Council approves budget, punts on tobacco in parks

Councilman says uncommitted fund is largest in his 17 years with city

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

In a relatively unexciting budget season, one that lacked last summer's calls of greater cuts, the Twin Falls City Council has passed up extra revenue sources for the next year.

The city won't collect 3 percent more in property taxes, or another half a million in foregone dollars. Its final 2011 budget is about $1 million less than what was published as a result, and less than $1 million higher than the current year's estimated spending.

However, property owners will need to pay an extra 31 cents per $1,000 of assessed value if their property value stayed static. Taxes on properties that lost 5 percent or more of their value will decrease, said Travis Rothweiler, assistant city manager.

The potential increase is to make up for the community's overall lost property value.

The budget also leaves $454,022 as uncommitted funds, available just in case. It's the most Councilman Lance Clow said he's seen in his 17 years working on the city budget, including his time as a former mayor.

"I think we have a responsibility to tell (taxpayers) what we are going to do with this $450,000," he said, defending an amendment to set aside $150,000 of the sum specifically for residential road work.

The amendment ultimately failed, with council members saying they worried about not knowing

3 state employees add their voice to Idaho tax lawsuit

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The case began with one former auditor alleging in sworn court affidavits that the Idaho State Tax Commission gives secret tax deals to well-connected individuals and companies, costing the state millions in compromises in the process.

The lawsuit, filed by Rep. Shirley Ringo, D-Moscow, against the tax commission and its commissioners — Royce Chigbrow, Tom Katsilometes, Sam Haws and David Langhorst — has grown far beyond that since its start in June in Ada County District Court.

Now, three current employees of the commission — a manager and two auditors — have put their concerns on the record in affidavits in support of Ringo's lawsuit. The northern Idaho lawmaker's case now has eight former or current employees of the tax commission on record, each one with decades of experience.

In their entirety, the sworn affidavits allege a pattern of "compromise and closing agreements" that happen out of the public eye with corporations and individuals to resolve tax disputes for far less than what's owed. They also allege other inequities, such as giving deals before audits are completed, providing discounts to companies

Finally back to school

T.F. schools return from extended summer break

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Students heading back to class don't seem to have had complaints about the late start to many of their school years.

Those in Twin Falls School District, and many other districts in the Magic Valley, started class on Tuesday. It was a later-than-usual return from students' summer breaks, following changes made to the school calendar that cut classroom time to deal with a statewide public schools budget cut of $128.5 million.

In the case of Twin Falls

Twin Falls High School student Tkeya Calderon, 16, listens to one of her peers in English 11 class during their first day back to school on Tuesday afternoon.

School District, there are eight fewer school days — four of which are half days.

"What I've noticed is, it seems like the kids were pretty much ready to come back," said Ben Allen, principal of Twin Falls High School.

When classes typically resume in the later part of August, the heat can sometimes make class uncomfortable for students in the school, much of which is not air-conditioned. Avoiding the heat is one good thing about the later start, Allen said.

"It just seems like everybody's in a really good mood," he said.

Students were agreeable with the late start.

iors, said they liked having the school year start after Labor Day instead of returning to class in late August and then immediately taking a three-day break for the holiday.

"We don't have a ton of breaks this year," Clark said.

Another benefit students mentioned: having the Twin Falls County Fair take place before school, not during it.

"It's a lot better," said Zach Merrill, a 16-year-old junior. "We had a lot more summertime and we got to go to the fair without having to go to school, which is really nice."

Tyrell Reiman, a 15-year-old sophomore, echoed that.

"It was nice," he said. "I got to go to the fair more and chill with friends longer. ... I do prefer this way better."

First sentence doled out for liquor-store burglary

T.F. woman receives suspended prison term

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A Twin Falls woman became the first underage burglar of the Kimberly Road state liquor store in Twin Falls to be sentenced on Tuesday afternoon.

Brina Krohn, 19, received two concurrent, suspended prison sentences of up to six years apiece, each with a five-year probationary period, after pleading guilty to burglary and grand theft in July.

"You have no priors, you're young and impressionable, but this is not a juvenile proceeding," 5th District Judge G. Richard

Bevan told Krohn before pronouncing sentence. "This was so ill-conceived that it was caught on video and garnered a lot of community attention."

Democrats add fiscal austerity as a campaign issue

By Shailagh Murray
The Washington Post

The candidate was outraged — just outraged — at the country's sorry fiscal state.

"We have managed to acquire $13 trillion of debt on our balance sheet," he fumed to a roomful of voters. "In my view, we have nothing to show for it."

And that was a Democrat, Sen. Michael Bennet of Colorado, who voted "yes" on the stimulus, the health-care overhaul, increased education funding and other costly bills Congress approved under his party's control.

Faced with a potential wipeout in November's midterm elections, candidates such as Bennet are embracing budget cuts with the enthusiasm of Reagan Republicans.

Paul Hodes, the Democratic Senate candidate in New Hampshire, recently proposed $3 billion in spending cuts that would slice airport, railroad and housing funds. Elected to the House four years ago as an antiwar progressive, Hodes lamented that "for too long, both parties have willfully spent with no regard for our nation's debt."

The new push for austerity could prove too little, too late for Democrats, who fear losing their majorities in both chambers of Congress. In dozens of House and Senate races, incumbent Democrats are struggling in polls, leading political analysts to raise the serious prospect of Republican takeovers in the House and even the Senate.

The most ominous recent sign for Democrats was a Gallup poll released last week showing a wide gap in voter enthusiasm, favoring Republicans. Those Democrats who prevail in November will likely return to the Capitol in a more fiscally conservative mood.

Even as Democrats vow to bring spending under control, GOP candidates are trying to outdo them, embracing far more radical deficit-cutting solutions, including shuttering entire federal agencies. House Minority

Hansen man treated after truck rollover

Times-News

A Hansen man suffered minor injuries in a rollover crash near Boise on Tuesday, according to Idaho State Police.

Donn H. Drury, 34, was a passenger in a LRVP military cargo vehicle driven by Spc. Donald L. VonPraag, 22, of Boise. The vehicle was west-bound on Interstate 84 when, around milepost 64 east of Boise, it drifted off of the right shoulder, came back on to the roadway, overcorrected and rolled into the median.

ISP responded at around 1:50 p.m. Drury was taken by ground ambulance to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. VonPraag was taken to the same hospital by air ambulance, and passenger Leif H. Sorensen, 43, of Rexburg, went there by private vehicle. All three were treated and released.

All three people wore seatbelts at the time of the crash and alcohol was not a factor, according to ISP.

Dems

Leader John Boehner, R-Ohio, pledged last week to repeal unspent stimulus funding and take a “long and hard look at the undergrowth of deductions, credits and special carveouts” in the tax code, such as the mortgage-interest deduction that benefits millions of middle-class homeowners.

Some Democrats are looking to the debate over taxes to show voters they are serious about their conversion to fiscal restraint. President George W. Bush’s tax cuts, enacted in 2001 and 2003, are scheduled to expire this year. President Barack Obama has called for extending the cuts for all but the wealthiest taxpayers, with the additional $700 billion in revenue going to deficit reduction.

Republicans support a permanent extension of the tax cuts. The National Republican Senatorial Committee begins its daily digest of campaign news with a countdown to Dec. 31, the day “the Democrats slam voters with the largest tax hike in American history.”

But extending all the cuts would increase the deficit by $3.9 trillion over the next 10 years, the Congressional Budget Office says.

“We need to expose their hypocrisy on tax relief vs. deficit reduction,” said Rep. Chris Van Hollen, Md., head of the House Democrats’ campaign committee and a member of the party’s House leadership. “What most of the economists are telling us is we need to send a clear signal that we’re going to put our fiscal house in order.”

Some Democrats flinch at the timing of such a show-down. Senate candidate Robin Carnahan of Missouri is one of several high-profile Democrats who advocate keeping the Bush cuts until the economy improves. A one-year extension appears to be gaining particular traction. Carnahan spokesman Linden Zakula said the candidate “believes we must do everything we can to help our small businesses create jobs and get our economy back on track — not raise taxes on families.”

The rhetoric between the parties can sound remarkably similar.

“The problem from a fiscal conservative voter’s point of view is that every member or wannabe member claims to be a fiscal conservative these days, so it’s more difficult than usual to separate the wheat from the chaff,” said Chris Edwards, director of tax policy studies at the Cato Institute, a libertarian-leaning think tank.

Hodes has one of those complicated profiles. He championed the health-care overhaul bill as a “jobs bill” and campaigned with Vice President Joe Biden last week to tout the benefits of the stimulus, which cost $814 billion — none of it paid for.

But Hodes also voted against the federal bank bailout approved two years ago under Bush — the vote that lit the torch of the current anti-government furor. He has also advocated deficit-reduction measures that include $60 billion in defense cuts and the reinstatement of balanced-budget rules that led to the surpluses of the 1990s.

Cassia schools examine hiring policy following charges

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia County School District may scrutinize its hiring practices after two teachers were accused of child-sex crimes within the last year.

Besides an ongoing review of what questions the district is allowed to ask potential hires, district officials said they may also update policies and procedures to better protect students. The district’s board of trustees is also considering a policy regarding use of social-networking sites such as Facebook.

The discussions come after a former teacher was sentenced and a current teacher was charged for separate incidents involving underage students.

Former Burley High School teacher Chad Burnett, 28, was sentenced last week to up to 12 years in prison for crimes related to a sexual relationship he had with a student at the school. Charged in December 2009, Burnett did not have any previous criminal convictions.

The day before Burnett was sentenced, Burley Junior High School English and drama teacher Michael Scott Brinkerhoff, 42, was charged with sexual abuse of a minor under the age of 16 and enticing children over the Internet, both felonies. Brinkerhoff is suspended with pay pending the outcome of the case, and has not yet entered a plea.

Online court records revealed that Brinkerhoff had a prior string of misdemeanor petit theft convictions in Bonneville County. But that information slipped by the school district when it hired him in 2006.

Superintendent Gaylen Smyer said the misdemeanor information was not contained in a report from the Idaho State Department of Education, which his district relies on for criminal background checks.

Potential teachers undergo background checks when they become certified and each time they change districts, said ISDE spokeswoman Melissa McGrath. Reports should include both felony and misdemeanor crimes, she said, adding that school districts are also allowed to perform their own pre-hiring checks.

“They are the employers,” McGrath said.

ISDE background checks include fingerprinting, state and FBI criminal records and a review of the statewide sex-offender registry. Teachers also have to abide by the state’s Professional Standards Commission’s Code of Ethics, which requires them to obey all federal, state and local laws. Violators of the code of ethics can be taken before the commission for disciplinary action.

Cassia County does check employee references, which sometimes turn up concerns, Smyer said. The district’s job application was recently updated, he said, and is currently being reviewed to ensure it asks prospective teachers everything the district is legally allowed to ask.

The most recent allegations against Brinkerhoff include that he pretended to be a 15-year-old boy to engage in online sexual conduct with a 14-year-old female student.

School Board Chairwoman Debbie Critchfield said the board is exploring the need for a social-networking policy.

“I don’t know if there is a fail-safe way to protect our students from this happening,” Critchfield said. “... Certainly we see (social networking’s) value, but know we must be wise in how we use it.”

One issue out of the district’s hands are restrictions on sharing negative information about a former employee.

“For example,” Critchfield said, “if a potential employee left a previous district under dubious reasons, the hiring district is not entitled to that information. It stays with that home district. Only positive information is sent forward.”

That, she said, doesn’t help anyone.

Critchfield said the district can never be sure an employee won’t mess up, and that no hiring process is foolproof.

“We trust that we have properly vetted the employee and trust that the employee will do well,” she said. “Sometimes the homework doesn’t pay off. People make mistakes.”

$300 in liquor items. Damage to liquor stock destroyed in the break-in is estimated at $6,000.

Bevan also ordered Krohn to pay restitution to the victims, including the owner of the building and the owner of the car used to smash into it. The final restitution amount to be shared among the co-defendants isn’t finalized — the state has 30 days to schedule a hearing or submit an amount — but it could range from $30,000 to $35,000, according to Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Melissa Kippes.

In addition, Krohn must serve 60 days in the Twin Falls County Jail on work release. Sixty more days could be in her future, depending on her progress with maintaining employment and making payments toward restitution. She must also complete 100 days of community service and finish her high-school equivalency degree by 2012. Bevan also ordered a suspended fine of $2,000 per charge.

Before hearing Krohn’s fate, Kippes and defense counsel Daniel Taylor presented arguments for sentencing.

“She is one of the main players,” Kippes said, but she also acknowledged that Krohn was the first to come to authorities and was willing to testify against a co-defendant had that individual not waived a preliminary hearing.

Krohn also spoke before the court, saying that she apologizes to everyone she has hurt.

Krohn was arrested in May, along with Kristopher McKean, Kristan McKean, Megan Marovich, Charles Marovich and Esperanda Valladares. Each suspect was under age 21 at the time of the burglary.

Megan Marovich is scheduled for a Sept. 17 sentencing, and Kristan McKean faces sentencing on Sept. 27. Kristopher McKean and Charles Marovich are set to be sentenced on Oct. 4. Valladares is set to be arraigned in district court on Sept. 15.

Immediately after, Clow proposed another change — erasing $100,000 from the uncommitted fund — but that one failed when no other council members supported it.

Clow ended up the only councilman to vote against the budget.

In other council news, members voted to postpone taking action on a proposal to ban tobacco entirely from five Twin Falls parks, and from within 50 feet of playground and other park equipment in the rest of the city’s parks.

The council plans tentatively to hold a public hearing on that proposal Sept. 20.

Twin Falls County budget meeting ends with applause

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The first of two public hearings Tuesday evening on Twin Falls County's budget ended in a surprise: applause.

It's a surprise considering the proposed $37 million budget is the second with no employee pay increases and that it is almost the same as this current year. But applause from the crowd, exclusively county staffers, came nonetheless.

Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter said the applause was because the commissioners managed to handle what may be a 17 percent increase to health care costs without passing it on to the county employees, keeping their take-home pay the same.

"And no layoffs," added Capt. Tim Miller.

Commissioner Terry Kramer said the uncertain health care hike is because of the federal health care law passed this year.

Commissioner Tom Mikesell said passing the increase on to the employees was an option, but one the county was able to avoid.

Its budget process isn't done yet — the county commissioners will hold their second public hearing at 10 a.m. today. Mikesell doesn't expect much though; he said he remembers only one member of the public showing at the morning hearing in his 10 years of going to the meetings.

BLM plans Cinder Butte controlled burn

Times-News

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management plans to conduct a prescribed burn in the Cinder Butte area northeast of Hazelton sometime between today and Sept. 30, depending on favorable weather conditions.

The burn is expected to last for days, with two days of burning approximately 700 acres of grass and weeds followed by two days of monitoring.

The West Cinder prescribed burn will provide numerous resource and landscape benefits, according to the BLM, and will reduce fire risk and subsequent conversion of sagebrush habitat to invasive species.

Residual smoke may settle east of the project in the evenings, but the majority of smoke is expected to move northeast. Information: Tony Erickson, 312-1709.

Amid deadly attacks, Wyo. landfill draws grizzlies

By Mead Gruver
Associated Press writer

CLARK, Wyo. — From a grizzly bear's perspective, the small landfill in this tiny northwest Wyoming community might smell like a buffet dinner, with dead livestock and meat processing waste dumped in a pit not far from the other trash.

Environmentalist Hilary Eisen with the Greater Yellowstone Coalition calls the situation in Clark "very worrisome," with only a short wire fence standing between the landfill and any hungry grizzlies drawn by the scent.

"Bears coming into places where humans are, such as garbage dumps or other places, and recognizing that as a food source, is one of the first steps toward creating a dangerous bear," Eisen said.

Some point out that landfills with designated pits for dead animals aren't uncommon and there's nothing specifically about Clark's that would make it particularly risky. Others aren't so sure.

Grizzlies have killed two people within 50 miles of Clark since June. A grizzly seriously injured a man last summer a few miles from the landfill.

The Wyoming Game and Fish Department has trapped two grizzlies this year at the landfill near the Montana state line. The department moved them about 100 miles away to remote areas south of Yellowstone National Park.

Meanwhile, the landfill has continued to take waste from a meat processor in Belfry, Mont., about 15 miles up the road. On a recent day, various dead animal parts and several plastic trash bags full of entrails sat in an open pit at the landfill. Blood pooled onto the dirt.

One grizzly a year has stopped through the Clark landfill in recent years, said Sandie Morris, manager of the Park County landfill office.

