Otter, Allred stretch truth in political ads

BOISE (AP) — Republican Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter isn’t quite being straight about cutting Idaho government. But Democrat Keith Allred didn’t exactly cut property taxes, either.

Otter

Allred

 The Spokesman-Review reports the gubernatorial candidates stretch things a bit in new TV campaign ads.

In his, Otter says the Rockefeller Institute found Idaho “leads the nation in reducing the size of government.”

But the New York group says it has found no such thing. It does say the number of Idaho government workers fell more than any other state in the second quarter.

“People have differing opinions as to whether state government jobs involve a lot of waste or not,” said Robert Ward, the group’s deputy director. “We don’t express opinions on that point.”

And Allred’s ads contend he and his nonpartisan group The Common Interest “cut property taxes for Idaho homeowners and stopped Butch Otter’s gas tax and registration fee hikes.”

Allred played a major role in those debates, but it was the 2006 and 2009 Idaho legislatures that ultimately made those decisions.

“It definitely is overstatement,” said Jim Weatherby, political scientist emeritus at Boise State University.

Republican lawmakers including Otter have blasted Allred for claiming he influenced the two tax issues, including claims he had virtually nothing to do with them.

That’s not true either. In 2006, it was Allred who convinced lawmakers to tie the homeowners’ property tax exemption to the Idaho Housing Price Index, a decision that’s saved Idaho residents millions.

And Allred’s group did square off against Otter and his administration in 2009 during the gas tax and registration fee fight. For instance, Allred discovered an $11 million mistake made by the Idaho Transportation Department that gave already tax-leery lawmakers more ammunition to kill Otter’s proposals.

Both candidates began airing their ads Monday night across southern Idaho, as many Idaho residents watched the Boise State Broncos beat Virginia Tech in the teams’ college football season opener. Both campaigns plan to release the same ads in North Idaho and on Spokane stations within the next two weeks.

What Weatherby said is unique about Otter’s and Allred’s respective advertisements is neither mentions his party affiliation.

That underscores the importance of Idaho’s independent voter in the Nov. 2 election.

“Both want to reach out to independent voters,” said Jim Weatherby, “We know, at least by historic polling data, that roughly a third of Idahoans are independents.”

Otter, a Republican, is seeking a second four-year term. Allred, a former Harvard University professor, is a political newcomer recruited by the Democratic Party last year to face off against one of Idaho’s best-known politicians. Also in the race are independents Jana Kemp, an anti-abortion candidate whose legal name now is Pro-Life and Libertarian Ted Dunlap.

CSI enrollment appears steady

Dual-credit enrollment expected to raise numbers further

 By Ben Botkin
 Times-News writer

Fresh from southern California, 17-year-old Jacob Garlick is learning his way around the Twin Falls campus of the College of Southern Idaho, where he’s started classes this semester in early childhood education.

As he adjusts to college life, he said, he knows so far that he likes the friendly faculty and staff.

Despite the factors that drew Garlick and other students to CSI, the college’s enrollment this fall doesn’t appear to have grown compared to last year. College officials, however, say they’re not done counting students yet.

CSI had 7,699 students in its 10-day count, down 5.3 percent from last year’s 8,334 students. But officials said Wednesday they expect high-schoolers who take dual-credit courses to push the college’s overall enrollment to more than that fall 2009 figure.

The number of CSI dual-credit students should be in within about two weeks. More than 1,500 students took dual-credit courses last year.

CSI Executive Vice President Jeff Fox said because many school districts started later than usual this year, dual-credit students were not included in the college’s 10-day count.

“With the addition of our dual-credit population, we anticipate that our numbers will be a little higher than last year’s,” Fox said.

The college still anticipates reaching the 9,000-student enrollment mark this year, and administrators have stressed the importance of growth as a way for CSI to work its way through the economic downturn. Enrollment increases in recent years have offset state budget cuts, Fox said.

“We pretty much try to zero out our budget each year and plan for a flat enrollment,” he said.

The 10-day numbers do show a 5.6 percent increase in the number of full-time CSI students, 4,675 this year. That figure was determined through a calculation that uses the total number of credits taken by all students.

Other community colleges won’t release final enrollment figures until later this week. But they’re

Idaho submits application for education funding

 By Ben Botkin
 Times-News writer

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter on Wednesday sent in Idaho’s application for one-time federal funding that would give the state’s public schools a $51.6 million surge to help weather budget cuts.

Otter expressed reservations about the cost to taxpayers of the federal Education Jobs and Medicaid Assistance Act, but applied anyway so Idaho’s schoolchildren get the benefit of Congress’ actions, his office said.

“We know that budgets have been set and most schools now are under way. But as I wrote last month, it is important that our local school boards and superintendents have a say as well,”

Otter said in a statement. “Local school districts tell us they want the money, and how these funds are used ultimately rests in the hands of those same local school officials. So I want to make sure that they have plans in place for putting these taxpayer dollars to the best possible use.”

Magic Valley school districts are slated to receive nearly $6.6 million of the state’s $51.6 million. Idaho’s share is part of $10 billion that’s going to preserve teacher salaries nationwide.

The funding, which can be spent during the next 27 months, may end up being used by school districts to restore days cut from school calendars in response to a

T.F. County approves $37M budget

Spending less than 1 percent higher, despite plans for 17 percent health care hike

 By Nick Coltrain
 Times-News writer

Commendations from a former commissioner topped off the budget process Wednesday for Twin Falls County’s 2011 budget season.

The county’s $37 million budget grew by less than 1 percent compared with this fiscal year, despite county commissioners preparing to pay a 17 percent hike to employee health care without passing the costs onto county workers. Because the county could manage that cost without laying off employees or hurting their take-home pay, department heads applauded at the end of the commission’s two public hearings, though Wednesday’s audience was much smaller than Tuesday night’s.

“We’re lucky,” County Clerk Kristina Glascock said after the budget passed. “We still have jobs that we’re not cutting, salaries that we’re not cutting, positions that we’re not cutting.”

Shoshone man charged with shooting at son-in-law

SHOSHONE — Adam Thomas probably should have stayed at home.

The Shoshone man allegedly found out how mad Charles Cooke was on Aug. 22 when he arrived at the home of his wife’s step-father east of Shoshone. Cooke is accused of shooting at Thomas with a shotgun following an argument the two men had earlier that day.

The police report on the incident details Thomas’ claim: “(Thomas) said (Cooke) popped up from a ditch by the driveway and then tried to shoot him as he drove up, hitting the car.”

After his vehicle was peppered with shot, Thomas raced through a field to escape before crashing through a nearby fence.

Cooke was arrested for aggravated assault with an enhancement for the use of a deadly weapon and held on $50,000 bond. Lincoln County Prosecutor E. Scott Paul asked 5th District Magistrate Judge Casey Robinson the day after the expecting higher enrollment.

Jennifer Couch, spokeswoman for the College of Western Idaho in Nampa, said its preliminary enrollment figures show almost 6,300 students, up from 3,618 last fall.

But Couch also noted CWI's figures don't make a good comparison with other community colleges because CWI is new. Class began at the college in January 2009.

"All across the board, there's a lot of people that are attending classes, that are re-entering education after being out for some time," she said, adding that recent high-school graduates attracted to CWI's affordability are also enrolling in high numbers.

At North Idaho College, preliminary indications are that its enrollment has grown by about 12 percent, said spokesman Tom Greene.

Shoshone approves raises, plans park improvement

By Emily Katseanos
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Shoshone City Council members on Tuesday voted to give city employees raises and discussed ongoing efforts to improve accessibility around town.

The raises, discussed at the council's previous meeting, will be for between 3 and 3.5 percent. They include the first for part-time workers in four years.

The latest accessibility project involves building a handicapped-accessible sidewalk running through the Mary L. Gooding Memorial Park. The sidewalk would replace the current footpaths of broken asphalt with new surfaces allowing people in wheelchairs or with other mobility-related disabilities access to the park.

The city received a grant for improving accessibility in Shoshone and tackled revamping the park after completing projects at schools and the city pool.

Council members discussed which route would allow the best access, fit the budgeted money and allow for adding on in the future. They ended up adopting a plan that would cut a path straight through the park and over a footbridge. It was unanimously approved after some debate, in large part because branching paths could be added later if money becomes available.

"I say start going until you're out of money," Councilman Dan Pierson said.

Council members also talked about creating accessible sidewalks in front of the Shoshone Family Medical Center and Southern Idaho Diabetes & Nutrition Education, which will move next door after a change in owners. The current sidewalk in front of the medical center has a raised ramp, but the building next door has no handicapped access. Representatives of the businesses were not at the meeting to argue for modifying the existing sidewalk or tearing it out to create a new one, so the issue was put on hold.

Fire Chief Steve D. Stock also introduced an emerging project to improve wildfire defenses. The fire department hopes to team up with the Wood River area to educate city and rural residents about ways to make their properties less vulnerable to wildfires. Stock said the program includes advice about low scrub and placement of trees to discourage property damage from wildfires. He hopes to fund the project through grant money.

The council also granted a permit for a construction project involving boring underground holes for cables, and held the first reading of the updated comprehensive plan for Shoshone — the latter added at the last minute by Mayor J.R. Churchman. The plan is scheduled to be accepted Oct. 10.

improvement line would buy: office remodeling, building maintenance and the salary for upkeep workers when the county takes control of the St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center building on Addison Avenue next summer.

Commissioner Tom Mikesell was absent for personal reasons.

"I commend you gentlemen," Brockman said when told of the budget's minor increase, visibly surprised.

Only Brockman spoke, though several others, almost all county employees, sat through Wednesday's proceedings. Mikesell said Tuesday night, after a short public hearing in a room packed with county employees, that most people don't show at daytime hearings such as Wednesday's because they work. Even attendance at evening meetings is impossible to predict, he said.

The new budget goes into effect on Oct. 1.

$128.5 million state education budget cut. School districts will have the final say on how their funding will be used.

With a couple of years to spend the money, some school districts have indicated that they may wait until legislators set the budget in 2011 before making decisions.

Otter and Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom

Luna both encouraged school districts to spend wisely.

"With funding from the Education Jobs Fund, we will continue to make our students the priority, encouraging local school districts to use these funds effectively and prudently over the next 27 months to preserve student-teacher contact time by rehiring teachers and teaching aides and restoring any instructional days that might have been lost," Luna said in a statement.

Cab driver pleads not guilty to rape

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A Twin Falls cab driver accused of felony rape pleaded not guilty Tuesday in 5th District Court in Twin Falls.

Randolph King, 47, entered the plea at his district court arraignment but a trial date has yet to be scheduled. King allegedly raped a female passenger of the King Allen Cab taxi he was driving early on Jan. 10.

According to the court record, Judge G. Richard Bevan disqualified himself for unspecified reasons. In addition, King's court-appointed defender filed a motion for a change of venue.

Adult, minor charged with robbery

Two Twin Falls males were arrested recently for robbery at a Twin Falls hotel early Wednesday morning.

Anthony Ramon Talamantes, 21, and Miguel A. Hurtado, 17, appeared Wednesday in 5th District Court in Twin Falls, each on one complaint of robbery. They are two of four individuals suspected of kicking in the door of a Weston Inn hotel room early Wednesday morning and robbing a pair of females.

The alleged victims claimed that Talamantes, who they know by the name "Tony," and Hurtado, who they know by the name "Sleepy," came to their room with two other individuals, demanding entry. The females did not open the door and claimed they called one of the suspects' phones to tell them to stop. The four suspects succeeded in kicking in the door and cornered the females.

The suspects are accused of taking a laptop computer, the females' purses, an iPod and a mobile phone.

Twin Falls police located Talamantes and Hurtado around 2:30 a.m., questioned them and searched their vehicle. None of the stolen items were recovered, according to the report. Upon the alleged victims' arrival, they identified Talamantes and Hurtado as two of the suspects. They were arrested and detained, with their shoes being confiscated. The police report stated that the tread of Hurtado's shoe matched a scuff mark on the hotel room door.

Hurtado was held at the Snake River Juvenile Detention Center on $10,000 bond, while Talamantes was held on $25,000 bond at the Twin Falls County Jail.

Both are scheduled for a Sept. 17 preliminary hearing.

Gooding man faces child sex-abuse charges

A 51-year-old Gooding man is set to be arraigned on one count of lewd conduct with a minor under 16 and two counts of sexual abuse of a minor under 16 in 5th District Court in Gooding.

Richard Leighton Steen is accused of having inappropriate physical conduct with a 10-year-old child and photographing and videotaping that child, along with a 7-year-old child, in the nude.

The police report includes details of an interview with Steen, in which he told investigators that he was teaching the children sex education.

Steen is scheduled to be arraigned at 9 a.m. Monday in front of Judge Casey Robinson.

incident for a $100,000 bond based on additional information: Cooke is supposedly on medication for post-traumatic stress disorder and allegedly had caused a disturbance early that day at a bar in Jarbidge, Nev.

Cooke's bond remained at the original amount, which he posted a few days later.

Lincoln County sheriff's deputies initially responded to a report at 8:42 p.m. that a 2008 Pontiac Grand Prix had crashed through a fence at 180 E. 30 S. Deputies, along with Shoshone police, examined the car to discover extensive damage to the front of the Grand Prix and a "small series of round chips on the front of the hood." Officers determined the chips were the result of a shotgun blast.

