The remnants of the 215,000-acre Long Butte Fire burn in a fence post along 400 East Road southeast of Hagerman on Sunday night. Firefighting crews battled the blaze through Saturday and Sunday, and are expected to hand control of suppression efforts to a Bureau of Land Management Type 2 incidence management team at 6 a.m. today.

Otter signs children's books in Sun Valley

Harper Crabtree, left, and Fern P. Brooks of Stanley help Idaho first lady Lori Otter find a bluebird that illustrator Chris Latter hid on each page of Otter's children's book, 'Little Clyde: Horsing Around in Sun Valley' on Saturday in Sun Valley.

SUN VALLEY — Idaho first lady Lori Otter may run among the state's power players in Boise now, but she hasn't forgotten the role Sun Valley played in her early life.

Otter spent Saturday afternoon at Carol's Dollar Mountain Lodge, signing copies of her new book, "Little Clyde: Horsing Around in Sun Valley."

The whimsically illustrated children's book follows a Clydesdale colt who finds a tourist's suitcase filled with clothes and gear, which he uses during a series of Wood River Valley adventures.

Otter and co-writer Karen Day, a photographer and Stanley hotel owner, conceived the book idea while walking past Clydesdales in a pasture along Sun Valley Road. They tied the rhymes of the book to their own experiences recreating in Sun Valley.

"If you've golfed up here — and I've had this happen to me — there's a fox that waits for you to putt and he'll take your sandwich or hamburger," Otter said. "We incorporated that into the book."

Illustrator Chris Latter said she also hid a bluebird afternoon and raged through Sunday.

Monument Superintendent Wendy Janssen said no formal survey of the massive fire's damage to the fossil beds had been conducted as of Sunday afternoon. Later Sunday at a meeting of crews responding to the fire, officials said three-quarters of the monument had burned.

The monument stretches from just south of the Lower Salmon Falls Dam, south to the Oregon Trail. Janssen added that the area around the Oregon Trail overlook has burned, but was unsure if the Snake River overlook burned as well.

Visitors center employees said the monument was closed, but the center remained open for regular business.

Though parts of western Twin Falls County lost power Sunday, some Hagerman residents reported that they never lost power or phone service. The smoke and haze still wasn't ideal for a lazy Sunday afternoon, however.

Beverly Wickham, who owns the Hagerman RV Village with her husband, Edward, said the smoke was troubling as she breathes with the help of an oxygen mask.

Closer to the Snake River, the Crist family, who collectively own approximately 30 acres of land along the east bank of the Snake River at 2700 South Road, watched a line of fire burn the fossil beds at around 3:30 p.m. and encroach upon the river from the Bell Rapids area.

"It's the worst I've seen in 35 years," said Kenny Crist as he sat atop a four-wheeler on a dirt trail near the home of his daughter-in-law, Carey Crist.

At around 6 p.m., Carey Crist said she was told that the fire had jumped the river near the Bell Rapids boat dock — one mile south of her river-front home — but authorities did not ask her family or neighbors to evacuate.

Glenns Ferry.

By the end of the day Sunday, winds had fanned it until it had engulfed more than 215,000 acres, jumped the Snake River and crawled to within 2 miles of Hagerman.

From Bell Rapids Road, the fire charred everything as far as the eye could see, starting at the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument, three-fourths of which was burned.

Southwest of Hagerman, the fire snapped power poles and visibly charred land up to the base of wind turbines that remained standing in the distance. Elsewhere, the flames devoured two small outbuildings, sent ranchers scrambling to protect their cattle and spewed clouds of smoke and ash across the Magic Valley.

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality warned Sunday afternoon that air quality in the Twin Falls area was "unhealthy" for all residents. The agency also instituted a mandatory burn ban for south-central Idaho.

Firefighting response included multiple air and ground resources belonging to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, with help from the U.S. Forest Service and numerous rural fire departments.

Leadership of the response efforts has been transferred to a national Type 2 incident management team, who Twin Falls District BLM fire management officer Chris Simonson warned at a Sunday evening briefing that much work remains to be done.

"We've still got a lot of fire," Simonson said. "You're not coming out to a big, dead black spot as you do sometimes."

What began as two comparatively small fires Saturday night used a steady wind to greatly expand across four counties. At one point, it roared across the landscape at 30 mph, said Jeff Bedke, BLM type 3 incident commander.

SCHOOL'S OUT

The Castleford School District has canceled school today due to power outages in the area due to the fire.

The fires had seemed to be coming under control at about 2 a.m. Sunday and Bedke told those at the briefing he let some firefighters go to bed. By about 4 a.m., he was waking them up again. Much of Sunday was spent protecting homes and structures, he said.

Around mid-afternoon, three men from the Shoshone Rural Fire District stood off from Bell Rapids Road and watched the fire consume dried grass. The flames spouted smoke that crossed the spectrum of its possible colors: a wall of black gave way to twirls of light gray and hazy browns, while a dust devil kicked up a gray twirl across the flames and char on the other side of the fire line.

Mark Kime, one of the firefighters, chewed a cigarillo as he monitored the fire to make sure it didn't burn a power line down. He shrugged at the blaze — it was burning into itself and black marked the other side of the road. Aside from the power line, he said, it didn't pose much of a threat, and thus there was no reason to do more than make sure it burned itself out.

One park sign, its brown-painted metal directing traffic to the rest area the Shoshone firefighters manned, stood out against the flames. Hours later, it lay smoldering, its paint boiled off.

About a mile down the road, at East 5400 North and 300 East, a row of power lines had burned down. The power to them had already been turned off, however — a voluntary move by Idaho Power Co. to try to protect its system.

The electric utility received help from Raft River Electric and fire crews as it sought to preserve its network of lines, poles and substations. But despite such effort, as of 8 p.m., customers scattered across Buhl, Castleford, Bliss, Rogerson, Twin Falls, Hagerman, Jackpot and areas served by Raft River Electric had lost power and weren't about to get it back soon. Callers to Idaho Power's outage information line were advised that final repairs to the company's infrastructure — damaged severely enough to require new parts to be shipped from Boise — will take several days. Some power lines may be energized again as early as this morning, but dairy, business and residential customers requiring power on an emergency basis are advised to look for alternate sources of energy.

Besides power lines and gas pipes, BLM Jarbidge Field Manager Rick Vander Voet said an area designated for a herd of wild horses had also been engulfed in flames. Also affected or threatened were the habitats of several endangered species, and if the fire moves south, he said, it will hurt the greater sage grouse — a candidate for endangered-species protection.

The blaze made its presence known across the region. BLM spokeswoman Barbara Bassler said callers from Burley to Bellevue rang her all day, worried that the flames from the Long Butte Fire, another 1,000-acre fire north of Stanley and others in the region were closer to their ranches and homes. She said a public meeting about the fires is in the works.

Vander Voet told teams at Sunday's meeting to expect some hard feelings from area ranchers and residents, in response to the numerous burns that have plagued the area over the past couple of years. He told the team to be prepared to encounter unknown backburns set by ranchers.

"They're here to help you," Vander Voet told responders of area ranchers, "if you can turn some of that anger around."

Other fires burning Sunday included the 2,000-acre Big Draw 2 Fire, 2 miles south of the Saylor Creek bombing range, according to the BLM. The Mule Creek Fire burning northeast of Jackpot, Nev., was contained Saturday evening at 13,964 acres, according to BLM, and was expected to be controlled Sunday night.

Grizzlies

Scientists report that a favorite food of many bears, nuts from whitebark pine cones, is scarce. So as grizzlies look to put on some major pounds in preparation for the long winter ahead, scientists say, they will be looking for another source of protein — meat — and running into trouble along the way.

Wildlife managers already report bears coming down off the mountains and into areas frequented by hunters, berry pickers and hikers.

“Pack your bear spray: there’s going to be run-ins,” said grizzly researcher Chuck Schwartz with the U.S. Geological Survey.

Two people have been fatally mauled by grizzlies so far this year in Wyoming and Montana. Experts said that’s the most in one year in at least a century for the Yellowstone region, which also includes parts of Idaho.

The bears in both instances were later killed.

Full-grown Yellowstone bears can stand 6 feet tall and top 600 pounds. They have been known to peel off a man’s face with a single swipe of their massive, clawed paws.

In the latest attack, a Michigan man was killed and two others injured when an undernourished bear and her three cubs marauded through a crowded campground near Cooke City, Mont. on July 28. A month earlier, a botanist from Cody, Wyo. was killed by a bear shortly after the animal woke up from being tranquilized by researchers.

And it’s not just humans at risk.

Yellowstone’s grizzlies were recently ordered back onto the threatened species list by a federal judge who cited in part a decline in whitebark pine.

Beetles, apparently surviving winters in larger numbers due to less frequently freezing temperatures, have decimated vast stands of the high-altitude trees. In some areas studied by researchers, more than 70 percent of trees have been killed.

While bears aren’t starving, the loss of whitebark is driving increasing numbers of conflicts with humans.

“Every year is now a bad year for whitebark pine,” said Louisa Wilcox with the Natural Resources Defense Council. “We can expect more conflicts and we are getting it”

Government scientists said the two fatal mauplings came too early in the year for whitebark pine to have played a role. Bears typically don’t start gorging themselves on the troves of pine nuts that are stashed by squirrels until mid-August.

But the attacks highlighted the hazards of a region that is home to an estimated 580 grizzlies and visited by more than 3 million people a year. And officials said the mauplings should serve as a warning as bears begin to push to lower elevations. Adult males will need to gain on average 50 pounds in the next few months to last through the winter.

“Right now every god-dang dead cow down in this country’s got grizzlies on them,” said Mark Bruscino, a bear specialist with the Wyoming Game and Fish Department in Cody. “We’ve already had a couple of reports of bears on the gut piles of hunter-killed elk. Road-killed deer have bears on them.”

Hazardous encounters with humans are considered most likely outside Yellowstone National Park, in occupied areas along the fringes of the bears’ 14,000-square-mile wilderness habitat.

Hunters — their high-powered rifles notwithstanding — are particularly exposed because they do exactly what the experts say not to: They sneak around in the underbrush at dawn and dusk, often alone and making elk calls to lure in big game — and the occasional hungry bear.

At Stillwater Outfitters near Cooke City, a mile up the road from the campground mauplings, owner Mary Robison said her clients were “definitely a lot more sketchy now” about running into bears.

Robison, a backcountry runner and hiker, said she had a too-casual attitude about grizzlies in the past.

“Now when I’m running, every two minutes I’m yelling something or I’m singing” to warn bears of her approach, she said.

While fatal encounters remain rare for humans, it is not so uncommon for bears to die after they run into people.

Twenty-two grizzlies are known to have died or been removed this year in and around Yellowstone National Park. Most were killed or relocated by wildlife officials because they had attacked people, acted aggressively or destroyed livestock or property.

Otter said she worked her way through college at the Sun Valley Resort cafeteria and by working on various events in the area.

“I always give (former resort general manager) Wally Huffman a big hug and tell him, ‘Thanks for putting me through college,’” said Otter, who stayed in the employee dorms while working there.

Part of the proceeds from “Little Clyde” will go to Otter’s Education Series Endowment, which published her previous children’s book “Ida Tours the Capitol.” The book is given to Idaho fourth-graders who visit the Capitol in Boise as part of fourth-grade history classes.

The Endowment Series also published Otter’s “Ida Tours the 44,” which describes Idaho’s 44 counties for schoolchildren.

“Little Clyde” is currently the best-selling book at Sun Valley Resort, averaging about 65 books a day, said retailer Kelly Mitchell.

The project taught Day that it isn’t easy to write a children’s book.

“Now I appreciate why it took Dr. Seuss two years to write ‘Green Eggs and Ham,’” she said. “I would go to sleep at night thinking, ‘What rhymes with horse?’”

Still, Day and Otter plan to collaborate on another “Little Clyde” book.

“The next one will be ‘Little Clyde: It Happened in Sun Valley,’” Otter said, putting a new spin on the song from the movie “Sun Valley Serenade.”

Twin Falls City Council holds budget hearing

Times-News

The Twin Falls City Council will accept public comment on the city's preliminary budget for fiscal year 2011 at 4 p.m. today.

The special meeting, held at Council Chambers, 305 Third Ave. E., will be used to review the city's preliminary budget and an alternative $47.6 million budget adopted by the council that would increase property taxes to help fund a backlog of unfunded street infrastructure projects.

The $45.1 million budget represents "status quo" spending to maintain existing city services and facilities.

The alternate, $47.6 million budget would incorporate an additional $539,875 in foregone property tax and $460,913 from the 3 percent yearly property-tax increase allowed by statute, for another approximately $1 million in revenues. Under that budget option, expenses for the fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, would equal revenues. Additional costs to property owners would be about $75 per $100,000 of assessed property value.

