and Stevens supported each other when their first wives died in tragic accidents and celebrated the joys that second marriages brought to both. Throughout it all, Stevens worked hard for Alaska, Biden said.

"No state has ever had a more fierce defender of that state's way of life than Ted Stevens," the vice president said.

Stevens died last week along with four others in a plane crash in southwest Alaska while doing something he truly loved: fishing for salmon.

Thousands attended the funeral, which marked the end of three days of remembrances that began Monday when several hundred people attended a Catholic Mass in Anchorage. Mourners filed past a closed casket Tuesday as Stevens' body lay in repose at an Episcopal church.

IDAHO Part of lawsuit against LDS church, Boy Scouts tossed

BOISE — A federal judge said a lawsuit against the Mormon church and the Boy Scouts of America must focus on alleged sexual abuse suffered in Oregon because it's too late to sue over similar claims in Idaho.

U.S. District Judge David O. Carter made the ruling last week, saying Idaho's statute of limitations prevented the plaintiff from suing in that state.

The lawsuit alleges the leader of a Boy Scout troop in Nampa sexually abused the plaintiff over three years in both states starting in 1967, and the abuse left him with debilitating physical, emotional and mental injuries.

The suit said the troop was jointly operated by the Boy Scouts and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The Nampa ward of the church "called" the troop leader to educate and minister to LDS families and their kids, the lawsuit states.

Idaho students netted an average score of 21.8 on a scale of 1 to 36, compared to the national average of 21.

At the same time, just 26 percent of students who took the test in Idaho met or surpassed all four benchmarks measuring their preparedness for college English, Idaho took the ACT exam this year, while 1.57 million were tested nationwide.

College-bound students generally take the ACT or the SAT entrance exams, selecting the test based on which school they hope to attend. Many schools in the South and Midwest use the ACT, while many schools on the coasts use the SAT.

Some colleges use the ACT scores as part of an admissions formula. Other schools base scholarships on it, and some states like Idaho hinge their student scholarships on the results of the ACT.

While three of every four students tested this year will likely need remedial help in at least one subject to succeed in college, the ACT results may encourage state officials who are working to boost college completion rates.

ALBUQUERQUE — America's latest folk-hero flight attendant may be the one on a Southwest Airlines jet who took a 13-monthold baby from her mother after the woman slapped the crying child for kicking her.

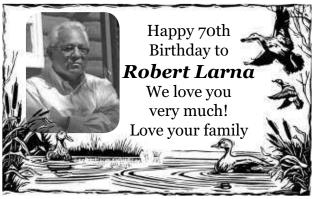

The flight attendant's actions, however, set off an intense debate: When and how should bystanders intervene?

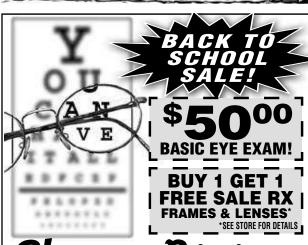

"We live in such a 'mind your own business' and 'I'll sue you for

Parents on both sides of the corporal punishment debate agreed that hitting a baby that young was wrong. #### GEORGIA Egg recall tied to salmonella grows to 380 million

ATLANTA — Hundreds of people have been sickened in a salmonella outbreak linked to eggs in four states and possibly more, health officials said Wednesday as a company dramatically expanded a recall to 380 million eggs.

The Centers for Disease

Control and Prevention is working with state health departments to investigate the illnesses. No deaths have been reported, said Dr. Christopher Braden, a CDC epidemiologist involved in the investigation.

Initially, 228 million eggs, or the equivalent of 19 million dozenegg cartons, were recalled by the company Wright County Egg of Galt, Iowa. But that number was increased to nearly 32 million dozen-egg cartons.

Minnesota, a state with some of the best food-borne illness investigators in the country, has tied at least seven salmonella illnesses to the eggs.

Other states have seen a jump in reports of the type of salmonella. For example, California has reported 266 illnesses since June and believes many are related to the eggs. Colorado saw 28 cases in June and July, about four times the usual number.

GM takes step to shed government ownership

By Ken Thomas and Tom Krisher

Associated Press writers

DETROIT - General Motors Co. on Wednesday filed the first batch of paperwork required by regulators to sell stock to the public, a step that brings the automaker closer to its goal of shedding government ownership.

The 700-page registration form, filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, begins a process that will lead to an initial public offering of GM's stock. No date was set for the sale, but experts say the IPO could come as early as October.

Stakeholders in the company, including the U.S. Treasury Department, initially will sell common stock, while GM will sell preferred shares that are similar to bonds.

The forms did not say how much stock the government wants to unload.

"Treasury will retain the right, at all times, to decide whether and at what level to participate in the offering," the department said.

GM, leaner and more efficient than it was before a stay in bankruptcy protection last year, earned $2.2 billion in the first half of this year despite depressed U.S. auto sales.

