Feds OK project to expand Shoshone Falls power plant

Work could affect scenic beauty of falls

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Idaho Power Co. has received federal approval to expand its Shoshone Falls power plant near Twin Falls but has not yet decided whether to proceed.

On July 1, the U.S. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission granted an amendment with some stipulations to the Shoshone Falls license, allowing Idaho Power to replace the antique turbines that generate less than 12 megawatts with a new facility that will increase power production to more than 60 megawatts. A license for the original facility was renewed in 2004 for 30 years.

FERC spokeswoman Celeste Miller said one of the requirements of an amendment is that upgrade construction must be completed within three years after an amendment is granted, pushing Idaho Power to be done by 2013. But the company isn't quite ready to move on the project yet.

Idaho Power requested a two-year extension, which the FERC granted on Sept. 2. The deadline for completion of construction is now July 1, 2015.

Idaho Power project engineer Jim Leonard said the power company is still looking into its options. He didn't elaborate on which issues would play into the decision,

Prosecution seeks to seal Brinkerhoff child sex abuse case

Former teacher's alleged victim appears in court

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The teenage female victim of alleged sexual misconduct by a suspended Burley Junior High School teacher entered court on Friday clutching a large teddy bear given to her by a detective.

Michael S. Brinkerhoff, the 42-year-old man accused of pretending to be a teenage boy to have online sexual conversations with the Burley student, waived his preliminary hearing on charges of child enticement and sexual abuse of a minor without setting foot in the courtroom.

Also, Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus attempted to close the hearing to the public to protect the alleged victim of child sex crimes.

Brinkerhoff's case will move to Cassia County 5th District Court after Friday's hearing, and may also move completely out of the public eye if a planned motion from Barrus to seal the case is granted.

"It takes up a lot of time," said Giles, who's a supporter of Gooding School District's efforts to get a bond passed for renovations.

The district is asking voters to approve a $4 million bond aimed at modernizing and adding more space to its school buildings. It extends far beyond the high school kitchen.

The bond, if approved by voters on Sept. 24, would bring the school district four to six additional classrooms at both Gooding High School and the elementary and middle school building.

Report blames Auger Falls Fire on smoker

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The Auger Falls Fire investigation is complete.

The Twin Falls Police Department reported that it has finished its criminal investigation into the July fire, which ravaged more than 400 acres of the Auger Falls Park on the south side of the Snake River Canyon.

According to an incident report filed by Det. Jon Wilson on Aug. 19, police suspect that Don Garibaldi started the fire, based on witness statements and a call Garibaldi made to the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center the afternoon of July 22. Garibaldi, whose identity as the 911 caller was verified, allegedly told a dispatcher that he "was smoking and tried to put his cigarette out but he was unable to, and it started a fire."

Police also interviewed Ron Ritchie, who was working at the Idaho Power Co. station in the canyon that day. Ritchie told investigators that he saw a man identified as Garibaldi trying to put out a fire. Ritchie called emergency dispatch to report the fire, then drove Garibaldi to the substation.

"He asked Mr. Garibaldi what had happened," the report states. "Mr. Garibaldi told him he was smoking and the fire got away from him."

The report notes that Garibaldi was performing work on a bridge in that area for Dan Weaver Construction of Buhl. Wilson wrote in his report that he attempted to interview Garibaldi and Dan Weaver, the owner of the construction company, on Aug. 9, but both men declined to answer questions.

As a result of the fire, 10 homes were damaged by fire or smoke, which also affected property owned by Idaho Power Co., Qwest, Cable One and the Bureau of Land Management. No lives were lost and no serious injuries were reported.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb said that no agency has approached his office in regards to a criminal complaint against Garibaldi.

The city of Twin Falls has turned to the Idaho Counties Risk Management Program in Boise to recover lost expenses as a result of the Auger Falls Fire. City management assistant Gretchen Scott said that the city does not have a final dollar amount for recovery at this time.

TFFPD worked with the Twin Falls Fire Department and BLM to investigate the cause and origin of the fire.

State schools chief candidate Olson makes campaign stop in Gooding

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

GOODING — Stan Olson made a campaign stop in Gooding on Friday, bringing with him a message that Idaho needs a comprehensive plan for education with results that can be measured.

MORE ONLINE

WATCH an interview with state schools superintendent candidate Stan Olson.
MAGICVALLEY.COM

Olson, a Democratic candidate for state superintendent of public instruction, is running against Republican incumbent Tom Luna, who is seeking a second four-year term. Olson's credentials as an educator were cited by supporters at a town hall meeting he held at Gooding City Hall. About a dozen attended the event.

"Stan is a practitioner," said Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-

Ketchum, adding that Olson realizes the job is about education, not partisan politics.

Earlier this year, Olson retired as superintendent of Boise School District. He has a nearly 40-year education career. He said that Idaho has not had good education leadership in the last four years.

"We have no known practical strategic plan for public education," he said.

That's a contention Luna has disagreed with, citing the Education Alliance of Idaho's plan that took input from Idaho education organizations and businesses.

Olson said that the plan

Luna has touted doesn't suffice. His suggestion is this: call 25 superintendents at random and ask them what the state's plan for education is.

"If they get past 'Huh?' I'll give you my house," Olson said.

Falls Avenue West closed today, reopens Monday

Times-News

Falls Avenue West from Wendell Street to Washington Street North will be closed to all traffic starting today.
 Gordon Paving crews plan to pave eastbound lanes today and continue on to pave westbound lanes on Sunday, according to a city of Twin Falls press release.
 All traffic will be prohibited during paving and the 12 to 18 hours it will take for the roadway to cure afterward.

 By Monday, Falls should be open from Grandview Drive to Washington, according to the city.
 Elsewhere in the city, Highland Avenue will be closed from Blue Lakes Boulevard to Eastland Drive starting Monday. Traffic on Locust Street will not be affected by the closure.
 Owyhee Construction Inc., the contractor for the project, plans the closure to last about a month.

Idaho's plan needs to include goals defined for schools of varying sizes that set clear paths for each, he said, adding that input from across the state is needed.
 "My view is you plan the work and then you work the plan," he said.
 Asked about charter schools, he said there's a place for them, and that it's important for choice to be provided without charter schools and traditional public schools demonizing each other in the process.
 Also, choice can happen within a traditional public school setting and it's important to look for those opportunities, he said. For example, in Boise School District, when patrons were interested in starting a charter school that taught the Montessori method of education, which focuses on independent and hands-on learning, the district worked with to start a Montessori program within the existing district instead, he said.

 Olson also visited Gooding School District, North Valley Academy and the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind on Friday.

but said it was a big business decision that required due diligence.
 He said Idaho Power should announce its plan this fall.
 "Personally, I think the plan will move forward," Leonard said.
 If the plan does move forward, a new structure including large 50 megawatt turbine will divert a larger amount of water along the side of the Snake River, away from picturesque Shoshone Falls, although the proposal includes an agreement to allow more water to flow over the falls on specific dates.

That's just part of it. Other improvements would include a new, larger high school kitchen and cafeteria, renovated restrooms, updated electric systems, plumbing, computers and new security systems.
 Superintendent Heather Williams said that the time is right for a bond from a financial standpoint. The district has been accepted for the federal Qualified School Construction Bond program, which will provide a bond with a 0 percent interest rate, if passed. That option expires in 2011.
 A state program for bonds would provide matching funds that would reduce the district's cost to an estimated $2.9 million.
 If voters approve the bond, there wouldn't be an increase in property taxes. Instead, the district would extend the same levy amount from a 1997 bond passed to build the elementary and middle school building. That bond is due to expire in 2016. If the new bond passes, the district would continue to levy up to $390,000 per year between 2016 and 2024.

 The district's enrollment has steadily grown to almost 1,280 students, which is almost as many as before North Valley Academy charter school opened in Gooding. The district had 1,292 students before the charter opened in August 2008.
 "Before the charter school opened we were at capacity and limited on space, and we're getting back to those pre-charter school numbers so we're at capacity," Williams said, adding that much of the increase has come from new families moving to the area.
 The high school needs more space for its health occupations and family consumer science programs, Williams said. Now, for example, the health programs have lab space in part of the school's weight room.

 The programs provide training to students for careers in early childhood education, hospitality management, and as certified nurse's aids and emergency medical technicians.
 "We're trying to focus on every child getting ready for college or a career," Williams said.
 The bond would also pay for energy-efficient heating units, which would provide cost savings in the long run, Williams said.
 As for the kitchen, if it had space for a larger freezer, food could be ordered in larger quantities, providing another cost savings, Giles said.
Ben Botkin may be reached at bbotkin@magicvalley.com or 735-3238.

Abuse

"We made the motion to protect the victim," Barrus said during a telephone interview after Friday's hearing. "We did it because of the extremely sensitive nature of the case."
 No further court dates have been set for Brinkerhoff, who has not yet entered a plea in the case. The English and drama teacher allegedly pretended to be a fictional 15-year-old nephew to engage in sexual conversations with his alleged victim over the Internet.
 The elaborate storyline Brinkerhoff allegedly told the girl included the fictional nephew's death in surgery, after which he allegedly consoled the girl.
 Court records state that the alleged victim's mother provided authorities with more than 1,000 pagers of messages — many of a graphic, sexual nature — sent between her daughter and Brinkerhoff's alleged online alias.
 Brinkerhoff has been suspended with pay by the Cassia County School District, pending resolution of the case. Before he was hired by the district in 2006, he compiled a record of misdemeanor petit theft crimes out of Bonneville County. However, a pre-employment background check failed to disclose the crimes, district officials said.

Three arrested for armed robbery of Rupert store

By Laurie Welch
 Times-News writer

BURLEY — Two Mini-Cassia men and an unidentified juvenile have been arrested on suspicion of robbery after they allegedly used a knife to demand money and beer from a Rupert convenience store early Tuesday.

According to a Friday press release from Minidoka County Prosecutor Lance Stevenson, Rupert police arrested Daniel A. Posada, 18, of Heyburn, Andrew Juarez, 18, of Rupert, and the juvenile in connection with the robbery of the Maverik Country Store at 318 Scott Ave. at about 3 a.m. Tuesday.

According to Stevenson's release, Juarez brandished a knife, demanding money and beer, after he and the juvenile entered the store. Officers apprehended the suspects a short distance from the store within a few minutes, according to Stevenson.

"It was really good police work," Stevenson said. "And they got a really good description from the clerk."

Stevenson told the Times-News in a phone interview that no one was injured during the robbery. Rupert police say a report on the incident will not be released while the investigation remains open.

According to court records, Juarez has been charged with felony robbery and misdemeanor purchasing, possessing, dispensing or consuming alcoholic beverages while under 21 years of age. Posada has been charged with felony burglary and misdemeanor driving under the influence.

Both men are scheduled for a preliminary hearing in Minidoka County Magistrate Court at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

The juvenile, whose name has not been released, was charged with burglary and petit theft.

BLM approves Gateway West soil studies

By Laura Lundquist
 Times-News writer

Engineers have received permission to punch some holes in public land to help select the best route for the Gateway West Transmission Line Project.

The Bureau of Land Management Wednesday approved a temporary right-of-way grant to Pacificorp and Idaho Power Co. to drill around 40 bore holes along the first half of the proposed transmission line. The BLM issued an associated environmental assessment that found no significant problems with the geotechnical study as long as slight proposal changes were made to address fire and weed issues.

The project would connect southwestern Idaho and southeastern Wyoming with 1,150 miles of high-voltage electrical transmission lines.

From October 2010 through December 2012, Pacificorp workers will drill along the southern part of Wyoming and southeastern Idaho to collect soil, groundwater and fault information. The data will be used to find areas with unstable soils or seismic activity that would prohibit construction of the large steel towers regularly used to carry transmission lines.

BLM project manager Walt George said a right-of-way grant has not been issued for Idaho west of Interstate 15 because Pacificorp hasn't submitted a drilling proposal for those sections, although one is expected this winter. George said part of the reason is probably the greater resistance the project has received in Idaho; more than half of the private landowners along the route have refused access.

Interested parties are allowed to appeal the right-of-way grant within 30 days.

George said approval of geotechnical studies doesn't have any bearing on final approval of the proposed line. A separate environmental impact statement, scheduled for release this fall, is in the works for the transmission line itself.

ISLAM CONTROVERSIES CAST SHADOW OVER ANNIVERSARY

A different feel this 9/11

By Beth Foughty
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — They will read the names, of course, the names of every victim who died in the Sept. 11 attacks. The bells will ring. And then that moment of unity will give way to division as activists hoist signs and march, some for and some against a planned mosque two blocks from ground zero.

This 9/11 is more political and contentious than the eight before it, with grieving family members on opposite sides of the mosque battle.

The debate became so heated that President Barack Obama felt the need to remind Americans: "We are not at war against Islam."

Still, there were signs Friday that religious tensions were abating, and that hushed tones would replace the harsh rhetoric that threatened to overshadow the commemoration of the terrorist attacks that killed nearly 3,000 people in New York, Washington and Shanksville, Pa.

The son of an anti-Muslim pastor in Florida confirmed that his father would not — at least for now — burn copies of the Quran, a plan that inflamed much of the Muslim world and drew a stern rebuke from Obama.

Activists in New York insisted their intentions were peaceful.

"It's a rally of remembrance for tens of thousands who lost loved ones that day," said Pamela Geller, a conservative blogger and host of the anti-mosque demonstration. "It's not a political event, it's a human rights event."

The site of the proposed mosque and Islamic center is already used for services, but it was padlocked Friday, closed until Sunday. Police guarded the block, and worshippers were redirected to a different prayer room 10 blocks away.

Some supporters planned a vigil near the proposed Islamic center's site Friday evening instead of Saturday, saying they wanted to avoid entangling the mosque controversy and the Sept. 11 observance.

Organizers "believe that tomorrow is a day for mourning and remembrance," said Jennifer Carnig, a spokeswoman for the New York Civil Liberties Union, one of the vigil's sponsors.

For Terry Jones, pastor of a 50-member Pentecostal church in Florida, it was to be a day to burn the Quran. He backed off that threat after drawing angry protests across the Muslim world, a call from the secretary of defense and impassioned pleas to call it off from religious and political leaders and his own daughter.

"There will be no Quran burning tomorrow," Jones' 29-year old son, Luke Jones, told reporters outside his father's Gainesville church Friday. He added that he could not predict what might happen in the future.

Terry Jones had previously said he would cancel his plan if the leader of the planned New York Islamic center, Imam Feisal Abdul Rauf, would agree to move the project to another location.

Jones claimed Thursday that an imam in Florida had told him the mosque would be moved. That imam later said Jones was mistaken, that he had only arranged a meeting with Rauf in New York on Saturday.

Rauf, however, said that wasn't true, either, that he had no plans to meet with Jones, although he added in a statement Friday that he is open to seeing anyone "seriously committed to pursuing peace."

The carefully worded text seemed to leave open the possibility of a meeting, but only if Jones proved himself to be a serious peacemaker. With that caveat, it would seem unlikely that the imam would meet with a man whose threat to desecrate the Muslim holy book stirred anger and protest and even some bloodshed in the Islamic world.

In Afghanistan, 11 people were injured Friday in scattered protests of Jones' plan. Only a few thousand people attended those rallies and no large-scale demonstrations were reported elsewhere. In Indonesia, the world's most populous Muslim country, cleric Rusli Hasbi told 1,000 worshippers at Friday prayers that whether or not Jones burns the Quran, he has already "hurt the heart of the Muslim world."

As on other 9/11 anniversaries, official ceremonies were planned at the three locations where the terrorists struck. Obama will be at the Pentagon, Vice President Joe Biden will go to New York, and first lady Michelle Obama and former first lady Afghans shout anti-U.S. slogans as they burn tires and block a highway during a protest in reaction to a small American church's plan to burn copies of the Quran, at Jalalabad, Afghanistan on Friday. The church has reportedly canceled plans to burn the Quran.

Laura Bush will travel to Shanksville.

Obama told a White House news conference that Sept. 11 would be "an excellent time" for the country to reflect on the fact that there are millions of Muslims who are American citizens, that they also are fighting in U.S. uniforms in Afghanistan, and "we don't differentiate between 'them' and 'us.' It's just 'us.'"

Biden will attend the largest commemoration, at a park near ground zero, where 2,752 people were killed when Muslim extremists flew planes into the twin towers of the World Trade Center. Houses of worship in the city will toll bells at 8:46 a.m.,

Iran postpones release of U.S. woman

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran on Friday postponed the planned release of an American woman jailed along with two friends for more than a year, state media reported, dealing a blow to the hopes of three U.S. mothers who have pleaded for the trio's release.

Iranian officials had said that Sarah Shourd, who was detained with her friends near Iran's border with Iraq, would be released on Saturday. But the IRNA state news agency quoted the deputy chief of communication for the Iranian president's office, Mohammed Hassan Salihimaram, as saying that would not happen.

He said details of the decision would be announced later, but Tehran's chief prosecutor, Abbas Jafari Dolatabadi, blamed the fact that "judicial procedures have not been done," according to the semi-official ILNA news agency.

It was the latest in a series of mixed messages from Tehran in a case that has deepened tensions between the U.S. and Iran, a relationship already strained.

Shourd and two friends, Shane Bauer and Josh Fattal, were arrested along the Iran-Iraq border in July 2009, and Tehran has accused them of illegally crossing the border and spying.

Their families say they were hiking in Iraq's scenic north and that if they crossed the border, they did so unwittingly.

when the first plane struck the north tower, and three more times to mark the moment the second plane hit the south tower and to observe the times each tower fell.

Activists are organizing a pair of rallies — one against the planned Islamic center, one supporting it — to follow the official ceremony.

Sally Regenhard, who lost her firefighter son, Christian Regenhard, planned to attend the morning ceremony and the anti-mosque protest.

"The purpose is to speak out and express our feelings that this mosque, the location of it, is a grievous offense to the sensitivity of 9/11 families," Regenhard said. "There's nothing political about people who want to speak out against something they think is so wrong, so hurtful and so devastating."

Crews search ash-covered homes after blast kills 4

SAN BRUNO, Calif. (AP) — All that was left of some houses Friday were chimneys, rising from still smoldering ruins. Burned-out cars sat along ash-covered streets. And a rescue worker with a dog searched door to door for missing people.

