Expiring tax cuts would hit at every level

Bill for family of four with $50,000 income would rise $2,900

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Here's some pressure for lawmakers: If they don't reach agreement on extending soon-to-expire Bush-era tax cuts, nearly all their constituents back home will get big tax increases.

A typical family of four with a household income of $50,000 a year would have to pay $2,900 more in taxes in 2011, according to a new analysis by Deloitte Tax LLP, a tax consulting firm. The same family making $100,000 a year would see its taxes rise by $4,500.

Wealthier families face even bigger tax hikes. A family of four making $500,000 a year would pay $10,800 more in taxes. The same family making $1 million a year would get a tax increase of $52,300.

The estimates are based on total household income, including wages, capital gains and qualified dividends. The estimated tax bills take into account typical deductions at each income level.

Democrats have been arguing for much of the past decade that tax cuts enacted in 2001 and 2003 under former President George W. Bush provided a windfall for the wealthy. That's true, but they also reduced taxes for the working poor, the middle class, and just about everyone in between.

His fellow students in the classroom are all new to Twin Falls and the U.S., coming from countries like Nepal, Burundi and Iraq.

The class is part of the expanded Newcomer Center, which helps refugee children adjust to the American school system before they transition into a traditional classroom setting. Last year, the center started serving students in sixth through 12th grades. This year, it's grown to include students in kindergarten through fifth grade.

Besides teaching students English basics, the Newcomer Center also teaches them the expectations of school life: how to stand in line, treat the teacher and sit at desks.

"For a lot of them, they've never had any formal instruction," Huicochea said. ... "They've never seen books. They've never held a pencil."

One classroom at Morningside serves the students from kindergarten through fifth grade; the sixth-through 12th-grade students are at Vera C. O'Leary Middle School. Nearly 30 students are in the program.

Bill would create tax break for geothermal projects in U.S.

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

The combination of green energy and a tax incentive increase has resulted in a rare instance of congressional bipartisan cooperation.

U.S. Sens. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, and Ron Wyden, D-Ore., have co-sponsored a bill to increase federal tax incentives for geothermal power. The Geothermal Energy Investment Act of 2010 is the Senate version of a House resolution sponsored in June by Rep. Earl Blumenauer, D-Ore., which would allow geothermal energy producers to qualify for the same energy credit as solar energy producers.

Though geothermal producers currently get a credit of 10 percent of power produced, the bill would bump that to 30 percent through 2016.

Crapo spokesman Lindsay Nothern said the two senators represent states with significant geothermal potential and want to help geothermal power advance.

"It's just that geothermal is not as well recognized in Congress as solar," Nothern said.

Idaho has 21 geothermal projects built or in the works, including a plant built in 2006 and 2007 near Raft River by Boise-based U.S. Geothermal Inc. that was the Northwest's first geothermal plant.

U.S. Geothermal representative Dan Kunz said energy sources based upon gas or coal are well-established and thus well-funded.

T.F. woman suspected of dealing marijuana

Case's details parallel TV show plot

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Area law-enforcement agents want to break up what may be a case of life imitating art.

The Twin Falls County and Gooding County sheriff's offices are wrapping up an investigation into "Momma" — 47-year-old Twin Falls business owner Carlene A. Harding, whom police suspect has been dealing marijuana.

"She's been of interest to us for a while," said Lt. Brent Hilliard of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

Harding's recent legal troubles started with her August arrest in Gooding County — officers allegedly found 6 pounds of marijuana in her vehicle during a traffic stop.

Interviews with police at the time of that arrest portray Harding as a real-life version of Mary-Louise Parker's character on the cable TV show "Weeds," a dark comedy about a housewife who turns to selling marijuana after experiencing

Tarzan's Minidoka: The dangdest thing you ever read

If you're from these parts, you may know that writer Edgar Rice Burroughs forged his inner Tarzan in the turn-of-the-century Magic Valley, punching cows in Cassia County and dredging gold from the Snake River.

