IDAHO FALLS — All summer long, Idaho's gubernatorial race has been a slowly simmering mix of campaign stops, fundraisers, and two candidates contrasting their differences from afar through press releases and comments in town hall meetings.

On Thursday, that all changed.

For the first time in the campaign, Republican incumbent Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and his Democratic rival, Keith Allred, squared off in a nearly one-hour debate. In a packed room of about 300 attendees at the Idaho Falls campus of Idaho State University, the two shook hands and took to their podiums.

Both candidates received loud applause throughout the event, as they answered questions about roads, tax exemptions and public education posed by moderator David Adler, director of the University of Idaho

State court rules on indigent care

Change affects those seeking help with medical bills

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Being unemployed no longer guarantees that Idaho counties will pay your medical bills.

In a narrow decision issued Monday, the Idaho Supreme Court supported a district court judge who ruled that St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center patient Megan Freeman was not medically indigent, so Gooding County did not have to reimburse the hospital for her treatment.

The crux of the case rested on the definition of "medically indigent." Freeman is unemployed by choice, so the county commissioners decided she wasn't indigent because she could earn the money to pay for her treatment. Their rationale was based on an Idaho law that allows counties to require indigent people to get jobs to repay county money spent on their care. St. Luke's challenged the commissioners' decision, arguing that indigence does not include consideration of the potential to earn income.

It does now. The Supreme Court decided that because Idaho law says those who can work must reimburse counties for their medical care, the Legislature's intent can be

Blaine Co. assessed values drop more than 10 percent

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Across the country, residential and business property values have slid, and south-central Idaho is no exception.

Neither is Blaine County, where overall property valuation by county assessors has dropped about 11 percent in the last year, according to the assessor's office. Some of the worst-hit areas have seen home values plummet by as much as 40 percent in the past few years.

"The effect of what's going on in the economy has definitely affected Blaine County; we're no longer exempt from that," said Assessor Valdi Pace.

The combined assessed value of property in the county climbed from about $5 billion to $11.8 billion between 2000 and 2009, but dropped in 2010 to $10.5 billion.

Pace said that the county isn't making any formal projections about valuation in future years, but her sense is that the fall is at least slowing.

"I'm hoping it's going to turn around. I'm hoping it's going to level out some," she said. "I'd like to think it's hit bottom, I don't know that it has for sure."

The drop has affected the real-estate market, as a glut of reduced-price homes gives buyers a lot to choose from. At the same time, sellers are trying to pay off mortgages, often for more than their home's assessment.

"The valuations make it very difficult to sell a property at a fair market value," said Sherri Vollmer of Momentum Real Estate in Hailey. "Buyers call the assessor's office and know what it's assessed at, (but) the asking prices are higher because the sellers owe more."

She said that as foreclosures mount, their effect on the real-estate industry will continue.

As for county government, the drop in assessed value has a limited direct impact, but a significant political one.

"We see that assessed value decline as an economic indicator that there are a lot of people who would struggle with any kind of property-tax increase," said

Idaho National Guard heads to last in-state training before deploying to Iraq

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Iraq and Operation: New Dawn are trudging closer and Idaho's guardsmen are reaching another milestone in their deployment: their last in-state training.

Members of the Idaho National Guard will spend about three weeks at Orchard Training Area near Boise. After that, they will have just more than a week at home before shipping out to Camp Shelby, Miss. About 1,500 Idaho guardsmen will be heading out with the 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team.

"I think it will open a lot of people's eyes that 100 percent this is going to happen," Spc. Camron Lee, a Fairfield guardsman, said of the training. "It is going to be a little strange for me given that I've never deployed before."

Lee said he is trying to spend time with friends and family before he heads for training and Iraq. Wednesday night was a barbecue. Before that, his grandfather blessed him at his church and wished him to come home safe.

"I think it's going to be kind of stressful," Lee said of deployment. "Make sure you say all of your goodbyes,

THE SCHEDULE

Saturday to Sept. 9: Annual training at Orchard Training Facility.
Sept. 10-17: Soldiers return home for a week before becoming active-duty.
Sept. 17: Guardsmen become active-duty, moving from the purview of the governor to the president.
Week of Sept. 20: Guardsmen head to Camp Shelby, Miss., for mission-specific training. They will be here for about three months.
Mid-November: Soldiers leave Camp Shelby for Kuwait, heading into Iraq from there.

Unease settles over Iraq after pullout of U.S. combat brigade

By Liz Sly
Los Angeles Times

BAGHDAD — Iraqis danced in the streets when U.S. troops withdrew from their cities a little over a year ago. After the last American combat brigade trundled across the border into Kuwait early Thursday, reversing a journey that began more than seven years ago, there was no rejoicing.

Instead, a mood of deep apprehension tinged with bitterness is taking hold as Iraqis digest the reality that the American invaders whom they once feared would stay forever are in fact going home — at a time when their country is in the throes of a deep political crisis that many think could turn increasingly violent.

Two arrested after pot found in vehicle

Times-News

A pair of Colorado residents took a side trip to a southern Idaho jail Wednesday after their vehicle was found to contain marijuana.

Christine Braithwaite, 40, and Michael Braithwaite, 46, both of Wheat Ridge, Colo., were arrested by an Idaho State Police trooper near the Interstate 84 and Interstate 86 interchange. Trooper Tyler Barrett had pulled the Braithwaites over for allegedly driving 87 mph in a 65 mph construction zone on westbound Interstate 84. Barrett reported that their 2007 Jeep Liberty sport utility vehicle smelled strongly of marijuana. Upon search of the vehicle, Barrett found one-fourth of a pound of marijuana, along with multiple pipes and other paraphernalia.

The Braithwaites were transported to the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center in Burley by Barrett and Trooper Les Nye and charged with felony possession of a controlled substance and misdemeanor possession of paraphernalia. Each has a $300 bond on the paraphernalia charge. Bond has yet to be set for the possession charges.

Indigent

rule in favor was a dose of reality: counties have to consider jobs available in the area when deciding whether someone could work, rather than assuming income from a hypothetical job.

"Cases like this have been decided both ways in the lower courts and then never appealed," Shull said. "This is the first to go to the Supreme Court."

The Supreme Court touched on the issue of indigence in a previous case but did not address it directly in that opinion. The 1984 case, Carpenter v. Twin Falls County, dealt with a man who had voluntarily quit his job after applying to the county to pay his wife's hospital bills. The Supreme Court said then that Carpenter was indigent since he had no income.

But in his opinion supporting Gooding County, Justice Joel Horton said subsequent laws enacted by the Legislature, particularly in the last decade, allowed the court to expand a person's resources beyond income. Justice Jim Jones and Pro Tem Justice Linda Copple Trout concurred. Justices Roger Burdick and Warren Jones dissented.

The Medically Indigent Law was written to protect people who don't have insurance and don't qualify for Medicaid. Under the law, counties have to pay the patient's bill at Medicaid rates up to $11,000. Any additional cost is picked up by the state Catastrophic Health Care Cost Program, which has struggled over the past few years to fulfill its part with the money appropriated by the Legislature. St. Luke's declined comment for this story.

Candidates

Falls, portrayed himself as a citizens' advocate who, through the nonpartisan organization The Common Interest, has experience in working across party lines to reach a consensus.

Otter's experience gave him accomplishments to list — the start of Project 60 to boost Idaho's economic development, and lawsuits filed against the federal government to preserve Idaho's independence.

But it also put him on the defensive to explain why the state had to cut its public-schools budget.

"I'm the first to tell you it wasn't an easy thing to do," Otter said in introductory remarks, saying that the situation required either living within the state's means or raising taxes.

Otter said his goals include a diversified economy, an education system in Idaho that prepares students for the workforce, and protecting the state from federal efforts to run Idaho's affairs.

Allred continually stressed the need to preserve and improve public education.

"There were multiple good options for keeping education whole without raising taxes," Allred said in his introduction.

The two sparred over tax exemptions. Allred wants to gather statewide input on which tax exemptions should be scuttled to reduce the overall tax rate and boost the state's economic health — particularly to aid small businesses.

Otter disagreed. "When you change the tax structure, somebody has to pay," he said.

The two differed about how to protect Idaho from burdensome, unpopular federal mandates.

Allred said that based on his experience as a mediator, waivers from mandates can be successful with a good plan in place.

"That's a heck of a lot more productive than filing all of the lawsuits that Governor Otter is so proud of," Allred said.

But Otter said Idaho has long tried unsuccessfully to get waivers for federal mandates for issues ranging from endangered species to education.

Both candidates took aim at each other over their opponents' lack of specifics.

Otter blasted Allred for not saying whether he'd eliminate exemptions for the Idaho National Laboratory and agriculture when the question was asked.

"I don't think I heard an answer," Otter said, after Allred said that with more than 100 exemptions, a thorough review and input is needed.

Allred took Otter to task for not giving voters an answer as to what changes are needed to pay for the state's roads needs, criticizing his 2009 efforts to raise fees for cars at a higher rate than for heavy trucks in an economic downturn.

"Governor Otter, that's just wrong and you should come clean on this," he said.

Otter said he's waiting for his task force on transportation to finish its report, which isn't due until December.

"Why would I create a task force and get out in front of it?" Otter responded, adding that heavy infrastructure is crucial for Idaho exports.

Allred said the December deadline of the report was purposely put in place, and that a study the task force received shows heavy truck drivers underpaying their share of road maintenance by the millions.

"If you're serious about it, get your friends in the trucking industry to pay their fair share," Allred said.

Otter took aim at Allred's description of The Common Interest's role, saying that citizens already give input to legislators without the organization.

When Allred said The Common Interest's approach is "different from the six or seven lobbyists who show up at the tax committee," Otter gave a quick retort:

"Being a lobbyist, you probably understand that better than anybody else."

Allred fired back, alleging Otter awarded a $60 million contract for a statewide broadband system to Qwest Communications because of donations the company gave his campaign. Otter said Syringa Networks, which disputes the state's award, has also contributed to past campaigns.

At the end, each candidate had a final chance to make his case.

In closing remarks, Otter said he wants to continue the state down the path of responsible budgeting and keeping government in the people's hands.

"I'd like to keep for another four years the best job I've ever had," he said.

Allred said that tough times call for something other than Otter's track record of proposing a gas-tax increase.

"My track record is different," Allred said. "I haven't been a career politician. I've been a citizens' advocate."

Four more debates are scheduled before the election.

County Commissioner Tom Bowman.

If the county were to raise property taxes by the allowed 3 percent maximum this year, it would result in a hit of about $2 for the owner of a home worth $100,000.

However, that 3 percent increase would raise only $230,000 for the county over the year. Since voters just passed a levy to help fund Blaine Manor, the county-run nursing home, Bowman and other commissioners say it's unlikely they will institute such an increase.

"Obviously there's a desire to keep taxes and expenses down for individuals," said Commissioner Angenie McCleary. "All of those factors are of course challenging and concerning; it makes it just that much more important that we're being so careful about our budgeting."

Even if the county doesn't implement the 3 percent increase, it will earn as much from property taxes as it did last year. This is because the levy rate — which is multiplied by a property's value to determine the amount owed on property taxes — will increase.

The result is that property owners will pay a larger percentage of each dollar their property is worth.

In the Wood River Valley, the glut of available homes means the construction industry remains stagnant, slowing any recovery from the recession.

"Our construction industry isn't going to bounce back as quickly as we would like, because there are a bunch of good deals out there on the market," Bowman said.

Pace said there is still construction in Ketchum and Sun Valley, but very little farther south aside from remodels on foreclosed properties.

They might be giants, or maybe not Pick your poison. To the south, according to Shoshoni Indian legend, dwelt a 30-foot-tall evil spirit who lurked in the mountains, grabbed unsuspecting passersby, tossed them into a basket he carried on his back and snacked on them later. To the north, there was a rocky giant with sticky hands and a fondness for human flesh.

Tsawhawbits, the former, lived in Jarbidge Canyon near the Idaho-Nevada border. Tso'apittse, the latter, roamed the Sawtooth Mountains. They were not to be trifled with. Tsawhawbits and Tso'apittse are sometimes used interchangeably, but by any name they were ornery. And for the Shoshoni, they seemed very real.

How real? Some Shoshoni still won't camp in the Jarbidge area, for fear of the giants.

Both monsters could cross creeks — and presumably the Jarbidge and Bruneau rivers — in a single step, and were fond of bounding up steep mountain peaks. Some folks swore the leviathans had just one eye, cyclops-style, with which they could paralyze prey with a glance. Others reckoned the demons hopped around on one leg. And there was some talk of razor-sharp hooks.

Archaeologist Thomas E. Farner, writing in the journal "Ancient American," says these stories are echoes of other tales worldwide about giants swept away by a great flood.

The Shoshoni, the legend goes, had to get rid of these bad-news behemoths themselves. The favored techniques were cornering the giants in the caves where they slept and burning them alive, or in winter stranding them outdoors where they'd freeze to death.

Yet in the Shoshoni tradition, giants aren't the only cannibals. Some caves in the Owyhee Mountains are said to be inhabited by Nirumbees, two-foot-tall naked dwarves with long tails and superhuman strength. Some versions of the saga have them armed with invisible arrows.

They're sneaky too, wrapping their tails around their bodies to disguise themselves, kidnapping human children and switching their own young for the Indian kids. When the imposter babies are nursed, they kill their surrogate moms.

The long and short of it is, this is a tough neighborhood. Legendarily so.

Jerome cuts proposed water, sewer increases from budget

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

JEROME — When the Jerome City Council first saw the city's $15.8 million budget on Aug. 4, some council members balked at a proposal to hire new employees in a time of financial insecurity. They also scrutinized proposed rate increases for water and sewer service.

On Wednesday night, they resumed that scrutiny, discussing budget issues with city department heads before Monday's public budget hearing.

The council and city administrators said they wanted to approach the 2011 budget in a clear, conservative and progressive way.

City revenues for the coming year, including a 3 percent increase to water and sewer rates, are estimated at a little more than $16 million. Councilwoman Marjorie Schmidt said that this year's 56 percent increase to water rates was overdue, but another rate hike this year would be too much to ask citizens.

TAKE PART

A public hearing on Jerome's proposed $15.8 million budget will be held at 5:30 p.m. Monday at Council Chambers, 100 E. Ave. A.

"People are financially sensitive right now," Schmidt said. "A 3 percent increase is reasonable. If we don't pass it, it would show the public that we aren't raising rates just because we can."

Dropping the rate increase would knock $65,837 from projected fiscal year 2011 revenues.

It's money that could be used, as Mayor John Shine said the city isn't accruing funds for potential projects or to handle, say, part of the sewer system failing.

"We don't have money set aside for upgrades," Shine said. "And we're not setting anything aside for the future."

Many Jerome city departments are also stretched thin as they strive to complete work on the 93 Tech Project. City Waterworks Director John Boyd presented his needs for two more water operators, a truck driver, a part-time office manager and vehicle and equipment purchases.

"We are operating at 98 percent efficiency right now," City Administrator Ben Marchant said. "I don't think you can demand more efficiency without resources or equipment. My fear is that we can do it but it is going to come at a cost."

The council discussed allowing new hires in the waterworks department to remain in the proposed budget but asked that the 3 percent utility rate increases be removed, along with some of the equipment requested by Boyd.

The council and the city mutually agreed that fiscal 2011, which begins on Oct. 1, will be a year of commitment to communication so 2012 budget procedures will transpire a little easier.

The budget will be set on Sept. 7.

Former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin speaks during a rally for Georgia Republican gubernatorial candidate Karen Handel, background, Aug. 9 in Atlanta.

Primary losses blunt Sarah Palin’s ‘mama grizzly’ claws

By Philip Elliott
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — It’s been a summer of setbacks for Sarah Palin. Candidate “cubs” endorsed by the Mama Grizzly in Chief have been suffering a recent string of primary election losses.

The Republicans’ 2008 vice presidential nominee promised a pack of “mama grizzly” candidates would rise up and defeat Democrats in this November’s elections. But office-seekers she supported in Kansas, Wyoming and Washington state lost their primaries despite her high-profile endorsements. And Karen Handel lost her runoff contest for Georgia governor a day after sharing an Atlanta stage with Palin.

Now, Alaska’s Senate primary on Tuesday is shaping up as an embarrassing defeat in her own backyard. Sen. Lisa Murkowski is expected to dispatch the challenger Palin has endorsed in the Republican contest.

Palin says it isn’t about picking winners.

“Regardless of whether the many candidates I’ve had the honor of endorsing win or lose this time around, I support them because they boldly shake things up in their primary races,” she said in a Facebook message.

Her choices have included a mix of tea party favorites and other antiestablishment figures.

- She backed former Super Bowl champion Clint Didier over establishment-recruited Dino Rossi in Washington state’s GOP Senate primary. Didier lost on Tuesday.

- She supported staunchly conservative Rep. Todd Tiahrt in the Kansas GOP Senate primary. He was defeated by Rep. Jerry Moran on Aug. 3.

- In Wyoming, Palin-endorsed candidate Rita Meyer — whom Palin described as “a unique blend of steel magnolia and mama grizzly” — lost a squeaker of a gubernatorial primary to Matt Mead.

- And she’s going with former New Hampshire Attorney General Kelly Ayotte over wealthy businessmen Bill Binnie and Jim Bender in the state’s Sept. 14 Senate primary — a move that drew a page one rebuke in the state’s largest newspaper.

“The race will be won by the candidate who impresses New Hampshire voters, and New Hampshire voters are rarely impressed by what outsiders have to say,” wrote New Hampshire Union Leader publisher Joseph McQuaid.

Indeed, frustration with Palin has seemed to be growing, as she has waded into state races and challenged the national party’s preferred candidates. She has defied Republican campaign committees’ picks in favor of long-shots, such as investor Brian Murphy in Maryland. Murphy is running against former Gov. Bob Ehrlich in the Sept. 14 primary.

Ehrlich publicly brushed off that surprise endorsement, saying it was “not terribly relevant to anything that we’ve planned to do or are going to do.”

Palin remains a unifying figure — for Democrats.

She is a favorite target of mockery for her messages on Twitter using colorful language such as “cackle of rads” and “refudiate.”

EMILY’s List, a political organization that aims to elect women who back abortion rights, this week launched a “Sarah Doesn’t Speak for Me” campaign in the hopes of building its membership as well as painting Palin’s candidates as extremists.

“We didn’t want Sarah Palin’s voice to go unchallenged,” said Stephanie Schriock, the organization’s president.

The group recorded a Web video of women dressed as bears who repeated similar themes.

