New year, new crowd at CSI

College expects to top 9,000 enrollment mark

By Amy Huddleston

Times-News writer

The parking lots at the College of Southern Idaho were overflowing on Monday morning.

“The parking is bad? Well that’s good, that’s good,” said Jeff Fox, the college’s executive vice president and chief academic officer.

With the influx of fall-semester students and the partnership between the C3 call center and CSI, the parking lots have a reason to brim with vehicles. The new business in town will use classrooms in the college’s new Health Services and Human Sciences building to train various members of its newly hired workforce. The 248 employees, along with what Fox estimated to be 7,200 students, are testing the limits of the college’s class space, though administrators are excited about the growth. The college expects to reach 9,000 students by the end of September, a 9 percent increase in enrollment from last year.

CSI President Jerry Beck said the past 40 years have shown slow and steady growth for the college, while the previous two years have provided an enrollment explosion due to dual-credit courses, new programs and affordable costs and scholarships.

Search for missing family ends at bridge in Jerome Co.

By Nate Poppino

Times-News writer

JEROME — The search for a missing woman and her children ended Monday on a rural Jerome County bridge.

Alisha Hepworth, 30, and her children, John Hepworth, 7, and Mahailla Hepworth, 3, became the focus of a missing-persons search after they vanished en route to the Gooding County Fair last week. Emergency responders on Monday found their 1996 Chevrolet Lumina, their bodies inside, in a feeder irrigation canal at roughly 300 N. 90 E. — just a half-mile from where they began their journey at Hepworth’s parents’ home. On the bridge over the canal were clues to the Hepworths’ fate: a broken signpost and a dented guardrail.

“At this point, it appears to be a tragic accident,” Doug McFall said around noon, while his deputies and first-responders from a variety of other agencies recovered the last body from the dented and broken car.

crash by Idaho State Police and the county could take several weeks to wrap up, McFall said. But from what they’ve learned so far, this is how they believe events unfolded:

The Hepworth family headed out early Wednesday evening to meet a friend at Gooding’s parade and rodeo. While traveling west on 300 North, their car drifted off the right side of the road and struck first a sign marking the start of the bridge, then a guard rail before dropping into the canal. The current, McFall said, apparently nudged the car right under the small bridge, where it rested fully submerged on all four wheels until Monday.

Meanwhile, Alisha Hepworth’s husband and family reported her missing to the sheriff’s office, and deputies started a search, alerting local residents and the media to watch for the family.

Crapo predicts switch in House majority

By Amy Huddleston

Times-News writer

It might lead to a year of head-butting and gridlock for the House and the Senate, but U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo thinks things will get done if Republicans win a majority in the House in November.

The Idaho Republican’s conversation with the Times-News editorial board on Monday harkened back to the Clinton administration, when the Democrats and Republicans each held a congressional majority.

“This puts Republicans at the table to negotiate,” Crapo said. “Things like the welfare reform were accomplished last time, and I think good things will happen.”

Both parties have long wish lists, and Crapo said collaboration is really the only way things can get done.

That includes collaboration for U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson’s proposed Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act. The proposal would create three wilderness areas totaling 332,775 acres in central Idaho. The proposal from Simpson, R-Idaho, has been 10 years in the making but has yet to become a law.

Judge sentences Straub to 8 years

Straub ordered to pay $504K in restitution for death of David Webster

By Bradley Guire

Times-News writer

On paper, it’s eight years. In reality, it’s a life sentence.

That was 5th District Court Judge Randy Stoker’s take on the sentencing of Daniel Ryan Straub, who received up to eight years in state prison for striking down cyclist David Webster with a truck in 2009.

Straub, 22, is set to serve three years before becoming eligible for parole. In addition, Straub was ordered to pay $554,506.67 in restitution, $500,000 of which goes for half of Webster’s potential future earnings had he not been killed. The rest goes toward legal costs, funeral expenses, medical insurance premiums and grief counseling for the Webster family. Stoker also ordered that Straub’s driver’s license will be suspended for two years upon his release from prison.

None of that brings Webster back to his family or changes the fact that Straub has to live with knowing he took a life.

Prior to setting sentence, Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Stan Holloway made his final argument, saying, “This is a classic example of why people should not drink and drive.”

As part of the victim impact statement, the Webster family played a slideshow of family photos set to adult contemporary music. Songs from Michael Jackson and Celine Dion accompanied the chronicle of David Webster’s life up to his death at age 57, as the court watched the northwest wall on which his image was projected.

Straub sat straight in his chair, motionless, and when Webster’s daughter, Rachel, and widow, Charlene, took the stand to offer their statements, Straub stared a hole down into the desk before him. When finished with her statement, Charlene Webster asked Straub if he had read other statements from family members submitted as part of the pre-sentence report. He meekly replied that he had read a few.

He later offered no statement at his sentencing.

Straub pleaded guilty to felony vehicular manslaughter on June 17 for the head-on crash that killed Webster as the latter rode east of Twin Falls

JFK almost never made it out of Twin Falls

But you didn't know that John Fitzgerald Kennedy almost met his demise on a visit to Twin Falls.

In the summer of 1956, Kennedy — then a first-term senator from Massachusetts — gave a speech here for Frank Church, who was running against incumbent Republican Sen. Herman Welker. The speech was a hit — standing-room only — but a small plane chartered by the Democratic National Committee to take Kennedy to California flipped over after takeoff and almost crashed.

It was Kennedy's last trip in a single-engined plane, according to Church. After that, JFK demanded an aircraft big enough to hold a pilot and a co-pilot.

in the Magic Valley? I think otherwise.

Jerome historian Virginia Ricketts related this story: In the last summer of World War I, Jack Williams — a former vaudeville acrobat who had recently been mustered out of the Marines — fetched up in Twin Falls as part of a recruiting drive.

After signing up 12 recruits, Williams passed the hat — collecting $260 — for war bonds.

Then he climbed the front of the Twin Falls County Courthouse with no tools except a rope to get over the cornice. He discarded the rope and kept climbing until he reached the top of the flagpole on the roof of the building, which according to the Twin Falls News "swayed precariously under his weight."

Back on solid ground, Williams proclaimed the stunt "inconsiderable." He had, after all, previously climbed the Washington Monument.

As far as the recruits were considered, they were still on the Marines' waiting list when the war ended in November.

Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough told the Times-News Monday that Carlene Harding, 47, was arrested on Aug. 14 when law enforcement agents discovered six pounds of marijuana

Gough said Harding was pulled over for speeding, but that she was a person of interest to narcotics officers in Twin Falls and Gooding counties. Harding posted a $5,000 bond two days later. She is scheduled for a preliminary hearing on Sept. 2.

Missing

A farmer noticed the road sign knocked over and, after hearing of the missing-persons search, became concerned, McFall said. The farmer called the Jerome Highway District, and with the help of the district supervisor spotted the car's antenna poking up from the water.

To recover the car, McFall called in help from Jerome County Search and Rescue, Twin Falls County Search and Rescue's dive team, Idaho State Police, Jerome County Paramedics and the highway district. The effort began at 8:30 a.m. Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter was on scene at one point, and his office's victims' assistance coordinator, Lori Stewart, stayed to assist throughout the morning.

As the water level in the canal was dangerously high, the North Side Canal Co. closed a headgate to make it safer for the dive team to do its work, McFall said.

The incident was a rare one in the area — McFall and others at the scene could only recall one or two recent, similar cases, both in the 1990s. He said he'd spoken to the family members who thankfully have "lots of support" from other friends, family and clergy.

"The family's taken it hard, of course," he said.

Jerome County took custody of the Lumina until its missing-persons investigation is complete.

Disaster

Sunday night, mostly to the southeast, and now measures almost half the size of Rhode Island. Fire officials at one point Monday declared it to be 375,000 acres in size, but they later dropped their estimate after realizing they'd included an area burned earlier this summer in the total, said U.S. Bureau of Land Management spokeswoman Barbara Bassler.

As of Monday evening, Bassler said she knew of 10 outbuildings that had burned, but no injuries. About 375 firefighters and other crew were on scene and the fire was 10 percent contained

From the lighting strike Saturday afternoon that sparked the flames through midday Monday, Caven said that some tractors and five of his Half Moon Ranch buildings burned down: two for potato storage, two large shops and an unoccupied house. He said power was also out at the ranch, forcing him to rely on a diesel generator to keep water pumping for his cattle. It costs about three times as much to run as power from Idaho Power, he said.

"The generator that burns diesel is tremendously expensive," Caven said.

He paused when asked how much damage the quick-moving fire caused his ranch, furrowed his brow and thought.

"Oh jeez," he said. "I suppose a million dollars. I mean, if you count the buildings and the pasture, it all adds up."

A major factor will be if the fire torched the pasture enough to require reseeding, something he won't know until spring.

The Twin Falls County

Commission passed a resolution Monday declaring a disaster in the county to help ease burdens like the ones Caven faces. Commissioner Terry Kramer said it still needs approval from the governor's office, but if it does pass muster, it will mean low-interest loans and greater support from the state and federal government.

"(The fire is) racing. It's really racing," he said. "We just decided we should get that declaration to the governor and let it work through the process."

Kramer also noted the damage done to the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument and the need for more cash there. Officials estimated Sunday that three-fourths of the monument has burned.

Some residents were worried enough by the fire to take matters into their own hands. The BLM announced mid-afternoon that it had received reports of individuals intentionally lightning new fires to try to deny fuel to the Long Butte and slow or stop its advance.

In a press release, the agency announced it had launched a formal investigation into the matter. Further details weren't available Monday, but the release stated such a practice is "potentially life-threatening" when done without professional firefighters present and without coordinating with the rest of the fire crews.

Idaho Power teams spread throughout the area Monday, attempting to fix power outages caused by the fire. A message posted on its outage information line Monday evening said more than 100 poles for distribution and transmission lines are still down, cutting power to about 86 people in Bliss and Hagerman. There is no time estimate for power to be restored.

Although this year's $105-per-credit tuition for up to 12 credits is the same price CSI charged three years ago, the college's state funding has decreased by 20 percent. Beck said the college is relying on student revenues much more than in the past, adding that students and faculty have supported CSI's program and class expansion at a time other colleges and universities are scaling back.

"We've tried to grow our way out of the financial dilemmas we were in," Beck said.

Classes have traditionally boasted around 21 students per teacher, though space and funding constraints have increased class sizes to 25 students this semester. The college prides itself on always having open classes available — granted, they may not be at preferred times — so students can access affordable educational opportunities.

Holly Batista, a 34-year-old student, didn't notice an increase in class size on Monday but said instructors have always provided personalized help. She chose to return to study nursing and commutes to the college from Burley every day.

"I've always been really happy with programs here," Batista said. "I heard good things about the nursing program and it was a good option for me to come here."

The newest programs CSI is offering this year include environmental technology, wind energy technician, industrial mechanics technology, dental hygiene, and a culinary arts program with a baking and pastry emphasis.

CSI's partnership with C3 is something that Fox sees continuing for the next few months, if not years, depending on the business' needs.

"CSI's been a part of the spirit to make a better community," Fox said. "We want to be part of a solution by bringing business to this town. The more we can raise people's quality of community and quality of education the more we can promote that."

Amy Huddleston may be reached at 735-3204 or ahuddleston@magicvalley.com.

Crapo

Crapo said the bill has caused a significant amount of unrest, but its outcome will depend on political dynamics.

"Any controversial bills will likely be held back by Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, (D-Nev.)," Crapo said.

Crapo is firm in his desire for state's rights when it comes to the Safe and Efficient Transportation Act of 2010. The act would allow heavier trucks on the federal interstate system — an increase in truck weights from 80,000 to 97,000 pounds for those states that opt into the plan.

Although he has received push-back on the legislation, Crapo told the Times-News that the act simply gives the state authority to decide what is best.

Crapo said the bill wouldn't force a weight increase — it would merely allow for one if transportation departments deemed it safe and effective.

He argued trucks filled to their full capacity will help growers in the area and reduce wear and tear on the roads and economic strain as trucks transport goods in fewer trips and fewer vehicle miles.

"It's a state's right issue, but there is no mandate here," Crapo said.

T.F. council moves ahead with $7.5 million sewer bond

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls City Council is moving forward on a $7.5 million sewer improvement project, asking city staff to update the preliminary budget to reflect the project and a roughly $1-a-month increase to residential water and sewer bills.

The proposed cost to residents would fluctuate between $1.02 and $1.14 during the next five years, though a rebounding economy or city growth will offset that figure.

The plan calls for a 20-year bond to pay for the project. The council explored four

POTENTIAL RATE HIKES ON SEWER USE
2011	$1.02
2012	$1.08
2013	$1.114
2014	$1.01
2015	$1.06
Purpose: a 20-year, $7.5 million bond to upgrade wastewater and sewer services options before moving forward with the full bond: two partial bonds for parts of the project — one for five years and the other for 15 — and cash reserves for the rest, or making no improvements for the next fiscal year. Even no improvements would require a 59-cent rate hike to maintain the sewers because of rising costs and increasing water conservation.

The improvements to the project are needed to meet projected demands on the system in the next 10 years, according to city documents.

Most council debate on the issue surrounded saddling future councils with their debt. However, all members were hesitant to empty their cash reserves to pay for the project. They asked for the changes to be made to the budget with a 7-0 vote. The rate hike is not yet finalized.

The council also inched closer to passing its budget, holding the mandatory public hearing on the matter. One person spoke. The council will now meet over the next couple of weeks to make adjustments by the Sept. 9 deadline to send a budget to the county.

Mark Livingston, of Kimberly, urged the council to cut 2 percent from its entire budget and to put it into reserves in case the economy worsens. He also decried any talk of tax increases.

“We’re in the worse recession in 80 years and property values are down,” he said.

“Those of us lucky enough to be working are having to take pay cuts to keep doing that.”

After the testimony, council members emphasized that none expect to pass the $47.6 million budget they published; the $2 million increase over the preliminary budget was listed only so the council had more flexibility after the public hearing, they said.

In other council news, by a 7-0 vote, the council approved changing the name of La Habra Drive between Wirsching Avenue and Filer Avenue to Robbi Way. The road there will be privately owned as part of an apartment complex, and is separated from the northern portion of La Habra by cement walls.

The landowners, Tom and Joan Parnell, wrote in a letter to the council that they deserve to name the street because they invested in the area for their retirement.

“I tried to find an English translation for La Habra, and found there is no translation, and I could not come up with any reason why there would be a Spanish name on a Twin Falls street,” the Parnells wrote.

Former Treasury Secretary Paulson dishes in S.V.

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Faced with the worst financial collapse since the Great Depression, former U.S. Treasury secretary Henry Paulson said he felt as if he were using duct tape and baling wire to try to staunch the nation’s economic hemorrhage.

The truth is, Paulson told about 1,500 people Sunday at the Sun Valley Pavilion, that Congress gave him a bazooka in the form of unspecified authority that he didn’t intend to use.

“But when we got in such a big mess we had to use it,” said the former chairman and chief executive officer of financial giant Goldman Sachs. “In essence, we nationalized Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. Trouble was that bazooka wasn’t big enough.”

Former Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson signs copies of his book, “On the Brink,” during the Sun Valley Writers Conference.

Court Justice Stephen Breyer, came to Sun Valley Friday through Monday to address the Sun Valley Writers Conference.

Paulson discussed his memoir, “On the Brink: Inside the Race to Stop the Collapse of the Global Financial System.”

Ketchum City Councilman Steve Shafran, who served as one of Paulson’s advisers, said Paulson’s personality makes the book a compelling read.