According to the report, Cooke said that he and Thomas had spent the day together and argued toward the end of that time. Cooke then claimed that he took Thomas to his stepbrother's house in Twin Falls and that the argument was resolved.

Thomas told a similar story, that he had spent the day with Cooke and that the men argued, but Thomas told police that it didn't end as pleasantly as Cooke claimed. Thomas had tried to reach Cooke by phone while in Twin Falls to resolve the matter, he told police, and said Cooke threatened him to not return to his home.

Thomas did so anyway. Cooke was ordered not to contact Thomas and is scheduled to face a preliminary hearing and arraignment at 10 a.m. Friday in front of Magistrate Judge Thomas Borresen.

Twin Falls Co. Fair attendance dips slightly

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Family fun at kid prices was the theme at this year's Twin Falls County Fair.

But those kid prices and a dip in attendance have left fair officials with fewer nickels in those well-worn blue-jean pockets.

Fair Manager John Pitz said that with this year's reduced gate admission, the fair board hoped attendance would increase. Last year 82,050 people took advantage of the festivities but attendance dropped to 81,861 fairgoers this year — representing a monetary loss of $50,000 to $60,000, Pitz said.

Admission was offered at a pre-purchase price of $3 and $4 at the gate. Admission normally runs $7 for adults, $6 for seniors and $3 for children. The fair board will decide if admission prices should be bumped back up to previous prices for next year's event.

"I would imagine the economy had a lot to do with it," Pitz said of the attendance dip. "People are trying to hold onto their money for their families and you can't blame them."

While there may have been an overall slump in attendance, Pitz said rodeo attendance was up this year and the demolition derby was also well received.

"There were lots of good suggestions for next year and the board is looking for new revenue sources," Pitz said. "We save money in the good times so the quality of the fair is not compromised the next year."

T.F. high schools hold Bossy bingo fundraiser

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

A cow will make someone mighty happy on Friday just by doing what comes natural.

A new Twin Falls tradition is starting up that involves cows — and what comes out of them. You don't need to be a dairy operator to participate, either.

The Twin Falls School

District Education Foundation is holding its first Cow PIE Challenge at Canyon Ridge High School before the CRHS vs. Twin Falls High School varsity football game on Friday. PIE, it turns out, is a clever acronym with multiple meanings in the world of cows and education fundraising.

It stands for "Partners In Education."

Here's how it works:

The school's soccer field will be divided into a grid of 625 squares. Participants can buy tickets for one or more squares, with the proceeds going to education efforts like innovative classroom instruction and programs, participating band and cheerleading groups and the winning booster club. Participants can also designate a school program to receive their purchase.

You can still buy tickets for squares on the field in the PIE event. The cost is $25 per square or five squares for $100. Information: 733-5400.

At 6 p.m. Friday, two cows are turned loose on the field. The first bovine that does its business, for lack of a better term, will determine who wins $2,010. The purchaser of the square that the cow leaves its calling card on will get the cash prize.

And who can predict where a cow will relieve itself?

"We were trying to come up with an annual event that would involve the students and something a little different that the community hasn't seen yet," said Linda Watkins, executive director of the foundation.

The cows are sent out at 6 p.m. Friday. There will also be food and entertainment starting at 5 p.m., including slices of pie — the edible kind.

Hazelton, residents work through sewer spat

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Some people in Hazelton have been digging themselves deeper into trouble by not digging trenches.

Over the past few months, 5th District Court in Jerome County has seen a surge of sewer ordinance violations coming out of Hazelton. Some residents have been cited for not connecting to city sewer. The court reported a peak of eight cases during the last week of April.

Attorney John Lothspeich said the Hazelton City Council asked him to work with residents who had not complied with the city ordinance requiring city sewer connections. The city sent out an official notice a year ago to the town's 750 residents requiring that they dig the trench for the pipe connecting their house to the sewer main. They were given a six-month window and were required to pay a $700 connection fee.

Lothspeich contacted those who didn't meet the six-month deadline, giving them a bit more time, but then started handing out violations.

"Some might have been resistant but some have just fallen on hard times," Lothspeich said.

Hazelton has been improving its sewer system since 2005 when the town passed a bond to support a wastewater system project. It received $469,000 from Congress' 2007 year-end spending package and another $543,000 in 2009 from the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality to replace and repair collection lines.

Lothspeich said compliance wasn't required so much by city ordinance as it was by stipulations that came along with accepting government money.

"There's still a few who haven't connected but most are in compliance," Lothspeich said.

How problem teachers can fall through the cracks

It’s often easy for an educator to pretend to be something he or she is not in Idaho. Especially in small school districts, where the resources needed to do thorough background checks on potential employees are limited. If you’re applying for a job in an Idaho district, the state Department of Education checks your fingerprints, state and FBI criminal records and reviews the statewide sex-offender registry. Most districts call applicants’ references, but that often isn’t much help. “If a potential employee left a previous district under dubious reasons, the hiring district is not entitled to that information,” said Debbie Critchfield, chairwoman of the Cassia County School Board. “It stays with that home district. Only positive information is sent forward.” Critchfield’s district is investigating a second potential case of sexual misconduct by a teacher in the past 10 months. Last week, Burley Junior High School English and drama teacher Michael Scott Brinkerhoff, 42, was charged with sexual abuse of a minor under the age of 16 and enticing children over the Internet, both felonies. Brinkerhoff was suspended with pay pending the outcome of the case and has not yet entered a plea. That happened a day before former Burley High teacher Chad Burnett, 28, was sentenced to up to 12 years in prison for crimes related to a sexual relationship he had with a student at the school. Burnett did not have any previous scrapes with the law, but Brinkerhoff did. Online court records reveal that Brinkerhoff had a prior string of misdemeanor petit theft convictions in Bonneville County. Yet that information slipped by the school district when it hired him in 2006. Superintendent Gaylen Smyer said the misdemeanor information was not contained in a report from state. If you’ve ever faced a criminal charge in Idaho, paid a traffic ticket or had a creditor file a collection against you, it’s very likely to show up on the Idaho Supreme Court Data Repository, a database maintained by the state’s judiciary. (https://www.idcourts.us/repository/start.do). But it would be legally risky for a school district to base a hiring decision on information it found there about a potential employee. In our litigious society, even negative comments from job reference can potentially prompt a lawsuit. So districts tread carefully in making hires, despite the fact that the practice of fudging job resumes and hiding past misconduct is well known in the education industry. In the early 1990s, several Magic Valley school districts hired administrators and teachers who had been disasters in their previous out-of-state jobs — and didn’t do any better once they got here. In the education fraternity, the practice is called “passing the trash.” School districts, only too willing to get rid of problem employees, sometimes neglect to report negative information to potential new employers. Or they’re afraid of being sued if they do. That’s probably not going to change until the Department of Education or the State Board of Education sets up a more comprehensive system of background checks for teachers, administrators and other employees — and the Legislature gives them the money to do it. There is rarely a shortage of red flags in the work history of a troublesome employee who’s moved around from job to job. But school districts — especially small ones — aren’t always in a position to see them.

Our view: The background of educators needs to be more thoroughly vetted before they end up in your child’s classroom.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Superbroke, superfrugal and superpower?

In recent years, I have often said to European friends: So, you didn’t like a world of too much American power? See how you like a world of too little American power — because it is coming to a geopolitical theater near you. Yes, America has gone from being the supreme victor of World War II, with guns and butter for all, to one of two superpowers during the cold war, to the indispensable nation after winning the cold war, to “The Frugal Superpower” of today. Get used to it. That’s our new nickname. American pacifists need not worry any more about “wars of choice.” We’re not doing that again. We can’t afford to invade Grenada today.

Thomas Friedman

a frugal American superpower is sure to have ripple effects around the globe. The Frugal Superpower: America’s Global Leadership in a Cash-Strapped Era is actually the title of a very timely new book by my tutor and friend Michael Mandelbaum, the Johns Hopkins University foreign policy expert. “In 2008,” Mandelbaum notes, “all forms of government-supplied pensions and health care (including Medicaid) constituted about 4 percent of total American output.” At present rates, and with the baby boomers soon starting to draw on Social Security and Medicare, by 2050 “they will account for a full 18 percent of everything the United States produces.” This — on top of all the costs of bailing ourselves out of this recession — “will fundamentally transform the public life of the United States and therefore the country’s foreign policy.” For the past seven decades, in both foreign affairs and domestic policy, our defining watchword was “more,” argues Mandelbaum. “The defining fact of foreign policy in the second decade of the 21st century and beyond will be ‘less.’” When the world’s only superpower gets weighed down with this much debt

“An America in hock will have no hawks.”

— to itself and other nations — everyone will feel it. How? Hard to predict. But all I know is that the most unique and important feature of U.S. foreign policy over the last century has been the degree to which America’s diplomats and naval, air and ground forces provided global public goods — from open seas to open trade and from containment to counterterrorism — that benefited many others besides us. U.S. power has been the key force maintaining global stability, and providing global governance, for the last 70 years. That role will not disappear, but it will almost certainly shrink. Great powers have retrenched before: Britain for instance. But, as Mandelbaum notes, “When Britain could no longer provide global governance, the United States stepped in to replace it. No country now stands ready to replace the United States, so the loss to international peace and prosperity has the potential to be greater as America pulls back than when Britain did.” After all, Europe is rich but wimpy. China is rich nationally but still dirt poor on a per capita basis and, therefore, will be compelled to remain focused inwardly and regionally. Russia, drunk on oil, can cause trouble but not project power. “Therefore, the world will be a more disorderly and dangerous place.”

Mandelbaum predicts. How to mitigate this trend? Mandelbaum argues for three things: First, we need to get ourselves back on a sustainable path to economic growth and reindustrialization, with whatever sacrifices, hard work and political consensus that requires. Second, we need to set priorities. We have enjoyed a century in which we could have, in foreign policy terms, both what is vital and what is desirable. For instance, I presume that with infinite men and money we can succeed in Afghanistan. But is it vital? I am sure it is desirable, but vital? Finally, we need to shore up our balance sheet and weaken that of our enemies, and the best way to do that in one move is with a much higher gasoline tax. America is about to learn a very hard lesson: You can borrow your way to prosperity over the short run but not to geopolitical power over the long run. That requires a real and growing economic engine. And, for us, the short run is now over. There was a time when thinking seriously about American foreign policy did not require thinking seriously about economic policy. That time is also over. An America in hock will have no hawks. Thomas Friedman is a columnist for The New York Times. Write to him at tfriedman@nytimes.com.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... spending

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

There hasn't been much good economic news in quite some time, but Gov. Butch Otter's chief economist, Mike Ferguson, had some to deliver last (month). His new outlook for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2011, predicts that the modest recovery Idaho is now seeing will result in $80 million more in tax revenue than the 2010 Legislature expected when it set this year's budget.

Hip hip hooray? The recession is over? Time to boost spending again?

To put it succinctly: no. Absolutely not.

Let's go back to early 2009. On Feb. 13, Congress passed the controversial $810 billion American Recovery and Reinvestment Act — also known as "The Stimulus." Millions of dollars of that money were directed to Idaho's public schools at a time when Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna was considering $62 million in cuts to education to balance the books.

Luna proposed using some of that $165 million in stimulus money to offset cuts to schools that year — but not all of it. So cuts were made. But he thought it would be wiser to spread the money out over three years because he wasn't confident the economy would be roaring again for the 2010 school year.

Boy, was he right. Many throughout the state criticized him heavily for it, saying Idaho should spend the whole wad of stimulus cash in 2009. As it turned out, the leftover stimulus money the state had helped avoid even more gargantuan cuts to schools this year.

Now let's go back to this past winter. The Legislature was convening, and Otter used Ferguson's budget estimates to set his proposed state budget for fiscal year 2010. Conservative legislators thought the projections were too rosy and optimistic, so the joint Finance-Appropriations Committee set the budget $69 million below Otter's $2.28 billion estimate. Again, some complained.

They said important spending would be cut unnecessarily.

Then, in March, the state announced that it was $41 million short of its tax revenue forecasts since December. Remember — this is after lawmakers had already reduced expectations by $69 million just a few months prior.

And now we hear we're running an $80 million surplus. But if recent history had avoided anything, it's that the economy is still far too shaky to start boosting spending again ...

... sore losers

Moscow-Pullman Daily News

Supporters of recalling four of the Lewiston City Council members fell about a thousand signatures short (last) week to force the question on the November ballot.

Earlier, folks in Bovill had no trouble getting enough signatures, just 27, to ask voters to recall the mayor at the general election ...

Suddenly, it seems, all the cool kids are filing recall petitions when they disagree with something that an elected official has done.

The difference in the way the process works in (Washington and Idaho) is interesting, and possibly instructive.

In Idaho, if you can get the necessary signatures, your recall goes on the ballot.

Nobody except your fellow citizens who sign — or don't sign — the petition decide whether your reasons are valid.

The agency headed by the target of the recall petition must then pay for the cost of an election. And the recall target ... must mount a campaign to be kept in office.

In Washington, lawmakers decided that before a recall petition could proceed to signature gathering, a judge would have to rule on the validity of the charges. Apparently, that was to keep elected officials and their agencies from the expense of elections on bogus charges. But ... hiring lawyers to persuade the judge during your day in court can be as expensive as holding an election and mounting a campaign — and the taxpayers finance it all.