What you may not have heard is that his first novel was titled "Minidoka." And even by Tarzan's standards, it's a whopper.

"Certainly, nobody figured Burroughs for a writer, not in 1903-04," says John Taliaferro, a former Newsweek editor who is Burroughs' biographer. "His wife and family could only shake their heads, and, if they were in an indulgent mood, smile, for now more than ever Burroughs seemed to have embraced shiftlessness. His niece and nephew loved his funny stories and cartoons, but as far as his brothers and their wives were concerned he was essentially a grown-up kid, unreliable when it came to prolonged or heavy labor. Most likely they barely listened when he announced that he was at work on something more substantial than the hasty nonsense poems or pen-and-ink caricatures he tossed off for the children."

The book was "Minidoka 937th Earl of One Mile — Series M; An Historical Fairy Tale," which Burroughs wrote when he was 28.

According to Taliaferro, Burroughs typed the first few pages on the back of forms of the Yale Dredging Company, which ran the Snake River gold dredge.

"Some of the most bothersome nonsense may be excused as family jokes no longer decipherable, but much of the manuscript is clearly just puerile word-play," Taliaferro writes in "Tarzan Forever: The Life of Edgar Rice Burroughs."

The story is set in the Bradydom of Smith and the Connerdome of Bil in the land of Bray Pzvrijhk. The hero, Minidoka the Earl of One Mile, must battle a prehistoric monster called the Hookie-Dookie, and another creature — the Rhinogazarium — that lives in the Castle in the Air at the edge of the Earth. He slays both and rescues the damsel Bodine, whom Hookie-Dookie has transformed into a coyote, and Rhi — a prince who had been changed into the form of the Rhinogazarium. With Bodine and Rhi in tow and guided by a monkey called Anthropop, Minidoka travels to the center of the Earth — a place called Nevaeh — where everything is backwards. Winged fish with halos, for example, angle in a lagoon for little boys, which are hooked through the cheek, reeled in and tossed into a bag.

Following their subterranean adventures, Minidoka and Rhi have a falling-out and battle for 14 days. The earl finally kills Rhi and turns him into a green-eyed monster named Jealously.

Burroughs never tried to published "Minidoka;" it was filed away, forgotten and discovered among his possessions after his death in 1950. But without "Minidoka," Taliaferro doubts the creator of Tarzan would ever have become a writer.

"('Minidoka') survives as proof that his decision in 1911 to write 'A Princess of Mars,' his first legitimate novel, was not simply the impulse of a desperate salesman," Taliaferro writes.

Dark Horse Comics, a Milwaukie, Ore.-based publishing company, released a graphic-novel version of "Minidoka" in 1998. Though out of print, it's still available on Amazon.com. Rupert's DeMary Memorial Library and the Twin Falls Public Library each have a copy.

Latham expected to change plea in remaining criminal cases

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Former car dealership owner Robert Latham Jr. is changing his mind.

Latham is set to change his plea in two of his pending criminal cases, according to online court records. The 51-year-old former owner of Latham Motors and Hertz of Magic Valley in Twin Falls is scheduled to appear before 5th District Judge Michael R. Crabtree on Nov. 10 to change both of his not-guilty pleas and vacate two scheduled jury trials. He was charged with three counts of unemployment insurance fraud and conspiracy to commit fraud in one case, and domestic battery and two counts of destroying a telecommunications line in the other case.

The trials were tentatively scheduled to start in January, as Latham has left the state and moved to Hawaii.

His third criminal case, involving two counts of violating a no-contact order, is scheduled for acceptance of a guilty plea and sentencing in front of Judge Roger Harris on Nov. 23.

Two armed-robbery suspects plead guilty in Twin Falls

Allen Park III and Weston M. Hills both pleaded guilty on Wednesday in Twin Falls 5th District Court to attempted robbery and conspiracy to commit robbery.