Paulson said he accepted President George W. Bush’s invitation to be U.S. Treasury secretary even though his wife and mother were against it. “My mother broke down in tears,” he said. “She was no fan of George Bush.”

Paulson said he warned the president of the impending financial crisis during their first economic meeting at Camp David in Maryland. Though Paulson said he immediately began work on regulatory reform and improving relations between Bush and Congress, he said it was too little too late, due to a combination of the housing crisis he failed to anticipate and Congress’ slow reaction.

“Even after the crisis hit, it took Fannie and Freddie on the verge of melting down to get the authority to do what I wanted to do,” he said.

And while the effects of the federal $700 billion bank bailout of 2008 continue to reverberate through the economie downturn, the measures helped avoid catastrophe, Paulson argued. He noted that more than 90 percent of Americans — himself included — hated the Troubled Asset Relief Program, even though the money was paid back with interest. Conversely, only half that number opposed torture.

“I’m not a great communicator,” he said. “We had failure-of-communication issues. I was never successful in convincing the American people what we did was successful in preventing economic Armageddon.”

Though Bush was criticized for appearing to be disengaged, he was a quick study and willing to do what was needed, Paulson said.

“He certainly didn’t want to spend his last days in the office doing bailout. He believes in free market,” he said. “But he encouraged me to build bipartisan relations. He mothered me, told me to get exercise, straightened my tie. He was a great support.”

Mountain Rides to run commuter route itself

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Twin Falls commuters who’d like to take the bus to work in the Wood River Valley will have to wait a little longer.

Daily commuter service won’t be up and running until November at the earliest — a month later than Mountain Rides had hoped to provide it.

Mountain Rides, which already provides bus service in the Wood River Valley, is examining the feasibility of providing the longer commuter route itself after failing to get a private contractor to take on the job.

The bus company put the job out to bid to private contractors but received only one proposal. And that bid was way too high, said Mountain Rides Executive Director Jason Miller.

The contractor — Salt Lake Express — bid to do the job for $348,000. Mountain Rides had bud-getted $220,000.

“I would’ve hoped we would have had more submissions based on the initial interest we received. But the contract is too small for bigger companies and too big for smaller firms,” Miller said.

Mountain Rides does not have a bus suitable for the longer highway trips and will have to lease one if it does offer service.

The company has heard talk that some Wood River Valley residents have found work in the Magic Valley since the Great Recession started. But whether that’s true and whether those people would be interested in bus service can’t be answered without a sophisticated survey, Miller said.

Are there still enough Magic Valley commuters to justify bus transportation to the Wood River Valley?

“We still get a lot of calls, but it’s hard to tell,” Miller said. “I would imagine the demand is less than it was two years ago.”

Overland intersection closed tonight, Wednesday night in Burley

Times-News

The eastern half of the intersection of Overland Avenue and Fifth Street in Burley will be closed tonight and Wednesday night as crews complete intersection excavation work.

An Idaho Transportation Department release stated that the closures should last from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. each night. Fifth Street east of the intersection will be restricted to one lane Wednesday. Flaggers will control the intersection and all Fifth Street traffic east of Overland Avenue. Drivers are asked to seek alternate routes if possible, though the intersection will remain open to north-south traffic without interruption.

Knife River Corporation Northwest is the contractor for the $3.13 million Overland Avenue reconstruction, which is scheduled for completion by early October.

Constitution invoked often in GOP race

By Ben Evans
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Republican Rep. Paul Broun of Georgia won his seat in Congress campaigning as a strict defender of the Constitution. He carries a copy in his pocket and is particularly fond of invoking the Second Amendment right to bear arms.

But it turns out there are parts of the document he doesn't care for — lots of them. He wants to get rid of the language about birthright citizenship, federal income taxes and direct election of senators, among others. He would add plenty of stuff, including explicitly authorizing castration as punishment for child rapists.

This hot-and-cold take on the Constitution is surprisingly common within the GOP, particularly among those like Broun who portray themselves as strict Constitutionalists and who frequently accuse Democrats of twisting the document to serve political aims.

Republicans have proposed at least 42 Constitutional amendments in the current Congress, including one that has gained favor recently to eliminate the automatic grant of citizenship to anyone born in the United States.

Democrats — who typically take a more liberal view of the Constitution as an evolving document — have proposed 27 amendments, and fully one-third of those are part of a package from a single member, Rep. Jesse Jackson Jr., D-Ill. Jackson's package encapsulates a liberal agenda in which everyone has new rights to quality housing and education, but most of the Democratic proposals deal with less ideological issues such as congressional succession in a national disaster or voting rights in U.S. territories.

Rep. Paul Broun

The Republican proposals, by contrast, tend to be social and political statements, such as the growing movement to repeal the 14th Amendment's birthright citizenship. Republicans like Sen. Jeff Sessions of Alabama, the lead Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, argue that immigrants are abusing the right to gain citizenship for their children, something he says the amendment's authors didn't intend.

Sessions, who routinely accuses Democrats of trying to subvert the Constitution and calls for respecting the document's "plain language," is taking a different approach with the 14th Amendment. "I'm not sure exactly what the drafters of the amendment had in mind," he said, "but I doubt it was that somebody could fly in from Brazil and have a child and fly back home with that child, and that child is forever an American citizen."

Other widely supported Republican amendments would prohibit government ownership of private companies, bar same-sex marriage, require a two-thirds vote in Congress to raise taxes, and prohibit desecration of the American flag.

During the health care debate, Rep. Pete Hoekstra, R-Mich., introduced an amendment that would allow voters to directly repeal laws passed by Congress — a move that would radically alter the Founding Fathers' system of checks and balances.

Rep. Michele Bachmann, R-Minn., who founded a tea party caucus in Congress honoring the growing conservative movement that focuses on Constitutional governance, wants to restrict the president's ability to sign international treaties because she fears the Obama administration might replace the dollar with some sort of global currency.

Broun, who is among the most conservative members of Congress, said he sees no contradiction in his devotion to the Constitution and his desire to rewrite parts of it. He said the Founding Fathers never imagined the size and scope of today's federal government and that he's simply resurrecting their vision by trying to amend it.

"It's not picking and choosing," he said. "We need to do a lot of tweaking to make the Constitution as it was originally intended, instead of some perverse idea of what the Constitution says and does."

The problem with such a view, says constitutional law scholar Mark Kende, is that divining what the framers intended involves subjective judgments shaded with politics. Holding up the 2nd Amendment as sacrosanct, for example, while dismissing other parts of the Constitution is "cherry-picking," said Kende, director of Drake University's Constitutional Law Center.

Virginia Sloan, an attorney who directs the nonpartisan Constitution Project, agreed.

"There are a lot of people who obviously don't like income taxes. That's a political position," she said of criticism of the 16th Amendment, which authorized the modern federal income tax more than a century ago. "But it's in the Constitution ... and I don't think you can go around saying something is unconstitutional just because you don't like it."

Anxiety still rampant in Katrina kids, study indicates

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A startling number of Gulf coast area children displaced by Hurricane Katrina still have serious emotional or behavioral problems five years later, a new study found.

More than one in three children studied — those forced to flee their homes because of the August 2005 storm — have since been diagnosed with mental health problems. These are children who moved to trailer parks and other emergency housing.

Nearly half of families studied still report household instability, researchers said.

"If children are bellwethers of recovery, then the social systems supporting affected Gulf Coast populations are still far from having recovered from Hurricane Katrina," the researchers said.

The study was published online Monday in the journal Disaster Medicine and Public Health Preparedness.

Lead author David Abramson of Columbia University said researchers were astonished by the level of distress.

Children are "a bit of canary in a coal mine in that they really represent a failure or a dysfunction of many, many other systems in the community," said Abramson, who is with Columbia's National Center for Disaster Preparedness.

About 500,000 people, including more than 160,000 children, weren't able to return to their homes for at least three months after the storm hit on Aug. 29, 2005.

At least 20,000 of those children still have serious emotional disorders or behavior problems, or don't have a permanent home, the report suggests.

Obama's attempt to expand stem cell research temporarily blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Monday temporarily blocked Obama administration regulations expanding stem cell research.

The nonprofit group Nightlight Christian Adoptions contends that the government's new guidelines will decrease the number of human embryos available for adoption.

U.S. District Judge Royce Lamberth ruled that the plaintiffs are entitled to bring their lawsuit in the courts.

A federal appeals court had ruled that two doctors who were among those bringing the lawsuit, adult stem cell researchers James Sherley of the Boston Biomedical Research Institute and Theresa Deisher of AVM Biotechnology, had the authority to do so, prompting Lamberth to reverse a decision he made last October.

Lamberth said that the injury of increased competition that Sherley and Deisher would face because of the guidelines "is not speculative. It is actual and imminent. Indeed, the guidelines threaten the very livelihood of plaintiffs Sherley and Deisher."

Nightlight helps individuals adopt human embryos that are being stored in fertilization clinics. It began the program in 1997, using some of more than 400,000 frozen embryos.

Lamberth concluded that those filing the lawsuit have demonstrated a strong likelihood of success in arguing that the new government guidelines violate a law that prohibits the use of federal funds for research in which human embryos are destroyed.

It is in the public interest to block the government from implementing the guidelines because they allow federal funding of embryonic stem cell research, which involves the destruction of embryos, the judge said.

Stem cell research has the potential to produce breakthroughs in treating life-threatening diseases that have resisted traditional treatment.

"As demonstrated by the plain language of the statute, the unambiguous intent of Congress is to prohibit the expenditure of federal funds on 'research in which a human embryo or embryos are destroyed,'" Lamberth wrote.

"The question before the court is whether ESC research is research in which a human embryo is destroyed. The court concludes that it is," the judge added.

Vet who died in prison gets cemetery plot

DENVER (AP) — Some military veterans are angry that a World War II serviceman who died in prison after pleading guilty to killing his wife is scheduled to be buried Tuesday in Denver's Fort Logan National Cemetery.

Raymond R. Sawyer, a former Marine from Colorado, died Aug. 11 in a Tucson, Ariz., state prison while serving 13 years for second-degree murder.

His wife, Frances A. Sawyer, was found strangled in August 1981 in Glendale, Ariz., where the couple lived. The case remained unsolved for 26 years.

In 2007, sometime after Raymond Sawyer moved to the Denver suburb of Arvada, a cold-case investigator from Glendale went to Arvada to interview him in hopes of turning up new leads, Glendale police said.

During the interview, Sawyer "broke down" and made statements about the slaying that only the killer could have known, Glendale spokesman Matt Barnett said at the time.

Sawyer was arrested and taken to Arizona. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to prison in 2008.

Besides citing the slaying, Sawyer's critics also say he once falsely claimed to have received the Navy Cross, the military branch's second-highest medal for valor.

The only conviction that disqualifies veterans from burial in a national cemetery is a capital crime, according to federal law.

Ex-Marine convicted of killing colleague

GOLDSBORO — A jury on Monday convicted a former Marine of first-degree murder in the death of a pregnant colleague who had accused him of rape, a charge that stalled the military career he treasured.

Cesar Laurean, 23, of Las Vegas, was found guilty of killing Lance Cpl. Maria Lauterbach, 20, of Vandalia, Ohio, in December 2007. The two were assigned to the same logistics unit at Camp Lejeune, the base in Jacksonville that is home to about 50,000 Marines.

The former Marine corporal was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole.

The victim's mother, Mary Lauterbach, read a statement before the judge imposed the sentence. She told Laurean to look at his mother and see the pain in her face.

"I feel so sorry for your daughter. She will have to live with the shame that her father is in prison for murdering not one but two people," Mary Lauterbach said.

SeaWorld fined $75,000 for trainer's death

ORLANDO — The federal job safety agency fined SeaWorld Orlando $75,000 on Monday for three violations uncovered while investigating the February death of a trainer who was grabbed by a killer whale and dragged underwater.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration categorized the most serious violation as "willful," or showing indifference or intentional disregard for employee safety. That citation, carrying a $70,000 penalty, was for exposing workers to drowning hazards when interacting with killer whales.

The agency proposes not allowing trainers to have any physical contact with Tilikum, the killer whale responsible for trainer Dawn Brancheau's death in February, unless protected by a physical barrier.

The OSHA report described Tilikum as having "known aggressive tendencies."

VIRGINIA

3 dead, 4 wounded in shootout

LOUISA — A man who shot and killed his son and nephew and wounded four other relatives had been involved in an ongoing family dispute over a piece of property in rural central Virginia, authorities said Monday.

Sheriff's deputies had been called to the property nearly two dozen times in recent years — including once earlier in the day Sunday — before Charles P. Steadman Sponaugle, 52, opened fire on his family members, Louisa sheriff's Maj. Donnie Lowe said.

Sponaugle fired at two deputies and unleashed his pit bull at them before deputies fatally shot both Sponaugle and the dog, said Corinne Geller, a Virginia State Police spokeswoman.

Deputies had been called out to the property around 2 p.m. Sunday and a dispute was resolved. But they were called again around 4:45 p.m. when Sponaugle opened fire with a .22-caliber semiautomatic target pistol, Geller said.

MINNESOTA

Firm to pay $52.4M in bridge collapse

MINNEAPOLIS — After enduring countless surgeries and hours of court hearings, victims of the deadly 2007 Minneapolis Interstate 35W bridge collapse reached the end of their legal fight after an engineering firm agreed to pay $52.4 million to settle scores of lawsuits.

The settlement by San Francisco-based URS Corp. — agreed to more than a week ago but kept quiet until Monday — resolves the last major piece of litigation brought by victims. All told, the state and two of its contractors will have paid out $100 million to the families of the 13 people who died and the 145 people who were injured when the Mississippi River bridge broke apart during rush hour.

Idaho says Medicaid contractor to fix glitches

BOISE (AP) — State officials expect Idaho's new contractor for Medicaid billing to fix glitches, which have left providers unpaid, within the next 60 days, saying the health care company will avoid penalties for now.

More than a dozen problem areas need to be addressed by California-based Molina Healthcare, said Idaho Department of Health and Welfare Director Dick Armstrong in a joint news conference Monday with Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

Molina Healthcare took over Idaho's Medicaid payment system on July 1, just as the state enacted a three-week delay in Medicaid payments so the agency could balance its budget. Thousands of Idaho service providers expected to receive their payments beginning July 1, but the new billing system has not been working smoothly.

While the contract with Molina Healthcare gives the state the option of penalizing the company if it doesn't perform as expected, Armstrong and the governor said they are comfortable with the corrective actions being taken.

"We're not spending much time on that right now," Armstrong said. "Our effort is to get a stable system that's paying claims on a timely basis, because we can always go back and revisit those terms."

Health and Welfare officials met with Molina executives earlier this month to work out a solution.

The company has agreed to add 50 computer technicians to make sure the new software is set up correctly and 48 customer service specialists, which may encourage providers from around the state who have said the company doesn't have enough people to answer their questions and fix the problems. The state has identified 18 problem areas with the Medicaid billing system and some will take longer to fix than others, with the last expected to be resolved in late October, Armstrong said. The company has already taken action to correct some of the problems that resulted in a backlog of claims.

"There is strong evidence that new claims are now processing in a normal fashion," Armstrong said.

Dr. Mario Molina, president of Molina Healthcare, apologized to Idaho providers for the problems they've experienced since his company took over the payment system.

"I'm not here to make excuses," Molina said. "We're very committed to do what is necessary to fix the system."

Celebration to mark Aryan trial

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A celebration is planned for the 10th anniversary of the trial that bankrupted the Aryan Nations in northern Idaho.