"It's a grizzly bear buffet out there," Morris said. "But it's the same thing for the coyotes, the foxes and the raccoons."

Dumped that morning, the meat processing waste was buried by day's end, she said, consistent with the landfill's policy for the waste dumped each Tuesday.

Park County officials haven't installed an electric fence or some other way to keep grizzlies out because the state Department of Environmental Quality is deliberating whether to close several Wyoming landfills, including the one in Clark, she said.

"Frankly neither Park County nor the Game and Fish wants to invest a large amount of taxpayer money into an electric fence situation, only to have the state close down the landfill a year or two later," she said.

She called the landfill safe, saying the attendant carries bear spray and does a sweep for any grizzlies before opening the gate each morning.

"It comes down to public education," Morris said Thursday. "You chose to live in grizzly bear habitat, you need to exercise grizzly bear precaution."

Clark resident Jerry Ruth was severely mauled by a grizzly a few miles from the landfill last year. He said he carries a gun wherever he thinks he might encounter a grizzly — that includes trips to the landfill.

"As long as they continue to use a section of it for dead animals or animal parts, they're going to continue to go there," Ruth said of grizzlies.

A retired police officer, Ruth fatally shot the grizzly that attacked him. Two people attacked by grizzlies in the region this year were less fortunate.

On June 17, a 430-pound male grizzly that researchers had sedated woke up and killed a man hiking six miles outside Yellowstone's east gate. On July 28, a 216-pound female grizzly killed a man and seriously injured two others at a campground near Cooke City, Mont., near the park's northeast entrance.

The bear that attacked Ruth wasn't lured to the Clark area by the landfill, said Mark Bruscano, a bear specialist with the Wyoming Game and Fish Department.

He said he doesn't think Park County needs to change landfill operations — at least not before finding out the fate of the Clark landfill.

"All landfills function to store community waste, and community waste in a rural landfill includes dead animals," Bruscano said. "Every landfill that I know of has a dead animal pit. So it's not like something unusual is happening there."

Bruscano and his counterparts in Idaho and Montana also said they knew of no similar, recent problem with bears at landfills or trash transfer stations in the Yellowstone region.

On May 19, Game and Fish captured a young female grizzly at the Clark landfill and moved it south of Yellowstone. On June 26, the agency captured an adult female grizzly at the landfill and moved it northwest of Grand Teton National Park.

Bruscano said Game and Fish doesn't want grizzlies feeding at the landfill and is working with Park County on long-term solutions.

Jerome County mulls pre-vote jail sketches

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

JEROME — If a picture is worth 1,000 words, Jerome County officials wonder if one might also be worth 1,000 votes.

County commissioners met on Tuesday to discuss the need for conceptual drawings for the county's proposed 165-bed jail facility.

After a brief discussion, the commissioners didn't vote on whether to pursue such jail blueprints or conceptual drawings. Nor did they outline how much such drawings would cost.

Is there a need? Commissioners agreed that drawings would help convince voters on Nov. 2 to approve the $13 million bond needed to build the jail, a vote that needs 66.6 percent supermajority approval to pass.

County Prosecutor John Horgan said drawings of the facility would be a step in the right direction.

"If the vote is positive, it would be nice to be ready to go," Horgan said. "It's a matter of being ready to move forward."

Lee Halper, a county resident and longtime critic of county government, said he wondered why cost estimates and blueprints weren't presented earlier, since this is the third time funding for the facility has gone before voters.

Other citizens have voiced their interest in seeing drawings of what their tax money will go toward and the request, albeit slightly delayed, will hopefully be answered in the next week, according to Sheriff Doug McFall.

McFall has been in contact with Jefferson County Jail officials and said he would like to see a layout similar to that facility for Jerome County's proposed lockup. Isolation areas and space for an Idaho Department of Corrections bus are some of the layout specifics he would like to see.

"Nothing will be firm until an architect puts the plan together," McFall said. "Anything is subject to change."

McFall said the county's recent choice of a jail site east of Jerome has helped improve the public's attitude toward the bond, but added that drawings of the proposed facility would help.

U.S. 30 work through Hagerman to start today

Times-News

Traffic delays and temporary closures are expected through Hagerman starting today, as the Idaho Transportation Department conducts road preservation work along U.S. Highway 30. Overlay paving of the highway between North Avenue and 2700 South Road is expected to last about a week, during which traffic will be reduced to one lane in each direction. Drivers should watch for flaggers and be prepared for delays of up to 10 minutes, according to an ITD release.

Intersecting streets will be closed for short periods during roadway milling and for multiple hours during paving. Parking will not be permitted along State Street (U.S. 30) between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. Idaho Sand and Gravel of Jerome is the contractor for the $269,000 project.

Grim outlook for Dems puts House up for grabs

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Their control of the House in peril, Democrats are playing defense all across the country. Disgruntled voters, a sluggish economy and vanishing enthusiasm for President Barack Obama have put 75 seats or more — the vast majority held by Democrats — at risk of changing hands.

The party could become a victim of its own successes during the past two elections, when candidates were swept into power by antipathy for President George W. Bush and ardor for Obama. Now, eight weeks from Election Day, the Democrats are bracing for the virtual certainty of lost House seats and scrambling to hold back a wave that could hand the GOP the 40 it needs to command a majority.

Obama, grasping for a way to turn the tide, on Wednesday plans to propose $30 billion in new investment tax breaks for businesses to go along with tens of billions in spending he called for on Labor Day to invigorate the slow recovery. But even if Congress acts on the requests — a long shot in a highly charged political season — there's little time left for Democrats to salvage their election chances.

With Obama's popularity slumping and the party demoralized, dozens of first- and second-term Democrats as well as longer-serving congressmen who haven't faced serious challenges in years are toiling to hold onto their jobs in places that tend to prefer Republicans. And polls show independent voters leaning toward the GOP.

When asked which party they want to control Congress, voters are split or leaning toward Republicans, national surveys say. Perhaps even more ominously for Democrats, voters are overwhelmingly sour about national issues, especially the economy.

More than 60 percent said the nation was in a state of decline and on the wrong track in the latest Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll, in which voters likely to turn out in November gave Republicans a gaping 9-point edge when asked which party they wanted to control Congress.

Much can change between now and Election Day, and a GOP House takeover is far from sure. The political parties, individual campaigns and outside groups that spend heavily to influence elections have scarcely begun to distribute the hundreds of millions of dollars they plan to pour into key congressional districts across the country for advertising and on-the-ground organizing that can turn out crucial voters.

And most voters have yet to focus on the contests.

Still, Republicans are confidently predicting Democrats' defeat.

"Republicans have the intensity," said Rep. Kevin McCarthy, R-Calif., head recruiter for House GOP candidates. "The map is growing by the day."

Democrats acknowledge the strong headwinds but counter that, with a solid fundraising advantage over Republicans and years worth of preparation for what they always knew would be a brutal election, they can fight off the GOP onslaught.

"We've got some very, very tough political territory on an off year with a weak economy, so it's a major challenge in a difficult political environment. That said, we will retain a majority in the House," said Democratic Rep. Chris Van Hollen, the party's House campaign chief.

The current breakdown is 255 Democrats, 178 Republicans and two vacancies that appear likely to be won by the GOP.

Democratic incumbents are at risk from California to New York and particularly in the unemployment-stricken Rust Belt, where six in Pennsylvania and five in Ohio face stiff challenges. Hotly contested races are unfolding in every region, including three each in Arizona, Florida, Illinois and Indiana, and two in Alabama, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Wisconsin and Virginia.

Among the most vulnerable Democratic incumbents are Betsy Markey of Colorado, Steve Driehaus of Ohio, and Tom Perriello of Virginia — all freshmen in districts that voted for Republican presidential nominee John McCain in 2008. They had little time to settle into elected office before casting votes for key elements of Obama's agenda that are overwhelmingly unpopular at home, including the health care law and the so-called cap-and-trade measure to curb carbon emissions.

At the same time, a handful of influential, senior Democrats — including Missouri's Ike Skelton, the chair of the Armed Services Committee, and South Carolinian John Spratt, the Budget chairman — are facing formidable re-election battles in a year when voter dislike of elected officials, excessive government spending and the political establishment is on the rise.

Reps. Alan Boyd of Florida and Earl Pomeroy of North Dakota — both in the House more than a decade — and Paul Kanjorski of Pennsylvania and Chet Edwards of Texas — veterans of 20 years or more — also face tough fights.

And Democrats are facing tight races to hang on to most of the 20 seats where the incumbent retired, left or is pursuing another office — typically the most difficult for a party to defend. Those include two each in Arkansas and Tennessee, and long-shots in Louisiana, Kansas and upstate New York, where Rep. Eric Massa resigned in March amid an investigation into whether he sexually harassed male staffers.

Most of the 23 open Republican seats are not regarded as seriously in play, although Democrats have good chances of claiming two being vacated by GOP lawmakers running for the Senate, including one in Delaware now held by Mike Castle and one in the Chicago suburbs held by Mark Kirk.

Only a few Republican incumbents are at serious risk in otherwise Democratic districts, including Joseph Cao in New Orleans and Charles Djou in Hawaii. Democrats also believe they have shots at ousting Republican Reps. Dave Reichert in Washington and Lee Terry in Nebraska.

Surprising truths about Idaho’s kids

The annual report issued by Kids Count, a national survey of child welfare in America, is often an eye-opener. But the most recent survey, which was funded by a non-profit foundation started by UPS founder James Casey, contains some remarkable statistics about Idaho youngsters:

- Idaho has the fourth-highest percentage of 3-5-year-olds in America who are not enrolled in nursery school, preschool or kindergarten: 50 percent. You could explain that for social reasons — the large percentage of Mormon families that prefer to teach preschoolers at home. But in mostly Mormon Utah, 54 percent of young children receive some form education outside the home.

The percentage of Idaho preschoolers who live in economically disadvantaged families — 20 percent — is high. You have to wonder if all of the above plays into the fact that 68 percent of Idaho fourth-graders are rated below proficient in reading ability.

- Idaho has the second-lowest rate of immunization for babies and toddlers in the nation, ahead of only Nevada.

- The Gem State has the sixth-highest percentage of kids with asthma in the country — significantly higher than California, which is the state most often associated with air pollution.

- The state has the third-lowest percentage of single father-headed households in America.

- Idaho has the second-lowest percentage of children in one-parent families in the United States, ahead of only Utah.

- Eighty-nine percent of the immigrant kids in Idaho live in two-parent households — second-highest in the country.

- Idaho has the third-highest percentage of immigrant kids whose parents have been in the United States fewer than five years.

- The state has the third-highest percentage of children age 4 and under in America.

What does all that mean? Two things, really. Idaho has a solid network of families and communities.

And a whole lot of challenges in taking care of its kids in the future.

Federal pay should reflect reality

Government jobs have long enjoyed a reputation for being plum positions. But it took Robert Rizzo to really make the case.

Rizzo is the man who became famous last month for the unbelievable salary he was pulling down as city manager of Bell, Calif. — $787,000 a year, nearly double President Obama’s salary. Who knew that running a city of 38,000 was so difficult? Voter outrage forced Rizzo to tender his resignation. But the joke is on taxpayers. Rizzo can now collect a pension of $650,000 a year. By the time he turns 65, his pension will rise to more than $1 million annually.

Fortunately, government salaries this lavish are the exception, not the rule. But, despite what John Berry, the government’s personnel chief, said in a recent statement, government employees do make more on average than comparable private-sector workers. Jobs with state and local governments are known for their generous benefits. Fewer people know that federal employees also get overpaid.

Federal workers perform more skilled work than most private-sector employers, so they naturally earn higher wages. The unions representing federal employees insist that their higher skills explain federal employees higher pay.

But it does not. Even accounting for their skills and education, the average federal employee earns substantially higher wages — 22 percent higher — than they would in the private sector. And that’s just cash earnings. The federal government offers gold-plated benefits, too. The Federal Employees Health Benefits Program offers excellent coverage without age, health or pre-existing condition requirements. Federal employees also get a government pension and can retire as young as 56 with full benefits. How many workers in the private sector do that? Federal employees also get fantastic leave benefits. After three years on the job they get four weeks’ vacation a year, all 10 federal holidays and 13 sick days — all paid. Few Fortune 500 companies could afford to offer employees that much time off.

If you include the value of these benefits the average federal employee’s total compensation rises to 30 percent to 40 percent above comparable private-sector workers. Federal employees enjoy another perk unheard of in the private sector: near absolute job security. Federal employees rarely lose their jobs for poor performance. Once they have put in a year on the job it becomes almost impossible to fire a civil servant. Recessions do not put their jobs at risk either.

Unsurprisingly, federal employees quit only one-third as often as private sector workers do. They seem to know they could not find a better job elsewhere.

Yes, a job with Uncle Sam is nice work, if you can get it.

This generosity, however, costs taxpayers a bundle. If the government reduced federal compensation to private-sector rates it would save $47 billion next year — more than $400 per income-tax filer. The problem with overpaying federal workers goes beyond simple unfairness. The taxes that fund this generous pay hurt the economy.

Congress plans to significantly raise taxes on dividends and savings at the end of the year, as well as the top tax rates paid on small-business income. Small-business owners already rate taxes as their second-largest problem. These new taxes would discourage entrepreneurs from taking the risk of starting new ventures and investors from taking the risk of funding them. Thus tax increases mean fewer jobs. Reducing federal pay to private-sector rates would allow Congress to keep taxes lower and the economy stronger. That doesn’t mean Congress should cut federal pay across the board.

These figures are only averages. Because the government largely bases raises on seniority and not performance, many hard-working federal workers do not get overpaid. These workers should not get their pay cut.

Congress should go to the root of the problem and completely reform how the government pays its employees.

Uncle Sam should move to performance-based pay based on market rates — the same system most private employers use. The government should also bring federal benefits in line with the private sector and allow managers to fire poor performers.

These reforms are common sense. Federal employees shouldn’t get more than those whose taxes fund their salaries, especially when those taxes discourage businesses from hiring. The government shouldn’t put federal workers’ premium pay above jobs for the unemployed.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Frank Buhl would be proud of town

To Steve Crump:
Your Aug. 29 article titled “Some Frank talk about, well, Frank” contained some observations about Buhl that we would like to address. Although we have long been fans of your humor, we must take exception in this instance.

Your article misses the essence of Buhl. Although the town is one of many small, struggling communities in Idaho, to refer to this area as Rockchuck Acres does not do justice to the many businesses, activities, events and individuals that are a positive part of this town. You state that Frank H. Buhl was a captain of industry “who would have liked to be remembered for the steel girders that he manufactured ... rather than have his name associated with trout.” Let’s discuss those manufacturing and trout industries!

Frank Buhl would be proud that the building industry was enhanced in the 1960s by the development of a new building technique using improved wooden “trusses.” The concept evolved into the formation of the Trus Joist Corp. Among the original founders and financial backers of that company were several Buhl residents.

Likewise, following the development of mechanical fish-eviscerating machines by individuals from the Buhl area, the trout industry evolved into a major supplier of products in the national and international marketplace. What other town of Buhl’s size can claim to be such an integral part of America’s free enterprise system?

Frank Buhl would be proud that the town that bears his name is meeting the challenges of a changing world.

Within recent years, the city undertook a major beautification and renovation project downtown. We have one of the best Fourth of July parades and fireworks displays in the valley. Each fall, the town is uniquely decorated with huge wooden trout for the annual Trout Festival.

This year, we have added a Mexican Fiesta and Rodeo to our city celebrations. Our volunteer “First Responders” are some of the best in the nation. Within the past month, the Buhl Men’s Club raised more than $11,000 for scholarships and community projects. Citizens of Buhl were the original supporters of the College of Southern Idaho and gave that institution its first headquarters!

We have a beautiful city park, playgrounds, ball fields, a bandshell, swimming pool and skate park. Our students still win many academic and athletic awards. Within a few miles of Buhl, we have a magnificent golf course, country club and picturesque vineyards and wineries. Surrounding the town are successful organic and traditional farming areas.

The Christmas Cantata presented by the multide-nominational choir will give you a glimpse of the wonderful life that we have in the west end of Twin Falls County.

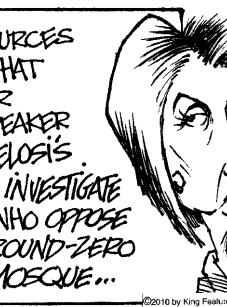

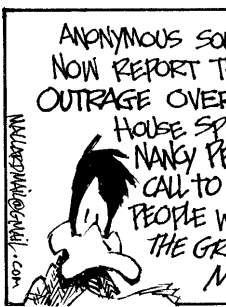

So come on, Steve. Let’s give Buhl (both the city and the man) the respect they deserve.