Palin responded — by Facebook, of course — with the folksy sarcasm that her supporters find refreshing and her detractors find grating.

“First, ladies, it’s hard to take a critic seriously when they lecture you wearing a bear suit,” Palin said, following that with a putdown invoking two of her five children.

“I’d love to know where you got those get-ups. Halloween is just around the corner, and Piper and Trig would look adorable as little grizzly bears.”

She’s joined another presidential prospect, former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, in backing Joe Miller’s longshot challenge to Republican Sen. Murkowski in Tuesday’s Alaska primary. Miller is also endorsed by the Tea Party Express, a California-based group that’s been hitting the airwaves and holding rallies.

Hijacking threat grounds jetliner in San Francisco

By Lisa Leff and Terry Collins
Associated Press writers

SAN FRANCISCO — A hijack threat halted an American Airlines flight just before takeoff Thursday, leaving the New York-bound jet sitting on the tarmac for several hours while it was searched and passengers were removed for extra scrutiny.

The FBI later determined that the telephoned threat wasn’t credible, but in the wake of the 9/11 attacks and a series of airline scares in the past year, the incident still rattled nerves as it played out live on national TV.

Police were investigating who called in the hijacking threat and what their motivation might have been.

Although passengers described the scene aboard the Boeing 767 as calm, a witness said a man and a woman sitting in the back row were taken off in handcuffs. But they were quickly released and allowed to rebook their flights.

The couple confirmed to an Associated Press reporter that they were the ones who had been removed from the plane but declined to identify themselves. They said authorities explained they were picked at random for questioning.

But a fellow passenger suggested the couple may have been targeted because of their appearance. Michael Anderson, 20, said he remembered seeing the couple as he was checking in for the flight to New York’s John F. Kennedy International Airport and saw them carrying passports from Pakistan.

“It definitely seems like it was racial profiling, based on what they look like physically and the fact they are Pakistani. It seems like this was a false accusation,” said Anderson, a Yale University sophomore who was heading back to school.

American Airlines Flight 24, with 163 passengers and a crew of 11, was already running 2 1/2 hours late when it pulled away from the gate at 10 a.m. Minutes later, it was being dispatched to a remote stretch of tarmac at San Francisco International Airport where it sat for two hours. Passengers were taken by buses to a terminal for further security checks.

“There was no fear in the cabin at all,” passenger Michael Kidd told the AP. “It was pretty calm. Even with the frustration of having to sit there, there were no raised voices.”

Passengers with Internet access searched the Web for details about the incident. Passengers were allowed to go to the bathroom one at a time, Kidd said, with flight attendants admonished anyone who tried to get to their overhead luggage.

Police eventually entered through the back door and arrested the two passengers. Others on board were taken off the plane six at a time and put on a buses. San Francisco Police Department officers used security wands to screen them and their carry-on luggage.

“The two passengers were taken off the plane separately, but we cannot discuss the specifics why,” said FBI spokesman Joseph Schadler.

The couple declined to discuss the possibility that they may have been targeted because of their appearance. “Of course we’re upset, but I guess we can’t blame them,” the woman told the AP. “They’re just doing their job.”

Kidd said he and his wife did not believe the couple had been racially profiled based on appearances alone. The man wore a Los Angeles Lakers jersey and the woman was wearing a beret, and they looked like typical Californians, he said.

MONTANA State seeks wolf coalition with ranchers, hunters

HELENA — Montana officials are planning to meet with ranchers, hunters and other groups about joining forces after a federal judge restored Endangered Species Act protections for wolves.

Wildlife officials in Montana and Idaho oppose the ruling earlier this month by U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy that blocked the states' wolf management plans and their fall hunts.

Ranchers and hunters have also blasted the ruling, saying wolves have grown too numerous and are attacking livestock and game.

Ron Aasheim of Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks says state wildlife officials will meet today in Helena with stockgrowers, woolgrowers, hunters, farmers and other groups to discuss forming a coalition.

Aasheim says participants will discuss the state's options and a possible appeal. They meet 10 a.m. at the Red Lion Colonial Hotel in Helena.

IDAHO Crop duster walks away from crash uninjured

MOSCOW — Authorities say a 40-year-old pilot whose crop duster crashed in a field in northern Idaho walked away from the incident unharmed.

The Latah County sheriff's office says Peter T. Fountain, of Genesee, was passing over a field when he struck the ground early Wednesday.

Fountain was flying a 1979 single-engine Gulfstream AM G-164B, which was heavily damaged during the crash, but rescue crews reported no injuries.

The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating the crash.

Dad files lawsuit over alleged high school hazing

DRIGGS — The father of a boy allegedly hazed by Teton High School wrestling team members has filed a lawsuit against the school district and three former teammates.

The Aug. 9 complaint filed in 7th District Court in Teton County says the three wrestlers held down another minor student after practice. One of the boys is accused of putting his "exposed genitals" in the victim's face.

Battery charges from the December episode were dismissed after the boys, who were minors at the time, participated in a restorative justice program.

But the man who filed the complaint says his son was the victim of sexual assault and battery, intentional infliction of emotional distress and gross negligence.

He is seeking a judgment for damages "in excess of $10,000" and attorney's fees.

The complaint accuses the school and administrators of failing to take steps to end hazing, typically "sexual acts being performed on younger student athletes" by older teammates.

"Teton High School and Teton School District have ratified, allowed, and endorsed hazing on the wrestling team," according to the complaint, which was reported by the Teton Valley News.

School district superintendent Monte Woolstenhulme says the claim has been turned over the district's insurance handler. He declined to make any additional comment when reached Thursday by The Associated Press.

The lawsuit says the alleged victim has been subject to harassment at school from administrators, coaches, perpetrators and other students, saying that one administrator called the victim a "squealer."

Former teacher sentenced in student statutory rape

POCATELLO — A former American Falls High School teacher who pleaded guilty to statutory rape of a 17-year-old student has been sentenced to up to five years in prison, but could be released after six months if he successfully completes a prison program.

The Idaho State Journal reports that 31-year-old William Price Hamilton was handed the sentence on Wednesday, with 6th District Judge Stephen Dunn saying the former teacher would be eligible for parole after three years.

But the judge also said he would retain jurisdiction in the case while Hamilton completes a 180-day prison program. If Hamilton successfully completes the program, Dunn has the option to waive his remaining sentence.

N. Idaho businessman to challenge Phil Hart

ATHOL, Idaho (AP) — A northern Idaho businessman has filed to run as a write-in candidate against a fellow conservative, Idaho Rep. Phil Hart, a Republican embroiled in legal fights over unpaid income taxes.

Howard Griffiths, 62, of Hayden, has never run for political office but said he decided to challenge Hart, a three-term state lawmaker, because of his tax problems.

"Some politicians forget who they are working for and think they're above the law," said Griffiths, who is a registered Republican but will not have a party affiliation on the November ballot as a write-in candidate.

Hart has long argued that income taxes are unconstitutional, waging legal fights at the state and federal level.

In the last year, the Internal Revenue Service has filed nearly $300,000 in tax liens against Hart. The state tax commission says he owes another $53,000 in Idaho income taxes, interest and penalties.

The House Ethics Committee launched an investigation last month to determine whether Hart had conflicts of interest in the Idaho Legislature due to his tax problems. The panel was also supposed to consider whether Hart abused the legislative privilege from arrest or civil process by invoking it repeatedly to win delays in his state and federal tax cases.

Rep. Tom Loertscher, R-Iona, chaired the committee and cautioned the panel against going into the part of the complaint that accused Hart of using his office to get special treatment, citing ongoing legal proceedings. The panel dismissed the conflicts-of-interest part of the complaint, clearing Hart of wrongdoing.

Hart has acknowledged using his status as an elected state official to make the case for why he should have been able to appeal an order to pay his state tax debt, despite missing the December deadline.

The fire next time: Lessons from Big Burn

If you see Bureau of Land Management or Forest Service crews tamping down what seem to be minor brushfires this summer, it’s because of what happened in Idaho 100 years ago today. On Aug. 20, 1910, the Idaho Panhandle blew up. Literally. The hottest, driest summer on record was followed by a sudden, savage cold front bearing hurricane-force winds. Three million acres — an area the size of Twin Falls and Cassia counties combined — burned in 36 hours.

“Winds felled trees as if they were blades of grass: darkness covered the land; firewhirls danced across the blackened skies like an aurora borealis from hell; the air was electric with tension, as if the Earth itself was ready to explode in flame,” wrote Stephen Pyne, an environmental historian who teaches at Arizona State University, in his book Fire in America: A Cultural History of Wildland and Rural Fire. “And everywhere people heard the roar, like a thousand trains crossing a thousand steel trestles.”

The five-year-old Forest Service was completely overwhelmed. Seventy-eight of its firefighters died, mostly after falling trees pinned them to the ground and they burned to death.

Ever after, containing forest fires became a top priority. The Forest Service alone will spend $2.7 billion this fiscal year fighting fires.

“For decades, the Forest Service told a clear and compelling story of firefighting as good versus evil, the moral equivalent of war,” Forest Service Chief Tom Tidwell, a former supervisor of the Sawtooth National Force, said in a speech in Boise last spring.

Crews were hired and trained, equipment was bought and eventually the agency set a goal of reaching each reported fire by 10 a.m. the next day.

“Today we are seeing the tragic results,” Tidwell said, according to The Associated Press.

Forests that have not seen big fires in decade are overgrown with fuel, a problem worsened by drought, climate change and tree killing insects. As a result, wildfires have been getting bigger.

Some experts predict future fire seasons with up to 12 million acres burning, Tidwell said.

The Forest Service chief favors a mixed approach calling for reduction of fuels in forests, working with communities to reduce fire risk through smarter planning, and responding to wildfires in a proportional way.

But that’s a tough sell politically. Aggressive fire suppression inspired people to build homes in areas prone to wildfires, knowing that firefighters would protect them. Dwindling national forest timber sales have shrunk the resources used for a century to fight wildfires.

And as the massive Murphy Complex and Castle Rock fires in south-central Idaho demonstrated three summers ago, sometimes there’s no substitute for overwhelming force to respond to wildfires.

Asked whether the Big Burn of 1910 could happen again, Tidwell said conditions in the Murphy Complex fire — which destroyed 653,000 acres of Twin Falls, Owyhee and Elko counties — were unsettlingly similar. So were the massive walls of flame blown along by ferocious winds.

But firefighting crews are more professional than they were 100 years ago. Air tankers and helicopters carry retardant to remote areas. Communications are better and there are decades of research to draw on.

“Today, a megafire on the order of the Big Burn isn’t likely to have the same catastrophic results,” Tidwell said.

Let’s pray he’s right.

Islam and the two Americas

There’s an America where it doesn’t matter what language you speak, what god you worship, or how deep your New World roots run. An America where allegiance to the Constitution trumps ethnic differences, language barriers and religious divides. An America where the newest arrival to our shores is no less American than the ever-so-great granddaughter of the Pilgrims.

Ross Douthat

But there’s another America as well, one that understands itself as a distinctive culture, rather than just a set of political propositions. This America speaks English, not Spanish or Chinese or Arabic. It looks back to a particular religious heritage: Protestantism originally, and then a Judeo-Christian consensus that accommodated Jews and Catholics as well. It draws its social norms from the mores of the Anglo-Saxon diaspora — and it expects new arrivals to assimilate themselves to these norms, and quickly.

These two understandings of America, one constitutional and one cultural, have been in tension throughout our history. And they’re in tension again this summer, in the controversy over the Islamic mosque and cultural center scheduled to go up two blocks from ground zero.

The first America, not surprisingly, views the project as the consummate expression of our nation’s high ideals. “This is America,” President Obama intoned last week, “and our commitment to religious freedom must be unshakable.” The construction of the mosque, Mayor Michael Bloomberg told New Yorkers, is as important a test of the principle of religious freedom “as we may see in our lifetimes.”

But both understandings of this country have real wisdom to offer, and both have been necessary to the American experiment’s success. During the great waves of 19th-century immigration, the insistence that new arrivals adapt to Anglo-Saxon culture — and the threat of discrimination if they didn’t — was crucial to their swift assimilation. The post-1920s immigration restrictions were draconian in many ways, but they created time for persistent ethnic divisions to melt into a general unhyphenated Americanism.

The same was true in religion. The steady pressure to conform to American norms, exerted through fair means and foul, eventually persuaded the Mormons to abandon polygamy, smoothing their assimilation into the American mainstream. Nativist concerns about Catholicism’s illiberal tendencies inspired American Catholics to prod their church toward a recognition of the virtues of democracy, making it possible for generations of immigrants to feel unambiguously Catholic and American.

So it is today with Islam. The first America is correct to insist on Muslims’ absolute right to build and worship where they wish. But the second America is right to press for something more from Muslim Americans — particularly from figures like Feisal Abdul Rauf, the imam behind the mosque — than simple protestations of good faith. Too often, American Muslim institutions have turned out to be entangled with ideas and groups that most Americans rightly consider beyond the pale. Too often, American Muslim leaders strike ambiguous notes when asked to disassociate themselves completely from illiberal causes.

By global standards, Rauf may be the model of a “moderate Muslim.” But global standards and American standards are different. For Muslim Americans to integrate fully into our national life, they’ll need leaders whose antennas are sensitive enough to recognize that the quest for inter-religious dialogue is ill served by throwing up a high-profile mosque two blocks from the site of a mass murder committed in the name of Islam.

They’ll need leaders, in other words, who understand that while the ideals of the first America protect the e pluribus, it’s the demands the second America makes of new arrivals that help create the unum.

Ross Douthat is a columnist for The New York Times. Write to him at rdouthat@nytimes.com.

“The steady pressure to conform to American norms ... eventually persuaded the Mormons to abandon polygamy, smoothing their assimilation into the American mainstream. Nativist concerns about Catholicism’s illiberal tendencies inspired American Catholics to prod their church toward a recognition of the virtues of democracy, making it possible for generations of immigrants to feel unambiguously Catholic and American.”

Traveler promises economic consequences if T.F. bans smoking

Dear Mayor Hall: TV 6 here in Boise reported on the proposed no smoking ban in Twin Falls City parks. I’m a smoker, but a considerate smoker. I always move to areas away from other people so as not to bother them, etc. Just wanted to let you know I travel through Twin once or twice a month going to Jackpot, Vegas or fishing. And although I don’t visit your city parks during my travels, Twin has always been one of our stopping spots during our trips for fuel, lunch or dinner, groceries, etc., usually spending $100-plus each time we stop ($100 down plus $100 back). If your no smoking ordinance passes, Twin will no longer be one of our stopover towns.

I’m tired of “do-gooders” telling others how they should live their lives! If your ordinance passes, I will only start making Twin one of my stopovers again when Twin passes an ordinance prohibiting fat people from eating fast food, drinking Big Gulps and eating junk food in the city parks (After all, we need to set good examples for our children.). (Eagle passed an ordinance a couple of years back and I haven’t spent a dime in that town since!)

I’m guessing others feel as I do but they just aren’t willing to voice their opinion because it won’t do any good.

Teen criticizes inappropriate cartoon

I would like to talk about Sponge Bob Square Pants for a minute.

This show is very indecent and immoral. I’m 16 years old and my parents have raised me with very good morals. I like to watch TV like any other person, and every now and then I see a few minutes of it here and there. The things that I saw and heard were not at all appropriate for children to be watching. The characters were running around in their underwear and saying things like “let’s get naked.” Are you kidding me, what kind of kids’ show is this? Parents, are you aware of what your kids are watching. Do you care? I would. I’ve also seen the main character, Sponge Bob, running around in his birthday suit, if you know what I mean.

Come on, really! If I were you and didn’t know about this until now. I would block this adult show from your TV and make sure your kids aren’t watching this indecent show at all.

And there are plenty more things this show puts out. Please listen to me about this. This show gives kids lots of bad ideas and doesn’t leave much for imagination. So please be aware of this and block it.

Wolves don't belong on endangered species list

From the moment it was first reintroduced into Yellowstone National Park nearly 15 years ago, the gray wolf has been the subject of continual litigation. This month's ruling by a federal district court requiring the United States to return gray wolves in Idaho and Montana to the federal list of threatened and endangered species is only the latest twist in the wolf's strange legal journey. It is made all the stranger by the fact that by every objective measure, the recovery of the wolf has been a stunning conservation success.

Now, one question looms over all others: When will we be able to recognize success?

Throughout all of the legal wrangling, one truth has remained constant. The wolf population in the Northern Rocky Mountains has flourished, topping even the most optimistic predictions made when the recovery project started. In 2009, the region contained more than 1,700 wolves in 242 packs. In fact, the population has exceeded recovery goals for nine consecutive years, a staggering achievement for conservation and proof that the Endangered Species Act can protect and return populations to health under very difficult conditions. Yet here we are, with the wolf headed back onto the endangered species list.

What happened? The federal district court in Montana ruled that all of the Northern Rockies wolves must be treated as a single population; if they remain at risk in one of the three states they inhabit, they have to stay on the list. And the Department of the Interior does consider some of the wolves to still be at risk, to some degree, in Wyoming. That's because Wyoming law allows for largely unregulated killing of the wolves in most of the state once they are taken off the endangered list there. Idaho and Montana, on the other hand, have labored hard to craft strong, scientifically based management plans that include only controlled hunts.

We de-listed the wolves in those states but not in Wyoming. Now the court has said that such state-by-state de-listing won't fly for this population: It's all or nothing.

This turn of events is frustrating. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service believes that state and tribal management is the most appropriate conservation tool to manage the recovered gray wolf population in this area. In fact, since 2005, most management responsibilities for wolves within Keeping the wolf on the list also undermines the credibility of the Endangered Species Act and the trust that the American people have in it.

Idaho and Montana have been turned over to those states. The results show that ranchers, tribes, hunters and wild wolves can successfully coexist and that the wolf population is sustainable.

Some say keeping all of the Northern Rockies gray wolves on the endangered list is a good thing. However, eternal "protection" of that sort was never the goal of the Endangered Species Act. The continued inclusion of this wolf population on the endangered list diverts our limited resources from other species that are truly endangered.

Keeping the wolf on the list also undermines the credibility of the Endangered Species Act and the trust that the American people have in it. When success has been achieved, we need to honor that success and keep the promise of the act: that the list is a temporary way station on the road to recovery for endangered species, not a final destination.