The city's adopted budget must be submitted to the county by Sept. 9.

The hearing will be followed by the regular 5:30 p.m. council meeting.

Agenda items include:

- Consideration of an appeal of the city Planning and Zoning Commission's denial of a request by David Hall of Nampa for a special-use permit to operate an automobile dealership along Kimberly Road.

- A request to rename LaHabra Drive to Robbi Way.
- A request to approve the third-annual Cove Camp Out, which would include live music from 6 to 10 a.m. Sept. 11 at The Cove on Addison Avenue West.
- A request to close Anny Drive from 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 12 for a block party.

Rallies over mosque near ground zero get heated

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The proposed mosque near ground zero drew hundreds of fever-pitch demonstrators Sunday, with opponents carrying signs associating Islam with blood, supporters shouting, "Say no to racist fear!" and American flags waving on both sides.

The two leaders of the construction project, meanwhile, defended their plans, though one suggested that organizers might eventually be willing to discuss an alternative site. The other, Imam Feisal Abdul Rauf, said during a Middle East trip that the attention generated by the project is actually positive and that he hopes it will bring greater understanding.

People participate in a rally against a proposed mosque and Islamic community center near ground zero in New York on Sunday.

one of two mock missiles that were part of an anti-mosque installation. One missile was inscribed with the words: "Again? Freedom Targeted by Religion"; the other with "Obama: With a middle name Hussein. We understand. Bloomberg: What is your excuse?"

New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg has fiercely defended plans for the proposed mosque, saying that the right "to practice your religion was one of the real reasons America was founded."

The mosque project is being led by Rauf and his wife, Daisy Khan, who insist the center will promote moderate Islam. The dispute has sparked a national debate on religious freedom and American values and is becoming an issue on the campaign trail ahead of the midterm elections. Republicans have been critical of President Barack Obama's stance: He has said the Muslims have the right to build the center at the site but has not commented on whether he thinks they should.

Rauf is in the middle of a Mideast trip funded by the U.S. State Department that is intended to promote religious tolerance. He told a gathering Sunday at the U.S. ambassador's residence in the Persian Gulf state of Bahrain that he took heart from the dispute over the mosque, saying "the fact we are getting this kind of attention is a sign of success."

"It is my hope that people will understand more," Rauf said without elaborating.

Democratic New York Gov. David Paterson has suggested that state land farther from ground zero be used for the center. Khan, executive director of the American Society for Muslim Advancement, expressed some openness to that idea on ABC's "This Week with Christiane Amanpour," but said she would have to meet with the center's other "stakeholders" first.

"We want to build bridges," Khan said. "We don't want to create conflict, this is not where we were coming from. So, this is an opportunity for us to really turn this around and make this into something very, very positive. So we will meet, and we will do what is right for everyone."

But Khan also said the angry reaction to the project "is like a metastasized anti-Semitism."

"It's not even Islamophobia. It's beyond Islamophobia," she said. "It's hate of Muslims."

At the pro-mosque rally, staged a block away from opponents' demonstration, several hundred people chanted, "Muslims are welcome here! We say no to racist fear!"

Dr. Ali Akram, a 39-year-old Brooklyn physician, came with his three sons and an 11-year-old nephew waving an American flag. He noted that scores of Muslims were among those who died in the towers, and he called those who oppose the mosque "un-American."

"They teach their children about the freedom of religion in America — but they don't practice what they preach," Akram said.

John Green, who lost a friend in the attacks, said that although organizers have the right to build the project, "I think if they moved it, they would get the respect of more Americans than if they play hardball." He was demonstrating in the group of mosque opponents.

Gila Barzvi, whose son, Guy, was killed in the towers, stood with mosque opponents, clutching a large photo of her son with both hands.

"This is sacred ground and it's where my son was buried," the native Israeli from Queens said. She said the mosque would be "like a knife in our hearts."

She was joined by a close friend, Kobi Mor, who flew from San Francisco to participate in the rally.

If the mosque gets built, "we will bombard it," Mor said. He would not elaborate but added that he believes the project "will never happen."

Rauf, in an interview with Bahrain's Al Wasat newspaper, said America's sweeping constitutional rights are more in line with Islamic principles than the limits imposed by some Muslim nations.

"American Muslims have the right to practice their religion in accordance with the Constitution of the United States," Rauf said. "I see the article of independence as more compliant with the principles of Islam than what is available in many of the current Muslim countries."

BUHL — Instead of "Fore!" people visiting Clear Lake Country Club on Saturday afternoon heard music instead.

It isn't every day that a live band and vendor booths dot the driving range, but that was the scene during the Buhl course's inaugural August Fest.

"Nationwide, golf course revenue is down about 16 percent and the same is happening here," said club member Clay Bingham, who helped organize the event with his wife, Jerri Bingham. "We're exploring ways to help bring revenue up while letting the community know that we aren't a private club and just for members."

In fact, the course depends on non-member golfers, who typically account for 40 percent of its annual revenue, said Dave Erickson, who sits on the course's board of directors.

August Fest is one of several events the club has held over the past few months. As happy as club officials were with the turnout, which continued to grow as the evening temperature dropped, participating vendors were grateful for the opportunity the event provided to them.

Organizers charged attendees $10 each but didn't charge the dozen or so vendors to set up shop.

"We wanted to give vendors that extra incentive — that everything they make is theirs to keep," said Jerri Bingham.

With the loss of Buhl's annual Sagebrush Days sidewalk sales and the Buhl Chamber of Commerce declining not host its Trout Festival in September — instead holding a Mexican-inspired dinner, rodeo and fiesta — vendors said Saturday's event helped recoup some of the lost sales potential.

"I think this does help," said Mimi Ford, owner of Mimi's Saddlehorn Events Center in Buhl. "I think this festival has great potential. The location is fabulous and I think it will only grow."

Ford used August Fest to educate attendees about her recent partnership with Vicki Patterson, Hagerman chef and owner of the River Boat Restaurant.

Patterson recently wrapped up a two-year national tour touting her cookbook and looks forward to the partnership with Ford.

"We're basically feeling the waters right now. Mimi is so artistic and everything she does is so beautifully done," Patterson said. "This event helps us spread the word."

Renee Wilkins of Buhl attended with two co-workers. They said attendance would probably be better if there weren't as many events going head-to-head with Joe Mama's Car Show in Jerome.

"Buhl definitely needs an event like this," Wilkins said.

However, her friend and co-worker Linda Stowe said she wouldn't stay long because she planned to attend a fundraising dinner at the West End Senior Citizen's Center later Saturday night.

"Bad timing," Stowe said. "Other than that, I think this is great."

‘Ghost Cedars’ stand vigil in northern Idaho

By David Cole
The Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Haunting remnants of the 1910 fires stand along the narrow and dusty Moon Pass Road, which winds between tiny Avery and Wallace.

A traveler can witness for themselves the force with which those catastrophic wildfires raged.

Numerous large dead cedar snags — known locally as the Ghost Cedars — stand in a wetlands area along the North Fork of the St. Joe River.

It's a graveyard for the cedar trees, which were 300 to 500 years old when they burned in August 1910.

Those fires affected many in north Idaho, eastern Washington and western Montana.

At least 85 people died in the fires that swept through the mountains of those states. Most of the dead were U.S. Forest Service

Carl Ritchie, retired U.S. Forest Service archaeologist, stands in front of the famous Pulaski Tunnel near Wallace on July 26. Ritchie explored the area of the west fork of Placer Creek to find the mining tunnel, named for the Forest Service ranger who saved his men during the great fire of 1910.

firefighters. The final toll could have been as high as 130 dead.

Woodlawn Cemetery in St. Maries is the final resting place of nearly 60 firefighters, and many of them died Aug. 20 at Big Creek and Setser Creek.

Several communities and miles of railroad infrastructure were destroyed. Most of the destruction occurred in a firestorm on Aug. 20 and 21, often referred to as the “Big Blowup,” which burned nearly 3 million acres of forest. Nationally, an estimated 5 million acres of national forest burned during the 1910 fire season. State, private, reservation, and other lands also burned.

A third of the booming city of Wallace was burned, and the towns of Mullan and Avery were barely spared. Avery had 250 people living there in 1910.

Today, the Ghost Cedars are grayish, some 6 to 7 feet in diameter at the base. Some rise, branchless, from massive bases to long fine spikes at the peak. Those broken near the base are blackened inside where the heart rot of the trees were scorched.

The river rushes and gurgles through the bottom wetlands where the cedars stand. Dense sedges and shrubs grow in muck near the stream. Moose bed down where they can find dry patches of ground.

There are several hundred of the Ghost Cedars stretching for about a mile along the river.

They aren't the only cedar snags still standing as remnants from those fires, but “this is the area where they're most visible and easy to find,” said Jason Kirchner, a spokesman for the Idaho Panhandle National Forests.

If they weren't cedar they likely wouldn't be standing today.

Still, despite the strength of the wood, “There are less and less (standing) every year,” he said.

It took thousands of years to grow the cedar forest, he said. A raised water table, gophers that like to eat young trees, and frost keep cedars from repopulating the valley bottom. The U.S. Forest Service tried to plant cedars, but they didn't survive, Kirchner said.

About eight species of trees grow on the hillsides above the valley bottom. The hillsides look much the same as they did in 1910, he said.

“That valley was a hub of activity, between logging, railroads, and mining,” said Kirchner. “There were a lot more people in the woods back then, compared with today.”

The Forest Service says that historically, in an average summer, the river bottom wetlands are too moist to carry a forest fire — even if the surrounding hillsides are dry enough to burn.

But in 1910, the old cedars in this bottom did burn. The severity of the drought and the heat conditions that year made it possible.

A fire of the magnitude of the Big Blowup burns everything in its path with great intensity, the Forest Service says. There was nothing fire-resistant that summer.

Living cedar stands might one day take root again in this valley bottom, Kirchner said.

“But not in our lifetime,” he said.

Hall outlasts McKean for Super Stocks win

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

It took all the focus he could muster, but James Hall proved he had what it took to win the Budweiser Super Stocks main event race Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway.

Hall began the race in the front row lined up along side Steve Edens but had to deal with points leader Kris McKean beginning at lap six of the 35-lap race.

As the race progressed, the rest of the field sorted out their positions while Hall and McKean became the clear contenders for the win.

With five laps remaining in the race, McKean tired to make his final move on Hall, trying to get around him in the outside groove. Hall knew what he was up against and felt the weight of McKean behind him all the way to the finish line.

"It was intense," Hall said. "I knew that if I made the slightest mistake he was going to get around me on the outside. So I actually changed the way I was driving a little bit and drove it in a little bit slower in the corner. When Kris drove it in too deep in the turn and he pushed up, I saw that I was able to use four lanes again on the final lap. Thank goodness for four lane racing. It was so awesome."

McKean also knew exactly what went wrong in his bid for the win.

"I stuck right with him there and I was trying to get him on the last lap," McKean said. "Then I overdrove turn one and it gave him just enough room to take the lane back. I was just trying to get more than I should and Jimmy took advantage of it."

It was Hall's first win of the season in the division. McKean would finish second followed by Daniel Shirley, Ernie Hall and Willie Dalton.

NEWELL WINS STRONG IN NAPA STREET STOCKS

Chase Carraway took the lead in the 30-lap main event race but his time there was brief once John Newell motored around him at lap seven.

As Newell pulled away from the rest of the field, Carraway was left to contend with Casey Pehrson and James Hall for second.

Carraway lost his spot when Pehrson and Hall past him while the trio fought for position. Pehrson finished second while Hall finished third.

AUDET TAKES OVER POINTS LEAD WITH BRENNAN'S CARPETS WIN

Todd Audet started the main event race mid-pack from a field of six, but quickly worked his way up to the lead at lap three.

A smoking Ray Homolka, who was the points leader, tried desperately to reel in Audet as the laps wound down, but spun into the infield. Dan Pulver would pass him for second.

Lane Buddenhagen lost his left rear tire in the final lap and the race ended under caution at lap 20 with Audet the winner and new points leader in the division.

Welcome Back Farve; 49ers beat Vikings

AP photo

Minnesota Vikings quarterback Brett Favre (4) reacts after being sacked by San Francisco 49ers linebacker Patrick Willis (52) in the first quarter of an NFL preseason football game in San Francisco, Sunday.

By Janie McCauley
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Brett Favre completed one pass and also got clobbered on a sack that lost Minnesota 10 yards.

Favre's highly anticipated first game back with the Vikings lasted all of four unspectacular plays and one series in a 15-10 loss to the 49ers in a nationally televised preseason game Sunday at Candlestick Park, the only NFL show of the night.