The Kootenai County Task Force on Human Relations on Sept. 7 will mark the Sept. 7, 2000, day when a civil jury in Coeur d'Alene returned a verdict of $6.3 million against the white supremacist group after its guards attacked two people.

The verdict forced Aryan Nations founder Richard Butler to give up his compound and the group eventually withered away. Butler died a few years later. Other groups have cropped up around the country that use the name Aryan Nations.

The ceremony will be outside the Kootenai County Courthouse, near the downtown area where the Aryan Nations for years held public parades.

State judge to decide today in oversized load case

LEWISTON (AP) — A state judge will decide today if ConocoPhillips can ship four oversized loads of oil refinery equipment along a highway that traces a winding, federally protected river corridor in northern Idaho.

Last week, 2nd District Judge John Bradbury put a temporary halt on the oil company's plans to ship the massive coke drums along the 175-mile stretch of U.S. Highway 12.

During a hearing Monday, the attorney representing the plaintiffs who sued to block the shipments claimed the Idaho Department of Transportation failed to consider a wide range of issues in approving permits for the oversized loads, the Lewiston Tribune reported.

Plaintiff attorney Natalie

Havlina told the judge that agency officials narrowly focused their review on potential damage to roads and bridges but failed to adequately consider other factors, such as public safety and convenience, as required by state code.

The agency "has abandoned its responsibility to protect the public's health," Havlina, an attorney for the Boise-based Advocates for the West, told the judge in a courtroom packed with opponents of the shipments.

But attorneys for the state and oil company disagreed. The agency suggested numerous changes in the company's travel plans, resulting in a 700-page document that lays out the ground rules for the shipments, they said.

"Two years of negotiations helped us create a plan that was in the public's best interest," agency attorney Tim Thomas told the judge.

Bradbury said he would decide today whether to extend the ban or clear the way for the trucks to roll along the highway that snakes the Clearwater and Lochsa rivers and was once explored by Lewis and Clark.

Rescuers expand lifeline to trapped miners

Doctors, psychiatric experts gear up for four-month ordeal

COPIAPO, Chile (AP) — Engineers reinforced a lifeline Monday to 33 miners entombed deep inside a Chilean gold and copper mine, preparing to keep them supplied with food, water, medicine and communications during the four months it may take to carve a tunnel wide enough to pull them out.

A team of doctors and psychiatric experts also arrived Monday at the remote mine, implementing a plan to maintain the miners' sanity as well.

"We need to urgently establish what psychological situation they are in. They need to understand what we know up here at the surface, that it will take many weeks for them to reach the light," Health Minister Jaime Manalich explained.

Engineers worked through the night to reinforce the six-inch-wide bore-hole that broke through to the miners' refuge on Sunday, more than 2,257 feet below the surface. Using a long hose, they coated the walls with a metallic gel to decrease the risk of more rock falls in the unstable mine and make it easier to pass material in capsules nicknamed "palomas," or doves.

The first capsules — which take about an hour to descend from the surface — will include water and food in the form of a high-energy glucose gel to miners who have almost certainly lost significant weight since they were trapped with limited food supplies on Aug. 5.

Also being sent down are questionnaires to determine each miners' condition, along with medicines and small microphones to enable them to speak with their families during their long wait. Rescue leader Andre Sougarret said the communications equipment could begin working within hours, and that officials were organizing the families into small groups to make their talks as orderly as possible.

An enormous machine with diamond-tipped drills capable of carving a person-sized tunnel through solid rock at a velocity of 20 yards a day was on its way Monday to the San Jose gold and copper mine outside Copiapo in north-central Chile.

Engineers also were boring two more narrow shafts to the trapped men to ensure that their lifelines would remain intact while the larger tunnel is being carved.

It will be important for the men's well-being to keep them busy and well-supported throughout this ordeal, Manalich said.

"There has to be leadership established, and to support them and prepare them for what's coming, which is no small thing," he said.

Hostages freed by terror group

OUAGADOUGOU, Burkina Faso (AP) — Two Spanish aid workers kidnapped almost nine months ago by an al-Qaida affiliate were freed Monday in Mali after a multi-million-dollar ransom was reportedly paid — a sign of the terrorist group's growing sophistication in bankrolling operations through kidnappings, experts said Monday.

Aid workers Roque Pascual and Albert Vilalta were abducted last November when their convoy of 4-by-4s was attacked by gunmen on a stretch of road in Mauritania. They were whisked away to Mali, whose northern half is now one of the many stretches of remote desert where al-Qaida of Islamic Maghreb, or AQIM, has stretched its tentacles.

Afghanistan security force more than a year away

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior U.S. commander on Monday wouldn't predict when Afghanistan might take control of its own security and warned that NATO needs at least another year to recruit and train enough soldiers and police officers.

The assessment by Lt. Gen. Bill Caldwell, the head of NATO's training mission in Afghanistan, further dims U.S. hopes that the planned U.S. withdrawal next year will be significant in size.

President Barack Obama has said that troops will begin pulling out in July 2011, the size and pace of withdrawal depending on security conditions. Defense officials, including Defense Secretary Robert Gates, have said they believe next summer's pull-out would be modest.

In a Pentagon briefing, Caldwell told reporters that Afghan army and police forces won't reach sufficient numbers until Oct. 31, 2011 — three months after Obama's deadline to start U.S. withdrawals.

NATO has set the goal of creating an Afghan military and police force of 305,600

TROOPS KILLED

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Attacks by insurgents killed five foreign troops in Afghanistan on Monday, including two Americans, two French marines and a Hungarian soldier. The attacks came in the north, south and east of the war-torn country, the military alliance said. No additional information was given about the American casualties.

personnel — 171,600 army and 134,000 police.

There are currently 249,500 personnel — 134,000 army and 115,500 police.

But Caldwell predicted that desertion and injury rates are so high among Afghan forces that NATO will have to recruit and train 141,000 people to ensure it has the 56,000 additional personnel needed next fall.

Caldwell said there was no accurate estimate on when Kabul might take control of even the more peaceful parts of the country.

Garth Willard Atwood

VERNAL, UTAH — Garth Willard Atwood, passed away Aug. 23 in Ogden, Utah. after an extensive battle with bone and prostate cancer. He was born June 18, 1922, in Vernal, Utah, to Ivan Willard and Marie Hall Atwood.

Being the oldest child, Garth learned at a very young age to harness and drive a team of horses to do all of the farm work. By age 11 he was driving a 10 ton truck with 12 speeds forward, 7 in reverse and 3 gear shifts. Lessons learned on the 880 acre ranch they homesteaded on Diamond Mountain, near Vernal, gave him a work ethic that was a great blessing throughout his life.

He married the love of his life, Marjorie Lee Thurman, in the Salt Lake City LDS Temple, Aug. 3, 1943. The first few years of their marriage, he worked at JC Penney in Salem, Ore. He then served a stint in the Army's field artillery during World War II. Atwood went on to graduate from Western States Chiropractic School and School of Naturopathy, and then practiced in Baker, Ore., for awhile. He started his own practice in Buhl, Idaho, in 1950.

People came from far and wide to be treated by Dr. Atwood, who genuinely loved helping his patients, many times providing his healing services at his own expense. In addition to his chiropractic practice, he farmed 80 acres at Black Bear corner in Buhl; raised and trained Arabian, Appaloosa and American Show horses.

Garth loved hunting, fishing, snowmobiling and camping, and swam a mile every day with his family at Banbury Hot Springs near Buhl. He was an avid private pilot, owning many different airplanes during his life while flying to all parts of our great country. Mountain and back-country flying was his passion.

Together, Dr. and Mrs. Atwood worked hard serving their community as active members the Jaycees, Kiwanis, PTA, Chamber of Commerce, Grange, and in establishing the College of Southern Idaho, when it was located in Buhl. Additionally, Atwood also served in his profession "going up the chairs;" and as the president of both the State and National Chiropractic Associations. In 1978, he moved his practice to Preston and then Mink Creek, Idaho, when he entered semi-retirement.

Dr. Atwood served as a Bishop in the LDS Church, served a full-time mission in Texas with Marge, and loved to work in various temples of the Church. Marge passed away in August of 1999. Garth then married Ida Frodsham of Burley, Idaho. Later, in 2008, he married Doris Stock of Ogden, Utah, who loving stood by his side through these trying times.

Garth is survived by his five children, Linda (Diamond) Loosli of Syracuse, Utah, Betty Jo (Dale) Quigley of Twin Falls, Idaho, Beverly (Dr. Trent) Harrison of Taylorsville, Utah, Mary Sue (Steve) Crookston of Preston, Idaho, and John (Susan) Atwood of Bristol, Virginia; along with 27 grandchildren and 79 great-grandchildren. He is also survived by his siblings, Ella (Arvel) Allred of Vernal, Utah, Marvel (Dick) Kearsley of Ogden, Utah, Alice (Lee) Mecham of Redding, Calif., and Charles (Linda) Atwood of Tillamook, Ore.

Family and friends are invited to celebrate Garth's life on Saturday, Aug. 28, viewing from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., service at 10:30 a.m. to be held in the Jensen Park LDS Chapel located at 3024 S. 1200 W. in Syracuse, Utah. He will be laid to rest at 5 p.m. after grave-side services in the Rock Creek Cemetery located in Vernal, Utah. Services under the direction of Myers Mortuary of Layton, Utah.

'Howdy Doody Show' writer Edward Kean dies at 85

WEST BLOOMFIELD TOWNSHIP, Mich. (AP) — Edward Kean, primary writer of the "Howdy Doody Show" and who is credited with creating the exclamation, "kowabunga," has died at the age of 85, family friend Del Reddy said.

Kean also penned the theme song to which millions of American children sang along each week during the show's run on NBC from 1947 to 1960.

Kean died Aug. 13 at a nursing care facility in the Detroit suburb of West Bloomfield Township from complications of emphysema, Reddy said.

The New York City native wrote the song "It's Howdy Doody Time," which was sung during the show's opening. He had a major role in developing the characters and their personalities, and created the exclamation, "kowabunga," made popular by one of the show's characters and borrowed by Bart Simpson, the animated problem child on the long-running comedy "The Simpsons."

"He influenced a whole generation of kids through his writing," Reddy said. "He was a prolific writer. He would take his typewriter, even on the road."

As for the freckled-face title character, Howdy Doody took on some of Kean's character traits.

"He created Howdy, kind of in his image, from his background and how he treated people," Reddy said.

Kean's run as writer for the show ended in 1954.

Obledo, Latino civil rights pioneer dies at 78

By Emma Brown
The Washington Post

Mario Obledo, a son of poor Mexican immigrants who became a prominent civil rights activist and the first Latino to head a California state agency, died Wednesday at his home in Sacramento after a heart attack. He was 78.

Obledo, one of 12 children raised by a single mother in San Antonio, Texas, has been called the godfather of the Latino civil rights movement for his efforts to raise Latinos' profile as a political force.

A lawyer by trade, he co-founded the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund in the late 1960s and served as its first general counsel, using the courts to fight discrimination against Latinos in the workplace, in public schools and elsewhere.

He also co-founded the Hispanic National Bar Association and the National Coalition of Hispanic Organizations, and he played an early leadership role with the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project, which works to boost the number of Latino voters.

In 1975, he was tapped by California Gov. Edmund "Jerry" Brown to head the sprawling Health and Welfare Agency, overseeing more than 50,000 employees and an annual budget exceeding $11 billion. During his tenure, Obledo fought allegations that he was tied to the Mexican Mafia and stirred controversy with his unapologetic efforts to hire more minorities into state government.

He served until 1982, when he resigned to run unsuccessfully for governor.

In the mid-1980s, he served as president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, the nation's largest and oldest Hispanic American organization. He was outspoken on issues including immigration reform and bilingual education, and he refused to accept what he considered the scant attention mainstream political candidates gave Latino voters.

At the 1984 Democratic National Convention, he urged Latino delegates to boycott voting on the first ballot to reprimand the presumed presidential nominee, former Vice President Walter Mondale, for ignoring issues important to them. Asked whether sending that message to Mondale was more important than defeating President Ronald Reagan, Obledo replied: "I'm a Democrat and I love my party. But I love my community more."

Obledo served as chairman from 1988 to 1993 of the National Rainbow Coalition, the left-leaning organization founded by Jesse Jackson after his 1984 presidential bid. Then Obledo largely faded from view until 1998, when President Bill Clinton awarded him the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

Where were the grown-ups at Nampa Classical Academy?

The State Board of Education voted last week, for the first time, to close a public charter school. That process was excruciating. The Nampa Classical Academy fouled up in about every way a charter school can under state law, but the vote to close the school only passed 4-3 — with Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna and the board’s two other Treasure Valley board members, Milford Terrell and Rod Lewis, dissenting. To their credit, the other four state board members — Ken Edmunds of Twin Falls, Richard Westerberg of Preston, Don Soltman of Twin Lakes and Emma Atchley of Ashton — stuck to their guns and closed the Nampa Classical Academy. In so doing, they may have saved Idaho charter schools in the long run. That’s because the 12-year-old charter school experience in Idaho has proceeded with much less rigor than it should have. There are 36 of them now — four of them virtual charter schools — and most provide a high-quality education experience. But not all of them. In Nampa Classical Academy’s case:

- It allowed founder and former operations director Isaac Moffett to whipsaw NCA’s board of trustees into disastrous decisions, all the while carrying on a running feud with the trustees and staff.
- The school overestimated how much start-up money it would receive by $75,000.
- An apparent typographical error in the school’s proposed budget listed money for leasing portables for next school year at $3,500 when the number for this school year is $350,000.
- NCA’s budget reported $50,000 in public donations, when the school hadn’t raised any.

Where, it must be asked, was the oversight? Enthusiasm over alternative education isn’t enough. Somebody — probably the state Charter School Commission — needs to take a harder look at who’s running charter schools and what their plans are. And frankly, somebody needs to recognize the red flags.

Two months before the Nampa charter opened in September 2009, Moffett told the Boise Weekly:

- NCA would gloss over some of the flaws in American history and impart the “good of America, the good of Western civilization.”
- It wouldn’t judge earlier epochs — including slavery — by modern values
- It would use the Bible in class for its literary value. Attorney General Lawrence Wasden subsequently told the school that was against the law.

And once it opened, the school’s financial management was somewhere between fanciful and negligent. There needs to be a more thorough vetting process before the state approves a new charter school, including:

- Do the administrators and the board have any financial management experience?
- Do they have a business plan?
- Are they in the public education business or the religious education business?
- Is the curriculum academically credible?
- Are those who teach it qualified, or are they present because they embrace the school’s ideological agenda?

There are some excellent charter schools in Idaho; Nampa Classical wasn’t one of them. Many of the problems were apparent before the school opened, so why didn’t the system detect them before it was too late?

It’s your taxpayer dollars at stake. They need to be better spent.

Repeal of 14th Amendment is un-American

The call by some conservative lawmakers to repeal the 14th Amendment represents the worst of America. At a time of economic hardship when we should be uniting people and making them whole, such an idea will only serve to sow the seeds of hate and division.