GM gave a lengthy list of risks facing the company, including growing competition, restructuring costs and new laws and regulations. Most of the risk factors had been previously disclosed in regulatory filings with the government.

American flags fly outside General Motors world headquarters in Detroit. General Motors filed the first batch of paperwork Wednesday needed to sell stock to the public, a step that brings the automaker closer to shedding government ownership.

Target profit rises but keeps outlook tempered

By Anne D'Innocenzio

Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Target Corp. is counting on driving customers into its stores in the coming months with two weapons: a 5 percent discount for its store credit-card holders and an emphasis on food.

Even with those, the company offered a conservative sales outlook as a slowing economy weighs down its expectations.

The cautious view comes as Target reported a 14.3 percent increase in net income, as improved business in its credit card division, cost-cutting and strong demand for its stylish fashions, which carry fat profit margins, overcame disappointing sales.

The discounter drove more customers into its stores, but they spent less on each trip amid job worries. The company said its earnings the rest of the year should be in line with Wall Street

"While no one has a clear view of the future, recent results in both our business and the economy reinforce our perspective that the current recovery will be slow and inconsistent."

Steinhafel said even so, Target is in "a strong position" to continue to take business from rivals.

the Federal Housing Administration, collectively guarantee more than 90 percent of all new U.S. home loans.

"Nobody wants to mess up the mortgage market," said Douglas Elliott, an economics fellow at the Brookings Institution think tank. "And any transition with Fannie and Freddie is going to be fraught with some risk."

Tuesday's event came as the second anniversary of the government seizure of the firms approached, a bailout that left taxpavers as 80 percent owners. The administration faces a January deadline, added by lawmakers to the financial reform legislation, to make recommendations to end the expensive federal conservatorship of the firms.

Congress plans to ratchet up its involvement as well, with House Financial Services Committee Chairman Barney Frank, D-Mass., saving his committee will begin hearings when members return next month.

That's not fast enough for many Republicans, signaling another bitter partisan reform fight. They have been pushing the administration for more than a year to address the mounting losses at Fannie and Freddie by getting the government out of the housing finance business.

"It is past time to rid the American taxpayer of the liabilities of these financial institutions once and for all." Rep. Mike Pence, R-Ind., said Tuesday as he blasted the Obama administration for continuing the bailouts of Fannie and Freddie begun under President George W.

But the Obama administration has been moving slowly for fear of further harming the housing market. There was fresh evidence of problems Tuesday as Southern California home sales plunged 21.4 percent in July compared with a year earlier, according to research firm MDA DataQuick of San Diego.

"It's much more important to get this issue right than to do it fast," said Michael Berman, chairman-elect of the Mortgage Bankers Association.

Flash flooding reported, more rain coming

NASHVILLE — Heavy rainfall has soaked some of the same parts of central Tennessee that were inundated by severe floods in May, and forecasters warned Wednesday that more rain was expected.

A train washed off its tracks, and rescuers plucked people from flooded vehicles and residents from an apartment complex about 80 miles northeast of Nashville as continued downpours were predicted to add to the flooding problems through the evening.

Portions of Middle and East Tennessee as well as areas of southern Kentucky, western North Carolina and Virginia were under flash flood warnings or watches, according to the National Weather Service.

Much of the damage in Middle Tennessee was in Putnam County where a home floated off its foundation and a train carrying sand derailed when the tracks were washed away. No injuries were reported, emergency officials said.

In nearby Macon County, Sheriff Mark Gammons said emergency officials evacuated about 50 nursing home residents from a facility close to a rising creek, just as a precaution. Some were taken to a local hospital and others to the Tennessee National Guard armory in Lafayette. There were no reports of injuries, Gammons said.

Heavy rains closed the Wilson County Fair, 30 miles east of Nashville, for the first time in its 157-year history. It's the largest fair in Tennessee.

U.S. taxpayers spending $16,000 on imam's outreach tour of Mideast

American taxpayers will pay the imam behind plans for a mosque near the Manhattan site of the Sept. 11 attacks $3,000 in fees for a three-nation outreach trip to the Middle East that will cost roughly $16,000, the State Department said Wednesday.

The department said Imam Feisal Abdul Rauf will get a daily $200 honorarium for the 15-day tour to Bahrain, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates, which is intended to promote religious tolerance.

Airfare is included, as well as the standard federal government per diem for expenses and lodging in each of the cities he will visit, spokesman P.J. Crowley said. Those per diem rates range from nearly $400 to nearly $500, according to official documents.

The imam's organization, The Cordoba Initiative, referred questions on the matter to the State Department.

Rauf starts his tour today in Bahrain and ends it in the United Arab Emirates Sept. 2. At each stop he is expected to discuss Muslim life in America and promote religious tolerance. He will not be allowed to raise funds for the mosque on the trip, Crowley said.

CIA forms new center to combat WMDs

The CIA is opening a counterproliferation center to combat the spread of dangerous weapons and technology, a move that comes as Iran is on the verge of fueling up a new nuclear power plant.