Hills, 16, and Park, 16, of Kimberly, were both charged as adults with robbery as well, but those charges were dropped as part of plea offers. The state recommended that both receive 10 years in state prison with five years fixed, pending each juvenile's completion of a 180-day retained-jurisdiction program.

Sentencing for both is set for Nov. 15. A third suspect in this case, Marcos Eccles, 18, of Kimberly, is set to enter his plea on Sept. 28.

The trio is accused of using a .22 caliber handgun in two June 4 incidents.

Budget concerns force closing of Wendell clinic

Times-News

As budget concerns continue to force regional medical facilities to consolidate, the Wendell Family Clinic will soon be the latest to close.

Saint Benedicts Family Medical Center announced Thursday it would close the Wendell clinic on Oct. 15 in favor of the Jerome Family Clinic.

Wendell patients will be notified within the next few days. Patients can pick their records up at the Wendell office until the end of October, when they'll be transferred to the Jerome Family Clinic.

Cindy Lohmann, assistant administrator of physician services for Saint Benedicts Family Medical Center, said in a release that consolidation of the two clinics' primary-care providers would strengthen Jerome's medical services.

into their permanent classroom varies based on their needs. The goal is for students to transition into their home school within three to six months.

"The need there varies tremendously from one child to the next, from one experience to the next," said Patti O'Dell, the district's associate superintendent.

Last year, the school district had enough federal funding for only sixth-through 12th-grade students and focused on the higher grades because the school settings are more complex for older students, O'Dell said.

This year, the district worked with the refugee center and received a federal grant through the Idaho Office for Refugees. The two-year grant provides $75,253 annually. It covers

Michelle Pospichal, match grant coordinator for the refugee center, said that the program fits within the center's overall goal of helping refugee families adapt to their new lives. The center and school district work together, coordinating meetings with parents and bringing interpreters when necessary to help families learn about the school system.

Even within the classroom, Saad and his peers start this school year at different levels. The center's program begins with financial difficulties. According to an Aug. 14 interview, Harding told police that she had turned to selling marijuana because she "had to do it because the economy is so bad."

Harding owns A Classier Clip dog grooming business on Eighth Avenue in Twin Falls. She allegedly told police that business there has fallen off by half, which led to her alleged side business.

Harding was charged with trafficking marijuana after the traffic stop and faces a preliminary hearing in Gooding 5th District Court on Sept. 30. In addition, she now faces three charges of possession of a controlled substance in Twin Falls County.

They aren't her first drug charges. Harding pleaded guilty to misdemeanor possession of a controlled substance in April 2009 in Twin Falls County, receiving a fine, suspended jail time and one year of probation, according to online court records.

When contacted Thursday by the Times-News, Harding referred all questions to her attorney, Andrew Parnes, who also declined to comment on the ongoing case.

According to a police report from Twin Falls County, Harding has been the subject of investigation since March, during which sheriff's deputies have interviewed various suspects who have pinned Harding as "Momma" — allegedly a major dealer of marijuana.

Deputies have sifted through trash, used K-9 units to sniff out a suspected stash at a local storage-rental business and served a search warrant on Harding's residence. Here's a portion of what officers found:

● Numerous plastic bags with residue that tested "presumptively positive" for marijuana.

● Glass pipes with burnt residue that tested "presumptively positive" for marijuana.

● A ledger and other pages with dollar amounts next to names, initials and weights, which had words such as "Hash" written down.

● A .22 caliber revolver.

● A bag full of pills identified as oxycodone, hydrocodone and Alprazolam — all controlled substances.

Based on this seizure, Harding was issued a summons and charged with three counts of possession of a controlled substance and possession of paraphernalia. Her preliminary hearing in Twin Falls County is scheduled for Oct. 15.

A long line of hungry students, faculty and community members lined up to get their free meal in honor of Mexico's Independence Day. Some spoke Spanish fluently, while others were only able to repeat after CSI history professor Russ Tremayne, "¡Viva Mexico!"