The day after a gas line ruptured and a towering fireball roared through a suburban San Francisco neighborhood, killing four people, officials were trying to determine what led to a blast that raised questions about the safety of similar lines that crisscross towns across America.

"It was pretty devastating," Fire Chief Dennis Haag said. "It looks like a moonscape in some areas."

At least 50 people were hurt, with seven suffering critical injuries in the explosion Thursday evening that left a giant crater and laid waste to dozens of 1960s-era homes in the hills overlooking San Francisco Bay.

The utility that operates the 30-inch diameter line said it was trying to find out what caused the steel gas pipe to rupture and ignite. Federal pipeline safety inspectors were also on the scene.

Some residents said they smelled gas in the neighborhood over the past several weeks. The utility said it was checking its records for the complaints, but added that none of its crews were at work on the line Thursday.

Compared to the tens of thousands of miles of gas pipelines across the country, accidents are relatively rare.

In 2009, there were 163 significant accidents involving natural gas pipelines, killing 10 people and injuring 59.

Transmission lines like the one that burst in San Bruno deliver natural gas from its source to distribution lines, which then carry it into neighborhoods before branching off into homes.

Over the past two decades, federal officials tallied 2,840 significant gas pipeline accidents nationwide — including 992 in which someone was killed or required hospitalization, according to the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration.

Those accidents killed 323 people and injured 1,372.

Experts say the nation's 296,000 miles of onshore natural-gas lines routinely suffer breakdowns and failures.

More than 60 percent of the lines are 40 years old or older and almost half were installed in the 1950s and 1960s, according to a recent analysis by the Pipeline Safety Trust, a nonprofit advocacy group based in Bellingham, Wash.

Most of the older pipelines lack anticorrosion coatings that are prevalent in the industry today, said Carl Reimer, executive director of the trust, which was set up following a 1999 explosion that killed three people in Bellingham, Wash.

"The industry always says that if you take care of pipelines, they'll last forever," Reimer said. "But what we see over and over again is companies are not doing that and corrosion and other factors are causing failures."

And once a high-pressure pipeline fails, he added, anything can trigger a deadly blast. A cigarette or rocks smashing as high-pressure gas shoots by. Even someone answering a cell phone can cause a spark, because it is battery-powered, Reimer said.

State Assemblyman Jerry Hill, who represents San Bruno and surrounding cities, said he has heard multiple reports from constituents who had alerted PG&E of gas odors in the neighborhood before the disaster.

The residents "deserve to know if PG&E used the correct procedures in the days and weeks leading up to this disaster," Hill said.

PG&E President Chris Johns said the company has heard the reports of a gas odor in the area before the blast.

"Right now, we haven't got confirmation about that, but we have records that we are going back right this minute to try to confirm what exactly those phone calls look like and when they occurred, and we will report back as soon as we know something," he said.

By midafternoon Friday, the utility could not confirm the residents' reports of gas odors, but said it was "looking into it." The damaged section of pipe was isolated and gas flow to the area was stopped. Haag said PG&E crews were still not able to access the site of the ruptured line Friday because it was covered with water.

This is not the first time a deadly explosion occurred on a PG&E gas line. The utility has had 19 significant pipeline incidents since 2002, but there was only one fatality, according to records provided by the trust.

OPINION

QUOTABLE

"We are just really shocked. He clearly, clearly lied to us."
 — The Rev. Terry Jones after he thought he had a deal that a proposed mosque would not be built near ground zero

Idaho can't wash its hands of managing wolves

JEERS: We share Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's frustration with a court ruling this summer that returned wolves to federal protection in the state and ended its hunting seasons.

But the governor is wrong to refuse to cooperate with the U.S. Department of Interior in managing wolves in Idaho if the state doesn't get its own way.

After talking with Interior Secretary Ken Salazar this week, Otter gave the feds until Oct. 7 to strike a new wolf management deal with Idaho. The governor wants more flexibility to kill wolves and more federal funding.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game previously provided wolf monitoring, law enforcement support and investigation of wolf deaths.

These responsibilities were first undertaken by Idaho in 2006. Wolf management became solely the state's responsibility two years ago.

If Idaho refuses to continue managing wolves as it did in 1995 when wolves were reintroduced here, another organization will be chosen to act as the federal government's agent. The Nez Perce Tribe did the job from 1995 until 2003.

But the Nez Perce is not a statewide agency, and poorly equipped to manage wolves south of the Salmon River.

Unless wolves disappear from Idaho — and they won't anytime soon — this is clearly the state's responsibility.

CHEERS: To the Twin Falls County Commission, for managing to cover a 17 percent increase in employee health insurance costs without passing the tab on to workers or laying some of them off.

And better still, doing it while raising the budget less than 1 percent for the coming fiscal year.

That was one of several deft acts of budgeteering by public agencies across the Magic Valley this summer. From Minidoka to Gooding counties, city councils and county commissioners are holding the line on spending when fiscal restraint is needed most.

That's a true service to the taxpayers.

JEERS: To the No. 2 Republican in the Idaho House of Representatives, for reneging on his support for a constitutional amendment aimed at letting public airports finance improvements without first asking voters.

State Rep. Mike Moyle supported the amendment last winter when legislators decided to put it on the ballot in the Nov. 2 election. But Moyle said this week he's changed his mind because the city of Boise is using $60,000 in taxpayer money to pay for an education campaign.

Moyle says that shows Boise's elected officials can't be trusted to spend public money wisely. Moyle is a Republican; Boise's mayor and most of the City Council are Democrats.

We suspect the House majority leader would feel differently if a public agency were spending the same amount of money campaigning against the amendment.

The proposed amendment, drafted by state Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, deserves the voters' support.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Words of thanks for MagicFest supporters

The Kiwanis Club of Twin Falls and the Twin Falls Community Foundation extend their heartfelt thanks to all who participated in the success of MagicFest 2010. Thanks to all who enjoyed the illusions, the humor and the professionalism of Garry Carson and Kelsey and to the businesses and individuals who donated time, effort and money to make this a great event.

Special thanks go to CH2M Hill and our media sponsors: Times-News, Neuhoff Communications (KMVT/CBS 11, KTWT-CM, Mexicanal, KTID-My Network), and Townsquare Media (95.7 KEZJ), NewsRadio 1310 KLIX, KOOL 96.5 and 98.3 The Snake). Without their support, MagicFest 2010 would not have been possible.

We are grateful to Success Martial Arts and Imagination Station for materials and facilities for MagicCamp to teach kids to perform magic. The Magic Valley Mall provided a venue for John Tyler to perform his magic enhanced dinner magic by adding the Food Court, Chili's, Rock Creek Grill and Buffalo Wild Wings to our other sites, La Fiesta Mexican Restaurant and Canyon Crest Dining. Thanks to Kurt's Pharmacy, Kurt's Hallmark and Banner Bank for selling tickets.

Filling the summer with fun wasn't hard

This has been a great summer to live in Twin Falls.

We would like to say a special thank you to the owner, Sam, and staff of Hop 2 It for giving us a great place to spend some fun-filled hours this summer. The 30-day pass made it easy and economical.

Thank you to Interstate Amusement for the summer fun matinees. The tickets through the school were just perfect and made planning the week's activities easy.

Herrett Center was both educational and fun.

We are very fortunate to have so many things for young children to enjoy during the summer months.

Thank you all for helping us have a fantastic summer.

Reaping the harvest of anger

A cover of The Economist right after 9/11 declared: "The Day the World Changed." It has, and not just at airports where several billion shoes have been removed. Nine years later a harvest of anger is in.

Roger Cohen

Burning books is a lousy idea. Heinrich Heine, the German poet, foresaw the worst early in the 19th century: "Where they burn books, in the end they will also burn people." Less than a decade separated the Nazi book burning of 1933 from the crematoria of the Final Solution.

Terry Jones, the pastor of a small church in Florida, did well to heed history's warnings — as well as the warnings of America's top military commander in Afghanistan, Gen. David Petraeus — and cancel his planned Koran burning to mark the ninth anniversary Saturday of al-Qaida's attack.

Images of Islam's Holy Book in flames in Gainesville would have enraged Muslims and become a powerful recruitment tool for the very jihadists who attempt to sanctify indiscriminate violence through selective references to the Koran.

Why, almost a decade from Mohammad Atta, with his parting call to "read the Holy Koran" and "remember all of the things God has promised for the martyrs," has there been scant healing? Why is America now bitterly divided over plans to build a mosque and Islamic center in the immediate vicinity of ground zero, and Europeans almost equally split over the growing Muslim presence in their societies?

This is a sullen time. Only a spark, it seems, separates resentment from uprising.

I've been struck by the venom in the air recently: a German Bundesbank board member lamenting the Muslim dilution of his nation in a best-selling book called "Germany Does Away with Itself;" the growing political clout of the Dutch rightist Geert Wilders who is expected in Manhattan Saturday to address an anti-mosque rally; a political climate that sees Turkey's entry into the European Union receding, a Swiss ban on minarets and French and Belgian acrimony over the veil.

"The mosque project near ground zero upholds a great American principle, but it's not a sensible idea."

All this is happening as the American right seizes on the lower-Manhattan mosque plan to galvanize anti-Islamic sentiment — lurking despite the better social integration of U.S. Muslims — and cast the Democrats as soft on Shariah.

The Sept. 11 attacks, seen now with a little perspective, shattered America's self-image. A continent-sized sanctuary, flanked by the shining waters of two oceans, was no longer. A hideous neologism, the "homeland," was coined to describe a country that now needed vigilant protection from within and without. Two wars, one longer than any in the nation's history, deepened the trauma.

While one America fought, another shopped until the debt-driven spree ended in mayhem; and, to their horror, Americans discovered they could no longer cushion their declining incomes by borrowing against the once rising — now crashing — assets of their homes. Their last coping mechanism had collapsed.

What was left, and now feeds national anger, was a hard quest to keep house, habits and hope intact while the now bailed-out fat cats who'd invented securitized mortgages sloped off into the sunset, and veterans, scarred from faraway wars, limped back to the "homeland," once just home. Inequality sharpened. American promise, for many, soured.

None of this fosters forgiveness. Rather, it feeds a quest for scapegoats — Wall Street or Wahhabis.

Europe, in Madrid and London, has also been attacked by jihadists, but its unease goes deeper — to chronic unemployment and aging and resentments spurred by the access of immigrants to elaborate, now cash-strapped social welfare programs. The self-image of a Christian continent persists, drawing lines between insider and outsider.

Against these backdrops, Islam is easily manipulated by those who would cast it as enemy. Its very effervescence and its conservative values, especially on women's rights, are fodder. So are its political expression as an ordering framework for society and the contentious concept of jihad.

We should tread carefully. I don't doubt the sincerity of Feisal Abdul Rauf, the man behind a mosque project expressing what he calls the "common impulse of our great faith traditions."

But nor do I see the project as a test of American religious freedoms. They are abundantly established, not least by the non-denominational chapel — often used as a mosque — at the Pentagon. Nor, above all, do I doubt the pain of many families of the dead who recall Atta's words and are troubled by a major Islamic center so close to the hallowed ground and hallowed air into which their beloved were vaporized.

I went to Auschwitz 12 years ago to cover the story of a burgeoning field of crosses outside the death camp put there by Catholic protesters. Their tone was ugly but it was hard to argue with them: Close to 100,000 non-Jewish Poles had died in the camp, a number dwarfed by the Jewish dead, but not insignificant.

Still, the crosses were a bad idea. They were offensive to Jewish memory. All but one was eventually removed.

The mosque project near ground zero upholds a great American principle, but it's not a sensible idea. Good sense is needed when a harvest of anger is in.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

By Bruce Tinsley

Don't dismiss the market economy

No one in the world knows how to make the newspaper you are holding (and, if you're reading this on your phone, computer, iPad or Kindle, no one knows how to make those things either).

Even the best editor in the world has no clue how to make a printing press or the ink, or how to operate a communications satellite.

This is hardly a new insight. In 1958, Leonard Read wrote one of the most famous essays in the history of libertarianism, "I, Pencil." It begins, "I am a lead pencil — the ordinary wooden pencil familiar to all boys and girls and adults who can read and write." It is one of the most simple objects in human civilization. And yet "not a single person on the face of this Earth knows how to make me."

The pencil tells the story of its creation. The wood comes from Oregon, or perhaps California. The lead, which is really graphite, is mined in Ceylon (now Sri Lanka). The eraser, which is not rubber but something called factice, is "made by reacting rape seed oil from the Dutch East Indies with sulfur chloride."

To make a long story short, the simple act of collecting and combining the ingredients of a pencil involves the cooperation of thousands of experts in dozens of fields, from engineering and mining to chemistry and commodity trading. I suppose it's possible for someone to master all of the knowledge and expertise to make a pencil all by themselves, but why would they?

The lessons one can draw from this fact are humbling. For starters, any healthy civilization, never mind any healthy economy, involves unfathomably vast amounts of harmonious cooperation.

These days there's a lot of buzz about something called cloud computing. In brief, this is a new way of organizing computer technology so that most of the data storage and number crunching don't actually take place in your own computer. Rather, everyone plugs into the computational equivalent of the electrical grid.

Do a Nexis search and you'll find hundreds of articles insisting that this is a revolutionary advance in information organization. And in one sense, that's obviously true. But in another, this is simply an acceleration of how civilization has always worked. The information stored in an encyclopedia or textbook is a form of cloud computing. So is the expertise stored in your weatherman's head. So are the intangible, but no less real, lessons accumulated over generations of trial and error and stored in everything from the alphabet to the U.S. Constitution to my daughter's second-grade curriculum.

More relevant, the modern market economy is the greatest communal enterprise ever undertaken. Friedrich Hayek did the heavy lifting on this point half a century ago in his essay "The Use of Knowledge in Society." The efficient pricing of markets allows millions of independent actors to decide for themselves how to allocate resources. According to Hayek, no central planner or bureaucrat could ever have enough knowledge to consistently and successfully guide all of those economic actions in a more efficient manner.

The latest proof of Hayek's insight can be found not only in the economic winter that goes by

Obama should follow in FDR's footsteps

As President Obama weighs his options for adding jobs and pumping up the economy he might look back for guidance to Franklin Roosevelt.

Indeed, Obama's experience so far resembles FDR's first uneven stabs at job creation. Roosevelt accepted the Democratic nomination in 1932 touting a plan to put a million men to work in national parks and forests. When he took office, with the unemployment rate at 24.9 percent, he created the Civilian Conservation Corps, his first jobs program.

But it was too limited to make much of a dent in joblessness. Estimates of the number of people out of work ranged as high as 15 million. The "CCC boys," as the young men who worked out of military-style camps doing erosion control and reforestation work were known, never numbered more than 300,000 at any given time.

Roosevelt continued his efforts with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. The agency's first charge was to feed the hungry and see that they had clothes and shelter, and in tackling that mission, it put 2 million people to work by the fall of 1933 as well.

As winter approached, relief administrator Harry Hopkins persuaded Roosevelt to create a temporary jobs program that would give the private economy a few more months to pick up steam. The Civil Works Administration put more than 4 million workers into jobs during the winter of 1933-34. They mostly repaired roads, parks and public buildings, but there were jobs for teachers and other white-collar workers too.

The CWA ended, as designed, after just five months. But unemployment remained unacceptably high. Like Obama today, Roosevelt had midterm elections to think about. His critics accused him of socialism and fretted publicly that large deficits would ruin the country. They insisted that workers would grow so accustomed to public jobs that they could never be weaned off the government's largesse.

But despite his vocal opponents, in January 1935, FDR announced his intention to launch the massive jobs program that became the Works Progress Administration.

The president's promise that the country would "see the dirt fly" was realized that fall, more than two years after he took office. The WPA addressed a range of long-standing infrastructure needs, including roads and bridges, hospitals and water treatment plants, and airports. Its workers fought floods and forest fires and cleaned up after hurricanes. Its sewing rooms made clothing and blankets that went out to disaster victims. The WPA also employed nurses, doctors, teachers, librarians and artists. By the fall of 1936, 3.3 million people were on the WPA payroll. The stimulus provided by those jobs buoyed the economy. By the spring of 1937, after Roosevelt's landslide reelection, the country's unemployment rate had dropped to 14 percent.

FDR then heard calls to cut spending and balance the budget. These calls were not just from his opponents; some of his own advisors, including Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, also urged him to cut back. And he heeded them. He slashed WPA spending by two-thirds, from its original $4.8-billion appropriation to $1.5 billion for the year starting July 1937. Half as many workers — 1.65 million — would get WPA paychecks.

At the same time, Roosevelt tightened bank reserve requirements. Deductions for the new Social Security System took more money out of the economy. Business responded with its usual self-protective caution and stopped spending. That fall, industrial production fell, the stock market plunged and, by the end of the year, unemployment had surged, with another 2 million workers losing their jobs. Republicans called it the Roosevelt Recession.

In the spring of 1938, Roosevelt decided he'd had enough of budget-cutting. He resumed spending, and soon the WPA rolls were back above 2 million, on their way to an all-time high of 3.4 million.

The lesson for Obama in all this is that stimulus works, and the sooner and more aggressive, the better. The vast infrastructure upgrades that were achieved by the WPA were in many ways a side-product, but an important one that is still paying national benefits. Given the country's potholes, sagging bridges, rickety electric grid and spotty broadband coverage, a push today on new infrastructure would also provide lasting and necessary benefits. In the first round of stimulus spending, jobs were saved and some infrastructure projects got underway, but there's still much more to do.

Of course, Obama faces challenges that his Depression-era predecessor didn't. Roosevelt had stronger majorities in Congress. He could propose bold programs that required spending without risking gridlock or defeat. When Obama argues for a new round of stimulus, he'll be standing against a distracting background of red ink.

Still, spending on jobs would be worth the cost. The WPA helped create a modern country and produced physical and cultural legacies that are still appreciated. Obama could use his considerable eloquence to recreate that vision. It's a vision he hasn't given us so far.