CIA Director Leon Panetta said Wednesday that the new unit would place CIA operators side by side with the agency's analysts to brainstorm plans to "confront the threat of weapons of mass destruction — nuclear, chemical and biological.

The center would formalize the collaboration between the agency's analysts and operators, a close working relationship that CIA spokesman George Little said already has yielded intelligence successes.

Little cited their work in last year's revelation of the "discovery of the Syrian covert nuclear reactor and Iran's undeclared uranium enrichment facility near Qom." That Iranian city is the ideological center of Iran's Shiite rulers.

Paul Brannan, a senior analyst at the Institute for Science and International Security, said another CIA success was the slowing down of Iran's nuclear centrifuge operations at Natanz. The agency, he said, sneaked "faulty parts into Iran's nuclear supply chain."

That operation, Brannan said, "is an example of where you'd need both analysts to tell you what type of parts would Iran need that you could inject, and the operations side to work with trading companies to try to get the parts in there."

INDONESIA Coral reefs dying at alarming rate

JAKARTA — Coral that survived the 2004 tsunami is now dying at one of the fastest rates ever recorded because of a dramatic rise in water temperatures off northwestern Indonesia, conservationists said, warning Wednesday that the threat extends to other reefs across

The Wildlife Conservation Society deployed marine biologists to Aceh province, on the tip of Sumatra island, in May when surface waters in the Andaman Sea peaked at 93 degrees Fahrenheit — a 7 degree Fahrenheit rise over long-term averages. The teams discovered massive bleaching, which occurs when algae living inside coral tissues are expelled. Subsequent surveys carried out together with Australia's James Cook University and Indonesia's Syiah

Kuala University showed 80 percent of those corals have since died. Though the scientists have yet to submit the data for publication in a peer-reviewed journal, they and others say the speed and extent of mortality appears to exceed that of other bleachings in recent history. The cause appears to be the warming seas, which to some degree can be blamed on global warming.

"This is a tragedy not only for some of the world's most biodiverse coral reefs, but also for people in the region," said Caleb McClennen, the New York-based group's marine program manager for Indonesia, noting that many depend on the rich marine life for their food and money earned through tourism.

Animal-shaped cities? Southern Sudan

unveils big plan to remake state capitals JUBA — A city shaped like a giraffe? A rhino-shaped town? Even one that looks from above like a pineapple?

Southern Sudan has unveiled ambitious plans to remake its capital cities in the shapes found on their state flags, and an official says the government is talking with investors to raise the $10 billion the fanciful communities would cost.

The plan in the war-torn region comes ahead of a scheduled January referendum on independence, which most people here believe will lead to the creation of the world's newest country. The south is rich in oil, but poverty and hunger is high throughout the region, which is struggling to recover after a civil war more than two decades long.

The $10 billion concept will take decades to carry out, officials concede, though it may never escape the planning stages. The southern government's own 2010 budget was only $1.9 billion, and the U.N. says more than 90 percent of Southern Sudan's population lives on less than $1 a day.

The plans have evoked bemused smiles — or outright laughter — in Juba, a town that until two years ago barely had any paved roads.

"It doesn't seem like the (Government of Southern Sudan) should be using its resources or staff time when the people of Southern Sudan lack basic services like health care and water," said Nora Petty, an aid worker in Juba with the Malaria Consortium.

After months on the trail - and more than 1,200 miles from their homes in Missouri — the pioneers on their way to Oregon found themselves at places that would later be called Massacre Rocks, Milner Dam and Rock Creek Station.

But their journey's end was at least 900 miles away. To complete it, the emigrants had to continue traveling through some of the most desolate and desert country they had yet experienced and some of the most beautiful. Next they'd travel through Thousand Springs, Salmon Falls and on to Glenns Ferry.

Today, the wagon ruts might slowly be diminishing but the faith and endurance of the pioneers live on. Some Magic Valley residents are blazing their own trails, doing what they can to make sure the memories of the pioneers are not forgotten.

Here, in south-central Idaho, more than 1,200 miles from Independence, Mo., where the trail began, the fear of Indian attacks and rattle snake bites were common fare among the pioneers. Disease was even more common, Davis said.

Cholera was perhaps most deadly, especially in 1849-50 and 1852, according to author William E. Hill. Some emigrant companies reportedly lost two-thirds of their members, while others lost only a few.

Davis, a history teacher at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls, has been studying the Oregon Trail for several years, becoming one of his favorite subjects. ## Second Interlude

When the emigrants entered Idaho, they traveled through some of the most difficult country they had yet encountered - the Snake River Plateau, according to historian Lloyd W. Coffman in his book "Blazing a Wagon Trail to Oregon." "Almost devoid of grass, the rough, rocky lava plain yielded only sagebrush that grew to a height of three feet or more," Coffman explains. "And what sagebrush it was!"

They also encountered splendid water sources, like Thousand Springs.