On Sept. 16, 1810, Mexico declared its independence from Spain. Two hundred years later, the Hispanic community celebrated Mexico's freedom in front of CSI's Student Union Building — only 45 miles away from what used to be the U.S.'s border with Mexico as defined by an 1819 treaty with Spain, according to Tremayne.

"When we think of Mexico we think of illegal immigration and drug wars," Tremayne said. "But the purpose of this celebration is to think otherwise. We have all sorts of reasons to admire and respect Mexico — our culture was shaped by it."

The event was sponsored by the Diversity Council, Latinos Unidos and the CSI History Program. Andrea Juarez, president of Latinos Unidos, said the event was a way to let people know about her culture and the true date for Mexico's independence.

"We are a very welcoming culture. It's really cool to be Mexican," Juarez said while serving up food from Mi Pueblo. "When I think of what it means, I think we are a very happy people."

Between the food and the music, there was a short dance performance and a small history lesson from Tremayne, who finished by saying, "Please learn about Mexico. Please respect Mexico."

Veronica Chavez, a native of Mexico, moved to the U.S. when she was 2 years old. She said she's proud of where she came from and enjoyed the celebration that took the place of her Spanish 102 class on Thursday.

Kimberly to soon finalize new water rates

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — A Kimberly city advisory committee will propose a tier system for water rates at the Oct. 12 City Council meeting, the council learned Tuesday.

Notices about the new system will be sent out at the end of October, after it receives council approval. On Tuesday, council members fine-tuned the notification wording and timeline of the project.

"We'll wait until we have three months of data so we can send out a 'dummy bill' so the citizens can see how much they're paying and know how the tier rates will affect them," City Administrator Polly Hulse said.

City Public Works Superintendent Rob Wright said about 300 of 700 new water meters have already been installed to record sample readings, with the rest expected to be fully installed by the end of November. Customers will start to be actually charged for their usage that month.

"Some of them were

BY THE NUMBERS

In November, Kimberly residents will see a switch in their bills from a flat-rate water fee to one based on metered usage. The change is part of Kimberly's $6.6 million water project and needed to repay a loan for the work.

Water will be broken up into two different items:

- An existing $6.58 bond and the $16.84 project bond will be a new category of $13.42.
- Additional water charges will be based on usage, following a tier system.

Also:

- Sewer will go up $1.69 from $33.97 to $35.66.
- Sanitation will go up $0.41 from $8.13 to $8.53.

using 60,000 or 70,000 gallons in 11 days," Wright said. "It's all over the place. People are going to have some real eye-openers."

Both Wright and the council expressed hope that the new system will help residents be aware of and conserve water usage. The metering software can show water usage rates down to the hour. Wright also said the city can activate a website that will allow residents to have alerts sent via text or e-mail when they have used a certain amount of water.

The new system will also help the city conserve water through better leak detection, Wright said. As more data about regular water usage comes in, the system will be able to flag unusual activity that can indicate a leak, allowing workers to then pinpoint the problem using hardware installed on pipe valves.

"It is pretty state of the art stuff," Wright said.

Kimberly residents narrowly approved a bond last fall to fund the water project, which will also replace two water towers amid other work. The $6.6 million effort is paid for through federal stimulus money and state drinking-water funds loaned through the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality. DEQ immediately forgave $1 million of the loan.

The entire project is projected to be completed next March.

The council also unanimously repealed a city code regarding administration and area of impact, then approved a rewritten version. Chapter 17 of Title 8 now reflects new language to come into compliance with county codes without any boundary or jurisdiction changes.

Police say Wash. acid attack was self-inflicted

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A woman who gained sympathy worldwide after she claimed a random assailant threw acid on her face came forward Thursday with a startling admission: She inflicted the attack on herself.

Vancouver police chief Clifford Cook said Bethany Storro admitted under police questioning to fabricating a story about the attack, in which she suffered severe burns.

Cook said he did not know a motive for Storro's actions, but added she is "very remorseful." He said Storro was still being interviewed by detectives.