... in our increasingly polarized and uncivil political discourse, we fear that the recall routinely will become another way for the supporters of whoever lost an election to harass the winners.

... crying wolf

Idaho Statesman, Boise

A deal is a deal. Except, evidently, when it comes time to dealing with wolves. The environmental group Defenders of Wildlife is reneging on a longstanding commitment to compensate ranchers who lose livestock to Molloy ordered the feds to "relist" the Idaho and Montana wolves — siding with environmental groups that argued for just such a move.

Among the successful plaintiffs: Defenders of Wildlife ...

... frankly, the wolf could use a better bunch of advocates these days. Defenders' timing and tactics couldn't be worse.

Idaho and Montana politicians, game managers, ranchers and big-game hunters already were fuming over Molloy's ruling. This anger is misplaced — and better focused at Wyoming politicians who have refused to even attempt to follow Idaho and Montana and establish a reasonable wolf-management plan ...

Fact is, wolf "relisting" is understandably unpopular with Idahoans who want balanced wolf management, and believe their state has done everything the feds have asked. Now that the state's wolf population has exploded beyond any early projections ... many Idahoans aren't sure how many wolves are "enough."

And now Idahoans have reason to be skeptical about any other promises made by wolf advocates ...

Former PM Tony Blair comes clean, sort of Even in the thick of a historical tragedy, Tony Blair never seemed like a Shakespearean character.

He's too rabby brisk, too doggedly modern. The most proficient spinner since Rumpelstiltskin lacks introspection. The self-described "manipulator" is still in denial about being manipulated.

The Economist's review of A Journey, the new autobiography of the former British prime minister, says it sounds less like Disraeli and Churchill and more like "the memoirs of a transatlantic business tycoon."

Yet in the section on Iraq, Blair loses his CEO fluency and engages in tortured arguments, including one on how many people really died in the war, and does a Shylock lament.

He says he does not regret serving as the voice for W's gut when the inexperienced American princeling galloped into war with Iraq. As for "the nightmare that unfolded" — giving the lie to all their faux rationales and glib promises — Tony wants everyone to know he has feelings.

"Do they really suppose I don't care, don't feel, don't regret with every fibre of my being the loss of those who died?" he asks of his critics.

In Iraq, marking the transition to the "post-combat mission" for American troops, Defense Secretary Robert Gates was eloquent with an economy of words.

Asked by a reporter if Iraq would have to be a democratic state for the war to benefit U.S. national security, Gates cut to core: "The problem with this war for, I think, many Americans is that the premise on which we justified going to war proved not to be valid — that is, Saddam having weapons of mass destruction." He added, candidly: "It will always be clouded by how it began."

Iraq will be "a work in progress for a long time," Gates said, and, "how it all weighs in the balance over time, I think remains to be seen."

Blair writes that he thought he was right and that he and W. rid the world of a tyrant.

Maureen Dowd

But he winds up with a bitter anecdote: "I still keep in my desk a letter from an Iraqi woman who came to see me before the war began. She told me of the appalling torture and death her family had experienced having fallen foul of Saddam's son. She begged me to act. After the fall of Saddam she returned to Iraq. She was murdered by sectarians a few months later. What would she say to me now?"

There is no apology, but Blair sounds like a man with a guilty conscience.

He concedes the invasion of Iraq was more about symbols than immediate security, about sending "a message of total clarity to the world," after 9/11, that defying the will of the international community would no longer be tolerated.

In other words, Osama bin Laden had emasculated America, and America had to hit back, and did so against a country that had nothing to do with him or 9/11.

Blair did not want to be W's peripheral poodle. He wanted to "stand tall internationally" with Britain's main ally and not "wet our knickers," to use a Blair phrase, when the going got tough (or delusional).

Blair fantasized Saddam might someday give W.M.D. to terrorists. This, even though the dictator didn't like terrorists because they were impossible to control, and even though, as Blair admits, (the secular) Saddam and (the fundamentalist) Osama were on opposite sides. (When Saudi Arabia felt threatened by Saddam's invasion of Kuwait, Osama offered to fight the Iraqi dictator.)

It is naïve, given the billions spent on intelligence, that Blair and W. muffed the post-war planning because they never perceived what Blair now acknowledges as "the true threat": outside interference by Al Qaeda and Iran. So the reasoning of the man known in England as Phony Tony or Bliar amounts to this: They had to invade Iraq because Saddam could hypothetically hook up with Al Qaeda. But they didn't properly prepare for the insurgency because they knew Saddam had no link to Al Qaeda.

If he had challenged W. instead of enabling him, Blair might have stopped the farcical rush to war. Instead, he became the midwife for a weaker Iraq that is no longer a counterweight to Iran — which actually is a nuclear threat.

■ OUT OF WORK: With time on his hands, this Amish craftsman takes a walk with his son as he weighs his options. As consumers demand lower prices, the Amish refuse to cut quality but are willing to give in on prices to keep working.

Amish hit hard by recession

By C. MILLER
Universal Media Syndicate

With their simple lifestyle, you wouldn't think the Amish would be affected by the recession as much as most Americans. But rising land prices and a growing population has forced much of America's Amish population out of farming and into other lines of work. In fact, only an estimated 10 percent of America's 227,000 Amish still rely on agriculture as their primary source of livelihood. Many support their families by making Amish crafts, working in construction and making high quality Amish furniture. But those industries are also suffering from the recession. That means the law of supply and demand has kicked in and the cost of Amish made goods has plummeted. "It's definitely a buyer's market," said Melvin Troyer, an Ohio Amish craftsman who hand builds Amish furniture. "We've started marking everything down to rock bottom so we can move more goods and keep more members of the Amish community earning a living and putting food on the table for their families," Troyer said. And with high quality Amish furniture at rock bottom prices, smart consumers are snatching up everything they can get their hands on. The recession won't last forever, but it does make right now the perfect time to get anything Amish made. ■

SIEDO to unveil growth strategy for S.C. Idaho

Dale Bates, pictured, said Northwood Place will have one of the largest non-industrial solar panel amenities in the state when it is finished.

Solar panels help make new housing project more affordable

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Crews putting the finishing touches on Ketchum's latest affordable housing project are installing what will be the largest non-industrial grid-tied installation of photo voltaic solar panels in Idaho.

When all 247 of the high-efficiency panels on the roofs of Northwood Place have been installed, they will generate 71,000 kilowatt-hours per year.

That's enough to offset the cost of a geothermal heat pump system used to melt snow in the apartment area, heat gutters and provide lighting and heating for the common areas of the 32-unit complex.

For comparison's sake, 20 bicyclists in a spin class can power 2.5 kilowatt-hours—enough to power the air conditioning in an average home for one hour. The average person can generate 100 watts—enough to power four fluorescent lightbulbs an hour.

The solar panels just one of the things that will make the Northwood Place one of the greenest affordable housing developments in the country, said Dale Bates, the project architect.

The complex just north of the Wood River Community YMCA is made of structural insulated panels featuring nearly six inches of solid foam and "super-insulated roofs," Bates said.

It features bamboo cabinetry, which is renewable and healthy, as well as natural flooring materials with non-formaldehyde finishes and insulated window coverings on top of double-pane windows.

The apartments will be so warm that dwellers will be able to open the windows on sunny window days without feeling a chill. And they will enjoy "extremely low" energy bills, Bates said.

Bates noted that his Living Architecture firm won a 2007 award from the American Institute of Architects (AIA) for its work on the Pine Ridge affordable housing project in Ketchum.

"We won that award for pioneering one of the greenest affordable housing projects in the country—and this is far greener than that," he said.

In addition to enjoying the green benefits of their dwelling, apartment dwellers will be able to plant veggies in concrete planters that have been placed in the courtyard. Each will also have a balcony overlooking the courtyard with its winding path. The courtyard is designed to mimic the streets of Europe and provide a sense of community.

Rhett Zyla, a Ketchum engineer who was viewing the property Wednesday to see whether it was something he would be interested in, said he was impressed "that something of this caliber has finally come to fruition."

"With the economy we're in, we need to change our mindset on how we live. We need to think about how we can minimize our footprint," he said. "I firmly believe that, given the energy supply and turmoil of the past decade, that there should be national legislation that raises the bar on energy conservation measures on all new construction and upgrades in residential, commercial and industrial settings."

Idaho job growth should exceed the national rate through 2018, according to long-term job projections provided by the Idaho Department of Labor.

And the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization, the marketing arm for south-central Idaho, wants to lead the charge.

The organization, or SIEDO, will host its annual economic development summit today, outlining its strategy to bring renewable energy investment and jobs to the region — something its board and its members hope will recover more than 3,000 jobs lost in the region during the recession.

More than 100 business leaders and government officials will gather at the College of Southern Idaho's Herrett Center to discuss recent successes — including the new C3 call center that will create more than 800 jobs — and future plans to bring additional investment and jobs.

SIEDO is also expected to announce the formation of a new Urban Renewal Agency board that will represent rural communities in Twin Falls County, as well as a comprehensive plan to include those rural organizations in SIEDO's development strategy.

High on the priority list today will be renewable energy development, which has seen significant investment in the region during the last 10 years as developers took advantage of cheap, abundant geothermal and wind resources.

"We are commercially producing four out of the five renewable energies," said Jan Rogers, executive director of SIEDO, referring to wind, geothermal, hydro and biomass. "The only one we are missing is solar — and that's currently being built"

The summit comes on the heels of the inauguration of the Oregon Trail Wind Farm — the largest in Idaho. The 122-turbine wind farm will cost $500 million, backed primarily by global giant GE Energy Financial Services.

Only three months earlier, Jerome County Commissioners approved a request by MidPoint Energy, a Jerome-based LLC founded by Steve and Mary Marshall and outgoing Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell, to build a solar panel farm south of Shoshone. The company hopes to construct 150,000 solar panels on 405 acres.

The two projects are expected to create about 200 direct jobs. But economic development officials say they hope to bring in more areas of the booming industry.

"It's not just about energy production," Rogers said. "We also want to bring in the manufacturing and technical training side of the industry, as well."

The worst recession in generations siphoned 55,000 jobs from the Idaho economy over the past three years, including more than 3,000 in south-central Idaho. Job growth over

Bosses: Give workers time off for school events

Boss, my daughter has a soccer game on Thursday, so can I leave early?

With the start of the school year, small business owners will be getting requests from working parents who want time off to attend children's soccer and basketball games and other school events. Not just once, but many times throughout the year.

Owners who want to keep morale up will say OK. But they should also give non-parents the opportunity to leave early for personal reasons.

WHY YOU SHOULD GIVE TIME OFF

For Dave Reeves, "there's nothing more important

SMALL TALK
Joyce M. Rosenberg

than family. Work, your career, comes next." So at his company, there's no question that his four employees should take time off for school or family events.

Reeves, president of Reeves Laverdure Public Relations in Boca Raton, Fla., believes that helping staffers take care of their lives will only benefit the business. "If things aren't good at home, they can't be good at the office," he said.

Allowing employees to tend to their children or other personal matters will also help a small business retain good workers. It can also be a good recruiting tool.

"With that loss of a little bit of time, you gain a lot of goodwill," said Rick Gibbs, a senior human resources specialist with Administaff, a Houston-based company that provides HR outsourcing.

Gibbs said that in some states, it may be more than a matter of goodwill, as they have laws that require companies to grant employees time off for family issues. California, for example, requires companies with 25 or more workers in the same location to give parents or guardians time off for school activities such as field trips or team sports.

GETTING THE WORK DONE

Business owners who are flexible about time off usually find that staffers will get their work done because they appreciate being given the chance to take care of what's important in their lives.

Employees will be willing to stay late on other days or catch up with their work at home.

Owners who are worried about employees abusing the privilege shouldn't use that as a reason not to give time off. "You might get burned, but the motivational advantages outweigh

OBITUARIES

Thomas K. Schafer

Thomas K. Schafer, 69, from Twin Falls, Idaho, died Thursday, Sept. 2, 2010, due to an extended illness.

Thomas knew he wanted to be a civil engineer by the time he was 11 years old. Understanding college would be expensive, he set up his own shoe shining business in front of the local bars in Burley. Tom obtained an associate of science degree in civil engineering in 1962 from Idaho State College and a Bachelor of Science degree in civil engineering in 1965 from the University of Idaho. The State Board of Engineering Examiners registered Thomas as a professional engineer on Feb. 2, 1968.

Tom's whole life was one adventure after another while he followed the engineering projects he was hired to complete. The American Falls Replacement Dam was what he considered to be his brightest moment in engineering. In 1976, the United States of America and the American Falls Reservoir District employed Thomas as project engineer to replace the original American Falls Dam, which took four years to complete. Both Tom's father and grandfather worked on the earliest dam. Tom was generous, kind and always humorous. He will be greatly missed.

Thomas is survived by his wife, Bonita Schafer of Twin Falls; his four natural children, Bradley Schafer, Kevin Schafer and Nicole Fortuin, all from Minnesota, and Kari Schafer of Texas; his stepdaughter, Holly Tucker of Buhl; and three grandchildren.

Per Thomas' request, funeral and burial services will not be held. He prefers his friends and family members take a day of their choosing to enjoy themselves by accomplishing something they love to do.