Thousand Springs

After leaving Rock Creek, the pioneers traveled to a place named Kanaka Rapids or, according to historian David Dary, what the pioneers called Thousand Springs.

Dary, in his book "The Oregon Trail: An American Saga," explains about the history of the area: "For thousands of years volcanic activity spread lava over the Snake River plain, slowly forcing the river south in a great curve. Successive channels of the river and its tributaries were filled with spongy lava, becoming both reservoirs and underground conduits. Here the water from one or more of these buried channels flows from the canyon wall."

> The springs can still be enjoyed today Hagerman, where, along the Snake River, there also are plenty of birds and waterfowl.

At one time, not far away, the area also boasted plenty of salmon.

Not much farther north of Thousand Springs is Salmon Falls, another pioneer stop along the Oregon Trail that received its name because of the abundant salmon population the Indians and emigrants found at the falls. The Indians would catch fish with their hands and spears, Davis said, and would trade them with the pioneers.

The Indians' most popular article of trade was clothing, according to Coffman, while the emigrants appreciated the fresh food.

An emigrant named Overton Johnson observed that "the Indians take immense quantities of Salmon, which they cut into thin slices, dry in the sun, and afterwards pack them in grass cases."

Joel Palmer, another pioneer on his way to Oregon in the mid-1840s, wrote about trading with the Indians in a journal entry dated Aug. 20, 1845: "We traveled about nine miles, reaching the Salmon Falls. Here are eighteen or twenty Indian huts. Salmon came up to these falls: the Indians have an abundance of them, which they very readily dispose of for hooks, powder, balls, clothing, calico and knives, and in fact for almost anything we have at our dispos-

There's not as many salmon in the area as there used to be, but it's ripe with history, some of it dating further back than the Oregon Trail – such as the fossil remains of an ancient equine at least 3.4 million years old.

First discovered in the early 1900s by a local farmer named Elmer Cook, the Hagerman Horse is today popularized at Smithsonian Institution, and the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument is visited every year by thousands of people from across the globe.

Those who come to the site have the chance to see nearby wagon ruts, leftover from the Oregon Trail.

It was this stretch of the trail — called Emigrant Trail – that I trudged in rain in late April and again visited with Steve Davis in June.

About three miles north is a lookout point, where the Hagerman Valley is spread below. Trail ruts crawl up the hill, today filled with tumble weeds. "This was probably their last look at green trees, perhaps water, before dropping but overall those early years guided the emigrants to the most tranquil and one of the finally reached down into Glenns Ferry," Davis said atop the lookout.

Third Interlude

"From the early 1840s into the middle 1850s, most of region through which the Oregon Trail crossed came to tolerate the seasonal passage of emigrants with their wagons and livestock," writes Dary. "The forts and trading posts provided the Indians with a place to trade, often Snake. with emigrants. #### JOURNAL ENTRY

Morning, April 22, 2010, Emigrant Trail, Hagerman, Idaho: I came into the newsroom a little after 5 a.m. today ... It's raining quite steady today, but I'm going to walk part of the OT in Hagerman. Isn't that what the pioneers did — walk it in sunshine and shadow, in rain and snow, in warm weather and in cold? ... I'll just have to protect my camera, as the rain is coming down pretty good. Later, after my hike: I walked part of the OT in Hagerman, near the Fossil Beds National Monument. ... Didn't make it all the way to the lookout point about three miles farther, as I underestimated the rain, which isn't a hard pour but a constant drizzle, and I began to worry about my camera... I'm excited about writing this story, doing the research and learning more about the history of the trail and why it's important today. I believe it is important today, for its historicity and the opportunity it allows us to explore the outdoors.

I heard meadowlarks today. The clouds floating in a steel-gray sky; the grass ... creeping along the trail; the small yellow flowers dancing in the breeze and as they are hit by drops of rain; the fresh welcoming scents of spring and rain. Taken together, this was a memorable outdoors experience I probably wouldn't have had today if I'd not decided to walk the Oregon Trail.

Note on sources

A number of sources, listed above, have been used for the research of this series coupled with actual visits to most of the Magic Valley sites. As far as actual people used in the articles, however, I purposely stayed clear of professional historians and opted instead to go with area residents who've made visits to and study of the Oregon Trail an important part of their lives.

The three main people I've included in the two articles — Gary Guy, Francis Egbert and Steve Davis — have, through the course of their lives, walked, taught or discovered parts of the trail. And in the process, they've developed a passion about teaching the trail's history, in one way or another, to the rising generation. A number of books and periodicals have been written about the Oregon Trail. Interestingly, though perhaps not surprisingly, discrepancies exists about such things as how many actually walked the trail or how many actually died at Massacre Rocks. Of the latter, Dary says it was five emigrants and four Indians, but others have said 10 pioneers. I obviously am still learning about the trail and look forward to further

Wolves and elk numbers

 I read an article that said wolves were having little impact on elk populations. From my personal hunting experience, I disagree. How could the research be so far off?