Proud to live in Buhl,

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

By Garry Trudeau

By Bruce Tinsley

It’s time to take a serious look at a flat tax

“The U.S. economy remains almost comatose....The current slump already ranks as the longest period of sustained weakness since the Great Depression....Once-in-a-lifetime dislocations...will take years to work out. Among them: the job drought, the debt hangover, the defense-industry contraction, the (banking) collapse, the real estate depression, the health-care cost explosion and the runaway federal deficit.”

That’s how Time magazine described the dismal state of the U.S. economy — in September 1992. The passage has been making the rounds in financial circles, a token reminder that today’s pessimism — the forecast of a “lost decade” for employment by Pimco CEO Mohamed El-Erian, for example — may turn out to be too extreme.

Almost before that Time article reached the recycling bin, the economy was humming again. Real gross domestic product rose 4.3 percent, both in the fourth quarter of 1992 and on a year-over-year basis — and for the rest of the decade America never looked back.

Could it happen again? When it comes to financial markets, pessimism is a buy signal. Just when the outlook is bleakest, when investors have liquidated their stocks or sold them short, markets tend to turn up. Can the same be said about economic pessimism?

One should never underestimate America’s capacity for self-renewal, its spirit in the face of adversity. The unexpected Clinton-era boom owed a lot to a technology-driven leap in productivity growth, which had slumped to about 1.5 percent from the mid-1970s to mid-1990s, then bounced back to 2.5 percent.

Right now it’s hard to see what might come along to goose U.S. productivity in the same way, but to quote Melanie Griffith’s character in the George H.W. Bush-era movie “Working Girl,” “You never know where the next big idea might come from.”

That said, there are good reasons to believe a 1990s-style surprise won’t materialize in this decade. The foundations for growth that were in place then are missing now.

Take declining deficits. The end of the Cold War saw defense spending fall from 5.2 percent of GDP when Bill Clinton took office to 3 percent in 2000.

At the same time, the tech bubble of the last half of the 1990s and a capital-gains tax cut in 1997 produced a revenue windfall for the Treasury as investors took profits. Personal income taxes as a share of GDP rose to a record 10.2 percent in 2000 compared with a more typical 8 percent. The federal government posted its first budget surplus in almost three decades in 1998. It wasn’t until 2002 that wars, tax cuts, recession, and a less ebullient stock market conspired to bring the deficit back with a vengeance.

But there is one parallel between 2010 and the Clinton era. In political terms, this election year is shaping up to be a lot like 1994, when the Republicans wrested control of both houses of Congress from the Democrats. It was the first GOP majority in the House in 50 years.

In response, Clinton moved to the center, something that many business leaders would welcome from President Barack Obama. Rightly or wrongly, many blame the current confidence slump on Obama and the Democratic

There are good reasons to believe a 1990s-style surprise won’t materialize in this decade. The foundations for growth that were in place then are missing now.

Congress. A fiscal policy in flux is not conducive to entrepreneurship.

America’s challenges, however, go well beyond its political class. As a nation, we demand more in benefits than we’re willing to pay for in taxes. If we aren’t won’t compromise, we’d better find a way to grow the pie.

One way would be real tax reform — scrapping the Internal Revenue Code and replacing it with something simpler and flatter. Forget targeted tax cuts, which simply create more opportunities for gaming and more business for lobbyists. Just think how much more productive businesses would be if they spent the same time and money on their products and services that they do on influence peddlers and lawyers.

Businesses and households will devote more than 7.5 billion hours this year to complying with income tax laws, according to the National Taxpayers Union’s “A Taxing Trend” report for 2010. For individuals, the total compliance tab, including the value of their time and the cost of tax preparation, amounts to $103 billion.

“Given the huge amount of expense our overcompli-cated tax system imposes on us, fundamental tax reform would be one of the best ways imaginable to stimulate our economy without plunging the country further into debt,” writes David Keating, senior counselor at the Taxpayers Union.

He advocates replacing the “current mess” with a flat tax or national retail sales tax. Congress, of course, is not about to relinquish its power over the tax code. America would need a national grass-roots movement and perhaps a constitutional amendment to force through such a reform. That would be a worthy final act for the baby boomers — and it might help bring back the boom.

In praise of the old college try

I made a deal with my kids about their college educations. It’s very simple: I’ll pay half and they’ll pay half. How they pay for their share is up to them, but I match every dollar they earn in scholarship, pay for themselves or take out in a loan.

When I tell other parents about this, some of them look at me like I’m Attila the Hun. “Unthinkable” their expressions say. “You would force your kids to pay for something when you can afford it yourself?”

I can live with the furrowed brows because I have good reasons.

I have seen what happens to many young people who take what I call the “Budweiser Scholarship” of a parent-paid education. Often, 18- and 19-year-olds are clueless about what they want to do with their life and $20k-$40k/year is an awfully steep price for discovery. Most people have a greater appreciation for something when they pay for it themselves — they have skin in the game.

I have four children, and each one has responded differently to the challenge.

With my encouragement, my oldest son took a year off to work in the “real world” before beginning his studies. Toiling at a job open to a high school grad convinced him of the value of college. He then worked for a state environmental program that gave him a sizable education grant, which I matched. His grade-point average was higher in college than in high school. He was only too happy to work summers, and when he graduated, he started his career with no college debt.

My second son has worked as a waiter to supplement his education costs and that has made him very selective about how he spends his tuition money. He is focused on creative arts like writing, theatre and production. He makes sure every course counts so he will graduate on time.

My daughter took advantage of a program in her senior year that let her graduate from high school with a year’s worth of college credit for free. It lets her finish college in three years. That was clever. Since she earned one full year of college credits for free, I matched it by paying for one full year. So now she just has to split the cost of the last two years.

We will see how my youngest son reacts. He is still in high school and living in a virtual reality world that does not yet include much thought about college.

As I share this idea around the country, I find I’m not the only parent who has decided to avoid spending tons of money on unsettled youth with whimsical aspirations and no financial responsibilities.

And the truth is that most people facing retirement years just can’t afford to flush multi-thousands of dollars, no matter how much they love their children. Education money must be well spent.

Some parents have told me about a “First Lap” plan where the child pays for freshman year. If that year ends with a decent grade-point average, the parents pay the other three years. Not a bad idea, especially considering how many freshmen select a major not in liberal arts but liberal parties.

With so many kids dawdling though five or six years of undergraduate work, some parents offer bonuses if their children finish early.

Many parents are just frustrated that their children don’t take much interest in their expensive education if they don’t help pay for it. One parent told me that since his children didn’t contribute toward college, they didn’t feel any urgency to get a job. He wasn’t thrilled about having 28 year olds at home.

With my own family, our journey through college is not yet over. But we have learned that our plan has encouraged our kids to develop a good work ethic, to remain focused on courses that will be valuable to their lives and to be more prepared when they enter college to know why they are there.

Hard-working, focused and prepared. I don’t know of a college course that teaches those life skills. Perhaps it is something you can only learn if you have skin in the game.

Conservation funding gets deadline extension

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Farmers who thought they were too late to get money for conservation work this winter have been given a few more weeks to apply.

The Natural Resources Conservation Service has extended the deadline to apply for its 2011 Environmental Quality Incentives Program until Oct. 1. The EQIP is a government cost-sharing program that provides help to farmers working on conservation practices and structures, such as sprinklers and headgates. In 2010, Idaho NRCS provided more than $12.5 million in financial assistance through the program.

Farmers can submit applications year-round but there's usually a September cut-off date for the following year's funding. NRCS state resource conservationist Rob Fredrickson said this year's Sept. 10 date was extended for no other reason than to give district offices time to process the applications.

"Field offices have been busy this year with other funding opportunities, and we weren't able to get information out to them in time," Fredrickson said. "This just gives them a little breathing room."

Steve Schuyler, district conservationist for the Twin Falls NRCS office, said the EQIP is the conservation workhorse in the Magic Valley. Most of the funded projects have been conversions from flood irrigation to sprinklers, which improve groundwater quality and reduce erosion. Schuyler said he also sees a few rangeland projects, such as fencing and stockwater development. Interest in rangeland projects may increase due to additional government funding for improving sage grouse habitat under the Sage-Grouse Initiative.

BUSINESS ROUNDUP

First Apple Store to open in Boise

Apple will open its first retail store in Idaho at Boise Towne Square at 10 a.m. on Saturday.

The company will hold a grand opening at 9 a.m.

Apple Stores sell the company's products and provide a wide range of services offered to customers, including free tech support, personal shopping appointments, hands-on workshops, programs for kids and personal training. A number of retailers have been authorized resellers of Apple products, but this will be the first proprietary store owned by the computer giant.

Apple will give away 1,000 T-shirts to the first 1,000 customers to visit the store.

Northern Idaho city proposes hotel tax

PONDERAY — Residents in the northern Idaho town of Ponderay are set to vote on a proposed 5-percent bed tax for short-term motel and hotel visits.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports that if it's approved on Nov. 2, the tax would raise an estimated $170,000 in its first year. Mayor Carol Kunzeman says the money would be used to repair roads and make other improvements to transportation infrastructure and recreational amenities.

Local merchants have opposed the bed tax proposal, saying it would drive away customers and create an impression that goods and services cost more in the city.

Hansen couple seals the deal on carnival business

Becky and Todd Keenan, of Hansen, pose next to a new ride, Super Loops, at the Twin Falls County Fair. The couple purchased Royal West Amusements in 2008 and Inland Empire Shows in 2009.

FILER — Another county fair has come and gone, but this one will stand out as a new beginning for one business.

The 2010 Twin Falls County Fair marked the second year that Royal West Amusements and Inland Empire Shows has operated under its new owners from Hansen — Todd and Becky Keenan.

Todd Keenan, a jovial 39-year-old, and wife Becky Keenan, 36, purchased Royal West in June 2008 and closed the deal on Inland Empire Shows in early 2009.

"My nieces, 11 and 6, mean the world to me and I always think, is this something I would want them to ride? Or to play? If the answer is no, then it's something we won't offer, period."

— Becky Keenan

Becky Keenan grew up in Hansen and the couple continue to live on the family farm during the carnival circuit's four-month off-season. The couple's strong belief in family helps drive the couple's management style, as does their commitment to safety and style.

"My nieces, 11 and 6, mean the world to me and I always think, is this something I would want them to ride? Or to play? If the answer is no, then it's something we won't offer, period," she said. "Plus, we want our friends and family to be impressed with what we do. I think they are."

Royal West has existed for 50 years and Inland Empire isn't too far behind. Both have provided the carnival rides and atmosphere for the Twin Falls County Fair for about 25 years, said Fair Manager John Pitz.

"They've always done a really good job for us," Pitz said. "That's why they keep coming back."

While Becky Keenan manages all of the food and games with Royal, Todd Keenan manages other parts of the operation, like booking shows and managing the company's 165 employees, who travel with the carnival through its western state route — including fairs like the Clark County Fair in Las Vegas, Nevada and the Western Montana Fair.

"Many employees have RVs that travel with us and

Suddenly, a raft of tax-break proposals from Obama

By Tom Raum
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama's proposed tax breaks for business sound like ideas that have enjoyed broad Republican backing in the past. But in today's toxic political atmosphere, he's unlikely to get much — if any — GOP help.

Still, his plans put Republicans on the spot, making it harder for them to say no to legislation they once embraced.

In a speech on Wednesday in Cleveland, Obama will ask Congress to let businesses quickly write off 100 percent of their spending on new plants and equipment through 2011.

Its part of a raft of new Obama proposals to spur job creation and help businesses — and to try to give his party a much-needed boost ahead of November elections that will deter-

Clearly frustrated by the halting economic recovery and mindful of polls showing Republicans poised to make big midterm gains, Obama had his economic advisers come up with a fresh set of proposals with job-creat-

Among them: a $50 billion program to rebuild roads, railways and airports and to create a new infrastructure bank to oversee long-term projects. Legislation containing multiple public

AT&T activates five new cell towers in southern Idaho

Times-News

AT&T activated five new 3G cell towers in southern Idaho this week, which will improve coverage for Magic Valley residents and businesses.

The new cell towers are part of AT&T's ongoing efforts to extend mobile broadband wireless network in southern Idaho. AT&T has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to upgrade its wireless service and patch areas where service was spotty.

AT&T's total capital investment in wireless and wireline networks in Idaho was nearly $30 million from 2007 through 2009.

"Even during the recent economic downturn, we have continued to invest in America, including here in Idaho," Adam Grzybicki, president of AT&T Idaho, said in a written statement.

Senator Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, said the investment improves opportunities for new-business investment, which is often chooses to expand or relocate in areas with fast and reliable communication networks.

"News like this means a great place to open and operate a business and raise a family just got better," he said.

The new tower locations include:

Twin Falls — Provides coverage north to 4150 North, east to 2900 East, south to Crestview Drive and west to Grandview Drive.

Rupert and Paul — Located at the intersection of 100 South and 300 West between Rupert and Paul. It provides increased coverage along Highway 25 between the communities.

St. Anthony — Located on the Highway 20 just north of St. Anthony and provides coverage along Highway 20 between St. Anthony and Ashton.

Felt — Located about 20 miles east of the city of Rexburg, this site provides additional coverage within Felt and along Highway 32.

Swan Valley — Located near Center Street and Old Irwin Road, this site provides additional coverage throughout the area.

“EQIP is the biggest conservation program in Twin Falls County,” Schuyler said. “Interest has always been high, but for some reason, it’s not so much this year.”

Schuyler said he saw a lot of interest in 2008 and 2009 so the economy may not explain this year’s drop. Idaho normally has too many applications to fund, said Fredrickson, so less interest may mean better chances for those who apply.

“It’s just easier to sell conservation when the economy is good,” said Fredrickson. “We’ll just have to see what comes out this fall.”

Farmers considering applying for EQIP funding can apply for the new Farmer Service Agency Conservation Loan, which can provide them with low-interest government loans for their part of EQIP costs.

we also offer custom bunk houses,” he said. “We’re all a little Gypsy and don’t mind life on the road.”

While carnival attendants are often stereotyped as shifty characters with questionable backgrounds, Keenan said his crew must under go drug testing and an FBI background check before hire.

“We have a secret-carnie program that provides $500 to someone who knows of another carnie engaging in illegal drug use or other illegal behavior,” he said. “But we have a really good crew.”

While owning the carnival is rather new, working in carnival management isn’t. Over 20 years ago, Keenan approached Royal West and Inland Amusement owner Reed Williams about two carnival food wagons for sale. He worked for Williams on and off from the late 1980s. By 2002, Keenan was a manager for Williams.

He declined to say how much they paid for the companies but payments are based off a percentage of yearly revenue.

“If we get rained out or have a bad year I’m not left needing to come up with a set minimum payment. It gives us flexibility,” Keenan said.

Required liability insurance costs the company $250,000 a year. Before the company dropped its “unaffordable” employee health plan, it cost an additional $50,000 a year. Insurance aside, the industry faces other challenges, like updating rides and finding good employees. Keenan said.

The company brought in two new rides to the Twin Falls County Fair: a $400,000 gondola ride, like a Ferris wheel but allowing four people to ride at a time, and Super Loops, purchased used for $160,000. Other rides can cost upwards of $750,000.

As an entertainment company, you have to give people a good time, Keenan said, you also have to give people their money’s worth so such capital investments are necessary.

For a company working on a slim four-to-five percent profit margin, Keenan said they have to balance promotions and special deals while remaining a viable company.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Stocks fall as worries about debt return

NEW YORK — Stocks closed lower Tuesday following new worries about Europe’s debt problems. Treasury prices rose and gold settled at a new high as investors sought out safe assets.

U.S. stocks followed European markets lower after news reports said banks in Europe may have more risky government debt on their books than was disclosed during “stress tests” earlier this year. That could mean fees from regulators and more capital-raising by the banks to bolster their balance sheets.

Shares of major European banks including Barclays PLC and UBS fell, and the dollar rose against the euro.

ST. LOUIS —

Microbes munch oil, haven't robbed Gulf of oxygen

By Seth Borenstein
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal scientists are reporting the best possible scenario for BP's leaked oil: Microbes are munching the underwater oil, but not robbing the Gulf of Mexico of much needed oxygen or creating so-called "dead zones."