"recovery summer," but in the crown jewel of the stimulus known as "cash for clunkers," which subsidized car purchases that would have happened anyway. That's a major reason the auto industry just had its worst August in 27 years. Meanwhile, lower-income buyers are seeing used-car prices soar thanks to the artificial scarcity created by destroying perfectly good "clunkers."

But that's a small point in the grand scheme of things. According to progressives, the financial crisis discredited "market fundamentalism" and created a burning need for a more cooperative society in which "we're all in it together."

It's an ancient argument, with many noble intentions behind it. But it rests on a misunderstanding of one simple, astounding, irrefutable fact. The market economy is cooperative, and more successfully so than any alternative system ever conceived of, never mind put into practice. Admittedly it doesn't feel that way, which is why everyone wants to find a better replacement for it. But they never will, for the same reason no one can make a pencil.

Obama: Voter anger may hurt Dems in elections

President blames GOP for thwarting efforts

By Tom Raum and Darlene Superville
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Facing big Democratic losses in November, President Barack Obama blamed Republicans and election-year politics Friday for thwarting his efforts to do more to spur a listless national economy. He challenged Congress to quit squabbling and quickly approve “what we all agree on” — a reprieve for expiring tax cuts for the middle class.

“Let’s work on that. Let’s do it,” he told a nationally broadcast White House news conference, his first since last May.

Obama said his economic programs were helping, but “the hole the recession left was huge and progress has been painfully slow.”

Noting the stubbornly high jobless rate, Obama acknowledged that many voters in the Nov. 2 midterm elections probably will blame him for economic hard times and could take it out on congressional Democrats.

He said that “since I’m the president and Democrats have controlled the House and the Senate, it’s understandable that people are saying, ‘What have you done?’”

Still, he said, “If the election is about the policies that are going to move us forward versus the policies that will get us back into a mess, then I think the Democrats will do very well.”

Polls suggest large-scale Republican victories and Democratic losses in the midterm races.

Obama pressed his case for Congress to renew most of the tax breaks enacted in 2001 and 2003 under President George W. Bush that are set to expire at the end of this year. But the president and Democratic congressional leaders want to end the cuts for the nation’s wealthiest — households earning over $250,000 a year, or over $200,000 for single filers.

Republicans want all the cuts extended, saying the economy is too fragile to be raising taxes for anyone, and some Democrats have suggested a compromise — extending all the cuts but just for a year or two.

Obama suggested he might be open to “further conversation” down the road with Republicans, but “my position is let’s get done what we all agree on” first — the tax cuts for everyone but the wealthiest.

“Why hold it up? Why hold the middle class hostage in order to do something that most economists don’t think makes sense,” he said.

House Minority Leader John Boehner, who probably would become House speaker if Republicans win control on Election Day, called Obama’s presentation full of “halfhearted proposals and full-throated political attacks” that wouldn’t end the uncertainty keeping many businesses from creating jobs.

Republicans have recently united around a proposal by Boehner to cut domestic spending to 2008 levels and freeze all tax rates for two years, an idea he suggested Obama has ignored. “This is a plan Congress can and should act on this month,” Boehner said.

Castro says remark was misinterpreted

HAVANA (AP) — Fidel Castro said Friday his comments about the Cuban economic model no longer working were misinterpreted by a visiting American journalist — taking back an admission that caused a stir around the globe.

The 84-year-old ex-president said he was not misquoted but meant “the opposite” of what he was reported as having said by The Atlantic magazine reporter Jeffrey Goldberg.

Goldberg wrote Wednesday that during three days of interviews with Castro in Havana last month, he asked the former leader over lunch and wine if Cuba’s communist system was still worth exporting to other countries. He said Castro replied: “The Cuban model doesn’t even work for us anymore.”

Castro read from Goldberg’s blog during an event at the University of Havana and said he was misunderstood.

Report: U.S. slow with terror problem

The U.S. was slow to take seriously the threat posed by homegrown radicals and the government has failed to put systems in place to deal with the growing phenomenon, according to a new report compiled by the former heads of the Sept. 11 Commission.

The report says U.S. authorities failed to realize that Somali-American youths traveling from Minnesota to Mogadishu in 2008 to join extremists was not an isolated issue. Instead, the movement was one among several instances of a broader, more diverse threat that has surfaced across the country.

“Our long-held belief that homegrown terrorism couldn’t happen here has thus created a situation where we are today stumbling blindly through the legal, operational and organizational minefield of countering terrorist radicalization and recruitment occurring in the United States,” said the report.

As a result, there is still no federal agency specifically charged with identifying radicalization or working to prevent terrorist recruitment of U.S. citizens and residents, said the report, which was released Friday by the Washington-based Bipartisan Policy Center’s National Security Preparedness Group.

The group, headed by former 9-11 commission leaders Tom Kean and Lee Hamilton, laid out a detailed description of domestic terror incidents ranging from the Fort Hood, Texas, shooting spree and the attempted Christmas Day airliner attack in late 2009 to last May’s botched truck bombing in New York’s Times Square.

Rules would mean fewer hours for sleepy pilots

Work hours would be shortened for pilots who fly at night while some pilots who fly during the day could spend more time in the cockpit under a government proposal to help prevent dangerous fatigue.

The Federal Aviation Administration plan, which the agency has spent 15 months drafting, is an attempt to overhaul pilot work rules to reflect current scientific understanding of how fatigue impacts human performance and prevent errors that cause accidents. The rules were last updated over two decades ago and most date back to the 1940s.

The proposal released Friday would bar airlines from scheduling pilots to be on duty — a combination of being at work ready to fly or in the cockpit flying — longer than 13 hours in a 24-hour period, three hours less than current regulations. At night, that limit could slide to as few as nine hours. However, airlines would be allowed to schedule pilots who start their work day between 7 a.m. and 1 p.m. for as much as 10 hours of actual flying time — two more hours than currently allowed.

Airlines would also have to allow pilots nine hours of rest between work days, an increase of an hour. Pilots have complained that the current eight-hour rest period, which begins as soon as they leave the plane, often means only a few hours sleep.

Woman with 2 identities gets 5 years

ANCHORAGE — A former Rhodes Fulbright scholar from Alaska who pleaded guilty in a bizarre case of deception and double identities has been sentenced to nearly five years in prison.

The Anchorage Daily News reports Rachel Yould was sentenced Friday to 57 months and ordered to pay more than $700,000 in restitution.

The 38-year-old Anchorage woman took on a new identity under a federal program that helps rape and domestic violence victims hide from their tormentors. But federal prosecutors say she used her new identity to defraud lenders out of more than $600,000 in student loan money that she used to play the stock market, buy a condo and launch a business.

Yould insists she used the money for her studies. She pleaded guilty in June to mail and wire fraud and making false statements to get student loans.

Tax-cut extension could help economy

Analysts call on Obama to back off tax-the-rich plan

By Kevin G. Hall
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Raising taxes on the wealthiest Americans, as President Barack Obama proposes to do, probably wouldn't wreck the moribund U.S. economy, but extending the tax cuts they've enjoyed since 2001 could spur some economic benefit.

A healthy dose of "it depends" is needed when assessing the economic merits of whether to collect more taxes from the rich.

Congress returns next week to begin debating whether to extend some or all of the tax cuts from 2001 and 2003 legislation that President George W. Bush signed into law. These temporary reductions in income, capital-gains and investment-dividend taxes are to return to the previous rates unless Congress extends them by year's end.

Obama called again Wednesday to extend the tax cuts for all but the wealthiest 2 percent of taxpayers. He'd let the tax rate rise for single taxpayers with adjusted gross income above $200,000 and couples over $250,000. The higher rate would apply only to their earnings over those thresholds.

Republicans warn of disaster if all the tax reductions aren't extended. Some Democrats in Congress appear increasingly wary of the administration's approach, especially with prominent economists calling for a two-year extension for all the tax cuts, because they say the economy's too weak to raise taxes on anyone yet.

Bush's tax reductions temporarily created six income tax brackets — at 10 percent, 15 percent, 25 percent, 28 percent, 33 percent and 35 percent. If not extended, they'd revert to brackets of 15 percent, 28 percent, 31 percent, 36 percent and, for those who earn more than $382,650 next year, 39.6 percent.

The Treasury Department estimates that extending all the tax cuts would deny the Treasury almost $3.7 trillion in revenues over the next decade, swelling the national debt. But allowing the reductions for the wealthiest 2 percent to expire would narrow that loss to just under $3 trillion by raising $679.6 billion in new revenue from the wealthy, the Treasury estimates.

By the president's reckoning, a modest bump in the top tax bracket isn't going to harm the rich or the economy, since that was the rate that was in effect during the booming 1990s, the longest sustained economic expansion in U.S. history.

Republicans counter that the rich play an outsized role in the nation's economic life, and that raising taxes on them would weaken overall demand for goods and services, and could even tip the

Underemployment saps economy's potential to expand

By Don Lee
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Beyond the 15 million Americans who have no jobs at all, millions more are caught in part-time or limited jobs that don't pay them enough to maintain their standard of living — much less contribute to the strong consumer spending needed to power the nation out of the economic doldrums.

Economists have a technical term for these people: underemployed.

The latest Labor Department report shows there are nearly 9 million people who want full-time jobs but can't find them. In some cases, their formerly full-time employers have reduced their hours because of a lack of business.

The lack of full-time work is both a hardship for individuals and their families and a substantial drag on the still-feeble recovery. With consumer spending accounting for 70 percent of the nation's total economic activity, having millions of underemployed workers means a loss of economic vitality — along with lower tax revenues and more budget problems for governments at every level.

Insurance rate battle

Obama, carriers clash over possible increases

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama's top health official on Thursday warned the insurance industry that the administration won't tolerate blaming premium hikes on the new health overhaul law.

"There will be zero tolerance for this type of misinformation and unjustified rate increases," Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius said in a letter to the insurance lobby.

"Simply stated, we will not stand idly by as insurers blame their premium hikes and increased profits on the requirement that they provide consumers with basic protections," Sebelius said. She warned that bad actors may be excluded from new health insurance markets that will open in 2014 under the law. They'd lose out on a big pool of customers, as many as 30 million people nationwide.

The letter to America's Health Insurance Plans was the latest volley in a war of words over who gets the blame for rising premiums. Polls show that many people expect their costs to go up as a result of the law, but there's also widespread mistrust of the insurance industry.

An HHS official said the letter is a pre-emptive move, after the department learned that several smaller carriers around the country are blaming the new law for rate increases this year.

The industry's top lobbyist responded that the health care law is a factor behind higher rates, but not the only one.

"Health insurance premiums are increasing because

80 years of Tums: U.S. plant churns out 4 billion stomach-soothers a year

By Lisa Brown
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

ST. LOUIS — We pop these little tablets after meals, after meetings and at the office.

For decades, Tums has rolled off billions of antacid tablets from its red brick building in St. Louis, where 99.9 percent of the world's Tums supply is produced. This month marks the 80th anniversary of Tums' history as America's good 'ol standby.

Stephen Bishop, who oversees operations at the plant where he started as a research scientist 38 years ago, said the simplicity of the product's formula explains its longevity and standing as the No. 1 selling antacid in the nation.

"The basic formula is the same as it was 80 years ago," he said.

Tums, which is owned by GlaxoSmithKline, ranks first in the U.S. for the number of units sold, 60.2 million bottles or rolls, for the 52-week period that ended Aug. 8, according to Symphony IRI Group, a Chicago-based market research firm.

Johnson & Johnson, which makes Roloids, is Tums' next-biggest competitor, with 37.24 million antacid products sold in the U.S. in the past year.

Antacids that work over time instead of fast-acting relief are relatively new to the market, including Procter & Gamble's Prilosec, launched in 2003, and Novartis' Prevacid 24-hour antacid tablets, launched in 2009. Both of those products are among the top five antacid tablets sold in the U.S.

Morningstar analyst Damien Conover said antacid tablets provide lower margins versus prescription medications, but they serve as a buffer for their parent companies that are facing patent challenges on prescription drugs.

Conover said Tums' recognizable brand name helps explain its things and on the output potential for the country," said Andrew Sum, an economics professor and director of the Center for Labor Market Studies at Northeastern University in Boston.

The surge in underemployment that began during the recession cut almost evenly across all major industries and occupations and affected workers in all age groups, the Labor Department data showed, and hit especially hard older people - some of whom have reluctantly opted to file for early Social Security benefits.

The number of involuntary part-timers - who on average worked 23 hours a week in the second quarter - had been easing down since spring but rose in August. The figure is double the pre-recession level and the highest since record-keeping began in 1955.

The problem is even bigger than the official numbers suggest. Another group of underemployed is not tracked by the government but may be almost as large: workers shunted into full-time jobs that pay far less than their old jobs.

These workers' new paychecks offer only a shadow of the middle-class lifestyles that their skills, education and experience once helped them secure.

Full time or part time, many of the underemployed are young adults with college degrees. Sum estimated that half of the college-educated workers 25 and younger who started work this year landed in jobs that didn't require bachelor's degrees, such as waiting tables, bartending and retail sales. Only a few years ago, he said, that figure was closer to 25 percent.

COMMUNITY

Courtesy photo

How to keep your teen safe online

Q: I have a newly turned teenager who now wants to use one of the online social networks to chat with friends. I hear horror stories all the time about teenagers going online and meeting other teenage kids who are not teenage kids. What are some ways I could make sure this does not happen to my teenager?

— Mary

A: The easiest way to protect your teenager is to not get a computer. (Though we all know that won't happen, and even if you didn't have one everybody else does anyway.)

Nothing with teenagers is a guarantee that no problems will happen, but here are some ideas:

I would tell you that the first and best way to monitor your teenager's use of the computer is to keep any computer with access to the Internet out of rooms that can be locked. Keeping the computer in a room with plenty of eyes means less chances that your teenager will go to inappropriate sites. Newer computers and some software now allow for the machines to be locked at certain times or access to certain types of websites to be blocked. I set my teenager's up that way.

POLICEMAN DAN

If you do allow your teenager to have a computer in his or her room, make sure that the door is left open and that you know the passwords to all of the websites they use. Also, don't be afraid to look over your teenager's shoulder when he or she is online. If you see a sudden screen change then be nosy and check to see what was on the screen (Ctrl-Shift-H will show you the history of websites).

Social-networking websites have gotten a bad rap; only some of it is deserved. The main sites have done more and more to protect people online. The fact remains that most of the things online that have gotten people in trouble were stuff they posted themselves.

Remember that once something is posted online, it is often there forever, with no way to stop it or get it back.

Protecting anybody on the Internet begins with responsibility from not only teenagers, but also parents. Teaching kids what to look for and avoid is the best tool out there.

I seem to always get asked what it takes to be a police officer, so I thought I'd share some ways to tell if you have what it takes:

1. You like unpredictable shift hours.
2. You enjoy eating meals as quickly as you can.
3. You believe that too many guns are the funniest joke ever.
4. You love the smell of burnt gunpowder.
5. You want to see everybody else's kids more than yours.

6. You enjoy cold food and warm drinks.

7. You don't trust anybody, not even the person next door.

8. You find humor in things that most find sickening.

9. You love to write reports that nobody will read.

10. Your kids don't go out because you know everybody.

Officer down

Please remember these officers who were killed in the line of duty, and their families, in your prayers. God bless these heroes:

- Trooper 1st Class Kenneth R. Hall, Connecticut State Police.
- Border Patrol Agent Michael V. Gallagher.
- Auxiliary Lt. Dan Kromer, Taylor Police, Michigan.

Be safe. I'll talk to you next week.

Dan Bristol is the Heyburn Chief of Police. E-mail your questions to policemandan@yahoo.com.

Local schools honored for use of network

Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter will recognize nine pioneering educators on the first anniversary of the Idaho Education Network (IEN), including Twin Falls High School and the Murtaugh School District.

The "Talk" awards will highlight innovative uses of the IEN, which links Idaho schools and makes real-time, two-way education possible for Idaho students. The awards celebration is planned for 3:25 p.m. Tuesday at the schools honored.

Murtaugh School District won its award due to events organized by Superintendent Michelle Capps, including a partnership with Weiser High School to offer a speech class to Murtaugh students.

To introduce her community to the IEN, Capps also took residents in her area on a virtual dive at Australia's Great Barrier Reef, demonstrating the power of the IEN through this eye-opening experience.

Twin Falls High School was recognized for rapidly becoming the state leader in creating dual-credit opportunities for students throughout southern and eastern Idaho, according to the awards organizers.

By partnering with the College of Southern Idaho, TFHS is now distributing college-level classes to students at cross-town Canyon Ridge High School, as well as to high school students in the Jerome, Sugar-Salem, Gooding, North Gem and Preston school districts.

Cluster-headache sufferer recommends drug that carries risks

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 80 years old and have spent some 40 years in radiology as an X-ray technologist. Now that I'm retired, living in Pennsylvania, I write adult and children's books.

When I was 19 years old, I developed cluster headaches that, at times, became unbearable. I presented all the classic symptoms. Our radiology office was located in a professional building, along with 40 other specialists. At the time, I became a guinea pig. I had everything from Novocain injections into my cervical nerve to histamine injections in my arm, all to no avail. I tried all the known remedies available at the time.

My agony lasted until I was about 33 years old. My episodes were predictable. Every day, they lasted from one minute to several hours,

ASK DR. GOTT

for over a period of six months. Then, just as rapidly as they appeared, they vanished for six months.

Then, as luck would have it, while reading a medical magazine, I spotted an ad from a pharmaceutical company advertising a brand new drug called Sansert, which I believe is now off the market. I asked the radiologist I worked for if he would please contact the company and ask for samples, which he did, knowing that everything else I had tried had failed.

Already in the throes of a cycle, I took the pills according to directions without success. After a period of calm between cycles, I was prepared to make another attempt. Typically, the cycle of pain would ensue and build in crescendo, until reaching its pinnacle, after which it would act in just the opposite manner until I was pain-free; usually all within a minute. Only this time, as soon as the pain started, I popped a pill and did so for one full week, after which I began to notice that the excruciating pain began to abort and then lessen, finally disappearing completely. Then I skipped a cycle, only to become disappointed when it once again returned.

After a period of remission, the pain returned. I immediately began taking the Sansert again with success. After that last bout, at age 33, until this day, I have not had another recurrence.