• We were fortu-nate last week to have Craig White, the department researcher that was briefly quoted in the article, here at the regional office to explain to hunters the department's research at last week's sportsmen's breakfast.

The department's research is part of a statewide effort that includes several big game management units and is based on determining elk survival rates and causes of death for radio-collared animals.

For clarification, Craig said wolves were definitely impacting several elk populations, because of predation on cow elk, but especially through predation on calves. The Lolo Zone is one of the zones where Fish and Game has collected significant information regarding elk survival and population trends. Elk populations in several other zones, including the Sawtooth Zone in the core of Idaho are also being impacted.

The controversial part of the article was the statement that the data indicated several elk populations were not being impacted by wolves. All elk populations north of the Snake River are impacted by wolves, but at varying degrees. In zones without wolves or with few wolves, they are having little impact on elk numbers. Some of the zones in this group include the Tex Creek, Owyhee, Weiser, and Bear River zones.

Sportsmen tell us they are seeing fewer elk in places they like to hunt. This research project is ongoing but limited by the number of elk we are able to radio collar and by cost. We do know wolves are plaving a role in elk population dynamics but the extent of that role varies depending on the location, habitat, wolf numbers, weather and our ability to manage both.

Vintage backpacks

wo major outdoors-products companies, Kelty and JanSport, are taking a retro tilt with backpacks for 2011. This month, both companies unveiled backpacks for next year's line that look like models as seen on the Appalachian Trail circa 1964.

The JanSport D2 is an external-frame pack based on the company's original backpacking model from the 1960s. The company is marketing it as "tried and true old school with new school innovation baked in."

Enormous capacity to the tune of about 5,200 cubic inches of space is a main feature. It can haul enough equipment for a week in the woods. Set the D2 on the ground and it'll stay freestanding, its compartments and square pockets accessible like drawers in a chest.

The D2 has a big external frame that can adjust to fit adult backpackers of most heights and body types. Despite > its overgrown size, the D2 weighs just less than 6 pounds, which is only a bit heavier than modernday, internal-frame packs of the same capacity.

The D2, one of several retro models JanSport now sells, will cost $275 when it ships to stores this winter. Kelty's to-be-released Vintage line includes five retro backpacks and a duffel bag. The company's product developers drew inspiration from classic '60s and '70s designs to build the Vintage line, which, like the JanSport models, is touted to blend old-school looks with modern functionality.

THE GEAR Stephen Regenold

The Kelty Mockingbird model is a stand-out. It has leather accents, metal hardware and exposed zippers. A classic 500D Cordura fabric is employed for the 1,700-cubic-inch pack.

Modern touches on the Mockingbird include cell phone sleeves and laptopfriendly sizing. The side pockets are removable on this top-loading pack, which is made for outdoors or everyday use. The Mockingbird will cost $124.95 when it comes out in early 2011.

"There is a world-wide vintage trend going on," said Sue Edmiston, a marketing director at Kelty. JanSport and Kelty know that even backpacks are not spared from the trend of borrowing looks from decades past and making them new again.

Stressful job can affect your health

DEAR DR. GOTT: At age 50-plus, I took a job that was stressful to the extent it caused sleepless nights and loss of appetite. I resorted to taking an over-the-counter sleep aid, which left me with a headache and feeling sluggish in the morning. To alleviate those symptoms, I took Excedrin for the headache and a caffeine bump. At the end of the year, my contract expired. I lost 20 pounds and was exhausted.

I went to my physician for a regular checkup. Routine lab work indicated I had an elevated TSH (6). My doctor asked about fatigue, weight gain, hair loss, brittle nails. dry skin and more. I explained the circumstances of my former job and because of my age, I was at least perimenopausal. I was still having periods every three weeks instead of four. I felt the symptoms I had indicated hypothyroidism. I expressed my feelings and was prescribed levothyroxine, which was to continue forever. Well, I took it for six months and saw no improvement, except for a lowered TSH level. I gained back the 20 pounds and weaned myself off the medication. I still noticed no change in my health.

My question is: Could adrenal fatigue or exhaustion from the stress and being perimenopausal be factors in the elevated TSH? Could they normalize on their own when the stress is removed? I understand there are cardiac implications with levothyroxine. I don't suffer any issues, but there is a family history on both sides. At what point does the risk outweigh the benefit? I currently feel fine, my nails are longer than they have been in years, and my hair is OK, as is my skin. My energy level is acceptable, and I wish the 20 pounds stayed off that I gained back. DEAR READER: I can understand why your physician put you on levothyroxine, because hypothyroidism can cause fatigue, changes in hair texture and thickness, split finger nails, dry skin and irregular menstrual cycles. One striking difference is that weight gain is relatively common. However, the reversal in your case is obviously jobrelated.