David A. Love

Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., — who does not think that the children of undocumented immigrants should automatically become citizens — has proposed a piece of legislation to begin repealing the amendment. And Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., has called for hearings into the matter. Adopted on July 9, 1868, and championed by the so-called “Radical Republicans” in Congress, the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution grants citizenship as a birthright. The citizenship clause states: “All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.” This clause was important because it thwarted attempts by Southern states to deny citizenships to former slaves. But little of these details on the history or the importance of the 14th Amendment mean much to those who would repeal it. Rather, they only seem to care about scoring political points. And while they could develop positive solutions in the area of immigration reform, they choose to divide people along lines of color, race, ethnicity, class, language and national origin. In the current economic recession, people are in despair and are looking for scapegoats. People blame immigrants — particularly Latinos and undocumented workers — for losing their jobs and livelihoods. Patriot and militia groups patrol the border and harass and threaten Latinos. And while hate groups and the tea party movement exploit these insecurities, some unscrupulous lawmakers are trying to codify this hatred. This is such a bad idea that even Lou Dobbs disagrees with it. “I part ways with the senators on that because I believe the 14th Amendment, particularly in its due process and equal protection clauses, is so important,” Dobbs said. “It lays the foundation for the entire Bill of Rights being applied to the states.” Giving away the 14th Amendment is giving up on America. Citizenship should remain a birthright in this nation of immigrants. But that right was a secured only by fighting a bloody Civil War and overcoming a brutal legacy of slavery. Sadly, some people want us to turn the clock back to the antebellum days.

David Love is executive editor of Black-Commentator.com. He wrote this commentary for McClatchy-Tribune News

“I part ways with the senators on that because I believe the 14th Amendment, particularly in its due process and equal protection clauses, is so important. It lays the foundation for the entire Bill of Rights being applied to the states.”

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Disputing information about President Obama and the Boy Scouts

One recent letter to the editor wrongly and wildly claimed President Obama (a) refused to accept the honorary presidency of the Boy Scouts of America, (b) has refused to sign Eagle Scout certificates and (c) refused to sign Scout lifesaving certificates. These spurious claims have been repeatedly debunked as deliberate smears. First, the president accepted the honorary presidency during an Oval Office meeting on March 3, 2009, when offered by seven Scouts representing 5 million other Scouts. Second, President Obama has sent 13,000 letters of congratulation to individual Eagle Scouts in addition to signing their certificates, along with the president of the Boy Scouts of America, the BSA national commander and chief Scout executive. Third, the U.S. president does not sign lifesaving certificates, only BSA executives. Still waiting for economic recovery

Response to Ken White’s comments about the Republican Party posted in the Aug. 14 Times-News: It was amusing to read Mr. White’s assertions about the supposed ineptness of John McCain and Sarah Palin if they were now in power instead of team Obama. It is especially laughable when you consider that the daily decisions made by President Obama, Vice President Biden and Speaker Pelosi, decisions that affect all of us, fall somewhere between Let’s Make a Deal and The Gong Show. The part that isn’t funny about all this is the consequences of their decisions are killing American jobs and ruining the American economy. After 19 months in office, blaming Bush and the Republican Party won’t fly any more. President Obama owns this economic mess because both houses of Congress, controlled by the Democratic Party, have given the president everything he’s asked for and look where it’s taken our nation. Vice President Biden, never one to be concerned with the facts, seems to be just fine with this situation and has characterized it as “The summer of recovery.” Some recovery, indeed. Now President Obama and his “bailout-minded” buddies are handing over $26 billion to bankrupt liberal states in order to buy votes for the mid-term elections. These failed and corrupt state governments have provided a template for President Obama by which he hopes to apply to the federal government so he can bankrupt it also. No one should be surprised by our president’s failure to lead and inspire this great nation and to put in place a business climate that leads to job creation and economic recovery. Community organizing, teleprompter reading and blaming Bush are not in the areas of expertise necessary to oversee America’s economy. While president Obama enjoys yet another lavish vacation, another round of golf and shooting hoops with all his friends, millions of jobless Americans are hurting as never before and are losing hope with each passing day. Like a little boy lost in a great forest, our inexperienced president has no idea which way to turn. His only response is to keep spending more money we don’t have. Happy summer of recovery. LERROY UHRICH Paul

Not so easy to divorce Fannie and Freddie

WASHINGTON — The question of what to do about Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac — the two government-created enterprises that have backed massive loans to the housing market — involves much more than finance or real estate. It marks the end of an era. The relentless promotion of homeownership as the embodiment of the American Dream has out-lived its usefulness.

Historically, the pursuit of homeownership dates to the Great Depression of the 1930s, notes historian A. Scott Henderson of Furman University. In some ways, it's a great success story. In 1940, 44 percent of households owned a home; by 1985, the rate was 64 percent. The size and quality of homes have increased dramatically. Owning a home contributes to neighborhood stability and encourages property improvement.

But unfortunately, we let a sensible goal become a foolish fetish. Not everyone can become a homeowner. Some are too young and footloose; some are too old and dependent; some are too poor or irresponsible. Some don't want a home. Even with these gaps, homeownership is virtually universal among the middle-aged middle class: Almost three-quarters of Americans aged 45 to 54 and four-fifths aged 55 to 64.

Government subsidizes homeownership in two ways: through tax and spending policies; and through credit markets. Tax breaks for homeowners (mainly the deductions for mortgage interest and property taxes, plus preferential treatment of capital gains on homes) exceeded $120 billion in 2009, reports the Congressional Budget Office. These benefits go heavily to higher-income borrowers, who are encouraged to buy bigger and more expensive homes that generate larger tax savings. This is both unfair and unnecessary. By contrast, government subsidies for lower-income renters are skimpier, totaling about 25 percent of the support for homeowners.

The cheap credit subsidy operates mainly through Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. These Government-Sponsored Enterprises were economic mongrels: profit-making companies that were given goals of expanding homeownership among poorer buyers. The GSEs could borrow at interest rates barely above the U.S. Treasury's, because investors regarded Fannie and Freddie bonds as backed by the government.

It seemed a perfect marriage: the GSEs would do well by doing good. They'd earn profits and pass along the benefits of cheaper credit by financing or guaranteeing mortgage loans. Congress could promote homeownership outside budget constraints. By 2009, Fannie and Freddie had lent or guaranteed almost $5.5 trillion in home mortgages, roughly half of the U.S. total. But the marriage between private profit and public purpose failed. In September 2008, the Bush administration took over Fannie and Freddie, which faced huge losses from bad mortgages.

There's a ferocious debate as to whether these losses stemmed from unrealistic

"housing affordability goals" or lax lending in pursuit of higher profits. The correct answer is: probably both. Regardless, the GSE bailouts have cost almost $150 billion, with more to come.

In an ideal world, we would discard failed policies. We would trim or end the mortgage-interest tax deduction. We would curtail the GSEs' loans and guarantees (the promise to repay mortgages that default). The consequences need not be dire. The homeownership rate, already down to 67 percent from its 2004-06 peak of 69 percent, would probably stabilize in the mid-60s. People would save more for down payments. Mortgage rates might rise a bit.

The trouble is that the ideal solution may be temporarily undesirable. The housing market, as everyone knows, has collapsed. New home starts are running at about a quarter of 2005's rate of 2.1 million. Sales of existing homes, though up slightly this year, remain weak. Home prices have dropped sharply.

The irony is that, in failure, the GSEs have become more important than ever.

Private lenders, which once regarded a mortgage secured by a home as a highly safe investment, now see it as highly risky. Few new mortgages are made without government guarantees. The GSEs continue to operate and, along with other government agencies, guaranteed about 95 percent of new mortgages made in 2009, reports Inside Mortgage Finance, an industry newsletter. Since 1990, the government guarantee share had fluctuated between 30 percent and 50 percent.

What this means is that sudden withdrawals of support might deepen housing's depression. Economists Phillip Swagel of Georgetown University and Donald Marron of the Tax Policy Center, among others, have made sensible proposals to scale back Fannie and Freddie. But done too quickly, they could backfire.

"This is not a good time to make permanent solutions for housing," says Guy Cecala, publisher of Inside Mortgage Finance. The single-minded promotion of homeownership failed and, paradoxically, undermined the American Dream. It contributed to the housing "bubble" and favors housing investment over new industries and technologies. But to end it, we need to make haste slowly.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Democrat candidates have solutions for education crisis

The education system in Idaho is in serious trouble. I am disgusted by the recent cuts toward education that the governor and the Idaho Republican Legislature have put on the children of our great state.

Public schools in the state of Idaho will be receiving a staggering 7.5 percent cut in public education for the next fiscal year. Many teachers will be receiving significant cuts to their salaries, potentially chasing away even more great educators into other states. Republicans blame these education cuts on the current economic crisis. However, this country has gone through a number of recessions and education has never been cut in our state's history.

These officials have abused their power by not considering other options that legislators like Democratic Rep. Shirley Ringo has proposed and by not offering any real solutions to this disaster. It is in the best interest of our children, grandchildren and the future of Idaho to elect candidates who are in touch with their constituents. We, as Idahoans, should not put up with the short- and long-term damage that these elected officials have put on our state.

This November, we have a choice. We can either reelect the careless, out-of-touch incumbents or hire candidates who understand the needs of our children. In Jerome and Minidoka counties, Scott McClure and Cindy Shotswell, candidates for the Idaho state Legislature, are offering real solutions to our education crisis. Statewide, we need to elect Keith Allred for governor and Stan Olson for Idaho state superintendent.

These candidates will fight to improve the education crisis that Idahoans have been and will be seeing in this next fiscal year.

The case for privatizing college football

The Church of College Football is about to open for services. It is perhaps the most passionate religion we have in this country, a seductive blend of our most popular sport and the romantic notion that the young athletes are playing for their schools, not for money.

Two BCS championship coaches recently launched attacks on sports agents for allegedly defiling this house of worship by giving college players what the National Collegiate Athletic Association calls "impermissible benefits" — benefits that make those players pros and not amateurs.

"The agents that do this, and I hate to say this, but how are they any better than a pimp?" Alabama's Nick Saban so memorably put it last month. "I have no respect for people who do that to young people. None."

Yet I suspect that virtually everyone in our industry shed our naivete long ago. We know that the sole focus for many star college players is getting ready for pro ball, that coaches are looking for financial security on the backs of teen-agers and that boosters enjoy the ego stroke that comes with virtually owning a piece of a team. There's nothing inherently wrong with these goals, but there's nothing "amateur" about the process.

College football players are getting paid. It's a straightforward business transaction: You play for us, we give you a one-year scholarship, renewable at the head coach's discretion. In some cases, rules are broken by schools or other parties so that relatives and other associates of the players can be paid, too.

The primary culprit is the NCAA's legislated view of amateurism. It lacks intellectual integrity and is terribly unnecessary.

What needs to change is the entire attitude toward college football. A big business deserves market-driven reform, absent of hypocrisy. Here are 10 steps to accomplish that.

1. All of the major football-playing universities should lease the rights to operate a commercial football program on behalf of the university to an independent, outside company. For example, the University of Southern California would contract with USC Football Inc. Such leases would be open to bidding. USC football could look exactly as it does now, except USC Football Inc. would have paid for the right to operate it. The university and the company would share net profits from all revenue streams at a negotiated level.

2. Each university's football corporation could create leagues, whether long- or short-term, with other corporations. There wouldn't have to be any allegiance to geography, fan loyalties or tradition. For example, some of these leagues could be premised on budget size. To a large degree, this is already being done; it's called the BCS.

3. All players would be paid a salary, whatever the market would bear. Players would no longer receive scholarships. Just as in the pros, they would be paid based on their perceived value to their program. If an outstanding high school player is coveted, he should be allowed to experience the fruits of American capitalism.

4. The corporations could offer a range of educational opportunities. Academically gifted players could take regular university courses, if they could have gained admission on their own merit. Others may be more interested in vocational training or other specialty classes.

5. The NCAA can be eliminated. Many of its rules are archaic and frankly gibberish. The NCAA itself states that it does not have subpoena power, which is one way of admitting that enforcement of its rules is difficult.

6. Universities could scrap much of their athletic administrations, just as Vanderbilt University has done. The chief executive of USC Football Inc. would make decisions, and her mandate would be to ensure that the operation was self-sufficient — no student fees would be used to subsidize the football program or facilities. Any profits flowing back to the university could go directly to support the general student body and faculty.

7. Congress and state legislatures wouldn't have to waste time investigating or discussing the regulation of college football. So long as these new corporations mind the same business laws that apply to Apple or General Electric, our representatives could devote their energies elsewhere.

8. Coaches could focus strictly on coaching. They would be employees of the corporation, not the university.

9. Universities could focus on their core mission of educating students. University presidents wouldn't have to waste their time monitoring a football program.

10. Finally, this system would end the tiresome sports media discussions of whether this player or that player was paid. We could say without any hint of sarcasm, speculation or cynicism that yes, he was.

Lawmakers rebuked in Mont. over health care

LIBBY, Mont. (AP) — Instead of saying thanks, some residents rebuked Health Secretary Kathleen Sebelius and Sen. Max Baucus on Monday for the law that could help potentially thousands of asbestos victims here.

The health care reform law passed last year expands Medicare coverage for the sick residents of Libby, where years of asbestos pollution from a vermiculite mine made this the nation's deadliest Superfund site.

About 400 Libby residents have signed up for the new coverage as of this week, Sebelius said.

But many of those from this northwestern Montana town of 3,000 who came to listen to the town hall meeting appeared to be less concerned about how the new law helps those with asbestos illnesses than with the legislation itself.

One woman asked Baucus where it says in the Constitution that people should be required to purchase health care. Another, retired nurse Judy Mattot, demanded to know whether Sebelius and Baucus had read the entire bill.

"How can you pass something that you don't know what's in it?" Mattot said.

The questions seemed to put Baucus off guard. The Montana Democrat who played an instrumental role in the bill's passage said the new law was not perfect but it's a good start in getting rid of waste in the health care industry.

Increasingly, online rants proving costly

By David G. Savage
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Internet has allowed tens of millions of Americans to be published writers. But it also has led to a surge in lawsuits from those who say they were hurt, defamed or threatened by what they read, according to groups that track media lawsuits.

"It was probably inevitable, but we have seen a steady growth in litigation over content on the Internet," said Sandra Baron, executive director of the Media Law Resource Center in New York.

Although bloggers may have a free-speech right to say what they want online, courts have found that they are not protected from being sued for their comments, even if they are posted anonymously.

Some postings have even led to criminal charges.

Hal Turner, a right-wing blogger from New Jersey, faces up to 10 years in prison for posting a comment that three Chicago judges "deserve to be killed" for having rejected a Second Amendment challenge to the city's handgun ban in 2009.

Turner, who also ran his own Web-based radio show, thought it "was political trash talk," his lawyer said. But this month a jury in Brooklyn, N.Y., convicted him of threatening the lives of the judges on the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals.

In western Pennsylvania, a judge recently ruled a community website must identify the Internet address of individuals who posted comments calling a town-ship official a "jerk" who put money from the taxpayers in "his pocket." The official also owned a used car dealership, and one commenter called his cars "junk." The official sued for defamation, saying the comments were false and damaged his reputation.

In April, a North Carolina county official won a similar ruling after some anonymous bloggers on a local website called him a slumlord.

"Most people have no idea of the liability they face when they publish something online," said Eric Goldman, who teaches Internet law at Santa Clara University.

"A whole new generation can publish now, but they don't understand the legal dangers they could face. People are shocked to learn they can be sued for posting something that says, 'My dentist stinks!'"

Under federal law, websites generally are not liable for comments posted by outsiders. They can, however, be forced to reveal the poster's identity if the post includes false information presented as fact.

Calling someone a "jerk" and a "buffoon" may be safe from a lawsuit because it states an opinion. Saying he wrongly "pocketed" public money could lead to a defamation claim because it asserts something as a fact.

"A lot of people don't know how easy it is to track them down" once a lawsuit is filed, said Sara J. Rose, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer in Pittsburgh.

The Supreme Court has said that the First Amendment's protection for the freedom of speech includes the right to publish "anonymous" pamphlets. But recently, judges have been saying that online speakers do not always have a right to remain anonymous.