DEAR READER: To my understanding, Sansert is no longer available in the United States but is still available in other countries. It carries some serious side effects, and this is likely why the United States chose to remove it from the market.

Sansert is chemically similar to lysergic acid diethylamide or LSD, a well-known, potent hallucinogen that has been purported to relieve the pain of cluster headaches and migraines. To my knowledge, no legitimate research has been done on this subject. I discourage everyone from trying LSD as a treatment because it is an illegal substance that carries stiff legal penalties, not to mention the potentially serious side effects that may last for years in some people.

I bring the similarities of these two substances up only because Sansert carries the side effects of mood changes, hallucinations, delusions and more that are also associated with LSD.

While I am happy to hear that you have success with this drug, there are safer options available. Unfortunately, Sansert has too many strikes against it for me to feel comfortable recommending it to others.

I suggest anyone suffering from cluster headaches be under the care of a neurologist familiar with the condition. Many of my readers with this problem have found relief using supplemental oxygen. Other options include the triptans (sumatriptan, zolmitriptan), local anesthetics (lidocaine, etc.), certain antihypertensives and others. Rarely, surgery may be recommended for those who don't respond to aggressive treatment or cannot tolerate other treatments.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my health report "Headaches." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title or print an order form off my website at www.AskDrGottMD.com.

Indians hang on to beat Burley

By John Derr
Times-News writer

BUHL — Mistakes, especially deep in your own territory, can be crucial.

The Bobcats made them and the Indians took advantage.

Buhl jumped out quickly, built a lead after the break and held on to defeat Burley 27-22 Friday night in nonconference football action.

Even Wray led the way, scoring two touchdowns for the Class 3A Indians.

"I felt like I needed to step up, but I did a mediocre job," said Wray, who tallied 78 yards on 22 carries, intercepted a pass on defense and was in on tackles all night.

The Bobcats outgained Buhl (335 to 234), but three turnovers, including two deep in their own territory, and several penalties sealed Burley's fate. Burley scored two touchdowns in the final period before running out of time.

"We have to take care of the ball," said Burley coach Jeffery Green, who also added that his team had improved greatly from last week. "Our biggest focus has been for the players to play hard the whole game. I am proud of them."

On the third play of the game, a turnover by the Bobcats led to a 1-yard TD run by Wray.

After a Burley punt, Gillins connected with Jessie Flinn for a 49-yard score.

"I don't want to take sacks and the receivers did a good job making the plays," said Gillins, who was 6 of 8 for 120 yards.

DOUG GASKILL/For the Times-News

Buhl's Steven Newell fends off Burley's Juan Labra (18) to recover a fumble Friday in Buhl.

Burley ran the double wing offense, hoping that the misdirection would confuse the Indians. While it took awhile, the Bobcats started clicking in the second quarter.

Shaw Green rambled for 57 yards on a reverse, but Burley was stopped inside the 10. Jason Konrad got the Bobcats on the board with a 36-yard sprint to the end zone to pull Burley within 13-8 at the half.

Wray's second 1-yard scoring run came in the third quarter to give Buhl some breathing room.

Another fumble by Burley, this time at their own 14, led to a TD toss from Gillins to Matt Hamilton as the Indians looked to cruise home.

But the Bobcats had a different idea.

SERVING NOTICE

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The first Service Bowl was all about firepower. This time the defenses took center stage.

Twin Falls forced five turnovers Friday and pitched its second straight shutout with a 23-0 win at Canyon Ridge to retain the game's traveling trophy.

"I trust these guys on defense more than anything. They're the heart and soul of our team," said senior linebacker Mark Christensen, who had a sack and an interception on defense and threw a touchdown on a halfback pass in the third quarter.

Unlike last week's 14-0 win over Nampa, there was no statement drive for the Bruins (3-0, 1-0 Great Basin). Instead it was the way they squelched the Riverhawks (1-1, 0-1) each time they crossed midfield.

Twin Falls roughed up Canyon Ridge quarterback Tyler Myers for two sacks and three interceptions. Myers left the game in the fourth quarter with a leg injury and didn't return.

"Our coaches told us we had to step up on defense. We had to contain Myers, and he's a great athlete," said Twin Falls ballhawk Jayson Welker, who had three interceptions, including a vital one at the end of the first half when he stole the ball from Canyon Ridge tailback Nick Kytile in midair.

"We stuck with our assignments and did what we needed to do, and it paid off," Welker said.

The Bruins led 7-0 at half-time but made a statement on the opening drive of the second half by forcing the Riverhawks to go three-and-out.

Then the wheels came off for Canyon Ridge. A personal foul penalty led to a Ben Worst field goal for the Bruins, then another personal foul backed them up and allowed Welker to return the ball deep into Riverhawk territory. A third personal foul robbed Canyon Ridge of one of its best players when Braden Metcalf was ejected for striking a Bruin on the helmet.

Still, the Riverhawks felt they earned a little respect from the loss, considering they halved the final deficit from a year ago (a 55-7 loss) and played better despite not scoring.

"We just had too many mental mistakes," said Canyon Ridge running back Sawyer McMillen. "We had chances but we have to get

Vandals hope to impress Cornhuskers

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

Most of the details of his introduction to Memorial Stadium in Lincoln, Neb., didn't stick. Nate Enderle isn't sure how old he was when he first went, or how often his family journeyed from the central part of the state — 230 miles away — to see the Cornhuskers after that.

But Idaho's senior quarterback still remembers Nebraska's opponent on that initial visit: Daunte Culpepper led Central Florida.

It was almost exactly 13 years ago that Culpepper, the stud quarterback of 40-point underdog UCF, guided his team to a stunning half-time lead before absorbing a two-touchdown loss to the eventual national-champion Cornhuskers.

Today Enderle returns to Lincoln, this time as a quiet standout for the Vandals looking to make a similar impression on the 81,000-plus at Memorial Stadium.

Idaho, a 28-point underdog, will clash with sixth-ranked Nebraska at 10:30 a.m. MST. This is the first meeting between programs with much different football histories.

The Cornhuskers, five-time national champs and riding a streak of 306 consecutive home sellouts after today, are in their last year in the Big 12 Conference before moving to the Big Ten.

The Vandals, with two Humanitarian Bowl trophies to their name since vaulting from Division I-AA in 1996, are members of the soon-to-be slimmed-down Western Athletic Conference.

Bulldogs bulldoze Declo

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — In this day and age of West Coast and Spread offenses, it's refreshing to see two teams line up and play good ol' fashioned smashmouth football like Kimberly and Declo did Friday night.

In the end, Kimberly proved stronger on the line and faster in the backfield as the Bulldogs earned a 30-22 nonconference victory over the Hornets.

"I'm really happy with our guys up front. This victory goes to them," said Kimberly coach Kirby Bright.

Kimberly rushed for 243 yards and handed Declo its first regular-season loss since Oct. 10, 2008.

"Last week (46-41 loss to American Falls) was a heartbreaker, so we came out and worked hard this week," said Kimberly's Seth Champlin, who ran for 131 yards and two touchdowns.

"We have a little rivalry going with Declo, they used to be in our division, so there's some pride issues going on there."

Both teams pounded it out on the ground, passing the ball just seven times combined.

Declo ran for 284 yards, led by Mark Knobbe's 172 yards and two touchdowns and Kyle Zollinger's 78 yards.

Kimberly schemed defensively to focus on Knobbe, who ran for 17 yards per carry in Declo's win over Aberdeen last week.

"We knew (Knobbe) was going to be a big back and was going to pound the ball, but we widened our outside linebackers and brought up the free safety and packed the box a little more," Champlin said. "We figured he was going to get 100 (yards) or so, but keeping him away from 300 like he

McClellin comes of age against Va. Tech

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Almost 109 years to the day when former U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt first used the phrase "speak softly and carry a big stick," Boise State defensive end Shae McClellin went to Washington, D.C., and adopted the same motto.

McClellin, a 6-3, 262-pound junior, speaks so quietly that he's barely audible. But his play last Monday in BSU's 33-30 win over Virginia Tech came across loud and clear.

"(The defensive line) has that mentality that we ant to be dominant," McClellin said. "It doesn't matter whether it's a game or practice — we're out there trying to be dominant."

With teammate Ryan Winterswyk still not at full speed, McClellin shouldered the slack with relative ease.

McClellin

By the time McClellin was done with the Hokies, he collected three tackles, three assists, two and a half sacks, and one quarterback hurry-up. Not bad for a converted full-back who never played defensive end until he arrived at Boise State.

"It doesn't matter if it's a powerhouse like Virginia Tech or some other team," McClellin said. "Every game we're just trying to go out there and control the line."

Wood River football eases past Wendell

Times-News

Alex Padilla and Tanner Farrow both scored two touchdowns as Wood River picked up a 29-14 win over Wendell in Hailey on Friday.

The Wolverines (1-1) scored a touchdown in each quarter by working outside of the tackle area, where Wendell (1-1) was able to control things.

"We thought it would come down to the fewest mistakes — we intercepted them three times and forced two fumbles, and we only had one (turnover). I thought that was a key," said Wood River coach Kevin Stilling. "We couldn't get anything going inside but did a good job blocking the edges."

Farrow scored on runs of 15 and 87 yards, while Padilla scored from 2 yards out and hauled in a 22-yard scoring pass from Kevin Jensen.

The Wolverines host Gooding next Friday.

Lineman Jacob Hansen also had a solid game for the Musers (2-1), who are above .500 for the first time in five years, according to former head coach Randy Jewett.

Camas County hosts Carey next Friday.

JACKPOT 36, SHO-BAN 30

Jackpot survives a late rally by Sho-Ban to take 36-30 victory.

With 3 minutes left in the fourth quarter, Sho-Ban threatened to break up Jackpot's lead with a late drive. But Sho-Ban fumbled on the 10-yard line and Jackpot recovered to close out the game.

Jackpot (1-1) travels to Raft River next Friday.

ROCKLAND 46, LIGHTHOUSE CHRISTIAN 6

Rockland controlled the ball and the game as they rolled to 46-6 victory over Lighthouse Christian.

Lighthouse Christian's only touchdown came from running back Gabe Heath as he ran for 59 yards. Heath finished with 13 carries for 61 yards in the loss.

"We only had two possessions in the second half," said Lighthouse Christian coach John van Vliet. "They are a really big team and they just controlled the game."

Shoshone jumped out early on Richfield and never looked back as the Indians rolled to 50-24 victory.

Shane Walsh had seven carries for 110 yards and one touchdown and quarterback Garrett Sant threw two touchdowns in the win.

"We were able to dominate pretty early," said Shoshone coach Mark Sant. "We had a balanced offense all night and everyone contributed."

Shoshone (3-0) has a bye week next week.

JEROME 2, CENTURY 2

Jerome was down late but bounded back as strikers Sergio Madigal and Carlos Martinez scored two goals to tie Century 2-2.

Century held a 2-0 lead until Madigal scored at the 72-minute mark and Martinez scored at the 79th minute.

"It was a good game," said Jerome coach Robert Garcia. "We were happy to come back and tie this game. My guys just kept working and working and they finally got two goals at the end of the game."

Jerome (4-4-2) hosts Canyon Ridge on Tuesday at 4:30 p.m.

COMMUNITY 3, DECLO 0

Community School played cutthroat soccer against Declo as the won 3-0 on Friday.

Tim Kanellitsas and Tony Martin scored for the Cutthroats in the first half and Mason Noyes scored his first varsity goal in the second half to cap off the victory.

The Cutthroats (3-2-1, 2-2 1 HDSC) travels to Gooding on Monday.

FILER 3, BLISS 0

Filer's ability to shutdown Bliss on defense was the key in a 3-0 victory on Friday.

Filer's Serjio Campos scored the first goal of the game off a pass from Santiago Alvarado and Ryan Karel and Zach Clark booted goals to give Filer the 3-0 lead.

Bliss goalie Juan Rojas had 18 saves in the loss.

Girls soccer

BLISS 1, FILER 1

Demsie Butler's second-half goal on a penalty kick helped host Bliss earn a 1-1 draw against Filer on Friday.

Filer scored on a first-half penalty kick by Candra Coelho. Bliss (3-1-1 HDSC, 10 pts.) travels to Buhl on Monday.

COMMUNITY SCHOOL 10, DECLO 0

Whitney Engelmann and Hannah Dies each scored two goals, while Jordan Fitzgerald added a goal and three assists in the Community School's 10-0 home win over Declo on Friday.

Natalie Vorsteveld, India Emerick, Emi Carr, Taylor Figge and Dani Stokes also scored for the Cutthroats (6-1, 5-0 HDSC, 15 pts.), who visit Gooding on Monday.

Middleton powers past winless Jerome

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

It was old school against new school Friday night at Jerome.

Unfortunately for the Tigers, old school prevailed in their 27-6 loss to Middleton.

Running the double wing offense, Middleton rushed for more than 300 yards, while Jerome's spread offense sputtered, producing less than 200 yards of total offense.

"We just need to get more production from our offense," said Jerome coach Gary Krumm. "We had too many dropped passes, too many mental mistakes. We have a lot of young kids, but this is the third game and it's time to grow up."

Quarterback Jake Hollifield struggled, throwing two interceptions and completing 8-18 passes for 79 yards, prompting a change at the position in the third quarter.

Freshman Zach Thibault entered at quarterback on Jerome's second possession in the third quarter for his first varsity action. On his second possession he was met by linebacker Hyder Jessup on a viscous hit in the flat.

"I was pretty nervous before I got out there, but once I was on the field, it was just football," Thibault said. "I didn't see him at all. He came out of nowhere, but I just had to get back up and lead my team."

Thibault scored the lone touchdown for the Tigers in the final minutes of the game on a 2-yard quarterback sneak.

Middleton had no problems moving the ball, running behind its entire starting offensive line from a year ago. Out of the double-wing attack, Ted Ah You, Mason Foote and Luke Kanada each ran for more than 100 yards.

Foote ripped off a 60-yard run in the second quarter and Kanada ran for an 81-yard touchdown on the first possession of the second half to put the Vikings up 20-0.

"They just pounded it at us all night. Our D-line played great, but they were just able to rip off the big run — it happens," said Jerome linebacker Steven Hoskovec.

Jerome was plagued by injuries in their receiving corps. Joe Carey did not return in the second half, suffering from a big hit in the second quarter, Riley Parrish went down with a knee injury and Tate Patterson strained his shoulder late in the fourth quarter.

"We're really thin in the skill positions, so we can't afford for kids to go down," Krumm said.

Hollifield moved to receiver after Thibault replaced him at quarterback and caught one pass for seven yards.

"He stepped up and produced for us in a different spot when we needed him to. He's going to do a lot of things for our offense," Krumm said.

Jerome (0-3) begins Great Basin Conference play next week, traveling to Canyon Ridge.

"We're excited to start conference play. That's the real deal and every game is like a playoff game," said senior linebacker Milton Hernandez.

by Shaw Green, who finished with 147 yards on the ground.

"It wasn't tough to figure out, but they did such a good job of opening holes," said Wray of Burley's offense.

Buhl took its time driving down the field only to turn it over on downs at the 33. Burley found the end zone again with a 7-yard run by Branson Handy, who chipped in 80 rushing yards.

The only hope for the Bobcats was an onside kick, but the Indians recovered the ball and ran out the clock to secure the victory.

"We played a tough game with great players. We knew it would be a tough game. We were close," said Green.

those mental mistakes out of the way. The third quarter just killed us. We were right there and we showed that if we don't make those mistakes we're a pretty good football team."

The Bruins said they'll enjoy the win for a couple of days at least. Then it's back to work for a trip to Burley, the next stop on the way to their ultimate goal.

"It's a win, a great win, but it doesn't mean that much in the long run," said Christensen. "We want a state championship."

CSI volleyball earns two wins in Texas

Times-News

The fifth-ranked College of Southern Idaho volleyball team headed to the Patriot Day Tournament in Houston aiming to earn some national respect.

So far, so good.

The Eagles beat Lee College (Texas) 25-23, 22-25, 24-26, 25-18, 15-10 Friday night to cap a 2-0 day at the tourney.

Down after the third set, CSI got three key kills from Elisa Brochado in turning a 16-16 tie in a 25-18 win in the fourth set to extend the match.

Rosie Becerra had five kills in the deciding fifth set. Brochado and Becerra each tallied 15 kills in the match, while Beth Carey added 14 kills and four blocks. Barbara Alcantara had a team-high 52 assists, while Kianna Niu had 35 digs.

The win over Lee followed an impressive four-set win over No. 4 Blinn (Texas), which the Golden Eagles took 21-25, 27-25, 25-23, 25-23. Carey led CSI with 15 kills while hitting with .538 efficiency, while Alyssa Everett added 12 kills and Brochado 11.

Alcantara dug 12 balls and dished out 43 assists, while Ashleigh Pollard and Niu had 12 and 16 digs, respectively.

CSI (9-2) plays Texas schools Navarro College at 7 a.m., MDT today, before finishing with No. 6 San Jacinto-Central at 11 a.m. and Galveston at 3 p.m.

The Golden Eagles, who opened the season No. 1 but fell to No. 5 this week, return home next weekend for the Starr Corp. Invitational.

had last week would be good." While Knobbe led Declo on both sides of the ball, he also had two costly fumbles. One came deep in Declo territory, setting up Kimberly's second touchdown. The other was at the Kimberly 1-yard line as Declo was driving in to score just before halftime.

Additionally, Kimberly's Dally Charters intercepted Declo quarterback Ross Sanders twice.

"That's huge," Bright said of the turnovers. "We finally got the stops defensively. That's something we didn't do last week."

After the game was tied 14-14 at halftime, the Kimberly defense made the game-changing play late in the third quarter when Tyler Bringhurst tackled Declo punter Calum Webb in the end zone for a safety. Then, the Bulldogs scored a 20-yard TD by Casperson on its next drive to make it 23-14 early in the fourth. Casperson finished with 103 yards and two touchdowns.

Declo cut the gap to 23-22 with 6:48 remaining on Sanders' 11-yard quarterback keeper and Knobbe's two-point conversion.

But Kimberly ran time off the clock and Champlin broke a 41-yard TD scamper with two minutes left, and then the Bulldog defense stopped the Hornets on fourth down at midfield.