Oxygen levels in some places where the BP oil spilled are down by 20 percent, but that's not nearly low enough to create the dead zones where fish can't live, according to a 95-page report released Tuesday.

Trying to disperse the oil underwater is like walking a tightrope. In an unusual move, BP released 771,000 gallons of chemical dispersant at the leaking well head, about a mile deep, instead of just on the water surface to break up the oil into tiny droplets.

That makes it easier for the oil-eating microbes to do their job, but in doing so they deplete the water of oxygen at places. Scientists were hoping that the oil was degrading but not at a rate that would cause lack of oxygen problems.

"Has it hit the sweet spot? Yes. Was it by design? Partly," said Steve Murawski, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration senior scientist who headed the federal team. Oxygen levels would have had to drop another 70 percent to be classified as dead zones, he said.

The Gulf of Mexico already has a yearly major problem with a natural dead zone — the size of Massachusetts this year — because of farm runoff coming down the Mississippi River.

Federal officials had been tracking oxygen levels and use of chemical dispersants since the oil spill. Had the oxygen plummeted near dangerous levels, the dispersant use would have been stopped, said Greg Wilson, science adviser at the

Environmental Protection Agency's emergency management office.

Dispersant use is the source of fierce debate. While it makes it easier for bacteria to degrade the oil, it also tends to hide oil below the surface, and there are concerns about toxicity.

One reason that oxygen levels didn't drop too low is because of natural mixing in the Gulf, which kept bringing oxygen from other areas into the lower oxygen levels, Murawski said.

But there were indications that the bacteria was eating the oil underwater — at depths of about 3,300 feet — because oxygen levels sagged, lending more weight to claims last month by the government that much of the oil had degraded, dissolved or evaporated, Murawski said.

From April to July, about 172 million gallons of oil flowed into the Gulf of Mexico from the damaged well. Last month, two non-governmental academic teams of researchers found invisible underwater plumes of oil remained deep underwater in the Gulf.

The new work is based on data collected from May through August at 419 locations by nine government and private research ships in the Gulf.

Larry McKinney, director of a Gulf of Mexico research center at Texas A&M University in Corpus Christi, said the new federal data showed that it was a "nearly perfect" outcome.

"They hit it on the head, which is good," said McKinney, who was not involved in the report.

But he noted that earlier pronouncements by the federal government — like last month's about most of the oil being gone — were viewed suspiciously by outside scientists as overly optimistic and because supporting data wasn't made public. He said the federal government has "created this cloud of suspicion that maybe they didn't need to if they were just more open."

Chicago Mayor Daley won't run for re-election

By Tammy Webber
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley, who has presided over the nation's third-largest city for 21 years, like his father did before him, announced Tuesday that he will not run for a seventh term, saying the time "just feels right."

Daley, 68, said he had been thinking about not running for several months and became comfortable with his decision over the last several weeks.

"It just feels right," Daley said at a news conference, his smiling wife Maggie standing by his side. "I've always believed that every person, especially public officials, must understand when it's time to move on. For me, that time is now."

Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley speaks before the city council in September 2009 in Chicago. Daley announced Tuesday, that he is not running for re-election. Daley became mayor in 1989.

He called the announcement "a personal decision, no more, no less" and said he and his family now begin a "new phase of our lives."

The announcement was made with little warning, but was not a surprise to everyone.

Daley had refused to say whether he would run again, fueling speculation that he might not, and his wife has been battling cancer.

"It's a surprise because there's been a Daley in the political system for so long," said Alan Gitelson, a Loyola University of Chicago political science professor. "There's always been this presence. It's been really part and parcel of the identity of the city to have a Daley in the mayor's office."

Daley was first elected mayor in 1989, following in the footsteps of his father, Richard J. Daley, who died of a heart attack in 1976 at age 74 during his 21st year in office.

said the two are friends but didn't endorse Emanuel as his heir apparent. "I think there are many people out there who would be great mayors," Daley said.

Others whose names have surfaced as possible candidates are Democratic U.S. Representatives Jesse Jackson Jr. and Luis Guterrez, and Chicago Alderman Bob Fioretti. Jackson is expected to win reelection to his congressional seat this fall, but has seen his reputation tarnished after revelations that supporters allegedly offered to raise money for former Gov. Rod Blagojevich in exchange for an appointment to President Barack Obama's former Senate seat. Jackson was not charged in the case and denies wrongdoing.

During his tenure, Daley presided over some of the most dramatic changes in Chicago history.

Critics have grumbled that in some ways Daley's Chicago was run much as it had been under his father, who was the boss of Chicago's Democratic machine for two decades. They pointed to City Hall scandals and lucrative contracts for the mayor's friends as well as chronic corruption and police brutality cases.

Daley's constituents came to know him as an intense, nervous figure who was never fully comfortable on the speaker's platform. As with his father, the current mayor's rhetoric is at times tangled.

He nevertheless remained popular, winning elections by overwhelming margins.

The fourth of seven children and the oldest son of Richard J. and Eleanor "Sis" Daley, Richard M. Daley grew up in the 11th Ward near the former Comiskey Park, an area of blue-collar bungalows and two-flats, home to many city patronage jobholders as well as judges, prosecutors and police officers.

Politics was a part of family life. A brother, William Daley, would become U.S. commerce secretary under President Clinton and another, John Daley, is a Cook County commissioner.

In 1972, Richard M. Daley was elected to the state Senate. In 1980, he was elected Cook County state's attorney.

In 1983, Daley finished third in a mayoral primary marred by racial antagonisms. U.S. Rep. Harold Washington defeated Daley and Mayor Jane M. Byrne and became the city's first black mayor. In 1987, Washington died of a heart attack, and Daley won a 1989 special mayoral election.

Cook County Clerk David Orr said he did not think anyone would have seriously challenged Daley if he had run for re-election, but Tuesday's announcement means "the whole political landscape changes enormously."

"All of a sudden now many of the political people will be focused on the mayor's seat. February is so close," Orr told WBBM radio in Chicago. "There's going to be a lot of scheming and planning going on."

Daley's announcement leaves an open door for White House chief of staff Rahm Emanuel, who said in April during a television interview that "it's no secret" he'd like to run for mayor of Chicago someday.

At the time, Emanuel called Daley "a dear friend" and said he's done "a fabulous job" as mayor. He said on Charlie Rose's PBS talk show that he hopes Daley will seek re-election and said he'd work for Daley if he runs again.

The 50-year-old Emanuel is a one-time Daley adviser and a Chicago native. He was an Illinois congressman until he resigned to take his current White House post.

A few days later, Daley

He assumed command of the floundering school system in 1995 and replaced entrenched bureaucrats with tough, results-oriented administrators. Homework became mandatory, and the "social promotion" of underperforming students was halted. Test scores climbed steadily.

Daley also was the catalyst for a citywide facelift. West Side slums were cleared, new green space was created, a theater district came to life in the north Loop, and Navy Pier became a colorful playground complete with boat rides and a giant Ferris wheel.

Hermine gives south Texas another tropical lashing

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press Writer

RAYMONDVILLE, Texas — Tropical Storm Hermine gave a wet and windy punch to Texas on Tuesday but left only minor scrapes in the storm-weary Rio Grande Valley, which is proving resilient this hurricane season after taking a third tropical system on the chin.

Hermine lost steam after crossing into Texas with tropical storm strength. A peeled-back motel roof in the coastal farming town of Raymondville and scattered power outages were about the worst leftover from the gusty, drenching storm that came and went quickly after creeping up on Texas and Mexico in the warm Gulf waters over the long holiday weekend.

"I think we're lucky. It could've been worse," said Art Nelson, sizing up the hulking aluminum shed that collapsed on a farming plow at his John Deere store in Raymondville.

Mexico didn't get off as easy. Hermine knocked out power for several hours in Matamoros and damaged about 20 homes, whose inhabitants were among 3,500 people who evacuated to shelters.

About 1,000 families were still in shelters Tuesday morning. Authorities in Mexico said there were no reports of serious injuries or death, which was welcome news after 12 people in Mexico died in flooding caused by Hurricane Alex earlier this summer.

Texas also had no reports of serious injuries, and evacuations orders weren't necessary even in the most low-lying regions. It was another sigh of relief for the flood-prone Rio Grande Valley, which got lashed by Alex at the start of the summer and soaked by another tropical system in July.

So damp is the area that only last week did Hidalgo County finally put away its last water-pumping machine. But much of the 5 inches to a foot of rain from Hermine fell harmlessly in the Gulf, and flooding was limited to only minor nuisances.

The storm made landfall early Tuesday in northeastern Mexico with winds of up to 65 mph, arriving near the same spot as Alex. But Hermine was expected to cover more of the U.S. than Alex, which swiped Texas in June as a Category 1 storm before plunging southwest and breaking up over Mexico.

Forecasters expect Hermine's remnants to spread as far north as Oklahoma and Kansas. Flash flood advisories remained in effect for counties in path of the slowly dissolving storm.

"This is going to be much more of a memorable storm than Alex," National Weather Service meteorologist Joseph Tomaselli said.

An apple treat for Rosh Hashana and a healthy diet

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year, is typically a time of optimism and self-reflection. And while the foods for the holiday often are symbolic of a sweet and pleasant year to come, it's hard for some of us not to reflect on the negative effect a sugary, rich dish will have on our waistlines.

But these worries don't have to stop you from celebrating this year's new beginning with a suitably sweet treat.

Desserts made with fruits are the perfect way to satisfy a sweet tooth without necessarily loading up on traditional diet busters like fat and processed sugars.

These challah bread apple summer puddings feature a crispy, golden crust made with thin slices of the traditional Jewish celebration loaf, along with a filling of apples and honey, two Rosh Hashana mainstays. And rather than being made rich with a stick of butter and a lot of white sugar, these molded desserts are made with sweet, natural apple butter.

Apple butter is a mixture of apples, cider, sugar and spices that is slow cooked until thick, smooth and caramelized. The thick, buttery consistency makes it a good spread for breads, a condiment or an ingredient in baking. Look for it with the jellies and jams in most markets.

Challah bread apple summer pudding is seen in these photos from August. This recipe uses the traditional ingredients in a healthy and creative way, such as replacing the usual stick of butter with natural apple butter.

Health-minded cooks have been using apple-sauce to cut fat in baked goods for a long time, but the complex spiciness of apple butter adds even more depth of flavor, along with a subtle, rounded sweetness that allows you to omit some of the processed sugar, as well. Most fruit butters and purees can work well as a substitute for some of the fat in baking because they contain plenty of pectin, which is a natural thickener and has the kind of slippery mouth feel that fats bring to foods.

Serve challah bread apple summer puddings hot out of the oven with a scoop of vanilla frozen yogurt or a dollop of fresh whipped cream.

CHALLAH BREAD APPLE SUMMER PUDDINGS

Start to finish: 50 minutes (20 minutes active)
Servings: 8
8 teaspoons sugar
20 very thin slices challah bread

4 cups peeled and grated Golden Delicious apples (about 4 to 5 large apples)
1 cup apple butter
1/2 cup golden raisins
2 tablespoons honey
2 teaspoons grated lemon zest (about 1 lemon)

Heat the oven to 400 F. Lightly coat eight 6-ounce custard cups or other ramekins with cooking spray. Add 1 teaspoon of sugar to each cup and swirl to coat the inside.

Lay 8 slices of the bread on a work surface. With a cookie cutter or a small glass, cut out 8 circles of bread just large enough to fit in the bottoms of the custard cups. Trim the crusts from the remaining 12 slices of bread, then cut the slices into rectangles or squares. Use the pieces to line the sides of the ramekins, overlapping slightly to completely line the sides. Set aside.

In a bowl, stir together the apples, apple butter, raisins, honey and lemon zest. Spoon the mixture into the bread-lined cups. Press the filling down into the cups, smoothing the tops. Set the puddings on a baking sheet and bake for 25 to 30 minutes, or until the bread is lightly browned on the sides and bottom. Run a knife around the inside of each cup and invert onto dessert plates. Serve warm.

You can have a pasta dinner in 35 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

Robert Burt, a reader from Washington, D.C., says the sauce for this pasta retains its full tomato flavor because it is cooked separately. To make the dish vegetarian, substitute sauteed peppers, zucchini, broccoli or caramelized onions for the prosciutto. Serve with a peppery green salad.

PASTA WITH TOMATOES, PROSCIUTTO AND MUSHROOMS
2 servings

Salt (for the pasta water)

3 to 4 ounces dried angel-hair pasta
3 to 4 ripe medium tomatoes, preferably home-grown
About 20 basil leaves
2 tablespoons olive oil
6 to 8 ounces meaty mushrooms, such as shiitake or oyster
1 1/2 to 2 ounces thinly sliced prosciutto
1 to 2 ounces mild cheddar cheese
Freshly ground black pepper

Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil over high heat. Add the pasta and cook according to the package directions. Meanwhile, core the tomatoes, then cut them into 1-inch pieces to yield 3 to 4 cups. Roll the basil leaves tightly, then cut them crosswise into thin strips. Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a large saucepan over medium-high heat. Add the tomatoes and basil; cook for about 25 minutes, stirring and mashing the tomatoes often. Reduce the heat to medium-low to keep the tomatoes warm. While the tomatoes and pasta are cooking, heat the remaining tablespoon of oil in a medium skillet over medium-high heat until the oil shimmers. Clean the mushrooms and trim any tough stems as needed, then cut into 1/4-inch slices. Add to the skillet and cook for 8 to 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the mushrooms have released their moisture and browned. Turn off the heat. Cut the prosciutto into shreds and add to the mushrooms; toss to combine. Grate the cheese (to taste) on the large holes of a box grater; the yield should be about 6 tablespoons. Drain the pasta and divide between individual wide, shallow bowls. Top each portion with equal amounts of the mushroom-prosciutto mixture, then the tomato sauce and cheese. Serve hot, with a few grinds of black pepper on top.

A healthy take on grilled chicken Caesar salad

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

If your idea of a virtuous dinner out is ordering the grilled chicken Caesar salad, you should prepare yourself for some disappointment.

These salads may sound light, but they can pack some serious fat and calories. At one national chain restaurant, for example, the grilled chicken Caesar salad serves up more than 1,000 calories and 64 grams of fat.

These salads sound healthy because the basic components are — greens and boneless, skinless chicken breast. It's when you dump on buttery croutons, shredded cheese, fatty dressings and crumbled bacon that the trouble starts.

But at home you can make a dinner-sized salad to feel good about. This grilled chicken salad is tossed with a low-fat dressing made with the richly flavored pulp of roasted garlic (an excellent stand-in for fat).

For this dressing, which can be made up to two days in advance and stored, covered, in the refrigerator, the roasted garlic is pureed with creamy nonfat yogurt and just a few tablespoons of extra-virgin olive oil.

The dressing gets an added burst of flavor from a small amount of Parmesan cheese as well as a few anchovy fillets, which are traditional Caesar ingredients.

And don't fear the anchovies. They add an irreplaceable flavor and texture to the dressing without adding any noticeable fishiness.

PEPPER-CRUSTED CHICKEN SALAD WITH ROASTED GARLIC CAESAR DRESSING

Start to finish: 1 hour 20 minutes (35 minutes active). Servings: 4.

For the dressing:
1 large head garlic
1/4 cup nonfat plain yogurt
1/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 tablespoon white wine vinegar
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
2 anchovy fillets, rinsed
Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
For the salad:
1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breasts trimmed of fat

AP photo

While the basic parts of a chicken Caesar salad are healthy, the usual add-ons can turn it into a less than good choice for the health conscious. This version keeps the whole salad both healthy and delicious.

1 teaspoon extra-virgin olive oil
1/4 teaspoon salt, or to taste
Ground black pepper, to taste
8 cups washed, dried and torn romaine lettuce
1 cup fat-free croutons
Shredded Parmesan cheese, for garnish (optional)
Lemon wedges

Heat the oven to 400 degrees.

To make the dressing, on a cutting board, using a sharp knife, slice about 1/2-inch off the top of each head of garlic, exposing the individual cloves. Set each head on a square of foil and sprinkle with a tablespoon of water. Pinch together the edges of the foil to create a packet. Roast for 45 minutes. Unwrap and let cool slightly before squeezing the pulp from the cloves.

In the bowl of a food processor or blender, combine the roasted garlic pulp, yogurt, cheese, oil, lemon juice, vinegar, mustard and anchovies. Process until smooth. Season with salt and pepper, then cover and refrigerate until ready to use.