Favre completed a 13-yard pass to Adrian Peterson on his first play from scrimmage but was sacked by Pro Bowl linebacker Patrick Willis two plays later and the Vikings wound up punting. The 40-year-old quarterback took the field just four days after his first training camp practice of the year. He decided to return for a 20th season and make yet another run at a Super Bowl title.

It's hard to make much of the small sampling. Not that Favre's numbers mattered to the Vikings, just thrilled to have him back.

Alex Smith, Favre's 49ers counterpart, went 9 of 13 for 88 yards in a solid first half. Willis had four tackles playing only nine snaps.

After that single series, Favre headed to the bench and gave way to backup Tarvaris Jackson — who had been in line to be the starter before Jared Allen, Ryan Longwell and Steve Hutchinson flew to Mississippi early last week to recruit Favre back to the Twin Cities. Favre, sporting a 5-o'clock shadow peppered with gray, could be seen laughing on the sideline in the second half.

Smith bounced back a week after stumbling through a subpar outing in which he completed 3 of 9 passes for 37 yards and only two first downs in a win at Indianapolis. David Carr and Nate Davis rallied the Niners to 34 straight points in the 37-17 victory.

He made do for a 49ers offense missing three of its biggest stars: receiver Michael Crabtree, tight end Vernon Davis and running back Frank Gore.

"We just came out against the No. 1 rush defense in the NFL and marched it down the field," Smith said. "We were moving the chains and getting a bunch of third-down conversions and just took it down the field methodically."

Smith completed his first four passes for 48 yards and 5 of his first six on the Niners' opening drive, including a 24-yard strike to backup tight end Delanie Walker that set up a 4-yard scoring run by rookie Anthony Dixon.

After all the drama that surrounds Favre each offseason — will he or won't he really retire? — he's back in his No. 4 jersey and told his teammates he's as committed to this as ever.

And why not keep going?

Favre is coming off a year in which he threw for 4,202 yards and 33 touchdowns and established career highs for completion rate (68.4), quarterback rating (107.2) and fewest interceptions (seven).

He was booed by the crowd Sunday when running onto the field for the first time mid-way through the first quarter.

Favre has been the Niners' nemesis for years.

In late September last year, Favre hit Greg Lewis on a 32-yard touchdown with 2 seconds left as the Vikings stunned San Francisco 27-24 in Minneapolis. That was the first of six straight road losses — five in a row by a combined 19 points — for the 49ers that helped cost them a playoff trip and a winning season.

Davis, San Francisco's No. 3 QB and fifth-round pick last year, completed a pretty 60-yard pass to Ted Ginn Jr. in the third quarter with his foot planted at the goal line when he released the ball. The pass set up Joe Nedney's 28-yard field goal. Davis later had an 18-yard completion to Nate Byham.

Longwell kicked a 40-yard field goal early in the second quarter for the Vikings' first points. Minnesota rookie quarterback Joe Webb broke loose up the middle for a 48-yard TD run with 1:54 to play, then Webb was sacked by Derek Walker in the end zone for a safety on the final play of the game.

Durant leads U.S. to 86-85 Victory

By Paul Logothetis
Associated Press

MADRID — Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim called for a switch to his trademark "Orange" 2-3 zone with the United States clinging to a one-point lead.

Kevin Durant did the rest, blocking shots by Ricky Rubio and Rudy Fernandez in the final seconds in the Americans' 86-85 victory over Spain on Sunday in a warmup game for the world championships.

"Jim Boeheim said, 'Let's go orange,'" U.S. head coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "So we did. It was his suggestion and our guys did a good job with that."

Durant led the United States with 25 points.

The decision to go to the zone defense for the last play caught Spain off-guard after Derrick Rose put the Americans ahead with two free throws.

"I just wanted to cover as much ground as I could and help my teammates," said Durant, who also had 10 rebounds. "I just didn't want to foul on a 3-pointer so I stayed down and, luckily, game over."

The United States rallied after Spain — 13 points behind after three quarters — took a one-point lead on Juan Carlos Navarro's three-point play with 27 seconds left.

"It was one of those games that was a learning experience for us and I think we made key plays down the stretch," Durant said. "We also played as a team and stuck through tough times."

Navarro scored 20 points in the first game between the teams since the Americans won the 2008

Olympic final. It was the first loss in nine games for Spain, the defending world champion. The world championships begin Saturday in Turkey.

Spain took the lead for the first time with 90 seconds to play. Rubio's stutter step into the lane drew attention and allowed the teen point guard to feed Felipe Reyes for an easy layup and an 82-80 lead.

But Durant answered before Rose got past Rubio and avoided Marc Gasol's block to score with a one-handed shot that put the U.S. up 84-82 with 33 seconds to play.

"We made one more play than they did and that's why we won," Krzyzewski said.

Rose finished with 13 points, and Lamar Odom had 12 points and nine rebounds for the United States, 3-0 on its exhibition tour.

Cano, Sabathia lead Yanks to rainy rout of Seattle

By Mike Fitzpatrick
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Robinson Cano looks as comfortable in the cleanup spot as CC Sabathia does on the Yankee Stadium mound.

Cano hit a grand slam and drove in a career-high six runs, Sabathia extended his home winning streak to 15 decisions and the New York Yankees routed the Seattle Mariners 10-0 on a rain-slicked field Sunday.

Austin Kearns and Jorge Posada also homered for the Yankees, who notched another win minus slugger Alex Rodriguez. New York is a confounding 12-0 this season without the three-time MVP, placed on the 15-day disabled list Saturday with a strained left calf.

"It just shows you how deep our lineup is," manager Joe Girardi said.

Cano is a big reason for that success. Making his own bid for an MVP award, the All-Star second baseman launched his 25th home run in the fifth inning off Luke French (2-4) on the first pitch following an intentional walk to Mark Teixeira.

Cano's fourth career slam sailed into a rarely reached section of bleachers beyond the New York bullpen, making it 5-0 beneath a foreboding gray sky.

cleanup spot, Cano homered in four wins on a 5-2 homestand against a pair of struggling teams, helping the Yankees (77-47) improve to a season-best 30 games over .500.

"Now it's time for me to step it up and help the team win games," said Cano, acknowledging that he feels an increased responsibility to produce until Rodriguez returns. "That's his spot, not my spot."

Since he joined the Yankees last season, Teixeira has been intentionally walked to load the bases 10 times. The batter behind him is 7 for 8 with four homers and 25 RBIs.

"I tried to look at what's our best option to get out of that without giving up anything," Mariners interim manager Daren Brown said. "Instead of trying to make five or six good pitches to Teixeira and Cano, you make a good pitch to Cano and maybe you get out of the inning with a ground ball."

It was the 10th grand slam of the season for the AL East leaders, matching a franchise mark set in 1987 when Don Mattingly slugged a record six. Cano has two this year, both off left-handed pitchers.

"I've seen a difference with his situational hitting all year long," Girardi said.

Entering the day, no other team in the majors had more than six grand slams.

Oswalt sharp for 7 innings, Phillies beat Nats

PHILADELPHIA — Roy Oswalt struck out eight in seven sharp innings and led the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-0 win over the Washington Nationals on a rainy Sunday.

Oswalt (9-13) has won three straight starts for the first time this season, helping the Phillies try to make a move on Atlanta for the NL East lead.

Oswalt allowed five hits, and the Phillies backed him with the kind of run support he rarely got in Houston before getting traded in July. He never came out for the eighth after the game was delayed 1 hour, 44 minutes by rain.

BRAVES 16, CUBS 5

CHICAGO — Lou Piniella waved goodbye Sunday, bowing out as the Cubs' manager and ending a career that spanned five decades after the Atlanta Braves routed Chicago 16-5.

The 66-year-old Piniella announced before the game that he was leaving to be with his ailing mother. Third base coach Mike Quade was promoted to interim manager.

CARDINALS 9, GIANTS 0

ST. LOUIS — Jaime Garcia threw a three-hitter for his first career shutout and fellow rookie Allen Craig hit a two-run home run for the Cardinals.

Jon Jay had three hits and an RBI and Brendan Ryan and Yadier Molina each had two hits with an RBI for the Cardinals. St. Louis rebounded from a five-game losing streak to take two of three from the Giants.

REDS 5, DODGERS 2

LOS ANGELES — Bronson Arroyo earned his 100th career victory, Joey Votto homered and drove in three runs and the NL Central-leading Cincinnati Reds beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Reds took two of three in the series and held their 3½-game division edge over St. Louis.

AP photo

Philadelphia Phillies' Raul Ibanez, right, runs the bases after hitting a two-run home run against the Washington Nationals in the seventh inning of a baseball game Sunday.

ASTROS 2, MARLINS 1

MIAMI — Hunter Pence hit a tiebreaking homer in the eighth inning and Houston averted a series sweep by ending the Marlins' season-high five-game winning streak.

Pence also drove in the game's first run with a sacrifice fly in the third inning.

PADRES 7, BREWERS 3

MILWAUKEE — Adrian Gonzalez and Chase Headley each homered for San Diego.

Jon Garland (13-8) had his scoreless-innings streak ended at 21 innings when he gave up Ryan Braun's 18th home run in the fifth, but he won his third straight start and four of five.

PIRATES 2, METS 1

PITTSBURGH — A slumping Zach Duke limited the Mets to one run over seven innings and Jose Tabata and Lastings Milledge homered, allowing the Pirates to salvage the final game of the three-game series.

Duke (6-12), a loser of eight of his previous 11 starts, struck out five and walked two to win for only the third time in 13 starts since May 18.

Mets starter Johan Santana (10-8) didn't allow a hit until Pedro Alvarez's leadoff single in the fifth. Santana went the distance for New York, giving up only two other hits over eight innings while striking out nine and walking one.

ROCKIES 1, DIAMONDBACKS 0

PHOENIX — Dexter Fowler hit a run-scoring single in the eighth inning and Jhoulys Chacin pitched 7 2-3 strong innings to lead the Colorado Rockies over the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Fowler also helped Chacin with a diving catch in center field that took away a hit from Adam LaRoche in the fourth inning. Fowler landed hard on his left side but held onto the ball. He was shaken up for a few moments but remained in the game.

RAYS 3, ATHLETICS 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Matt Garza came out on top in a matchup between pitchers who threw no-hitters this season, outpitching Dallas Braden for his career-high 13th win and leading Tampa Bay over the Athletics.

Garza (13-7) scattered four hits over 7 2-3 innings and overcame a balk that led to Oakland's only run against him.

RED SOX 5, BLUE JAYS 0

BOSTON — Clay Buchholz pitched six innings of five-hit ball to lower his AL-best ERA to 2.26 and Bill Hall hit a two-run homer for the Red Sox.

The game began 1 hour, 44 minutes late and was stopped for 59 minutes by more rain with two outs in the top of the third of a scoreless tie.

RANGERS 6, ORIOLES 4

BALTIMORE — Josh Hamilton and Vladimir Guerrero each hit three-run homers, Tommy Hunter earned his career-high 10th win and Texas beat Baltimore to split the four-game series.

The AL West-leading Rangers had lost 11 of 15 before the victory, which also snapped a 1-7 stretch on the road.

Luke Scott hit his 100th career homer and Ty Wigginton also connected for Baltimore, now 12-8 under manager Buck Showalter.

Hunter (10-2) gave up three runs and five hits over eight innings.

Hamilton and Guerrero both connected off Kevin Millwood (2-14).

ROYALS 3, WHITE SOX 2, 10 INNINGS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jason

Kendall hit a game-ending single with two outs in the 10th inning to give the Royals a victory over the White Sox in the teams' third extra-inning game in less than 24 hours.

Gregor Blanco walked with two outs and stole second and third before Kendall delivered the hit to left-center off Scott Linebrink (1-1).

TIGERS 8, INDIANS 1

DETROIT — Justin Verlander pitched eight strong innings, rookie Will Rhymes had four hits and the Tigers completed a three-game sweep.

The Tigers outscored Cleveland 19-3 in the lopsided weekend series, and have had two three-game winning streaks and a three-game losing streak in their last nine games.

Verlander (14-8), who has struggled with high pitch counts early in games this season, didn't throw his 100th pitch Sunday until the eighth inning.

TWINS 4, ANGELS 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Baker pitched seven shutout innings, Michael Cuddyer had a bases-loaded double, and the Minnesota Twins beat the Los Angeles Angels 4-0 Sunday night.

Danny Valencia homered for the Twins, who took two of three from Los Angeles.

Minnesota went 7-2 on its nine-game homestand to increase its lead in the AL Central to five games over struggling Chicago.

Valencia homered to open the fifth against Jered Weaver (11-9), and Cuddyer fouled off five straight pitches with two strikes before hitting his double to left-center.