"You can't win football games with as many mistakes as we had. What a valiant effort by our kids just to be that close with that many errors," said Declo coach Kelly Kidd, pointing to the turnovers and drive-killing penalties. "We hurt ourselves, but now the learning begins. How we react to this will be key for us."

Next week, Declo (1-1) hosts Malad and Kimberly travels to Valley.

Idaho State gets tough test against Utah State

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — Things get a bit tougher for the Idaho State Bengals today. Coming off a 32-3 win over NAIA squad Montana-Western last Saturday, the Bengals travel to Logan today to take on the Utah State Aggies in a 6 p.m. contest.

The Aggies of the Western Athletic Conference have been among the worst programs in the Football Bowl Subdivision the past decade, but are showing signs of progress under second-year coach Gary Andersen.

"They have 85 scholarships they can hand out, they've got much more

Idaho State at Utah State

6 p.m.
TV: none Radio: 930 AM depth than we do, and they've got some very fine players," Idaho State coach John Zamberlin said of the Aggies.

Last week, Utah State went into Oklahoma and almost pulled off a before losing to the then-No. 7 Sooners 31-24.

If the Bengals are going to have a chance today they'll have to slow down Aggie quarterback Diondre Borel.

Borel torched Oklahoma's secondary for 341 passing yards and two scores on only 17 completions. His big play target, receiver Dontel Watkins, will also draw ISU's attention. Watkins averaged 30 yards a catch against the Sooners.

The Aggies certainly got Zamberlin's attention.

"They are as good as anybody we'll see this year," he said. "They play hard and are quick off the ball. Utah State's always been able to put points on the board even when they were losing a lot of games."

As far as ISU, the quarterback situation again looks muddled. Unless something unexpected happens, Kyle Morris will get the call again tonight. Morris had a solid opening game against the Bulldogs and while senior Russel Hill is progressing, it doesn't look like he's quite there yet.

"Russ is back on the field throwing, we'll see how he is with his knee this week," said Zamberlin. "He knows, as does the rest of the team, that I don't believe a kid loses his job because of an injury. That being said, we're fortunate that Kyle was able to get a lot of practice time and I'm happy he played like he did in our win."

ISU showed a productive running game for the first time in almost two years in last week's win, rushing for more than 200 yards. They'll need a similar effort on the ground today to keep the heat off Morris and to give him time to make throws.

Zamberlin summed up his thinking on the game this way: "we want to drag them into the fourth quarter. If we can stay close until then, we've got a shot."

Idaho State's last win against an FBS opponent came in 2000, a 27-24 win against Utah State in Logan. But the Aggies still lead the all-time series 11-2.

Utah State's head coach Gary Andersen was an assistant coach with the Bengals from 1992 to 1994 and he has good memories on his time there.

"I loved Idaho State. I love Pocatello. That was the first time that Kyle (Whittingham) and I worked together. We spent two years there. It was a program that was fighting to win some games," said Andersen. "The thing I remember the most there is that we beat Boise State, first year there on the last play of the game. That was a big moment."

"I love the town, we have fond memories of the community, and the high school coaches. We still have some friends there that we keep in contact with. We had some great times in Poky and I liked it."

BYU, Air Force meet for final time in MWC

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — BYU's reign in its rivalry with Air Force will be interrupted one way or another today.

With the Cougars departing from the Mountain West Conference after the season to become an independent, this is the Falcons' final chance for a while to halt a six-game slide against BYU.

There are no other games looming between the long-time adversaries.

Maybe a break is a blessing?

Lately, this showdown has been quite one-sided with the Cougars winning by an average of 19 points since 2004.

When asked why BYU had Air Force's number, Falcons coach Troy Calhoun simply responded, "They have a good team."

Despite their dominance in recent seasons, the series has felt like anything but a cakewalk to Cougars coach Bronco Mendenhall.

"I breathe a sigh of relief every time we're done playing against the Academy," Mendenhall said. "I think that you have to be smart when you play Air Force, I think you have to be physical and I think you have to execute at a high level. If you can do those three things, at least you have a chance."

Given his choice, though, Mendenhall would have scheduled this contest a few weeks from now, when he had a better handle on his team.

Not as the conference opener.

"If you were to play them in week 7, week 8 or week 9, you have a lot better idea of your current team," said Mendenhall, whose squad went 6-0 on the road last season.

"This is still the formative stages, especially of who we are. You have to project a little bit more as to who you think you're going

BYU at Air Force

2 p.m.
TV: Versus Radio: 1160 AM to be and where you currently are. That makes it a very difficult test."

The Cougars (1-0) will again rely on a platoon system at quarterback, a strategy that worked so effectively last weekend in a 23-17 win over Washington.

Sure, there are bugs to be worked out, but Riley Nelson and Jake Heaps were solid in splitting snaps. Nelson smoothly directed the offense and Heaps provided an added passing dimension as the freshman completed 13 of 23 passes for 131 yards.

That showing eases Mendenhall's apprehension over sharing reps.

"It's always fun to see the plan come to fruition in one week. And that's what we're talking about, one week — not the season," Mendenhall said.

Calhoun said the Falcons (1-0) won't scheme any differently for the rotation between Nelson and Heaps. Instead, Air Force will simply rely on what it does best — playing sound, fundamental defense.

"There's a wrinkle here or there that each guys does bring when they're in the game," Calhoun said. "But ultimately, you've got to take care of Air Force."

The Falcons may be without standout defensive back Reggie Rembert, who was carted off the field with a neck injury in a 65-21 win over Northwestern State last weekend.

"He's a ways off from being able to play," Calhoun said. "Exactly when that is, really only time is going to be able to tell."

TODAY'S OTHER BIG GAMES

No. 18 Penn State at No. 1 Alabama

5 p.m. (ESPN).
Line: Alabama by 12.
Series Record: Alabama leads 8-5.

WHAT'S AT STAKE
Alabama's front-runner status for a repeat national title, and survival of a big game without DE Marcell Dareus and probably injured Heisman Trophy winner Mark Ingram. Penn State could prove it belongs among other Big Ten contenders such as Ohio State and Iowa with an attention-getting upset.

KEY MATCHUP
Penn State freshman QB Rob Bolden against a Nick Saban defense that could bombard him with blitzes from all sorts of places and try to force him into mistakes. Then again, Alabama's secondary is young, too, and had some breakdowns against San Jose State.

PLAYERS TO WATCH
Alabama: QB Greg McElroy. Youngstown State redshirt freshman Kurt Hess completed 21 of 25 passes, including an 80-yard touchdown against the Nittany Lions. The veteran McElroy and WR Julio Jones could be licking their lips with those numbers.

Penn State: Bolden. See above. Did starting against Youngstown State, and doing well, prepare the talented freshman for 100,000-plus screaming fans and a swarming defense?

No. 12 Miami at No. 2 Ohio State

1:40 p.m. (ESPN)
Line: Ohio State by 8½.
Series Record: Ohio State leads, 2-1.
Last Meeting: 2003, Ohio State, 31-24 2OT.

WHAT'S AT STAKE
It's too early to count anyone out of the national championship race, but a loss will cripple one team's chances. Ohio State wants to make up for early-season losses to Southern California each of the last two years, while Miami hopes a big win will serve notice that the "U" is indeed back in the title hunt.

KEY MATCHUP
Ohio State DE Cameron Heyward vs. Miami's offensive line. Hurricanes QB Jacory Harris has occasionally saved up his worst games for the biggest dates on the schedule. If Heyward has a field day against the 'Canes front wall, it will be hard for Harris to buy enough time to stretch the defense deep.

PLAYERS TO WATCH
Miami: Miami DEs Allen Bailey and Olivier Vernon will try to get in QB Terrelle Pryor's head. RB Damien Berry needs a good game for the 'Canes to keep the ball away from Pryor.
Ohio State: LBs Brian Rolle, Ross Homan and Andrew Sweat had big games in the 45-7 win over Marshall in the opener. They need to be just as active to prevent any 'Cane home runs.

No. 10 Oklahoma vs. No. 17 Florida St.

1:30 p.m. (ABC)
Line: Oklahoma by 7½.
Series Record: Oklahoma leads 4-1.
Last Meeting: Jan. 3, 2001, Orange Bowl, Oklahoma 13-2

WHAT'S AT STAKE
Brotherly bragging rights are on the line as Sooners coach Bob Stoops goes up against Florida State defensive coordinator Mark Stoops for the first time. It's also a rematch of the game that decided the national championship after the 2000 season, with both teams trying to avoid an early loss that'd prevent them from getting that far again.

KEY MATCHUP
Florida State QB Christian Ponder vs. Oklahoma's secondary. Ponder threw four touchdown passes while playing only the first half last week, while the Sooners' inexperienced defensive backs were burned for 314 yards and six passes of more than 20 yards by Utah State in Week 1.

PLAYERS TO WATCH
Florida State: PR Greg Reid. The ACC's top punt returner last year as a freshman, Reid is 1-for-1 on runbacks this season with a 74-yard score on his lone chance last week against Samford.
Oklahoma: QB Landry Jones. Moving into his second year as a starter, Jones completed only 47 percent of his passes and had two interceptions to go with his two TDs in the opener.

UNLV at No. 20 Utah

2 p.m., (The Mtn.)
Line: Utah by 22.
Series Record: Utah leads 13-2.
Last meeting: 2009, Utah 35-15.

WHAT'S AT STAKE
Utah needs to correct the many mistakes that allowed Pittsburgh to force overtime in the Utes' 27-24 victory last Thursday. It was enough to take the Utes from unranked to No. 20 in the polls, but staying there or moving up will hinge on how much Utah improves. Utah quarterback Jordan Wynn may not play because of a sprained right thumb from the season opener. If he can't go, Terrance Cain, who was 7-1 as a starter last year, will step in against a UNLV team in its first season under former Montana coach Bobby Hauck.

KEY MATCHUP
Utah's offensive line vs. UNLV's defense. The Utes didn't allow a sack last week against Pitt. The Rebels didn't get a sack against Wisconsin in the season opener and allowed 278 rushing yards to the Badgers.

PLAYERS TO WATCH
UNLV: RB Ronnie Paulo. The defensive co-captain's senior season got off to a busy start last week with 11 tackles.
Utah: RB Matt Asiata. One week after Wisconsin bruiser John Clay averaged more than 7 yards per carry against UNLV, the Rebels face Utah's version in the 230-pound Asiata.

While playing at Marsing High in the shadow of Boise State, McClellin was used to running behind the offensive line at running back, not plowing through them as a defender. But McClellin accepted the role he was given.

"At first it was kind of difficult because I didn't know anything at all about playing on the defensive line," McClellin said. "But the coaches here are really good, and they helped me learn the position quickly.

I've learned so much throughout my career so far, and I feel like I've gotten a lot better."

Considering the fact that McClellin only had three sacks all of last season and nearly eclipsed that after one game to rank fifth in the country in that category means he is downplaying his improvement. But if you have a passing thought that maybe McClellin wishes he was running the ball again, he quickly dismisses it.

"When I got here, I didn't care where they put me," McClellin admits. "I just want to be a team player and play where they need me and just try to get better every day. I've definitely put a lot of effort into it."

With a little more effort at his current rate of progression, McClellin might move from playing in front of 200 people on Friday nights as a small school running back to an NFL draft pick playing on the grandest of stages. "I never thought I would be doing this, but it's really a lot of fun," McClellin said. "We've just got to go out there and keep performing."

The Broncos next chance comes a week from today as they visit Wyoming (6 p.m., CBS College).

Kuchar holds it together at Cog Hill

LEMONT, Ill. — Matt Kuchar was feeling terrible and playing even worse. He managed to hold himself together long enough Friday to salvage a 1-over 72 and share the lead with Charlie Wi in the BMW Championship.

Kuchar made four bogeys through eight holes to tumble down the leaderboard, then rallied with five birdies over his last 10 holes to catch Wi, who played in the morning and shot a 69.

They were at 6-under 136 and had a one-shot lead over Marc Leishman of Australia, whose 65 was the best of the day on a Cog Hill course that was getting a steady stream of criticism.

Tiger Woods, the defending champion and a five-time winner at Cog Hill, was resigned to the fact that the greens were not pure. He didn't make very many putts, threw in a double bogey for the second straight day and shot a 72, leaving him in a tie for 40th, nine shots behind.

It was the first time Woods opened with consecutive rounds over par at Cog Hill since he was an 18-year-old amateur.

"I made nothing today," he said. "I hit the ball a hell of a lot better than my score indicates."

The only score that matters — along with the number on his card — is his rank in the FedEx Cup standings. Woods is No. 51 and needs to finish around fifth at Cog Hill week to qualify for the Tour Championship in two weeks.

Kuchar already has reservations at East Lake. He is No. 1 in the standings having won the playoff opener, and it doesn't hurt that he's tied for the lead going into the weekend.

How much longer he lasts remains the question.

Kuchar, who first thought he had laryngitis, isn't sure whether he has a viral or bacterial infection. All he knows is that he barely had enough strength to stay upright in warm afternoon temperatures, much less concentrate on the shot at hand.

A trio of Englishmen — Ian Poulter (72), Paul Casey (69) and Luke Donald (70) — were among those at 4-under 138, a group that also included Dustin Johnson (70) and two-time U.S. Open champion Retief Goosen (71).

A year ago, the 36-hole leaders were at 7-under 135, and Woods went on to win by eight shots at 19-under par. A score like that seems unlikely on greens that are inconsistent because of summer heat and recent rain.

But it's not just the greens. Phil Mickelson, who shot a 71 and was at 1-over 143, has done little to hide his disdain of the Rees Jones makeover, and at one point Friday suggested that "I'm not good enough to play this course."

PRESSEL LEADS NW ARKANSAS CHAMPIONSHIP

ROGERS, Ark. — Morgan Pressel shot a 5-under 66 to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the NW Arkansas Championship.

Yani Tseng, Gloria Park and Na Yeon Choi opened with 67s. Michelle Wie, coming off a victory in the Canadian Women's Open, was another stroke back along with Suzann Pettersen, Janice Moodie, Danielle Downey and Jee Young Lee.

Pressel finished with birdies on Nos. 8 and 9 on the Pinnacle Country Club course. She's winless since the 2008 Kapalua LPGA Classic and also won the 2007 Kraft Nabisco Championship.

FUNK SHARES LEAD AT SONGDO CHAMPIONSHIP

INCHEON, South Korea — Fred Funk, Michael Allen and Jay Don Blake shot 3-under 69s to share the first-round lead in the Songdo Championship, the Champions Tour's first tournament in Asia.

John Cook and Sandy Lyle were a stroke back, and Bernhard Langer, a five time winner this year, opened with a 73. The start of play was delayed for 1 hour, 39 minutes after the course was hit with more than 2 inches of rain.

Pierzynski, Sox rally past Royals

CHICAGO — A.J. Pierzynski hit a go-ahead, two-run double with two out in the eighth inning and the Chicago White Sox rallied to beat the Kansas City Royals 4-3 on Friday night.

Chicago stopped a three-game slide and pulled within five games of AL Central-leading Minnesota, which lost 2-0 at Cleveland.

J.J. Putz (7-5) pitched a scoreless eighth inning to get the win and rookie Chris Sale worked the ninth for his second save.

RAYS 9, BLUE JAYS 8

TORONTO — Evan Longoria scored the go-ahead run on a throwing error by shortstop Yunel Escobar in the ninth inning and Tampa Bay beat the Blue Jays after blowing a seven-run lead.

B.J. Upton and Ben Zobrist hit solo homers for the Rays, who won for just the second time in six games.

ORIOLES 6, TIGERS 3

DETROIT — Matt Wieters hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, atoning for an earlier error, and Baltimore beat the Tigers.

The game marked the reunion of Tigers starter Armando Galarraga and umpire Jim Joyce. It was the first time they had been involved in the same game since Joyce's missed call with two outs in the ninth cost Galarraga a perfect game on June 2.

INDIANS 2, TWINS 0

CLEVELAND — Fausto Carmona pitched a three-hitter for his first shutout in more than two years, slowing Minnesota's September surge.

Carmona (12-14) had lost his last six decisions, falling 1-0 in a complete-game start against Seattle his last time out. The right-hander dominated the Twins, who just completed an 8-1 homestand and lost for only the second time in nine games this month.

NATIONAL LEAGUE CUBS 4, BREWERS 0

MILWAUKEE — Carlos Zambrano pitched three-hit ball into the ninth inning and drove in a run, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 4-0 win over the Milwaukee Brewers on Friday night.

Zambrano (8-6) won his fifth straight decision since returning to the rotation Aug. 9 after serving a suspension for a dugout outburst in June. He pitched three games out of the bullpen before resuming his starting duties. Zambrano tied a season high with nine strikeouts and walked three in 8 2-3 innings. The right-hander has 32 strikeouts and 10 walks in his last four starts.

REDS 4, PIRATES 3, 12 INNINGS CINCINNATI

FRANCISCO Cordero blew a two-run lead in the ninth, but the Cincinnati Reds recovered on Jonny Gomes' bases-loaded grounder in the 12th inning Friday night, getting a slump-busting 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The NL Central leaders had dropped a season-high five in a row, whittling their lead over St. Louis from eight to five games.

PHILLIES 8, METS 4

NEW YORK — Roy Halladay earned his 18th victory, the most by a Philadelphia pitcher in 27 years, and hit a two-run single to lead the Phillies past the New York Mets 8-4 Friday night for their fourth straight win.

Ryan Howard and Chase Utley homered as the NL East leaders held their one-game edge over Atlanta. Wilson Valdez, subbing for injured shortstop Jimmy Rollins, drove in two runs.

BRAVES 8, CARDINALS 6

ATLANTA — The Braves scored six runs in the sixth inning, sending 10 hitters to the plate and taking advantage of a dropped fly ball by right fielder Jon Jay to rally.

Atlanta fell behind 4-1, giving up a two-run homer to Matt Holliday and a two more RBIs to Chris Carpenter (15-6), who had a run-scoring single and the second homer of his career. Atlanta won for just the third time in nine games.