To make the salad, heat a gas grill to medium-high or light a charcoal fire.

Rub the chicken with oil and season with salt. Coat the outsides heavily with pepper. Grill the chicken until browned and a thermometer reads 165 degrees at the center.

In a large bowl, combine the lettuce and croutons. Toss with 1/2 cup of the dressing, then divide among 4 plates. Cut the chicken into 1/2-inch slices and arrange over the salad. Garnish with shredded Parmesan cheese, if desired. Serve immediately, with lemon wedges.

Per serving: 257 calories; 77 calories from fat; 9 g fat (2 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 73 mg cholesterol; 11 g carbohydrate; 33 g protein; 2 g fiber; 519 mg sodium.

Why shredded potatoes change color

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Q: Why do shredded potatoes turn gray?

A: It depends on whether your potatoes are turning gray before you cook them or after.

When you grate raw potatoes, you release starch that can cause them to oxidize, or turn dark. The best way to keep that from happening is to cover the potatoes with cold water, then drain them very well before cooking.

A trick I have heard from Jewish cooks who make latkes every year is to shred the potatoes together with onions, which is supposed to minimize the darkening of the potatoes. But you'd have to decide how you feel about onion in your shredded potato dish.

What's really frustrating are potatoes that turn dark after cooking. That's a reaction that can have several causes, including how the potatoes were grown or a reaction with aluminum cookware. It doesn't happen with all potatoes, and it can be hard to predict.

1 3/4 cup shortening or 1 1/2 cup lard
4 cups flour
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup water
1 tablespoon vinegar

Cut shortening into flour, salt and sugar until the size of large peas. Beat egg slightly, mix with water and vinegar. Pour over flour mixture and mix lightly. Set to rest for 15 minutes before rolling out for crust.

DUTCH APPLE PIE

Courtesy Delores Mills

3 cups sliced apples
1 unbaked pie shell
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 beaten egg
1 cup light cream, or canned milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/3 cup chopped nuts
1 tablespoon butter

Place sliced apples in pie shell. Mix sugar, flour and cinnamon together. Combine egg, cream and vanilla. Add sugar mixture and mix well. Pour over apples. Sprinkle with nuts and dot with butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes or until apples are done.

before placing her bulk of dough down.

With a rolling pin, she turns the ball into a thin layer of dough.

She grabs her glass Pyrex pie pan and after tenderly lifting the dough from the parchment paper, lays it into the pan. She presses together the small tears in the dough around the edges and then cuts the excess, making sure to leave enough to create a tapered and decorative edge.

Gingerly, she presses the dough into the pan and then begins shaping the edge. For family-eaten pies, she may not take the tedious care of creating the grooved edge, but for the fair, appearances count.

A fork easily pokes holes on the bottom of the crust and then a reused piece of aluminum foil is placed on top of the dough. The foil's weight keeps the dough from rising off the pan bottom, bursting in the oven's heat and losing form.

After fifteen minutes in the preheated oven, Sutton-Fall's crust is ready for filling.

Jump a few days forward and Delores Mills is busy baking a peach pie for that evening's county commissioner pie contest.

Like many bakers, the Filer resident restates that a pie's quality starts in the crust. Using a recipe similar to Falls-Sutton's, but with a dash of vinegar, Mills breaks a chunk from the dough made the night before.

"I think the flavor sets in if the dough is let to cool in the fridge overnight. Plus, cool dough makes flakier crust," Mills said.

Warm dough, coupled with overworking, leads to dense, hard crust, as Mills is well aware.

In her early years as a married woman Mills' pie crusts were hard, very hard. She came across what she calls her "Favorite Pastry" crust recipe decades ago and never looked back.

Mills said, "This recipe makes dough that isn't as finicky. I can work it a bit and it doesn't seem to mind."

When rolling her dough, Mills doesn't use wax or parchment paper. Instead, she simply sprinkles a thin layer of flour onto a clean counter and rolls the dough on that.

She doesn't fret over what the commissioners, the judges in the annual pie contest, will like either. Tastes seem to change yearly and with commissioner turnover.

Years ago, one commissioner loved soggy pies, just like those his mother made, but other judges typically like the simple farm-style pies of their youth.

Like this year's first place commissioner contest winner, Karen Grubb of Twin Falls, Mills always adds a few pats of butter on top of her fruit filling before placing the top crust into position.

"It really adds flavor to both the top crust and the pie filling," Grubb said. "While some recipes call for it, others don't, but I add

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

After talking with contestants in the Twin Falls County Fair's many pie contests I caught the bug. Right away I knew which pie I would enter: my mom's Strawberry Cream Cheese pie, the dessert that we get to enjoy maybe once a year, during Thanksgiving dinner if we are lucky.

Not only is it my favorite pie but my husband's as well. I had promised many times to make this pie for him but had never followed through. Now, I had no excuse; even a reason for tackling it now.

With excitement, I called my twin sister for a copy of the pie and crust recipe.

Sure, I could bake light and fluffy, perfectly browned dinner rolls but had never, ever had courage enough to make crust from scratch.

This crust, my mom's specialty, is a melt-in-your-mouth pie crust and she set a pretty high bar. Like many kids, helping in the kitchen meant keeping up with the dishes and watching, learning, but from a distance.

My sisters and I would sit in bar stools and watch as she magically transformed simple, everyday kitchen staples into edible, fine art.

I knew not to overwork the crust, or it would be "daky," my Mom's word for crust so hard and thick it isn't worth eating, and to make sure the dough kept cool.

After watching Laura Fall-Sutton work her crust I thought to myself, "if she can do it, so can I."

Taking the advice of many contestants I purchased fresh strawberries and picked up butter and heavy cream from Cloverleaf Creamery, in Buhl. Fresh and local: check.

The rest of the ingredients were either on hand or easily found at the grocery store.

After clearing ample counter space and pre-measuring all the ingredients, my older son, Parker, and I rolled up our sleeves and prepared to get dirty. I called my mom twice while cutting the dough, just to make sure the consistency sounded right. She wasn't there so couldn't say for sure but said to go with my gut.

"When it feels about right, you'll know," she said. She was right. After cutting the dough for what seemed an eternity the consistency turned crumbly, yet was soft. With my gut's reassurance I moved forward.

Parker and I took turns rolling the dough and rejoiced after sliding the crusts into the preheated oven.

We breezed through preparing the pie's innards and then waited, rather impatiently, through the cooling period.

Later that evening we slid one of the pies onto the counter, sliced it into rather ample servings and relished the results.

My husband said it was just as good as my mom's (although not any better) and Parker said it was the best pie he'd ever had.

The next morning I entered my strawberry cream cheese pie into the fair, noticing right away that every other pie in the "Kitchen and Pantry" refrigerator had heavily decorated crusts. For a moment I thought that maybe I was out of my league but by then it was too late to back out.

My pie didn't win a best of class rosette but I was pretty proud of the red ribbon dangling from the pan.

Besides, knowing that my family would devour the rest of our pie by noon was reward enough for me.

the butter anyway."

Another secret shared by Grubb and Mills: turning down the oven temperature after the pie has had time to set under higher heat.

If the recipe calls for 400 degree heat, Grubb allows the pie about 30 minutes and then another 15 to 20 minutes at 350 degrees.

Grubb has entered the commissioner-judged contest four years in a row. The first year her peach pie took third place, the next year she won first place with a cherry pie and then first place with an apple pie.

This year, with the rotation back to peach, Grubb entered the same peach pie recipe as the first year and was delighted when she retained her first-place winning streak.

She said her pie wasn't real fancy, just a simple peach pie.

"Crust has a lot to do with it," Grubb said, emphasizing the need for cold water and shortening.

The number one secret to producing award winning pies?

Not being afraid to enter in the first place.

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News
Dan Vanden Heuvel pours a little water out of his canteen onto an apple mixture for a cobbler. He doesn't use measuring spoons or cups — he's cooked enough to eyeball his measurements.

Load up your backpack

The aroma of a fruit cobbler often greets Dan Vanden Heuvel's fellow backpackers upon awakening. "I particularly love making cobblers in the fall when berries are fresh," he said. It's about the best breakfast there is, I think. You can't beat it."

Here's a recipe for Vanden Heuvel's cobbler, along with a few other recipes:

FRUIT COBBLER

Coat a pan with a little oil. Spread a layer of apple slices or other fruit in the bottom and sprinkle brown sugar and raisins on top. Pour about a half-cup of water over this — you have to have enough that it doesn't burn but you don't want so much that it's soggy.

Mix some flour with a half teaspoon or so of baking powder and cinnamon to taste. Add a little milled flax seed to boost the nutrition of the flour mix. Add water until the mix is a little thicker than pancake batter. Cover the fruit, making sure the topping is at least a quarter-inch below the lid so the mixture doesn't boil over.

The steam from the boiling water on the bottom will cook the dough on top, negating any need for fuel on top of the pan. Cook 5 to 10 minutes. Let it set another 10 minutes for the syrupy mix to harden a little.

THAI PEANUT SAUCE

Heat a few tablespoons of oil in a pan. Add sunflower seeds and dried onions. Stir for a couple minutes. Add a few tablespoons brown sugar and a teaspoon garlic, along with coconut flakes, soy sauce, vinegar, curry and other spices, as desired. Pour a half- to three-quarters cup of water over the mix and cook until hot. Add about 3 tablespoons each vinegar, soy sauce and peanut butter and stir. Serve over noodles.

NO-BAKE BACKPACK COOKIES

Mix a half-cup brown sugar, an eighth cup of margarine, 1 and 1/2 tablespoons powdered milk and 2 tablespoons water in a pan and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and stir for a couple minutes to prevent scorching. Remove from heat and add a half-cup oatmeal and peanut butter each, a quarter-teaspoon vanilla and an eighth cup of chocolate chips. Drop by spoonfuls onto pan lids and let sit until they set.

BACKPACK PIZZA

Mix a teaspoon of yeast with a half-cup lukewarm water in a small bottle. Add a half-teaspoon sugar and a quarter-teaspoon salt to the bottle to make it fizz. Mix about a cup of flour into this mix. Spread onto oiled pan.

Make sauce out of dehydrated tomato soup or a small can of tomato paste. Top with cheese, dried mushrooms, onion flakes and other ingredients.

This can be covered and baked for 20 minutes or so. Vanden Heuvel likes to use a twiggy fire which helps cook crust from top and bottom. Build a twiggy fire by burning twigs the size of your pinky finger or smaller on top of the lid. Bake 15 minutes or so.

way. Instead, I take some basic foods and at the end of the trip I always end up with a bunch of little bags of this and that and I think: What could I make with this?" said Vanden Heuvel, who spent 28 days at a time in the backcountry as an instructor.

Not all of Vanden Heuvel's experiments have proven worthy of the menu at, say, The Olive Garden.

A blueberry meatloaf he baked with berries he picked in Washington's Cascades tasted like "really bad hamburger with too sweet berries." And a hashbrown cake tasted like hashbrowns with a lot of dough.

"But, in general, you can't ruin a meal unless you burn it, get sand in it or put too much garlic salt in it," he said. "Food that might not be particularly memorable at home tastes like the best food in the world after a 10-mile hike in the rain."

Ketchum schoolteacher Char Roth is among those who ascribes to packing as light as possible, for her annual solstice trip into the White Clouds.

"This year I substituted naan bread for the bagels I usually take. It was lighter and didn't take as much room," she said.

Some people are fine with things like ramen noodles over and over in the name of lightness, Vanden Heuvel said. But he'd prefer to get creative.

That includes spicing up hot chocolate with mint tea, pepper, peanut butter or a choco-chai mix made of sugar, milk, chai and cinnamon. It also means using quinoa, bulgar, black bean flakes, tempeh or polenta sometimes instead of rice.

It means adding things like a packet of salmon and dried pesto to pasta, along with some sunflower seeds for crunch. And it means dropping balls of dough into soup as it cooks to gain the bulk provided by the dumplings.

Kat Vanden Heuvel says she's always amazed at what her husband comes up with for a meal.

"Watching him cook is almost like a watching a surgeon perform a surgery — you see passion, focus on technique and, hopefully, you get great results," she said. "I love food and I love it when Dan is cooking — it makes those trips even more fun. And getting out of the tent on a frosty morning to smell an apple strudel baking or enjoying a delicious calzone after a long day of backpacking is awesome."

Consider rotisserie chicken a culinary blank slate

A rotisserie chicken from your supermarket makes this dish an easy-to-prepare weeknight meal.

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

Once again, the rotisserie chicken rescues the weeknight cook.

And I'm fairly confident I've never actually eaten a rotisserie chicken as one would a traditional roasted chicken — as in, slabs or chunks of meat hacked from the bird.

In my cooking, these chickens are a not-so-raw (thankfully!) ingredient on which to build the rest of the meal without adding any cooking time.

As in this recipe, which tosses the meat with grated Parmesan cheese, blanched asparagus and some pasta. Best yet, the recipe is totally versatile. Substitute (and cook the same way) any firm veggie for the asparagus. Broccoli, cauliflower, bell peppers, whatever. Same for the cheese and pasta. Use what you have or what you like. And while fresh pastas cook quickly, any pasta — including whole-grain — works well.

FETTUCCINI WITH PARMESAN, CHICKEN AND ASPARAGUS
Start to finish: 25 minutes. Servings: 4.

1 pound asparagus, trimmed, cut into 1-inch pieces
12-ounce package fresh fettuccini
3 cups shredded cooked chicken
1/2 cup chicken broth
Pinch red pepper flakes
1 cup grated Parmesan

2 tablespoons butter, cut into small pieces
Salt and ground black pepper, to taste

Bring a large saucepan of salted water to a boil. Add the asparagus and blanch for 2 minutes, or until bright green and just barely tender. Use a slotted spoon and remove to a plate. Return the water to a boil.

Add the pasta to the water and cook according to package directions. Drain and set aside.

Meanwhile, in a medium saucepan over medium-low, combine the cooked chicken, broth and red pepper flakes. Heat until warmed through.

In a large bowl, combine the asparagus, pasta and chicken with broth.

Add the butter and Parmesan, then toss well until melted and creamy. Season with salt and pepper.

Iraqi soldier fires on U.S. troops, kills 2

By Rebecca Santana
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — An Iraqi soldier fired a barrage of bullets at American troops protecting one of their commanders during a visit to an Iraqi army base Tuesday and killed two of them, the first U.S. servicemen to die since President Barack Obama declared an end to combat operations in the country last week.

Even after the U.S. dramatically reduced the number of troops and rebranded its mission in Iraq, the attack was a reminder that Americans still have to defend themselves in a dangerous country where Iraqi forces only have a tenuous hold on security. Nine Americans were wounded in Tuesday's shooting.

The attack also showed that even inside the bases of U.S.-trained Iraqi forces, American soldiers can still face danger. Just on Sunday, Americans training Iraqi forces at a military headquarters in the heart of Baghdad had to help fight off a squad of suicide attackers, two of whom managed to breach the compound in an hour-long battle. U.S. helicopters and drones joined the fight, but no American personnel were hurt in that assault.

The Americans attacked on Tuesday were providing security for a commander attending a meeting with Iraqi military personnel at a base near the city of Tuz Khormato, about 130 miles (210 kilometers) north of Baghdad.

The assailant opened fire after an argument and was killed in the shootout that followed, said the city's police chief, Col. Hussein Rashid. He did not provide details on the nature of the argument.

"This is a tragic and cowardly act and is certainly not reflective of the Iraqi security forces," said Maj. Gen. Tony Cucolo, the American commander in charge of U.S. forces in northern Iraq.

Cucolo stressed during the Sept. 1 ceremony marking the formal change in the American mission that his soldiers know the fight is not over. "There are groups here that still want to hurt us," he said last week.

The U.S. military is investigating Tuesday's shooting, and the names of the slain soldiers were being withheld until their families were notified.

At least 4,418 U.S. military personnel have been killed in Iraq since the war began in March 2003, according to an Associated Press count.

The American military has reduced its footprint in the country from a one-time high of 170,000 troops to just under 50,000 as of Aug. 31. American troops pulled out of Iraqi cities in the summer of 2009, and soon after U.S. casualties fell significantly.

Under an agreement between Iraq and the United States, all American forces are to leave the country by the end of next year.

The U.S. troops remaining in Iraq until then are tasked with training Iraqi security forces, providing security for some State Department missions and assisting the Iraqi forces in hunting down insurgent groups. But they can be drawn into combat missions if Iraqi forces request their help.