Cremation was under the direction of the Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home and Crematory of Twin Falls. Those wishing to share condolences may do so at www.magicvalleyfuneralhome.com.

Sympathy and contributions to Tom's wife and family can be sent to 2150 Oakwood Court, Twin Falls, ID 83301.

Time off

Hiring responsible workers should head off any problems.

"If you have a mature enough work force, they're not going to take advantage of it," Reeves said. "You're going to know if people are abusing it."

Gibbs said, a worker's performance should be a factor in whether he or she can take the time off.

Slotkin points out that in her business, what matters is that clients can reach employees. Cell phones and smart phones take care of that need.

"If you're sitting at a hockey rink and take a phone call, you're not really out of touch," she said.

Sometimes an employee's job is such that the work can't be done later. One example is someone who works at a call center. The solution then is for co-workers to pitch in. Chances are, they'll be willing to do so if the work atmosphere is a positive one and every worker knows he or she will also have the opportunity for time off if they need it.

Joyce Rosenberg writes for the Associated Press about issues that affect small business.

Soldier Mountain Ski Patrol awarded national honors

"It's a huge accomplishment. The patrollers we have are so far above the norm, it's one of the reasons why we train the way we do ... and when we run into these severe accidents on the mountain we're prepared to do these things (that will save lives)."

A covey of Hungarian partridge rise over the landscape when flushed by a hunter and his dog.

Tips to increase your chances of flushing early-season birds

By Rob Morris
Times-News correspondent

Ask any upland bird hunter in the intermountain west when they first hunted Hungarian or gray partridge and they're likely to tell you about a pheasant, chukar or sharp-tail grouse hunt when they were surprised by these speed merchants.

Often considered an incidental or bonus bird, more and more hunters are exclusively pursuing huns. Pheasant numbers may be down, chukar numbers are extremely weather dependent and sage grouse have a number of challenges, but huns are almost always found in decent numbers.

"Hungarian partridge are extremely adaptable birds, in both the habitat they're found in and in their food habits," said Randy Smith, regional wildlife manager with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. "There seems to be two kinds of huns — those that live in the agricultural zone ... in and near grain fields and those that live out in the sagebrush steppe that are miles from any cultivation."

Habitat and tactics

This year's season opener is Sept. 18. To find early season huns, look for areas that are split between the two habitat types — cultivated fields adjacent to tracts of grasslands interspersed with sagebrush/rabbit or four-wing saltbush.

Areas such as the Bell Rapids, Grindstone Butte and Minidoka Bureau of Land Management isolated tracts usually produce and hold fair numbers of birds.

Early-season huns will be in family groups, usually 10 to 20 birds, and often found feeding heavily on insects before the first hard freeze.

Unlike chukar that in the early season are usually found moving between a water source, huns seem to have the ability to travel fair distances between watering.

Having a dog will greatly aid in your search, especially when trying to find downed birds as their gray-brown plumage makes them almost impossible to spot.

Always try to hunt your dog into the wind; this allows the scent to be dispersed so your canine partner can lock in on the birds without accidentally flushing them.

Huns are tough little birds, and it takes a high-base load of No. 6 or 7 1/2 to anchor them. You may get away with using lighter loads, but you may lose some birds on longer shots.

IF YOU HUNT

The early fall general turkey season begins Tuesday, and seasons for sage-grouse, quail and partridge Sept. 18.

The chukar and gray partridge limits are eight birds of each species and 16 of each species in possession. Quail limits remain the same at 10 and 20. A separate permit is required for hunting sage- and sharp-tailed grouse. Sharp-tailed season opens Oct. 1.

the sun climbs and temperatures start to warm, call it a day. You might sweat, but your dog doesn't.

Know the signs of an overheated dog — excessive panting, bright red tongue and gums, disorientation and/or unresponsiveness. If you see any of these signs, wet your dog down immediately and seek veterinary attention.

Always check your dog's paws and armpits for cheat-grass, foxtail and other sharp, awned grass seeds. Once these seed heads pierce the skin they can work their way into soft tissues and abscess, ruining the rest of the hunting season and possibly your valuable hunting dog.

Hatchery officials kill thousands of steelhead

LEWISTON (AP) — A deadly disease has forced federal fish managers at the Dworshak National Fish Hatchery to kill tens of thousands of juvenile steelhead.

Hatchery Manager Larry Peltz says two holding ponds at the facility were infected with a disease called Infectious Haematopoietic Necrosis — or IHN.

Peltz told the Lewiston Tribune the fish were killed to reduce the threat of the viral disease spreading to other holding ponds.

The kill is the second in recent weeks of juvenile fish at hatcheries that help bolster Idaho's fish populations.

Last month, about 40,000 sockeye salmon were killed at an Oregon hatchery that is raising fish destined for Idaho streams.

Ogden completes section of river cleanup

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Ogden city officials have finished cleaning up a polluted half-mile section of the Ogden River.

Once a dumping ground for rusted shopping carts, auto parts and assorted trash, the stretch of river is now nearly free of debris. It's part of a more than $3 million effort to restore the river and its banks.

The next phase, from Grant Avenue to Lincoln Avenue, will be finished later this month, Anderson said.

The aim of the entire 1.1 mile cleanup is to stabilize the river's banks, improve water flow, provide aquatic food sources and offer pedestrian access points, he said.

The project is getting early high marks from members of the public, who remember the river as a trashy dumping ground and now see it in a more natural state.

Jeff Strahan, a zoology teacher at Davinci Academy of the Science & Arts in Ogden, used the river's banks as an outdoor laboratory for students last week.

"It's a fantastic improvement," he said. "It's real nice from an environmental standpoint. It's user friendly. There are lots of habitat and it's clean and neat."

The state Water Quality Board has provided about $1.1 million in stimulus funds for the cleanup and the city has received about $825,000 from the Central Weber Sewer Improvement District for the project.

City stormwater improvement bonds are adding another $800,000 and Weber County is contributing $100,000. The Habitat Council contributed $100,000 and Blue Ribbon Fisheries gave about $50,000.

How to write your name in the sky

Unlike most other sciences, astronomy offers opportunities for meaningful contributions from all quarters, from PhD academics to dedicated backyard star gazers. Less egalitarian is the way people are honored for their discoveries.

To engrave your surname in the annals of astronomy, the surest bet is to discover a comet. By tradition, comets bear the name of their discoverers (e.g. Comet Hale-Bopp, after co-discoverer's Alan Hale and Thomas Bopp), with some notable exceptions (Halley's Comet, known in antiquity, honors Halley's discovery that it had returned multiple times over the centuries).

An asteroid you discover won't be named after you, but you get to choose its name. So, make friends with an asteroid-hunter who thinks you're something special and they may name their next discovery after you. Not bad, as long as you don't mind that there also are asteroids named after such unlikely honorees as Bela

Lugosi and the state of North Dakota.

If you're willing to work a bit harder, there are stars with unusual properties named after their discoverer's, like Bernard's Star (whose record-setting apparent speed across the sky was discovered by American astronomer E. E. Barnard in 1916). Sometimes whole families of stars bear someone's name, like the "Lanning stars" that emit excess ultraviolet energy, named for Howard Lanning, who cataloged them.

(Lanning, incidentally, also has an asteroid named for him.) Astronomical fame can be fickle, however. A naked-eye supernova described (but not discovered!) by Johannes Kepler in 1604 is now known as "Kepler's supernova." Nearly four centuries passed before the next one, discovered by Ian Shelton in 1987. It

Hunting

Consider visiting a groomer to have your long-haired dog field-clipped, including the fur between the toes. Going surgical on the feet makes spotting and removing these troublesome seeds much easier.

Seek veterinary attention if your dog begins to sneeze or scratch his ears excessively, as he may have a seed head in his nasal passage or ear canal.

Rattlesnakes are still active in mid-September and your dog is likely to run into one. A fairly new development is the advent of a rattlesnake vaccine. According to Zsigmond Szanto of Twin Falls Veterinary Clinic, the snake vaccine is a reasonable insurance policy.

"It buys you time to get your dog to a veterinarian for anti-venom," Szanto said.

said, noting with fondness his feelings for members of the patrol. "It's our lifestyle, it's our family. I get teared up whenever I think about our ski patrol."

Reed said he was surprised by his award. "I knew I was in line for it, but sure didn't expect that I'd get it," he said. "There's a lot of other people who qualify for it."

He said everyone on the patrol team helped contribute to his own success. Other members of the team received merit stars for their accomplishments.

Baldwin said when he first heard about his team being awarded national honors — something it wouldn't have been able to achieve without help from the community, he noted — he was overwhelmed almost to tears.

"It's a huge accomplishment," he said. "The patrollers we have are so far above the norm, it's one of the reasons why we train the way we do ... and when we run into these severe accidents on the mountain we're prepared to do these things (that will save lives)."

An acre goes a long way for dove in Kansas

By Michael Pearce
McClatchy Newspapers

CHEROKEE COUNTY, Kan. — While most hunting ground is measured by its remoteness and size, 10 guys stood on a single acre of habitat.

They were basically in someone's backyard.

Rain, the worst possible element for good dove hunting, poured from the sky.

But in 75 minutes of shooting, the hunters shot their collective limit of 150 doves.

They'll probably do it many more times this season.

Last season, Brian Natalini and friends shot about 980 doves from his one acre of mowed sunflowers.

"We could have shot a lot more if we wanted," Natalini said as he watched flocks of doves settle onto the field after the Sept. 1 shoot. "We just kind of quit hunting doves and went to other stuff."

Natalini, of Columbus, Kan., said the high protein and easy feeding drew doves by the thousands to the tiny field weeks before the season opened.

Careful management of hunting pressure keeps them around for many weeks.

"I keep telling people anybody could do this," he said. "Anybody."

State game departments have been planting sunflower fields for dove hunting for decades.

The Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks has dozens located on their wildlife areas around the state.

The fields are popular with hunters and success rates high for a while — often after a few non-stop days of heavy pressure early in the season and the birds migrate on.

Natalini saw a better way.

"I just live for hunting and I'm always thinking of ways to make things better for me and my friends," he said as he watched his Lab, Gunner, work a retrieve. "I thought I'd give this a try."

MCT photos

ABOVE: Brian Natalini watches for doves to come to his one-acre field of sunflowers in Cherokee County, Kan. Natalini and nine other hunters shot 150 doves at the field in 75 minutes of hunting in a hard rain.

BELOW: In this photograph, one of up to 1,000 doves that may be shot when they come to feed on sunflowers at Brian Natalini's one-acre field is shown.

That doves line utility wires and dot the fences around his 9.8-acre rural farmstead are testament that his idea's working fine.

Natalini's field was planted in the spring and a pre-emergent sprayed on the soil to help combat weeds that are never welcome.

"Doves love a wide-open field when they're feeding," Natalini said. "I pretty much want sunflowers and dirt."

Natalini allow unaltered weed growth in about six rows of sunflowers in the field's center.

It's where hunters hide when hunting season arrives.

The rest of the field is regularly inspected.

Providing an ideal feeding ground isn't the only reason Natalini's dove field has produced between 800 and 1,000 doves for hunters the past several seasons.

"I think managing the hunting pressure is so very important," he said. "You pressure them very much and they'll quit coming. You have to let them come in and feed so they'll stay in your area."

His goal is to occasionally hunt a small percentage of the birds using his field and avoid the masses of dawn and dusk.

Morning hunts aren't allowed because the biggest flocks come at sunrise. Afternoon hunts are finished about two hours before sunset.

"I'm wanting to keep those birds around as long as I can," he said. "They're attracting birds that are migrating through, too."

After hunting the first two days of the season, he'll rest the field several days. He'll hunt again when numbers are high.

At mid-afternoon on Sept. 1, nine of Natalini's friends gathered in a shed beside the field.

Rain pounded the metal roof so hard that Natalini had to raise his voice to give a "safety first and foremost" lecture.

The gunners then spread in a line amid the strip of standing sunflowers.

"It's 42 yards to that fence," Natalini said, pointing to the field's east border. "I've set it up so if it flies over the field, it's in range."

At 3:30, he gave the OK to start shooting.

Birds came through the downpour at a steady clip.

Natalini urged the hunters to resist shooting into a big flock until it was over as many hunters as possible to avoid educating birds and to help the group leave the field soon with limits.

Doves fell at a steady pace. "We've got some pretty fair shooters here," Natalini said in a major understatement.

Many within the group were competitive target shooters or serious waterfowlers.

An hour after the shoot began, several hunters had their limits of 15.

All were done by 4:45.

"That's it, we're done, let's get out of here," Natalini said when a friend shot his 15th bird. "Don't worry about picking up empties. I'll get them later. Let's let these birds come in and feed."

Of the 150-bird limit in 75 minutes he said, "That was nothing compared to what it can be like on a clear day."

Natalini and six friends hunted in sunshine the next afternoon, taking their limits of 15 each between 4-6 p.m.

Next, the group will hunt a similar friend managed by a friend for the first time this year.

Natalini is sure they could shoot limits throughout the season on both fields.

"People think dove season is two or three days and then the birds are gone," he said. "It doesn't have to be that way. I'd love to see others plant these little fields all over. I can only imagine the numbers of doves we'd be holding then."

F&G seeks comments on draft bighorn plan

Idaho Fish and Game is seeking public comments on its proposed revised bighorn sheep management plan.