The court's decision clearly shows that, for the gray wolf, recovery requires Wyoming to change its policy. If Wyoming were to join its neighbor states and develop a wolf management strategy with adequate regulatory mechanisms on human-caused wolf mortality, including hunting, all three states would benefit. Idaho and Montana have shown that when such a plan is in place, wolf attacks on livestock can be controlled and even hunting can be allowed without jeopardizing the wolf's hard-won recovery.

I am proud of the efforts of the Interior Department's agencies — the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Park Service — along with our state and tribal partners, conservation groups, ranchers, sportsmen and outfitters, and the many others who have contributed to the gray wolf's success story.

We will rebound from this, just as the wolf itself has rebounded. Time, enduring partnerships and the resilience of this magnificent creature are on our side. We hope that Wyoming will be willing to join us.

Tom Strickland is assistant secretary of the Interior for fish and wildlife and parks. He wrote this commentary for the Los Angeles Times.

How Obama is locking up our land

Have you heard of the "Great Outdoors Initiative"? Chances are, you haven't. But across the country, White House officials have been meeting quietly with environmental groups to map out government plans for acquiring untold millions of acres of public and private land. It's another stealthy power grab through executive order that promises to radically transform the American way of life.

In April, President Obama issued a memorandum outlining his "21st century strategy for America's great outdoors." It was addressed to the Interior Secretary, the Agriculture Secretary, the head of the Environmental Protection Agency and the chair of the Council on Environmental Quality. The memo calls on the officials to conduct "listening and learning sessions" with the public to "identify the places that mean the most to Americans, and leverage the support of the Federal Government" to "protect" outdoor spaces. Eighteen of 25 planned sessions have already been held. But there's much more to the agenda than simply "reconnecting Americans to nature."

subject to congressional approval, in their energy/BP oil spill legislative packages. The Democrats have also included a provision in these packages that would require the federal government to take over energy permitting in state waters, which provoked an outcry from Texas state officials, who sent a letter of protest to Capitol Hill last month:

"In light of federal failures, it is incomprehensible that the United States Congress is entertaining proposals that expand federal authority over oil and gas drilling in state water and lands long regulated by states... Given the track record, putting the federal government in charge of energy production on state land and waters not only breaks years of successful precedent and threatens the 10th Amendment to the United States Constitution, but it also undermines common sense and threatens the environmental and economy security of our state's citizens."

This power grab, masquerading as a feel-good, all-American recreation program, comes on top of a separate, property-usurping initiative exposed by GOP Rep. Robert Bishop and Sen. Jim DeMint earlier this spring. According to an internal, 21-page Obama administration memo, 17 energy-rich areas in 11 states have been targeted as potential federal "monuments." The lives of coyotes, deer and prairie dogs would be elevated above states' needs to generate jobs, tourism business and energy solutions.

Take my home state of Colorado. The Obama administration is considering locking up some 380,000 acres of Bureau of Land Management land and private land in Colorado under the 1906 Antiquities Act. The Vermillion Basin and the Alpine Triangle would be shut off to mining, hunting, grazing, oil and gas development and recreational activities. Alan Foutz, president of the Colorado Farm Bureau, blasted the administration's meddling: "Deer and elk populations are thriving, and we in Colorado don't need help from the federal government in order to manage them effectively."

Indeed, the feds have enough trouble as it is managing the vast amount of land they already control. As the Washington, D.C.-based Americans for Limited Government group, which defends private property rights, points out: "The (National Park Service) claims it would need about $9.5 billion just to clear its backlog of the necessary improvements and repairs. At a time when our existing national parks are suffering, it doesn't make sense for the federal government to grab new lands."

The bureaucrats behind Obama's "Great Outdoors Initiative" plan on wrapping up their public comment solicitation by November 15. The initiative's taxpayer-funded website has been dominated by left-wing environmental activists proposing human population reduction, private property confiscation, and gun bans, hunting bans and vehicle bans in national parks. It's time for private property owners to send their own loud, clear message to the land-hungry feds: Take a hike.

NOTICE OF NEW U.S. COINS

■ GOV'T KICKS OFF BRAND NEW STATE QUARTER PROGRAM: Congress has now given their approval to begin the release of the new State Quarter Dollars. There will be 56 coins in all, each featuring a newly designed coin from every state and territory. Don't be mistaken, these are not the old State Quarters that you get in your pocket change every day. These are all new coins from the U.S. Mint's® new America the Beautiful Quarters™ Program.

New state coins go to public free

State population figures used by the World Reserve determine how many residents from each state who beat the order deadline to claim the Collectors Coin Chest for just $9 get the entire first year of never-circulated U.S. Gov't issued coins free

By R. K. Berry
UNIVERSAL MEDIA SYNDICATE

(UMS) - "They'll be practically clawing each other's eyes out to get the new State Quarters free."

So says Timothy Shisler, Chief of Coin Operations at the private World Reserve Monetary Exchange.

"Everyone who gets in on this will be among the first to get the U.S. Government's dazzling new coins," Shisler said.

The entire first year of these valuable coins are being given away free to everyone who beats the deadline to cover shipping and the $9 claim for the new Collectors Coin Chest.

So, what's the catch?

Just be absolutely sure to call the toll free hotline before the 48-hour deadline ends if you want to get the entire first year's coins free.

This is all happening because the World Reserve is issuing the new Collectors Coin Chest to the general public to protect and display the entire first year's set of the U.S. Mint's® first ever America the Beautiful Quarters™.

"This new State Quarter Program could end up being even more popular than the original 50 State Quarters® Program," Shisler said.

Coin values always fluctuate, but believe it or not, the original State Quarters have already increased up to an amazing 400% in collector value just months after the program ended. "So who knows what these new coins could bring someday," Shisler said.

Never-circulated coins like these are among those most likely to increase in value. That makes getting the Collectors Coin Chest a real steal since everyone who does is getting the entire first year of the new U.S. Gov't issued coins free.

Rations of the new coins are uncertain because each one is only minted for just 73 days and all of them will be released and delivered according to the U.S. Government's release schedule. So once they're gone, they're gone. These coins will never be minted again. "That's why readers need to call right now to get the entire first year of never-circulated coins for free," he said.

"These new State Quarters will be highly sought after and are extremely popular to hand out as gifts for friends and family. They are the perfect gift for any occasion," he said.

To make sure readers don't get left out of this free giveaway they need to call the Toll Free Hotline number before the 48-hour deadline ends.

"At the rate we anticipate giving these coins away we may be forced to give away more than $1 million dollars of these valuable new coins to the general public. So, if lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered," Shisler said. ■

■ HANDOUT BEGINS: The free money giveaway begins for state residents precisely at 8:00 am today. The World Reserve is giving residents the entire first year of the new U.S. Gov't issued coins free. But residents need to be absolutely sure to call the Toll Free Hotline for their state before the 48-hour order deadline ends to get the coins free.

How to get your Free Coins

Find your state below and be among the first to call the number before the 48-hour deadline ends. State residents who do are getting the entire first year of the new Gov't issued U.S. coins free just by covering shipping and only $9 for the new Collectors Coin Chest. All of your free coins will be delivered in accordance with the U.S. Mint's® release schedule. However, if you miss the deadline you will be turned away from this free offer and forced to wait for future announcements in this or other U.S. publications, if any.

$1.4 trillion total.

Despite the slight improvement, the 2009 and 2010 shortfalls are the largest ever in dollars, by far. Each is three times bigger than the government's annual deficit had ever been before.

The budget office is legally required to make its projections assuming Congress makes no changes in tax and spending law. Under that doing nothing scenario, the analysts said deficits would shrink to a far more manageable $438 billion by 2014.

and that structure is what helps us not only get the opportunities but close the deals," she said.

City of Burley Mayor Terry Greenman said he attends Idaho Association of Cities meetings and he often has other city officials ask him about Burley's success in luring business to the area.

"They say what in the world are you people doing in Burley," Greenman said.

City of Burley Councilman Casey Andersen asked if low taxes or other factors were luring the companies to Mini-Cassia.

"The companies that are coming right now are coming because of the expansion in this area and this is where they need to be. They are not reloca-

That outcome, however, seems extremely unlikely given pressures to extend at least some of the expiring tax cuts, take additional steps to fortify the economy, and to cut other taxes and boost other spending programs. Such measures would drive deficits higher.

If anything, the budget office report intensified pressures to spur the economy because it projected a painfully slow recovery.

The analysts said they expect the economy to grow at a rate of only about 2 percent next year – half the growth they projected last summer.

tions they are expansions," Rogers said.

Although, Rogers said, the company from California is looking to relocate because of "over-the-top taxes" and the high cost of business in California.

City of Burley Councilman Dennis Curtis said there have been more than two dozen city councilmen involved in the growth of Burley since the J.R. Simplot Company closed its Heyburn plant in 2003. Curtis said during the past five years the city has added six miles of new water lines and five miles of new roads along with 156 new electric, 131 water, and 30 sewer hook-ups.

Leading indicators rise 0.1 percent in July

By Tali Arbel

Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A private research group said its gauge of future economic activity edged up in July, suggesting growth will be sluggish for the rest of the year.

The Conference Board said Thursday that its index of leading economic indicators rose 0.1 percent last month after dropping 0.3 percent in June. Economists polled by Thomson Reuters had expected a gain of 0.2 percent.

The leading indicators gauge had risen sharply from spring 2009 through March of this year. It has flattened out since then. Businesses aren't building up their stocks as quickly as they did after the recession ended. Consumers are saving at higher rates and spending less.

Conference Board economist Ken Goldstein said this combination resulted in "a weak economy with little forward momentum. However,

The IIEA has awarded $305,395 in scholarships since 1980.

SOMEBODY NEEDS YOU

Volunteers — Guardian Home Care and Hospice needs volunteers in the Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Glens Ferry and Burley areas to assist with patient care: sit with patients, play games and read to patients, or help in the office. Information: Nicole, 736-0900.

Volunteers — Hospice Visions needs volunteers to help make a difference in the lives of caregivers and those experiencing end-of-life issues. Volunteers provide companionship, bring joy during difficult times and ease burdens by writing letters, singing, playing cards and games, reading, working with junior volunteers or being a friend. Information: Flo, 735-0121.

Drivers — Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center needs volunteer drivers for the home-delivered meals program for the home-bound. Drivers do not have to be seniors to volunteer to drive one or two days a week for an hour to an hour and a half. The center needs people who can be relied on for their appointed routes and who care about the well-being of the elderly. Reimbursed mileage for gas is available. Information: Joanna, 734-5084, or 530 Shoshone St. W., Twin Falls.

Drivers — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program needs volunteer drivers, age 55 and older, in Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding to take senior citizens to medical appointments and for grocery shopping. Volunteers are reimbursed mileage and covered by excess insurance. Information: Edith, 736-4764.

Donations/volunteers — The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center is preparing for the school season. Newly arrived refugee students need school supplies, including No. 2 pencils, boxes of 24 crayons, markers, colored pencils, boxes of tissues, quart- or gallon-size Ziploc bags, Clorox wipes, glue sticks, glue, scissors, folders, highlighters, composition notebooks, loose-leaf notebook paper, pink erasers and small pencil/supply boxes. need playground equipment, including soccer balls, jump ropes, volleyballs and Frisbees. To donate resources or to volunteer: Michelle, 736-2166, or 1526 Highland Ave. E., Twin Falls.

Donations — The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program is seeking an electronic peddler or a deluxe pedal exerciser. Information: Edith, Office on Aging, 736-4764.

Volunteers — St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center needs volunteers to help in a variety of positions. Qualifications include friendly, compassionate individuals; the ability to set priorities, such as punctuality, dependability and responsibility; the physical ability to walk, stand and sit for a period of time; and the ability to take the initiative and be flexible, assuming different roles as needed to provide help or comfort to patients, visitors and staff. Information: Kim, 737-2006, or St. Luke's Volunteer Services Office, Fifth Floor, 650 Addison Ave. W., Twin Falls.

Mentors/volunteers — The Easter Seals Goodwill GoodGuides program is part of a national mentoring program providing guidance to boys and girls ages 12 to 17. The program has a variety of volunteer opportunities in the Magic Valley, including mentors, speakers, tutors, activity directors and mentor leaders. Teens are needed to be part of the Teen Advisory Board, which meets about every three months for one or two hours per meeting to provide input, feedback and guidance for the program. Information: Tristan or LeWayne, 736-2026 or 2469 Wright Ave., Twin Falls.

Helping Hands Freedom Trails campout successful

Helping Hands Freedom Trails’ 24th-annual campout for people with special needs and abilities was a huge success, according to organizers.

The camp was held July 23-25 at Porcupine Springs, south of Hansen. Organizers said the friendly attitude of the U.S. Forest Service contributed to the camp’s success.

A.J. Church, representing U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, was on board for the third year in a row to help unload equipment and serve lunch. Dawn Hardy, of Party Hardy, brought up a giant water slide again to cool off — a big hit with campers and staff alike.

Other events included horseback riding and wagon rides, karaoke, a talent show, bingo, beanbag baseball and a dance. On July 24, there was a stick rodeo with a mechanical bull, another favorite of the campers.

This year’s camper of the year was Leslie Quinn of Menopause brings difficulty staying asleep

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been going through menopause for the past seven years and have made it through the difficult phase. However, I have a problem staying asleep. I fall asleep most of the time with no problem but will stay asleep for about two hours. Then I can’t fall asleep again. Do you have a solution to this problem other than using estrogen?

DEAR READER: As you are aware, hormonal changes occur during menopause. Those changes can produce symptoms of insomnia that can range from transient and temporary to chronic and annoying. A woman actually goes through three phases: perimenopause, menopause and postmenopause. During the first stage, estrogen levels can decline, resulting in abnormal cycles, hot flashes and temporary insomnia. Menopause occurs when a woman has remained free of a cycle for 12 months. A woman may awaken during the night (or whenever she sleeps) leading to chronic insomnia. Postmenopause can lead to still more pronounced sleep disturbances such as sleep apnea and restless-legs syndrome. So yes, there is definitely a strong link.

Estrogen is produced in the ovaries and adrenal glands in females. In menopausal women, it is prescribed to reduce the unpleasant symptoms that can plague a woman. Some physicians might choose to prescribe hormone-replacement therapy (HRT) if symptoms of menopause are severe. I don’t know that I would be one of them. That decision is best left for you to determine with your gynecologist, based on your full medical history. You might consider modifying your diet to include cucumbers, soy sprouts, garlic, green beans, yams, apples, corn, peas, olive oil, sunflower seeds and beets. During waking hours, consider adding yoga or another exercise program. Retire at about the same time each evening. Be sure your room is dark, quiet and free of distractions. Attempt to clear issues and coordinate activities before retiring so you don’t awaken at 2 a.m. to problem solve. On particularly difficult evenings, consider melatonin, an over-the-counter sleep aid.

To provide related information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports “Menopause” and “Sleep Wake Disorders.” Other readers who would like copies should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order per report to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title(s) or print an order form at www.AskDrGottMD.com.

Peter H. Gott is a retired physician and the author of several books, including “Live Longer, Live Better,” “Dr. Gott’s No Flour, No Sugar Diet” and “Dr. Gott’s No Flour, No Sugar Cookbook,” which are available at most bookstores or online.

Hanover graduates from basic combat training

Army National Guard Pvt. Janica J. Hanover has graduated from basic combat training at Fort Jackson, Columbia, S.C.

During the nine weeks of training, Hanover studied the Army mission, history, tradition and core values, and physical fitness. She also received instruction and practice in basic combat skills, military weapons, chemical warfare and bayonet training, drill and ceremony, marching, rifle marksmanship, armed and unarmed combat, map reading, field tactics, military courtesy, the military justice system, basic first aid, foot marches, and field training exercises.

She is the granddaughter of Kay Fields of Buhl, and a 2004 graduate of Emmett High School.

Mulberry brothers graduate from Army training

Army National Guard Pfc. James T. Mulberry and Pfc. Nicholas A. Mulberry graduated from the Field Artillery Automated Tactical Data Systems Specialist Advanced Individual Training course at Fort Sill, Lawton, Okla.

The course is designed to train members of the Army’s field artillery team as specialists to operate the advanced field artillery tactical data systems for both cannon and multiple-launch rocket systems. The specialists play a critical role in the safe, accurate and lethal delivery of the field artillery’s various fire support systems used to support infantry and tank units in combat.

Skills training included methods of computing target locations using computers or manual calculations, ammunition-handling techniques, and operating and performing maintenance on related equipment, vehicles, generators, and artillery tactical and data systems.

The brothers are the sons of Ken and Jennifer Mulberry of Kimberly.

James and Nicholas are 2009 and 2007 graduates, respectively, of Kimberly High School.

Harvey graduates from basic infantry training

Army National Guard Pvt. Tory R. Harvey has graduated from basic infantry training at Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga.

During the nine weeks of training, Harvey received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, physical fitness, first aid, and Army history, core values and traditions. Additional training included development of basic combat skills and battlefield operations and tactics, and experiencing the use of various weapons and weapons defenses available to the infantry crewman.

Harvey is the son of Tami Quesnell of Filer and grandson of Louise Harvey of Eagle.

Navy confers service award to T.F. native

Cmdr. James H. Mills of the U.S. Navy has been presented with the Meritorious Service Medal (actually a Gold Star in lieu of his fifth award) by President Barack Obama for outstanding service while serving as combat systems officer for the USS Ronald Reagan from October 2008 to August 2010.

According to the award, Mills’ unrivaled professionalism and unmatched operational expertise were instrumental to the success of the USS Ronald Reagan, Carrier Air Wing Fourteen and the Ronald Reagan Strike Group during two Operation Enduring Freedom deployments. Mills’ professionalism, personal initiative and loyal devotion to duty reflected great credit upon him and were in keeping with the highest traditions of the U.S. Naval Service.

Mills is from Twin Falls and has family in the Magic Valley. He is a Filer High School graduate.

SAN DIEGO — Divers worked through the day Thursday to extract a rare World War II dive bomber from the bottom of a reservoir but were unable to finish removing thick silt and mud from the plane to enable it to be lifted out of the water.

Former Army ranger Tara Lysenko, who is assisting in the salvage operation, said divers would resume efforts today to lift the SB2C Helldiver, one of only a handful still in existence.

Relatives of the two-man crew had been waiting at the reservoir's edge to see the plane that crashed there in 1945 after the engine failed during a training exercise.

Bob Metz, 84, who watched the painstaking work, said he recalls his oldest brother, Sgt. Joseph Metz, telling about how he and the pilot — who have both since died — managed to swim ashore to safety, then hitchhiked back to the nearby military base.