There are also just under 5,000 special forces troops who assist in training and will team up with Iraqi troops on counterterror raids.

U.S. troops in Iraq still carry weapons and are able to defend themselves and their bases. They are also still hit by roadside bombs and mortar and rocket fire on a near daily basis.

U.S. church to go ahead with burning Qurans on Sept. 11

By Mitch Stacy
Associated Press writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — A Christian minister vowed Tuesday to go ahead with plans to burn copies of the Quran to protest the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks despite warnings from the White House and the top U.S. general in Afghanistan that doing so would endanger American troops overseas.

Pastor Terry Jones of the Dove World Outreach Center said he understands the government's concerns, but plans to go forward with the burning this Saturday, the ninth anniversary of the attacks.

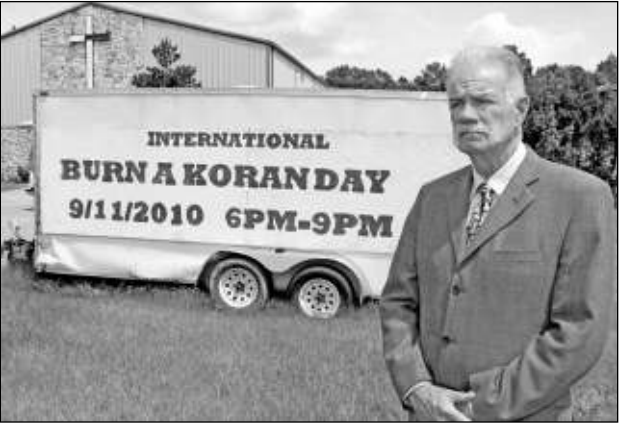

He left the door open to change his mind, saying he is still praying about his decision, which was condemned Tuesday by an interfaith coalition that met in Washington to respond to a spike in anti-Muslim bigotry.

Gen. David Petraeus warned in an e-mail to The Associated Press that "images of the burning of a Quran would undoubtedly be used by extremists in Afghanistan — and around the world — to inflame public opinion and incite violence."

State Department spokesman P.J. Crowley echoed that, calling the plan to burn copies of the Quran "un-American" and saying it does not represent the views of most people in the U.S.

"While it may well be within someone's rights to take this action, we hope cooler heads will prevail," Crowley said.

Jones told the AP in a phone interview that he is also concerned but wonders how many times the U.S. can back down.

"We think it's time to turn the tables, and instead of possibly blaming us for what could happen, we put the blame where it belongs — on the people who would do it," he said. "And maybe instead of addressing us, we should address radical Islam and send a very clear warning that they are not to retaliate in any form."

Jones, who runs the small, evangelical Christian church with an anti-Islam philosophy, says he has received more than 100 death threats and has started wearing a .40-caliber pistol strapped to his hip.

The threats started not long after the 58-year-old minister proclaimed in July that he would stage "International Burn a Quran Day." Supporters have been mailing copies of the Islamic holy text to his Dove World Outreach Center to be incinerated in a bonfire that evening.

The fire department has denied Jones a required burn permit for Saturday, but he says he is going ahead with his event. He said lawyers have told him his right to burn the Quran is protected by the First Amendment whether he's got permission from the city or not.

Muslims consider the Quran to be the word of God and insist it be treated with the utmost respect, along with any printed material containing its verses or the name of Allah or the Prophet Muhammad. Any intentional damage or show of disrespect to the Quran is deeply offensive.

The interfaith group of evangelical, Roman Catholic, Jewish, and Muslim leaders meeting in Washington condemned Jones' plan to burn the Quran as a violation of American values and the Bible. Among the participants was Cardinal Theodore McCarrick, retired Catholic archbishop of Washington, D.C.; Rabbi David Saperstein of the Religious Action Center of Reform Judaism; and top officials from the Islamic Society of North America, the group that organized the gathering.

Robert (Bob) Andrew Yragui

VALLEJO, Calif. — Robert (Bob) Andrew Yragui, 77, of Vallejo, Calif., passed away at home Saturday, Sept. 4, 2010, after a long battle with emphysema.

Bob was born July 13, 1933, in Shoshone, Idaho, to Joseph Yragui and Antonia Soloaga Yragui. Bob was raised and helped out in the busy boarding house owned and operated by his grandmother and mother. He also worked on his Uncle Domingo's ranch, where he handled sheep. Bob was an excellent student, which led to his attendance at the University of Santa Clara, where he obtained his Bachelor of Science in history. During this time, he spent his summers and holidays with the family of his aunt, Louisa Sarasqueta of Patterson, where he met the love of his life, Maurine Yale. Bob courted Maurine by taking her to the Portuguese dances held on summer weekends and discovering their mutual love of music, especially jazz. Bob and Maurine married in San Francisco on April 14, 1957, where they made their home and raised their family.

Bob went to work for the U.S. Postal Service as a letter carrier. He was very active in his union local and was elected shop steward. He began his union local's first newspaper and wrote for it for many years. The paper survives to this day. During the 1960s and early 1970s, Bob was also an active member of the Progressive Labor Party, where he worked for fairness and justice in society. After his retirement from the U.S. Postal Service, he rekindled his activist nature by writing and marching regularly with the Gray Panthers of San Francisco.

Bob and Maurine celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on April 14, 2007. Bob's favorite pastimes were camping, backpacking, going to the beach, tide pooling and family picnics at Golden Gate Park. Bob enjoyed playing chess especially with his grandsons, Kyle and Brandon. Bob was an armchair politician, a sports lover, and an avid historian. In the year 2005, Bob and Maurine moved to the Marina Towers in Vallejo, Calif., to be closer to their daughters and, in April of this year, they moved to the house on El Dorado Street, which they share with their daughter, Catherine.

Bob is survived by his wife, Maurine; his five daughters, Teresa (husband, Ron Garnys), Elizabeth Ann, Emily (Mike Arnold), Claire (Rudy Jaime) and Catherine Yragui; and his beloved grandchildren, Jane Aceituno, Merisa, Kyle and Kelly Rasmussen, and Brandon Yragui; and his brothers, Nicholas, Edward and Leon Yragui. Bob is predeceased by his mother and father; his brother, Bonifacio Yragui; and sister, Alice Yragui.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 11, at Skyview Memorial Lawn, 200 Rollingwood Drive, Vallejo, CA 94591 (707-644-7474). A reception at the family home will follow the service.

The family would like to thank Linda, Gloria and everyone from Sutter VNA and Hospice for their loving care and attention to Bob in these last few months, and especially for helping him to die peacefully at home with special thanks to Flor Guzman, his home health aide. We would also like to thank Jeanette Holmberg, his caregiver, and his doctor, Eduardo Abdala, MD.

Or sat quietly in a chair.
Perhaps you sent a funeral spray,
If so we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words,
As any friend could say.
Perhaps you were not there at all,
Just thought of us that day.
Whatever you did to console our hearts,
We thank you so much whatever the part.

HOSPICE VISIONS - HOME CARE OPTIONS
thevisionsgroup.org

How do I know when it is time for Hospice?

A It is a fact that a physician must 'order' Hospice based on certain qualifications; however, you or your loved one may qualify to receive hospice services if you've noticed any of the following indicators of decline:

- Falling more often
- Bruising more easily
- Sleeping more
- Increased forgetfulness
- Increase in trips to the ER or doctor's office
- Weight loss
- Decrease in appetite
- Incontinent of the bowel or bladder
- Increased pain
- Wounds that will not heal
- Shortness of breath
- Increase in medications
- Decreased independence with bathing, meals & eating, walking, dressing, and general hygiene.

Despite enormous medical advances, too many Americans still die alone or in pain. Give the gift of Hospice to your loved one. Often patients at the end of life are being referred to hospice care too late, or not at all.

The Broncos jumped two spots to No. 3 in the USA Today Coaches' poll.

TCU from the Mountain West Conference moved up two spots to No. 4 in the AP poll, marking the first time since the Bowl Championship Series was implemented in 1998 that two teams from conferences without automatic BCS bids have been in the top five. Boise State is the defending Western Athletic Conference champion.

Texas remained No. 5 and received one first-place vote.

No. 8 Florida dropped four spots after a sloppy 34-12 victory against Miami (Ohio) and No. 10 Oklahoma fell three places after beating Utah State 31-24.

The rest of the top 10 includes Idaho's next opponent, Nebraska, at No. 6, followed by Oregon, which moved up four spots after beating New Mexico 72-0. Iowa is No. 9.

BSU's Moore, Brotzman earn WAC honors

BOISE (AP) — The Western Athletic Conference has named Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore and place kicker Kyle Brotzman among its top players from week one games.

The conference also selected Fresno State defensive tackle Logan Harrell its top defensive player for notching four quarterback sacks and a forced fumble in the Bulldogs' 28-14 win over Cincinnati Saturday.

Moore is the WAC's top player on offense after leading the No.3 Broncos on a late scoring drive to beat 10th-ranked Virginia Tech 33-30 on a national stage Monday night.

Moore threw a 13-yard TD to Austin Pettis with 1:09 remaining. He finished with 215 passing yards and three touchdowns.

Brotzman made two of three field goals in the game, including a 47-yarder in the second quarter, the longest kick in the conference on opening weekend.

BULLDOGS ROLL

Kimberly volleyball sweeps Wendell

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

It didn't take long for the Kimberly volleyball team to dismiss Wendell Tuesday night, sweeping the Trojans 25-12, 25-16, 25-13.

A 13-0 run in the second game essentially put the match away.

Taylor Sievers started the run with a solo block and then it was Kalie Wright time.

The outside hitter tallied four kills during the stretch as Wendell had no answer for the 5-foot-7 senior.

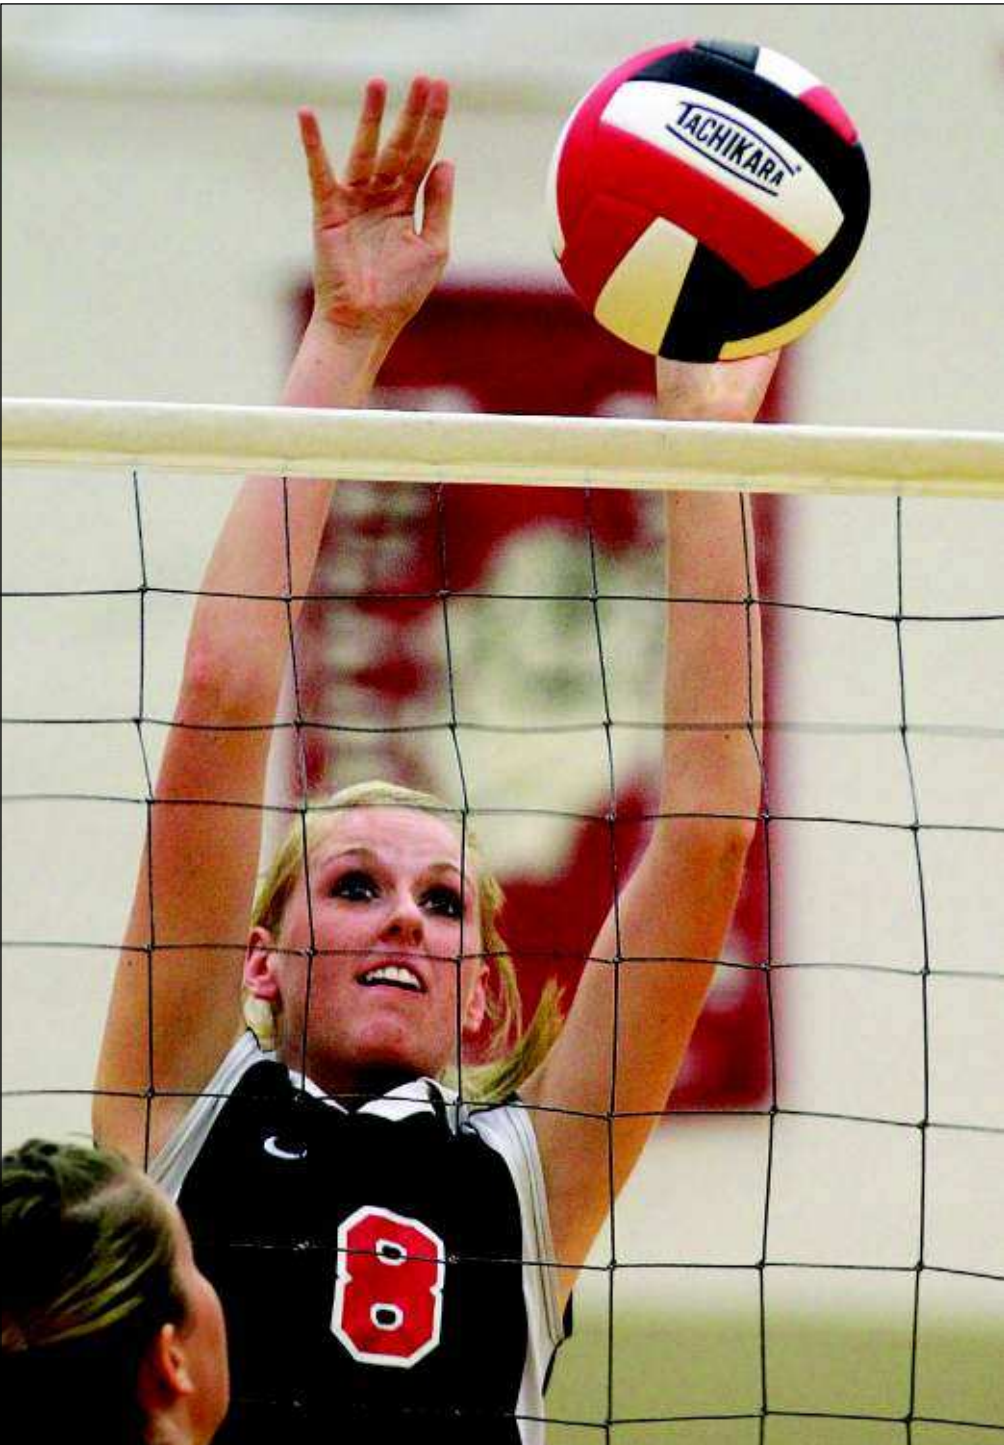

"I felt great out there. It was a lot of fun. We got to run some sets that we don't normally run, so that was exciting," Wright said.

Wendell finally ended the run at 18-4, but there would be no remarkable comeback by the Trojans.

"That was ugly," said Wendell head coach Amber Smith. "When our team gets into a rut and has to face adversity, we get frustrated and forget how to play as a team. We just weren't able to dig ourselves out in that second set."

Wendell didn't fare much better in the other games either, its only leads coming at 1-0. Heather Sturgeon led Wendell with five kills and four digs. Kiersten Hilt added three kills and Megan Sousa dished out eight assists for the young Wendell team.

"When they play together as a team, they can hang with anyone. The talent is there, they are just a young team and still learning how to play when the game isn't going well," Smith said.

Kimberly returns only three players with varsity experience but is starting to get into sync with one another on the court.

"We're still kind of young, but we're getting better and better. This was the best game we've played," said Kimberly head coach Lawrence Pfefferle.

The Bulldogs controlled the net with middle blockers Sievers and Katy Robinson, who had a hand in each of the team's five blocks.

"It's a fun spot. It's my favorite position," said the 6-foot Robinson.

Sievers pitched in with five kills, while Nellie Makings dished out 16 assists and Bethany Corder added five.

"We worked really well together and everything was clicking well for us tonight," Robinson said.

Kimberly (4-0) plays at the Twin Falls Tournament this weekend along with Buhl, Canyon Ridge, Filer, Jerome and Minico.

Broncos show they're all grown up now

They didn't need to dust off the ol' Statue of Liberty play, never thought of pulling off a fake punt.

Save those for, say, Jan. 10 in Arizona. That may be the only time this season that Boise State has to dig into its bag of tricks.

OK, so the hugely entertaining win over Virginia Tech doesn't exactly guarantee the Broncos a spot in the BCS title game. There are still lots of games to play, even more polls to take, and a lot more debating to do.

But after yet another sterling performance on a national stage one thing is clear: Boise State is a grown up football team now, and maybe it's time to start treating them as such.

The voters in the Associated Press Top 25 poll already do, rewarding Boise with a No. 3 ranking. The teams they will face with a giant bull's-eye on their backs the rest of the season certainly will.

And if the Broncos run the table in the regular season for a third straight year, the people running the BCS surely better.

This isn't the little team that could anymore. This is a big team that really can.