MARLINS 3, NATIONALS 1

WASHINGTON — Alex Sanabia (4-2) allowed three hits in 6 2-3 scoreless but peaceful innings in the first meeting between the teams since they brawled Sept. 1.

Sanabia (4-2) will start a three-game suspension Saturday for his part in a fight that caused Major League Baseball to discipline six players, both managers and a coach.

Clijsters beats Venus in Open semis

NEW YORK (AP) — After trailing for much of the third set, Venus Williams suddenly was right back in the thick of her U.S. Open semifinal against Kim Clijsters, serving at 4-all, 30-all.

At that moment Friday night, it didn't appear to matter that the 30-year-old Williams was bidding to become the oldest woman to win a Grand Slam title in two decades. Or that she arrived at Flushing Meadows coming off a left knee injury that meant she hadn't played a match in more than two months.

Then came two pivotal points. First, Williams double-faulted for the seventh time, giving Clijsters a break point. Next, Clijsters curled a perfect backhand lob over the 6-foot-1 Williams to go ahead 5-4.

Williams stopped chasing and watched the ball fall, then hung her head. And that, basically, was that. Defending champion Clijsters held on, winning 4-6, 7-6(2), 6-4 to extend her U.S. Open winning streak to 20 matches and return to the final.

"I just wish," Williams said, "I could have played the bigger points a little better."

She is 52-2 after taking the first set at the U.S. Open — and both of those losses came against Clijsters, who will face No. 7-seeded Vera Zvonareva of Russia in Saturday night's final. If Clijsters wins the championship, she will be the first woman with two consecutive U.S. Open titles since Williams in 2000-01.

AP photo

Kim Clijsters celebrates after beating Venus Williams 4-6, 7-6(2), 6-4 in the semifinal round of play at the U.S. Open tennis tournament in New York on Friday.

"Obviously, this is what you try to achieve," said the second-seeded Clijsters, also the 2005 U.S. Open champion. "I never expected I'd come back in this position. I was trying to do it. It wasn't easy, but I stuck with it."

Earlier Friday, Zvonareva reached her second Grand Slam final in a row by upsetting top-seeded Caroline Wozniacki of Denmark 6-4, 6-3. A year ago in New York, Clijsters — playing in only the third tournament of her return after more than two seasons away from the tour — beat Wozniacki in the final, after getting past Williams' younger sister, Serena, in the semifinals. The latter match forever will be remembered for Serena's racket-shaking, expletive-laden outburst at the lineswoman who made a late foot-fault ruling.

On Friday, Serena was in the stands at Arthur Ashe Stadium. She is ranked No. 1 and would have been considered a heavy favorite to win the title, but withdrew from the tournament because of a foot injury. So there she was, sitting in her sister's guest box, occasionally applauding or offering words of encouragement.

Things looked good for the older Williams at the start. She converted the first set's only break point while winning 20 of 25 points on her serve and getting the better of Clijsters during lengthy baseline exchanges with powerful strokes from both.

Title contenders can go for broke at Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Jeff Burton is one of five title contenders yet to visit Victory Lane this season. With one event remaining in NASCAR's "regular season," he has a clear game plan for tonight's race at Richmond International Raceway.

"I don't believe that it is in your best interest to turn it off this weekend because in theory (the race) doesn't count," Burton said Friday. "I believe it is in our best interest to turn it up and be on kill when this race starts."

There were several strategies emerging Friday among the 10 drivers already locked into the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship field. With nothing to lose before the title-deciding format begins next weekend at New Hampshire, drivers have the rare opportunity to go for broke Saturday night.

Should a championship-contender end the night on top, he'll pocket the final 10 bonus points available to be used in seeding the Chase field.

For Jimmie Johnson and Denny Hamlin, the series leaders with five wins each, a victory would break the tie and make one of them the definitive top seed. Series points leader Kevin Harvick and Kyle Busch, three-time winners this season, could cut their deficit to only 10 points.

Everyone else could simply gain ground on the two leaders as they roll into the 10-race Chase.

Like Burton, Jeff Gordon is winless this season. Although he's second in the standings, he'll drop down to a tie for last with Burton, Carl Edwards, Matt Kenseth and, assuming he locks down the 12th playoff position, Clint Bowyer at the start of the Chase.

Mired in a career-worst 54-race winless streak, Gordon wants that win Saturday night.

"We're just trying to get that all-important momentum and those bonus points going into the Chase," Gordon said. "We're sitting here with a great year so far, but definitely eager to get that win and trying to be patient about it."

For the first time since the 2004 inception of the Chase, there's very little drama surrounding the 26th and final qualifying race. Only the final two positions remain unclaimed, and Biffle needs only to finish 42nd to lock down his spot.

AP photo
Driver Jeff Burton sits in his car as he waits to practice for Sunday's Emory Healthcare 500 NASCAR Sprint Cup Series auto race at Atlanta Motor Speedway in Hampton, Ga., Saturday.

Bowyer has more work to do, but can clinch the final spot by finishing 28th or better. Considering it's a great track for Bowyer — his career-worst finish at Richmond was 18th in May, 2009 — he doesn't have much to worry about Saturday night.

He has a 117-point lead over 13th-place driver Ryan Newman.

"That's a pretty good pad," Bowyer said. "We've just got to go out, with any luck at all, we'll be in this thing. If we're not, I'd say it was not meant to be. This is an important race track for us. It is one of my best race tracks."

That lack of suspense surrounding the Chase field has raised speculation that Saturday night could shape up as a classic race. The "boys, have at it," policy has already spurred aggressive racing this season, and the lack of consequences for 10 drivers could inspire a go-for-broke attitude.

EDWARDS WINS POLE FOR RICHMOND

RICHMOND, Va. — Carl Edwards will start from the pole position in the final race of NASCAR's "regular season" on Saturday night at Richmond International Raceway.

The Roush-Fenway Racing driver turned a fast lap at 127.762 mph in qualifying Friday night. He edged Juan Pablo Montoya, whose lap came at 127.455 mph.

The pole is the sixth of Edwards' career and his second this season, and it puts him in prime position to go for broke in one of the few stress-free races of the season.

"There's really no pressure," said Edwards, winless since the 2008 season finale. "It's just go out and have fun and try not to run into Clint Bowyer or one of those guys that's got a lot on the line."

A.J. Allmendinger earned the No. 3 starting spot, followed by Bowyer and David Reutimann for the final race before NASCAR begins its 10-race Chase for the championship.

The starting spot is especially important for Bowyer, who holds down the No. 12 spot in the standings and needs only to finish 28th or better to secure a spot in the Chase.

While having fun on the track, Edwards does have the opportunity to improve his Chase position, as do all the others already locked into the 12-driver field for the title push. Each victory is worth 10 bonus points when they reset the field for the playoffs.

HARVICK WINS NATIONWIDE RACE AT RICHMOND

RICHMOND, Va. — Kevin Harvick passed Brad Keselowski for the lead with just over 50 laps to go Friday night and won the NASCAR Nationwide Series race at Richmond.

Harvick earned his third victory of the season and the 37th of his career in the series, spoiling an otherwise remarkable performance by Keselowski, the series points leader.

Hampered by interference on pit road that caused him to park awkwardly in his stall under a green flag, Keselowski went two laps down before the midpoint of the 250-lap event at Richmond International Raceway. He then rallied and was running third when a caution flag came out with 46 laps to go. He emerged third after the leaders pitted, but came up short.

Trevor Bayne was third, followed by Ricky Stenhouse Jr. and Reed Sorenson.

No. 23 West Virginia needs OT to beat Marshall

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — No. 23 West Virginia rallied from 15 points down in the fourth quarter to force overtime and Tyler Bitancurt's 20-yard field goal in the first extra session lifted the Mountaineers to a 24-21 victory over Marshall on Friday night.

Brian Anderson threw three touchdown passes for Marshall (1-1) and the Thundering Herd appeared to have the outcome in hand after jumping ahead 21-6 early in the fourth.

West Virginia (1-1) twice drove more than 90 yards for a touchdown down the stretch, including Geno Smith's 5-yard TD toss to Will Johnson with 12 seconds left.

Vandals

more aware of the differences between the two schools than Enderle. He was raised in North Platte, Neb., and was courted late in the recruiting process by then-Nebraska coach Bill Callahan.

By the time Callahan and his staff approached Enderle, he had enrolled at Idaho a semester early and saw no need to ditch the Vandals.

"Certainly he understands the atmosphere (in Lincoln)," Vandals coach Robb Akey said. "He understands there's one team and only one team that matters in the entire universe of football coming out of the state of Nebraska, and that is Nebraska. They are the NFL, they are everything."

Before preparations for the Cornhuskers began, Akey spoke with Enderle about not getting overly amped up for a return to his home state. Yet Akey acknowledged his talk with the always-steady Enderle only took place because "that's my job as head football coach."

"I don't believe for a minute that's the way Nate Enderle is going to be," Akey said.

If anything, today's non-conference matchup will be a barometer of how much the Vandals have progressed in the last year-plus. They collected eight wins last year and drubbed North Dakota in their opener last week, but have yet to topple or even threaten a highly regarded opponent in that time.

"I'm sure they view it as a good tune-up game to go into their season," senior safety Shiloh Keo said, "and that's a big thing for us — a big chip on our shoulders. We want to go in there and make a statement, not to just to ourselves, to Vandal Nation."

A key to keeping Nebraska's offense in check will be how Idaho handles prized redshirt freshman quarterback Taylor Martinez. He rushed for 127 yards in his debut last week while garnering praise from coach Bo Pelini for his "steady, mature approach."

The Vandals have been torched by shifty dual-threat quarterbacks in recent years, most notably Nevada's Colin Kaepernick.

"This guy is good, just like Kaepernick is a very good player," Akey said. "There are a lot of similarities there, and this guy really lit the place up (last week)."

Another concern is providing quality protection for Enderle against a Husker defense that ranked second nationally last year in sacks. The Vandals surrendered four sacks in the first half last week before resolving alignment and communication problems between four new starters along the offensive line.

"It's part of growing up, it's part of gaining experience," Akey said. "And fortunately that happened against (North Dakota). Hopefully we won't let any of these guys from Nebraska come running free because they're a little bigger, faster. It's going to hurt more."

Jerry Rice (4) is tailed by Johnny Pierre (38) heading into tonight's final event for the Maverik Intermountain Pro Trucks. Rice leads the series by 23 points.

Championships on the line tonight for MVS drivers

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

The dream of a championship that was sparked in April is about to be realized for four drivers as the 2010 season at Magic Valley Speedway wraps up tonight for the Mr. Gas Late Models, NAPA Street Stocks, Quale's Electronics Jr. Stingers and the Maverik Intermountain Pro Trucks.

After an Aug. 28 win for Late Models driver Rick Fowble, he leads Mike Greco by 117 points in the standings. With that championship basically in the bag for Fowble, Greco finds himself in a race for the runner-up spot with a 16-point advantage over Kris McKean.

For the top two in the Maverik Intermountain Pro Trucks Series, however, the contest is much closer. Separated by just 23 points, Jerry Rice and Johnny Pierre will face-off today for the 2010 championship title.

"I am usually Mr. Second Place," Rice said of his past bids for the top spot. "I have been close to a championship before but something always happens right at the end. I am expecting that something will happen any time now, it always does. But this time I think I just basically have to be able to start the main and I should have it."

Pierre did try one last ploy on Rice.

"He stopped by the other day and told me not to bother to show up because the races were rained out already," Rice reported.

Pierre is in the same scenario he was last season, sitting second in the standings.

"We're closer than we were last year but I need to Quale's Electronics Hornets: 1. Ty Garibay, Andy Brennan (tie) 1,436, 3. Jeff Peck 1,415, 4. Bob Gilligan 5. Brandon Mortensen 1,249.

Quale's Jr. Stingers: 1. Russell Dalton 797, 2. Doug Brownfield 790, 3. Jason Quale 487, 4. Kristan Gillogly 696, 5. Brandon Greco 317.

Intermountain Pro Trucks: 1. Jerry Rice 533, 2. Johnny Pierre 510, 3. Kent Jensen 438, 4. Scott Luttmr 433, 5. Alan Larson 412.

Stingers series. Russell Dalton, 13, and Doug Brownfield, 15, are as different as night and day in physical stature, but behind the wheel just seven points separate them in the standings. Both know they are headed for a hotly contested fight to the finish on a small track that is not conducive to passing.

"It's real tight corners and not long straight-aways. You kind of have to wait for another person to make a mistake to capitalize on it," Brownfield said. "But I have to put it all on the line. It's my last race and I'm going for it all."

Dalton knows other players such as Jason Quale, main-event winner Aug. 28, can also factor into his bid for the title.

"I really need to drive with my head because (Brownfield's) a good competitor and so is Quale," Dalton said. "I really have a challenge. But I just have to go out there and race my hardest to try to get that championship. I just have to do my best and finish in front."

NAPA Street Stocks driver John Newell should defend his 2009 title with a 70-point advantage over Casey Pehrson. Pehrson, who recently won his first main-event race of the season, will look to get back in Victory Lane as well as force Newell's hand at staying out of trouble.

The Brennan's Carpet Pony Stocks and Vintage Sprints are also on tonight's agenda. The Sprint cars will be making their final appearance of the season at MVS, while the Pony Stocks' championship is set for Sept. 18.

Gates open at 4 p.m., green flag racing begins at 6.

have a whole lot of help," Pierre said. "It's still possible but if (Rice) shows up and runs the main event he'll wrap it up. But we're going to go out there and give 'um hell. A main-event win here at home sure would be good, so we're going to go out and race as hard as we can and go for the win."

The closest battle going into this evening's championship showdown involves the young drivers in the Quale's Electronics Jr.

Colts hope to write new chapter on Super Bowl hex

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Caldwell knows how tough life can be for Super Bowl losers.

Recent history shows they don't win as many games the next season, they don't make it back to the playoffs and they certainly don't get a second shot at the Lombardi Trophy. It's all there in black and white, for anyone who cares to look: Seven of the last nine missed the playoffs, and none reached the Super Bowl the next year.

Yet Caldwell, coach of the defending AFC champs, thinks this year might be different.

"I have taken a look at it and we have taken a few precautions," Indy's second-year coach said. "The other thing is, looking back at this group, they have always found a way to bounce back from tough losses."

Indy clearly appears better-positioned to avoid the year-after fate than other teams.

With the only four-time MVP in league history still in his prime and the deepest receiving corps of his career, the offense should continue to score points by the dozens. With all 11 defensive starters and Bob Sanders healthy for the first time in three years, the Colts could have their best defense in the Peyton Manning era, too.

But Indy is not the first team to think the Super Bowl hex doesn't apply to them.

Take the 2008 Patriots. The three-time Super Bowl winners were coming off a perfect 16-0 season and had the reigning MVP in Tom Brady — for less than one half. He tore his ACL in Week 1, the Pats wound up 10-6 and missed the playoffs.

Then there's the case of the 2002 Rams. The Greatest Show on Turf had produced three straight MVP-winning seasons and played in two Super Bowl in three years. They were derailed by injuries to Marshall Faulk and Kurt Warner and started 0-5. St. Louis still hasn't recovered.

The Salvation Army serves children, others all year long

You see them outside retail stores during the holidays, ringing bells. But what do members of the Salvation Army do the rest of the year?

Preach the word of Christ, of course, in word and deed.

"We're a church, we have our own congregation," said Maj. Eddie Patterson of The Salvation Army in Twin Falls. "But we don't believe in just going to church, but putting faith into practical application."

There's nothing more practical or more Christian than providing food, clothing and hope to those in need, according to staff and volunteers at the Twin Falls location. And that's exactly what they do.

"We have a big program here," Patterson told the Times-News during a recent tour of the facility. He's grateful that a dour economy hasn't lessened the generosity of community donors, though it has increased the number of people who need help.

Between 175 and 200 people come to the Twin Falls branch every day seeking some kind of help, he said, whether it be through a free noon meal, loaves of bread or clothing, or children who participate in the facility's after-school program.

The church is serious about helping the community's youth, said Business Manager Nicki Kroese.

"Parents have to work, and children need some place to stay," she said.

There's currently 27 registered elementary school-age children in the program, but youth director Elisa Cervantes said that number will likely increase as the school year goes on.

On Thursday, some kids sat on sofas doing homework, others participated in a craft project — making small cars out of rubber erasers.

"We do a lot of games and projects," said Julian Pena, 11, noting that he enjoys associating with his peers. "It's fun."

Ascension welcomes new pastor

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Deborah Seles grew up with a desire to minister to others, but there was one problem: the Roman Catholic Church doesn't ordain women ministers, and Seles was Catholic.

When she soul-searched after being introduced to the Episcopal Church in her native Illinois, her life began to change.

Now, several years later, she's leading a 300-member congregation at Ascension Episcopal Church in Twin Falls. On Sunday, the church and Bishop of Idaho Brian Thom will host an installation service for Seles.

Seles grew up in Chicago, and started attending Seabury-Western Theological Seminary in Evanston, Ill. She graduated with a master's of divinity in 2002, and since then has led several parishes in the Chicago suburbs.

She was attracted to Twin Falls because of its people, she says.

"It seemed like the people in this parish had a good sense of humor," she said. "And the parishioners are involved in any number of service organizations in the community. I really liked that combination."

Seles, 58, came to Ascension in June and says she has many goals for her ministry.

"As involved as the parish is, there's even more needs in the Twin community," Seles said. "My hope is to really focus on the things that people at Ascension enjoy doing and are passionate about doing, and to increase the level of involvement of the parish. And, obviously, getting to know the community is a personal goal of mine."

She has plans to get involved with the Leadership Development Program of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, so she can get a

Worship times

Deborah Seles will be installed at 4 p.m. Sunday as the new pastor of Ascension Episcopal Church, 371 Eastland Dr. N., Twin Falls. The church holds "Wiggle Worship" at 9 a.m. Sundays, a short service for children up to 7 years old. Regular service is 8 and 10 a.m., and Sunday school at 9:45 a.m. Information: 733-1248.

better sense of the area's needs and concerns. She also wants to do more ecumenical activities with area churches.

"I think any time groups can get together and talk about each other and learn about each other and themselves and the world, is a good thing," she said.

Seles' husband, Emory, died in 1999; it was he who introduced her to the Episcopal Church.