The new plan will provide an overview of current status and management direction for the species.

Fish and Game will evaluate all comments and revise the draft plan. A final plan will be submitted for commission review in November.

The draft plan is available only electronically on the Fish and Game website:

Comment on proposed fishing rule changes

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game will hold meetings across the Magic Valley Region over the next few weeks to discuss potential fishing rule changes.

The biggest proposed change is moving from the traditional rivers and streams general season of May to November to a new season of open all-year.

Each of the three meetings will be 6 to 8 p.m.:

- Today, Magic Valley Regional Office, 319 S. 417 E., Highway Business Park, 2.5 miles north of the Flying J, Jerome

- Sept. 14, Old Court House – 3rd floor, 206 1st Ave. S., Hailey

- Sept. 16, Burley City Hall, 1401 Overland Ave., Burley

Anglers who can't make a meeting can call, e-mail, stop by the Regional Office or complete the online survey at fishandgame.idaho.gov/cms/public/

The department gathered information from the public this spring and submitted proposals to the Fish and Game Commission.

The rivers run through it in Montana and Wyoming

By Dennis Anderson
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

JACKSON, Wyo. — At day's end in a crowded campground south of this town we hung our waders from the ladder on the back of the camper. This was at dark or near-dark and the Snake River carried itself in broad sweeps from the Tetons through Jackson and along the edges of the campground before riffing and pooling its cold, clear water downstream.

In a fifth-wheel trailer alongside us were a husband and wife from California. On the other side, a dozen Harley-Davidsons leaned on kickstands next to small nylon tents. No one else in the campground fished, and we seemed the subject of some curiosity each night when amid the cooling mountain air we returned with sunburned faces, no dinner yet, truck rumbling, camper swaying, a drift boat trailing.

I had purchased the 16-foot boat and trailer online sight unseen for $4,500 from a man in Teton, Idaho, picking it up when I arrived here.

"How much experience do you have rowing a drift boat?" asked Mike Janssen.

"For accuracy purposes, let's say zero."

Mike is a fishing guide from Jackson, recommended by a friend. On my first drift down a daylong stretch of the Snake, he came along in his boat, demonstrating how to cross currents and in particular the importance of anticipating problems in the form of rocks and sweepers and river braids long before encountering them.

"Never get caught sideways," he said.

The Snake was the first stop on a self-organized tour of select Wyoming and Montana rivers. Others I had circled on a by-now-crumpled and well-scribbled map were the Madison, the Yellowstone and the Bighorn, all in Montana, as well as Rock Creek in the western part of that state.

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT: A 21-inch rainbow trout is cradled in a fly angler's arms before being released back into the Bighorn River in eastern Montana. This brown trout was fooled by an angler using a Pheasant Tail nymph. Anglers must wade or walk the banks of Rock Creek in western Montana as it can't be floated most of the summer. Mike Janssen casts into the Snake River near Jackson, Wyo.

Jackson was chosen because in the last few weeks of August the Snake's cutthroat trout tip up their noses, rising to Chernobyl Ants and other big dry flies. It's then that anglers from both coasts and many states in between descend on this upscale mountain town, some in the evening staying at fancy hotels, sipping Chardonnay, while others huddle in tents, pulling on cheap longnecks extracted from beat-up coolers.

Riding with me to Jackson, my two boys slept in winks, either scrunched in our pickup or, affixed to it, in our early 1990s vintage truck camper, suggestive as it is of the death grip the tanked economy has on the Average Joe's RV aspirations.

We were riding a tailwind, and I was really pouring the coals to the truck's throaty V8, the progeny of one of history's great geniuses, Rudolf Diesel.

The trip so far counted South Dakota — all pheasants, ducks and bikers hurrying home from Sturgis — among places in its wake.

Now antelope lazed in the Wyoming sage, pickups on dirt roads trailed dust into the distance, and 18-wheelers made up for time lost in sissy states to the east, where — quaintly enough — speeds are limited.

Also in Wyoming, on the first day I followed Mike downriver the Snake gave up its cutthroats generously.

"Good cast," I said.

Cole, the younger of my two boys, was in the bow of my boat, looping his fly line gracefully, his 6-weight rod providing just enough backbone to carry a big Chernobyl to a sweet spot near shore.

Downstream, drifting in Mike's boat on the opposite shore, Trevor, the older boy, peppered current seams and other prospective trout haunts.

Also drifting with us, fishing from their boat, were friends Tyler and Sloane Bergien of Jackson. Originally from Detroit Lakes, Minn., Tyler was smitten long ago by the West's mountains and streams, trout and elk, and moved here to be closer to them.

Still dear to Tyler's Midwestern heart, however, are the salutary benefits of Grain Belt Premium, a resupply of which I had bootlegged to Wyoming for him, stacking cases of the tall clear bottles in the shower of our camper.

"Can't get it out here!"

he lamented.

Alongside us as we drifted, on steep hills and in deep canyons, spruce grew thickly, concealing elk and bears but revealing ospreys and eagles, also pine siskins, mountain bluebirds and other songbirds.

In autumn, hunters' pack horses wind along switchbacks climbing into these higher elevations, amid riverbanks afire with the colorful leaves of aspens and cottonwoods.

"There!" Cole said, reefing back on his rod as if he had been shocked.

A cutthroat had inhaled Cole's fly, and, believing I could better help net the fish if I stowed the oars, I dropped the boat's anchor, pulling us quickly to a stop against the Snake's swift currents.

Bad idea.

The trout angled immediately for the faster waters of midriver, untethering itself from Cole's line in a single head toss.

"Generally, you don't anchor when a fish is hooked, at least not right away," Mike would say later. "If you do, the angler has to fight the current and the fish. If you keep drifting along, perhaps rowing slightly to hold the boat back, the current becomes less of a factor?"

Since before Lewis and Clark, road trips have been important to the American psyche, suggesting as they do the possibility of a traveler's reinvention — usually, in this country, varying by type of landscape visited.

Out west, beneath big blue skies and through the rose-colored glass of a vacationer's windshield, the rancher's life appeals, also the fisherman's, the guide's, the campground host's, the ski instructor's, the shopkeeper's, the university professor's, the retiree's and, as the boys and I saw near Big Timber, Mont., about a week after leaving Jackson, especially that of a young boy tossing rocks into the Yellowstone River, one after another, carefree.

My wife, Jan, had cashed in some frequent flier miles and had flown out to join us. She likes to fish and can cast a nice line but never has quite understood why her sons so often throw down their rods and join in fistfights over "whose water is whose."

"These are big rivers," she will say, adding — including me now, "You're all nuts!"

POW/MIA dinner in Rupert will honor local veterans

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

Residents of Rupert and other Mini-Cassia communities will have the chance next week to honor and support local veterans.

A POW/MIA Meet and Greet dinner is set for 5 to 9 p.m., Sept. 17 at the Rupert Square. The event is the kickoff to the Operation Vantastic fundraiser motorcycle ride on Sept. 18.

"We invite all veterans and their families and the public to come buy dinner to help the Vantastic program. It's a chance to meet the veterans and a chance for veterans to meet each other and share their stories," said organizer Lt. James Wardle. "It's just a way to meet and show our respect for our veterans."

The evening will feature a potato bar with all the fixings for $6 per plate, Wardle said. The Organization of Rupert Businesses is sponsoring the evening and several public officials will be on hand to welcome the veterans, including State Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, who will speak.

If the weather is bad the event will be held at the Rupert Wilson Theater.

"If you know a veteran or are part of a family with veterans, come on out and bring them with you," Wardle said.

The Mini-Cassia Chapter 10 Disabled American Veterans will also host the annual recognition day ceremonies for POW/MIA at 2 p.m., Sept. 18 following the Operation Vantastic ride. The short, patriotic program will include appearances by Cameron, Republican Sen. Denton Darrington of Declo and Rupert Mayor Paul Fries. A patriot guard will escort families of POWs.

"We dedicate the POW bench on the Rupert Square. Each year we try to do something to improve it," Wardle said. "This year we planted a flower garden around it and we will rededicate it."

Operation Vantastic is a motorcycle ride from the Rupert Square to Mount Harrison and back to Rupert. Southern Idaho Bros. are the road support for the ride and invite anyone interested in riding to sign up for the ride. All proceeds go to help purchase a new van for transporting veterans to and from VA medical facilities for treatment.

"We pay for the van ourselves, and we need this fundraiser to keep it going," ride organizer F. Wyatt Saunders said. "Without the van (disabled veterans) would have to find some other way."

Registration is $15 per bike or $25 for a commemorative patch of the event. A 2010 rocker is also available for $5. Information: Saunders, 679-1215.

Men can experience age-related hormonal changes

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am writing in the hope you will write about the effects of male menopause. I am 68 years old, and from time to time, my face will flush. Is this a symptom of male menopause?

Anything you can tell me will be of great benefit. I have learned much from your column over the years, and I truly thank you for all your help in medical matters.

DEAR READER: Some people — both men and women — can pass through menopause easily and without disruption to their daily lives. For others, it's a difficult process that varies in intensity from person to person. Furthermore, the reality of menopause varies extensively between men and women.

ASK
DR. GOTT

Age-related hormonal changes in men are common. As we age, older men are known to have reduced testosterone levels. By the age of 70, the decrease can be as great as 50 percent of prior levels. These low levels can result in swollen or tender breasts (gynecomastia), hair loss, depression, insomnia, sleep disturbances, infertility, flushing and hot flashes, an increase in body fat and other unwanted symptoms.

Treatment is both questionable and controversial. While testosterone therapy may relieve the symptoms, the benefits are not well-defined and may actually increase a man's risk of prostate cancer. This pertains to both prescription drugs and herbal supplements.

Until your symptoms pass, stay active. Exercise and eat well. Routine physical activity will keep you in a better frame of mind. Join a local community center with a swimming pool. Go out to lunch with your friends one day a week. Attend concerts. Read. And, by all means, seek the help of your physician if you become anxious and depressed.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I walk about two miles every morning to keep in shape. I've developed a paunch and what my wife calls a bicycle tire around my middle. To get rid of the paunch and tire, is it better to do the morning walk on an empty stomach or to walk after I've eaten something?

Twenty years ago, I would run three or four miles every morning right after I got up, consuming nothing but water, and it seemed to work fine.

DEAR READER: The key words here are "twenty years ago." Unfortunately, our metabolism changes as we age, and what worked then for most of us probably won't work as easily now.

You should match your energy intake to your energy needs. If you awaken in the morning and plan a rigorous schedule of exercise, you should eat prior. I'm not speaking of loading up on pancakes and bacon before jogging, but I am recommending a lighter meal to give you the energy to partake in the physical activity. Keep in mind that your body customarily burns about 100 calories an hour at rest and while you are sleeping. So, if you sleep eight hours at night, you have already expended 800 calories on awakening. To avoid major fluctuations throughout the day, you might consider what I call grazing — eating small to moderate meals every three to four hours. In that way, you should match your energy intake and output.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "A Strategy for Losing Weight: Introduction to the No Flour, No Sugar Diet." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, Ohio, 44092-0167. Yellowstone breaks record for summer visitors

CHEYENNE — This species in Yellowstone National Park is appearing in greater numbers than ever before: people.

More than 2.5 million of them visited the world's first national park over the June, July and August summer season. That's up by more than 200,000 compared with summer 2009, putting Yellowstone on track to set another attendance record. Nearly 3.3 million people visited during all of 2009, topping the previous record set in 2007 by nearly 5 percent.

Marketing by the state tourism offices in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho probably is boosting Yellowstone tourism, park spokesman Al Nash said.

The weak economy might also be helping by encouraging cheap vacations.

"Visiting your national parks is a good value," Nash said Wednesday. "And you can sort of adjust the length and the type of your trip to fit your schedule and your wallet more than you can other visitor destinations."

On the other hand, more people can mean longer lines at park entrance stations, restaurants and gift shop cash registers, Nash said, along with more traffic jams where people stop to gawk at roadside wildlife.

Thousands of juvenile fish killed at hatchery

LEWISTON — Federal fish managers say they opted to kill tens of thousands of juvenile steelhead after finding a potentially deadly virus in two holding ponds at the Dworshak National Fish Hatchery.

Hatchery manager Larry Peltz says the fish were killed Tuesday to reduce the threat of the viral disease called Infectious Haematopoietic Necrosis — or IHN — spreading to other hatchery holding ponds at the facility.

IHN infects salmon and trout and can be fatal. But the virus can also be carried and passed on by survivors, posing a threat not just to other holding ponds but to trout and salmon populations in bigger water bodies.

"When fish break with IHN you have a source of the virus sitting right there," Peltz told the Lewiston Tribune. "If you leave them there, the virus is there and the potential for the virus to spread exists."

The kill is the second in recent weeks of juvenile fish at hatcheries that are helping to bolster Idaho's populations of fish.

Wildfire destroys more than 130 homes near Boulder

BOULDER — A wildfire burning in the canyons and steep mountainsides near Boulder became one of the most destructive blazes in Colorado history Wednesday as authorities determined it had destroyed nearly 150 homes in just three days.

Authorities provided the dire assessment as firefighters encountered a tangle of rattlesnakes, downed power lines and combustible propane tanks and struggled to get an upper hand on the inferno.