Last month, the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a Nevada judge's order requiring the disclosure of the identity of three people accused of conducting an "Internet smear campaign via anonymous postings" against Quixtar, the successor to the well-known Amway Corp.

"The right to speak, whether anonymously or otherwise, is not unlimited," wrote Judge Margaret McKeown.

Quixtar had sued, contending the postings were damaging to its business. The judge who first ordered the disclosure said the Internet had "great potential for irresponsible, malicious and harmful communication." Moreover, the "speed and power of Internet technology makes it difficult for the truth to 'catch up to the lie,'" he wrote.

Media law experts say lawsuits over Internet postings are hard to track because many of them arise from local disputes. They rarely result in large verdicts or lengthy appeals to high courts.

Green beans from home

Victor and Maria Luisa Otazua pose in their Twin Falls garden this summer. The couple's gardening hobby helps the Otazuas maintain their ties to the farms they grew up on in The Basque Country and worked on before retirement.

Basque couple's beans are flatter, longer, sweeter than American counterparts

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

If you go to Victor and Maria Luisa Otazua's Twin Falls home, be prepared for a hug.

Maria Luisa will greet you at the door, take your arm and apologize for how disorderly her house is and how bad her English is. Don't believe her — the living area is immaculate and her accent is thick but understandable.

As you walk to the backyard, she and Victor will comment on how sparse their neatly planted garden is. Again, they're being humble. Hearty green beans climb up trellises and reach toward the sky. Large red potatoes peek out from the soil.

Gardening doesn't just fill their pantry and bellies. The hobby helps the Otazuas maintain their ties to the farms they grew up on in The Basque Country and worked on before retirement.

Victor and Maria Luisa grew up on neighboring farms in Morga, Biscay, Spain. The two knew each other as children, and Maria Luisa's sister married Victor's brother. Victor moved from The Basque Country to Rupert in 1952 when he was 18 years old. He married Maria Luisa on a trip back to Spain in 1962, then returned to Twin Falls and left his pregnant wife in Morga.

Victor didn't meet his son, Victor Jr., until his next trip to Spain when the boy was 3 years old. The family reunited in 1969 when Victor Victor Otazua holds up a Walla Walla onion from his garden.

Jr. was 5. Maria Luisa slowly learned English and adjusted to life an ocean away from her home.

After 43 years with Breckenridge Farms, Victor retired. Victor Jr. now lives in Boise with his wife and son, Cruz Victor. ("Lots of Victors," Maria Luisa said.) Victor and Maria Luisa visited Boise this summer to attend Jaialdi, a Basque cultural festival that occurs once every five years.

The occasional festivals and the Basque section of downtown Boise aren't their only link to home. In the garden, Maria Luisa and Victor grow a variety of green beans they picked up during a trip to Spain. The green beans are flatter, longer and sweeter than the American beans they also grow. Maria Luisa cooks them in olive oil with potatoes and garlic.

Across the garden are peppers that Maria Luisa stuffs with vegetables. This year, though, because of the cold spring, that might not be an option.

"I don't know, honey," she said regretfully. "They are not doing too great this year."

But most of the garden still flourishes. Cucumbers, zucchini, radishes, Swiss chard and carrots add color to their small backyard. The garden isn't as big as their former house's plot, but it's enough for the two.

Life is a lot slower now that the couple lives alone and no longer works. But Victor hasn't lost his connection with the land and the trade that sustained his family in both Spain and America.

"At least I keep a garden in the yard," he said.

A LITTLE POLLEN, A LOT OF LOVE

Gardeners save seed for biodiversity, posterity

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Homebrewed root beer and organic potatoes set the scene for the audience of gardeners and small market farmers who gathered at the Local Dish last week. At the front of the room, former Ketchum resident Bill McDorman pointed to his PowerPoint presentation and shared his passion for seed saving.

The message was simple: Industrialized agriculture and the privatization of seed supplies has reduced plant diversity and taken power out of growers' hands. But a small group of seed savers is hoping to reverse the tide and preserve what is left of the thousands of cultivated food varieties that fed the world a century ago.

McDorman and his wife, Belle Starr, traveled from Cornsville, Ariz., to lecture about seed saving in Twin Falls and Ketchum. Local Dish owner James Reed invited McDorman, founder of Arizona's Seed Trust, to speak at his store and cafe about biodiversity and seed saving.

Much biodiversity has been lost over the past century as farmers began monocropping, or planting

SEED SAVING AND STORING 101

- Seeds like to be stored in cool, dry, dark places. In the right conditions, they can be saved for decades, Bill McDorman said.
- With their self-pollinating flowers and low chance of cross pollination, beans and peas are among the easiest to save. Wait for the pods to dry brown before harvesting.
- If you're concerned about plant purity, pay close attention to what is planted where. Some plants, like broccoli, cabbage and kale, have a high risk of cross pollination and need to be separated from other varieties by at least 1,000 feet for satisfactory results, or one mile apart for purity. Corn pollen is very fine and can carry on the wind.
- Whether playing with hybrids or saving heirlooms, keep only the seeds of the plants with the traits you want. Plant half of them, even if it means sowing just two seeds. The saved seeds will ensure you don't lose your work if something goes wrong.

ONE WEEK REMAINS IN OUR 'GREAT GAZEBOS' CONTEST

Does your backyard gem have what it takes to win the Times-News' "Great Gazebos" contest? There's only one way to find out.

In this entirely subjective contest, we'll award points for cool design and up-to-date maintenance; the use of distinctive materials; and a complementary landscape setting for the gazebo. While models built by pros are eligible, too, do-it-yourself construction will give a gazebo an edge in this contest. And we'll be most impressed by a gazebo owner who actually uses the thing — for al fresco breakfasts, for example, or for sunset watching.

You can nominate gazebos at homes in Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka or Twin Falls counties by sending an e-mail to melissa.davlin@lee.net with "Gazebo" in the subject line.

Include a small photo of the gazebo, a description and location, your name and contact information and — if you're nominating someone else's gazebo — the homeowner's name and contact information.

Deadline: We must receive your e-mailed nomination by 5 p.m. Aug. 31.

No, we don't have any prize except bragging rights to offer. But we'll feature south-central Idaho's best gazebos in a Sept. 14 feature story.

Cottage style's cozy charm

By Kim Cook
For The Associated Press

Many dread the first chilly night that signals fall's approach, but the seasonal shift also can be a welcome relief.

Anticipating crisp days and a nice pot of soup on the stove helps shake off the summer doldrums. And this fall, we're seeing the homey charm of cottages, farmhouses and woodsy cabins as a trend among shelter retailers.

This style partners handmade elements with vintage fabric prints and wicker, wire and wood to give interest and texture to rooms. Think afghans, embroidered pillows, felted wool and quilts. Patterns range from quaint florals to craft-work graphics, in colors both vibrant and gently faded.

Garnet Hill offers hooked wool pillows and rugs with images of buttons, mittens and roosters. Flannel and percale bedding is printed with folk art stencil motifs and autumn fruits.

Martha Stewart's collection for Macy's features soft knit throws, and pillows and bedding in richly toned plaids, gentle monochromatics and Chantilly prints.

Pottery Barn references the early homesteads with antique wooden dough bowls, grain sack pillow covers, and a selection of serveware crafted from rattan and chicken wire.

Patchwork quilts and lace curtains, and designer Mina Javid's clever "wrought iron" headboard decal, look retro yet fresh at Urban Outfitters.

Anthropologie has pretty lampshades wrapped in calico print ruffles. Find here too some great cast-brass hooks shaped like old keys, crewelwork drapery, candle holders inspired by vintage thread spools, and wonderful ceramic knobs topped with tiny floral tea saucers. Grandma would approve.

Target has stoneware canisters and wicker baskets for style-centric storage; rustic pig and hen figurals are inexpensive and fun accents.

While it's easy to do a feminine room with many of these style elements, that's not the only option. With plaids, stripes and bold graphics, or just the infusion of autumn's rich, dark colors — plum, apple, persimmon, gunmetal, teal and mustard — the look swings more toward cabin than cottage. Plaids such as tartan and buffalo are holding strong in fall fashion; we'll see upholstery, rugs and other soft furnishings carry the trend home.

The iconic striped Hudson's Bay blanket can be found at Woolrich; there's a lovely fringed pillow sham in the collection, too. And red and black buffalo-check bath accessories add a great lodge look.

It's easy to go too kitschy with this style, so be prudent. Keep the ducks and baskets to a minimum; you'll have rooms that look cozy, yet current.

New uses for grocery containers

By Sharon Harvey Rosenberg
McClatchy Newspapers

A trip to the supermarket filled the refrigerator, but left us with a trail of disposable paper goods and packaging. Foil pans, foam trays and plastic inserts littered the kitchen countertops. Determined to create a detour away from landfills, I recycled the packaging.

I used the containers for storage, organization and food prep. And while saving the environment, I developed a frugal strategy for organizing desk and kitchen drawers. Here's my green recipe:

Clutter control: Supermarkets sell frozen foods and fresh fruits in a variety of foil and plastic containers. Those vessels — emptied and washed — provide great organizational tools for cabinets and drawers.

Small trays can be arranged to create storage compartments for keys, coins and stamps. Finding keys and spare change has become easier around my home, and we've streamlined our clutter.

Flatware tray: As a special treat for the kids, I purchased a box of frozen appetizers, (mini hot dogs in pastry dough), packed in a sturdy plastic tray. The container featured long indented rows, which worked well as a utensil tray for our flatware. There was ample room for forks, knives and spoons. Buttons, coins, rubber bands and small sewing supplies also fit neatly into the long indentations.

Stationery supplies: A long narrow Styrofoam tray that once held a trio of red, green and yellow bell peppers now holds a collection of pens and pencils. The writing tools are neatly contained in tray, which is tucked into a drawer. Writing checks, making lists and finishing school assignments is less of a hassle with easier access to supplies. The tray provided a frugal, but effective makeover for our junk drawer.

Foil pan: After we polished off a key lime pie, we found additional uses for the frozen foil pan that held the dessert. The recycled pie tin is great for warming up french fries, sandwiches and other quick meals. Foil pans can be placed under plants or serve as a spare feeding bowl for pets.

New products plug you into electric-bill savings

By William Hageman
Chicago Tribune

Check your electric bill lately? Did it make you wince? You probably wondered where all those kilowatt-hours went.

According to the Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory in California, up to 10 percent of your electric usage can be from appliances and home electronics that suck up electricity even when off.

A new line of products from Practecol, a St. Louis company launched earlier this year, offers some solutions.

Among the items — 11 are now on the market, with another 40 on the drawing board — is a surge protector that stops standby power drainage with the tap of a foot; a remote-control outlet adapter that stops standby power with a flick of a remote switch; and a water displacement bag that goes in a toilet tank and saves nearly a gallon of water per flush.

The idea is simple: save energy, save water, save money.

"What I find in the environmental spaces," says Practecol president Andrew Sharon, "is rarely are the incentives aligned, where doing something good for the planet is aligned with your pocketbook. You can put in solar panels, but that's a pretty tall order. These happen to all be products where the incentives are aligned. People can say, I can do something for the environment and save money? This is a win."

Each item's packaging includes simple instructions and a short explanation of how energy is saved. In addition, there's an estimate of annual money savings, based on U.S. Department of Energy figures.

"The packaging has to be your salesperson," Sharon says. "And for us, it was really important to come out and lead with our three main messages — save and sustain simply."

Another interesting

aspect: The products can deliver a message to kids.

"I think all of our products have a strong educational component for families," Sharon says. "They've definitely opened up the conversations with (my) 6- and 8-year-old. They are very conscious now where we're wasting electricity, and what those little red lights mean on the TV when it's off, and what we're doing to try and stop that and avoid all those extra wasteful uses of electricity or water."

The Practecol line is available at 350 Target stores around the country, and at target.com. For more information on the products, visit practecol.com, facebook.com/practecol or twitter.com/practecol.

Here are some of the highlights of the line of Practecol products:

Refrigerator energy-saving kit ($19.99): It's easy to adjust the temperature of your fridge. But what's the difference between a 5 and a 6? This kit includes a temperature monitor that will display the temp — the ideal is between 34 and 37 degrees — as well as a door alarm that goes off if the door is left open for more than 45 seconds. Estimated annual savings: $34.

Motion-activated light socket ($14.99): For those who leave a room with the lights on this converts light sockets into motion sensor lights. Screw it into a socket, put in a bulb and you're set. The estimated saving is $7 per light.

Energy monitor consumption reader ($19.99): Plug it into a wall socket, then plug an appliance into it and the meter will tell you the kilowatt consumption and cost. Using the information can help save up to $40 a year.

Dryer balls ($4.99 for a package of two): They look like dog toys, but the heavy plastic balls go in a clothes dryer, bounce around with your clothes and keep items separated. That allows for a faster drying time and savings of up to $20 a year.

only one crop on several acres. Many of those farmers use the same strains of wheat, corn, sugar beets or soy, while other varieties with different traits and tastes have fallen out of favor.

It's not just a problem for the palate. It's a problem for the food supply if a fungus or blight hits. McDorman cited the 19th century Irish potato famine, when water mold wiped out the country's main crop and caused 1 million deaths.

A blight isn't out of the question for the United States. Ug99 is the most recent incarnation of stem rust blight, a fungus that wiped out 20 percent of the wheat crop in the U.S. in 1917 and 1935. While scientists have since developed several blight-resistant strains of wheat, Ug99 has overpowered almost all of them and is currently affecting crops in Africa and the Middle East. Crop scientists fear the current strain could obliterate 80 percent of the world's wheat, according to the Los Angeles Times.

Diversity wasn't the seed savers' only concern. Monsanto, producer of the herbicide Roundup and the largest producer of genetically modified seeds, keeps tight control over its seeds to protect its genetic technology, like Roundup Ready crops. McDorman pointed to contracts by Monsanto and other companies that growers are bound to as soon as they open the seed bag. The contract prohibits giving away or saving the company's patented seeds and allows for company inspection of fields and records, McDorman said.

The problem with that, he said, is it takes control of the food supply away from growers and gives it to companies. Saving a bag of patented seed and planting it with the next year's harvest can prompt a devastating lawsuit, and courts often side with Monsanto because of the contract.

Saving non-GMO seeds, on the other hand, gives gardeners full control over their supply. The process also connects people more intimately with the food process.

And it's fun, McDorman said. A first-generation hybrid can carry traits of either one of its parents, or a mix of the two, and different seeds from the same plant can carry different traits. Seed savers should keep the seeds of the fruits with the traits they want and replant half of them the next year. It can take several generations to stabilize a strain, but the work is worth it, McDorman said.

"What's the worst that can happen?" he said, affectionately referring to the process as "Mr. Toad's Wild Ride." If something goes wrong, "eat the mistakes."

The Local Dish audience, almost all of whom knew either Reed or McDorman, nodded their heads in agreement with much of what McDorman said. Scott Caruso, who is living in Ketchum for the summer, already saves his seeds but said the talk was inspiring and energizing.

"I feel like a younger Bill," he said.

Jamie Martin, a winemaker for Cold Springs Winery in Hagerman, said he learned a lot from the lecture.

"It's definitely an eye-opener to listen to Bill about how we have digressed in the food chain," Martin said.

Seed saving works for gardeners and small farmers, but what to do for the large farms that provide food to processors and grocery stores? That's a tough question, McDorman said, and one that might not have a one-size-fits-all answer for every region.

But McDorman is confident the seed savers will prevail.

"Our food tastes better," he said.