That was plenty of support for Baker (11-9), who bounced back from a pair of poor performances where he left the ball up in the zone. He allowed five hits, struck out three and walked one.

Piniella waves goodbye to baseball

CHICAGO (AP) — After all the wins, all the losses and all those arguments, Lou Piniella clearly felt it was time to leave.

Saying the final goodbye after a half-century in baseball, that was the hard part.

"I cried a little bit after the game. You get emotional. I'm sorry, I'm not trying to be," the Chicago Cubs manager said Sunday, his eyes tearing up again and his voice cracking.

"This will be the last time I put on my uniform," he said.

The 66-year-old Piniella announced before the Cubs-Atlanta game that he was retiring immediately after it was over and planning to spend more time with his ailing mother.

"My mom needs me home and that's where I'm going," Piniella said.

The Cubs didn't do him many favors on the field in his wrapup, losing 16-5 to the Braves. He was in the dugout when it ended, and he waved his hat across the field to his friend, longtime Atlanta manager Bobby Cox, who has said this is his last season.

The Cubs gave up 11 runs over the final three innings to fall 23 games under .500. Many in the crowd of 37,518 had already left Wrigley Field when Sam Fuld grounded into a game-ending double play.

"It's a good day to remember and also it's a good day to forget," Piniella said.

Third base coach Mike Quade was promoted to interim manager, getting the nod over bench coach Alan Trammell, who was thought to have been a candidate to succeed Piniella next season. But general manager Jim Hendry said Trammell was not going to be considered for the job, so Quade was selected to finish out the season. Speculation is rampant that former Cubs star Ryne Sandberg, now their Triple-A manager, will be hired.

From the start, it was an emotional day for a man known for his fiery ways as a player, manager and executive for 48 years.

Piniella teared up at home plate when the umpires wished him well with his mom. He shook hands with Cox after they reached the plate, hugged each other and exchanged back slaps as Piniella's No. 41 was posted on the center-field scoreboard.

Cox was announced to the crowd and took his cap off and waved it to the fans.

Then the public address announcer ran down Piniella's achievements as he stood at the plate, and scattered cheers of "Louuu" could be heard throughout the crowd.

After Piniella and Cox posed for a picture with the umpires, the managers hugged each other again. Piniella then headed to the dugout and, as the cheers got louder, took off his cap, waved it to the crowd and began to clap for the fans.

When Piniella made the first of three trips to the mound in the seventh inning to change pitchers, fans behind the dugout gave him a standing ovation as he came off the field and he acknowledged them with a little wave of his hand.

Piniella said last month he planned to retire at the end of the season and reiterated his plans just Saturday. But he missed four games in August to be with his mom in Florida and decided this weekend his divided attention wasn't helping anyone.

cautions and took the checkered flag 0.584 seconds over Ty Garibay.

At the half-way mark Brennan was being tailed by Garibay while Jeff Peck, running in the third position, waited for one or both of them to make a mistake.

However, both drivers made their rides stick to the track and Brennan took home the victory.

DALTON VICTORIOUS WITH QUALE'S JR. STINGERS

Another caution-filled main event had the young drivers scrambling for position throughout the 20-lap race. At lap 10, Russell Dalton was in the lead but Doug Brownfield was relentless with the pressure he applied to Dalton en-route to the checkered. Lap traffic came into play on the final lap, but Dalton stood his ground to finish just ahead of Brownfield. It was Dalton's third main event win of the season.

ANOTHER WIN FOR BACHMAN WITH MAGIC VALLEY PIPE SUPER SIXES

Just as he was making his move for leader Bob Bachman, a caution at the halfway point of the 30-lap main event race put the fast moving Dean Waltman to the rear of the field for his involvement in bringing out the yellow.

From that point Bachman continued to lay the real estate between him and the rest of the field and by lap 25, Bachman had accumulated a 20-car length lead over Randy Sellars.

As the checkered flag waved, Waltman crossed the line in third just behind Sellars after making a great comeback for the position.

Redskins: Haynesworth vs Shanahan going into OT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Albert Haynesworth vs. Mike Shanahan. This one's going into overtime.

The conflict between two strong wills — the unyielding coach and the player with the $100 million contract — escalated this weekend when Haynesworth expressed defiant frustration at being repeatedly singled out by the coach. Shanahan responded by saying things aren't going to change.

Haynesworth fired first, breaking a week of silence after Saturday night's 23-3 loss to the Baltimore Ravens. The two-time All-Pro defensive lineman essentially accused Shanahan of mischaracterizing the reason Haynesworth couldn't practice last week. Haynesworth suggested Shanahan did it to make the Redskins organization "look good" and to make him "look bad" because he didn't participate in the offseason conditioning program.

Shanahan last week gave a variety of reasons why Haynesworth didn't practice for 2½ days, eventually chalking it up to "more of a headache than anything else." Haynesworth said Shanahan "left out a whole lot of stuff" but didn't say what. Multiple reports said Sunday that Haynesworth was suffering from rhabdomyolysis, a muscular condition whose symptoms included weakened, stiff or aching muscles.

The Redskins had previously said Shanahan would not discuss the matter until Monday. He was not made available to local reporters Sunday, but he talked about Haynesworth in an interview with AOL Fanhouse.

Asked about the reports that Haynesworth has rhabdomyolysis, Shanahan said: "Not aware of that."

Shanahan went on to reiterate a point he has made before: Haynesworth has to practice if he wants to play.

"Albert has gotten away in the past with playing without practicing," Shanahan said. "That will not happen under this regime. If he's going to play, he's going to practice, and that is the same with every player here. The days of him playing without practicing are over."

SEAHAWKS LOSE LT OKUNG TO ANKLE INJURY

SEATTLE — The Seahawks could be without sixth-overall draft choice Russell Okung for a while after he left Seattle's second preseason game with an ankle injury.

Coach Pete Carroll said

after Green Bay beat Seattle 27-24 on Saturday night that the left tackle to whom Seattle just guaranteed $29 million to replace retired All-Pro Walter Jones could have a high right ankle sprain, pending an MRI exam Sunday. Those sometimes take two months or more to heal.

"It's pretty significant," Carroll said of the loss of the foundation to his changing offensive line. "Obviously we made it as big a priority as we could make it to get him."

Carroll said he didn't know how Okung got injured, only that it stings the entire team that is banking on improved offensive line play to lead a comeback season from 9-23 the last two years.

He sprained the same ankle in Oklahoma State's opener against Georgia last season but missed only a few plays. The 6-foot-5, 310-pound stalwart started all 13 games for those college Cowboys last season, though the ankle continued to bother him late into the year.

Mansfield Wrotto, normally a guard, replaced him. Seattle is already without backup tackle Ray Willis for an indefinite time because he is facing knee surgery.

After Okung missed the first eight days of training camp because of a contract impasse, the Seahawks gave him a six-year deal earlier this month that has a maximum value of $58 million.

EDITORIAL

Surprisingly, skepticism about Otter in Magic Valley

If you can depend on anything in Idaho, it’s that the Magic Valley will be reliably Republican in a gubernatorial election. It still may be in 2010, although the results of a recent Republican poll are eye-opening. A survey taken last month by GOP pollster Greg Strimple for the Idaho Hospital Association found that Republican Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter isn’t especially well-regarded in south-central Idaho. Strimple said 46 percent of respondents in the Magic Valley TV market viewed the governor unfavorably, while 35 percent rated him favorably, according to the Idaho Statesman which obtained results of the survey last week. Statewide, Otter led Democrat Keith Allred 47 percent to 36 percent, according to Strimple. Caveats abound. It’s a small sample — 400 people statewide. Still, 10 weeks before the election it suggests that the governor hasn’t yet closed the deal in south-central Idaho. Five possible reasons:

- 1. The economic time-warp. The economy in south-central Idaho responds to national trends more slowly than the economies of Ada and Canyon counties and other parts of the state. So even though employment in the Magic Valley has been relatively stable, prosperity hasn’t returned.
- 2. Doubts about Otter as a leader. The governor’s inability to get a gas tax increase through the Legislature in 2009 and his unsuccessful gambit to zero out funding for the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, Idaho Public Television and other state agencies earlier this year left some Idahoans wondering who was running the state.
- 3. Policy. Otter’s gas-tax hike initiative played badly in the Magic Valley, largely because of the distances folks here must drive. And now that the reality of the magnitude of cuts to public schools in sinking in, there are more unhappy parents and educators.
- 4. Keith Allred. The Democratic nominee for governor grew up in Twin Falls, and although he hasn’t lived in the Magic Valley for years he has the endorsement of a still-influential south-central Idaho Republican, former state Sen. Laird Noh of Kimberly. Allred is a straight arrow and personally conservative, and it doesn’t hurt that he’s member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Days Saints — which means that some Magic Valley voters aren’t rejecting him out of hand just because he’s a Democrat.
- 5. Expectations. Frankly, many Magic Valley Republicans expected the Otter administration to be a slam-dunk success. It hasn’t been yet, partly because of factors — namely the national economy — over which the governor has no control. But if south-central Idaho was expecting a conservative Cecil Andrus, it hasn’t seen him yet in Otter. The governor has too often been tentative, deferential or simply absent. It would be astonishing if Otter lost the Magic Valley on Election Day — no Republican has done so since Roger Fairchild in 1990 — but the governor has some work to do here.

Five myths about the Iraq troop withdrawal

Early Thursday, less than two weeks before the president’s Aug. 31 deadline for ending American combat operations in Iraq, the 4th Stryker Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division crossed the border from Iraq into Kuwait. The shift offers a useful moment to take stock of both how much has been accomplished and how much is left to be done in what is fast becoming our forgotten war.

Kenneth M. Pollack

1. As of this month, the United States no longer has combat troops in Iraq. Not even close. Roughly 50,000 American military personnel remain in Iraq, and the majority are still combat troops — they’re just named something else. The major units still in Iraq will no longer be called “brigade combat teams” and instead will be called “advisory and assistance brigades.” But a rose by any other name is still a rose, and the differences in brigade structure and personnel are minimal. American troops in Iraq will still go into harm’s way. They will still accompany Iraqi units on combat missions, even if only as “advisers.” American pilots will still fly combat missions in support of Iraqi ground forces. And American special forces will still face off against Iraqi terrorist groups in high-intensity operations. For that reason, when American troops leave their bases in Iraq, they will still, almost invariably, be in full “battle rattle” and ready for a fight. What has changed over the past 12 to 18 months is the level of violence in Iraq. There is much less of it: The civil war and the insurgency have been suppressed and the terrorists have been marginalized, so American troops have been able to pass the majority of their remaining combat responsibilities to the Iraqi security forces. Most U.S. troops now have little expectation of seeing combat in Iraq. Instead, they are spending more time acting as peacekeepers, protecting various personnel and facilities, and advising Iraqi formations.

2. Thanks to the troop “surge,” Iraq is secure enough that it will not fall back into civil war as U.S. forces pull out. Security in Iraq has improved enormously since the darkest days of 2005–2006, but the jury is still out on what will happen in the months and years ahead. Extensive research on intercommunal civil wars finds a dangerous propensity toward recidivism. Moreover, the fear, anger, greed and desire for revenge that helped propel Iraq into civil war in the first place remain just beneath the surface.

3. The United States is leaving behind a broken political system. If some on the right want to claim (wrongly) that the surge stabilized Iraq to the point that civil war is impossible, their counterparts on the left try to insist (equally incorrectly) that the change in U.S. tactics and strategy in 2007–2008 had no impact on Iraq’s politics whatsoever. Iraqi politics are fundamentally different today than they were in 2006. The nation’s political leaders have been forced to embrace democracy. Party leaders no longer scheme to kill their rivals but to out-vote them. They can no longer intimidate voters; they have to persuade them.

4. Iraqis want U.S. troops to stay. Or they want them leave. Be very, very careful with Iraqi public opinion. Polls are rarely subtle enough to capture the complexity of Iraqi views. Typically, they show a small number of Iraqis who want the Americans out immediately at any cost, a small number who want them to stay forever and a vast majority in the middle — determined that U.S. troops should leave, but only after a certain period of time. When Iraqis are asked how long they believe our troops are needed, their answers range from a few months to a few years, but are strongly linked with however long the respondent believes it will take Iraq’s forces to be able to handle security on their own. One typically hears the same from people across Iraq and throughout its social and political strata. Iraqis are nationalistic, and they resent the American military presence. Many also feel deep bitterness over the mess that the United States made by invading and then failing to secure the country or to begin a comprehensive rebuilding process, failures that led to civil war in 2005–2006. Most Iraqis are relieved to have been rescued from that descent and are frightened that it will resume when the Americans leave.