The Boulder County sheriff's office said

Wednesday that 136 homes have been destroyed — a toll likely to rise as the blaze rages on and firefighters get a clearer picture of the damage.

About 3,500 people have been evacuated from about 1,000 homes stemming from a fire that broke out in a parched area near Boulder on Monday. Four people remain missing as some residents have stayed behind and risked their lives to try to save their homes.

No deaths or injuries have been reported at this point, and the cause of the fire was not known.

WASHINGTON

BP investigation cites multiple failures, but not well's design

A BP internal investigation released Wednesday concludes that eight key factors contributed to the explosion of the Deepwater Horizon oil rig in the Gulf of Mexico, including a poor cement job by Halliburton and the failure by Transocean workers to notice for 40 minutes that oil and gas were gushing into the well.

BP's probe acknowledges that a key BP official aboard the rig misinterpreted a critical pressure test and then mistakenly authorized the removal of heavy drilling mud — the only impediment to gas and crude oil surging up the well's drill pipe — before the well's integrity was confirmed.

The investigation concluded, however, that the well's design was sound and didn't contribute to the explosion, which killed 11 rig workers and sent more than four million barrels of oil spewing into the Gulf over nearly three months — the worst oil spill in U.S. history.

Both Halliburton and Transocean immediately denounced the conclusions.

"This is a self-serving report that attempts to conceal the critical factor that set the stage for the ... incident: BP's fatally flawed well design," Transocean said in a statement. "In both its design and construction, BP made a series of cost-saving decisions that increased risk — in some cases, severely."

Would you like 1 hump or 2 with your dinosaur?

The weird world of dinosaurs has just gotten a tad more bizarre. Scientists found a nearly complete fossil of a new dinosaur that sports a noticeable hump, maybe as possible advertising.

The hump on the dinosaur's back, which was at least 16 inches tall, may have been used to help this meat-eating theropod communicate among its own species, scientists theorize. Discoverer Francisco Ortega of Spain named it Concavenator corcovatus which means "the hunchback hunter from Cuenca."

Ortega said the hump could have been used to store fat or regulate body temperature, but there is also the distinct possibility that it was used by concavenators to somehow differentiate themselves or communicate with each other. But with only one of these dinos, it's only speculation and is hard to figure out what the humps were meant to convey if they were tools of communication, he said.

Paleontologist Paul Sereno at the University of Chicago, who wasn't part of the study, thinks the only conceivable explanation is "an advertising role" because it follows similar pointy fins on other dinosaurs.

"It is an ornamental crest that helps to distinguish the individual," Sereno said in an e-mail. "Perhaps it was brightly colored, perhaps it would have been well maintained and large in strong, healthy individuals."

TEXAS

Remnants of Hermine flood Texas, buffet Oklahoma

ARLINGTON — The remnants of Tropical Storm Hermine swept northward through Texas and into Oklahoma on Wednesday, forcing more than 100 high-water rescues, swamping city neighborhoods, spawning tornadoes and killing at least two people.

Hermine packed a relatively light punch when it made landfall Monday night, and many residents said they felt unprepared for Wednesday's sudden flooding.

In Arlington, a suburb 22 miles west of Dallas, 67-year-old retiree George Lowe said he and his wife, Laura, were surprised by how quickly and badly their neighborhood flooded. Water reached up to 5 feet high in some homes — many just a single story — laying waste to belongings. Quilts and artwork hung dripping and ruined on walls, and couches and furniture lay overturned on sodden, muddy floors.

"Did you ever see a refrigerator floating around your kitchen before?" Lowe asked.

Later in the day, a series of tornadoes touched down outside of downtown Dallas, damaging warehouses in an area near Dallas Love Field.

MICHIGAN

Wind-whipped fires add to Detroit's economic woes

DETROIT — For a city already struggling with high unemployment, widespread foreclosures and deep budget cuts, here was another crisis: wind-whipped fires tearing through row after row of homes, some of them abandoned.

The flames, probably sparked by downed power lines Tuesday evening, jumped from rooftop to rooftop, fed by winds up to 50 mph. The fires swept through several neighborhoods across Detroit, including some that were well-tended and others filled with deteriorating vacant houses and weed-filled lots.

At least 85 structures were destroyed or scorched by the flames. Fire Commissioner James Mack said it was the worst spate of fires since the 1980s, when firefighters regularly battled hundreds of arsons on the night before Halloween.

No injuries were reported, but by Wednesday people in some charred areas began complaining that firefighters took as much as 90 minutes to respond.

BSU, TCU wins bolster MWC's status

Boise State's Dan Paul celebrates the Broncos' victory over Virginia Tech at FedEx Field in Landover, Md., Monday.

AP photo

By Pat Graham
Associated Press writer

DENVER — If you can beat 'em, maybe you can join 'em.

While the rest of the country debates the merits of TCU and Boise State as potential BCS busters, Mountain West Conference commissioner Craig Thompson is simply relishing the early season successes of the Horned Frogs and Broncos as they pick off teams from power conferences.

TCU, the defending league champion, is ranked fourth after defeating Oregon State in the opener, one spot behind Boise State, which buoyed its national title hopes by rallying past Virginia Tech 33-30 Monday night in Landover, Md.

Although Boise State doesn't join the league until next season, the Broncos' record this year and last — when they were 14-0 — will be factored into the formula as the Mountain West Conference vies to land an automatic BCS berth like the six major football conferences already enjoy.

Halfway through a four-year evaluation process, Thompson likes the direction the conference is heading, even as traditional power BYU moves to independent status next season and Utah bolts for the Pac-10. Fresno State and Nevada have agreed to join the MWC and more expansion hasn't been ruled out.

These days, the buzz around college football centers around Boise State and TCU and whether they'll be able to hang around long enough to be serious contenders for the national title.

That would provide more evidence of what Thompson has been saying for years: his league deserves more respect.

"It's incumbent upon us to continue to perform at a high level and arguably put ourselves in a position that, in the next cycle of BCS bowl negotiations, we can commandeer, if you will, and negotiate an automatic place," Thompson told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "I think the Mountain West Conference deserves an equal access point with the other six conferences."

For now, it remains a slippery slope

Riverhawks need to top Bruins to forge a real rivalry

Hyped. Intense. Crazed. Passionate. All these words could describe Friday night's contest between Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge. It's going to be a spirited affair between the two high schools in Twin Falls School District. Bragging rights to the best side of town are at stake. "Whoever wins pretty much owns the town," said Canyon Ridge receiver Nathan Sterner. But a rivalry?

Stephen Meyers

That word doesn't describe this game quite yet.

The two schools are only 2.6 miles apart, but the gap in talent on the teams is much wider.

Exhibit A: The 55-7 beatdown by the Bruins last year in the inaugural Service Bowl.

Not quite rivalry material.

When I hear rivalry, I think Lakers-Celtics, Red Sox-Yankees, Duke-North Carolina — all great teams that played back-and-forth games. The Lakers won five NBA

Gooding boys soccer team rolls past Declo

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

DECLO — Gooding boys soccer coach Roger Johnson has just one wish for his team.

"I just want them to be competitive," he said. "I don't care if they lose, just as long as they're competitive."

Johnson has nothing to worry about.

Despite graduating six players from Gooding's state championship team from a year ago, the Senators are once again competitive. They improved their record to 4-1-0 by cruising to a 6-1 win over Declo on Wednesday.

"This is what we did last year — we came together just before the state tournament and that's what we're shooting for, to get the cohesion at the end of the year," Johnson said. "We're very pleased. I have Carlos Tuka come out and help me train them this year and we're doing fine."

Luis Patino and Jose Rodriguez scored two goals apiece and Gooding took control by going up 4-0 early. The Senators dominated with superior quickness and passing. Fredrico Mendez and Omar Gutierrez also scored for Gooding.

"(Gooding) can possess the ball better and they have more skilled players," said Declo senior captain Erik Henrikson, who scored Declo's only goal. "They've probably played more than our guys have. We're better than we were at the start of the season. That's all you can ask for, to hopefully progress in skill."

Declo (1-5) travels to the Community School on Friday and Gooding hosts the Cutthroats on Monday.

Declo defender Zane Davis, left, tries to keep the ball away from Gooding forward Jose Rodriguez, who scored two goals in the Senators' 6-1 win Wednesday at Declo High School.

Nebraska fans cheer last week against Western Kentucky in Lincoln, Neb., Saturday.

COLD CORN CASH

Idaho to get $800,000 for playing at Nebraska

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — In the buildup to Idaho's highest-profile nonconference game in several years, Robb Akey was asked if the Vandals had senior quarterback Nate Enderle — a lifelong Nebraskan — in mind when they signed on to play tradition-rich Nebraska in Lincoln.

The Cornhuskers and Vandals, after all, struck an agreement in 2007, Enderle's first year as Idaho's starter, and decided back then to meet in the QB's senior season.

But it turns out those were simple scheduling quirks. Nothing more.

"I think this game was scheduled with a whole lot of dollars in mind, more so than Nate," said Akey, Idaho's fourth-year coach said.

The Vandals, in fact, have never received a more lucrative payout than what they will reap for facing the sixth-ranked Cornhuskers on Saturday at 10:30 a.m. MST. Nebraska is dishing out $800,000 to Idaho, a whopping sum for an athletic department with a budget of about $15 million.

And the payoff for matchups with major-conference programs will only get bigger in the next few years.

Texas A&M is slated to pay $850,000 to Idaho for a game next season in College Station and Louisiana State will write a check for $950,000 to the Vandals for a guaranteed game in 2012 in Baton Rouge.

"They're extremely important and are one of our main revenue sources," Idaho athletic director Rob Spear said of the big-money contests. "And football, because of their ability to generate guaranteed revenue, they are the only program that generates profit at the end of the year. They help subsidize the rest of our programs and our athletic department."

As recently as 2007, the Vandals have played multiple opponents in a single year from conferences such as the Pac-10 and Big 12. But this is the third consecutive season that Idaho will take on only one team from a Bowl Championship Series league.

Different scenario, same goal. When the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team headed to Houston a year ago for the Patriot Day tournament, it did so with a chip on its shoulder, feeling disrespected in the most recent NJCAA Division I poll. This year, it had the respect and now has to win it back.

On the back of losses in consecutive tournaments, CSI slipped from the preseason top spot to No. 5 in this week's poll, released Wednesday. One of the teams it lost to, Miami Dade, vaulted to No. 1 and the other, Western Wyoming, entered the poll for the first time this season at No. 10.

Phillies burst for 10 runs to keep NL East lead

PHILADELPHIA — Ryan Howard had six RBIs and the Philadelphia Phillies backed Cole Hamels with a rare burst of the run support he had been missing most of the season in a 10-6 win over the Florida Marlins on Wednesday night.

Howard hit his 28th homer of the season and the NL East-leading Phillies had a season-high 18 hits.

Hamels (10-10) tossed four-hit ball over seven innings and extended his consecutive scoreless innings streak to 25. He struck out five and won his third straight start.

His record would be well over .500 if not for receiving the fourth-lowest run support (3.18 runs per start) of any starter this season entering the game.

Phillies shortstop Jimmy Rollins left with tightness in his right hamstring. He is day-to-day.

BRAVES 9, PIRATES 3

PITTSBURGH — Omar Infante had three hits, Derek Lowe beat Pittsburgh for the 10th straight time and Atlanta got the breakout victory it badly needed.

The Braves opened leads of 3-0 in the first and 8-0 in the third after being held to two runs or fewer in five of their previous six games.

Philadelphia Phillies short stop Jimmy Rollins, left, slides into home to score past the tag of Florida Marlins catcher Brad Davis on a single by Carlos Ruiz in the third inning Wednesday in Philadelphia.

They had lost three in a row to fall out of the NL East lead for the first time since May 31, dropping a half-game behind Philadelphia.

BREWERS 8, CARDINALS 1

MILWAUKEE — Ryan Braun hit a three-run homer and Milwaukee roughed up St. Louis rookie Jaime Garcia.

Albert Pujols hit his 36th homer in the first for the Cardinals, but that was the only run Chris Capuano (3-3) allowed over seven innings.

Garcia (13-7) had been looking for his fourth straight win. Instead, he gave up a career-high seven runs as his ERA rose to 2.69.

DIAMONDBACKS 3, GIANTS 1

PHOENIX — Daniel Hudson pitched seven effective innings and the Arizona Diamondbacks snapped the San Francisco Giants' four-game winning streak.

ASTROS 4, CUBS 0

CHICAGO — Brett Myers struck out eight in seven crisp innings and Hunter Pence homered, leading Houston to the victory.

Myers (11-7) allowed three hits and walked one, improving to 10-3 with a 2.21 ERA in 17 career games against the Cubs. The right-hander is 3-0 with a 1.76 ERA in his last six starts overall.

METS 3, NATIONALS 2

WASHINGTON — Pinch-hitter Nick Evans delivered a tiebreaking double in the seventh inning, rewarding R.A. Dickey for an effective start and helping the Mets get the victory.

ROCKIES 9, REDS 2

DENVER — Troy

Tulowitzki homered twice and the Colorado Rockies earned their sixth consecutive victory despite losing starter Aaron Cook to a leg injury.

AMERICAN LEAGUE YANKEES 3, ORIOLES 2

NEW YORK — Nick Swisher hit a two-run homer off Koji Uehara in the bottom of the ninth inning to pad the Yankees' division lead.