Let's cover a few basic differences between adrenal fatigue and hypothyroidism. Adrenal fatigue carries no specific symptoms of heart

Minidoka hospital staff attend FEMA training

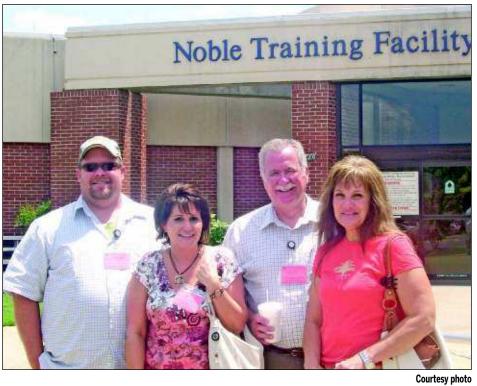

By Judy Albertson Times-News writer

Memorial Minidoka Hospital's emergency planning committee, consisting of staff members Mark Phillips, Gayla Staker, Kim Vega and Joel Rogers, recently completed Homeland Security training at the Center for Domestic Preparedness (CDP), located in Anniston, Ala.

The CDP is operated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and is the only federally charted weapons of mass destruction (WMD) training facility in the nation.

"There was 32 hours of instruction. The four of us are on the planning committee, but we will be meeting to select other hospital employees to attend this training," Rogers said.

The CDP offers emergency responders from rural Chicago. This allows all to establish similar policies and actions during a mass-casualty exercise or event − thus

"Friendships were estabcommunities the same from different agencies to lished between those of us from Rupert with responders from Florida, New York City, California and other areas across the country," like Rogers said. "The CDP offers excellent opportunities for administrative, hazardous all emergency responders." The CDP's federally fundcovers 10 disciplines: emergency management, emergency medical services, fire services, government/public safety communications and public works.

"The biggest thing that I think is that the training unites everyone," Rogers said. "At the 9-11 disaster there were so many emergency responders that wantthings a little differently and the New York people said they spent more time teaching than anything. This plan incorporates a response plan so everybody is using the same procedures. It helps everyone understand the technology."

CDP's campus includes health care and public health training at the Noble Facility, Training the nation's only hospital facility dedicated to training hospital and health care professionals in disaster-pre- http://cdp.dhs.gov. paredness and response.

Course participants are selected from the nation's 11 Resident training at the million emergency responders. The training ensures that responders gain critical skills and confidence to be better prepared to effectively respond to local incidents or potential WMD incidents.

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. -As far as Brett Favre was concerned, he was finished.

Last we saw the 40-yearold quarterback in action, he was barely able to walk off the Superdome turf, his body aching from the beating the New Orleans Saints delivered in January's NFC title game.

Tuiasosopo leads M's for second straight day

BALTIMORE — No one would have blamed lighthitting Matt Tuiasosopo for blabbing endlessly about his second home run in two games.

Instead, the Seattle Mariners utility player spoke excitedly about another rare occurrence: his fielding gem in the outfield.

Tuiasosopo extended his unlikely power surge with a three-run homer, and the Mariners beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-5 Wednesday night for their season-high fourth straight series win.

Tuiasosopo's drive off Jeremy Guthrie (7-12) in the second inning put Seattle ahead for good. Tuiasosopo has two homers and seven RBIs over the last two nights after totaling one homer and two RBIs in his first 30 games.

He also prevented the tving run from scoring in the eighth, making a diving catch of a two-out liner to left by Matt Wieters with Adam Jones running from first base on the pitch.

"I don't make that catch and a run scores. It was definitely a thrill," Tuiasosopo said.

It was his fifth start this season in the outfield, compared to 11 starts in the infield.

Asked the last time he made a catch like that, Tuiasosopo recalled making a similar play in high school. He said he nearly caught one like that in the minors, "but I missed it."

Titans RB Blount caps night practice by punching teammate

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — This punch won't be so costly for LeGarrette Blount. The rookie running back capped off a feisty night practice for the Tennessee Titans with a short punch to the helmet of defensive end Eric Bakhtiari a few moments after having his own helmet ripped off for the second time in as many plays. Blount had just returned to the Titans on Wednesday night after being excused since Sunday for personal reasons. He was carrying the ball in a drill near the goal line when his helmet came off, and he kept his feet moving toward the end zone.

The play ended with some pushing and shoving, then Blount threw a right into Bakhtiari's facemask. Blount quickly talked to coach Jeff Fisher before leaving the field.

"He apologized, and I said he didn't have to apologize," Fisher said. "It's football. It's training camp." Blount was suspended by the University of Oregon for eight games of last season for punching Boise State defensive end Byron Hout after a game on Sept. 3. Without much of a senior season, Blount went undrafted. The Titans, having traded away LenDale White, brought in Blount as a free agent. On the play that sparked Wednesday's scuffle, Blount said his helmet had been intentionally pulled off the play before. A new NFL rule going into effect this season stops the play when a player's helmet comes off. Then his helmet came off again. Blount said he apologized to Fisher because he had promised the coach his fighting days were behind him. "That was my past. It just came up again. I got into one of those situations where the defense pushed me too far. With training camp and everything going the way it is and being as intense as it is and me being a rookie, it was just something I shouldn't have done. But I did it," Blount said.