"I remember when he got a jeep and brought me up here and told me, 'You want to see where we ditched the plane?'" said Metz of Montebello, Calif.

The aircraft was forgotten until Duane Johnson and his friend, who were searching for bass, spotted the outline of the plane on an electronic fish finder last year.

"We were dumbfounded," Johnson recounted Thursday as he stood at the reservoir's edge next to Metz. "We didn't know if there were bodies down there or if it was something simple like a remote-controlled plane."

Johnson later learned he had discovered the Helldiver, which crashed May 28, 1945.

If it can be restored, the National Naval Aviation Museum hopes the plane will fill a void in its collection in Pensacola, Fla., considered to be one of the world's largest displays of naval aviation history with more than 150 planes.

"We've been looking for a Helldiver for quite some time," said Navy Capt. Ed Ellis, of the museum.

Only a handful of the 5,100 dive bombers manufactured during World War II still exist. One of the Helldiver's nicknames was the "Beast" because of its reputation for being difficult to handle.

"At the end of the war, they were obsolete and so they just chopped them down, melted them and made most of them into tin cans," Ellis said. "It wasn't a particularly good airplane."

The aircraft was plagued by problems from the start, with the first prototype crashing in February 1941. The second went down as well when it was pulling out of a dive.

San Diego shut down the Lower Otay Reservoir to the public during this week's salvage operation.

Lysenko, who has rescued 33 planes for the museum, said divers have been working with zero visibility while they prepare the plane to be lifted carefully out of the water without further damaging it.

Crews also kept an eye out for anything bubbling to the surface that could indicate oil or fuel was leaking out and contaminating the city's drinking water.

A city diver was being examined Thursday after running out of air, but appeared to be fine, Lysenko said.

A former volunteer at the museum left money to cover the cost of the plane's extraction, Ellis said. The museum only salvages planes in which the crew survived. If anyone died, the site is considered to be a grave and isn't touched, he said.

The museum has located hundreds of submerged aircraft, mostly in Lake Michigan and some oceans.

"This is always an exciting event. Some aircraft have been pulled up and we've found the batteries still hold a charge, or there is still water in the canteen left by the pilots in the cockpit, or some of the lights still work," Ellis said. "We're always amazed by what still works and is in good condition."

Dollie Vickers

HAGERMAN — Dollie Vickers, 86, of Hagerman, passed away Monday, Aug. 16, 2010, at the North Canyon Medical Center in Gooding.

Dollie was born Nov. 11, 1923, in West Liberty, Morgan County, Ky., to Ora and Edna Trimble. She married Robert Vickers on Aug. 19, 1944.

Intel breaks into security with McAfee purchase

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Intel Corp., the world's largest chip maker, is buying its way into the security software market by paying about $7.7 billion to acquire one of the biggest players in the cyber-protection field, McAfee Inc.

Intel, of Santa Clara, Calif., said the acquisition, one of the year's largest technology deals, could allow it to build McAfee's anti-virus technology directly into its chips. Intel said this would help shield computers, wireless devices and embedded systems in vehicles and ATMs from online crime.

Traditionally, anti-virus software has been downloaded onto desktop and laptop computers. But Intel and McAfee together might have an easier time embedding security into tablets and smart phones, said Erik Suppiger, senior research analyst at Signal Hill Capital.

"There are some pretty good growth opportunities as the number of devices grows with the adoption of wireless," Suppiger said.

The $48-a-share price Intel is paying is a 60 percent premium over McAfee's $29.93 close on Wednesday. Thursday's announcement of the acquisition caused McAfee's stock to leap $17.08, or 57 percent, to $47.01.

Kenny Edwards, guitarist-singer who boosted Linda Ronstadt's career, dies

By Randy Lewis
Los Angeles Times

Kenny Edwards, a founding member of the Stone Poneys country-rock band that launched Linda Ronstadt's career and a valued supporting guitarist and singer for Stevie Nicks, Don Henley and numerous others, died Wednesday after battling cancer and a blood disorder in recent years. He was 64.

Edwards had collapsed earlier this month in Denver while on tour with singer-songwriter Karla Bonoff, a longtime musical partner. He was diagnosed with the blood disorder thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura, or TTP, and also had been undergoing chemotherapy for prostate cancer. He was hospitalized in Denver, then air-lifted to a hospital near his home in Santa Barbara, where he died.

"Linda Ronstadt was a very powerful player in the development of the California country-rock scene, and her backbone was this guy," singer-songwriter Wendy Waldman said Thursday.

Shortly after the Stone Poneys disbanded after their 1967 breakthrough hit "Different Drum," which established Ronstadt as a rising star from the nascent Southern California country-rock scene, Edwards teamed with Waldman, Karla Bonoff and Andrew Gold to form the folk-rock band Bryndle. Bonoff issued a statement Thursday thanking Edwards "for being my teacher, my musical partner and my best friend for the last 43 years."

"There was a certain attitude toward music, a hybridization of styles, that came out of Kenny's blood," Waldman said. "He was so significant in the building of Ronstadt's sound."

Kenneth Michael Edwards was born Feb. 10, 1946, in Santa Monica, Calif., the son of Kenneth Clyde Edwards and Mary Carol Edwards. He grew up in the nearby Mar Vista neighborhood, attended Venice High School, learned to swim in the Pacific Ocean and was a lifelong surfer, but early on music became a passion, sparked by nightly guitar-playing sessions with his father.

Barely out of high school, he formed the Stone Poneys in 1965 with Bobby Kimmel, a Tucson musician who had moved to Los Angeles to explore the burgeoning folk-rock scene that had been spearheaded by the Byrds and would soon yield Buffalo Springfield and later the Eagles, who were Ronstadt's backup singers and musicians before the group's own career took off.

Edwards and Kimmel worked for a time at McCabe's Guitar Shop in Santa Monica, which was a hub for musicians as well as fans of folk, country, bluegrass and blues music. "My friend Bobby Kimmel said, 'I know this great singer from Tucson, why don't we see if the three of us can hit it off?'" Edwards told The Monterey County Weekly last year. "We certainly did."

With Ronstadt on board, the Stone Poneys recorded "Different Drum," written by Monkees member Mike Nesmith, and watched it rise to No. 13 on the Billboard national Hot 100 sales chart. They put another song, "Up to My Neck in High Muddy Water," in the Top 100 before the Stone Poneys called it quits.

Bryndle landed a deal with A&M Records, but the label decided not to release the debut album the quartet recorded. They reunited in 1995 and belatedly issued a new album to serve as Bryndle's debut, and toured the United States and Japan.

Las Vegas illusionist brings panther, leopard to Twin Falls for MagicFest

By Rebecca De Leon
Times-News writer

Lions and tigers and bears, oh my! No, this year's MagicFest won't be that dangerous; there won't be bears. But there will be a few wild cats — a black panther and a spotted leopard. Las Vegas performer Garry Carson and his lovely assistant, Kelsey Kara, will perform magic with the trained animals in a 90-minute show at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium on Aug. 28.

And Twin Falls restaurants will be peppered with magicians performing up-close, sleight of hand tricks for guests' pleasure Aug. 27. Canyon Crest, for instance, will host magicians Keone Valdez of Mountain Home and Ken Vaughn of Twin Falls. John Taylor with Boise's Furry Tales Magic will perform 20-minute shows from 1 to 6 p.m. Aug. 28 at Magic Valley Mall's center square. New this year is MagicFest's Kids Magic Camp. On Aug. 27, the day before Carson's show, local magician Olen "Nelo the Magician" Foreman will teach kids basic magic tricks they will then perform as a warm-up act for Carson the next day. That is, if kids show up to the camp. "There aren't too many magicians in Twin Falls, so they (event organizers) were limited in options," Foreman said about instructing the camp. "But I love to work with kids. I think they enjoy magic more than teenagers or adults do. They get into it more." Brian Higgins, of Success Martial Arts in Twin Falls, will bring his charismatic personality and optimism again to host

MagicFest this year. "I just know one magic trick and I never do it in public," Higgins said. "It's sad, really." Higgins expressed his excitement for Garry Carson's magic show. "This guy is the real deal. He's not cheap," he said. MagicFest's major sponsor, CH2M Hill, provided a large portion of the funding to bring Carson to Magic Valley. However, Carson is donating all proceeds

Expect 400 autos, thousands of spectators as JOE MAMA'S CAR SHOW HITS JEROME

By Rebecca De Leon
Times-News writer

JEROME — Joe Mama's so cool, she's got her own car show. The NAPA Auto Parts Joe Mama's Car Show returns to Jerome on Saturday for the 12th year in a row, hosted again by the Magic Valley Early Iron Club. Orlan Stearns, committee co-chairman of Magic Valley Early Iron, said the car show usually gets 400 to 450 cars from all over the nation. Charlie Hutton, from the television show "American Hot Rod," and Ron Mangus, stitcher for America's Most Beautiful Roadster, will attend the show, which promoters bill as the largest one-day car show in Idaho. Marvel Comic Book Series' Spiderman will also swoop in to mingle with car enthusiasts. Jerome's 2010 rodeo queen, Jayd Wartluft, will also make an appearance. However, the main attraction will be the cars — dragsters, funny cars, jet race car, antiques, street machines, foreign and domestic sports cars and custom cars. Last year, which was Magic Valley Early Iron's first year hosting Joe Mama's, the car show boasted an attendance of about 16,000 spectators, according to the club's press release. No car has ever been turned away from participation. "Everybody's welcome," Stearns said. "We do ask for a $5 donation at registration, but no one has to donate that money." This year, Schwan's Home Service and United Dairywomen of Idaho will serve free ice cream while Walmart and Pepsi team up to give dollar hot dogs and soda. There will be close to 20 craft, food and industry vendors at the show. For entertainment, 99.9 The Buzz and 106.1 Kat Kountry will play music and interview Spiderman and car drivers. DJs James Rabe and Broc Johnson will be masters of ceremony from their portable stations. Kim Lee, general manager for The Buzz and Kat Kountry, has been a supporter of the show for years. Show founder Joe Skaug was Lee's junior high teacher and coach. "NAPA Auto Parts, Pepsi, Walmart and The Buzz were the original supporters of the show," Lee said. "It's grown each year." Though Skaug retired and Magic Valley Early Iron has taken over as host, Lee still promotes the show on his stations and offers his staff during the event. "I think any show that draws a lot of people together is great," Lee said. "For me, being from Jerome, it's really a great thing." Most cars register the morning of the car show. Committee co-chairman Jeff "Buck" Bland said the best time to register a vehicle is by 7 a.m. if drivers plan on registering Saturday. "I got people last year that told me, 'I wish I would have gotten here earlier so I could have had a better spot,'" Bland said. "If they want a shady spot or something, they'll have to register early."

LENDING THE CLASSICS

Donation to Ketchum's Community Library builds giant CD collection

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — There are already plenty of reasons for lovers of classical music to come to the Wood River Valley, but thanks to the generosity of one recent transplant, Ketchum's Community Library will now be part of their destination.

The library recently unveiled the Max Besler Classical Music Collection, which added more than 1,600 compact disc recordings of classical music to the 255 CDs already in the library's holdings. They were donated by Besler's widow, Janis Heaphy Durham, who moved to Sun Valley a few years ago after her husband's death in 2004.

"I wanted to do something worthwhile with it as a legacy to him," said Heaphy Durham, who will each year add CDs featuring recordings of the pieces that will be played by the Sun Valley Summer Symphony that season. "It would be something that is dynamic, something that's alive. If he had lived, he would have liked sharing his music with others."

The collection is extraordinary, said Frederic Boloix, a former professional classical musician and consultant to classical recording artists. He helped the library assess the place the collection would have in its holdings.

"It makes things a lot easier, because (library patrons) don't have to go choose recordings or interpretations by themselves and feel helpless as to which ones to get," Boloix said.

ARIEL HANSEN/Times-News

Community Library executive director Colleen Daly holds a few of more than 1,600 compact discs of classical music recordings donated to the library by Janis Heaphy Durham. The library's collection, which now numbers near 2,000 classical music CDs, is the largest such in Idaho.

WANT TO LISTEN?

The Community Library's collection of classical music compact discs can be browsed online at thecomunitylibrary.org, but the music can be heard in only two ways:

- Listen at the library, 415 Spruce Ave., Ketchum.
- Check out the CDs using a free library card (there are no residency requirements). Materials may be returned by mail.

Besler gathered multiple recordings of many of his favorite pieces, which Boloix said can be very different and useful in understanding the composition.

"It's not enough to have one version of Beethoven's Seventh, or Strauss' Elektra, he has four or five," Boloix said. "If you love a certain piece, it's wonderful to be able to have different visions of that piece, different interpretations."

Library executive director Colleen Daly said the collection advances a longstanding connection between the library and the symphony, which have collaborated annually on lectures about the symphony's performance season.

"It's just a really wonderful way of increasing awareness and knowledge of classical music, and the Sun Valley Summer Symphony's season in particular," Daly said, praising the collection's breadth, depth and scope. The collection, available since Aug. 1, has already gotten quite a bit of use, she said.

Heaphy Durham said she considered donating the recordings to a library in California, where she and Besler had made their home, but gave them instead to the Ketchum library because of the connection the community already has to classical performance.

She said Besler would have wanted his collection to educate and entertain.

"A lot of people are intimidated because they don't know how to approach it, and the library can be a source of information and knowledge in that way," Heaphy Durham said. "He would like to think he could give this as a gift, this love of music, to others."

Salman Rushdie speaks in Sun Valley

Times-News

Controversial author Sir Salman Rushdie will speak in Sun Valley at 6 p.m. Sept. 10.

Rushdie was originally scheduled to speak last February as part of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts' Lecture Series but was unable to make the trip due to a blizzard on the East Coast. The center was able to reschedule the lecture and move it to a larger venue, the Sun Valley Pavilion.

Tickets are $30 for Sun Valley Center for the Arts members and $40 for others, at sunvalleycenter.org or 726-9491, ext. 10. People holding tickets to the canceled lecture have been reissued tickets, available for pick-up at The Center in Ketchum.

Sir Salman Rushdie catapulted to international fame when his book 'The Satanic Verses' provoked an edict from Ayatollah Khomeini calling for his death.

from Ayatollah Khomeini calling for his death. Rushdie spent nearly a decade underground, seldom appearing in public. A proponent for free speech, Rushdie was knighted by the British government in 2007 for "services to literature."

Rushdie's epic novel "Midnight's Children" not only won Great Britain's prestigious Booker Prize in 1981, but was recognized in 1993 and again in 2008, respectively, as the best novel to have received the prize during its first 25 and 40 years. His other books include "The Moor's Last Sigh," "Shalimar the Clown," "The Enchantress of Florence" and the nonfiction "The Jaguar Smile," about Nicaragua.

Raised in India and Pakistan and educated in England, Rushdie is distinguished writer in residence at Emory University in Atlanta. In announcing his appointment in 2007, Emory president James Wagner called Rushdie "one of the foremost writers of our generation (and) a courageous champion of human rights and freedom."

Wicked awesome

Twin Falls rock band makes Warped Tour debut

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

When they're not talking about cannibalism, ninja surfing or nipples, the guys of Under Wicked Sky produce some pretty great music.

The Gooding and Twin Falls musicians — vocalist Zamis Rockstahl, guitarist Charles Dawson, bassist Cody Brennen and drummer Marc Bulcher — split their time between bantering and recording solid rock tracks.

And people outside of Magic Valley are taking notice. Last week, the four-some performed in Nampa at Vans Warped Tour's 41st stop.

Earlier this year, the band was one of 210 winners of nationwide contest Ernie Ball Battle of the Bands, which gave bands a chance to play at the music festival's different stops. Other acts at this year's Warped Tour included Dropkick Murphys, Reel Big Fish, Anti-Flag and Alkaline Trio. Under Wicked Sky was among five local bands chosen to play at the Nampa show.

"That was a lot of fun," Dawson said. "We had a big crowd to come out and watch us."

For getting as far as they have in the contest, the band is up for the grand prize, which includes a $15,000 Guitar Center shopping spree and a trip to Hollywood to play at the Vans Warped Tour afterparty.

Even if they don't win, the experience allowed the four to connect with music industry insiders, Dawson said, which they hope will help them break into a national market.

One of the problems with the Twin Falls scene is people assume all Magic Valley rock bands are the same. Many are metal, Dawson said, and although Under Wicked Sky has metal influences — including Metallica, from whose song "Unforgiven 2" they gleaned their band name — they try to appeal to a larger base.

But they're not waiting for a record deal or depending on the contest to make their name known. The band just released its first EP, "Black of Day."

Hannah Conover, a friend of Rockstahl and Brennen, said she was surprised at how good the band is when she first heard it a couple of months ago. She didn't expect to like it as much, but now plays Under Wicked Sky music all the time.

"I really like 'Black of Day,'" she said. "It's one of my favorites." She is especially impressed by Dawson's skilled guitar-playing.

Now the band will tour in the fall, with stops in Oregon, Washington and California. So far, confirmed stops are small venues like bars, cafes and music shops.

And maybe those cannibalism jokes will be as funny to the audience as they are to the band.

Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or mdavlin@magicvalley.com.

MagicFest

Continued from Entertainment 1 from the show to the Kiwanis Club of Twin Falls and the Twin Falls Community Foundation.

"I travel around the country seven months of the year with Sponsor Magic Link, a nonprofit organization," said Carson, who resides and performs regularly in Las Vegas. "It allows me to travel to different towns raising money, and the money stays local."

Lance Clow, chairman of the MagicFest Committee and a former Twin Falls mayor, brought in Carson because of his family-friendly magic show.

"One of our committee members recommended him," Clow said. Carson "was doing a charity show in Nampa, so we went to see him, and that just solidified the deal."

Organizers were so set on Carson that they moved MagicFest from July to August so Carson could perform. His show will be the only one viewers have to pay for; it promises to be worth the charge.

"I've been working with animals since I started doing magic," said Carson, who became a professional magician at age 14, "so, for around 17 years or so, with different kinds of animals. Tigers and such. Some people say to me, 'Garry, why do you work with these animals? Don't you know you could get hurt?' And yeah, working with them, you got to be nervous. It's just like working as a police officer. You got to know what kind of danger your life is in and be prepared."

The animals are tame — trained by Carson, Kara and animal training professionals over years. No one in his show has ever had a bad incident with the wild animals, Carson said.

Carson, a veteran magician with a regular show in Las Vegas, gives his advice to up-and-coming magicians:

"The best thing you can do is go to the library and read books on magic. Or go to the Internet. I didn't have the Internet back when I started. I wish I did. But it's better than just going to a magic shop and buying things there ... Invest in a book."