5. The war will end “on schedule.” Much as we should all want the Obama administration to succeed in Iraq, this statement by the president in a speech to veterans this month should also make us wary. If uttered in the first act of a Greek tragedy, it is exactly the kind of claim that would end in a Sophoclean fall. As George W. Bush learned to his dismay, once you start a war, a lot of bad, unpredictable things can happen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Proposed amendments reveal GOP hypocrites

The Republicans generally claim to be strict constitutionalists and, at the same time, they are trying to amend the same at last count more than 12 times. A partial list follows:

- Allow the saying of “Christian” school prayers. Under the Eisenhower regime, the Pledge of Allegiance was changed to say “under God,” which also is an attempt to turn this country into a “Christian” country.
- To make English the official language of the United States. This probably furthers No. 1 above.
- To force a balanced budget. This would have excluded the Social Security surplus, which would have made it a badly balanced budget.
- Require a supermajority (two-thirds) to raise taxes. The Senate is currently largely stalemated with a 60 percent majority requirement.
- To outlaw all abortions.
- To increase parental rights.
- To disallow desecration of the U.S. flag.

- To repeal the 16th Amendment (income taxes). This would probably really help balance the budget.
- To permit the states to set term limits for their representatives and senators. Idaho previously had passed this as a state law and then repealed it when they became the dominant party.
- To repeal the 17th Amendment which provides for the direct election of senators.
- To prevent other religions from building churches (mosques). This amendment may become necessary since about 62 percent of Americans don’t want a civic center/mosque built near the World Trade Center.
- To repeal the 14th Amendment which provides citizenship to all persons born in the United States. What are the chances of any of the proposed amendments being passed? Answer: Less than zero. What do hardcore Republican political types actually believe in?
- Getting elected at any cost, including lying.
- Low taxes for the very rich and powerful.

- Electing politicians with IQs in the substandard range, e.g., Bush, Palin and Bachmann.
- Claiming government doesn’t work and then very ingeniously proving it when elected or stopping the other party from achieving very much by gross harassment. The Bush administration ruined our economy and now evidently proposes to do some more of the same to solve the problems they created.
- Denying obvious facts like global warming by lying about it with experts from the oil industry, etc.
- Turn the United States into a Christian theocracy just like Iran is a Muslim theocracy. By the way, whatever happened to their “family values” line of baloney?

Poor choices always come back to haunt us

Every corner has some kind of construction going on. Most are from out-of-state owners doing the work. Why is that? I know we have qualified people here in Twin Falls. Why aren’t they being hired? I know the “economy” is to blame for most everything these days, but come on, Twin Falls construction companies deserve a chance. Poor choices always come back to haunt us. Yes, we all have to face up to balancing a budget. We have to do that at New Hope Transition Center. We have had a tight year, but with the help of God and the community, we are able to stay in business. We appreciate all the help that is given to us. Every person needs a second or third chance in the recovery community. We are having a toilet paper drive here at New Hope. If you can help us out, we would appreciate you dropping some toilet paper off at 425 Second Ave. N. At Thanksgiving and Christmas we will have our food drives. Again, I thank you for the opportunity to ask for your help. You have helped us be in business for many years.

LA unveils $578M school, costliest in the nation

By Christina Hoag
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Next month's opening of the Robert F. Kennedy Community Schools will be auspicious for a reason other than its both storied and infamous history as the former Ambassador Hotel, where the Democratic presidential contender was assassinated in 1968.

With an eye-popping price tag of $578 million, it will mark the inauguration of the nation's most expensive public school ever.

The K-12 complex to house 4,200 students has raised eyebrows across the country as the creme de la creme of "Taj Mahal" schools, $100 million-plus campuses boasting both architectural panache and deluxe amenities.

"There's no more of the old, windowless cinderblock schools of the '70s where kids felt, 'Oh, back to jail,'" said Joe Agron, editor-in-chief of American School & University, a school construction journal. "Districts want a showpiece for the community, a really impressive environment for learning."

Not everyone is similarly enthusiastic.

"New buildings are nice, but when they're run by the same people who've given us a 50 percent dropout rate, they're a big waste of taxpayer money," said Ben Austin, executive director of Parent Revolution who sits on the California Board of Education. "Parents aren't fooled."

At RFK, the features include fine art murals and a marble memorial depicting the complex's namesake, a manicured public park, a state-of-the-art swimming pool and preservation of pieces of the original hotel.

Partly by circumstance and partly by design, the Los Angeles Unified School

The Edward R. Roybal Learning Center is seen on Aug. 10 in Los Angeles. Next month's opening of the Robert F. Kennedy Community Schools will be auspicious for a reason other than its both storied and infamous history as the former Ambassador Hotel, where the Democratic presidential contender was assassinated in 1968.

District has emerged as the mogul of Taj Mahals.

The RFK complex follows on the heels of two other LA schools among the nation's costliest — the $377 million Edward R. Roybal Learning Center, which opened in 2008, and the $232 million Visual and Performing Arts High School that debuted in 2009.

The pricey schools have come during a sensitive period for the nation's second-largest school system: Nearly 3,000 teachers have been laid off over the past two years, the academic year and programs have been slashed. The district also faces a $640 million shortfall and some schools persistently rank among the nation's lowest performing.

Los Angeles is not alone, however, in building big. Some of the most expensive schools are found in low-performing districts — New York City has a $235 million campus; New Brunswick, N.J., opened a $185 million high school in January.

Nationwide, dozens of schools have surpassed $100 million with amenities including atriums, orchestra-pit auditoriums, food courts, even bamboo nooks. The extravagance has led some to wonder where the line should be drawn and whether more money should be spent on teachers.

"Architects and builders

The Visual and Performing Arts High School is seen on Aug. 10 in Los Angeles.

love this stuff, but there's a little bit of a lack of discipline here," said Mary Filardo, executive director of 21st Century School Fund in Washington, D.C., which promotes urban school construction.

Some experts say it's not all flourish and that children learn better in more pleasant surroundings.

Many schools incorporate large windows to let in natural light and install energy-saving equipment, spending more upfront for reduced bills later. Cafeterias are getting fancier, seeking to retain students who venture off campus. Wireless Internet and other high-tech installations have become standard.

Some pricey projects have had political fallout.

After a firestorm over the $197.5 million Newton North High School in Massachusetts, Mayor David Cohen chose not to seek reelection and state Treasurer Timothy Cahill reined in school construction spending.

Now to get state funds for a new school, districts must choose among three designs costing $49 million to $64 million. "We had to bring some sense to this process," Cahill said.

In Los Angeles, officials say the new schools were planned long before the economie pinch and are funded by $20 billion in voter-approved bonds that do not affect the educational budget.

Still, even LA Unified Superintendent Ramon Cortines derided some of the extravagance, noting that donations should have been sought to fund the RFK project's talking benches commemorating the site's history.

Connie Rice, member of the district's School Bond Oversight Committee, noted the megaschools are only three of 131 that the district is building to alleviate overcrowding. RFK "is an amazing facility," she said. "Is it a lot of money? Yes. We didn't like it, but they got it done."

Construction costs at LA Unified are the second-highest in the nation — something the district blames on skyrocketing material and land prices, rigorous seismic codes and unionized labor.

James Sohn, the district's chief facilities executive, said the megaschools were built when global raw material shortages caused costs to skyrocket to an average of $600 per square foot in 2006 and 2007 — triple the price from 2002. Costs have since eased to $350 per square foot.

On top of that, each project had its own cost drivers.

After buildings were demolished at the site of the 2,400-student Roybal school, contaminated soil, a methane gas field and an earthquake fault were discovered. A gas mitigation system cost $17 million.

Over 20 years, the project grew to encompass a dance studio with cushioned maple floors, a modern kitchen with a restaurant-quality pizza oven, a 10-acre park and teacher planning rooms between classrooms.

The 1,700-student arts school was designed as a landmark, with a stainless steel, postmodernistic tower encircled by a rollercoaster-like swirl, while the RFK site involved 15 years of litigation with historic preservationists and Donald Trump, who wanted to build the world's tallest building there. The wrangling cost $9 million.

Methane mitigation cost $33 million and the district paid another $15 million preserving historic features, including a wall of the famed Cocolan Grove nightclub and turning the Paul Williams-designed coffee shop into a faculty lounge.

Sohn said LA Unified has reached the end of its Taj Mahal building spree. "These are definitely the exceptions," he said. "We don't anticipate schools costing hundreds of millions of dollars in the future."

Bill would give OK to 'Ne-VAH-da' pronunciation

CARSON CITY, Nev. — You know the old adage: You say to-MATE-o, I say to-MAHT-o. You say Ne-VAH-da, I punch you in the face.

That may sound extreme, but many Nevadans get irritated by the mispronunciation of the state's name — using an "ah" instead of the correct "a."

However, outgoing Assemblyman Harry Mortenson is proposing more tolerance. The Las Vegas Democrat is working on a resolution for the 2011 legislative session to make the "Ne-VAH-da" pronunciation equally acceptable.

Mortenson says he's not asking Nevadans to change. He just wants the Spanish pronunciation recognized.

Nevadans have long bristled over the issue. In 1944, Reno newspapers even scolded former heavyweight boxing champion Jack Dempsey for his "East Coast" pronunciation during an appearance.

Small plane with 4 on board missing in Alaska

By Rachel D'oro
Associated Press writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Searchers were looking Sunday for a small plane carrying four people, including three park rangers, that disappeared in southwest Alaska during bad weather.

The aerial search for the Dehavilland Beaver was focusing on rugged coastal terrain between Swikshak Lagoon in Katmai National Park and the floatplane's destination in King Salmon, about 285 miles southwest of Anchorage. There has been no emergency locator transmissions or radio communications from the aircraft, said park superintendent Ralph Moore, who was holding out hope that the floatplane landed in a cove to wait out the area's abruptly changing weather.

"The fact that there's been no radio transmissions from them is very disturbing to us," he said.

The plane, which was carrying the pilot and park rangers, was reported missing after it did not arrive in King Salmon as expected Saturday, according to the Coast Guard, which sent a helicopter and an HC-130 plane to help with the search. Park superintendent Ralph Moore said the plane left Swikshak Lagoon at 1:45 p.m. Saturday for a flight that takes about an hour. Two other rangers at the site left in a Cessna 206 about 15 minutes later and arrived safely in King Salmon, but the plane flew 500 feet above the ground much of the way because of deteriorating weather conditions.

The names of the four on board were not immediately released. Both planes are owned by the Branch River Air Service in King Salmon, according to the Park Service. A man who answered a telephone at the business declined to comment or give his name, referring questions to park officials.

The rangers were at the site to prepare for a planned reconstruction of an old ranger station, Moore said.

The missing rangers had been waiting there for 10 days to receive supplies and equipment by boat, but the effort was called off when suitable tides and weather did not materialize.

Pig wrestling canceled after porkers elude capture

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — A pig wrestling competition at a county fair in northern Montana has been canceled after the porkers eluded fair officials trying to round them up for the event.

Fair office manager Shirley Embleton says the wild pigs spend the year on a 10-mile free-range property along the Marias River and about 30 are captured the Friday of the scheduled event.

But this year, fair officials were only able to locate one boar, despite flying the river. The event was postponed until Saturday, but neither the landowner nor fair officials could locate the absent pigs.

Embleton says next year, organizers will devise a new plan to locate and capture the animals earlier in the week.

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad speaks during a ceremony inaugurating the Karrar drone aircraft at Malek-e Ashtar University on Sunday. Ahmadinejad spoke about the country's first domestically-built, long-range, unmanned bomber aircraft, calling it an ‘ambassador of death’ to Iran’s enemies.

Iran inaugurates nation’s first unmanned bomber

By Nasser Karimi

TEHRAN, Iran — Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad on Sunday inaugurated the country’s first domestically built unmanned bomber aircraft, calling it an “ambassador of death” to Iran’s enemies.
The 4-meter-long drone aircraft can carry up to four cruise missiles and will have a range of 620 miles, according to a state TV report — not far enough to reach archenemy Israel.
“The jet, as well as being an ambassador of death for the enemies of humanity, has a main message of peace and friendship,” said Ahmadinejad at the inauguration ceremony, which fell on the country’s national day for its defense industries.

The goal of the aircraft, named Karrar, or striker, is to “keep the enemy paralyzed in its bases,” he said, adding that the aircraft is for deterrence and defensive purposes.
The president championed the country’s military self-sufficiency program, and said it will continue “until the enemies of humanity lose hope of ever attacking the Iranian nation.”
Iran launched an arms development program during its 1980-88 war with Iraq to compensate for a U.S. weapons embargo and now produces its own tanks, armored personnel carriers, missiles and even a fighter plane.
Iran frequently makes announcements about new advances in military technology that cannot be independently verified.