The police chief said that "during the course of the investigation, several discrepancies began to emerge regarding the alleged attack," leading police to search her home earlier Thursday and interview her.

"During the interview, Ms. Storro admitted the injuries were self-inflicted," Cook said.

Police had been seeking a black woman with a ponytail after Storro described the Aug. 30 attack. She had said the woman asked her, "Hey, pretty girl, want something to drink?" then threw acid in her face.

She recounted details of the alleged attack at a news conference, with her head wrapped in bandages and her parents by her side. She said she wanted to know why the unnamed assailant had attacked her.

After the incident, Storro made several media appearances, but a planned interview on "The Oprah Winfrey Show" was canceled.

Taxes

Those tax cuts expire at the end of the year, setting the stage for a high-stakes debate just before congressional elections in November. If Congress fails to act, families at every income level will see more taxes being withheld from their paychecks come January.

The tax cuts enacted in 2001 and 2003 reduced marginal income tax rates at every level. They also provided a wide range of income tax breaks for education, families with children and married couples.

Taxes on capital gains and dividends were reduced, while the federal estate tax was gradually repealed, though only for this year.

President Barack Obama wants to extend the tax cuts for individuals making less than $200,000 and joint filers making less than $250,000 in adjusted gross income. That's income from wages, capital gains and dividends, before standard deductions and exemptions are subtracted.

Republicans and a growing number of Democrats in Congress want to extend all the tax cuts, at least temporarily.

On Thursday, House Republican Leader John Boehner of Ohio said he wants an up-or-down vote on extending all the tax cuts before congressional elections in November.

"Raising taxes on anyone, especially small businesses, is the wrong thing to do in a struggling economy," Boehner said. "On the issue of job killing tax hikes the American people are not going to accept anything less than the vote that they deserve."

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., wouldn't commit to vote on any tax proposals before the election. She did, however, pledge to address them by the end of the year.

"The only thing I can tell you is that the tax cuts for the middle class will be extended this Congress," Pelosi told reporters Thursday.

More than half the country backs raising taxes on the richest Americans, according to a new Associated Press-GfK Poll. The survey showed that by 54 percent to 44 percent, most people support raising taxes on the highest earners.

In a breakdown of the numbers, 39 percent agree with Obama, while 15 percent favor raising taxes on everyone by allowing the cuts to expire at year's end.

Still, 44 percent say the existing tax cuts should remain in place for everyone, including the wealthy.

While Obama's plan would spare about 97 percent of tax filers, it would mean big tax increases for the wealthy.

Under Obama's plan, a family of four making $325,000 a year would get a tax increase of $5,400, while the same family making $1 million a year would get a tax increase of $56,300, according to the analysis by Deloitte Tax.

A family of four making $5 million a year would get a tax increase of $325,600.

Pelosi said the nation cannot afford to extend tax cuts for top earners.

"I see no justification for going into debt to foreign countries to underwrite and subsidize tax cuts for the wealthiest people in America," Pelosi said.

Making all the tax cuts permanent would add about $3.9 trillion to the national debt over the next decade, according to congressional estimates. Obama's plan would cost a little more than $3 trillion over the same period.

They also contribute a lot of carbon to the atmosphere. Companies getting into newer technologies that don't contribute to climate change, such as geothermal energy, need tax credits so they can spend more money on development, Kunz said.

"We need a geothermal endowment," Kunz said. "We have the geology here in Idaho but need to have people willing to take the risk to drill."

Nothorn said in addition to tax incentives, Crapo wants to allow more geothermal drilling on federal public lands.

That may thwart the efforts of state Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls. Hartgen wants to try to make state lands more competitive for geothermal development.

"We need to bring state lease rates down because we're not competitive with the federal land rates," Hartgen said.

Like many green energy projects, one snag in development is getting the power to the consumer. Transmission can be challenging because points where it's easy to access geothermal energy don't necessary line up with easy access to power stations.

Kunz said proximity to the transmission grid is one of the first things his company looks at.