Watch a hundred paragliders over Baldy

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley’s blue sky will turn orange, green, red and pink later this month when the U.S. Paragliding Championships are held on Bald Mountain.

Sun Valley’s ski resort will become paragliding central Aug. 30 through Sept. 5 when many of the world’s top paragliders gather on top of the mountain to vie in various competitions.

The sight of a hundred paragliders in the air over Baldy at one time will be a magnificent sight for spectators, especially those who care to hike up the mountain or ride the gondola to the top, said organizer Mike Pfau.

Several pilots will fly over Ketchum tandem-style during the Wagon Days parade on Sept. 4, BASE jumping into Ketchum. They will land on the empty lot across from the Ketchum Post Office at 151 Fourth St. W., but the jump will be visible from anywhere in Ketchum.

And there will be numerous opportunities for the public to mingle with paragliders and check out the sport.

More than a hundred pilots are expected to come from as far away as Russia, Hungary, the Czech Republic and Colombia to compete in the championships, Pfau said. The internationals will not get bragging rights as U.S. champs, even if they best all the others. But they’re interested in checking out the site because Sun Valley is being considered as a venue for one of seven World Cup paragliding events.

“Paragliding in the United States is really small compared with places like France and Switzerland,” said Pfau. “In Europe paragliding is like road biking. We don’t have a bike race the size of Tour de France, and it’s the same Paragliding off Baldy in winter offers dramatic color. But Hailey pilot Nate Scales, who will compete in the U.S. Paragliding Championships, said the second half of August provides the most consistently good weather for flying. ‘That’s when all the records get broken,’ he says. Scales finished sixth in last year’s national championships held near Salt Lake City after making a last-day error that cost him second place. ‘I wouldn’t miss this year,’ said Scales, who has been paragliding for 18 years. ‘To put on some nylon and strings and jump off a mountain and soar through the air — it’s my favorite thing.’

RUB ELBOWS

The public is invited to join the paragliders over food and beer the evening of Sept. 1 at Powerhouse Restaurant on Hailey’s Main Street. A barbecue and awards ceremony will be held Sept. 5 at the Ketchum Town Plaza across from Atkinsons’ Market. The River Run side of Baldy will serve as headquarters during the Aug. 30-Sept. 5 event and will feature booths and simulators, including an opportunity for spectators to sit in a harness. Atkinsons Park will serve as the registration site.

with paragliding. Here so many people view paragliding as an extreme sport. Europeans are more accepting of paragliding, just as they’re more apt to ski off-piste.”

Aug. 29 is an official practice day. Competition begins the next day and runs through Sept. 5.

Competitors will begin traveling to the top of 9,100-foot Bald Mountain about 9 a.m. each morning for a 10 a.m. pilots meeting at the Lookout Restaurant. There they will be given a task based on that day’s weather.

Pilots will preload waypoints into their GPS units. They will then start launching between 10:30 and 11 a.m., getting as high as they can. They will navigate as many as four waypoints en route to the finish line, with the fastest time winning.

The person who flies the fastest most consistently all week wins the nationals, Pfau said.

Sun Valley boasts a number of accomplished pilots, including Honza Rejmanek, a Czech-born paragliding pilot for Fly Sun Valley who set a state record flying 108 miles or 7 1/2 hours off Baldy to Lima, Mont. Nate Scales, a Hailey carpenter, competed in the Red Bull X-Alps, navigating 818 kilometers through the Alps.

“Having the U.S. National Championships here is a very big deal,” said Scales, who plans to compete this month.

Actually, this will be the second time Sun Valley has hosted the championships. It hosted its first in 2006.

The area is rapidly becoming as well known for its flying as for its skiing, said Fly Sun Valley owner Chuck Smith. The reason: challenging topography, consistent weather patterns, good thermals — columns of rising warming air — and the opportunity the mountain gives paragliders to gain altitude for long cross-country flights.

Sun Valley also offers high-speed quads to take pilots to the launch site — something not many other paragliding areas offer. And there’s a good network of roads for pilots to return on once they’ve landed.

“Baldy can be a difficult site for novice pilots; being Several teams of tandem pilots will participate in this year’s Wagon Days festivities over Labor Day weekend. One member of each team will BASE jump into Ketchum from the air.

on the edge of the mountains and desert makes flying here complex,” Smith said. “But that’s what makes it so interesting and challenging for more experienced pilots. No flight off Bald Mountain is ever the same. You can equate it to Oahu’s North Shore where the big surf draws the best surfers in the world.”

Smith is predicting an uptick in the number of people who want to try tandem paragliding during the championships: “Paragliders in the sky capture attention on the ground; they’re our best advertisers. People see bodies in the air and they want to do it, too.”

Pfau, a carpenter, said it will be worth it if just one person tries paragliding after watching the competition: “Paragliding is the most fun a person can have without a motor. There’s nothing like climbing to 20,000 or 22,000 feet. It’s one of the purest forms of freedom there is.”

Karen Bossick may be reached at kbossick@coxi-internet.com or 578-2111.

WANT TO TRY PARAGLIDING?

A half-hour to hour-plus flight off Baldy costs $225. Allow two hours for the entire experience, said Chuck Smith, owner of Fly Sun Valley. Fly Sun Valley flies every day, weather permitting. Most flights are conducted from early morning to midday and late afternoon through early evening. Information: 726-3332.

Learn a two-step you can adapt

Dance the night away with your partner on three Friday dates in “The Nightclub Two-Step,” a College of Southern Idaho North Side Center course.

This isn’t your western two-step. Instructors Reid and Danielle Lofgran will cover the techniques and steps; once you get these down, you can incorporate moves from other dances. You can slow down or speed up your steps to adapt the dance to almost any music.

Wear smooth-soled shoes; no athletic shoes.

“The Nightclub Two-Step” will be 6-8 p.m. Fridays, Sept. 10-24, at the Gooding Middle School cafeteria.

Cost is $25 per person; you must sign up with a partner. Register: 934-8678.

Learn to draw in Gooding class

Times-News

Thought about learning to draw but didn’t know where to start? Try the “Beginning Drawing” class offered by the College of Southern Idaho’s North Side Center.

Using plain and charcoal pencils, instructor Kurt Pierson will teach the basics of shading and three-dimensional drawing. Students will practice techniques as they focus on basic human and animal characters.

“Beginning Drawing” will meet from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Tuesdays, Sept. 7-28, at the North Side Center, 20214th Ave. E. in Gooding. Fee is $30.

Register: 934-8678.

Ponder constitutional issues at free lecture

Times-News

The 223rd anniversary of the U.S. Constitution will be commemorated at 10 a.m. Sept. 17 in Aspen 108 at the College of Southern Idaho.

Organized by the CSI Social Sciences department, the presentation will feature a lecture titled “Contemporary Issues and the U.S. Constitution” by CSI criminal justice professor Chris Meyerhoeffer.

A question and answer period will be provided, as will reading material about the U.S. Constitution.

Admission is free, and the public is welcome.

CSI announces ‘Nutcracker’ auditions

Times-News

You and your family can see your little dancer live on stage with a professional dance company this Christmas.

The College of Southern Idaho will hold auditions for the annual production of The Eugene Ballet’s “The Nutcracker,” to be performed Dec. 10 in Twin Falls.

Children 5 and older may audition, in the Fine Arts Auditorium on the CSI campus Sept. 11.

Dancers should show up in dance clothing and be ready to dance 15 minutes prior to their audition times. Latecomers will not be allowed to audition. Dancers may audition for more than one part.

Audition times: noon for Baby Mice, 12:30 p.m. for Angels, 1 p.m. for Ladybugs, 2 p.m. for Party Guests and 3:30 p.m. for Flowers.

Baby Mice must be ages 5-7 with no height requirement, and one year of ballet experience is preferred. Angels must be ages 7-9, under 4 foot 6 inches, and have at least one year of ballet. Ladybugs must be ages 9-11, under 5 feet, and have at least two years of ballet. Party Guests must be ages 10-14, under 5 feet 2 inches, and have at least three years’ ballet. Flowers must be advanced female dancers 12 or older, be over 5 feet 2 inches, and have a minimum of three years’ pointe.

Dancers will pay an audition fee of $5. All dancers selected for the show must be available for rehearsals in November and December and will be asked to pay a $5 instruction fee.

Information: College of Southern Idaho, 732-6288.

Major study charts long-lasting oil plume in Gulf

By Seth Borenstein
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A 22-mile-long invisible mist of oil is meandering far below the surface of the Gulf of Mexico, where it will probably loiter for months or more, scientists reported Thursday in the first conclusive evidence of an underwater plume from the BP spill.

The most worrisome part is the slow pace at which the oil is breaking down in the cold, 40-degree water, making it a long-lasting but unseen threat to vulnerable marine life, experts said.

Earlier this month, top federal officials declared the oil in the spill was mostly “gone,” and it is gone in the sense you can’t see it. But the chemical ingredients of the oil persist more than a half-mile beneath the surface, researchers found. And the oil is degrading at one-tenth the pace at which it breaks down at the surface. That means “the plumes could stick around for quite a while,” said study co-author Ben Van Mooy of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts, which led the research published online in the journal Science.

Monty Graham, a scientist at the Dauphin Island Sea Lab in Alabama who was not involved in the study, said: “We absolutely should be concerned that this material is drifting around for who knows how long. They say months in the (research) paper, but more likely we’ll be able to track this stuff for years.”

Late Thursday, federal officials acknowledged the deep-water oil was not degrading as fast as they initially thought, but still was breaking down “relatively rapidly.” Jane Lubchenco, chief of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said agency scientists and others were “working furiously” to come up with actual rates of biodegradation.

She noted a bright spot from the slow breakdown of the oil: Faster would mean a big influx of oil-eating microbes. Though they are useful, they also use up oxygen, creating “dead zones” that already plague the Gulf in the summer. Dead zones are not forming because of the oil plume, Lubchenco said.

The underwater oil was measured close to BP’s blown-out well, which is about 40 miles off the Louisiana coast. The plume started three miles from the Shrimpers haul in their catch on the first day of shrimping season since the Deepwater Horizon oil spill, Monday in Bastian Bay near Empire, La.

well and extended more than 20 miles to the southwest. The oil droplets are odorless and too small to be seen by the human eye. If you swam through the plume, you wouldn’t notice it.

“The water samples when we were right in the plume look like spring water,” study chief author Richard Camilli said. “You certainly didn’t see any oil droplets and you certainly didn’t smell it.”

The scientists used complex instruments — including a special underwater mass spectrometer — to detect the chemical signature of the oil that spewed from the BP well after it ruptured April 20. The equipment was carried into the deep by submersible devices.

With more than 57,000 of these measurements, the scientists mapped a huge plume in late June when the well was still leaking. The components of oil were detected in a flow that measured more than a mile wide and more than 650 feet from top to bottom.

Federal officials said there are signs that the plume has started to break into smaller ones since the Woods Hole research cruise ended. But scientists said that wouldn’t lessen the overall harm from the oil.

The oil is at depths of 3,000 to 4,000 feet, far below the environment of the most popular Gulf fish like red snapper, tuna and mackerel. But it is not harmless. These depths are where small fish and crustaceans live. And one of the biggest migrations on Earth involves small fish that go from deep water to more shallow areas, taking nutrients from the ocean depths up to the large fish and mammals.

Those smaller creatures could be harmed by going through the oil, said Larry McKinney, director of Texas A&M University’s Gulf of Mexico research center in Corpus Christi.

BP accused of withholding ‘critical’ spill data

By Dina Cappiello and Harry R. Weber
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The company that owned the oil rig that exploded in the Gulf of Mexico is accusing BP of withholding critical evidence needed to investigate the cause of the worst offshore oil spill in U.S. history, according to a confidential document obtained by The Associated Press. BP called the claims a publicity stunt.

The new complaint by Transocean follows similar complaints by U.S. lawmakers about difficulties obtaining necessary information from BP in their investigations.

In a sternly worded letter to BP’s attorneys, Transocean said the oil giant has in its sole possession information key to identifying the cause “of the tragic loss of eleven lives and the pollution in the Gulf of Mexico.”

BP’s refusal to turn over the documents has hampered Transocean’s investigation and hindered what it has been able to tell families of the dead and state and federal investigators about the accident, the letter said.

BP and Transocean appear likely to face off in court over how much each should pay out for the tragedy. Transocean owned the Deepwater Horizon, the rig that exploded and sank, killing 11 workers and unleashing millions of gallons of oil. BP was the operator and majority owner of the well.

BP spokeswoman Elizabeth Ashford said Transocean’s accusations were misleading and misguided.

“We have been at the forefront of cooperating with various investigations commissioned by the U. S. government and others into the causes of the Deepwater Horizon tragedy,” Ashford said.

Obama begins Mass. vacation after rough week

By Peter Nicholas
Tribune Washington Bureau

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. — A sign hanging in front of a hotel here reads: “Anyone who has passed health care reform, signed economic stimulus bills, recast America’s global image ... (and) won the Nobel Peace Prize ... deserves a great vacation.”

President Barack Obama is certainly ready for one. He began a 10-day break on this tony island Thursday after a multistate fundraising blitz and an uproar over the right to build a mosque two blocks from the site of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

Despite the cheery view of the hotel staff, Obama is racking up some of the worst approval ratings of his presidency, amid a new report Thursday showing that jobless claims rose to the highest levels in the last nine months.

Talking to reporters on Air Force One en route from Washington, White House spokesman Bill Burton said the trip was a chance for Obama to “rest and recharge the batteries a little bit.”

This is the spot for that sort of thing. The first family is staying at Blue Heron Farm, a 28.5-acre estate in Chilmark, Mass., as it did last summer.

The property, which sold for more than $20 million five years ago, sports apple orchards, horse paddocks, a swimming pool and boating on Tisbury Great Pond. Local real estate agent Caroline Taylor estimated that the estate rents for $50,000 a week. On such trips, the Obamas foot the bill for “personal costs,” Burton said, including the rental fee.

Obama has the whole family with him. Daughter Malia is back from summer camp, and dog Bo was spotted on Air Force One, wandering back to the galley in search of food.

It won’t be all sun and fun. John Brennan, the White House counterterrorism adviser, is here too.

“The president is connected to the White House the whole time he’s on vacation. It’s not a pure getaway,” Doug Hattaway, a former campaign aide to Hillary Rodham Clinton and Al Gore, said in an interview.

“You can’t turn every vacation into a photo op. It’s very important that the president, whoever it is, gets time to relax,” Hattaway said.

For Obama, the vineyard has special allure. He visited as a candidate for president and returned last August. That trip was interrupted by the death of Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, whose endorsement in the 2008 presidential campaign gave Obama a major boost. Obama left to deliver the eulogy in Boston.

University of Idaho committed to WAC

League commish calls Nevada, Fresno State 'selfish'

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Before Fresno State and Nevada rocked the Western Athletic Conference by departing for the Mountain West, Idaho athletic director Rob Spear suspected something momentous was in the offing.

The WAC had been in negotiations with BYU for weeks to join the league in all sports but football. Losing a coveted member like the Cougars, Spear insisted, wasn't going to sit well with Mountain West officials.

"You just knew that the Mountain West wasn't going to roll over here," he said Thursday, the day after FSU and Nevada announced they were joining the MWC and leaving the WAC in disarray.

Spear confirmed Idaho is firmly committed to sticking with the WAC and trying "to raise our program to the next level." He and leaders from the five remaining WAC schools held a phone meeting Thursday morning to reinforce their commitment to the league.

The WAC has now lost its three strongest football schools this summer, all to the MWC. Boise State will join the Mountain West next year, while Nevada and FSU are required to stay until 2012. The remaining WAC members are Hawaii, Utah State, New Mexico State, Louisiana Tech, San Jose State and Idaho.

League commissioner Karl Benson, who labeled the latest and sudden defections as "selfish actions," said a week ago the WAC schools hashed out a binding agreement, in which any school that left within two years would have to pay $5 million within 60 days of leaving.

Seven schools signed the agreement — Nevada the lone exception.

Benson said "a reporting error" was discovered in the Wolf Pack's case, but he received a verbal agreement from Nevada on Saturday that the WAC's legal counsel considers binding. Legal action is a possibility if Nevada refuses to pay, Benson said.

ISU senior QB excited about new offense

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — Timing. That's the key in Idaho State's new offense.

"There's no room for error with anybody, it's all about precision," said starting quarterback Russel Hill, on the scheme being installed by new offensive coordinator Phil Earley.

Hill has gone through four different offensive coordinators in his five years in Pocatello, but said he's most excited about what this latest offense brings to the table.

"It's very complicated that's for sure and it's unorthodox but Coach Earley gets everybody involved in things and it puts so much pressure on the defense because we can have guys anywhere on the field in so many different formations and in motion," he said. "We've just started to get into the playbook but I can see when we run it in practice our defense has to stop and think instead of reacting and I'm looking forward to doing the same thing against opponents soon."

Hill said the Bengals' offense last year included a lot more freelance. "'OK, you cut here if you think you're open,' that kind of

Senior-heavy Twin Falls girls gunning for Great Basin soccer title

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Just getting there isn't good enough anymore. For nine Twin Falls seniors there's just one more chance to get it right.

As it begins the quest for its third straight state tournament berth, the Bruin girls soccer team isn't satisfied with simply making an appearance.

"We know we're not a two-and-out team (at state)," said senior midfielder Alexin Clark, whose golden goal against Idaho Falls in 2008 sent the Bruins to their first state tournament since soccer became a sanctioned sport in 2000. "We know we can do better."

They may never have a better chance to build on their back-to-back state tournament appearances.

Boasting nine seniors — it could have been 11 but stalwart Madi Worst tore her ACL last year and was advised to take this soccer season off, and defender Anne Kent moved out of state — the Bruins feature a mix of talent and experience that could put them in position to win their first-ever district championship.

"We've gotten so close that it's pretty much down to the last kick. We need to have the confidence that it's not out of our capability."

— Claire Goss, sophomore attacker for Twin Falls

Included in that group is midfield boss Clark, leading scorer Erin Grubbs-Imhoff and speedy winger Brooke Wagner, who spent part of the summer training as an Olympic skeleton hopeful.

Bolstering the senior leadership is a young crop of talent led by sophomore attacker Claire Goss, who was a goal off Grubbs-Imhoff for the team lead last season.

All that power in attack should allow Twin Falls to constantly go forward, taking the pressure off the back line and goalkeeper.