Fisher downplayed the punch. "His past is his past. Is that the first punch you've seen in camp this year? No. I'm not disappointed whatsoever. I have great confidence in the young man that he learned from his mistake, and he's very competitive. That's why we brought him in here is to watch him run the football like that," Fisher said.

Union challenges Mets' actions in K-Rod case

NEW YORK — The players' union filed a grievance against the New York Mets and the commissioner's office on Wednesday, protesting how the team has handled Francisco Rodriguez since he was injured in a fight at Citi Field. The Major League Baseball Players Association is setting closer on the disqualified list and their effort to convert his contract to a non-guaranteed deal. If the case isn't settled, arbitrator Shyam Das would decide whether the team's actions were justi-challenging the Mets' decision to place the recordfied. No hearing date has been set. 'We disagree with the position of the Players Association," the Mets said in a statement. "We believe our action was justified and appropriate." Rodriguez was placed on the disqualified list

Jets' Ryan says Dungy 'unfairly judged me'

CORTLAND, N.Y. - Rex Ryan wants Tony Dungy to know he's more than just a foul-mouthed coach.

SPORTS

Dungy criticized the New York lets coach earlier this week for his Rex-pletive-filled appearance on the premiere episode of HBO's "Hard Knocks."

"The thing is, I've been a big admirer of Tony Dungy, and I'm sure a lot of people are," Ryan said Wednesday. "I felt that he unfairly judged me, and that was disappointing to me."

Dungy, a devout Christian, told "The Dan Patrick Show" on Monday that NFL commissioner Roger Goodell should talk to Rvan about his excessive cursing because, "I just don't think the league needs that." Dungy, who won a Super Bowl with Indianapolis, is an NFL analyst for NBC.

Ryan said he called Dungy and left a message that included his telephone number, and anticipated hearing back from him.

"I've invited him to come to camp or any time to spend the day with me and the organization," Ryan said. "I think maybe he'll have a different take on it."

Ryan said last week he only cared that he disappointed his mother, Doris, but apologized if he offended "more people than I usually offend."

there is no chat planned between Goodell and Ryan.

"No. Rex's mother delivered the message," Aiello told The Associated Press.

TEBOW LEAVES PRACTICE WITH POSSIBLE INJURY

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. - Rookie quarterback Tim Tebow's first foray into an NFL end zone appears to have left him with injured ribs.

Denver's rookie quarterback missed his first practice of training camp on Wednesday after jogging off the field during warmups. While the Broncos aren't saying what's wrong with their first-round draft pick from Florida, Tebow might be feeling the effects of his game-ending 7-yard touchdown run in his pro debut Sunday night.

After absorbing several hard hits, Tebow powered his way into the end zone on the game's final play, smacking into Cincinnati Bengals linebacker Abdul Hodge to the goal line and bowling over Kyries Hebert, leaving the safety woozy with his mouth guard lying on the ground at his feet.

Wearing flak jacket-like extra passing around his ribs this week, Tebow participated in both workouts Tuesday when the Broncos reconvened at Dove whoops his offensive teammates.

About 10 minutes into warmups on Wednesday, Tebow huddled with head athletic trainer Steve Antonopulos and appeared to be favoring his left rib cage or abdomen as he jogged off the field and into the team's headquarters.

He didn't return to practice, after NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said which the team scrubbed his scheduled gathering with reporters.

Coach Josh McDaniels left the field without comment, and in keeping with the team's policy not to discuss the reasons for absences from practices, team spokesman Patrick Smyth said he couldn't disclose why Tebow missed the workout.

The Washington Redskins defensive tackle began the workout as usual, taking part in defensive drills, but he was out of his pads and standing on the sideline with a towel on his neck shortly after the 11-on-11 plays began.

Haynesworth remained with his teammates until the end of practice and referred questions to coach Mike Shanahan.

MANNING TO SIT OUT AGAINST STEELERS

ALBANY, N.Y. - Eli Manning is going to sit out the New York Giants' preseason game against the Pittsburgh Steelers on Saturday night.

Coach Tom Coughlin announced the decision after a scarred Manning did not practice on Wednesday at training camp at the University at Albany because of stitches in his forehead.

While Manning insisted he is feeling fine after needing 12 stitches on Monday night to close a cut on his left side of his head, Coughlin said the team is concerned that wearing a helmet might break the stitches or irritate the wound.

Backup quarterback Jim Sorgi also didn't practice because of shoulder and rib injuries, and Coughlin was not sure whether he would play in the Giants' first home game at the New Meadowlands Stadium.

Rhett Bomar took all the snaps on Wednesday.

SEAHAWKS TRADE DE JACKSON TO LIONS FOR PICK

RENTON, Wash. - The Seattle Seahawks traded defensive end and 2008 first-round pick Lawrence Jackson to the Detroit Lions on Wednesday for an undisclosed draft choice in 2011.