Pattern is a fall trend

The Washington Post

The fashion savants at Anthropologie always seem to find a way to turn a traditional item into a star. This season, they’ve done just that with the Josef wingback chair ($1,698), which is dressed in a bold African print dubbed pink shell.

A group of melamine trays in bold and intricate patterns is part of Target’s latest line with

New York designer Thomas O’Brien (rectangle trays $4.99, large round tray $24.99). For O’Brien, a tray is a signature statement, a miniature table-top for displaying collections. He calls it “the smallest piece of furniture I make.”

The prints — taken from a batik fabric, an Indian ivory box and a piece of English Chippendale fretwork — were inspired by objects found in his travels.

Am I making efficient use of my home’s cooling system?

By Al Heavens
The Philadelphia Inquirer

Q: My house is three stories plus a basement. There is an open central stairwell that rises up through the center of the house from the first floor to the third floor. We have five bedrooms, three on the second floor and two on the third floor.

We have a two-zone air-conditioning system with two compressors outside. Zone 1 serves the first floor (kitchen, living room, and dining room) and the basement. Zone 2 serves the second and third floors. We almost always keep the AC vents closed on the third floor and in the basement, as those spaces are not used very much.

The air filter for zone 1 is in the basement and the air filter for zone 2 is near the top of the central stairwell, just as the stairway reaches the third floor. A service tech who came out to do a “tune-up” recently told me that the whole system is about 12 years old.

We use zone 1 throughout the day to cool the first floor, with the basement vents closed, and with zone 2 turned off. When we go upstairs to sleep at night, we turn on zone 2, with the third floor vents closed, and turn off zone 1.

At night, with zone 2 cooling the bedrooms, and with the bedroom doors closed, I usually leave the windows on the first and third floors open. I assume this is circulating fresh air through the house, which is getting sucked up the central staircase and vented out the open third-floor windows.

During the day, when zone 1 is cooling the first floor with zone 2 turned off, I sometimes leave the second- and third-floor windows open.

Because heat rises, this whole scheme makes good sense to me and I assume makes efficient use of our AC system. On the other hand, it would not surprise me if, like my wife, your response is “What the hell are you thinking?” Any thoughts?

A: Despite your wife’s incredulity, it seems as if you have the situation thought out well.

The experts — I don’t include myself among them, since all I do is ask the questions of them — probably are thrashing out the plausibility of what you have done here. My thought is whatever works for you is fine, even if it doesn’t do the same for the next person.

All situations are just a bit different from one another. That’s the reason why the source of a leak in one ceiling may be a hole in the roof, while another might be missing mortar from a chimney. The result is the same: a wet ceiling.

My first question is: Are you comfortable? The second is: Is your monthly utility bill reasonable? If the answer to both is “yes,” go with it.

Ceiling fans on or off in summer?

By Bill Ward
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

Q: My wife and I disagree about the use of a ceiling fan in the summer. She wants to keep it off except when I’m in the room. I maintain that it circulates air beyond just the room they’re in and can be left on. Who’s right?

A: It depends. A large ceiling fan can circulate air over a fairly wide area; a smaller fan, not so much. But even a huge, powerful ceiling fan won’t move a lot of air to another room.

Anything that keeps air moving balances the temperature in that particular space, according to the Environmental Protection Agency’s Energy Star website. But fans do not cool a room; they cool the people in a room.

“Keeping the air moving will help balance temperatures and spread out humidity in the house,” said Chris Drake, owner of Great Fans and Blinds in St. Paul. “But a ceiling fan does not change the temperature in a room. It doesn’t do anything with the air but distribute it.”

There is one good reason to leave the fan on, at least in summer. According to the Energy Star website, “dialing up the thermostat by only 2 degrees and using your ceiling fan can lower air-conditioning costs by up to 14 percent over the course of the cooling season.”

That saving dwarfs the cost of running the ceiling fan, said Xcel Energy’s Erin Mathe.

“Ceiling fans use no more electricity than light bulbs,” she said. “A 75-watt fan used 10 hours a day at half speed or less would cost 50 to 90 cents a month to operate.”

Be prepared when putting an addition on your home

By Melissa Rayworth
For The Associated Press

Ask William Carter about expanding your home and he’s going to be blunt: It will be expensive. It will be messy. And it will take time.

“This is a very taxing process,” says Carter, who has renovated homes in California for three decades and is now board chairman of the National Association of the Remodeling Industry. “You’re probably going to make 1,500 to 2,000 decisions before this project is completed.”

But, he says, if you plan carefully and trust your instincts, you can “end up with a quality project and everyone will be friends afterwards.”

job is under way.

Work up a realistic budget, Kuperszmid-Lehrman says, leaving room for cost overruns of 5 percent to 10 percent. When budgeting, consider whether you’ll need to live elsewhere while work is being done.

Look into financing in advance, says Mark Donovan, founder of the DIY website HomeAdditionPlus.com. Don’t wait until you’ve signed a contract to confirm how you’ll pay for it.

Once you know what you want, ask friends and neighbors to recommend contractors.

Extensive interviews

You can commission plans from an architect before interviewing contractors or work with “design/build” contractors who create plans for their work. If the addition isn’t elaborate, you also can buy software to design your own plans. Software can cost up to several hundred dollars, Donovan says, but “that’s what an architect would charge you for one hour.”

When interviewing contractors, make sure all decision-makers are present. Come prepared with questions, and ask for clarification of details.

Once you have several bids, be sure you’re comparing apples to apples. Low bids may not offer the same services or quality items as higher ones, so ask for specifics.

“If someone offers a much lower bid than others, he’s probably not going to be on the job all the time,” Carter says. “It’s going to start, then languish awhile.”

Carter’s proposals are carefully organized, and include numerous documents detailing every aspect of the job. “Look at how the bid was presented,” he says, because the effort put into the proposal may give a sense of the effort that will go into the finished job.

Look for someone who is experienced in the specific type of work you’re planning, and perhaps is certified in that area. Does the contractor point out potential difficulties up front or promise that the job will be totally smooth sailing? Ask about things like downtime while they wait for supplies.

Get references from former customers, and “don’t just say, ‘Did you like the guy?’” says Kuperszmid-Lehrman. Ask how the job went and whether there were any surprises. Ideally, visit former customers’ homes to see the work.

Most important: Listen to your instincts in choosing the right contractor.

“Find the builder you have the right chemistry with,” Carter says, because this person will be in your home for months to come.

Carter says. But it’s vital to move slowly and carefully when signing contracts.

Don’t assume details are implied. Outline everything on paper, from which materials will be used to how clean the worksite will be at the end of each day.

Agree in writing on an estimated time frame and overall estimate of costs. But accept that contractors can’t predict the weather, and things like frayed wiring or termites may be discovered when walls are opened. “Even the best contractor doesn’t have X-ray vision,” says Kuperszmid-Lehrman, “and the older your home is the more likely it is you’re going to find something like that.”

Once the project is under way, stay in written communication. Phone messages can cause confusion, says Carter, so he prefers e-mail updates, with everyone copied in. Written communication with a date and time stamp is the best way to prevent “he said, she said” conflict, and preserve a good relationship until the end.

Everything in writing

“A lot of people get bids, and by then they’re already so tired of the process” that they just jump in and get started,

Landscaping makes buyers feel at home

By Joel M. Lerner
Special to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — If you are trying to sell your home, you can rise above the competition by designing curb appeal into your property.

Landscaped homes have more appeal to buyers. You can — and should — give buyers an impression of a comfortable entry and a well-maintained space as they view your home for the first time.

One way to accomplish this is by making sure paving is smooth and well maintained, the joints free of weeds and the paving edged, presenting a clean appearance. Gutters, paint, roofing, entries, mailboxes and landscape lighting make important first impressions. A comfortable entry is one that leads people to enter the house efficiently and without confusion. It should not be overwhelming. Walkways should have no more than a 5 percent grade with a width of at least 42 inches.

You might want to consider redesigning paved areas if they are in poor condition. If steps are necessary, always plan on having at least two. A single step is a “trip step.” Build each riser a maximum of six inches high and make the part you walk on — the tread — at least 14 inches deep.

Use lighting for aesthetics, security and safety. Illuminate entries in aesthetically pleasing styles. Install down-lighting from trees and shine a few lights against the house and on plants that have interesting growth habits. This helps invite buyers to experience your property in the evening, offering a completely different atmosphere.

Trees add the greatest value, according to the American Nursery and Landscape Association, so install them first. And color in the landscape — especially delivered by flowers — gets properties noticed.

Take pictures of the garden at its showiest times of year. Clients have told me that, when sellers have passed along photos of their garden, along with information about the plants’ requirements, they found that to be as useful as any other information they received about their new homes.

Here are other landscape design suggestions:

- Balance the front of your property so it is equally weighted — a large tree to one side and shrubs to the other. Ornamental plantings should highlight the entire front yard, not hide the house. Sweep beds wide, across eight to 12 feet, around the front corners of the house, with a vertical element planted about eight feet off the corners, anchoring the house to the landscape. This adds an expansive appearance to the property. Large plants placed tightly against walls will make houses seem smaller.

- Design beds so plants are sequenced with low flora in the front and tall ones to the back, with two feet or more open to the house walls. Large beds are very effective, allowing room for a wide variety of foliage and color. Selections of plants can be installed in groupings for impact.

The front of the bed could be edged with pulmonaria if the location has filtered sun, backed by several very compact, dwarf weigela, which have maroon foliage. Back these plants with Iroquois or Oneida viburnum bred for their flower, berries, attractiveness to birds and fall color. Fill in with assorted groupings of shade-tolerant perennials and annuals that flower at various times throughout the growing season. This type of arrangement needs a bed 12 to 15 feet deep to accommodate mature plants.

- Color, texture and form get your property noticed. Use sweeps of the same or similar colors for the greatest impact. Use shrubs with interesting architectural form and texture, fall color, berries, flowers, summer leaf color and foliage variations. Choose shrubs for their year-round ornamental value, especially if you don’t know when you will be selling. Some shrubs and trees offer 12-month interest with spring flowers, edible summer fruits, fall color and a winter bark that is mottled tan and brown.

- Repeating plants in mass, using the same colors in large sweeps, has an eye-catching effect. So if you’re planting black-eyed Susans in full sun, for selling over the next several months, plant them in groups of three to five in several open, sunny beds on the property. Purchase mature plants in flower now. They seldom fail to catch your eye and you can assure the buyer that they will return annually.

Beds in full sun can be filled with masses of petunias in the summer and mums in the fall.

- Containers can enhance any entry and wow a prospective buyer. Almost any plant that can be placed in the ground can be grown in a container. And virtually any object that will hold soil can serve as one, whether it’s a clay or foam pot or any object in which holes have been punched for drainage.

Think of containers as you would a garden. You can install trees, shrubs, annuals, perennials and most fruits and vegetables, provided the container is a proper matching size for the plants. You can have plantings in places they wouldn’t ordinarily grow, such as on a deck, patio, balcony or roof. They can provide a garden around homes with no space for a traditional one and will help overcome problems of poor soil aeration and drainage.

The greatest risks of container gardening are soil drying and drainage. Container plantings are much more susceptible to drought than flora planted directly in the ground. Watering at planting time is essential. Containers, especially in hanging baskets, might require watering every day during the summer if they are in the sun.

Although clay pots are more aesthetically appealing from a design standpoint, plastic or fiberglass that looks like clay will be far better for moisture retention. Plastic containers don’t “breathe,” so they won’t need to be watered as often as clay. They also are lightweight and easy to move.

- Position a piece of outdoor art or feature a specimen plant near the entry, but use only a piece or two. The sculpture can serve as a contrasting element with the garden and serve as a focal point to set off the entrance. Design plants and sculptural elements in proportion to the size of your home or property. A large home can accommodate larger plantings than a small property.

Skunked? Share your story

Skunk encounters are part of southern Idaho’s lore. Almost everyone has a tale about a skunk — and about efforts to keep it away from the house or to clean up after it gets too close.

It’s time to share that skunk-caused misery, so we want to hear your stories.

Times-News reporter Melissa Davlin is writing an article on skunk encounters, both in towns and in the country. To share, contact Davlin at 735-3234 or mdavlin@magicvalley.com by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Silage producers saw the latest in silage technology during the University of Idaho extension forage field day held at the Kimberly Research and Extension Center this month.

Opportunities abound in silage

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

After 30 years in the corn silage business, Keith Bolsen says there is still room for improvement in the industry. “The science of (making) silage hasn’t change since I first came here in 1979,” Bolsen said. The equipment has changed and the size of operations has changed but not the process of fermenting corn or alfalfa to make silage. What the nationally known forage expert wishes would change is how producers view the process. For example, how well a silage pile is packed is directly related to how well it will keep and feed. That makes the blade pusher driver one of the key people when making silage. Yet producers often just grab an employee to blade the pile. Bolsen tells a story of visiting a dairy where the silage crew was short-handed and the dairy owner had recruited a relative to drive the blade pusher. The relative was a crop farmer and used to driving tractors, but said driving a blade pusher was the hardest day he’d ever spent in a cab. Driving the blade pusher tractor is an art, not a science, Bolsen calls it the “Michelangelo” effect. The thinner the layer, the tighter you can pack the pile and the better the silage will be. He suggests that the blade pusher — along with the silage grower, dairy nutritionist and banker — all be part of the silage team. When all those players are on the same page, the dairy’s silage program is at its best. Shrink — the difference between the tons harvested and ensiled, and the tons actually fed — is a measure of efficiency in silage production. Of the 180 million tons of corn silage produced in

launch cooling experiment

By John Holland
McClatchy Newspapers

MODESTO, Calif. — Tinkerers in the dairy industry are looking at a new way of keeping cows comfy on warm summer days. Their research, aided by $48,893 from Turlock Irrigation District, a California utility, aims to replace the power-sucking fans in use today with a system that relies on circulation of cool water from underground. “It’s a pretty simple concept, and if it works, it would be a big benefit in keeping cows cool in summer,” dairy farmer and utility board member Joe Alamo said Thursday. The board voted last week to help pay for research at a dairy farm near Tulare, Calif., over the next month and a half. The money comes from a state-mandated fund for energy efficiency and other “public benefit” efforts, said Nancy Folly, consumer programs division manager for Turlock Irrigation District. The technology was developed by AgriAire Inc. of Chandler, Ariz., and tested at a University of Arizona research center. The Tulare demonstration will try to cool 52 cows under real-life conditions. The University of California-Davis is helping with the test. A typical system works like this: Water is pumped from an existing farm well, exiting at 61 to 73 degrees, and enters a device called a heat exchanger beneath a cow’s stall. This creates an updraft of cool air that mixes with the warm air above, ideally achieving a temperature that a cow likes. The animals can start to feel heat

The fans run when temperatures reach 73 degrees and the misters go on at 90 degrees.

The Turlock Irrigation District in California is helping fund research on a new way of keeping dairy cows cool in hot weather. The current method to cool cows, electric fans and misters, is displayed at Alamo Farms dairy in west Modesto, California. The TID is looking also into a new technique that pumps water from wells and runs it through a heat exchanger under the cow’s bedding, cooling the cow and saving water and electricity.

stress at temperatures in the 80s with zero humidity, according to previous University of Arizona research. Thus, the cooling system could be used from spring to fall and would be especially useful in summer.

Heat can reduce milk output, and extreme heat can kill. More than 3,400 cows died in Stanislaus County during a three-day stretch of 110-degree-plus weather in 2006 — a heavy blow to one of the county’s main economic drivers.