With the Orioles closing in on their first three-game sweep in the Bronx since 1986, Alex Rodriguez opened the ninth with a single on the first pitch from Uehara (1-1). Robinson Cano flied out and Swisher drove a 2-0 pitch to the opposite field, into Baltimore's bullpen in left-center.

It was Swisher's 26th homer this season and his third career game-ending shot.

RED SOX 11, RAYS 5

BOSTON — Tim Wakefield became the oldest pitcher to win for Boston, which backed the 44-year-old knuckleballer with five home runs.

Marco Scutaro hit two homers and Adrian Beltre, David Ortiz and Victor Martinez also connected. Four of the homers were off Matt Garza (14-8).

RANGERS 8, BLUE JAYS 1

TORONTO — Ian Kinsler led off the game with a home run, Derek Holland won for the first time since mid-May and AL West-leading Texas stopped its losing streak at five games.

TWINS 4, ROYALS 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Brian Duensing allowed one run and struck out seven over eight innings and Minnesota continued an impressive run of success against Kansas City ace Zack Greinke to complete a three-game sweep.

TIGERS 5, WHITE SOX 1

DETROIT — Jeremy Bonderman pitched eight strong innings for Detroit.

Chicago entered the game with a seven-game winning streak, but has been outscored 14-2 by the Tigers over the last two nights, including seven unearned runs.

ANGELS 4, INDIANS 3, 16 INNINGS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jeff Mathis drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 16th inning and the Los Angeles Angels got home runs from Mike Napoli and rookie Peter Bourjos in the longest game of the season for both teams.

Wendell boys soccer rolls over Bliss

Times-News

Wendell dominated Bliss Wednesday night in its 9-0 thrashing over the Bears.

Jorge Diaz and Eder Macias both scored two goals, while Lupe Alvarado, Jordan Chapman, Jose Ruelas and Javier Vielmas each pitched in one.

"I thought we played a good solid all-around game. It was a great effort by the team," said Wendell coach Jonathan Goss.

Wendell (5-1, 5-0 High Desert, 15 pts.) hosts Snake River on Monday.

MINICO 5, CANYON RIDGE 0

Minico rolled to a 5-0 win over Canyon Ridge on Wednesday. The Spartans used their counterattack to beat the Riverhawk defense.

Eddie Lopez and Adrian Mendoza each scored a goal and dished out an assist for Minico. Cameron Lloyd, Gerardo Juarez and Omar Rojas scored the other goals for the Spartans. Andres Madrigal had two assists.

Canyon Ridge (1-4, 0-2 Great Basin) travels to Burley today.

COMMUNITY SCHOOL 1, BUHL 1

The Community School played to a 1-1 draw with visiting Buhl. Tim Kanellitas put the Cutthroats on the board in the 10th minute, but Buhl knotted things in the 37th minute on a goal by Gustavo Magana.

Community school coach

Richard Whitelaw said the contest was very physical. Tom Crosby had 10 saves for the Cutthroats (2-2-1, 1-2-1 HDSC, 4 pts.) who host Declo on Friday.

Buhl (1-2-2, 1-1-2 HDSC, 5 pts.) hosts American Falls and Marsh Valley on Saturday.

Girls soccer

COMMUNITY SCHOOL 3, BUHL 0

Ellie Swanson scored two goals to lead the Community School 3-0 over Buhl Wednesday.

Katie Feldman added the other goal on an assist from Jordan Fitzgerald.

The Cutthroats offense attacked the Indians with 18 shots on goal.

"We played well as a team and passed the ball well. I would have liked to come away with more than three goals, but their goalie played a heck of a game," said Community School head coach Kelly Feldman.

The Community School (6-1, 5-0 HDSC, 15 pts.) hosts Declo on Friday.

BURLEY 3, CANYON RIDGE 1

It was a first-half scoring spree at Canyon Ridge Wednesday as Burley beat the Riverhawks 3-1.

Aubrie Vale scored two goals for the Bobcats and Aubrie Vale added the other.

Morgan Jones scored the lone goal for Canyon Ridge as all goals were scored in the first half.

"We played pretty well. We had it on their side of the field most of the game," said Burley head coach Sara Edwards. "We didn't play as well in the second half."

Burley (2-5, 2-1 Great Basin, 6 pts.) plays at Pocatello on Saturday.

DECLO 2, GOODING 1

Christina Cuevas scored a goal and assisted on another as Declo beat Gooding at home Wednesday.

Cuevas' twin sister Jessica also contributed to the victory.

"They have added a lot to the team," Declo coach Amie Mallory said of the Cuevas sisters. "They know where each other's at all over the field."

Declo (2-3-1, 2-2 HDSC, 6 pts.) broke a 1-1 halftime tie with Mariana Rodriguez's second-half goal.

"The first of the season we were trying to find out who would work where. We've pretty much got our positions down now and the girls are starting to work together better and making good passes," Mallory said.

Gooding's goal came from Celene Nino. The Senators (1-4 HDSC, 3 pts.) host the Community School on Monday.

BLISS 2, WENDELL 0

Demsie Butler and Kendall Martell scored as Bliss beat visiting Wendell 2-0 on Wednesday. Chelsea Woody assisted on Butler's goal for the Bears.

RAFT RIVER SWEEPS ROAD TRI

Raft River beat Aberdeen in three games 23-25, 25-18, 17-15 and swept American Falls 25-19, 25-15 Wednesday night in Aberdeen.

Hailey Greenwood dished out 23 assists in the two matches, while Wynter Holtman recorded 10 kills. Holly Scott added nine kills and 25 digs.

It's been a busy week for Raft River which played a tri match with Declo Tuesday night.

"We came out a little sluggish. We had two big games the night before, so we probably expended a lot of energy there. I was proud to see them stay in there and keep fighting," said Raft River head coach Cami Schumann.

Raft River (6-0) hosts Hagerman on Friday.

SHOSHONE 3, OAKLEY 0

Oakley was swept Wednesday night by Shoshone, falling 25-22, 25-11, 25-18.

"We played really well the first game, but in the second game the girls pulled themselves out of it and lost their mental toughness," said Oakley head coach Summer Robinson.

Sabrina Wybenga recorded five kills for the Hornets.

Oakley (2-6, 0-3) hosts Hansen and Valley on Tuesday.

Federer tops Soderling, reaches U.S. Open semis

NEW YORK (AP) — For one match at least, Roger Federer was back to his old self.

Back to beating Robin Soderling, and back to being a Grand Slam semifinalist — two things he used to do with such regularity.

Treating the whipping wind and his familiar foe as only slight nuisances, 16-time Grand Slam champion Federer served his way to a convincing 6-4, 6-4, 7-5 victory over the fifth-seeded Soderling in the U.S. Open quarterfinals Wednesday night.

Federer had an 18-2 edge in aces against the big-hitting Soderling, mixing speed with pinpoint placement that kept the Swede guessing.

"I've been practicing my serve a whole lot, for my whole career. If I can't serve in the wind, I've got a problem, you know?" Federer said. "You could probably wake me up at 2 in the morning, or 4 in the morning, and I could hit a few serves."

The victory improved his career mark against

Roger Federer reacts after defeating Robin Soderling 6-4, 6-4, 7-5 in a quarterfinal at the U.S. Open tennis tournament in New York on Wednesday.

Soderling to 13-1. The lone loss was in their previous match, in this year's French Open quarterfinals. Soderling's victory there ended Federer's streak of reaching the semifinals at a record 23 consecutive major tournaments.

Federer then lost in the quarterfinals at Wimbledon, too, prompting some to question whether his best days were behind him. But now, a month after his 29th birthday, he is back in the semifinals at a Grand Slam tournament — one that he has won five times.

Federer has won 45 of his last 46 matches in Flushing Meadows, the one exception the 2009 final against Juan Martin del Potro.

Now Federer will meet third-seeded Novak Djokovic in the semifinals for the third U.S. Open in a row. It's also the fourth consecutive year they'll play each other in New York, dating to the 2007 final, and Federer is 4-0 in those matches.

"You never know what's going to happen," 2008 Australian Open champion Djokovic said after beating 17th-seeded Gael Monfils of France 7-6 (2), 6-1, 6-2 earlier Wednesday. "I don't want to think about those losses in the last three years, which were really, really close."

All of the day's matches were filled with wind that gusted at up to 30 mph, sending all sorts of debris — brown napkins; plastic bags; players' towels — rolling on the court like tumbleweed, forcing points to be stopped and repeatedly making players catch their ball tosses.

About a half-dozen lets were called during top-seeded Caroline Wozniacki's 6-2, 7-5 victory over 45th-ranked Dominika Cibulkova in the last women's quarterfinal.

"This felt like playing in a hurricane or something," said Wozniacki, who is 19-1 since Wimbledon and has won her past 13 matches.

titles during the 80s and the Celtics won three. They've met each other in the Finals five times. Both are great teams.

Twin Falls finished third in the state last season. Canyon Ridge finished with one win.

For this to become a bona fide rivalry, Canyon Ridge must win on Friday, or at the very least close the margin of defeat. The Riverhawks can't afford to lose by 48 points again.

"It's always in the back of our mind. That's probably our biggest drive, that score. We don't want that to happen again," said Canyon Ridge center Sean Hughes.

Yes, last year was Canyon Ridge's first-ever football season. There were bound to be some growing pains. But to avoid being the "other football school" in Twin Falls, Canyon Ridge must make Friday's game a real game.

It could come down to the play of the quarterbacks, who have their own personal rivalry.

Twin Falls' T.J. Ellis is the veteran three-year starter and Canyon Ridge's

Tyler Myers is the talented 6-foot-4 senior who's receiving offers from colleges. Both started their careers at Twin Falls.

Myers transferred to Canyon Ridge following his sophomore year, eager to take on the challenge of leading a brand-new football team.

Ellis got the best of Myers in last year's Service Bowl, passing for 224 yards and four touchdowns. Myers struggled, tossing two interceptions.

"I want to be the best player on the field," Myers said at practice this week.

He'll have to be for Canyon Ridge to have a chance.

Is Canyon Ridge the better team? No.

After two impressive nonconference wins, Twin Falls looks like the class of the Great Basin Conference.

But on Friday night, Canyon Ridge will trump the Bruins and beat Twin Falls 30-28.

And then a rivalry will be born.

Vikings-Saints 'encore' kicks off NFL season

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Saints' first Super Bowl title was so big in New Orleans that Mardi Gras, a revered local institution dating back well more than a century, became popularly known as, "Lombardi Gras."

New Orleans' momentous victory over the Indianapolis Colts occurred in the middle of the city's parade season, so the Saints' celebratory ride through town with the Vince Lombardi Trophy was simply added to the lineup. In the following days, players, coaches, team officials and the trophy made appearances in traditional parades as well.

And while Mardi Gras ended way back on Ash Wednesday, it seems as though Lombardi Gras still isn't over quite yet — certainly not by the looks of the French Quarter, where a massive concert stage has been built on the river front, overlooking historic Jackson Square.

In the hours before the defending champs kick off the NFL season against the Minnesota Vikings on Thursday night in the Louisiana Superdome, the Big Easy will host a concert featuring Dave Matthews and Taylor Swift, an NFL-sponsored parade and a citywide bash for which a number of schools and businesses have already decided to shut down.

Minnesota Vikings quarterback Brett Favre (4) reacts after fumbling the ball against the New Orleans Saints during the NFC Championship game in New Orleans. The Vikings were left to stew over their loss until tonight, when the NFL's season kicks off with a rematch of one of the most riveting games played last season.

"It's like the Super Bowl all over again," Saints running back Reggie Bush said.

Indeed, Saints owner Tom Benson will show off the Lombardi Trophy once more at a newly completed festival plaza next to the Superdome that has been named Champions Square. Then the festivities move inside the dome, where those with the hottest ticket in town will witness the raising of a 2009 championship banner before kickoff.

The Vikings would like to see the party end right about there, and they have their reasons for believing they can make that happen.

Minnesota outperformed the Saints in numerous statistical categories when they met in last season's NFC championship game and might have won if not for five turnovers.

The Vikings outgained the Saints 165 yards to 68 on the ground and 310 yards to 189 in the air. In the end, Minnesota was done in by three lost fumbles and two interceptions, the last by Saints cornerback Tracy Porter when the Vikings were threatening to take a late-game lead.

"They took us to the brink of destruction," Saints safety Roman Harper recalled. "If it wasn't for another Tracy Porter pick, who knows where we would be.... It was a great game last year and should be a great game this year."

There is one considerable difference, however, as Minnesota coach Brad Childress was quick to point out. When this game ends, both teams get to keep playing.

"We've got 15 games after that," Childress stressed. "You beat New Orleans, Miami's coming to town. You lose to New Orleans, Miami's coming to town."

That hasn't diminished interest in a game that also features the return of Brett Favre, who'll start his 20th season despite offseason left ankle surgery that had him mulling what would have been his third retirement. Instead, he reported to the Vikings halfway through the preseason.

"I feel pretty good," Favre said. "People continue to say, 'Can he hold up the whole year?' You can say that about any quarterback that plays the game. It seems like at age 40, and soon to be 41, that I am the easy target to pick on ... yet I continue to outlast all these guys."

for those schools outside the BCS domain. An early loss certainly spells doom for a BCS bowl bid.