"If we have a good attack, the defense doesn't have to work as hard (constantly)," Goss said. "We can control possession and keep the ball a lot better too."

That will help against Wood River, but to dethrone the six-time reigning district champions Twin Falls will have to adjust its game. The direct style the Bruins employ won't work against a Wolverine team that can match them in speed and technical ability.

"They're our competition, straight up. That's the one we're looking forward to," said senior defender Stephanie Peck. "To beat them we've got to be able to work quick passes and work our way slowly up the field, unlock their defense."

Clark hinted at a greater togetherness within this season's squad and added that rather than a hope of doing well, there's now a belief.

The only surefire way for the Bruins to begin believing they can beat Wood River, however, is to beat Wood River.

"We've gotten so close that it's pretty much down to the last kick. We need to have the confidence that it's not out of our capability," Goss said.

Clemens indicted on six counts for alleged lying

By Pete Yost
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Roger Clemens was vehement: "Let me be clear. I have never taken steroids or HGH," he told a House committee in 2008. Now, instead of the Hall of Fame, baseball's seven-time Cy Young winner could go to prison after being indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday for allegedly lying to Congress.

The case writes a new chapter in one of baseball's worst scandals, the rampant use of performance-enhancing drugs in the 1990s and early 2000s, and leaves Clemens' legacy in jeopardy.

The six-count indictment alleges that Clemens obstructed a congressional inquiry with 15 different statements made under oath, including denials that he had ever used steroids or human growth hormone.

Former Rep. Tom Davis of Virginia, the top Republican on the House panel at the time of Clemens' testimony, called it "a self-inflicted wound."

Clemens had been prominently mentioned in the Mitchell Report, Major League Baseball's own accounting of its steroid problem, and he went to Capitol Hill on his own to clear his name.

"Clemens was not under subpoena. He came voluntarily," Davis said. "And I sat there in the office with (committee chairman) Henry Waxman and said, 'Whatever you do, don't lie.'"

Clemens was sticking to his story Thursday. He insisted he was telling the truth, again denying any wrongdoing on or off the field.

Vikings wide receiver Harvin suffers migraine attack at practice

By Dave Campbell
Associated Press writer

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Percy Harvin experienced the scariest episode yet in a career plagued by migraine headaches when he collapsed at Minnesota Vikings' practice Thursday and was taken to a hospital by ambulance.

Coach Brad Childress left team headquarters after practice and spent the rest of the afternoon at the hospital with Harvin, who also got visits from other coaches and teammates.

"Percy appreciates everyone's concern," the coach said in a statement posted on the team website Thursday evening. "He is alert and resting comfortably, but will remain in the hospital overnight."

Harvin, who has dealt with migraines most of his life, returned to the field Monday after missing more than two weeks, but at the beginning of Thursday's workout the wide receiver experienced another episode that was scary enough for the Vikings to halt practice while their teammate received medical attention.

"To see a guy go down, it's never a good thing," defensive end Ray Edwards said. "Just pray that the Lord is with him and he gets back to us safely, and to his family most importantly."

Childress said that Harvin's episode was triggered when he looked up into a mostly cloudy sky to field a punt during a special teams drill. Harvin went inside to see team physician Dr. Sheldon Burns, then came back out to the field.

Soon after, Harvin was seen doubled over and trembling. Players and coaches stood in front of him to shield him while reporters watched from a distance as Harvin received medical attention.

"I don't know how they classify it," Childress said after practice. "Not really a seizure, but he had some trouble over here. I'd be remiss if I tried to qualify it one way or another. It seemed like he was stable."

Childress added: "I'm putting it in a migraine category, just because of what preceded that, but I certainly don't know what put him down on the ground over there, if it was some kind of reaction or what."

The Vikings continued with practice for about five minutes while Harvin was being worked on, then drills were stopped. After Harvin was loaded into the ambulance, the team gathered on the field and took a knee in prayer. Players resumed their work for a few more minutes before calling practice over at least an hour early.

"It was an eye-opener," running back Adrian Peterson said. "It's been tough for him. I just encourage him the best way I can."

The ambulance did not leave immediately after

Streaking Padres polish off Cubs sweep

CHICAGO — Will Venable hit a two-run single in the seventh inning and the San Diego Padres rallied to beat the Cubs 5-3 Thursday, completing their first four-game sweep of Chicago in their 42-year history.

The four-run seventh — capped by Venable’s dash home when the Cubs weren’t paying attention to him — made a winner of Mat Latos and helped the NL West-leading Padres to their 10th victory in 11 games.

The Cubs lost their seventh straight at home, their longest skid at Wrigley Field since 2006.

Latos (13-5) had a career-high 10 strikeouts in seven innings, yielding two runs and five hits. Heath Bell allowed Blake DeWitt’s RBI single in the ninth but still earned his 24th consecutive save and 37th in 40 attempts this season.

NATIONALS 6, BRAVES 2

ATLANTA — Nyjer Morgan had two hits and scored two runs in his return from the disabled list.

John Lannan (5-5) gave up two runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings to win his third straight start. Willie Harris padded Washington’s lead with a two-run homer in the ninth.

Derek Lowe (11-11) pitched seven innings for Atlanta, yielding four runs and six hits.

The Giants averted a sweep in a matchup of NL wild-card contenders. San Francisco stopped its three-game losing streak and ended the Phillies’ four-game winning string.

Sanchez (9-8) became the first Giants starting pitcher to record a win in 15 games, dating to his victory over Colorado on Aug. 3. No runner reached second base against the lefty, who retired 15 straight after hitting Chase Utley with a pitch in the fourth.

PITTSBURGH — Alex

Sanabia pitched 7 2-3 innings of four-hit ball and Gaby Sanchez hit a three-run homer.

Sanabia (2-1) allowed one run, struck out five and walked none in his fifth career start. The right-hander was recalled from Triple-A New Orleans on Wednesday night after Sean West was scratched from his start due to right knee inflammation.

ASTROS 3, METS 2

HOUSTON — Carlos Lee hit a three-run homer in the seventh inning to lift the Astros.

Angel Sanchez and Hunter Pence singled with no outs before Lee drove Pat Misch’s next pitch to the Crawford Boxes in left field. Misch (0-2) was rolling before the trouble in the seventh, retiring 16 straight hitters after Pence’s two-out double in the first.

AMERICAN LEAGUE WHITE SOX 11, TWINS 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Paul Konerko had five hits and four RBIs and Mark Buehrle pitched seven shutout innings to help Chicago slow surging Minnesota 11-0 on Thursday night.

Buehrle (12-9) allowed five hits and struck out four. Konerko hit his 31st home run and had a double and three singles among Chicago’s 21 hits to help the Sox avoid a sweep and shave the Twins’ lead to four games in the AL Central.

Carl Pavano (15-8) set a career high and tied a club record with 15 hits. He gave up seven runs in six innings. The Twins lost at sold-out Target Field for the first time in 10 games and missed a chance to take a six-game lead in the division.

ANGELS 7, RED SOX 2

BOSTON — Hideki Matsui hit a three-run homer, then drove in another run with a bases-loaded walk, and Ervin Santana took a two-hitter into the eighth inning to help Los Angeles snap a nine-game losing streak against Boston.

Santana (13-8) allowed two runs and four hits in seven-plus innings, walking four, hitting a batter and striking out three. Kevin Jepsen, who blew Wednesday night’s game by giving up runs on a wild pitch and hit batsman, pitched out of Santana’s bases-loaded, no-outs jam in the eighth.

ORIOLES 4, RANGERS 0

BALTIMORE — Rookie Brian Matusz pitched eight innings, and Baltimore used a four-run seventh to defeat Colby Lewis and skidding Texas.

Matusz (5-12) gave up five hits, walked one and struck out six. Only two Rangers reached second base and none advanced to third.

YANKEES 11, TIGERS 5

NEW YORK — Robinson Cano hit a tiebreaking double and a two-run homer in New York’s nine-run sixth inning.

Austin Kearns added a two-run double and Derek Jeter a two-run triple for New York.

Miguel Cabrera hit his third homer in two games and fourth of the series for Detroit.

INDIANS 7, ROYALS 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Shin-Soo Choo hit a tiebreaking RBI single in Cleveland’s five-run eighth inning.

Spiller sparks Bills to 34-21 win over Colts

TORONTO — It took four plays for rookie first-round draft pick C.J. Spiller to begin delivering on his dynamic billing, as the running back sparked the Buffalo Bills in a 34-21 preseason victory over Indianapolis on Thursday.

Starting in place of injured veterans Fred Jackson and Marshawn Lynch, Spiller opened the scoring on a powerful 31-yard run 3 minutes in. Drafted ninth overall out of Clemson, Spiller finished with 10 carries on 54 yards.

The Bills offense followed suit. Shaking off an inconsistent debut in last week’s 42-17 loss at Washington, quarterback Trent Edwards produced two scoring drives in five series, including a 70-yard touchdown pass to Lee Evans to put Buffalo up 21-14. Furthering his bid to reclaim the starting job he lost midway through last season, Edwards went 5 for 8 for 93 yards and the Bills (1-1) never trailed.

The 14 points scored by Buffalo’s first-stringers more than doubled the two field goals they had managed in their previous six preseason games, dating to last year.

Rian Lindell hit a 24-yard with 22 seconds left in the first half to put Buffalo ahead for good, 24-21.

Buffalo Bills running back C.J. Spiller (21) rushes past Indianapolis Colts defensive back Jacob Lacey (27) in the first quarter of a preseason NFL football game in Toronto on Thursday.

Peyton Manning and the high-powered Colts (0-2) didn’t disappoint in what proved to be a wide-open and entertaining first half in the fourth installment of Buffalo’s five-year, eight-game series in Toronto.

PATRIOTS 28, FALCONS 10

ATLANTA (AP) — New England’s offense looks just fine, especially with Wes Welker back at receiver. The Falcons’ defense appears to need more work.

Tom Brady threw for a touchdown, Fred Taylor ran for a score and the Patriots cruised past Atlanta.

Welker, who had 346 catches over the last three years, played for the first time since tearing up his left knee in January during the regular-season finale. Brady got him involved right away, completing passes of 6 and 14 yards on the second and third plays against the Falcons (1-1).

New England (2-0) scored on two of its three possessions with the first-team offense. Taylor had a 28-yard run, and Brady passed 4 yards to Aaron Hernandez for a touchdown.

Clemens

“Roger is looking forward to his day in court,” Clemens lawyer Rusty Hardin told a news conference. “He is happy this has finally happened. We have known for some time this was going to happen. We’ll let everything get taken care of in court.”

“I never took HGH or Steroids. And I did not lie to Congress,” Clemens said on Twitter. “I look forward to challenging the Government’s accusations, and hope people will keep an open mind until trial. I appreciate all the support I have been getting. I am happy to finally have my day in court.”

Hardin said federal prosecutors made Clemens a plea offer but he rejected it. Hardin declined to comment on details of the proposed plea deal — which ordinarily involves admitting to a crime while avoiding the scenario of a multiple-count indictment as happened in the Clemens case.

Clemens faces a combined maximum sentence of 30 years in prison and a $1.5 million fine if convicted on all charges. However, under U.S. sentencing guidelines, he would probably face no more than 15 to 21 months in prison.

Clemens is just the latest superstar to be ensnared in baseball’s steroid scandal. All-time home run king Barry Bonds is scheduled to go on trial in March on charges of lying to a federal grand jury when he said he never knowingly used performance-enhancing drugs. Slugger Mark McGwire admitted earlier this year to using steroids.

Hardin said that although many have argued that Clemens should simply admit he took steroids, “the problem is nobody ever talks about what he should have done if he didn’t do it.”

“And he didn’t do it and he’s adamant about that and always has been. Today is just another continuing part of that saga,” Hardin said.

Attack

Harvin was loaded, and it left without its siren or lights on. Though the situation didn’t appear grave, the mood was somber.

“Obviously that one hit, and it hit hard,” Childress said. “It’s always scary for all of our guys when you see a teammate struggling with whatever.”

Childress said that Harvin has had to go to the hospital for a migraine before, as a college star at the University of Florida.

“I’ve seen him with one before. I’ve gotten him off the field with one before. I’ve seen the start of one coming on before, but certainly nothing to that magnitude,” Childress said.

Migraine triggers vary from person to person, but rising humidity and changes in barometric pressure can cause them, as can the glare of the sun. Since Harvin started missing practice as a rookie last year, the Vikings have received all kinds of suggestions to treat the migraines. Harvin has sought treatment from expert after expert, but all of Thursday’s episode was the latest example of how hard of a problem it is to solve.

“I think by this happening it kind of lets the team know exactly how hard it is,” left tackle Bryant McKinnie said. “A lot of times it doesn’t take place in front of us. So now by people actually seeing it, they see it’s really not a joke.”

“Some of us knew for real that he was really suffering from it,” McKinnie said. “Maybe some other people in some of their minds they weren’t sure, but I think they are aware now.”

Tim Tebow’s injury raises questions

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Tim Tebow’s battered ribs are casting doubt and raising concerns in Denver.

Is the rookie quarterback going to make his home debut with the Broncos on Saturday night after missing two practices this week?

More importantly, will the former Florida star have to alter his physical style of play now that he’s in the bigger, badder NFL?

Coach Josh McDaniels isn’t saying whether Tebow is in or out when the Detroit Lions visit Invesco Field, but he is adamant that Tebow doesn’t have to abandon his reckless abandon.

Tebow was known for running the football at Florida, where he won two national titles and a Heisman Trophy, and he never really had to slide or go out of bounds much in college, where at 6-foot-3 and 245 pounds, he was bigger and stronger than many of his pursuers.

CUSHING HAS 4-GAME SUSPENSION UPHELD

METAIRIE, La. — Houston Texans linebacker Brian Cushing had his four-game suspension for taking a performance-enhancing drug upheld by the NFL on Thursday, which means he won’t be eligible to play until October.

The reigning Associated Press Defensive Rookie of the Year was suspended in May for testing positive for HCG, a fertility drug that is on the NFL’s banned substances list. Cushing claims that he has a unique medical condition that triggered the positive test.

Cushing will miss games against Indianapolis,

Washington, Dallas and Oakland before becoming eligible to return Oct. 10, when Houston hosts the New York giants.

RYAN SPEAKS WITH DUNGY ‘MAN-TO-MAN’

CORTLAND, N.Y. — Rex Ryan smoothed things over with Tony Dungy.

The New York Jets coach spoke with Dungy about his criticism of him during HBO’s “Hard Knocks” series. The former NFL coach said that Ryan used too much profanity.

Ryan was disappointed Wednesday, saying Dungy, a devout Christian, unfairly judged him for his foul language on the television show. Dungy told “The Dan Patrick Show” on Monday that NFL commissioner Roger Goodell should talk to Ryan about his excessive cursing.

HAYNESWORTH MISSES ANOTHER PRACTICE

ASHBURN, Va. — The story keeps changing, but one thing remains the same about Albert Haynesworth: He still isn’t practicing.

The Redskins defensive tackle was sidelined again Thursday, the last day of training camp.

When Haynesworth was pulled out of practice Tuesday, coach Mike Shanahan said he thought it was because the two-time All-Pro was feeling sick. When Haynesworth didn’t practice Wednesday, the coach chalked it up to dehydration.

On Thursday, the coach said it appeared to be a headache more so than dehydration that is keeping Haynesworth idle.

Atwal ties Wyndham record with 61

GREENSBORO, N.C. — If Arjun Atwal keeps this up, he'll have a new PGA Tour card in no time.

Atwal tied a tournament record with a 61 Thursday and took a two-stroke lead at the Wyndham Championship.

Matching Carl Pettersson's 2-year-old mark at the par-70 Sedgefield Country Club course, Atwal was 9 under through the first round of the PGA Tour's final event before the playoffs.

Brandt Snedeker shot a 63. John Rollins, Kevin Streelman, Lucas Glover, Boo Weekley, David Toms and Jeev Milkha Singh were at 64, and six players shot 65s during an occasionally wet day that left Sedgefield's greens soft and its leaderboard crowded.

It was quite the encouraging start for Atwal, who lost his tour card last month and had to play his way into this event in a Monday qualifier across town at Forest Oaks Country Club — where this tournament was held from 1977-2007.

He played that course twice before, finishing sixth in 2004, and wound up shooting a 67 to share first place with three other qualifiers. No Monday qualifier has won a tournament since Fred Wadsworth did it at the 1986 Southern Open.

"You get used to making a lot of birdies in the Monday qualifier — otherwise you won't make it," Atwal said. "I kind of continued that today."

The loss of his card capped a series of events that began when he injured his shoulders last year while lifting weights. He received a minor medical extension, but when he came up short on the money list following the RBC Canadian Open, his card was history.

He isn't eligible for the FedEx Cup playoffs that begin next week in New Jersey, not even if he wins. But he can claim his card for 2011 with a victory — either here or at a fall series tournament — or a climb up the money lists of the PGA or Nationwide tours.

"I prefer to win," Atwal said with a laugh.

Three more days like this, and he'll almost certainly take care of that.

Atwal started his bogey-free round on the back nine, made the turn at 4 under and birdied three of his final four holes, sinking a 7-foot putt on No. 9 to cap things.

WEIBRING, LEHMAN SHARE LEAD AT THE TRADITION

SUNRIVER, Ore. — D.A. Weibring and Tom Lehman shot 5-under-par 67s Thursday to share the first-round lead at the Jeld-Wen Tradition at Crosswater Club.

Playing on a beautiful, but slightly breezy day, Weibring made birdies at Nos. 17 and 18 to take the lead.

Weibring, whose best finish on the Champions Tour this season is a tie for fifth, made four of his six birdies on the front nine, including a stretch of three consecutive.

Lehman, playing in the final group of the day, also finished strong, rolling in a 20-foot birdie putt at 18 to grab a share of the lead.

The Tradition is the fourth of five majors on the Champions Tour. Nearly one-third of the 66-man field is with in two strokes of the lead.

Five players shot 68. Among that group is Corey Pavin, the U.S. Ryder Cup captain, who made an eagle at the par-4 10th by holing a 163-yard 8-iron.

Also at 68 is 2008 Tradition champion Fred Funk, Bob Gilder, Fulton Allem and Gil Morgan. The unlikeliest of that group is Allem, who is ranked 91st in Champions Tour earnings this season.

Bernhard Langer, the tour's season earnings and Charles Schwab Cup leader, is among 13 players at 69.