Prices rebound for Idaho’s top commodities

The Associated Press

POCATELLO — Prices are rising for Idaho’s top four agricultural commodities — dairy, beef, potatoes and wheat. That bodes well for the state’s struggling economy and is a reversal from last year, when prices were depressed and the agricultural sector experienced its largest decline in cash receipts in more than 40 years. Fresh potato growers this year are getting $7 to $8 per hundredweight, about the break-even point and up from $3 per hundredweight last year. A hun-dredweight is 100 pounds.

“The market really started moving up recently because of increased demand in relation to where supplies are,” Paul Patterson, an economist with the University of Idaho, told the Idaho State Journal. “We really saw a nice push in prices, and it helped set the tone for the next marketing year.”

Milk prices hovered under $12 per hundredweight last year. Now they’re near the break-even point of $15.

“It’s certainly a lot better story than last year,” said Greg Andersen, co-owner of Seagull Bay Dairy near American Falls, which has 600 milking cows.

FDA commissioner says agency needs more authority

By Mary Clare Jalonick
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Food and Drug Administration chief Margaret Hamburg, beset with an egg-and-salmonella food safety challenge, said Monday the agency must move from a reactive to preventive enforcement strategy. Giving a series of network interviews in the wake of some 1,300 salmonella cases from tainted eggs, Hamburg said the FDA is taking the issue “very, very seriously.” At the same time, she said Congress should pass pending legislation that would provide her agency with greater enforcement power, including new authority over imported food. “We need better abilities and authorities to put in place these preventive controls and hold companies accountable,” Hamburg said as she discussed the salmonella poisoning outbreak and the recall of roughly a half-billion

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks slumped to a weak finish Monday as lingering worries about the economy overcame optimism from a fresh round of corporate dealmaking.

Stocks had an early lift after Hewlett-Packard Co. bid 33 percent more than rival Dell Inc. for a data storage provider, but the gains faded quickly.

The Dow Jones industrial average was up as much as 91 points in early trading but turned mixed for much of the day. A slump in the final half-hour of trading left the Dow with a loss of 39 points.

Despite the positive deal news, a number of worries about the economy are keeping a lid on the market, especially a reluctance among companies to create jobs. Stocks had a two-day selloff late last week after first-time claims for unemployment benefits jumped to their highest level since November.

“Companies are not hiring because they don’t know the rules of the game,” said. Frank Ingarra, co-portfolio manager of Hennessy Funds. “When you don’t know the rules, you pack up and go home.”

Silage

the U.S., producers are losing millions of tons before it can ever be fed. The average shrink loss is 18 to 20 percent nationwide, but Bolsen thinks it should be in the single digits.

“We have the potential to save 10 to 12 million tons of corn silage annually,” he said. He sees opportunity for reducing shrink in three key areas: packing, sealing and safety. Safety and efficiency go together.

Silage piles that can’t be driven over are too large and are prone to silage avalanches. Those piles also have a huge feeding face that means silage spoils before it can be fed.

“There are far too many over-filled bunkers or piles in our industry,” Bolsen said. He spoke during the University of Idaho forage field day held at the University of Idaho Kimberly Research and Extension Center earlier this month.

Producers can increase efficiency and safety by making three or four smaller piles instead of one or two large piles. Every load of silage harvested is not the same and packing different varieties or maturities into the same pile will affect feed quality.

Bolsen suggests using the bunker pile density spreadsheets available at the University of Wisconsin’s website to plug in harvest rates, tractor weights, layer thickness and determine ahead of time whether they can meet their packing density target.

Once they achieve that target, producers need to seal the silage pile to maintain nutritional qualities.

Far too many producers accept that they will lose 2 feet of silage off the top of the pile but don’t account for spoilage in the next foot or spoilage on the feeding face, he said.

“We are losing far too much milk to surface spoilage in the ration,” Bolsen said.

However, if you are looking for a soul mate, you could be easily fooled in the first several months of the year and a change within an existing relationship might alter the course of your life after the beginning of the year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): People find your presence stimulating. You can easily light a fire under the new projects. A loved one is likely to forgive you for just about anything if you make a sincere effort to make up for past mistakes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ruffled feathers can be preened back in place. The opportune moment to redeem yourself in your boss' eyes might present itself, or a loved one may offer to kiss and make up. Drop compliments like birdseed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Clean up your act. Someone close could prove to be a treasure and help you out at an opportune moment. You could be gently reminded of the worthiness of associates. Maybe it is time to treat others to lunch.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Awareness is awesome. You are more in touch with what can be accomplished instead of what you hope might be accomplished. The illusion you were under regarding a financial matter can be dispelled.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Focus on fixing. Today's full moon might be so bright that it erases past misunderstandings and helps illuminate ways to make things right. Your ambitions could be honed to the sharpest point.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tattletales must toe the line. Blowing the whistle on those who have transgressed might be tempting, but never forget that forgiveness is divine. Sweep your base instincts out the door and button up your lips.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make plans for the immediate future in coordination with others. If you need to ask for assistance, today is perfect to find a helping hand. Love matters that have been on the blink could be fixed now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A surge of productivity sets in. You seem to be cognizant of what needs to be done and are willing to do it. You are mentally, emotionally and physically up to any challenge that presents itself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make peace offerings before you apprise others of your plans. To gain support from various quarters, you must get back on solid ground and be willing to concede more than a few points.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Work out details by being generous rather than picky. Strive to be open-minded about solutions offered by business contacts and loved ones. Your money can grow if long-term goals are a priority.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Teamwork makes for light work. You can delegate a few tasks without sounding like you are taking charge. Consider what each person does best and gently compliment them into compliance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can count on others to forgive and forget. Sincere apologies are likely to be accepted and you can overcome past differences with very little effort. Gifts of good taste make great peace offerings.

LEGAL NOTICE NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING PROPOSED BUDGET FOR FISCAL YEAR 2011 URBAN RENEWAL AGENCY OF THE COUNTY OF JEROME, IDAHO

A public hearing for consideration of the proposed budget for the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency for the fiscal year that begins October 1, 2010, and ends September 30, 2011, will be held at the Jerome County Commissioner Chambers, 300 N. Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, Idaho, on Thursday, August 26, 2010, at 10:00 a.m., pursuant to Idaho Code 50-1002. Written or oral comments about the proposed budget are welcome. Written comment may be submitted prior to the meeting to: Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency, c/o Mr. Joseph Davidson, Chairman, c/o Board of County Commissioners, County of Jerome, 300 North Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, ID 83338.

The Agency budget funds the programs, services and capital projects that the Agency Board has determined to be important to meet the Agency's strategic goals as outlined in the Jerome County Crossroads Urban Renewal Project Urban Renewal Plan. During 2008 the Agency worked on the preparation of the urban renewal plan. The Agency expenses were limited to legal expenses, consultant expenses, and other planning expenses. Those activities were funded through an advance from the County of Jerome of approximately $30,000. Expenses through June 30, 2009, totaled approximately $17,000 leaving approximately $13,000 remaining from the original advance. Under Idaho Code §50-1002, the two prior fiscal years' information is required for publication of the tentative budget. As the Agency was not established until October 21, 2008, by Resolution No. 2008-38, no budget for FY 2009 was processed as the mandated dates had elapsed. The budget below shows the budgeted expenses for FY 2010 and actual expenses through July 15, 2010. For FY 2010, the Agency's revenues were again limited to the County's initial advance plus an additional $10,000 granted by the County Commission in September 2009.

This public hearing on the proposed budget is required for formal adoption of the FY 2011 budget. The proposed expenditures and revenues for FY 2011 have been tentatively approved by the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency Board of Directors on August 5, 2010.

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 24, the 236th day of 2010. There are 129 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Aug. 24, A.D. 410, Rome was overrun by the Visigoths, a major event in the fall of the Western Roman Empire.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In A.D. 79, long-dormant Mount Vesuvius erupted, burying the Roman cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum in volcanic ash; an estimated 20,000 people died.

In 1572, the St. Bartholomew's Day massacre of French Protestants at the hands of Catholics began in Paris.

In 1814, during the War of 1812, British forces invaded Washington D.C., setting fire to the Capitol and the White House, as well as other buildings.

In 1932, Amelia Earhart embarked on a 19-hour flight from Los Angeles to Newark, N.J., making her the first woman to fly solo, non-stop, from coast to coast.

In 1949, the North Atlantic Treaty came into force.

In 1954, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the Communist Control Act, outlawing the Communist Party in the United States.

In 1968, France became the world's fifth thermonuclear power as it exploded a hydrogen bomb in the South Pacific.

In 1970, an explosives-laden van left by anti-war extremists blew up outside the University of Wisconsin's Sterling Hall in Madison, killing 33-year-old researcher Robert Fassnacht.

In 1989, Baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti banned Pete Rose from the game for betting on his own team, the Cincinnati Reds. The Voyager 2 space probe flew by Neptune, sending back striking photographs.

In 1992, Hurricane Andrew smashed into Florida, causing $30 billion in damage; 43 U.S. deaths were blamed on the storm.

Ten years ago: Mexican President-elect Vicente Fox met with Vice President Al Gore, then President Bill Clinton, in Washington, a day before he met with Texas Gov. George W. Bush in Dallas.

Five years ago: Tropical Depression 12 strengthened into Tropical Storm Katrina over the central Bahamas. A federal commission voted against closing the New London submarine base in Groton, Conn. and the Portsmouth shipyard in Kittery, Maine. Religious broadcaster Pat Robertson apologized for calling for the assassination of Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez.

One year ago: All sales under the government's Cash for Clunkers program came to an end, although car dealers were given more time to submit pending claims for reimbursement. Scotland's justice minister, Kenny MacAskill, defended his much-criticized decision to free Abdel Baset al-Megrahi, the Lockerbie bomber, on compassionate grounds.

CONCRETE Patios, Driv

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 36-year-old woman who has a 25-year-old friend I love like a little sister. Because of that connection, I felt compelled to ask her to be a bridesmaid in my upcoming wedding.

After she agreed, I overheard her mention that she would be getting a large tattoo on her arm. Because she knows how I feel about visible tattoos, I asked her if she'd wait six months until after the wedding. She and the matron of honor are scheduled to wear strapless, knee-length gowns.

She proceeded with the tattoo and now has half an arm of full-color design. I don't want her to ruin my wedding or the photographs. I would feel guilty if I had to force a jacket or sweater on her or my matron of honor, especially if the day is unseasonably hot. What should I do?

— NO INK IN LOUISVILLE

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR NO INK: If your "little sister" cared as much about your feelings as you seem to about hers, she would have postponed getting the tattoo as you requested. Too bad she didn't.

However, weddings are more than the procession and the picture album. They are about loving friends and family and the joining of two people who intend to build a life together. If you're worried about the pictures, pose "Sis" so her "canvas" can't be seen by the camera.

DEAR ABBY: Seven years ago, my husband, "John," had an affair that resulted in the birth of a child. Although it was difficult, John and I stayed together and our marriage is better than ever.

My husband supports "Talia" financially and sees her whenever he can. The adults have all managed to create a cordial, working relationship for Talia's sake.

Talia spends a few weeks with us during school breaks. When I go out with her and run into acquaintances, they'll ask, "Who's this?" I will give her name, but sometimes they press for more. Many of our friends know we've been married for a long time with only one child together. (Our daughter is in college.)

My question is — is Talia my stepdaughter? Is there a simple way of answering these questions without making anyone uncomfortable, especially Talia?

— PART-TIME MOMMY
DEAR PART-TIME MOMMY: Yes, Talia is your stepdaughter, and you can introduce her that way or refer to her as John's daughter. Either would be correct.

DEAR ABBY: What is the polite way to correct a child who is being rude in your home while her mother, who is present, does absolutely nothing?

— DISCIPLINARIAN IN TRACY, CALIF.

DEAR DISCIPLINARIAN: Here's how I'd handle it. I would get down to the child's eye level and say: "Honey, I have certain rules in my house. When you're here, I expect you to (). Do you understand?"

You cannot expect a child who may not have been taught basic manners by his (or her) mother to know what you expect unless you spell it out sweetly and firmly. And if the bad behavior persists, I would socialize with the child's mother only one-on-one.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"When I am grown to man's estate
I shall be very proud and great,
And tell the other girls and boys
Not to meddle with my toys."
— Robert Louis Stevenson

All the deals this week come from the Junior European tournament held last year in Romania. As mentioned yesterday, there was not only a junior event, but a schools tournament and a girls' championship, from which today's deal comes.

The action was from the match between Turkey and Italy, and the heroine was Ozge Tekin. A spirited auction saw Tekin as declarer in six clubs doubled, facing the lead of the spade five. Italy's Giorgia Botta won the ace and switched to the diamond king. Tekin won her ace, drew trumps, and realized that she needed to bring in the hearts for four tricks to make her slam. It is clear what the percentage line in that suit is: you cash the ace, lead low to the jack, and if the 10 doesn't appear on the right, play off the king — unless the auction or play thus far has pointed you in another direction.

Tekin duly cashed the heart ace, but paused to reconsider the information already available to her. Because East had bid four spades on her own and seemed to have diamonds also, Tekin judged her to be short in hearts. So instead of leading a heart to dummy's jack, she finessed the nine, came back to hand with a trump, and now finessed the heart jack, thus recording 12 tricks for a magnificent plus 1,090.

ANSWER: With these values it is a close choice between bidding hearts and supporting partner. I marginally prefer raising clubs directly rather than introducing the hearts before supporting clubs. It may be critical to partner for slam purposes to know of real as opposed to secondary club support. The flip side is we may belong in three no-trump and won't get there if you raise clubs.

Twin Falls cross country looks to defend state title

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

In the hallways of high schools, the football team is always king.

But the athletes running around Twin Falls High School are the ones building a dynasty.

The Bruin boys cross country team has won three straight state championships — two in class 5A and last year in 4A — and are poised to add a fourth.

The team possesses a focused determination. Pre-season practices run with a business-first mentality.

It's no question the goal for the boys team is to defend its state title.

"Right now we're trying to get people in shape that weren't running during the summer," said junior Erik Harris after practice last week. "We don't have a whole lot of time to waste."

Harris logged 504 miles this summer, missing only three days of running, in preparation for this season.

"Erik has a real good shot at being the overall state champion this year," said head coach Marty Grindstaff.

Harris leads a three-headed monster at the top of the Bruin roster, joined by Karl Lundgren and Tyson Warth. Each of them finished in the top 15 last season at state, with Harris finishing second.

The trio pushes and paces each other in both practice and races, leading to strong competition among the three.

"We just expect each other to stay with one another," said Lundgren. "It motivates us. Like, 'I'm not going to let him beat me again! It just makes us work even harder to not let it happen again.'"

Hillcrest and Bishop Kelly will give Twin Falls a run this fall for the state title. Depth is the biggest concern facing the Bruins as the team only has 12 harriers on its roster. Behind the top three, Twin Falls returns two

Tiger Woods, wife officially divorced

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

Divorced. Single dad. Golf game still to be determined.

And so, after nine months of turmoil over his extramarital affairs, now begins the next chapter in the life and times of Tiger Woods.

In a hearing that lasted no more than 10 minutes in a Florida judge's chambers, Woods and his Swedish-born wife officially divorced Monday.

"We are sad that our marriage is over and we wish each other the very best for the future," Woods and Elin Nordegren said in a joint statement released by their lawyers.

The divorce was granted shortly after 2 p.m. in Bay County Circuit Court in Panama City, Fla., about 375 miles from their Isleworth home outside Orlando, where Woods drove his SUV over a fire hydrant and into a tree on Thanksgiving night. That set off shocking revelations that sports' biggest star had been cheating on his wife through multiple affairs.