"I was a bit of a skeptic," she said, "and it took me a long time to realize that the church welcomes questions. You don't have to have everything set in stone. I got very comfortable with the people and the philosophy."

She hopes others will feel the same when they visit Ascension.

Something her congregants might not know — or maybe they do because of her quick sense of humor — is that Seles does stand-up comedy.

"I do stand-up and improv," she said with a laugh. "One of these days I'm going to visit Shot in the Dark and treat Twin Falls with one of my stand-up routines."

As difficult as the dating scene might be, Seles said, it's even more difficult for a widowed minister.

"You should see some of the looks I get," she said.

Afghans protest, Florida pastor plans to meet N.Y. imam

By Antonio Gonzalez
Associated Press writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — As thousands of Afghans protested a tiny Florida church's plan to burn the Muslim holy book, the church's pastor said he won't follow through with the burning if he's able to meet today with the organizers behind a mosque planned near ground zero in New York.

In Afghanistan, at least 11 people were injured Friday in protests.

Police in the northern province of Badakhshan said several hundred demonstrators ran toward a NATO compound where four attackers and five police were injured in clashes. Protesters also burned an American flag at a mosque after Friday prayers. In western Farah province, police said two people were injured in another protest.

Pakistani lawyers burn a U.S. flag Thursday while rallying in reaction to a small American church's plan to burn copies of the Quran in Multan, Pakistan.

Speaking to NBC's "Today" show, the Rev. Terry Jones said if he meets with the imam in New York, he won't burn the Quran. It wasn't clear if he meant the burning would be halted indefinitely or just for today. Imam Muhammad Musri, the president of the Islamic Society of Central Florida, told CBS' "The Early Show" he had a commitment for Jones and himself to meet in New York with the imam there.

City officials in Gainesville said Friday that no matter what Jones says he'll do, they planned to stick with their plan to increase security in response to the event.

Earlier, Jones and Musri had disagreed sharply on the terms of their agreement.

Jones said Thursday he would call off the planned burning of Qurans based on a deal negotiated with Musri that the location of a mosque planned near ground zero in New York would be changed.

But Musri said he was clear on Thursday when he told Jones that he could only set up a meeting with planners of the New York City mosque. Jones responded by suggesting that he would go forward with his plan on Saturday after all.

"We are just really shocked," Jones said of Musri. "He clearly, clearly lied to us."

For U.S. political leaders and Muslims around the world who have been outraged by Jones' antics, the on-again, off-again threat bred even more frustration.

Cleric Rusli Hasbi told 1,000 worshippers attending Friday morning prayers in Indonesia, the world's most populous Muslim country, that whether or not he burns the Quran, Jones had already "hurt the heart of the Muslim world."

"If he'd gone through with it, it would have been tantamount to war," the cleric said in the coastal town of Lhokseumawe. "A war that would have rallied Muslims all over the world."

become a problem in society, and if they can help teach children and their parents about proper eating and exercise habits it may help fend off the disease for some potential victims.

The Salvation Army operates with a 90 percent volunteer staff, Kroese said. The Twin Falls branch — the only one in the Magic Valley, she said — has 10 paid employees, and in August had 227 volunteers. That number increases during the holidays, Kroese said.

The Salvation Army was founded by William Booth in 1865 in London, England. At the time, according to Patterson, people treated their horses better than they treated each other.

Booth, a Christian minister, sought to change that by helping lift those down on their luck. He gave up his pulpit and started serving those on the streets where he could reach the homeless and down-trodden.

"His original aim was to send converts to established churches of the day, but soon he realized that the poor did not feel comfortable or welcome in the pews of most of the churches and chapels of Victorian England," according to The Salvation Army website. "Regular churchgoers were appalled when these shabbily dressed, unwashed people came to join them in worship. Booth decided to found a church especially for them — the East London Christian Mission." In 1878, Booth declared the church was to be a "volunteer army."

The Salvation Army, a Protestant-based church, first came to the United States in 1891 in New York City. It's been a presence in the Magic Valley since 1906. Patterson, who's been with the organization for 42 years and is an ordained minister, said his title of major is the same as pastor. They only use military titles because of the "Army" in the church's name.

On Sundays, he holds a non-denominational worship service where about 35 people attend. Everyone is welcome, he said.

Back in the recreation area, 10-year-old Kellie Evans showed off her newly made eraser cars. She had a fun time making them.

"I like all my friends here, and I love all my leaders," Evans said. She said she also enjoys learning about Jesus.

A large message from the Book of Mark is painted on the room's wall, reminding children of a life lesson: "Have faith in God," it reads.

Pebley will speak in sacrament meeting at 9 a.m. Sunday at the Rupert 7th Ward Church, 324 E. 18th St. in Rupert.

He is the son of Michael and Dawn Pebley of Rupert.

Elder Michael Mittelsteadt has returned from serving in the Georgia Atlanta Mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Mittelsteadt will speak in sacrament meeting at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at the Paul 2nd Ward Church, 424 W. Ellis.

His parents are Gary and Lynette Mittelsteadt of Paul.

Elder Michael Chesley and Sister Christine Tilby Chesley

have returned from serving a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Ukraine Dnepropetrovsk Mission. They served 18 months in the southern Ukraine bordering the Black Sea.

Elder Chesley is the former superintendent of the Cassia County School District.

They will speak in sacrament meeting at 2:45 p.m. Sunday at the Pella 2nd Ward Church, 152 W. 400 S. of Burley.

Elder Blaine James has been called to serve a two-year mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Colorado Denver South Mission.

James will speak in sacrament meeting at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Burley 2nd Ward Church, 515 E. 16th St. in Burley.

He is an Eagle Scout and graduate of Burley High School. He will enter the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah, on Wednesday. He is the son of Billie Ann James and Bruce and Guylia James, all of Burley.

To submit information about missionaries, contact Ellen Thomason at 735-3266, or send email to ellen@magicvalley.com. Deadline is 5 p.m. Wednesday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Crowds threaten Sistine Chapel

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican Museums chief warned that dust and polluting agents brought into the Sistine Chapel by thousands of tourists every day risk one day endangering its priceless artworks.

Antonio Paolucci told the newspaper La Repubblica in comments published Thursday that in order to preserve Michelangelo's Last Judgment and the other treasures in the Sistine Chapel, new tools to control temperature and humidity must be studied and implemented.

Between 15,000 and 20,000 people a day, or over 4 million a year, visit the chapel where popes get elected, to admire its frescoes, floor mosaics and paintings.

"In this chapel people often invoke the Holy Spirit. But the people who fill this room every day aren't pure spirits," Paolucci told the newspaper.

"Such a crowd ... emanates sweat, breath, carbon dioxide, all sorts of dust," he said. "This deadly combination is moved around by winds and ends up on the walls, meaning on the artwork."

Paolucci said better tools were necessary to avoid "serious damage" to the chapel.

Visitors who want to see Leonardo da Vinci's "The Last Supper" in Milan must go through a filtration system to help reduce the work's exposure to dust and pollutants. This has made seeing da Vinci's masterpiece more difficult: 25 visitors are admitted every 15 minutes.

The Sistine Chapel, featuring works by Michelangelo, Botticelli and Perugino, underwent a massive restoration that ended in the late 1990s.

Mosque opens peacefully near synagogue, church

By Kathy Matheson
Associated Press writer

BERWYN, Pa. — A new mosque recently opened in this well-to-do suburb of Philadelphia, but not many people noticed.

That was fine with leaders of the Islamic Society of Greater Valley Forge. Amid a tense national climate for U.S. Muslims, they did not seek publicity for the happy occasion, only continued peace with their neighbors: a Jewish synagogue next door and Baptist church across the street.

The Muslims' good relations with other faiths and the town at large offers a stark contrast to American communities torn by anti-Islamic acts, including arson at the site of a planned mosque in Tennessee and a threatened Quran burning in Florida.

In New York, debate rages over a planned Islamic center and mosque near ground zero. And everywhere tensions are heightened because Friday's joyous Muslim celebration of Eid al-Fitr falls a day before the somber ninth anniversary of 9/11.

But in Tredyffrin Township, about 20 miles northwest of Philadelphia, community members say a tradition of religious tolerance, combined with an educated population and small-town friendliness, have yielded years of harmonious coexistence.

"We have much more in common than not in common," mosque president Mohammad Aziz said. "We are blessed with very good neighbors."

Township officials conceded some trepidation among residents when the Islamic Society sought construction permits in 2008. The growing Sunni group planned to build on land behind the small house it had used as a mosque since 1994.

Most concerns were standard zoning issues like parking, traffic and stormwater runoff. But the concept of a mosque was jarring to some, despite Muslims having long worshipped at the site, said Judy DiFilippo, a township supervisor for 20 years until her retirement in January.

"It was something brand new to the community. Even though they were using an existing building, it wasn't an obvious mosque," DiFilippo said.

The plans were approved; construction and fundraising began in earnest, capped by the mosque opening on June 5. DiFilippo said there have been no problems, which she attributed to an "underlying theme of tolerance that just comes with this community."

Yossi Kaplan, a Lubavitch rabbi at Chabad Jewish Center next door, said he was approached by people seeking his opposition to the project — but waved them off. The two faiths were enjoying solid relations, to the point where they shared parking lots and Muslims helped with tasks that Jews cannot perform on the Sabbath.

The rabbi expected nothing less from his neighbors, regardless of religion. This is America, Kaplan said, and this is how it's supposed to be.

"We're just good friends. We're really good neighbors," he said. "There's never been any issues."

The United States has seen a 58 percent increase in the number of mosques over the past decade, from 1,200 to roughly 1,900, according to Ihsan Bagby, a professor of Islamic studies at the University of Kentucky and a researcher on American mosques.

Yet many U.S. mosques are repurposed buildings, retrofitted to accommodate ritual washing areas and separate entrances for men and women. Sometimes they require odd configurations for prayer so worshippers can face Mecca.

Muslims consider the book the sacred word of God and insist it be treated with the utmost respect.

In Afghanistan, where tens of thousands of U.S. troops are in harm's way, President Hamid Karzai said he heard Jones had perhaps abandoned his Quran-burning plan.

"The holy book is implanted in the hearts and minds of all the Muslims," Karzai said. "Humiliation of the holy book represents the humiliation of our people. I hope that this decision will be stopped and should never have been considered."

Previously, Jones had not invoked the mosque controversy as a reason for his planned protest at his Dove World Outreach Center. Instead, he cited his belief that the Quran is evil because it espouses something other than biblical truth and incites radical, violent behavior among Muslims.

Opponents of the New York City mosque argue it is insensitive to families and memories of Sept. 11 victims to build a mosque so close to where Islamic extremists flew planes into the World Trade Center and killed nearly 2,800 people. Proponents say the project reflects religious freedom and diversity and that hatred of Muslims is fueling the opposition.

President Barack Obama urged Jones to listen to "those better angels," saying that besides endangering Pastor Terry Jones, right, of the Dove World Outreach Center speaks to the media on Thursday, telling them that he is not going to burn the Quran today, provided the proposed Mosque near the 9-11 site be moved. Standing with pastor Jones is Imam Muhammad Musri of the Islamic Society of Central Florida.

lives, it would give Islamic terrorists a recruiting tool. Defense Secretary Robert Gates took the extraordinary step of calling Jones personally.

Outside London's Central Mosque across from Regent's Park, worshippers chatted, fed geese or posed for pictures Friday by the children's boating pond. Those interviewed about the threatened Quran burning seemed more upset by the media coverage of it than the threat itself.

Medhat Singab, a 47-year-old Egyptian-born Briton, said the media was making a circus of "a church with 30 followers and an idiot."

"They can go on burning the Quran," he said. "It's not going to destroy Islam."

Jamal Ali, 17, said he was talking about the issue with his friends on his way to the mosque. The Sudaneseborn student said he thought rowdy protests weren't the right reaction.

Iraq's top Shiite cleric Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani said the intent to burn copies of the Quran is Jones' "expression of hatred of Islam" but called on Muslims to restrain their reactions and not offend Christians in any way.

"This disgraceful act contradicts the very duties of religious and spiritual leadership to enhance the value of peaceful coexistence and safeguard the rights and mutual respect among religions," al-Sistani said in a statement posted on his website Friday.

Jones' church, which has about 50 members, is independent of any denomination. It follows the Pentecostal tradition, which teaches that the Holy Spirit can manifest itself in the modern day.

Muslims see burning of Quran as threat to God's word

CAIRO (AP) — The Quran is the most sacred object in the daily lives of Muslims and burning it would be considered an offense against God.

Islam teaches that the holy book is the direct word of God, received by the Prophet Muhammad through the angel Gabriel, and it defines the belief and conduct for followers of the religion.

The Quran is so important in the faith that Islamic teaching spells out how it should be handled, including directing anyone who touches it to be in a state of ritual purity. Muslims can only burn or bury Qurans that have been damaged or corrupted to prevent God's word from being defiled.

Concern about Muslim sensitivities has prompted the White House, religious leaders and others to call on the leader of a small Florida church that espouses anti-Islam philosophy, the Rev. Terry Jones, to call off a threat to burn copies of the Quran on Sept. 11.

The Quran was considered a miracle because Muham-mad — who was illiterate — was chosen by God to convey his final message to humanity over a period of 23 years, according to Islamic beliefs.

Muhammad's companions memorized the Quran and wrote it down. It was only made in its current form in a collection of 114 Suras, or verses, after the prophet's death in 632.

The Quran to Muslims is the final word of God after a series of revelations, starting with Adam, going through Abraham, Moses and Jesus and ending with Muhammad.

"Muslims believe the Quran is the divine word of God, in letter and meaning," Abdel-Moeti Bayoumi, a religious scholar at Cairo's prominent Islamic Al-Azhar University, said. "If a human burns the revealed word of God, this would be considered the gravest crime for all Muslims."

News of the possible cancellation also was welcomed by Jones' neighbors in Gainesville, a city of 125,000 anchored by the sprawling University of Florida campus. At least two dozen Christian churches, Jewish temples and Muslim organizations in the city had mobilized to plan inclusive events, including Quran readings at services, as a counterpoint to Jones' protest.

Jones said at the news conference that he prayed about the decision and concluded that if the mosque was moved, it would be a sign from God to call off the Quran burning.

Part of the pressure exerted on Jones came from Gates who briefly spoke to the pastor before his first announcement to call it off. Gates expressed "his grave concern that going forward with this Quran burning would put the lives of our forces at risk, especially in Iraq and Afghanistan," Pentagon spokesman Geoff Morrell said.

Methodist Church sets new schedule

The new schedule for Twin Falls First United Methodist Church will begin Sunday.

Christian Education starts at 9 a.m.; worship begins at 10 a.m., and fellowship time will be at 11:15 a.m.

Classes for ages preschool through 14 will meet at 9 a.m. in the classrooms and then move to the sanctuary to attend the first portion of worship as a group. They will then be dismissed to sit with their parents or to go to the nursery. Teachers are Ericka Lickley and Molly Breland for ages 3 to 5 and Dawn Bunn and Jamie Gray for elementary/tween ages.

The Rev. Philip Airhart will lead several short-term daytime studies throughout the year.

A new disciple class, "Christian Believer;" is being offered by Cathy Poppino and Ted Deetz. This 30-week study will cover scripture and a variety of Christian writings from early church history to statements of faith to hymns. All of these writings were used to share the language of faith throughout the history of Christianity, and they all bring to us an understanding of who we are when we state that we are Christians. The first gathering will be at 2 p.m. Sunday. A scheduled class time, either a Saturday or Sunday afternoon, will be determined at the first session. Anyone is welcome to participate.

The Second Sunday Dinner will be held after worship Sunday. The Needlewits will prepare lasagna (regular and vegetarian) and garlic bread. Those attending are asked to bring a salad or dessert. Donations will be welcomed and contributed to the local church's general fund.

Nursery care is available for pre-school age youngsters. Children are welcome in the sanctuary. The church building, located at 360 Shoshone St. E., is handicapped accessible.

Geraldine Marie Barber Warner

Geraldine Marie Barber Warner was born March 13, 1922, in Exeter, Neb., the middle child of three and only daughter of Elsie Christine Kraft, a former school teacher and homemaker, and Dr. John Nelson Barber, a veterinarian. She attended Doane College in Crete, Neb., a small Christian liberal arts college from 1939 to 1941, where she met her future husband, George William Warner. After two years, she transferred to the University of Nebraska, where George attended medical school, and she received her Bachelor of Arts degree in education in 1943. She taught school for one year in Milford, Neb., before she and George were married in Sioux City, Iowa, in 1944. Later she worked as a secretary during World War II on hospital wards and as an executive secretary in Denver, Colo., while her husband did his medical internship.

She and Dr. Warner had five children, Pamela Warner Hill, Diane Warner Conrad, Roger William Warner, and twins David Alan Warner and Douglas Bryan Warner. They moved to Twin Falls in 1951 from Denver, Colo., with their two daughters, and their three sons were born soon thereafter in Twin Falls.

Gerry was a devoted and proud member of the community for almost 60 years. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church, the South Central Medical Association Auxiliary and the Auxiliary to the American Society of Abdominal Surgeons. She served on the board of the YWCA and YFCA off and on for 25 years. She also served on the board of the Community Concert Association and the PTA. She was past president of the Chapter AI, PEO Sisterhood and was devoted to its opportunities to support young people in achieving their goals for higher education and future careers.

During the Olympic torch run in 1984, she acted as an "agent" for the torch bearer who carried the torch into Twin Falls, and she created and motivated most of the events surrounding the torch run into Twin Falls. For 10 years she also worked with a young man at CSI who taught world religions and together, they established a World Religions Day, Martin Luther King Day commemoration, and planted a Tree for Peace on the campus.

In 1979, she wrote a piece in commemoration of her son, Douglas's death called "Death and Its Victory." It was later critiqued by the late renowned mythologist, Joseph Campbell, which she said was one of her most humbling experiences.

In his poem, "Ode to a Grecian Urn," Percy Bysshe Shelley wrote: "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." Beauty was essential to Gerry's soul whether it be the beauty of nature in flowers, a sunset or the mountains or the beauty of the arts. She loved classical and popular music, painting, sculpture, color, form, interior design and especially fashion. She also enjoyed walking, cross-country skiing and hiking in the South Hills and Sawtooth Mountains. She and her husband loved spending time at their home in the Wood River Valley in Ketchum.