Get ready for conspiracy theories as ESPN adds BCS

NEW YORK (AP) — With each victory on the way to starting 9-0 in 1996, Army's football players and coaches were convinced this would be the one that launched them into the polls.

It took until that ninth win for them to slip into the AP Top 25.

"Week after week, we'd think we were going to get into the rankings, but you'd have some ESPN guy saying, 'West Point, they're playing a powder-puff schedule,'" recalled New Mexico coach Mike Locksley, an assistant on that squad.

Passionate fans will always bristle when they feel the talking heads on TV are disrespecting their favorite team — that's part of the fun of sports. But the topic is especially prickly in college football, where human voters help determine who plays for the national championship.

For fans already fretting that some commentators may hurt their beloved school in the BCS standings, a new wrinkle arrives this season. ESPN, home to endless hours of college football debate, takes over the broadcasts of the Fiesta, Orange and Sugar bowls and the title game.

It's just more fodder for the great American tradition of conspiracy theories: Get ready for insinuations that "Just so everybody doesn't forget. ESPN is the one who put college football on the map and made it the second most popular sport to watch behind the NFL."

— Temple coach Al Golden

ESPN is hyping particular teams that it believes would draw higher ratings in the BCS contests.

"Any time you have the human element involved, that's a possibility," ESPN senior coordinating producer Dave Miller said of voters being swayed by the analysts on TV. "But we don't have any directive or any goal of trying to influence that we need to get this team in or that team in."

The BCS games were previously on Fox, which wasn't likely to be accused of conflict of interest because of its lack of other college football programming. ESPN's contract gives it the package for the next four years; it already had the Rose Bowl on partner ABC.

"You always have to be careful," Miller said. "Perception can be reality."

Consider new analyst Mike Bellotti's take on his hire: "I think in some ways they're bringing me on with the intent to even off the perceived East Coast bias," the former Oregon coach and athletic director said.

But to Bellotti and his new colleagues, the difference between perception and reality is simple.

"The No. 1 thing is your credibility," he said, and obvious bias would instantly undermine that.

At New Mexico in the Mountain West Conference, Locksley is at one of those schools that lacks the big-name recognition in the college football perception game. He's also been at the other end of the spectrum as an assistant at BCS conference programs Maryland, Florida and Illinois — and believes those power players get their fair share of coverage: "I'm not a conspiracy theorist."

"I think there is a perception problem, but it's not just ESPN," Locksley said. "Any media that follows conferences and teams has the ability to persuade."

ESPN analyst Ed Cunningham chuckled when asked if fans will howl that the network is trying to manipulate BCS bowl matchups. He figures it's inevitable — and part of the job.

"It has been in the past," he said. "Certainly everyone always says ESPN has too much power and we get blamed for people wining and losing the Heisman."

He wonders if ESPN's ever-expanding coverage of college football, while increasing its overall imprint on the sport, also serves to dilute any one opinion. As Miller said, if you watch seven different analysts on ESPN on a given Saturday, "you'll get seven different opinions."

This season ESPN will air about 25 hours of college football programming in a typical week, with ESPN2 adding another 15-20. And that doesn't count all the coverage on ABC, ESPNU and other outlets.

More hours of debating mean more hours to discuss a wider variety of teams. Cunningham doesn't have any scientific evidence to back up his sense that the network's commentators have chatted about non-BCS conference schools more often the last couple of years.

"But it certainly feels like we talk about them a whole lot more," he said.

"Just so everybody doesn't forget," said Temple coach Al Golden, "ESPN is the one who put college football on the map and made it the second most popular sport to watch behind the NFL."

The $5 million exit agreement was Benson's idea to the WAC's board of directors. "I wish at this time I would have made it $20 million," he said.

Now that Nevada and Fresno State have left, the remaining WAC schools aren't required to keep the agreement.

Said Benson: "I know that the other six WAC board members were under the belief that the action taken by the eight schools last Friday indicated a willingness and a desire and intent to move this forward knowing that a potential outcome would have included BYU. ... The unfortunate part here is that there was solidarity and expressed solidarity and four days later there was a departure."

Utah State, which joined the league with New Mexico State and Idaho in 2005, was also approached by the MWC, but the Aggies felt the agreement already in place within the WAC was binding, athletic director Scott Barnes said in an open letter released Thursday afternoon.

"We were simply committed to uphold our agreement with fellow WAC members," Barnes wrote.

Benson said the WAC is already exploring potential suitors to fill the open slots. Cal Poly, Sacramento State and UC Davis were mentioned as possibilities, and Benson said all were possible targets. The same goes for Montana, Texas State and Texas-San Antonio — all FCS (or Division I-AA) schools.

"Obviously one of things we'd like to do is reach out to some FBS schools right now in other conferences," Spear said.

He added that it's not the league's preference, at least initially, to add an FCS school. Until next summer, when a moratorium is lifted, any non-FBS school must petition the NCAA to move up to the highest level and then go through a transition period.

Still, Montana would be an ideal addition — Benson said the Grizzlies have tremendous facilities and fans — but the school has declined to pursue a move in the past.

Montana is going through an internal review, Benson said, and "when they've done it previously, the conclusion has been that FCS is in their best interest."

Although there's still hope BYU could join, the move is less likely with Fresno State and Nevada gone. The Bulldogs and Wolf Pack, along with other WAC members, would have been ideal football scheduling partners for BYU if it had gone independent, as reports indicated earlier this week.

Mountain West Commissioner Craig Thompson said Wednesday night that adding Fresno State and Nevada was not designed to thwart BYU's departure by weakening the WAC.

Benson had a very different take.

"My opinion, it was very clear to me and to the WAC membership that the Fresno and Nevada invitation was direct result of BYU's interest of going independent and joining the WAC," he said.

With the original plan in tatters after it came close to coming to fruition, Spear used a sports analogy to describe the last month.

"Look, it's kind of like of wrestling match, where you're on top and you almost have a pin and somebody does a reversal on you and they get two points and you lose the match," he said. "It was disappointing to get that close to having something done that would have really solidified the WAC, but we're going to move forward from here. Not look back and worry about could have happened; I'm just excited about what can happen."

As for Boise State's take on the moves, school president Bob Kustra released a statement Thursday afternoon.

"Boise State University is firmly committed to the Mountain West Conference and looks forward to officially joining the league in 2011," he said. "We welcome Fresno State and Nevada-Reno into the fold as members. We have enjoyed these athletic competitions and university partnerships in the past and are delighted these relationships will continue."

This year Coach Earley is so particular about the details, how you have to be in the right alignment. He stresses it. It took awhile to get used to it."

As a sophomore starter, Hill set numerous school records. Since then he's been injured, benched and used as a backup at various times.

Asked about those up and downs the possibility of redemption as a senior, Hill said, "We've had a lot of down moments the past few years and it's been hard on all of us, not just me but all my teammates. I'd like to think that it was all for a reason. I saw everything as a challenge and I'm doing everything I can to make sure I can answer the challenge this year."

Without question Hill is the key to this year's Bengal offense. ISU has only two other inexperienced quarterbacks on the roster, so Hill's health is paramount. Earley is spending a lot of time working with a revamped offensive line. That line includes two Magic Valley products, Burley's Braeden Clayson and Lighthouse Christian's John Van Vliet among the starters.

If they can keep Hill upright, ISU's timing offense will have the time needed to succeed.

U.S. looks to avoid 2006 mistakes at basketball worlds

MADRID (AP) — The United States' world championship preparations are coming together, and Derrick Rose is certain the team will make history by avoiding the mistakes of four years ago.

Even with the likes of LeBron James and Dwyane Wade leading the team, the U.S. only managed to win bronze in Japan, a result that Rose called "heart-breaking." It stretched the Americans' trophy drought at the world championships to 16 years.

Rose said the current roster was drawing off that shocking semifinal exit to Greece.

"They didn't gel together," Rose said. "With the team we have, we're young, but we like playing together. We have passion for the game. We can make history right now."

The last world championships squad — which also included Carmelo Anthony, Dwight Howard and Chris Bosh — was filled with stars. This one includes five 21-year-olds — not much older than the kids coach Mike Krzyzewski has at Duke — who are still developing as players.

U.S. national team chairman Jerry Colangelo said the current collection of talent was coming closer together every day, and lauded their professionalism at such a young age.

"Their aren't many big egos here, and we've already told them where to show off their personal egos — on the court," Colangelo said. "These guys are low maintenance."

There are other deficiencies as well. Tyson Chandler is the only true center a roster that plans to run the floor, with athletic swingmen like Kevin Durant and Rudy Gay leading the way.

Krzyzewski has labeled the buildup to the Aug. 28-Sept. 12 tournament a training camp, with the U.S. playing Lithuania and defending world champion Spain in the Spanish capital of Madrid before a match in Athens against Greece next week.

Rose said the chance of winning the world championships for the first time since 1994 was a big motivation for this crop of players, especially since Shaquille O'Neal is the only player from that team still playing in the NBA.

"It makes us go out and play even harder knowing everyone is calling us the B-team, and not thinking we're going to win," Rose said. "Some people say this is bigger than the Olympics, having to get through more teams. It's going to be very hard."

Rose said the players were coming together, especially during their month in Europe.

"You definitely can't talk on the phone with people back home or your phone bill will be sky high," Rose said. "So you have to talk with each other."

U.N. appears to hit aid goal for flood-hit Pakistan

By Edith M. Lederer
Associated Press writer

UNITED NATIONS — The United Nations appeared to have met its target of $460 million in immediate aid for flood-stricken Pakistan on Thursday after the U.S. and other nations significantly upped their pledges.

The rush of promised help came after U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, addressing a hastily called meeting of the General Assembly, urged governments and people to be even more generous than they were in the 2004 Indian Ocean tsunami and this year's Haiti earthquake, because the floods were a bigger "global disaster" with the Pakistan government now saying more than 20 million people need shelter, food and clean water.

"This disaster is like few the world has ever seen," Ban told the meeting. "It requires a response to match. Pakistan needs a flood of support."

Before the meeting, he said, donors had given half the sum the U.N. appealed for to provide food, shelter and clean water to up to 8 million flood victims over the next three months. But Ban insisted all the money was needed now — and much more will be needed later.

After listening to speeches by high-level representatives of some 20 countries, Pakistani Foreign Minister Shah Mahmood Qureshi said he was assured that the $460 million goal "is going to be easily met," including " $100 million plus" from Saudi Arabia.

Aid groups and U.N. officials had worried about a slow response to the flooding, theorizing that donors who have spent heavily on a string of huge disasters in recent years are reluctant to open their wallets yet again.

Richard Holbrooke, the U.S. special envoy to Pakistan and Afghanistan, told reporters before the meeting that he believed that where the tsunami and Haiti catastrophes happened suddenly, "for about 10 days people didn't realize that this wasn't just another flood."

Earlier Thursday, after visiting flood areas with Pakistani President Asif Ali Zardari, U.S. Sen. John Kerry warned of extremists who might "exploit the misery of others for political or ideological purpose, and so it is important for all of us to work overtime."

Zardari spoke of militants who might take orphaned children "and train them as the terrorists of tomorrow."

Judge considers paralysis punishment for man convicted of attack

CAIRO — A Saudi judge has asked several hospitals in the country whether they could damage a man's spinal cord as punishment after he was convicted of attacking another man with a cleaver and paralyzing him, the brother of the victim said Thursday.

Abdul-Aziz al-Mutairi, 22, was left paralyzed and subsequently lost a foot after a fight more than two years ago. He asked a judge in northwestern Tabuk province to impose an equivalent punishment on his attacker under Islamic law, his brother Khaled al-Mutairi told The Associated Press by telephone from there.

He said one of the hospitals, located in Tabuk, responded that it is possible to damage the spinal cord, but it added that the operation would have to be done at another more specialized facility. Saudi newspapers reported that a second hospital in the capital Riyadh declined, saying it could not inflict such harm.

Administrative offices of two of the hospitals and the court in Tabuk were closed for the Saudi weekend beginning Thursday and could not be reached for comment.

A copy of the medical report from the King Khaled Hospital in Tabuk province obtained by the AP said the same injury al-Mutairi suffers from can be inflicted on his attacker using a nerve stimulant, and inducing the same injuries in the same locations. The report was dated six months ago.

WASHINGTON

U.S. officials: Mideast talks may start soon

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration said Thursday it is near to securing an agreement between Israel and the Palestinians to resume direct peace talks. Some U.S. officials said an announcement could be imminent.

The State Department said an agreement was "very, very close" but that details were still being worked out. An announcement could come as early as today or Saturday, said administration officials familiar with the matter. They spoke on condition of anonymity due to the delicacy of the ongoing diplomacy.

"We think we are very, very close to a decision by the parties to enter into direct negotiations," State Department spokesman P.J. Crowley told reporters. "We think we're well positioned to get there."

To that end, he said, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton had called Palestinian Prime Minister Salam Fayyad late Wednesday and spoken Thursday with Jordanian Foreign Minister Nasser Judeh and former British Prime Minister Tony Blair, the special representative of the "Quartet" of Mideast peacemakers — the U.S., the U.N., the European Union and Russia.

Pentagon takes aim at China cyber threat

WASHINGTON — The U.S. for the first time is publicly warning about the Chinese military's use of civilian computer experts in clandestine cyber attacks aimed at American companies and government agencies.

In a move that is being seen as a pointed signal to Beijing, the Pentagon laid out its concerns this week in a carefully worded report.

The People's Liberation Army, the Pentagon said, is using "information warfare units" to develop viruses to attack enemy computer systems and networks, and those units include civilian computer professionals.

The assertion shines a light on a quandary that has troubled American authorities for some time: How does the U.S. deal with cyber espionage emanating from China and almost certainly directed by the government — despite the fact that U.S. officials don't have or can't show proof of those ties?

Asked about the civilian hackers, a Defense Department spokesman said the Pentagon is concerned about any potential threat to its computer networks. The Pentagon, said Cmdr. Bob Mehal, will monitor the PLA's buildup of its cyberwarfare capabilities, and "will continue to develop capabilities to counter any potential threat."

Obama a Muslim?

Poll shows rumors gain steam, defying facts

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — "President Obama is a Muslim?" "He's not an American citizen." "He wasn't even born here."

None of this is true. But to surprising levels, it is believed.

Blame it on the media, or on human nature. All presidents deal with image problems — that they're too weak or too belligerent, too far left or far right. But Obama also faces questions over documented facts, in part because some people identify more with the rumor-mongers than the debunkers.

"Trust and distrust — that explains almost all of it," says Nicholas DiFonzo, professor of psychology at the Rochester Institute of Technology and an expert on rumor and gossip research. "We are in such a highly polarized political environment. Our country is sorting itself into more closely knit, opposing factions each year" — factions, DiFonzo suggests, that in turn become "echo chambers" for factoids that aren't fact at all.

Nearly one in five people, or 18 percent, said they think Obama is Muslim, up from the 11 percent who said so in March 2009, according to a poll released Thursday. The proportion who correctly say he is a Christian is just 34 percent, down from 48 percent in March of last year.

The White House even felt compelled to respond with a terse knockdown from spokesman Bill Burton: "The president is obviously a Christian. He prays every day."

Obama is the Christian son of a Kenyan Muslim father and a Kansas mother. Born in Hawaii, he lived from ages 6 to 10 in predominantly Muslim Indonesia with his mother and Indonesian stepfather. His full name, Barack Hussein Obama, sounds Muslim to many.

Confusion about Obama's religion was common, and sometimes encouraged, during the 2008 campaign. An Associated Press photograph that circulated on the Internet, and was posted on The Drudge Report, showed Obama dressed in traditional local garments — a white turban and a wraparound white robe — during a visit to Kenya in 2006.

Democratic rival Hillary Rodham Clinton may have contributed through her response to a question, during a "60 Minutes" interview, about whether he was a Muslim. "There's nothing to base that on," she said. "As far as I know."

Others have helped keep rumors about Obama's religion and birth alive. Conservative commentators including radio talk show host Michael Savage have repeated debunked claims that Obama attended a radical Muslim madrasa in Indonesia. Rush Limbaugh has facetiously referred to "Imam Obama" in recent days, and last year praised a woman who at a Delaware town hall meeting questioned Obama's citizenship.

Lou Dobbs gave significant air time to such "birther" claims on CNN — despite his own insistence that he believed Obama was born in the U.S.

The new survey, conducted by the nonpartisan Pew Research Center and its affiliated Pew Forum on Religion & Public Life, is based on interviews conducted before the controversy over whether Muslims should be permitted to construct a mosque near the World Trade Center site. Obama has said he believes Muslims have the right to build an Islamic center there, though he's also said he won't take a position on whether they should actually build it.

We have never been without misperceptions, but they are speeded and multiplied in the Internet age. Last month, right-wing bloggers — citing unnamed sources within the Laredo Police Department in Texas — reported that the Mexican drug cartel Zetas had captured two Laredo ranches. The story was picked up by author-pundit Michelle Malkin and other conservatives.

Inquiries from local media and the liberal Web site Talking Points Memo turned up different news: The raids never happened.

"The Internet has made it worse," says Lori Robertson, managing editor of the website FactCheck.org, a non-partisan project run under the Annenberg Public Policy Center of the University of Pennsylvania. "Any of these rumors are more rampant, and there's more stuff about them — blogs writing about conspiracy theories. People are exposed to it more."

Robertson says her organization has been asked hundreds of times about Obama's religion, even after FactCheck published an explanatory article in early 2008 called "Sliming Obama." It focused on the chain e-mail that many believe helped spread the lie.

Bull leaps into stands at bullring in Spain, injuring 40

By Ciaran Giles
Associated Press writer

MADRID (AP) — A bull leapt into the packed grandstands of a Spanish bullring and ran amok, charging and trampling spectators and leaving 40 people injured, regional officials said Thursday.

Video showed the bull jumping several meters (yards) high out of the ring, clearing two barriers before landing in the stands and raising a panic as he lurched through the screaming crowd, charging and tossing everything he could.

The 500-kilogram (1,100-pound) animal was brought under control by experienced bull handlers after several minutes and later killed.

The incident occurred Wednesday at the Tafalla arena in the northern region of Navarra during an event attended by about 3,500 spectators, in which mostly young people try to get a bull to charge at them so they can dodge it. Unlike standard bullfights, the bulls are not killed in these events.

The bull had already attempted to jump into the stands twice. After damaging a horn, he was about to be returned to the corral and replaced with another bull when he tried a third time and succeeded.

The regional government said in a statement Thursday that three people remained in hospitals in the regional capital of Pamplona, best known for its annual San Fermin running of the bulls festival.