The advantage geothermal energy has over other alternative energies is that it provides full-time power, Kunz said.

"Wind doesn't always blow and the sun doesn't always shine," Kunz said. "So we can justify a higher, more efficient use of transmission lines."

Idaho Power representative Stephanie McCurdy said the company's Integrated Resource Plan includes purchasing 40 megawatts of energy from geothermal projects between 2010 and 2019. Roughly half of that is for U.S. Geothermal's Neal Hot Springs project in eastern Oregon, which was approved by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission in May.

IDAHO Idaho County officials ask Gov. Otter to declare disaster over wolves BOISE — Officials in Idaho County want Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter to declare an ongoing disaster that will allow wolves to be shot on sight, citing attacks on livestock and wildlife.

County commissioners declared a local disaster Thursday. The governor’s office was aware of the county’s move but had not seen it and couldn’t immediately comment, said Otter spokesman Jon Hanian.

“We heard about it just at the close of business today,” Hanian said. “Beyond that, I don’t have a comment about it, until we’ve had a chance to read it, review it and make sure the governor has seen it.”

A U.S. District Court decision in August restored federal protections to wolves in Idaho and Montana, despite objections from both states. Otter has said he’ll negotiate until Oct. 7 with the federal government on a plan to manage the approximately 850 wolves in his state.

Idaho’s governor said he wants increased flexibility to kill them when they eat livestock or too many elk.

But if no pact comes about, Otter has cautioned that Idaho will no longer be a designated agent for monitoring, providing law enforcement support or investigating wolf deaths.

Monsanto plans to spend $10 million to address phosphate mine concerns

SODA SPRINGS — The company behind a proposed phosphate mine in eastern Idaho plans to invest an additional $10 million into the project to address environmental concerns raised during a public comment period.

Monsanto Co.’s proposed mine is slated to produce ingredients for Roundup weedkiller and has generated nearly 7,000 public comments, including from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which wants additional pollution safeguards.

The Bureau of Land Management will review the comments to determine if a plan for the Blackfoot Bridge Mine released earlier this year merits any changes.

The $10 million in design improvements will be included in the final mining plan, which will be available for a 30-day comment period after its release.

Cecil Andrus, a former Idaho governor and U.S. Interior secretary whose public relations firm is under contract with Monsanto, was among those who voiced support for the mine proposal during a public comment period earlier this year.

But the EPA has raised concerns about possible failure of a proposed $25 million liner meant to stop naturally occurring but poisonous selenium before it reaches the Blackfoot River.

The BLM determined in August that the Blackfoot Bridge plan, including the liner to be installed over selenium-rich waste rock, would be sufficient.

The EPA commented that it was highly likely that additional measures may be necessary. The agency is already pushing Monsanto to resolve Clean Water Act violations at the mine that Blackfoot Bridge is due to replace next year.

Illegal immigrant indicted for huge marijuana field in Valley County

BOISE — A 22-year-old man that prosecutors say is in the country illegally faces four felony charges after a 1,650-plant marijuana field was found on U.S. Forest Service land in Valley County.

The Idaho Statesman reports a federal grand jury in Boise indicted Leonardo Villasenor-Cesar of Mexico with conspiracy to manufacture and distribute more than 1,000 marijuana plants, manufacturing 1,000 or more marijuana plants, possession of a firearm in furtherance of drug trafficking and unlawful possession of a firearm by an illegal alien.

Villasenor-Cesar was arrested on Aug. 31 at the field, which a bear hunter spotted in late May. Investigators say Villasenor-Cesar and another man made and concealed a camp site and built trails and clearings to allow more sunlight to reach the plants.

Republicans question Allred’s role in fight over proposed gas tax hike

BOISE — Republicans argue Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Keith Allred is inaccurately boasting about killing Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s proposed gas tax hike in 2009, on the campaign trail and in TV ads.

Allred clearly didn’t single-handedly kill a gas tax hike; he was a lobbyist, not a legislator.