The Broncos had just 60 minutes Monday night to prove they weren't just pretenders. An hour of football to state their case or spend the rest of the season as an afterthought on gaudy blue turf.

They needed almost every second of it to win a thriller over Virginia Tech that was so big many Boise State players celebrated by taking a victory lap around FedEx Field.

"Certainly we're proving people right right now," quarterback Kellen Moore said.

Probably winning a lot of fans along the way, too. Say what you will about their weak schedule, but the Broncos always seem to find a way to step it up when it really matters and are certainly a lot more fun to watch than the two teams ahead of them in the national rankings.

Torn ACL puts CSI outside hitter Steel out for season

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The picture at outside hitter for the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team got a bit clearer Tuesday, but it wasn't exactly the type of clarity the Golden Eagles had in mind.

Doctors confirmed Tuesday what had been feared since Scharae Steel collapsed in a heap Aug. 28: she'll miss the rest of the season after tearing the ACL in her left knee.

The Reno, Nev., freshman fell awkwardly early in CSI's fourth match of the season, a Aug. 28 matchup with Snow College during the season-opening tournament in Twin Falls. She is eligible for a medical redshirt and will have two years of junior college eligibility, and four years overall, when Sergio Madrigal recorded a hat trick as the Jerome boys soccer team beat host Twin Falls 5-2 on Tuesday. Madrigal scored the first three goals for the Tigers (3-1-1, 1-1-1 Great Basin Conference, 4 pts.). Carlos Martinez and Salvador Mercado also netted for Jerome.

Twin Falls (2-2-1, 1-1-0, 3 pts.) got second-half goals from Ruben Flores and Colton Stott. The Bruins travel to Wood River on Thursday, while the Tigers hosts Minico.

WOOD RIVER 1, BURLEY 1

Alex Greener's stoppage-time header rescued a 1-1 home draw for Burley against Wood River on Tuesday.

Charlie Evans opened the scoring in the 16th minute with a header from a long throw-in to put the Wolverines ahead at half-time. But Greener converted Burley's best chance of the match with mere seconds left to send both teams home with a point.

"It was pretty evenly matched game. There's not a big difference between the teams (in the league) this year. It makes for fun soccer," said Burley coach Wes Nyblade. "The boys hung in there. They could have given up but they kept attacking until they got it back. Wood River is extremely well-disciplined and it's hard to break through."

Burley (2-1-2, 0-0-2 GBC,

2 pts.) hosts Canyon Ridge on Thursday, while Wood River (3-2-1, 2-1-1, 7 pts.) hosts Twin Falls.

CANYON RIDGE 1, MINICO 0

Rays hit 5 homers in win over Boston

BOSTON — Evan Longoria hit one of five Tampa Bay home runs and David Price pitched the Rays past the Boston Red Sox 14-5 on Tuesday night to gain a game in the AL East race.

The Rays snapped a three-game skid and cut New York's division lead to 1½ games.

Price (17-6) gave up two runs before retiring a batter but allowed just two more hits, both by Victor Martinez. Boston's 2-0 lead held up until Ben Zobrist's two-run homer in the third off Daisuke Matsuzaka (9-5).

The Rays added two homers in the fifth, a two-run shot by Jason Bartlett and a three-run drive by Longoria, then got back-to-back homers in the sixth from Dan Johnson and B.J. Upton. Boston had not allowed a homer in its previous six games.

ORIOLES 6, YANKEES 2

NEW YORK — Jake Arrieta pitched efficiently into the seventh inning, Adam Jones had a two-run single in a three-run first and Baltimore denied nemesis CC Sabathia his 20th victory by beating New York.

Buoyed by five early runs, Arrieta earned his second win in 10 starts, helping Baltimore clinch its second straight series win against the top two teams in the AL East. The Orioles took two of three games from Tampa Bay last weekend. Winners of four in a row, they can complete their first three-game sweep in the Bronx in 24 years on Wednesday.

TIGERS 9, WHITE SOX 1

DETROIT — Justin Verlander allowed five hits over seven innings and Detroit ended Chicago's seven-game winning streak.

BLUE JAYS 8, RANGERS 5

TORONTO — Vernon Wells hit two home runs, Adam Lind and John Buck also connected and Toronto beat Texas for its seventh consecutive victory over the Rangers.

Vladimir Guerrero had a two-run shot for Texas, which has lost five straight and nine of 12. Still, the Rangers began the day with a seven-game lead in the AL West over Oakland.

TWINS 10, ROYALS 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Jim Thome hit another towering homer, Delmon Young drove in four runs and the Minnesota Twins beat the Kansas City Royals 10-3 on Tuesday night to take their largest AL Central lead in 10 days.

Francisco Liriano (13-7) raised his second-half record to 7-0 in 10 starts, giving up seven hits and two runs in seven innings. J.J. Hardy had three RBIs for the Twins, who scored six times in the third against Brian Bannister (7-12) and moved 4½ games ahead of Chicago in the division race.

NATIONAL LEAGUE ROCKIES 4, REDS 3

DENVER — Carlos Gonzalez hit a three-run homer, Jhoulys Chacin pitched six strong innings and rolling Colorado beat Cincinnati for its fifth consecutive win.

Gonzalez's homer in the opening inning was his 32nd of the season and gave him 100 RBIs. He's in prime position to challenge for the NL Triple Crown, leading in average (.340), taking over the top spot in RBIs and vaulting into a third-place tie with Joey Votto and Mark Reynolds in homers.

GIANTS 6, DIAMONDBACKS 3

PHOENIX — Tim Lincecum struck out 11, three San Francisco players homered and the Giants beat Arizona to keep up the pressure on San Diego in the NL West.

The Giants have won four straight and six of seven. They began the day one game behind the first-place Padres, who started a little later against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

PHILLIES 8, MARLINS 7

PHILADELPHIA — Placido Polanco hit a tiebreaking single in the eighth inning and Philadelphia beat Florida 8-7 on Tuesday night to move into first place in the NL East.

PIRATES 5, BRAVES 0

PITTSBURGH — James McDonald pitched seven innings, Ronny Cedeno's triple keyed a five-run seventh and last-place Pittsburgh beat Atlanta for the second straight day.

The Braves have scored only 12 runs while losing five of six, a slump that followed a five-game winning streak. The Pirates had lost seven of nine and were on pace to lose 109 games before winning the first two games of the three-game series.

METS 4, NATIONALS 1

WASHINGTON — Dillon Gee took a no-hitter into the sixth inning of his major league debut to lead New York.

ASTROS 7, CUBS 3

Williams lone American singles player at U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Venus Williams arrived at this U.S. Open with a bum knee. She hadn't played a match in more than two months. She hadn't reached the semifinals at any Grand Slam tournament in more than a year.

And now? Williams is two victories away from her first U.S. Open title since 2001.

The No. 3-seeded Williams overcame nine double-faults and a total of 33 unforced errors to beat reigning French Open champion Francesca Schiavone 7-6 (5), 6-4 in the quarterfinals Tuesday night.

"I want to be in the final, because then obviously it's just one more step," the 30-year-old Williams said. "But I'm just focused on the semis, and I don't get too excited unless the tournament is over."

Next up for Williams is a semifinal against defending champion Kim Clijsters, who ran her U.S. Open winning streak to 19 matches by eliminating French Open runner-up Sam Stosur 6-4, 5-7, 6-3. Clijsters and Williams have split their 12 previous meetings, but the Belgian won the most recent four, including in the fourth round in New York in 2009.

"Venus is a great competitor. She's been playing some really great tennis these last few matches," Clijsters said. "I look forward to it. It's a challenge."

Williams is the only American singles player left in the 2010 tournament, because the last of the country's 15 men in the field, 20th-seeded Sam Querrey, lost 7-6 (9), 6-7 (5), 7-5, 4-6, 6-4 to No. 25 Stanislas Wawrinka of Switzerland earlier Tuesday.

"I definitely wanted to ... keep the hope going," said Querrey, who was broken in the match's last game. "You know, I was close."

It's the second consecutive year that zero U.S.

men reached the U.S. Open quarterfinals, something that hadn't ever happened before 2009. And this is the first season that the United States didn't place a man in at least two Grand Slam quarterfinals since the French Open first admitted foreigners in 1925.

Wawrinka, who joins Roger Federer to give Switzerland two quarterfinalists at a major for the first time, takes on No. 12 Mikhail Youzhny of Russia for a semifinal berth. Youzhny eliminated unseeded Tommy Robredo of Spain 7-5, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

Robredo was one of five Spanish men in fourth-round action Tuesday — and the others all played countrymen. No. 8 Fernando Verdasco closed out his thrilling 5-7, 6-7 (8), 6-3, 6-3, 7-6 (4) comeback victory over No. 10 David Ferrer — only the second match Verdasco's ever won after dropping the opening two sets — with as spectacular a match-ending shot as any.

Nearly 4½ hours in, Verdasco found the energy to sprint from the baseline up to get to a drop shot and whip a forehand around the post for a winner. Verdasco dropped to his back, let go of his racket and put his hands on his head. Then he rose for a hug with Ferrer.

she returns to competition next season.

"We're definitely going to miss her. I hate it when anybody gets hurt. I feel bad for her," CSI coach Heidi Cartisser said. "I definitely want to have her get what she needs done, because we want her back on the court as soon as we can."

Cartisser said the recovery timeframe is about 6 to 8 months, but she hopes Steel will be ready to roll when the spring volleyball session comes around.

Steel had 25 kills in four matches, including the Snow match, averaging 2.27 kills per set with a .174 hitting efficiency. She initially signed with Washington State out of Damonte Ranch High School in Reno before opting instead to come to CSI. Steel and Rosie Becerra had been penciled in as the starting outside hitters for CSI before the injury. Right-sided hitter Elisa Brochado moved back to the left last week in Steel's stead, though Dama Cox and Twin Falls High School graduate Ariel Medina are also in the running as long-term replacements.

CSI heads to Houston on Thursday for this week-end's Patriot Day Tournament, where the Golden Eagles will play five Texas schools, including No. 7 Blinn and No. 8 San Jacinto-Central. CSI returns to home action Sept. 17-18 with the Starr Corporation Invitational.

Schedule change: The start time for CSI's Oct. 9 home match with Snow College has been pushed back an hour to 4 p.m., Athletic Director Joel Bate said Tuesday.

and improving every game. They worked really hard and are starting to put everything together."

While Jerome served up a storm, Minico couldn't get into a rhythm offensively with a poor passing effort.

"There was no flow to our match," said Minico coach Kris Christensen. "At moments they played like they normally do, and then there were times that it was like they were confused."

Jerome jumped out early in each game, including a 12-5 advantage in Game 1. The Spartans rallied and took an 18-17 lead on Chelsea Hepworth's ace, but the Tigers held on, aided by Savannah Lott's serves to close it out.

With the momentum, Jerome took the first five points of Game 2, with Frankie Carey serving, and never looked back.

Carey finished with 19 assists, Haylee Burnham had 10 kills, Jasmine Branch had five kills and Lott added four blocks for the Tigers.

Minico (1-2, 0-1 GBC) was led by Hepworth's three blocks, three kills and six digs. Tylo Coleflesh had six kills and Ashley Parker had four blocks.

Both teams continue conference play on Thursday. Minico plays at Burley and Jerome goes to Twin Falls.

U.S. Ryder Cup picks: Woods, Johnson, Cink, Fowler

NEW YORK (AP) — Tiger Woods was a no-brainer as a captain's pick for the Ryder Cup.

Rickie Fowler required a little more than deep thought.

"It just came down to feelings," captain Corey Pavin said. "I had a gut feeling about Rickie."

Fowler, the 21-year-old mop top who only turned pro 11 months ago, made history Tuesday as the first PGA Tour rookie on the American team and the first captain's pick to have never won on tour.

He was the only big mystery when Pavin announced his four picks at the New York Stock Exchange. Pavin also chose a pair of major champions, Stewart Cink and Zach Johnson, both of whom have played the Ryder Cup on the road.

The matches will be held Oct. 1-3 at Celtic Manor in Wales.

Fowler will be the youngest American to play in the Ryder Cup since Woods in 1997, but only the second-youngest player at Celtic Manor. Rory McIlroy, the 21-year-old from Northern Ireland, earned his way onto the European team.

"I can bring a little bit of color to the team, I can bring some youth to the team and hopefully, get the guys pumped up a little bit," Fowler said. "But as I said, we're all going over there to win, so we're all going to be getting each other pumped and focusing on our main goal, bringing home the cup."

The Americans won two years ago in Kentucky, and will try to win for the first time overseas since 1993 at The Belfry.

This will be the sixth Ryder Cup team for Woods, but the first in which he needed to be picked. Woods had finished first in the standings every time, including in 2008 when he spent the second half of the year recovering from knee surgery.

Cal Poly, UC Davis football squads announce plans to join Big Sky Conference

The football teams from Cal Poly and UC Davis are joining the Big Sky Conference, league commissioner Doug Fullerton said Tuesday.

The universities accepted the invitations to join the conference as football-only schools late last week after university presidents approved changes to league rules that require all member schools to take part in the same 14 sports.

Cal Poly and UC Davis are Football Championship Subdivision members that compete in the Great West Conference but participate in the Big West Conference for the majority of their sports.

A timeline for the move has not been set.

“Our obligation and commitment to them is to work them in just as quickly as we can,” Fullerton said.

Many of the Big Sky Conference teams have their 2011 schedules nearly complete and Cal Poly and UC Davis must officially withdraw from the Great West Conference, which also includes football teams from North Dakota, South Dakota and Southern Utah.

Fullerton said he expects Cal Poly and UC Davis to end up with some games against Big Sky schools next year, a heavy slate of games in 2012 and a likely full schedule by 2013.

Tuesday’s moves are the first part of an expansion that could lead to a 12-team Big Sky football conference with two six-team divisions, Fullerton said.

The nine full-time Big Sky Conference members are: Eastern Washington, Idaho State, Montana, Montana State, Northern Arizona, Northern Colorado, Portland State, Sacramento State and Weber State.

REPORT: REGGIE BUSH TO BE STRIPPED OF HEISMAN

NEW YORK — Yahoo! Sports reported Tuesday that 2005 Heisman Trophy winner Reggie Bush is expected to be stripped of the award by the end of the month.

The former Southern Cal running back would become the first player in the 75-year history of the award to have the Heisman Trophy taken away. The report also said the award would be left vacant for ‘05.

violations in USC’s football program and levied serious sanctions against the school in June.

“I can tell you the Heisman Trophy trust has made no decision regarding the Reggie Bush situation,” Robert Whalen, executive director of the Heisman Trophy Trust, told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

The website cited two anonymous sources close to the Heisman Trophy Trust, who say the group’s investigation is almost complete and would agree with the NCAA’s finding that Bush was ineligible during the ‘05 season.

UTAH QB DAY TO DAY WITH SPRAINED THUMB

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah quarterback Jordan Wynn has a sprained thumb on his throwing hand and is listed as day to day as the 20th-ranked Utes prepare for Saturday’s game against UNLV.

Wynn injured his right thumb in the Utes’ 27-24 overtime win over Pittsburgh in the season opener Thursday. He said Tuesday that he may not know until Saturday morning whether he will be able to play that afternoon against the Rebels.

Wynn was able to stay in the game against Pittsburgh even with the injury.

He says it happened in the first or second series when he landed awkwardly on his hand.

Wynn passed for 283 yards and three touchdowns with one interception on an underthrown pass in the end zone.

CRASH VIDEO SHINES SPOTLIGHT ON IOWA OL KOEPEL

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Until last week, senior lineman Josh Koeppel was just the guy competing with James Ferentz to be the starting center for No. 9 Iowa.

But last Monday, Koeppel’s scooter got drilled by a pickup truck on his way to class, sending the 6-foot-2, 273-pound senior flying through the air and onto the pavement. A short video of the accident shot by a nearby police car camera wound up online and Koeppel has become one of the nation’s most famous backup linemen seemingly overnight.

“I never would have guessed it would turn into what it has. I mean, it’s weird. I was surprised how fast it spread initially,” Koeppel said.

“I saw the truck at the last minute and didn’t even hit the brakes,” Koeppel added. “If you look at the video, obviously a lot worse things could have happened. For me to get out of there alive is a big deal.”

Koeppel wasn’t wearing a helmet, but he walked away from the accident with just some scratches, bruising and one heck of a story. The crash — and the brutal footage of Koeppel smacking the truck’s hood, flipping over and staggering back up, missing a shoe — even landed him a spot on NBC’s “Today” show Tuesday morning.