State TV later showed video footage of the plane taking off from a launching pad and reported that the craft traveled at speeds of 560 miles per hour and could alternatively be armed with two 250-pound bombs or a 450-pound guided bomb.
Iran has been producing its own light, unmanned surveillance aircraft since the late 1980s.
The ceremony came a day after Iran began to fuel its first nuclear power reactor, with the help of Russia, amid international concerns over the possibility of a military dimension to its nuclear program.
Iran insists it is only interested in generating electricity.

Referring to Israel’s occasional threats against Iran’s nuclear facilities, Ahmadinejad called any attack unlikely, but he said if Israel did, the reaction would be overwhelming.
“The scope of Iran’s reaction will include the entire earth,” said Ahmadinejad. “We also tell you — the West — that all options are on the table.”
Ahmadinejad appeared to be consciously echoing the terminology used by the U.S. and Israel in their statements not ruling out a military option against Iran’s nuclear facilities.
On Friday, Iran also test-fired a new liquid fuel surface-to-surface missile, the Qiam-1, with advanced guidance systems.

33 trapped Chilean miners found alive after 17 days

By Federico Quilodran
Associated Press writer

SANTIAGO, Chile — Chile’s president euphorically waved the note, written deep inside a collapsed mine, that his country waited 17 agonizing days to see: “All 33 of us are fine in the shelter,” one of the trapped miners wrote in red letters.
Authorities and relatives of the miners hugged, climbed a nearby hill, planted 33 flags and sang the national anthem Sunday after a probe sent some 2,257 feet deep into the mine came back with the note. “Today all of Chile is crying with excitement and joy,” President Sebastian Pinera said.
The miners’ ordeal may have just begun: Rescuers say it could take four months — until around Christmas — to get them out.
The men already have been trapped underground longer than all but a few miners in recent history. In 1983, two coal miners were rescued after 23 days in northeast China; few other rescues have taken more than two weeks.

For the moment, however, news that the men even survived an Aug. 5 tunnel collapse outshines all other details.
“I’m happy, happy,” said one of miner Mario Gomez’s three daughters. “For the first time, I’ll be able to sleep peacefully.”
Pinera told Cooperativa radio that he saw video of the miners thanks to a camera sent through the probe shaft.
“I saw eight or nine of them. They were waving their hands. They got close to the camera and we could see their eyes, their joy,” Pinera said.
Word of the miners’ survival was a rush of good news in a country still rebuilding from a magnitude 8.8 earthquake Feb. 27 and its resulting tsunami, which together killed at least 521 people and left 200,000 homeless.

Mine officials and relatives of the workers had hoped the men reached a shelter inside the mine when the tunnel collapsed the San Jose gold and copper mine about 530 miles north of the capital, Santiago. But they had said air and food supplies would only last 48 hours.
Rescuers drilled repeatedly in an effort to reach the shelter, but failed seven times; they blamed the errors on the mining company’s maps. Hopes rose after the eighth attempt early Sunday when rescuers heard hammering sounds.
Crews sent down a probe, then pulled it up with two notes the trapped miners had placed inside, including the one Pinera read. Gomez, 63, wrote the other note to his wife, confirming the miners’ location underground and saying he loved her.

“When the mining minister said he had sent me a note, I couldn’t believe it,” said Gomez’s wife, Lila Ramirez. “I know my husband is strong, and at 63, is the most experienced miner who could lead his co-workers. But no more mining (for him.)”
Gomez wrote that the miners used vehicles for light and a backhoe to dig a canal to retrieve underground water.
The opening the miners used to deliver the notes is not wide enough to haul up the miners. Rescue equipment brought from outside the country was being assembled Sunday to dig a tunnel 27 inches in diameter through which the miners will eventually be brought to the surface.

Joshua Kelly Peterson

Joshua Kelly Peterson went to his Heavenly Father on Aug. 19, 2010. God has called his son home.

He is survived by his parents, Lindy Abshire and Ronald Gene Peterson Jr. He also is survived by the loves of his life, his daughter, Kaylee Ray Peterson of Wendell, and girlfriend, Holli Storey of Gooding. Joshua has a brother, John Claude Abshire, and two sisters, Alicia Kristine Abshire and Courtney Jean Peterson.

Joshua has grandparents, Fred and Pennie Saunders and Ronald Peterson Sr. (Jayne) and Judith Shotwell (Leroy). He has one surviving great-grandma, Mary Viola Saunders. Joshua had honorary people that had raised him — John Abshire and grandparents Jim and Louise Abshire and godmother Martha “Marty” Kuhn.

He was born on Nov. 5, 1981, in Boise at 11:02 a.m. He started his life in Jerome on 20th Avenue and moved to England for a year before returning home to the United States and residing in Buhl, where he attended school at Popplewell Elementary and held a track record. He attended Buhl Middle School, where he earned the President’s Physical Fitness Award. He went to Buhl High School and played numerous sports and earned many trophies for the Buhl Indians.

He earned his high-school equivalency degree at the College of Southern Idaho without opening a book. He loved games and threw horseshoes with all his friends. He loved all outdoor sporting activities and he felt most at home hunting, fishing and arrowhead hunting in our beautiful mountains and streams.

He was a natural helper, had the ability to make friends with everyone, and that is exactly what he did. He will be sorely missed by all the peoples’ lives that he touched; especially his “Momma and Papa Geno.” Joshua has a huge family with many aunts, uncles and cousins who all loved him more than anyone will ever know.

Joshua was bigger than this earth and the universe, in personality and in spirit. For what God has created He hath also taketh away. Joshua now resides in the Heavens with the people that preceded him in death: great-grandparents Adam and Mariette Schmidt, Ralph Wilhelm Peterson, Newcomb John and Fern Louise Saxton, and Frank William Saunders; and cousins Lloyd Davis, Jared and Aaron Hale, and Adrian Bertasso. He also lost his best friend, Grant Logan, whom he had a tattoo of a cross on his arm for.

The family will have an open service for his family and friends to express their thoughts and special memories of Joshua; we would like to thank everyone who had helped in the recovery of Joshua. If you have pictures and want to bring them and share with us that would be greatly appreciated. The services will be announced by Farnsworth Mortuary and he will be laid in his final resting place in the Pocatello Cemetery.

To my Sonny: “The sun will burn brighter in the sky, the moon will be shining brighter at night, the stars are your playing field and my dreams will be filled with the thoughts of you my son, may you always have a good night and know that you were the highlight of my life, I love you and will forever be changed with your passing.” Love your Momma.

A visitation will be held Tuesday evening, Aug. 24, 2010, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 South Lincoln, Jerome, where family and friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m.

Funeral services will be conducted at 11:02 a.m., Wednesday, Aug. 25, 2010, also at Farnsworth Mortuary Chapel with a visitation beginning at 10 a.m. Graveside committal services will follow at 3 p.m. in the Mountain View Cemetery, 1520 S Fifth Ave., Pocatello, Idaho.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests that donations be made to a trust fund established for Josh’s daughter, Kaylee Peterson, at any Farmers National Bank branch.

For obituary rates and information, call 735-3266 Monday through Saturday. Deadline is 3 p.m. for next-day publication. The e-mail address for obituaries is obits@magicvalley.com. Death notices are a free service and can be placed until 4 p.m. every day. To view or submit obituaries online, or to place a message in an individual online guestbook, go to www.magicvalley.com and click on “Obituaries.”

BUILDING MUSCLE

Gooding
schoolteacher

lessons in body sculpting

By Rebecca De Leon
Times-News writer

One of the most carnal sins against American social etiquette is asking a woman her real weight and age.

Kelly Herrgesell is not one of those women — she isn't afraid to tell everyone she's 37 years old and weighs from 99 to 107 pounds, depending on how close she is to a figure competition.

The Gooding schoolteacher isn't anorexic, nor does she have a glandular problem — she is almost all muscle, like other professional figure competitors. Female figure competitions are similar to bodybuilding contests, but the women are softer and more feminine, Herrgesell said.

"I just really want people to know that this is possible at any age. It doesn't matter how old you are. Anyone can do it," she said.

Herrgesell had been fit all her life, doing aerobic workouts since she was young. But she didn't start lifting weights and doing resistance training workouts until last year. The workouts are different from aerobic workouts, which is what most women do to burn fat. But, Herrgesell advises women,

Regular blood donors
essential for meeting demand

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

The big bloodmobile parked outside Magic Valley Mall on Aug. 10 drew many curious glances from shoppers.

While most people weren't lured to give blood, others, like Summer Corbett of Twin Falls, decided it was the perfect opportunity to become a donor.

With her husband and young daughter in tow, the 25-year-old was excited as she entered the specially designed RV. Before taking a seat on a small bench by the entrance, Corbett quickly glanced at the three people already supine on lightly padded built-in beds lining the RV's interior walls.

"It sure is busy," Corbett said, noting the white-coated phlebotomists tending to each donor.

"My husband regularly donates, and he drew me to do it," she said. "We didn't plan on donating today, and came to the mall to shop, but once we saw they were here we figured we might as well. I'm an organ donor, and doing this just feels right."

Within minutes, Corbett was ushered into a small, private consultation room. Although Corbett had been prescreened by a volunteer set up in the mall's food court, another Red Cross official screened her again, verifying her medical background. She was soon situated on one of the bloodmobiles cots, a needle punctured through her skin and a plastic pint bag filling with her blood.

Hopefully, Corbett will become a regular donor, as those are the people on which Red Cross depends to fill the state's need for 240 pints of blood a day, said donor recruiter Debi Mahler.

"We pull out 240 units each day, so that is the goal amount we like to put back in the supply," Mahler said.

Nationally, someone needs blood every two seconds. Since blood cannot be manufactured, it must come from donors.

"We climb a mountain every day to make sure we collect enough blood to meet the need,"

BLAIR KOCH/For the Times-News

With the needle already secure in a vein, Kayla Gummow of Twin Falls doesn't feel pain while a Red Cross phlebotomist fills glass vials with her blood during a recent blood drive in Twin Falls.

Fitflops: Do these thongs tone your tush?

By Leslie Tamura
The Washington Post

Flip-flops that promise to tighten your tush, chisel your calves and carve out your cankles — really?

Well, if I can get a workout by simply walking around in my favorite summertime footwear, then I'm sold. But it doesn't seem to be quite that easy.

Though toning sandals — and their predecessors, those bulbous toning sneakers — have been around for a few years, I focused on them recently when a Fitflops poster caught my eye in a subway station. "Get a workout while you walk," it promised.

Like its competitors, a Fitflops are made with built-in instabilities that make certain muscles work harder than usual. FitFlop claims to do it with a "multi-density Micro-wobbleboard midsole." Skechers Tone Ups feature a "unique, soft, kinetic wedge insert." Reebok EasyTone Flip Flops have "balance pod technology." All simulate walking on a pliable, giving surface — "like walking barefoot in the sand!" in the words of Kathleen Stone, president of the American Podiatric Medical Association.

Stone, who practices in Glendale, Ariz., says the toning flip-flops "increase your use of certain muscle groups."

But, she warns, "We don't have a lot of data yet that really supports the (manufacturers') claims." Toning sandals are "not a substitute for the gym."

She also warns that people who already have foot and ankle problems can worsen their condition with these flip-flops. Those who constantly wear toning sandals may deal with muscle fatigue, tendonitis, ankle sprains and shin splints.

"Just putting these on and wearing them 24/7," Stone says, "is like doing leg push-ups 24/7. You're going to end up with an overuse problem just like any other exercise."

Stephen Pribut, a Washington, D.C., sports podiatrist, says that if you want your toes out there in the summer, the new sandals give more support than the "old flip-flops that bend everywhere." But, he adds, "You have to work out your arms, legs, backside, and the shoes aren't going to do all that."

"I like people who want to exercise to actually exercise," he said — like with full-body workouts. These toning sandals, he says, are best for getting around town or chilling at the beach.

"Don't look for ways to cheat and exercise," Pribut said.

Muscle

too much cardio restricts muscle growth. Bulking up is a healthy regimen for men and women, she says, although she chooses to build muscle in moderation, by competition standards.

There are three types of body sculpting competitions — bikini, figure and bodybuilding — varying in desired amount of muscle mass. Bikini competitions are geared for the softly toned, model-esque body type; bodybuilding competitions are for the vein-poppingly bulky men and women; and figure competitors are in the middle of the muscle spectrum.

"I admire the women who do bodybuilding because of the discipline and diet it requires. They have to be as lean as the men. But having body fat is what makes a woman a woman — it's the way we were built," said Herrgesell, a figure competitor.