Woods' life and golf game have been in disarray ever since.

Two words describe Great Basin: wide open

This year's Great Basin Conference football race is like a receiver sprinting down-field against busted coverage.

Wide open.

Predicting how the six teams will finish is anyone's guess. Might as well put the name of each squad in a hat and draw them out.

Johnson, Titans rout Cardinals

Former Idaho star Komar catches TD

The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — National championship, regular season or simply an exhibition. The setting doesn't seem to matter, not when Vince Young is playing Matt Leinart.

Young outdueled Leinart yet again, Chris Johnson ran for a touchdown and Tennessee beat the Arizona Cardinals 24-10 Monday night in the Titans' preseason home opener.

The Titans (1-1) never trailed as Johnson scored on his sixth carry, an 8-yard TD that capped an 85-yard drive. The All-Pro watched from the bench the rest of the night.

The top two quarterbacks taken in the 2006 draft didn't play very much in the preseason matchup. At least Leinart didn't have to watch Young drive his team down the field late for the win like he did in the 2006 BCS national championship or on this very field last Nov. 29 with a 99-yard drive for a 20-17 win.

Young has no competition for his starting job these days, and he was 9 of 13 for 128 yards. The former Texas star left after four series with a 10-0 lead.

Leinart is trying to hold off Derek Anderson for the starting job in Arizona. Leinart, who starred for Southern California in college, was 4 of 6 for 28 yards but produced no points for a second straight preseason game. The Cardinals (1-1) went three-and-out on each of his three series.

Near no-no for Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas — Joe Mauer's clean single to center field with one out in the ninth inning broke up the no-hit bid of four Texas Rangers pitchers.

The Rangers beat the Minnesota Twins 4-0 on Monday night in the sixth no-hitter this season broken up in the ninth inning.

Starter Rich Harden was activated from the disabled list earlier in the day and he went 6 2-3 innings before being lifted after throwing 111 pitches.

RED SOX 6, MARINERS 3

BOSTON — Marco Scutaro's second two-run single gave Boston the lead for good and John Lackey pitched eight strong innings.

Adrian Beltre and J.D. Drew both had two singles for the Red Sox, who won their third straight after their most lopsided loss of the season last Friday.

Lackey (12-7) gave up three runs — two earned — and six hits, striking out 10 and walking two in his best start since he took a no-hitter into the eighth inning at Seattle on July 22.

BLUE JAYS 3, YANKEES 2

TORONTO — Jose Bautista hit a two-run homer, then added a tiebreaking solo drive in the eighth inning for his majors-leading 40th of the season for Toronto.

Scott Downs (5-5) pitched one inning for the win and Kevin Gregg finished in the ninth for his 28th save in 32 chances.

TIGERS 12, ROYALS 3

DETROIT — Ryan Raburn drove in three runs and scored twice to help Detroit continue a strong homestand.

Jhonny Peralta and Brandon Inge also drove in three runs for the Tigers, who are 4-0 since returning home and have outscored the opposition 31-6.

NATIONAL LEAGUE CUBS 9, NATIONALS 1

WASHINGTON — Mike Quade got his first major league win, and so did Casey Coleman. The post-Piniella Chicago Cubs are off to quite a start.

Coleman, a rookie right-hander, took a one-hitter into the seventh inning, and Cubs interim manager Quade had a successful debut Monday night in a 9-1 victory over the Washington Nationals.

ROCKIES 5, BRAVES 4

DENVER — Todd Helton's first four-hit game in more than a year included the tiebreaking RBI single off Jonny Venters in the eighth inning Monday night that lifted Colorado Rockies.

Helton singled over second base to score Carlos Gonzalez from second and make a winner of reliever Rafael Betancourt (4-1), who gave up the tying run in the top of the eighth.

CARDINALS 10, PIRATES 2

PITTSBURGH — Albert Pujols hit a three-run home run one pitch after injured Pirates starter Ross Ohlendorf was pulled during a four-run

Texas Rangers starting pitcher Rich Harden (40) throws during the first inning of the baseball game against the Minnesota Twins in Arlington, Texas, Monday.

ASTROS 3, PHILLIES 2

PHILADELPHIA — Brett Myers threw seven sharp innings against his former team, Carlos Lee hit a go-ahead two-run single in the eighth and the Astros beat the Phillies.

more runners with state experience in Chet Pettingill and Mark Russells.

That experience is invaluable in continuing the tradition Twin Falls cross country has developed in recent years.

“We’re building a little bit of a dynasty here. I think the team has a great work ethic and you’ve got these young kids coming up and seeing what we’ve done here. They just learn how to be successful,” Harris said.

The girls team returns all of its runners from the third-place team a year ago and will be a force to be reckoned with. They are led by Amanda Ward (second-place finish at state), Hannah and Abby Biedenbach (15th and 22nd, respectively), Lizzie Hegstrom (28th) and Stephanie Filas (38th).

“I’m excited for the girls team this year,” Grindstaff said. “We’ve got 23 runners out which is unheard of for us.”

The Bruins are ranked third heading into the season behind Bishop Kelly and Hillcrest, which also bring back their state runners from a year ago.

“I think we should be higher,” said senior Stephanie Filas.

Filas leads the team every day in post-practice abdominal workouts, another testament to the team’s work ethic.

“Putting in the extra work gets you ahead that much more. Giving the average is just going to keep you average,” Filas said.

Twin Falls begins the season Friday at the Jerome Invitational on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Basin

It all equates to some great intrigue when GBC teams line up on Friday nights. The title could come down to Minico visiting Twin Falls on Oct. 22 in the regular-season finale. Then again, it could rest on Burley hosting Jerome that same night, or maybe even the Riverhawks traveling to face the Wolverines.

Like I said: wide open.

A peak at online fan message boards for Virginia Tech and Boise State quickly reveals a trend. Fans of the Hokies constantly reference BSU’s 48-13 loss to Georgia in 2005, intimating that a similar beatdown awaits the Broncos on Labor Day. Bronco Nation counters with a reference to the 2007 Fiesta Bowl win over Oklahoma, citing that as concrete evidence BSU will win the day on Sept. 6.

Newsflash for both sides: Those games have absolutely NOTHING to do with this matchup.

These are different teams with different players in a different season under different circumstances.

All we know is the (perceived) No. 3 Broncos take on the (perceived) No. 10 Hokies in a game that’s absolutely huge for both sides. Both teams boast talented offensive backfields that will try to move the ball against stout defenses.

But as for how BSU did against Oklahoma and Georgia years ago? Irrelevant to this one.

While the Boise State vs. Virginia Tech game is clearly the best matchup of college football’s opening weekend, the two next best contests happen right next door to Idaho in the Beehive State.

Utah and No. 15 Pittsburgh kick things off at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 2, in a game televised on Versus. The Big East favorite Panthers and Pac-10-bound Utes should set the stage nicely for a great weekend of games.

That weekend includes Washington visiting BYU in Provo, Utah, in a 5 p.m. Saturday kick on CBS College Sports. Can UW senior quarterback Jake Locker finally live up to the hype and lead the Huskies to a bowl? The first step comes against the Cougars, the team Washington head coach Steve Sarkisian played QB for in the mid-90s. Meanwhile, BYU freshman quarterback Jake Heaps, who is from the Seattle area and turned down the Huskies to sign with BYU, makes his debut against the team he spurned.

Now those are some good plot lines.

Mike Christensen may be reached at sports@magicvalley.com or 735-3239.

Woods

He and Nordegren were married Oct. 5, 2004, in Barbados and have a 3-year-old daughter, Sam, and an 18-month-old son, Charlie.

Terms of the divorce — such as how much it will cost Woods — were not disclosed. They said only that they will “share parenting” of their two children.

Nordegren, who for years tried to stay in the background, was captured on video by celebrity websites eating lunch or picking up her daughter from school.

“We love Elin, and we are so proud of the grace and strength she has shown during this difficult time,” her father, Thomas Nordegren, a talk show host at national broadcaster Swedish Radio, told The Associated Press. “We know that she will come out of this even stronger and has a bright future in front of her.”

The divorce was finalized by Bay County Circuit Judge Judy Pittman Biebel during a 10-minute hearing in a conference room in her chambers, according to Biebel’s judicial assistant, Kim Gibson. Woods and Nordegren were present, along with their lawyers, Gibson said.

“I don’t comment on active cases,” Thomas J. Sasser, Woods’ divorce attorney, said. Asked why they chose to file in Panama City, Sasser said it was a joint decision by the lawyers.

Nordegren’s attorneys — including her twin sister, London-based Josefin Lonnberg — referred all questions to the statement.

Titans

Young struggled a bit early but completed three of four passes for 67 yards to set up Johnson’s TD run.

Anderson replaced Leinart and gave the Cardinals a brief spark against the Titans’ first-team defense. He completed a 13-yarder to Steve Breaston for Arizona’s first first down of the game. He also found rookie Stephen Williams, starting in place of Larry Fitzgerald (sprained knee), on a 37-yard pass.

Working from the Tennessee 6, Anderson overthrew Breaston in the end zone and couldn’t connect with Williams before the Cardinals settled for a 19-yard field goal from Jay Feely in the second quarter.

Former BYU star Max Hall was intercepted in his brief duty behind Anderson, but he did find former Idaho star Max Komar for a 22-yard TD midway through the fourth quarter.

Archibald, Buhl girls rout Declo

Times-News

Kaylee Archibald scored four second-half goals as the Buhl girls soccer team pounded Declo 7-1 Monday in the teams’ season openers.

Ruth Loza scored two goals and Skyler Barger scored one in the first half for Indians.

“It was a great first season game,” said Buhl coach Araceli Perez Huicochea. “We had great communication and the girls were on fire. It was an intense game from the beginning to the end of the game.”

Jenna Brown scored Declo’s only goal in the loss.

“We had only two subs and it was hot, but the girls did a great job,” said Declo coach Alyssa Terry.

Buhl (1-0) hosts Jerome on Wednesday.

COMMUNITY SCHOOL 4, FILER 2

Hannah Dies scored two second-half goals as the Community School pulled away to beat host Filer 4-2 on Monday.

Candra Coelho scored twice for Filer, in the 18th and 79th minutes. The game was tied 1-1 at halftime after Community School’s Freya Dickey scored in the 35th minute. Dies scored twice to put the Cutthroats in control and Kelly Hennessy completed the scoring in the 66th minute.

Filer coach Shane Hild said fatigue hindered his team in the second half.

GOODING 3, WENDELL 0

Crystal Cardenas, Janeth Lopez and Celene Nino each scored a goal as Gooding beat host Wendell 3-0 on Monday.

The win gave new coach Ben Hardcastle a win in his debut. Gooding (1-0) hosts Filer on Wednesday.

Boys Soccer

BUHL 6, DECLO 2

The Indians jumped on Declo quick as Tony Lopez scored the first goal of the game at the 1-minute mark in the first half as Buhl beat Declo 6-2.

Ricardo Medina scored two goals and Alex Arizmendi, Daniel Peralta and Pablo Serrano each scored for Buhl.

“Overall, I was pleased with the game,” said Buhl coach Bill Fields. “We have a lot of young players and they communicated really well. That is something we have struggled with.”

Declo’s Eric Henrickson scored twice in the loss.

“That kid is a talented player,” said Fields. “Declo’s players are big and strong and that is always a challenge. I would have liked to have held them to no goals but I was pleased with how thing went.”

Buhl (1-0) hosts Jerome on Wednesday 6:30 p.m.

FILER 5, COMMUNITY SCHOOL 0

Try as the might, mid-fielder Cooper Hanley and goal keeper Tom Crosby could not stop Filer as the Community School lost to Wildcats 5-0 on Monday.

Santiago Alvarado had the hot foot on the night as he scored four Filer goals and Ryan Karel scored one.

Pedro Nunez had two assists and Karel, Zach Clark and Sergio Campos each finished the game with one assist.

Crosby had 11 saves for the Cutthroats.

“We are glad to get this first game over with,” said Community School coach Richard Whitelaw. “Filer is really good this year and that is good for our league. It is going to be really competitive this season. Filer is going to upset a lot of people.”

Community School (0-1) hosts Wendell on Wednesday.

WENDELL 3, GOODING 1

Freshman Eder Macias scored two goals in his high school debut and host Wendell beat Gooding 3-1. Johnny Macias, Eder’s older brother, chipped in a goal on a penalty kick for Wendell (1-0), which travels to the Community School on Wednesday.

Gooding fell to 0-1.

Clarett asks to be allowed to travel to pro tryout

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Former Ohio State tailback Maurice Clarett has gotten back into the classroom. Now he wants to get back onto the football field.

Clarett asked a judge to travel to a tryout with the Omaha Nighthawks of the United Football League. A review of the motion will take place Wednesday. Clarett cannot leave the state until he receives clearance from the court.

On Monday, Clarett, who led the Buckeyes to the 2002 national championship, finished up 4½ months in a locked-down, dormitory-style facility that serves as a transition for those getting out of prison. He asked Franklin County Common Pleas Court Judge David Fais to leave the state to try out for the pro team.

His attorney, Michael Hoague, said Clarett was ready to make the most of the opportunity.

“Since he re-enrolled in summer-quarter classes at Ohio State, he’s been going to school and also working out each morning at the Woody Hayes Athletic Center,” Hoague said. “He looks really good.”

COLLINS SIGNS WITH BEARS AT QB

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Veteran quarterback Todd Collins made no pretenses about his ambitions after signing a one-year contract Monday with the Chicago Bears.

The 38-year-old longtime NFL backup agreed to terms with an eye on taking the backup spot away from injured quarterback Caleb Hanie.

“I plan to,” Collins said. “I’m out there to compete. I’m not going to just sell myself short. I’ve been the No. 2 guy for a long time. You always try to play at the level that the starter’s playing, and ideally you can step in there and contribute just like the starter did.”

BRADY NO FAN OF ‘HARD KNOCKS’ SHOW ABOUT JETS

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Tom Brady says he won’t watch HBO’s “Hard Knocks” show featuring the New York Jets because he hates them.

In his weekly contractually-mandated appearance on WEEI radio on Monday, the New England Patriots quarterback said he hasn’t turned on the show about the Jets training camp.

Brady says, “I hate the Jets, so I refuse to support that show.”

He does say he’s sure it’s great television and he’s glad people like it but he has no interest in watching. He say, “I’d love to say a lot of mean things, but I’d rather not do that, either.”

GIANTS QB ELI MANNING PLANS TO PLAY AGAINST RAVENS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Eli Manning got under the center and everything looked normal, for the most part.

He identified the middle linebacker, barked out a few signals and took the snap from Shaun O’Hara. The only thing out of the ordinary was this: Manning was wearing a blue Giants baseball cap to cover his head and the meding 3-inch wound on the left side of his forehead.

Different? Absolutely. But the Giants had their quarterback back at practice and getting ready to start Saturday’s next-to-last preseason game against the Ravens in Baltimore.

“I liked his tempo right away,” coach Tom Coughlin said after practice. “He got the ball out of his hand quick and made some real good decisions. So we’re glad to have him back on the practice field.”

SHANAHAN MEETS WITH HAYNESWORTH, KEEPS IT PRIVATE

ASHBURN, Va. — Washington Redskins coach Mike Shanahan met with Albert Haynesworth on Monday and kept the conversation to himself, saying it’s “completely ridiculous” to keep talking about it publicly.

“If you guys want to talk about football, we’ll talk about football,” Shanahan said. “But to keep on talking about things outside of football to me is completely ridiculous. I did have a conversation with him. If you want to talk about football, we’ll talk about football.”