Koeppel was held out of last week’s opener as a precaution, but he’s be available to play on Saturday when the Hawkeyes host rival Iowa State.

Poll

But the big story is Boise State and the Broncos very well could be the talk of college football all season.

They entered Monday with their best preseason ranking and a legitimate chance to be national championship contenders — if they could beat the Hokies and then flawlessly navigate a schedule with no games more difficult than the first.

Boise State jumped to a 17-0 first-quarter lead, watched that lead evaporate, then needed a two-minute drill capped by a 13-yard touchdown pass from Kellen Moore to Austin Pettis to win its 15th straight game.

“This was no fluke,” said voter Brett McMurphy of AOL Fanhouse, who had Boise State No. 1 this week. “(The Broncos) outgained Virginia Tech and hung 33 on the Hokies. The last two teams to score more than 30 against (defensive coordinator) Bud Foster’s defense — Alabama in 2009 and LSU in 2007 — went on to win the national title.”

“Will Boise? Who knows, but the Broncos deserve the top ranking for this week anyway.”

The Broncos have finished the last two regular seasons with perfect records, but neither time was it enough to earn them a spot in the national championship game. They were beaten out by teams from the so-called power conferences with BCS automatic bids, teams like Alabama from the Southeastern Conference and Ohio State from the Big Ten.

This season could be different. Boise State doesn’t have to climb over scores of teams to get into position to contend for a spot in the BCS title game, spots determined in large part by the coaches’ poll and the Harris poll.

Boise State was third in the coaches’ poll this week, moving up two spots. The coaches also had Alabama first and Ohio State second. The Harris poll is not released until October.

“We’ve just got a long tough hard season, and the bull’s-eye will continue to grow, and it’s just going to be one game at a time,” coach Chris Petersen said.

Not hard enough to satisfy some people.

Boise State plays at Wyoming in two weeks and gets a visit from Oregon State, which opened its season by losing 30-21 to TCU, the week after. The Beavers from the Pac-10 look like the best team left on Boise State’s schedule, but the Broncos have lost one regular-season game on their blue turf home field since 2001. Toledo also visits Boise State.

As for the Broncos’ WAC competition, well, it’s been almost no competition for the Broncos the past decade. Boise State has won seven WAC titles and is 73-4 against conference opponents from 2000-09, a .948 winning percentage that is by far the best of any major college team.

Texas is second-best with an .841 percentage (69-13) in the Big 12 over that time.

Feeling it has outgrown the WAC, Boise State will be leaving the league after this season and joining the Mountain West.

The best teams the WAC can throw at Boise State this season are probably Nevada and Fresno State, though Hawaii and Utah State flashed potent offenses while losing their openers to ranked foes.

Fresno State comes to Boise on Nov. 19. The next week the Broncos have a road game at high-scoring Nevada that on paper seems to be their toughest remaining test.

They finish with Utah State at home on Dec. 4, the same day the SEC and Big 12 play its conference championship games.

If Boise State runs the table do they deserve a spot in the BCS championship game? Ahead of an unbeaten Big 12 or Big 10 champion? How about a one-loss SEC team?

Unless the Broncos take an unexpected stumble, the debate will rage all season.

BSU

The fun this time took place on the road before 86,587 mostly hostile fans. Up early, behind late, Boise State found a way to come back and win on a touchdown pass to Austin Pettis with 1:09 remaining.

A team that first gained national attention with trick plays that beat Oklahoma in the 2007 Fiesta Bowl also showed it can play football the old-fashioned way, too, more than holding its own in the trenches against a tough and physical opponent.

Indeed, the Broncos answered every question except the one about their schedule. They had to, because they will have no other chance.

Their coach tried to downplay it all along, insisting it was just one game in a long season. But the players, college students that they are, were too smart for that.

They certainly understood the difference between the BCS title game and the Sheraton Hawaii Bowl that one lucky Western Athletic Conference team will be in this year.

“We know how much was at stake for us, so it was kind of like a bowl game,” Pettis said.

Whether the win over No. 10 Virginia Tech will be enough to keep the Broncos in the national title chase despite their weak schedule will be debated endlessly over the upcoming weeks by the talking heads on television. Oregon State is really the only team left on the schedule with an outside chance of an upset and the Beavers have to play in Boise, where the Broncos just don’t lose.

So Boise State will run up the score on Wyoming, and try to win style points by blowing out New Mexico State.

They’ll need to win big against teams that have nothing to lose by trying to pull their own big upsets. They’ll have to satisfy both the voters and the computers, and they can’t afford to let anyone even play them close.

“We’re heading off to Wyoming, and it’s going to be the biggest game at Wyoming ever,” Moore said. “That’s the way it goes, and that’s the way we like it. We like to be everyone’s biggest game.”

In years past, beating up on bad teams would have gotten them a pat on the back and a conference title. The competition simply wasn’t good enough for Boise to move all the way up in the polls.

That changed this year, though, which is what made the game against the Hokies so big. Boise came in as the No. 3 ranked team in the country, just behind Alabama and Ohio State, two teams with a lot more football pedigree.

The Broncos don’t need to climb. All they need to do is tread water and hope that the two teams ahead of them can’t make it through much tougher schedules undefeated.

Nothing terribly tricky about that.

McNabb says he’ll start Sunday

WASHINGTON — Donovan McNabb said Tuesday his sprained ankle isn’t 100 percent, but it won’t keep him from starting the Washington Redskins’ opener Sunday night against the Dallas Cowboys.

“Yes, I will be starting this weekend,” McNabb told ESPN980. “And I look forward to it.”

McNabb sprained his left ankle 2½ weeks ago in a preseason game against Baltimore. McNabb said the injury isn’t classified as a high ankle sprain — the more severe type that has more significant ligament damage and a longer recovery time — but he said it’s “very close to it.” He said he’s getting multiple treatments each day.

“Is it 100 percent? No. ... But it’s getting better,” he said.

McNabb returned to practice Monday, but lost valuable time working with a new offense as he prepares for his Redskins debut after 11 years with the Philadelphia Eagles.

WHITE UNDERGOES SURGERY ON TORN RIGHT ACHILLES

DENVER — Broncos tailback LenDale White underwent surgery Tuesday to repair a ruptured right Achilles’ tendon that will sideline him for the season.

His uncle, Herman White, told The Associated Press that the operation “went as expected” and that his nephew now has “some work he needs to put in.”

LenDale White grew up in Denver and is trying to resurrect his career with the Broncos after a fallout in Tennessee and a brief stop in Seattle. He tore his Achilles’ tendon during Denver’s preseason finale at Minnesota last week.

The 25-year-old Southern Cal standout faces months of arduous rehab as he tries to make a return to the field. Many tailbacks have struggled to come back from this type of tear, but Herman White said his nephew’s spirits and confidence “are real high.”

CB REVIS RETURNS TO PRACTICE WITH JETS

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. — The ball tipped off Darrelle Revis’ hands, then his helmet and popped into the air before falling to the ground.

The New York Jets cornerback knew exactly what was coming next.

“Rusty!” shouted some teammates. Another yelled: “You’ve been chilling all camp, having a good time at the beach, huh?”

It was all in good fun, though, as Revis enjoyed the ribbing during a mostly sharp first practice Tuesday. He was back with the team after ending a 36-day contract holdout Monday by signing a four-year deal.

“It was a breakthrough, I think, just being back on the field,” Revis said, “and getting used to the guys out there, clownin’ and joking.”

Coach Rex Ryan said Revis is about 4 or 5 pounds over his playing weight of around 198 and is working himself into football shape. Revis is still expected to play in the Jets’ season opener against Baltimore on Monday night at the New Meadowlands Stadium.

“He looked good,” Ryan said before smiling and taking out a piece of paper from his back pocket. “Actually, I was supposed to say, from the defensive staff: ‘He looked slow, we’ll maybe rotate him in.’ We may just spell him a little a bit, give Baltimore hope that he’s not out there. No, everybody knows me, that he’s going to play.”

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"I celebrate myself, and sing myself,
And what I assume you shall assume;
For every atom belonging to me,
as good belongs to you."*

—Walt Whitman

The Forbo-Krommenie Nations Cup a few years ago saw 64 top-class teams from all over the world competing. Today's deal from that event shows declarer reading the location of the opponents' cards accurately.

Fred Gitelman was the man at the helm. He had been given a clue to the location of the high cards from the auction. The key to success was to prevent a trump promotion.

West led the diamond jack against four hearts, overtaken with East's queen, and South ducked the trick. If declarer had won, then when West got in with the heart ace, he would have had a second diamond to play. At that point a third diamond from East would have resulted in the heart 10 being promoted to the setting trick.

At the table, when the diamond queen held, East switched to a spade. Confident that East would not have underled the king, Gitelman won this with the ace and returned a second spade. West took his king and could do no better than press on with a third spade. Dummy's spade queen was ruffed by East and overruffed by declarer.

Now Gitelman played a low heart, and when dummy's queen held, he was able to take two successful club finesses before reverting to trumps. The heart ace was the last trick for the defense.

ANSWER: Your call of two no-trump was natural and game-forcing. With a really weak hand, a second negative of three clubs was available, so you suggested 4-7 points. Since no suit has been agreed upon, your partner's call should be quantitative. My best guess now would be to bid slam, offering six clubs as an alternative contract. Partner can always correct to hearts or no-trump as appropriate.

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 8, the 251st day of 2010. There are 114 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 8, 1935, Sen. Huey P. Long, D-La., "The Kingfish" of Louisiana politics, was shot and mortally wounded inside the State Capitol in Baton Rouge; he died two days later at age 42. The assailant was identified as Dr. Carl Weiss, who was gunned down by Long's bodyguards.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1504, Michelangelo's towering marble statue of David was unveiled to the public in Florence, Italy.

In 1892, an early version of "The Pledge of Allegiance," written by Francis Bellamy, appeared in "The Youth's Companion."
In 1900, Galveston, Texas, was struck by a hurricane that killed an estimated 8,000 people.

In 1920, New York-to-San Francisco air mail service was inaugurated.

In 1930, Scotch cellophane tape made its debut as a sample of the tape was shipped to a Chicago firm which specialized in wrapping bakery goods in cellophane. The comic strip "Blondie," created by Chic Young, was first published.

In 1941, the 900-day Siege of Leningrad by German forces began during World War II.

In 1951, a peace treaty with Japan was signed by 49 nations in San Francisco.

In 1960, American runner Wilma Rudolph won the third of her three gold medals at the Rome Olympics as she and teammates Barbara Jones, Martha Hudson and Lucinda Williams prevailed in the women's 4 x 100-meter relay.

In 1974, President Gerald R. Ford granted an unconditional pardon to former President Richard Nixon.

In 1994, a USAir Boeing 737 crashed into a ravine as it was approaching Pittsburgh International Airport, killing all 132 people on board.

Ten years ago: World leaders ended the United Nations Millennium Summit with a pledge to solve humankind's problems, including poverty, war, AIDS, pollution and human rights abuses. The head of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Kevin Gover, a Pawnee Indian, apologized for the federal agency's "legacy of racism and inhumanity" that included massacres, forced relocations of tribes and attempts to wipe out Indian cultures.

Five years ago: Congress hastened to provide an additional $51.8 billion for relief and recovery from Hurricane Katrina; President George W. Bush pledged to make it "easy and simple as possible" for uncounted, uprooted storm victims to collect food stamps and other government benefits. Tropical Storm Ophelia strengthened into a hurricane as it stalled 70 miles off the northeast Florida coast. (Ophelia ended up brushing the North Carolina Outer Banks.)

One year ago: In a nationally broadcast pep talk from Wakefield High School in Arlington, Va., President Barack Obama challenged the nation's students to take pride in their education. Justice Sonia Sotomayor ceremonially took her seat at the Supreme Court in front of a packed courtroom that included President Obama and Vice President Joe Biden.

IF SEPTEMBER 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: A vacation or fun-filled group activity like a bus trip to the mountains or zoo might be just the ticket during the next eight weeks. You need to do something to escape from the ordinary world and can live out your fantasies in the safety of a crowd. In November the stars smile on your financial expertise and good business judgment, so this is a good time to make decisions that could affect your job or investments. In March and early April, your charisma hits a high point and you could meet your soul mate or successfully apply for a new job.

HOROSCOPE
 Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Tap into your inner hero. You can be faster than a speeding bullet and more powerful than a locomotive. You don't need a cape or a sidekick to rescue someone who is floundering in a sea of trouble.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your position may shift. Gaining a foothold on an upwards climb depends upon your ability to obtain the favorable opinion of those in charge. Keep your own counsel where money is concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Mystical musings amuse you. You could be attracted to ancient philosophies or cryptic mysteries such as the Nostradamus prophecies. But without a Rosetta stone or translator, you might be left puzzled.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Less is more. Eating small helpings frequently often is healthier for you than eating than several large meals in the course of a day. Don't devour ideas or books in one sitting; spread them out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Today there may be a chance to make your tomorrows better than your yesterdays. Use your brainpower to find the very best win-win scenario. Avoid wasting energy on fruitless disagreements and lost causes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Being terse and to the point can help to get the job done efficiently. But lovers yearn to hear far gentler words or to share feelings. A brilliant idea that is hatched now could be easy to sell to others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The power of your convictions can carry you far. Follow the headlines, gather juicy gossip and use the latest news as a tool. Someone might find your sultry secretiveness and fearlessness a big turn on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You want to crack the secret code of the universe. You might be so intent on unlocking an enigma that your ability to communicate with others almost appears to be a cipher. Don't hide all your thoughts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Treat your partner like your best friend and you can't go wrong. It might not be as romantic to consider someone else's goals, but in the end you will be better off by sharing joint objectives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Know yourself, but don't let just anyone know you. There are some dreams or ideas that are best kept private. You might benefit from retaining an air of mystery when dealing with new contacts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Chew gum and hold the basketball at the same time. You can handle more than one task simultaneously. A special someone in your life could be so sweet and charming that it's hard to say no to any request.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Have faith that there is a rosy future ahead. Obtain the cooperation of others even if it seems costly. The people you encounter now could bring you permanent benefits or sweeten your financial pot.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 46-year-old man who has been divorced for six months. I recently moved down to South Florida for a new job. I am trying out the dating scene, but it has been difficult because I was married for 10 years.

Abby, it's hard to find decent, intelligent women down here. All the women I have dated so far have had breast implants. These not only look strange, but also feel uncomfortable during intimate moments. These women get a lot of looks from other men who gawk at their chests when we're together.

Would it be wrong of me to ask a woman, say within the first few dates, if her breasts are real? I don't care if they're big or small, I just want them real.

— NEEDS A REAL WOMAN IN FLORIDA

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR NEEDS A REAL WOMAN: I do not recommend asking women you have just met if their breasts are "real." It could lead to a punch in the nose. I am recommending you visit some dating sites and, in the area where you are asked to list "interests," you state "intelligent women who have not had plastic surgery." I'm sure you'll find many. Of course, whether you have what THEY'RE looking for remains to be seen.

P.S. One final thought: If a boob job (forgive the vernacular) has been successful, it is difficult if not impossible to detect. I have this on good authority.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for two months and together for two years. While we were dating, I learned that "Mario" cheated on me during our first year of dating. When I confronted him, he told me he didn't know why, but that he loved me with all his heart. A few months later, he asked me to marry him and I accepted.

A few days ago I discovered that not only did he cheat on me with several women, but also with several men. Mario says he didn't know how to tell me about his past because it was "disgusting" to him so he blocked it out of his mind.

Had he told me all this before we married, I would not have gone through with it. I am now totally confused about his sexuality. Mario says it was "just a phase" — it was in the past. He says he's a changed man and he wants to be with me. I don't know what to believe anymore because all he does is lie to me. Please help me.

— BROKENHEARTED AND CONFUSED IN TEXAS

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: The first thing you need to do is get checked for STDs and HIV, because you may have been exposed to some of them during the "phase" your husband "blocked out of his mind." Whether Mario admits it or not, he is bisexual. Next, go online to www.StraightSpouse.org and you will find the help and support you are looking for.

Because you can't trust your husband to be honest, you will have to take care of yourself now. Please don't put it off because your emotional and physical health could depend upon it. On the plus side, be thankful there are not children involved. A man who always lies isn't just a poor husband; he would make an even worse role model.

TO MY JEWISH READERS: At sundown, Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, starts, the beginning of our time of solemn introspection. "Leshana tova tikatevu" — may each of you be inscribed in the Book of Life and have a good year.