That's the harsh reality for a nonautomatic qualifying conference, something that Thompson hopes will change.

"Maybe one day we'll see an 11-1 Mountain West team play in a BCS bowl game. I don't think it's too far from that," Thompson said. "But for the most part, our seasons are based on September. In this case, the first week of September, with the first game of the season. There's not a lot of wiggle room."

Thompson was in attendance for TCU's 30-21 win over a ranked Oregon State team in Arlington, Texas. Later, he watched Boise State's comeback against then-No. 10 Virginia Tech on television with keen interest.

Rarely has he rooted so hard for a Western Athletic Conference school.

"I thoroughly, thoroughly enjoyed that performance," Thompson said, laughing. "You could go on about any dot-com (site) right now and find dozens of debates and stories about whether Boise State is deserving of the BCS championship game. Or about TCU lurking around.

"People now are starting to take notice of and appreciate the performances by the TCUs, Utahs, BYUs and, in future years, the Boise States."

The Horned Frogs and TCU coach Gary Patterson have a tricky road ahead, facing a nonconference docket that includes Baylor and SMU, along with a trip to Utah on Nov. 6.

For Boise State and coach Chris Petersen, the schedule doesn't appear as dicey, with a home game against Oregon State on Sept. 25 more than likely providing the biggest roadblock.

Then again, the danger may lie in casting an eye too far down the road.

"When you start looking ahead, and say, 'OK, now we're 7-0 or 8-0 or 9-0,' that's when you get in trouble," Thompson said. "These coaches, they're just looking at this as, 'Who do we have Saturday?' Gary Patterson — people may scoff and say he's going from Oregon State to Tennessee Tech. But he's not worried about anybody except Tennessee Tech right now."

The allure of the looming rivalry between Boise State and TCU is quite tantalizing to Thompson. The two powers have met in back-to-back bowl games — the Horned Frogs beating Boise State, 17-16, in the Poinsettia Bowl following the 2008 season and the Broncos winning last year on an even grander scale, 17-10, in the Fiesta Bowl.

"I salivate over the matchup in the future," Thompson said. "Two really well-coached teams, very exciting teams to watch. Tremendous skill players. I'm excited about that future game under the Mountain West umbrella."

To raise the conference's profile, though, it's going to take more than just two elite teams, especially with the departures of Utah and BYU. That's another component of the evaluation process — how well each individual squad stacks up.

"Our top is very solid. It is on par with most all of these automatic qualifying conferences from a performance standard," Thompson said. "Every performance counts. Every win is calculated. We need to have each and every member perform better."

The shift in scheduling has been deliberate.

"A lot of people think we should have home-and-homes with bigger schools," Spear said. "That opportunity is still out there because we can schedule home-and-homes with BCS schools. However, with our scheduling philosophy, we want to play one of those and it makes sense for us to do that on the road and fill our home games with other like conferences."

Last year the football program brought in just more than $1.3 million in revenue during an 8-5 season capped by a thrilling Humanitarian Bowl win. Yet the previous year, the program actually generated slightly more revenue — despite a two-win season — because of a higher payout from the University of Arizona.

The Wildcats, before they bludgeoned Idaho 70-0 in 2008, agreed to give the Vandals $600,000 in a guaranteed payout. (Last year, the University of Washington gave the Vandals $575,000).

Akey is content to travel to bigger schools, just as long as it's only once per season. Going to UW or Nebraska, he said, is a good experience because it prepares the club for a potential bowl opponent.

"And obviously, for the university and the program, it's a financial necessity," Akey said. "I completely understand that. I'm a pretty good team guy."

Yet depending on how the Western Athletic Conference's realignment shakes out, the Vandals may have to bulk up their non-conference schedule or possibly add more BCS opponents.

One option is reigniting a series with Washington State. Spear said he's spoken with a WSU athletic director Bill Moos about playing the Cougars as early as 2013, and at one point he thought they had an agreement.

"But that has not come to fruition," Spear said. "There is interest on our part in doing that in the future. It makes sense, I think, for both schools because of the location. I'm not really in favor of doing it every year. But I do think doing it every few years would be the right thing to do for both schools."

Idaho's last win against a BCS-conference team came in 2000 against WSU. Since then, it has lost 20 straight to big-conference schools by an average of 29.6 points per game.

TWIN FALL

Today is Thursday, Sept. 9, the 252nd day of 2010. There are 113 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 9, 1850, California became the 31st state of the union.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1776, the second Continental Congress made the term "United States" official, replacing "United Colonies."

In 1830, Charles Durant flew a balloon from New York City across the Hudson River to Perth Amboy, N.J.

In 1919, some 1,100 members of Boston's 1,500-man police force went on strike. (The strike was broken by Massachusetts Gov. Calvin Coolidge, who brought in replacement officers.)

In 1926, the National Broadcasting Co. (NBC) was incorporated by the Radio Corp. of America.

In 1948, the People's Democratic Republic of Korea (North Korea) was declared.

In 1957, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed into law the first civil rights bill to pass Congress since Reconstruction.

In 1960, in the first regular-season American Football League game, the Denver Broncos defeated the Boston Patriots, 13-10. Opera singer Jussi Bjorling died near Stockholm, Sweden.

In 1971, prisoners seized control of the maximum-security Attica Correctional Facility near Buffalo, N.Y., beginning a siege that ended up claiming 43 lives.

In 1976, Communist Chinese leader Mao Zedong died in Beijing at age 82.

In 1990, Liberian President Samuel K. Doe was killed after being captured by rebels.

Ten years ago: President Bill Clinton proposed spending about $1.6 billion to help communities recover from recent Western wildfires. Venus Williams beat Lindsay Davenport 6-4, 7-5 for the U.S. Open women's singles championship.

Five years ago: Federal Emergency Management Agency Director Michael Brown, the principal target of harsh criticism of the Bush administration's response to Hurricane Katrina, was relieved of his on-site command. A Nevada couple pleaded guilty in San Jose, Calif. to all charges related to planting a human fingertip in a bowl of Wendy's chili in a scheme to extort money from the fast food chain. (Anna Ayala ended up serving four years of a nine-year sentence; her husband, Jaime Placencia, is still in prison.) Hosni Mubarak was declared winner of Egypt's first contested presidential vote.

One year ago: In a speech to a joint session of Congress, President Barack Obama summoned lawmakers to enact sweeping health care legislation, declaring the "time for bickering is over." (In an unusual outburst, Rep. Joe Wilson, R-S.C., shouted "You lie!" when the president said illegal immigrants would not benefit from his proposals; Wilson ended up apologizing.) British commandos in Afghanistan freed New York Times reporter Stephen Farrell from Taliban captors, but one of the troops and a Times translator were killed. Fox announced that Ellen DeGeneres would be the fourth judge on "American Idol," replacing Paula Abdul.

IF SEPTEMBER 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: October is not the best month for making serious plans — you are too easily misled by wishful thinking, so wait until November to finalize anything important. During December and January, many activities are especially favored. Hard work can win you much praise, financial initiatives can succeed and family times should be an area of fun times. Make a point to spend enough time and energy on the home front in June. New friendships with kindred souls can be made late next summer.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Question long-held assumptions. By educating yourself, you can break out of a cage built from factoids, suppositions and fear. Your dazzling smile lights up a room, welcoming new friends to your side.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make the best of it. Don't set your heart on living the lifestyle of the rich and famous. Family or business contacts could encourage you to pursue an impossible dream wasting both time and resources.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can't pick flowers in a cabbage patch. Wishing that cabbages were flowers won't change the flavor of the vegetable. Coleslaw or sauerkraut will be on your menu, not a vase full of flowers.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do what you can with what you have. For a brief period of time today, you could be discouraged because you feel that something you desire is out of reach. This makes you ignore what is in your grasp.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Logic is at war with wishful thinking. You might be lost in an endless series of "if only" meditations that only emphasize dissatisfaction. Temper your desire to please others with a little common sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Contribute to everyone's overall happiness. Spend more time on things you love rather than the tasks you hate. Spend 10 minutes cleaning the tub and an hour with a book instead of the other way around.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Design your life. An interior decorator can make your living room beautiful, but only you can choose your own life. You have more control over what happens than you think.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It can be difficult to abandon a dream, even when it has turned sour. If you quit trying to beat a dead horse, there will be much more time to move forward. Overcome inertia and build forward momentum.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take small sips from a full cup. It takes time to fill your bank account, penny by penny. You never know when you are going to need your assets so don't drain them all in one big gulp.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can't measure what might be, or could be, with a yardstick. Avoid daydreams that can't offer concrete satisfaction. Roll up your sleeves and get some real accomplishment on your resume.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Gallantry is in the air. Those with romance on their mind will come out on top by paying homage to chivalry. Ignore tiny challenges to your authority and rely on your inner voice and intuitions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get your head out of the clouds and watch your step. You might be tossed around like a kite on a windy day if you give in to flights of fancy. Search for common ground and a safe spot for compromise.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Not with a Club, the Heart is broken Nor with a Stone — A whip so small you could not see it." — Emily Dickinson

"Cover an honor with an honor" is an oft-quoted but sometimes inappropriate catch-phrase. Today's deal from a tournament shows just one example of when the saying is not only misleading, but downright wrong.

I was an innocent spectator at one table where, after South made an aggressive but entirely reasonable jump to six diamonds, West led the heart queen to dummy's king. Declarer then drew trumps and played ace and another spade. With spades breaking 3-1, the slam went down.

The score sheet showed that only one declarer had brought the contract home. Here's how. After the same lead, declarer next played the diamond ace and a diamond to the jack. When both opponents followed, declarer appreciated from the bidding that West could hold no more than two spades. Seven hearts for his preempt, coupled with his partner's failure to open a club preempt marked him with at least two clubs. (If West held a singleton, East would have had eight and would surely have bid.)

So the play of a spade to the ace, hoping for a singleton honor with East, then a spade toward the jack, which would hold the losers in the suit to one if West had started with three cards to an honor, was destined to fail.

The correct continuation at trick four is the spade jack, playing East for K-Q-2 and West for the bare 10. It also has the psychological advantage that East might instinctively cover the jack with the queen or king from a three-card holding — which was exactly what happened.

ANSWER: Playing for penalties looks too dangerous. So the choice is to cue-bid two clubs, to jump in spades, or to bid no-trump. My instincts are to respond one no-trump, which, by a passed hand in this auction, should show 10-13 or so. My honor location is such that spades does not look like a great spot to play in unless partner has extra shape, in which case he will surely bid again.

DEAR ABBY: "Cautious Bachelorette" (July 16) asked you how she should respond to a workman who asks if she lives alone. Having worked 30 years in a maximum security prison, I can assure your readers that criminals gravitate toward jobs that provide access to people's homes as a way of scouting victims, so "Bachelorette's" concern is well-founded.

I advise single women to keep a few articles of men's clothing, such as a jacket, work boots and other items, visible in their homes. They can be purchased inexpensively at a yard sale or local thrift shop. When a stranger is invited into her home, she can simply pick up one of the articles stating, "Here, let me get John's coat out of your way." It does provide a very real deterrent to criminals or others looking for a single woman to victimize.

— RONALD A. WASHINGTON STATE DEPT. OF CORRECTIONS (RETIRED)

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR RONALD: My readers agreed that setting the stage (with an invisible housemate) is an effective way to give the impression to outsiders that you do not live alone. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Take a suggestion from a senior citizen who has lived alone for many years — and it applies not only to females, but also to males of any age. Singles should purchase articles of the opposite sex and display them prominently in their homes so they can be seen by any stranger who comes into their homes. That way, the question, "Do you live alone?" doesn't come up.

— SAFE SENIOR CITIZEN IN THE SOUTH

DEAR ABBY: I would recommend "Cautious Bachelorette" purchase a male beta fish. They take very little time and energy to care for. Name him Fred, or some other masculine name. That way, when she's asked if she lives alone, she can honestly say, "No. Fred lives with me." If people inquire deeper, she can say that they have a close one-on-one relationship, and he is very dependable. She could even add that he is a professional swimmer without fibbing. That way she will be able to have a truthful reply for any who ask.

— FRED'S HOUSEMATE

DEAR ABBY: I live alone and I keep a men's magazine on my coffee table, a second set of towels in my bathroom and even went to the thrift store and bought a bathrobe that hangs on a hook behind the bathroom door. Also, my table is always set for two, and I always speak in terms of "we" whenever I have a stranger in my home.

— SINGLE BUT CAUTIOUS IN PLANO, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: Here's how I give the illusion of not living alone. I have two deck chairs set out and often leave things outside like a shovel, my brother's flip-flops, or I toss a baseball cap onto the porch swing.

— LONGTIME READER IN EL CERRITO, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married 24 years, but the last several years were extremely difficult. We have separated, but have not filed the paperwork yet. I would like to begin moving forward with my life. It has been six months and there will be no reconciliation.

Recently, someone who knows my circumstances asked me out on a date. Would it be inappropriate for me to go, or to date in general?

— DATING DILEMMA IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR DATING DILEMMA: If you are truly ready to move forward with your life, file the paperwork first. Even divorces that start amicably can become messy to some degree. Filing the paperwork first will make it less so.

TO MY MUSLIM READERS: It's time for the breaking of the Ramadan fast. Happy Eid al-Fitr, everyone. May God make yours a blessed feast.