Herrgesell teaches language arts at Gooding Middle School and works as a certified personal trainer. Though she teaches, grades papers, trains clients, works out at the local gym and helps maintain the house she shares with her husband, Herrgesell finds time to compete in figure competitions and model for fitness magazine Oxygen and bodybuilding.com.

"She has so much energy," said Sheri Ferguson, one of Herrgesell's clients. "I don't think I would be able to do everything she does."

Herrgesell attributed her abundant energy to her healthy lifestyle.

"I realized that especially as a person gets older, they start feeling aches and pains in their back, shoulders, joints," Herrgesell said. "But the more muscle they have, the less aches and pains they get. When I started building muscle, the pain in my back and shoulders went away, my posture improved, I just started to feel better. When I started doing resistance training, my body began filling out in places and I looked better and felt better."

In February 2009, Herrgesell switched from aerobic exercises to strength training. Just four months later, she competed in her first figure competition, the Flex Fitness Natural Bodybuilding and Figure Contest.

Herrgesell competes in "natural" competitions under the National Gym Association, or NGA, one of the federations for bodybuilding and figure competitions. "Natural" means body-enhancing drug or steroid use is prohibited; competitors take polygraph tests to confirm their drug-free status, losing the ability to compete for seven years if they fail.

Since her first show, Herrgesell has competed in six other shows from Twin Falls to Utah and Las Vegas, winning first place in her second competition, a novice contest which included women from all over the Northwest. She earned her NGA Master's Professional card last May.

Although she's competitive, winning is not her priority.

"For me, getting to know the other competitors is way more rewarding than getting a trophy," she said. "I've met a lot of lifelong friends going to competitions, and that's what makes it all worthwhile."

Herrgesell added: "I met a lady that has six children and a phenomenal physique. To keep her body looking the way it does, her attitude, it's just amazing."

• • •

Herrgesell's husband, Aaron Herrgesell, competes in men's bodybuilding and was featured as one of bodybuilding.com's weekly "Over 40" profiles. When the couple met, he said, his wife was a beautiful woman. Six months before their marriage, she began to lift weights and build muscle.

"She is by far more attractive now," he said.

The two train clients together, running their independent practice in Gooding. The Herrgesells have been training Ferguson and her husband, Dan, since the beginning of this year.

"The goal for both my husband and I was to lose weight and become more healthy," Sheri Ferguson said. "They kept us focused and told us that failures aren't failures."

Dan Ferguson lost weight and became healthy enough to stop taking medicine for his diabetes under the Herrgesells' athletic guidance.

"They gave us moral support," Sheri Ferguson said. "They didn't let us think that we're failing. And Kelly is really bubbly and outgoing. She's a massive sweetheart."

Both Kelly and Aaron Herrgesell said they understand that not everyone finds their muscular statures attractive.

"I remember when my husband and I went to Mexico," Kelly Herrgesell said. "Europeans on the beach looked at us with disgust. Some people see us as attractive, some don't."

But will the Herrgesells change their healthy lifestyle to appease a wider audience? Fat chance.

How to fight cellulite

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

You can't do much about these deposits of fat and waste products that dimple the skin on your thighs and buttocks, but you can do something:

Lose extra pounds. Yes, thin people can get cellulite. But extra fat in the body tends to increase dimpling and lumpiness.

Eat well. Along with plenty of water, a low-fat diet that's high in fiber and complex carbohydrates — fruits, vegetables and whole grains — helps flush out waste (unlike fatty, salty products). Your body also won't produce more fat from the foods you eat.

Try massage. Some people say kneading cellulite for a few minutes a day can stimulate the flow of blood and other fluids that break down waste. It may not work, but it also won't hurt you.

Beware of "miracle" products. There is little to no scientific evidence that cellulite creams are effective. Instead, they can drain your wallet and sometimes cause skin rashes. A regular lotion fortified with vitamin E may help soothe skin and improve blood flow.

Exercise problem spots. All workouts are great, but ask a trainer about leg curls, squats and other specific moves that target your legs and butt.

Stop smoking. Studies have found a link between cigarettes and cellulite; one reason is that smoking weakens skin. You can also try cutting down on alcohol, coffee and soda.

Talk to a doctor. If cellulite really bothers you, laser treatments might be able to help. Note: liposuction can help with body contouring but does not remove cellulite, according to the Mayo Clinic.

Don't get too frustrated. Cellulite is linked to genetics, hormones and age — factors you can't control. It's often not a sign you're doing anything wrong.

Images of food may make you feel full

By Tia Ghose
Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

Sometimes the eyes really are bigger than the stomach, at least where feeling full is concerned. How hungry we feel after chowing down may depend more on what our eyes tell us we've eaten, rather than how much we actually consumed.

People shown generous portions of food before a snack report feeling more satisfied several hours after eating — even if they actually ate a smaller amount. The findings were reported at the Society for the Study of Ingestive Behavior in Pittsburgh, Pa.

While several studies have shown people's estimates of food volume affect how much they eat, studies showing that those perceptions alter fullness after a meal are scarcer, said nutritional physiologist Dale Schoeller of the University of Wisconsin-Madison, who was not involved with the study.

"They're interesting findings," Schoeller said. "What you eat is affected by a lot of psychological influences, in this case, what you think what you're eating and what your expectations are for the effect of that food on your body."

A team led by Jeff Brunstrom, an experimental psychologist at the University of Bristol in Britain, wanted to see how people's perceptions of food quantity changed how full they felt hours later. The team gave 32 participants a strawberry-banana smoothie. But first they showed half the participants a heaping pile of two or three bananas and seven to eight plump strawberries, then said those ingredients would be tossed into the blender. The other group thought just a measly banana and a handful of strawberries would go into its drinks. Afterward, all the participants drank the same size smoothie, which used the smaller portion of fruits.

The group that feasted its eyes on the overflowing pile anticipated having a fuller belly after the snack. And three hours after drinking the smoothie, members of the group shown the bigger pile said they were 20 percent more full on average, even though people in both groups drank the same size drink.

In a second experiment, the researchers gave each of the 100 participants a hot bowl of tomato soup rigged with a hidden pump that imperceptibly sucked out or added soup to the bowl. One group ate from a bowl that looked like a pint of soup, but which was slowly drawn down so that participants only ate about 1.3 cups of soup. Those in the other group saw an initially smaller helping, but which seeped more liquid into the bowl, so that people consumed a pint. Two control groups ate the larger and smaller portions without being fooled about the amount.

Blood

To rev up awareness and get new donors, the Red Cross uses its bloodmobile and holds multiday drives, like the one scheduled Aug. 30 through Sept. 1 at Episcopal Church of the Ascension in Twin Falls. The bloodmobile and its staff can collect about 12 units an hour.

Giving blood is rewarding in itself, but giving prizes like a trip to Nevada never hurts, Mahler said.

"All donors, whether it's your first time or not, will have a chance at winning a big-screen television or dinner and overnight stay at Cactus Petes in Jackpot," Mahler said.

Rewards aside, Mahler said fears or worries keep many from giving blood, and the Red Cross combats those with information: A new sterile needle is used for each donor, and people have enough blood to share.

According to information on the Red Cross' website (www.redcrossblood.org), the average adult body holds 10 to 12 pints of blood, and the 1 pint drawn out is naturally replenished within 24 hours.

"We're trying to get the word out that not only is giving blood rewarding it is also safe," Mahler said. "Donating is a very critical community service."

Blair Koch may be reached at blairkoch@gmail.com or 316-2607.

BLAIR KOCH/For the Times-News
Red Cross phlebotomist Laura Thompson shows a vial of newly collected blood during a Twin Falls blood drive. While much of a donor's blood is kept in a sealed pint pouch, some is collected in vials for extensive lab testing, to make sure the blood is free from disease and other contaminants.

WHO CAN DONATE BLOOD?

Basic eligibility requirements set by the Red Cross include:

- Be in general good health and weigh at least 110 pounds.
- Meet minimal age requirement; in Idaho's that's 17 years.
- Provide identification.
- Has not given blood in the past 56 days.

Certain medications you are taking, or have taken, can render you ineligible to donate. Those include certain drugs for prostate enlargement, acne or psoriasis medications, insulin from cows, drugs given after exposure to Hepatitis B (but not the vaccine), and certain drugs used to prevent heart attack and stroke. Be ready to inform officials of your medical and prescription history.

Tips for a positive donation experience:

- Eat a small, healthy, low-fat meal prior to donating.
- Drink plenty of water or juice throughout the day.
- Bring photo ID or a Red Cross blood donor card with you.
- Wear a short-sleeved shirt or one that can be comfortably raised above the elbows.
- Avoid heavy lifting after donating.
- Feel free to ask questions.

Girdles for men? Beer-bellied guys take an underwear cue from the ladies

By Neely Tucker
The Washington Post

Further signs of the impending apocalypse: Men's girdles are now all the rage. They call it "men's shapewear," true, but ladies, we know that you know from long and tummy-tucking experience what that really means. Spanx for Men — undershirts that fit and feel like a wet suit — debuted to such testosterone-fueled success this year that the company is coming out with a line of (gulp) bottoms for the fall. The cotton compression undershirt "helps with the love handles and beer belly and man boobs — or 'moobs,' as we call them," says Maggie Adams, public relations manager for Spanx. An Australian company, Equmen, started up last year and will sell you a male-model-worthy "core precision undershirt" for a cool $99 (the company's products are touted by manly man and Washington Redskins punter Josh Bidwell. "I tried one of their shirts earlier this year to help with back issues I had from playing golf, and it works just great. Really holds your core in place, supports the upper shoulders, particularly when you're working out.") On Amazon, you can find the "Mens Belly Buster Athletic Supporter Girdle," the sound of which makes us squirm in our seats, but why go online? There are at least two companies using late-night infomercials to offer gentlemen of discerning taste "compression shirts" for their "problem areas." You can see how they work from the comfort of your own couch, then get up for another beer! For the low, low price of $19.95 (plus $7.95 shipping and handling), you can get SlimTs, which use "special spandex-blend fibers" to make you (or the man in your life) "look firmer" with "no diets, no exercise" and "no gym memberships!" But wait! There's more! The "Insta Slim Muscle Tanks" (available for a limited time for only $29.90, plus $9.95 shipping and handling) will help you "flatten your stomach, redefine your chest, eliminate your love handles"! All while still being that lovable bowl of Jell-O you are! "Men's shapewear is one of the few up-and-coming trends you can actually put your hands on," says Marshal Cohen, chief industry analyst for the market research firm NPD Group. While the term "men's shapewear" probably didn't exist in the Mark Twain era, this sort of thing isn't entirely new. Men who went for the cosmopolitan dandy look in the late 19th century in Europe and the States were known to sometimes wear some type of binding undergarment. And the history of men's fashion, broadly stated, has been a search to accentuate the male ideal of the V-shaped body — broad shoulders, narrow hips — whether in medieval armor or the modern suit. But the trend toward undergarments that make men look more svelte than they actually are began over the past decade or so, with lycra or spandex bicycle shorts and other tight, form-fitting sports gear, Cohen said. These clothes, such as polyester gear that wicks sweat away from the skin, help athletes reduce wind friction and improve circulation (and warmth on cold days). They began to be staples of gym wear. From there, it wasn't much of a leap for men to notice that the garments could hold in jig-gly flesh around the stomach and chest — places where men tend to put on flab or lose muscle tone. "Some of this has evolved from guys who already look pretty good who want muscle shirts that don't look like they're from the 1950s," he said. "When Nike and Under Armour started getting into the compression shirt or close-fitting garment business, way back to the Bo Jackson ads, guys noticed that it enhanced their look." Indeed, Equmen ("Equality for Men") markets its product as much as for athletes as Pete Potato-Belly, saying that its high-end garments amount to a healthy life-style choice, improving posture and back support, as well as a "noticeably slimmer appearance." (To see for ourselves, we dutifully plunked down $58 for a Spanx compression shirt, opting for a tasteful black V-neck. We discovered it's not a T-shirt and it will snap back like a rubber band if you stretch it. We banged our nose trying to pull it over our head. It felt like wearing a wet suit, only you don't get to go to the beach.) Sales of men's undergarments have been fluctuating over the past couple of years, NPD data show, but the field recorded 0.5 percent growth in units sold in 2009, to end with 1.53 billion units sold. (Sales of women's intimates, for comparison, were up 1 percent last year, ending with 3.49 billion units sold.) Men's shapewear, with more than a dozen companies marketing various forms of shirts or underwear that hold the belly in, perk up the bottom or narrow the waist, are a small part of the uptick, Cohen said. Nonetheless, the garments' impact is being felt, according to some retailers. "They've done incredibly well for us," says Liberty Jones, the public relations manager for Neiman Marcus at Mazza Gallerie in D.C. "This is a very nice tool that men now have. It gives you confidence."