Sports were her other passion. Both she and her husband were avid supporters of the Twin Falls High School Bruins, the CSI Golden Eagles basketball and volleyball teams, and later the Idaho Vandals and Boise State Broncos. Her other hobbies included reading newspapers and magazines, writing poetry and personal essays, gourmet cooking and traveling, first to Europe with her daughter, Diane, in 1974, then later to the British Isles, China, Russia, Egypt, Morocco, the Canary Islands, the Caribbean, Mexico, the Hawaiian Islands and Canada with her husband, friends, and colleagues. Her travels allowed her to connect with people of all cultures and she believed in fostering the personal and educational growth of many foreign students, athletes, and professionals she met in Twin Falls. Gerry liked the politics of bringing two good forces together for the good of the whole. She was in contact with several of those foreign students and professionals whose lives she touched and whose dreams and aspirations she helped foster and encourage up until the end. Carmen Carbajal Martin from Mexico, Valentina Konstantin and Ruslan Chaplygin from Russia, Madeline Ritchie and Natalia Kortison from the Czech Republic were just a few of those friends.

Her other loves were seeing and spending time with her nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren scattered from Seattle to Colorado, Chicago and Dallas, Alex Hill (Lisa) and daughters, Elliana and Eva; Jan Hill (fiancé, Juan Mares), Jonathan Warner (Anne Marie) and daughters, Holly and Laura; Jason Warner (Beth), Catherine Short (Jordan) of Homewood, Ill.; Sarah and Kaitlin Conrad, and Natalie (fiancé, Curtis Gibbs) and Grant Warner. She loved keeping up with them, supporting and encouraging their activities, dreams, hopes and goals and enjoyed receiving their birthday and holiday cards and talking with them on the phone.

Before the ravages of the Sjogren's Syndrome stole all of her vitality and independence, she wrote that her life's mission was to try to make life better, nicer, kinder, healthier, prettier, happier, easier, quieter, more comfortable, more agreeable, more optimistic, more graceful, more welcome, more restful and more fun for others. She always hoped to lighten people's burdens and give them encouragement. She was very spiritual in nature and her writings tried to express hope and humility for all. How fortunate that in the past few months, many longtime friends and family from near and far made the effort to visit Gerry, Carmen Martin of Reno; Donna Jorlnin of Seattle; her granddaughter, Kaitie on her return from American Samoa; her grandson, Alex Hill, wife, Lisa and daughters, Ellie (4) and Eva (16 months) of Denver; and Wendy and Ken Eklund, TFHS class of '67 of Olympia, Wash.

Geraldine Barber Warner died peacefully at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center on Monday, Sept. 6, 2010, with her daughter, Pam, and son, Dave, by her side. She was preceded in death by her husband, George W. Warner MD; her son, Douglas Bryan Warner; her son-in-law, H. Douglas Hill; and her two brothers, Dr. Sterling Barber of Clear Lake, Iowa, and Arnold Barber of Spencer, Iowa.

The family expresses their gratitude and thanks to all her friends, caregivers and physicians who attended to her needs over the past several years. Their love, care, and concern kept her going long past what the family expected.

A memorial service will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 11, at the First Presbyterian Church. Memorial contributions may be made in Gerry's honor to the Dr. George Warner Memorial Nursing Scholarship, in care of the College of Southern Idaho Foundation, P.O. Box 1238, Twin Falls, ID 83303-1238.

Ayasha Saldana

Ayasha Rayne Sylvia Saldana departed from her father's arms and her mother's side Sunday, Sept. 5, 2010, before returning to heaven.

She was born Aug. 4, 2009, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Jamie and Na'Keya Saldana. Ayasha enriched our lives for 398 days before passing away at St. Luke's Medical Center in Boise, Idaho. We were blessed with this gift from God whom we named Ayasha. She held our hearts, filled out lives with love and joy, and helped to teach us life lessons. She was attracted to the color purple.

Ayasha was preceded in death by her great-great-grandfather, Raymond A. Reece; great-grandmother, Tyra L. Harms; and uncle, Saul Saldana Jr. Ayasha is survived by her parents, Jamie and Na'Keya Saldana; siblings, Iesha, Jamie Daniel, Takisha, Anastasia, Kyra, Danny and Sharlynn; grandparents, David Ray (Christina League); Tedd'E J. (Jeffrey) Salvatore, the Rev. Saul and Pompella Saldana; and numerous aunts; uncles, aunts and cousins.

Visitation will be from 4 to 7 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 12, and a celebration of Ayasha's life will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Sept. 13, at the Rosenau Funeral Home, 2826 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Rosenau Funeral Home to assist the family.

Don Williams

SHOSHONE — Don Williams, 91 years of age and longtime Shoshone resident, passed away Friday, Sept. 10, 2010.

He was preceded in death by sons, Donald and Scott. He will be loved and missed by his wife, Winnie; daughter, Dianne; and sons, Larry, David and Danny; 12 grandchildren; and a whole passel of great-grandchildren.

Don is retired from the BLM after 26 years of service; hunting, fishing and fixing up old tractors, coffee clubbing and BS-ing at the Manhattan Café were favorite pastimes. He was proud of his military service in World War II.

A celebration of Don's Life will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 12, at the Golden Years Senior Center in Shoshone.

AROUND IDAHO

Moyle switches on amendment

BOISE — A key Idaho lawmaker has withdrawn his backing for a state constitutional amendment aimed at letting public airports, including Boise's, finance projects like parking garages without first asking voters.

House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, supported the proposed amendment when it cleared the 2010 Legislature. But the change must still pass voter muster on Nov. 2, when Moyle now says he'll vote against it.

The reason for his change of mind: He doesn't think Boise should be using $60,000 in public money to pay for an education campaign on an issue its leaders support. Moyle contends it shows they can't be trusted to spend public money wisely.

"The problem I have with this one, you give them a new tool for their toolbox, and before they're even given it, they abuse the privilege," he said.

The anti-tax hawk from Boise's suburbs has tangled with the city's Democratic-leaning leaders including Mayor Dave Bieter regularly.

Earlier this year, he opposed the city's tentative plans for a new taxing district to fund a proposed 2.3 mile trolley line through downtown.

And in 2008, he helped stymie Boise's efforts in the Legislature to give cities the option of asking voters to pass sales taxes to fund specific projects like buses.

"I don't think we ought to be using tax dollars to promote an initiative that's on the ballot," Moyle said, of this latest fight. "It cross the line, big time."

Not so, Bieter insists.

In July, the Boise City Council voted 4-1 to use $60,000 in revenue from the Boise Airport's operations to pay local lobbying outfit Gallatin Public Affairs to coordinate the education outreach.

Ex-Bellevue mayor faces another DUI charge

KETCHUM — The former mayor of Bellevue has been charged with misdemeanor drunken driving after a weekend arrest.

The Idaho Mountain Express reports 53-year-old Jon Anderson was arraigned Tuesday.

Bellevue Marshal Bryan Carpita says Anderson was pulled over Saturday afternoon by a deputy who knew Anderson's driver's license was suspended because of a pending DUI charge in Lincoln County. Anderson resigned as mayor in June, shortly after the Lincoln County charge was filed.

Attorney Douglas Nelson says Anderson had reached a plea agreement in the earlier case, but he is now reconsidering. If Anderson is convicted of the May DUI, the Bellevue DUI could be amended to a felony charge. Anderson has a 2005 DUI conviction.

Emmett police officer resigns

EMMETT — An Emmett police officer whose gun was involved in an accidental shooting in her home and who faces two counts of felony injury to a child has resigned.

Detective Sgt. Kim Judy, who is 30, resigned Friday saying she is leaving to find other employment and to defend herself against the charges.

Judy's roommate, 20-year-old Whisper Rowden, also faces charges following the injuries to two of Rowden's children.

Investigators say Rowden's 3-year-old son was handling Judy's 9mm service weapon on Aug. 6 and fired one shot that went through the boy's leg, through the hand of a 2-year-old and into Rowden's arm.

Company invokes Lewis and Clark in case

BOISE — A big oil company is invoking the spirit of famed explorers Lewis and Clark to help make its case for shipping four massive loads of refinery equipment across a northern Idaho highway.

Lawyers for ConocoPhillips cite the American explorers in their appeal of a judge's ruling stopping the company from hauling equipment from Lewiston to Montana.

The judge ruled that the Idaho Department of Transportation failed to adequately consider public safety and convenience when it issued travel permits.

The oversized loads are proposed to move along U.S. Highway 12, two-lane roadway that traces some of the same ground trekked by Lewis and Clark centuries ago.

Today is Saturday, Sept. 11, the 254th day of 2010. There are 111 days left in the year. This is Patriot Day.

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 11, 2001, nearly 3,000 people were killed on America's worst day of terrorism. Hijackers seized four jetliners, two of which smashed into New York's World Trade Center, causing the twin towers to fall; one jetliner plowed into the Pentagon; and the fourth was crashed into a field in western Pennsylvania.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1789, Alexander Hamilton was appointed the first U.S. Secretary of the Treasury.

In 1814, an American fleet scored a decisive victory over the British in the Battle of Lake Champlain in the War of 1812.

In 1857, the Mountain Meadows Massacre took place in present-day southern Utah as a 120-member Arkansas immigrant party was slaughtered by Mormon militiamen aided by Paiute Indians.

In 1885, author D.H. Lawrence was born in Eastwood, Nottinghamshire, England.

In 1941, groundbreaking took place for the Pentagon, now headquarters of the U.S. Department of Defense. In an address to an America First rally in Des Moines, Iowa, Charles A. Lindbergh charged that "the British, the Jewish and the Roosevelt administration" were pushing the United States toward war.

In 1954, the Miss America pageant made its network TV debut on ABC; Miss California, Lee Meriwether, was crowned the winner.

In 1960, the Rome Summer Olympics ended.

In 1970, Ford Motor Co. introduced the Pinto, a compact that would become caught up in controversy over the safety of its gas tank. (The Pinto was discontinued in 1980.)

In 1973, Chilean President Salvador Allende died in a violent military coup.

In 1985, Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds cracked career hit number 4,192 off Eric Show (rhymes with "how") of the San Diego Padres, eclipsing the record held by Ty Cobb.

Ten years ago: A report released by the Federal Trade Commission said the movie, video game and music industries aggressively marketed to underage youths violent products that carried adult ratings, a finding rejected by entertainment producers.

Five years ago: Weeping relatives marked the fourth anniversary of 9/11 with prayers, solemn remembrances and heartfelt messages at the site where the World Trade Center collapsed. Japanese voters handed Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi's ruling coalition a landslide victory in elections for the lower house of parliament. Roger Federer blew away Andre Agassi 6-3, 2-6, 7-6 (1), 6-1 to capture a second straight U.S. Open and sixth Grand Slam title. Sportscaster Chris Schenkel died in Fort Wayne, Ind. at age 82.

One year ago: On his first 9/11 anniversary as president, Barack Obama urged Americans to come together in service just as they united after the terrorist attacks. Anti-abortion activist James Poouillon was shot to death near a high school in Owosso, Mich. (Harian James Drake was convicted of first-degree murder in the killing of Poouillon and the owner of a gravel pit, Mike Fuoss, and sentenced to life in prison.) Death claimed Hollywood writer Larry Gelbart at age 81; poet and punk rocker Jim Carroll at age 60; and Gertrude Baines, recognized as the world's oldest person, at age 115.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Oh! Death will find me, long before I tire Of watching you; and swing me suddenly Into the shade and loneliness and mire Of the last land!"

— Rupert Brooke

In today's spade slam South could see, when dummy came down, that a grand slam might have been easy to make if spades and diamonds behaved, but he was not going to play carelessly and risk his contract just because his side might have missed the boat.

He won the club lead with the ace, played the spade ace, then led the spade nine to dummy's king.

Had both opponents followed suit, declarer's life would have been easy. He would have drawn the last trump and played on diamonds. But when East discarded on the second trump, South resisted the knee-jerk reaction to ruff a club — that would have been fatal as the cards lay. Instead, he ran the diamond nine to preserve entries to hand. West ducked this, so declarer cashed his two top diamonds and ruffed out the diamond queen. Then he ruffed a club low in hand, relieved to see West follow suit, and cashed his last diamond winner while West again had to follow suit. Next, declarer went to the heart ace, ruffed the club king with the spade jack, and could take the trump queen in dummy for the 12th trick. He gave up his heart loser at trick 13 as West disconsolately trumped his partner's winner.

Incidentally, on an initial heart lead, declarer can succeed only by drawing trumps with the spade king and queen, then ruffing out the diamonds — a far from obvious line.

ANSWER: Since a call of two hearts from your partner at his last turn to speak would have shown a good hand, his jump shows a great hand — eight playing tricks or so. Your choice is to pass or bid three no-trump now. Your bits and pieces may be just enough (with the heart queen instead of the jack, I would act), but I'll guess to pass today.

220 East Ellis,

IF SEPTEMBER 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Expect that your powers of understanding and compassion will grow in the next 12 months and make you a better-rounded and more joyful human being. Right now, your ability to be inspired by mundane events is at its zenith, so a brief vacation or romantic getaway might be just the ticket. In November, your business skills and good business judgment can help you get ahead in your career or make sound financial decisions. Next March and April, you might be ready to make an important commitment. Because people will find you trustworthy and sincere, it will be easier to interview successfully for a new position or to win the heart of that special someone.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your beliefs will be rewarded. Roll up your shirtsleeves and dive right into new ideas. Some key people will be impressed by your actions, even if they do not agree with all of your philosophies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Competitors are willing to strike a sensible accord. This is an excellent time to pair up with influential contacts or negotiate a contract. Greet a new hookup with open arms and you may be pleasantly surprised.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A spirit of good will and bigheartedness is in the air. Ask for assistance or begin projects early in the day. Make plans for the future that free up time so that you can spend more time with a significant other.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It doesn't hurt to ask. If you get what you ask for, then it is probably good for you - but if you don't, then it is for the best. Initiate important matters, sign agreements or accept offers early in the day.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you can't escape the truth then embrace it. Deep inside, you might feel you do not deserve the rewards or opportunities you receive or that there is a catch somewhere. Be grateful for your blessings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Even work can seem like fun under these stars. Exert some independence of spirit and do not be afraid to try something unusual and daring. Someone you meet in public may develop a crush on you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stretch out and be flexible. On the carousel of life it seems that all you do is go around and around. Achieving your dreams is within reach and all you need to do is reach out and grab the brass ring.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Educated opinions offer added value. You will find that professional advice will be beneficial. Exercise your taste for the finer things in life by buying something you have denied yourself in the past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can't be too big-hearted, too generous or too honest under these stars. A change in plans will be for the best. Misunderstandings can be repaired so expect an amorous evening ahead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Switch creative power on high. You could rearrange the bedroom furniture or paint a landscape today, but in some way you have a deep need to take physical action to beautify your surroundings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You radiate animal magnetism and could have a wild time in the jungle of social activities. Remain confident that an agreement will be fulfilled or that you have the ability to honor a promise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You might be catapulted into a position of prominence by being in the right place at the right time. Accept unexpected invitations and don't be bashful about meeting new people or exploring new possibilities.

DEAR ABBY: Like most 16-year-old girls, I have a cell phone. My father pays for it and I'm grateful that he does, even though I live with my mom and he's a two-hour drive away. He has been paying for it for a year and a half. Every month when I visit him he demands to see my phone. Then he looks through my messages and photos. There's nothing "bad" on my phone, but I feel my personal space is being invaded. I brought it up to him a few times, but he just said, "Deal with it!" He said if I don't want him to see something, I should delete it. What can I do to get my dad to respect my privacy? I feel he wants to control my life. I want my own space.

— GETTING GRIEF IN GRANTS PASS, ORE.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR GETTING GRIEF: I'm sure your father means well, but his attempt at "supervision" when you visit him seems heavy-handed. The first thing you should do is discuss your feelings with your mother. Perhaps she can help him understand that you're mature enough to be trusted. But if that doesn't work, you will have to figure out a way to come up with the money to pay for your own cell phone.

DEAR ABBY: My father went to prison when I was 2 months old. My mother and maternal grandparents made sure I had a relationship with him through phone calls and letters. They told me early on what he did, and I have worked through it.

After 22 years and eight parole hearings, my father has been granted a parole. He will be home with my paternal grandparents in October. I'm happy and excited, but he's trying to make up for lost time. He has a son who wants nothing to do with any of us, so it's all left to me. He said, "Your mother had you for the first 22 holidays. I get the next 22" and he expects me to spend the entire first week he's home at my grandparents' house with him.

I am very close to my mom and younger siblings. I love our holiday traditions and don't want to give any of that up. Furthermore, I'm not comfortable staying at my grandparents' home. I don't know them well, and I don't sleep well in strange places.

I work full-time, go to school and have my own house with my fiance. I think my father wants more than I am ready to give right now. What do I do?

— FEELING ANXIOUS IN MICHIGAN

DEAR ANXIOUS: Your father is starved for family, which is understandable, but he has overlooked the fact that rebuilding a relationship can't be done on a seven-day timetable. What you need to do is tell him that he is demanding more than you are ready, able and comfortable giving — and you would prefer to get to know him at your own pace. And stand by that, or he may devour you as he tries to make up for all the years he has wasted because of his mistakes. Frankly, I think his demand is presumptuous, and I'm glad you wrote.

DEAR ABBY: I have two large dogs. They are very sweet, but they are young and can be hyperactive. On more than one occasion guests have requested that I put my dogs outside so they can be more comfortable.

I feel it's rude to ask such a thing when it is the dogs' home. They knew about my dogs prior to the visit. Am I wrong for not catering to my guests? Or are my guests wrong for even asking?

— BARKING UP THE WRONG TREE IN ARIZONA

DEAR BARKING: It is your responsibility as a pet owner to control your dogs and teach them good manners. If the presence of guests on the premises so overstimulates the dogs that they can't control themselves, then as a gracious host, you should remove them so they can calm down — or not entertain at your home.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