The injured included a 10-year-old boy who was in intensive care after the bull reportedly fell on him. Another man was gored in the back and was said to be in stable condition.

In all, 40 people were treated, primarily for minor injuries.

"What could have been a tragedy ended up as a big fright," Tafalla mayor Cristina Sota was cited as saying in the main regional newspaper, Diario de Navarra.

Inaki Zunzarren, who was treated for bruises, told the paper: "The bull caught me and hurled me against the (concrete) seating. What an experience!"

Study: Moon may be shrinking, but very, very slowly

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The moon may be shrinking.

Not to worry though, lovers and crooners, it won't be disappearing any time soon.

New research indicates cracks in the moon's crust that have formed as the interior has cooled and shrunk over the last billion years or so. That means the surface has shrunk, too, though not so you'd notice just from gazing at it.

Scientists have identified 14 landforms called lobate scarps scattered over the surface of the moon, explained Thomas R. Watters of the Center for Earth and Planetary Studies at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum.

Watters and colleagues describe their find in Friday's edition of the Journal Science.

The scarps had previously been noted at the moon's equator, but this is the first evidence in other areas, indicating they result from a global process.

The study calls the scarps "evidence of recent thrust faulting on the moon." But this is planetary science, where "recent" can mean a billion years ago.

The scarps, or cliffs, extend across some small craters, and small craters tend to be obliterated over time, Watters explained in a telephone interview. In addition, there are no large craters imposed on top of the scarps, another indication they are relatively recent, in planetary terms, he said.

"One of the really cool parts of this ... the faults are so young-looking that you can't escape the possibility that this contraction occurred recently, and could indicate that the moon is still active," Watters said.

The size of the scarps indicates a shrinkage in the size of the moon of about 328 feet, which wouldn't be nearly enough to be noticed with the naked eye.

2010 JEEP GRAND CHEROKEE SRT8 QUICK & POWERFUL!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

Known worldwide for its capability, utility and distinctive style, the folks at Jeep have developed the quickest, most powerful Jeep ever, the Grand Cherokee SRT8. Combining its Jeep heritage with Street & Racing Technologies (SRT) balanced approach to performance, the Grand Cherokee SRT8 has easily become the ultimate performance sport-utility vehicle. As Chrysler's four-wheel drive SRT vehicle, the Grand Cherokee SRT8 provides astonishing on-road and all-weather ability and power. The Jeep SRT8 model boasts a zero-to-sixty time of less than five seconds!

SRT's credo demands functional exterior enhancements that contribute to performance and resonate with the brand character. The SRT8's lowered, aggressive stance shows its unmistakable Jeep identity endowed with SRT DNA. Its front fascia makes use of aero improvements to reduce lift and drag, while providing sufficient air flow to cool the engine. The front fascia also helps increase brake system cooling through integrated air ducts. In the rear, a unique fascia incorporates an aggressive center cutout to accommodate dual four-inch exhaust tips. Another functional enhancement is sill extensions, which help create downforce.

The Grand Cherokee SRT8 is powered by a 6.1L HEMI V8 prime mover joined to the SRT-upgraded A580 five-speed automatic transmission with adaptive electronic control and performance tuned AutoStick driver-interactive manual control. The single-speed MD146 SRT transfer case communicates torque through the uniquely robust SRT full-time four-wheel drive system.

SRT's influence on the Grand Cherokee SRT8 also extends to the SUV's ride and handling characteristics. The chassis setup is aimed at balanced performance with SRT-tuned dampers, unique sway bars and specially tailored spring rates and suspension bushings. Special front suspension knuckles feature a camber angle calibrated for optimum suspension performance. The ride height of the Grand Cherokee SRT8 is one inch lower than the standard Grand Cherokee, which in turn lowers aerodynamic drag as well as the center of gravity, and contributes to the vehicle's stability and aggressive stance.

Further contributing to its aggressive stance, the Grand Cherokee SRT8 is fitted with unique forged 20-inch five-spoke aluminum wheels shod with high-performance Goodyear W- rated four-season tires with run-flat capability.

Offered in Medium Slate, the cabin of the Jeep Grand Cherokee SRT8 is distinguished by power-adjustable, deeply sculptured performance front seats complete with uniquely patterned performance suede inserts to hold occupants during aggressive driving.

Last year, interior upgrades included a Performance Pages reconfigurable display; nine-inch DVD screen viewing area; leather interior upgrade - leather wrap added to upper front and rear door bolsters, armrest and leather-wrapped cluster brow on the instrument panel; and new shift knob cap with "Jeep" name.

Accents include a "carbon fiber" technical finish on the leather-wrapped steering wheel, instrument-panel brow and shift knob, complemented by a "refined aluminum" finishing on the center stack, shifter and door-switch bezels.

Full instrumentation includes a 180-mph speedometer, tachometer and temperature gauges, all trimmed with a unique blue accent and located within a carbon fiber-trimmed binnacle. Oil pressure and temperature may be monitored through a specially configured display unit centrally located in the instrument panel.

SUDOKU

By Dave Groen

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Thursday, August 19 was the 231st day of 2010.

Thursday's Highlight;

On Aug. 19, 1960, a tribunal in Moscow convicted American U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers of espionage, two days after his 31st birthday. (Although sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment, Powers was returned to the United States in 1962 as part of a prisoner exchange.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1812, the USS Constitution defeated the British frigate Guerriere off Nova Scotia during the War of 1812.

In 1909, the first automobile races were run at the just-opened Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

In 1918, "Yip! Yip! Yaphank," a musical revue by Irving Berlin featuring Army recruits from Camp Upton in Yaphank, N.Y., opened on Broadway.

In 1934, a plebiscite in Germany approved the vesting of sole executive power in Adolf Hitler.

In 1942, during World War II, about 6,000 Canadian and British soldiers launched a disastrous raid against the Germans at Dieppe, France, suffering more than 50-percent casualties.

In 1955, severe flooding in the northeastern U.S. claimed some 200 lives.

In 1976, President Gerald R. Ford won the Republican presidential nomination at the party's convention in Kansas City.

In 1980, 301 people aboard a Saudi Arabian L-1011 died as the jetliner made a fiery emergency return to the Riyadh airport.

In 1990, Leonard Bernstein conducted what turned out to be the last concert of his career at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. with the Boston Symphony Orchestra; the program ended with Beethoven's Symphony No. 7.

In 1991, Soviet hard-liners announced to a shocked world that President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had been removed from power. (The coup attempt collapsed two days later.)

Ten years ago: Norwegian divers with video equipment went down to the sunken Russian submarine Kursk in a final attempt to find survivors trapped for a week, even though Russian officials said all 118 seamen aboard were probably dead.

Five years ago: A Texas jury found pharmaceutical giant Merck and Co. liable for the death of a man who'd taken the once-popular painkiller Vioxx, awarding his widow $253.4 million in damages. (Texas caps on punitive damages reduced that figure to about $26 million; a Texas court overturned the verdict in May 2008.) Attackers firing Katyusha rockets narrowly missed a U.S. amphibious assault ship docked at the Red Sea resort of Aqaba, but killed a Jordanian soldier. Britain's former Northern Ireland chief, Mo Mowlam, died in Canterbury, England; she was 55.

One year ago: Suicide bombers struck Iraq's finance and foreign ministries, killing more than 100 people. Four members of an elite Army special operations unit were killed when their helicopter crashed on a Colorado mountain during a training mission. Don Hewitt, the TV news pioneer who created CBS' "60 Minutes," died at his Long Island, N.Y. home at age 86.

Today is Friday, Aug. 20, the 232nd day of 2010. There are 133 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights:

On Aug. 20, 1940, during World War II, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill paid tribute to the Royal Air Force before the House of Commons, saying, "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few." Exiled Communist revolutionary Leon Trotsky was assassinated in Coyoacan, Mexico by Ramon Mercader, a Spanish Communist agent working at the behest of Josef Stalin. (Trotsky died the next day.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1833, Benjamin Harrison, 23rd president of the United States, was born in North Bend, Ohio.

In 1866, President Andrew Johnson formally declared the Civil War over, months after fighting had stopped.

In 1910, a series of forest fires swept through parts of Idaho, Montana and Washington, killing at least 85 people and burning some 3 million acres in what became known as the "Big Blowup."

In 1914, German forces occupied Brussels, Belgium, during World War I.

In 1920, pioneering American radio station 8MK in Detroit (later WWJ) began daily broadcasting.

In 1955, hundreds of people were killed in anti-French rioting in Morocco and Algeria.

In 1960, the Mali Federation broke up with the withdrawal of Senegal, which declared autonomy.

In 1964, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the Economic Opportunity Act, a nearly $1 billion anti-poverty measure.

In 1968, the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact nations began invading Czechoslovakia to crush the "Prague Spring" liberalization drive.

In 1977, the U.S. launched Voyager 2, an unmanned spacecraft carrying a 12-inch copper phonograph record containing greetings in dozens of languages, samples of music and sounds of nature.

Ten years ago: Verizon Communications and unions representing 50,000 workers reached a tentative agreement on a new three-year-contract as a two-week strike neared an end. Tiger Woods won the PGA Championship in a playoff over Bob May, becoming the first player since Ben Hogan in 1953 to win three majors in one year.

Five years ago: Northwest Airlines mechanics went on strike rather than accept pay cuts and layoffs; Northwest hired replacement workers. San Francisco 49ers offensive lineman Thomas Herrion, 23, died of a heart attack shortly after a preseason game against the Denver Broncos. With a deafening boom, the ashes of gonzo journalist Hunter S. Thompson were blown into the sky above Woody Creek, Colo.

One year ago: The only man convicted of the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 returned home to Libya after his release from a Scottish prison. (Abdel Baset al-Megrahi, said to have only months to live because of prostate cancer, was freed on compassionate grounds.) Afghans voted for a president for the second time ever, but Taliban threats dampened turnout in the militant south. Reality TV ex-contestant Ryan Jenkins was charged with murdering former wife Jasmine Fiore in California (Jenkins was later found dead, an apparent suicide). One-time Super Bowl star Plaxico Burress accepted a plea bargain with a two-year prison sentence for accidentally shooting himself in the thigh at a Manhattan nightclub.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I'm tired of Love; I'm still more tired of Rhyme.
But Money gives me pleasure all the time."

— Hilaire Belloc

The first BOLS brilliancy prize went to Ron Klinger, who seized his opportunity at the 1976 World Team Olympiad in Monte Carlo. Against four hearts Klinger as West led a spade, and hoping to cut down declarer's ruffs, East switched to a trump. Declarer played the queen because he wanted to be in his hand if West ducked. Klinger made the first essential play for the defense when he played low. Had he won the heart king, declarer would have made his contract with no problems because he could simply have drawn trumps and taken the diamond finesse.

At trick three, declarer ruffed a spade, removing West's last card in the suit, and guessed to play a club to his queen rather than to the 10. West won the ace and returned a club to dummy's king. Declarer now ruffed a club and played the heart ace and jack. At this point, Klinger found the only play to defeat the contract: he switched to the diamond king! This severed declarer's communications. He could win in dummy and come to hand with the diamond jack to draw West's last trump, but then he would have to lose a spade at the end. If, as happened in practice, declarer played three rounds of diamonds to discard his spade loser, West would make his heart eight.

On any other return, declarer would have been able to win in hand, draw the last trump, and run diamonds to discard his spade loser.

ANSWER: Ask yourself, is this a hand with which you wish to invite game, facing a balanced 12-14? I'd say no; you could persuade me to the contrary with a couple of working intermediates. However, this hand is so bare that the absence of a fit would persuade me to go low with a call of one no-trump rather than an invitational two no-trump.

Breaking news when it happens
magicvalley.com

DEAR ABBY: My father is having an affair — another one. It is not the first time I have found evidence of it. I was using his computer to work on my grandmother's memorial and an IM popped up from a woman telling him to meet her at a family event my mother was not supposed to attend. Her message to Dad was extremely sexual and very upsetting. The "other woman" is an old high school friend of my parents' and a friend of the family. I have confronted my father in the past, even threatened to end my relationship with him if it didn't stop. My heart breaks for Mama, but she loves Dad so much she will stand by him through anything. Somehow, I always manage to get stuck in the middle of their marital problems, and I was even blamed for their separation five years ago. This has affected my relationship with my boyfriend because I have extreme trust issues. I find myself hating my father more and more each day. Please help me before I lose my sanity.

— DAUGHTER OF A CHEATER

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR DAUGHTER: For your own emotional well-being you must remove yourself from the drama and dysfunction in your parents' marriage. You cannot fix what's wrong with it; your father doesn't want to and your mother appears to have made peace — if you can call it that — with his infidelities.

Not all men are like your father. Many men respect women and are capable of having loving, monogamous marriages. You need professional help, and with good reason, and I urge you to get it. If you don't, your hatred of your father may color the way you regard all men, and it will always be a problem.

DEAR ABBY: We have some longtime friends, the "Gotrocks," who frequently come over for dinner. When they do, they bring "house gifts" — commercially made cakes, Danish, etc. that are well past their expiration dates — then brag about how much they saved on the food.

My wife and I limit our intake of sugar, high-fat and processed foods, and the Gotrocks are aware of it because we have told them, but they persist. I am offended that they would offer low-quality food that I wouldn't serve an animal. What should I do? Accept the garbage gracefully, not serve it and deep-six it after they leave, or tell them to stop bringing it?

Incidentally, money isn't an issue here; they proudly admit they are cheap.

— OFFENDED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR OFFENDED: Having been put on notice that you and your wife do not consume sugary, high-fat and processed foods, the Gotrocks already know they are bringing an inappropriate house gift. Here's how I'd handle it: The next time they come, make a point of serving their gift to THEM for dessert — while you and your wife enjoy a healthy portion of fresh fruit. If they enjoy it — fine. If they look askance, you will have made your point. Waste not, want not.

DEAR ABBY: How do you respond to an overweight person who says she's fat? Or a short person who says she's short? Or to anyone else who points out a true physical flaw that goes against today's ridiculous standard of beauty? I am in a sorority and this happens all the time. Please don't tell me to say that their personalities are beautiful, even if it's true, because what these girls want to hear is that they are physically beautiful.

— THE UGLY TRUTH FAIRY

DEAR UGLY TRUTH FAIRY: Don't lie. But if you're socially adept, you'll find something nice to say — unless you want to be as welcome as a skunk at a picnic. The girl with the weight problem may have beautiful skin or a fabulous head of hair. And the short girl may have such beautiful posture that people regard her as graceful. Get it?

IF AUGUST 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The path of true love is never smooth, but it might be more erratic than usual for the next few weeks. Try not to break off a relationship, but if you feel it is truly unsustainable then wait until the second half of September when your judgment is better. Your shrewd business outlook will provide you with the best kind of guidance if you experience disruptions in your career or love life. There is a tendency for you to be ultrasensitive to your surroundings through the end of January, so steer clear of depressing people and unpleasant circumstances whenever possible. May is the very best month to launch your most important plans. It's also the month when the people you meet can help you take a definite turn for the better.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take a rain check. This is not a good time to begin a major project, to make a long-term commitment or to sign a contract. Going out on the town could complicate your life, so be wise and stay home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can't move forward while the brakes are on. Put crucial agreements and partnership matters on the back burner for a few days. The harder you push, the more likely someone will oppose your desires.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Cuddle up in a cocoon with a special someone. Frustrating situations might try your patience, but you can relax within the warmth of a solid relationship tonight. Hold off on important initiatives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You might only know you are on thin ice when you hear it cracking. Don't take undue chances with key relationships. What seems solid underfoot might hold some surprises if tested too strenuously.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Mixing business with pleasure at this point could cause a serious mix-up. People and situations may be somewhat unpredictable, so don't risk your heart or your wallet on anything that pops up out of the blue.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can only love what you understand. If conflict or misunderstandings occur, it might be your task to step aside until you have a more complete picture. Don't start new businesses or crucial projects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Abracadabra. Now you see it, now you don't. Affection sometimes flickers like fireflies in the night. Just because things seem temporarily tense does not mean there is not a great deal of fondness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Nerves of steel could be rusty. New business affairs or contracts might cause disruption if initiated today. This isn't a good time to take major risks when dealing with finances or key resources.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The sign reads, "Frankenstein's monster slept here." Horror movies can teach you a thing or two about the dangers of impulsive decisions. It pays to be more discriminating about whom you confide in.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Overlook an obsession. This isn't an opportune time to buck the system or wrestle over key principles with the boss. Whatever you initiate now could cause you or others stress and hassle.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Loyalty is put to the test. Consider whether you and another person are linked by destiny or by necessity. It might be smart to withstand any impulsive urge to make a sudden change in a relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pay homage to rational thinking. When everyone around you is acting out in emotional ways and doubting each other's trustworthiness, you can find the truth like wise men following the star.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

TS No. 10-0083922 Title Order No. NWT006299 Parcel No. RPO88110030050A The following described property will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, payable in lawful money of the United States, in the lobby of Land Title & Escrow, 1411 Fillmore Street, Suite 600 Twin Falls, ID 83301, on 12/07/2010 at 11:00 am, (recognized local time) for the purpose of foreclosing that certain Deed of Trust recorded 07/09/2007 as Instrument Number 2007-016771, and executed by SHERYL ESSIG, A MARRIED WOMAN, AS HER SOLE AND SEPARATE PROPERTY, as Grantor(s), in favor of MORTGAGE ELECTRONIC REGISTRATION SYSTEMS, INC., as Beneficiary, to RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A., the Current Trustee of record, covering the following real property located in Twin Falls County, state of Idaho: LOT 5 IN BLOCK 3 OF VILLA DEL RIO ESTATES, TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO ACCORDING TO THE PLAT THEREOF, RECORDED IN BOOK 12 OF PLATS, PAGE 30, RECORD OF SAID COUNTY. The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purpose of compliance with Idaho Code, Section 60-113, the Trustee has been informed that the street address of, 1730 MANZANITA ST, TWIN FALLS, ID 83301 is sometimes associated with said real property. Bidders must be prepared to tender the trustee the full amount of the bid at the sale in the form of cash, or a cashier's check drawn on a state or federally insured savings institution. Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in that certain Deed of Trust. The default for which this sale is to be made is: Failure to pay the monthly payment due 03/01/2010 of principal, interest and impounds and subsequent installments due thereafter; plus late charges, with interest currently accruing at 7.000% per annum; together with all subsequent sums advanced by beneficiary pursuant to the terms and conditions of said Deed of Trust, and any supplemental modifications thereto.