A T-shirt lets it hang out, right, and a Spanx shirt keeps it tight. And all without dieting or exercise!

Losing water as sweat

Some people feel thirsty when they start becoming dehydrated, and some seldom do. How to determine which type you are:

1

Weigh yourself on accurate scales

2

Exercise for an hour or more without drinking anything, and weigh yourself wearing the same shoes and clothes as before

3

Calculate how much weight you lost and what percentage of your body weight that equals

Did you feel thirsty?

If so, at what point during the workout was it?

If not, had you lost a significant amount of water without knowing it?

Water lost

(Approximate figures)

1 lb. (500 g)	2 cups (500 ml)
2 lb. (1 kg)	1 qt. (1 liter)
4 lb. (2 kg)	2 qt. (2 l)

Heavy water loss

Exercising 30 minutes in warm, humid weather or wearing heavy padding, you can lose more than 1 qt. (1 l) or 2 lb. (1 kg) of water as sweat

Why it matters

Sweating away 2% to 3% in body weight

Sweating away 5% or more

Reduces aerobic ability by more than 10%

How to prevent, or delay, cataracts

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

Cataracts, a clouding of the eye's lens that blocks vision, are common in people 65 and older. But although age is a major risk factor, you may be able to slow the process:

Wear sunglasses. The sun's ultraviolet rays can speed up tissue damage. Buy glasses that guard against both types of rays, UVA and UVB.

Eat healthy foods. Vitamins in fresh vegetables and fruits may protect the lens. Other foods that help support eye health include whole grains, nuts and seeds.

Control diabetes. High blood sugar levels irritate eye tissue and also damage proteins in the lens. To reduce your chances of developing diabetes, work to stay at a healthy weight.

Quit smoking. Studies indicate that smokers may experience cataract symptoms earlier than non-smokers. Cigarettes speed up the body's aging process and also increase the risk of high blood pressure, which may be another contributing factor for cataracts.

Don't drink too much alcohol. People who have four or more drinks a day may be more likely to get cataracts, research has shown.

Check on your medication. Long-term use of certain drugs including steroidal eye drops for seasonal allergies, corticosteroids for asthma, tranquilizers and treatments for psoriasis and other skin conditions may raise the risk of cataracts. Talk to your primary care physician and eye doctor.

Have regular eye exams. The earlier cataracts are diagnosed, the easier they are to treat using one of a variety of surgical techniques.

Don't ignore symptoms. These include clouded or blurred vision, increasing problems with night vision, sensitivity to lights and glare, seeing halos around light and a fading of colors. But see a doctor whenever you notice a significant change in your eyesight.

Nutrition quiz: Foods that make you feel full

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On the 23rd day of November, 2010, at the hour of 10:30 a.m. of this day (recognized local time), in the office of First American Title Company, 199 Country Lane, Jerome, Idaho 83338, in the County of Jerome, State of Idaho, TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash or cashier's check (cash equivalent), in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale in compliance with Section 45-1506(9) Idaho Code, the following described real property, situated in Jerome County, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:

Lot 13 in Block 1 of North Ridge Subdivision Phase 3, according to the official plat thereof, recorded October 23, 2003 as Instrument No. 2036726, Jerome County Records.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113, Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed that according to the County Assessors office, the address of Bare Land, Jerome, ID, 83338, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Paul Lloyd Builders & Developers, Inc., as Grantor(s), to TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, and Gerald Martens and Judith Martens, as Beneficiary, recorded October 18, 2007, as Instrument No. 2076339, in the records of Jerome County, Idaho.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION (45-1506(4)(A), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The beneficiary hereby gives notice that a breach of obligation for which said transfer in security has occurred, the nature of the breach being:

- Failure to pay when due, under Deed of Trust Note, the entire loan balance immediately due and payable in the amount of $60,000.00, for Principal, due and payable on or before October 17, 2009, as evidenced by a Promissory Note dated October 17, 2007, with unpaid accrued interest owing in the amount of $17,636.09, as of May 26, 2010.
- The failure to pay past due real property taxes in Jerome County for the years of 2007, 2008 and 2009, in the amount of $1,852.06, including late charges and interest, and failure to bring said real property taxes current.

All amounts are now due, together with unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, costs and advances made to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

TWIN FALLS Beautiful 5 bdrm, 3.

Today is Monday, Aug. 23, the 235th day of 2010. There are 130 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Aug. 23, 1960, Broadway librettist Oscar Hammerstein II, 65, died in Doylestown, Pa. nine months after the opening of his final collaboration with composer Richard Rodgers, "The Sound of Music."

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1305, Scottish rebel leader Sir William Wallace was executed by the English for treason.

In 1754, France's King Louis XVI was born at Versailles.

In 1775, Britain's King George III proclaimed the American colonies in a state of "open and avowed rebellion."

In 1785, U.S. naval hero Oliver Hazard Perry was born in South Kingstown, R.I.

In 1914, Japan declared war against Germany in World War I.

In 1926, silent film star Rudolph Valentino died in New York at age 31.

In 1927, amid protests, Italian-born anarchists Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were executed in Boston for the murders of two men during a 1920 robbery.

In 1939, Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union agreed to a non-aggression treaty, the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact, in Moscow.

In 1944, Romanian prime minister Ion Antonescu was dismissed by King Michael, paving the way for Romania to abandon the Axis in favor of the Allies.

In 1973, a bank robbery-turned-hostage-taking began in Stockholm, Sweden; the four hostages ended up empathizing with their captors, a psychological condition now referred to as "Stockholm Syndrome."

Ten years ago: A Gulf Air Airbus crashed into the Persian Gulf near Bahrain, killing all 143 people aboard. Negotiators for Verizon (vuh-RY'-zuhn) and more than 35,000 telephone workers reached tentative agreement on a new contract, ending an 18-day strike. An estimated 51 million viewers tuned in for the finale of the first season of the CBS reality show "Survivor," in which contestant Richard Hatch won the $1 million prize.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush said he understood the anguish of war protester Cindy Sheehan, but said fulfilling demands like hers for withdrawal from Iraq would weaken the United States. Israeli forces evicted militant holdouts from two Jewish settlements, completing a historic withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and part of the West Bank. A Peruvian airliner crash-landed in the Amazon jungle, killing 40 of the 98 people aboard. Actor Brock Peters died in Los Angeles at age 78.

One year ago: Reality TV contestant Ryan Jenkins, suspected in the killing of his ex-wife and former model Jasmine Fiore, was found hanging in a motel in Hope, British Columbia, Canada, an apparent suicide. Eric Bruntlett turned an unassisted triple play to finish Philadelphia's wild 9-7 victory over the New York Mets. Stefania Fernandez, Miss Venezuela, won the 2009 Miss Universe pageant in the Bahamas; she succeeded fellow Venezuelan Dayana Mendoza, the previous year's winner.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®
Bobby Wolff

"It doesn't much signify whom one marries, for one is sure to find next morning that it was someone else."
— Samuel Rogers

All this week's deals come from the Junior European Championships held in Romania last summer. During the two-week event, there was an under-25 championship, and in parallel with that, a one-week tournament for girls followed by a schools event.

Europe was well represented, with even some of the smaller countries fielding teams in the minor events. For example, the Estonian girls' team started the Championships off with a 14-16 loss to the Netherlands — not bad against much more experienced opponents. (Incidentally, the Dutch and Poles — together with the Swedes — have been dominating this event lately. It is certainly not coincidental that the first two countries have set up sporting organizations that ally with the Olympic Federations, and run their programs with benchmarks and training schemes.)

Today's deal helped to keep the match close, as Estonia's Tuul Saav first pushed the Dutch North-South to the five-level, then found the only lead to defeat five hearts.

As West, Saav judged that her partner, Erika Parn, must have something useful to explain her double, and in that case, there should be no rush to try to cash black tricks. Accordingly, Tuul led her singleton trump. Parn won the heart ace and returned a second heart. Declarer could now ruff only one spade in dummy, so was a trick short of her contract. Well done — on any other lead declarer can bring home 11 tricks.

LAB Puppies, purebred,

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago, I had to pick up my sister "Karyn" after a night out. When she called she told me I was going to "hate" her and not to judge her. The man she was with had been arrested for DUI. Abby, he is the same person who killed another one of my sisters in a drunk-driving accident years ago! Not only has Karyn been hanging out with him, it has been going on for months and she says it's serious.

I am appalled with my sister's choice. I told Karyn she could choose him or me. I guess she chose him because we haven't spoken since. I thought we were very close before, but now that I know what she has been doing, I no longer want anything to do with her.

Am I overreacting, or should she be more concerned with how her decisions affect the rest of the family?

— DISAPPOINTED IN NEW YORK

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: I don't think you're overreacting, and I don't blame you for being appalled. Your sister has involved herself with a serious alcoholic who, if he could control his addiction, would have dried out after he killed someone. At least for the time being, keep your distance. While there's no accounting for the affairs of the heart, I have a strong hunch Karyn is going to need all the support you and the family can give her as this romance follows its predictable path.

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful, loving, hard-working husband with one flaw. He is 24 years old and has literally spent 19 years of his life eating nothing but dairy, bread and pasta. We have been married more than two years, and he has only recently begun eating meat.

When I try to encourage him to try fruits or vegetables, he refuses and makes excuses. He'll even claim he is full and stop eating to avoid trying new things. I have managed cooking separately so far, but now we have an 18-month-old and I very worried that she will start imitating her father's poor eating habits. What can I do? I'm afraid for his health and for my daughter's future health.

— TERRIBLY TIRED OF CHEESE IN IOWA

DEAR TIRED OF CHEESE: Visit your nearest bookstore and look for a cookbook for parents of children who are finicky eaters like your husband. One was written in the last few years by Jessica Seinfeld (Jerry's wife), which details how to "sneak" healthy ingredients into broths and spaghetti sauces so they get their vitamins. That way you can feed your child and your spouse meals they will accept while providing proper nourishment — and they'll be none the wiser.

DEAR ABBY: May I share with you and your readers some information that was provided to me by a fireman? It concerns senior citizens.

If seniors don't have an emergency alert device, they should take their car keys to bed with them and place them on their nightstand. The little red "panic" button can be used to start the horn of their car in an emergency. The neighbors will hear the horn and help them.

— RICK IN SCOTTSDALE

DEAR RICK: That's not a bad suggestion — but first, forewarn the neighbors that if your car alarm goes off, it may indicate that you're in trouble. In my city, car alarms go off so frequently that people often assume it's a malfunction and ignore it.

IF AUGUST 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: A seemingly insignificant opportunity or offer in the next three weeks might blossom into something that produces more stability in your life. Don't allow your fantasies to carry too much weight however between mid September and December. Use your business skills and common sense when money or career is at stake. In January you might receive some very sound advice, and if you don't receive it then go ask for some from a trustworthy source before you commit to a new relationship or job. Late May and early June is the best time to make irrevocable decisions or to initiate crucial plans.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Winners are honest and forthright. The workweek starts off as though a gun went off to signal the beginning of a race. Competitiveness is in the air but you thrive due to a knack for warmth and friendliness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Even in the most troubled circumstances, your optimism can shine and cast a happy glow on everyone. It is time to mend fences that may have been damaged by past grievances and aggression.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You might astonish someone if you train your pet rock to "stay." But anyone with intelligence will understand the truth behind your attempt to impress. Don't expect applause for doing ordinary things.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You won't be blue if you try something new. There is no reason to hesitate about setting up a twitter account or plugging in a foot massager. Experiment with something novel and expand your horizons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wishful thinking won't win a war. You know what they say, "don't believe everything you hear." It is extremely easy to hear only what your wishful thinking self want to hear under these stars.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If things aren't working out, take a breather. You wouldn't leave a house on the market if it doesn't sell, so don't leave your resume out there or continue to accept blind dates. Put a few things on hold.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pull out all the stops. It's amazing what a new outfit can do for your mood and confidence levels. Dress to prove you are a person of consequence and do your utmost to appear confident and accomplished.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't get left at the gate. You may be challenged to keep up within a rapid work environment. Your favorite people may be full of vim and vigor and set an extraordinarily quick pace that you must match.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The atmosphere could be "full steam ahead." Situations seem to trigger your enthusiasm and talent for innovation. When caught up in agitation or emergencies you can easily be at your best.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be a clock watcher. Rather than tapping your foot until it is time to leave work or head off to lunch focus on your ability to be seen as someone who shows respect for others by being on time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Check something off your bucket list. If you must plan ahead for vacation time you might as well do something you want to do. Wine tasting, rock climbing, or sailing could be in your near future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Meet and greet. Someone new in your life might not seem awesome upon initial meeting, but could grow on you. Practice being a positive force to influence outcomes. Employ sincerity to impress superiors.