A day after Jackson admitted he was in limbo in Seattle, the Seahawks announced they had traded him away. Seattle general manager John Schneider was not on the job when the Seahawks drafted Jackson out of Southern California.

Neither was Pete Carroll, Jackson's former coach at USC, or the rest of Seattle's defensive staff. They are installing schemes that call for ends to be run stuffers or fast pass rushers, and Jackson has so far proven to be neither.

Jackson becomes the latest arrival onto Detroit's revamped defensive line. Veteran tackle Kyle Vanden Bosch and Ndamukong Suh, the second overall pick in April's draft, arrived earlier to help rescue the NFL's worst defense.

In Seattle, former tackle Red Bryant has moved his 335-plus pounds to end on one side of the starting defense. Seattle traded this offseason with Philadelphia for former part-time linebacker Chris Clemons to be its passrushing end, then acquired 315-pound Haynesworth missed the first nine defensive tackle and end Kentwan

Clark St., Paul, Idaho, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by MICHAEL NINO, an Unmarried Man, Grantor, to Charles W. Fawcett, Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of FIRST FEDERAL SAVINGS BANK OF TWIN FALLS, recorded June 13, 2008, as Instrument No. 497295, and re-recorded June 20, 2008, as Instrument No. 497384, Mortgage records of Minidoka County, Idaho; and assigned to the IDAHO HOUSING AND FINANCE ASSOCIATION by Assignment of Deed of Trust recorded on August 21, 2008, as Instrument No. 498374, Mortgage records of Minidoka County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTOR IS NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506 (4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT HE IS, OR IS NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, monthly installment payments under the Deed of Trust Note dated June 13, 2008, in the amount of $500.00 each, for the months of March through July, 2010, inclusive; and for each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reimbursement. All delinquent payments are now due, plus accumulated late charges, plus any costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure. The accrued interest is at the rate of 5.51% per annum from February 1, 2010. The principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $79,834.29, plus accrued interest at the rate of 5.51% per annum from February 1, 2010.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Kate" for a year. She's caring and down-toearth. We have so much in common, and time goes by quickly when we're together.

That's why, when a new job brought Kate closer to my place, I told her she could stay with me, so her commute would be less stressful while she gets used to the job and learns her way around. I enjoy making us dinner, since I get home two hours before she does.

After being single and living alone for six years, I want a relationship. Maybe in the future I'll want her to move in with me. We spend weeknights together and go out as a couple every weekend. But I also like "my time" and "my night out." I am a part-time publicist for an entertainer and try to keep up with the local music and club scene. Two nights work for me. I share the details with Kate — including the crazy things I see "singles" do when I'm out. I have explained to her how spending these nights on my own makes me appreciate her more when I return. But I feel a distinct "chill" from her

I have no problem with Kate doing a "girls' night out" on those evenings. Am I wrong to want alone time? Am I not committed enough to this relationship?

IN SO. CALIFORNIA DEAR REASONABLE: It's not wrong to want some time independent of Kate, particularly since it relates to your business. Her cool reaction may be related to her insecurities with your relationship, as well as the "crazy things" you're describing when you get home. It may have been a mistake have recently been homosexual fantasies, it does not necessarily mean that you would enjoy an encounter with another man. Because you say you have a "very good sex life" with your wife, you may have some bisexual leanings. However, 45 years ago you promised at the altar to be faithful to your wife. So I'll offer the same advice I would have given to Adam if he had written me back then: Don't take a bite of that apple because it could get you evicted from Eden.

DEAR ABBY: What do you say to people when you have a child in jail and they don't know? Should you lie and say everything is fine?

 EAST COAST MOM DEAR MOM: It depends upon how well you know the people and how much personal information you're comfortable revealing about your family. But I don't think you should lie because that kind of news has a way of traveling.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE<sup>8</sup>

"There are a thousand hocking at the branches of evil to one who is striking at the root."

— Henry David Thoreau

The players at the Dyspeptics Club can act in unison only when combining to insult one member of the foursome. Occasionally it seems less important to have a good reason to criticize someone else, and more important to present a united front.

In today's deal, however, the arguments presented against South's line of play in four spades sounded reasonable. What do you think?

Playing four spades, South took East's heart king with his ace, then played to dummy's club ace and ran the club queen, discarding a heart. That allowed South to ruff the heart return and try to drop the spade king. When that failed, he was down to his last - the finesse against the diamond queen — but he came up empty for down one. Were his table-mates right to complain about his declarer play? Yes, they were. The correct ap proach is to recognize that West has overcalled on a broken heart suit - the lead marks him with no better a suit than five to the Q-10. Since West has risked his life vulnerable, he must have the balance of high cards. Start by leading out the spade ace, trying to drop the spade king; you will be home without needing to take a chance if that line works.

If that attempt fails, take the club finesse and discard your beart on the club ace before going after diamonds for the possible