The founder of The Common Interest spent much of the 2009 Legislature providing lawmakers with information, not taking sides in Otter’s push to pump millions into Idaho highways and bridges.

And his group didn’t take a formal stand until April 1, after releasing a poll showing members were against most gas tax hikes.

On Thursday, Allred contended there wasn’t one “final stroke,” but that his work undermined support for higher fees.

WYOMING Lightning starts several small fires as season ends in northwest Wyoming

JACKSON — Fire season is hanging on in northwestern Wyoming.

Lightning started several small wildfires in Yellowstone National Park and the Bridger-Teton National Forest this week. The Jackson Hole News & Guide reports fire officials are suppressing one of them — a fire burning north of the Monument Ridge prescribed burn — because it’s near development.

Lightning also sparked two fires near Dunraven Pass in Yellowstone. One has grown to 22 acres.

Authorities aren’t worried about the late season starts though.

Park spokesman Al Nash says most fire seasons end by Sept. 15 and it’s only a matter of time before cooler weather and snow or rain brings it to a close.

CALIFORNIA Man pleads guilty to threatening Rep. Nancy Pelosi over health care reform

SAN FRANCISCO — A San Francisco man upset with House Speaker Nancy Pelosi’s support of health care reform pleaded guilty Thursday to threatening the Democratic congresswoman and her family.

Gregory Lee Giusti, 49, admitted making more than 30 abusive and harassing phone calls to the homes and offices of Pelosi. He spoke to Pelosi directly on March 25 and threatened to destroy her Northern California home if she voted for the health care legislation.

Under a deal with prosecutors, he’ll be sentenced Dec. 2 to 21 months in prison and ordered to stay at least 100 yards away from Pelosi, her family and her staff when he’s released.

Joseph Cotchett, a prominent Silicon Valley attorney and Democratic donor, represented Pelosi during the hour-long federal court hearing in San Francisco. Cotchett told U.S. District Court Judge Jeffrey White that the speaker approved of the plea bargain and said Pelosi would not demand Giusti pay victim restitution typically required in such cases.

A disheveled and weepy Giusti told the judge he made the phone calls because “I was upset with her passing the health care law.”

Prosecutors said Giusti used a device that allows users to make calls over the Internet and choose the area code where the calls originate.

An autumn of discontent for moderate Idaho Republicans

Back in the day when only one or two prominent Idaho Republicans publicly supported Democratic gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred, it was easy for GOP Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter to claim the defectors were soreheads — or outside the mainstream of Idaho Republicans.

That’s not so easy anymore. Some of the biggest names in the moderate wing of the Idaho Republican Party have now endorsed Allred, including former state Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly; Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell and onetime Twin Falls Mayor Gale Kleinkopf.

They’ve joined state Rep. Rich Jarvis, R-Meridian; former state Sens. Judi Danielson, R-Council; Hal Bunderson, R-Meridian, Dennis Hansen, R-Soda Springs; ex-state Rep. Larry Bradford, R-Franklin, and longtime former Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Killeen and others in opposing the reelection of a Republican governor.

That hasn’t happened to such an extent since GOP pragmatists broke ranks with conservative Republican Gov. Don Samuelson in 1970, helping ensure the election of Democrat Cecil Andrus.

What ought to worry the Otter campaign is that these Republicans aren’t former back-benchers in the Legislature. Bunderson, who represented the legislative district in which the governor lives, served 13 years in the Senate and chaired the Local Government and Taxation Committee. Dennis Hansen, who chaired the Senate Transportation Committee, later spent 12 years on the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, appointed and reappointed by Republican governors. He once gave a Lincoln Day speech for Otter when he was running for lieutenant governor.

Then there’s Sharon Parry, an Idaho Falls city councilwoman who coordinated Otter’s campaign in Bonneville County in 2006.

“This is not a casual decision for us,” Noh told the Idaho Statesman.

In fairness to Otter, some of the hard feelings are the result not of what he has done as governor but of what the Idaho Republican Party has become.

“When I ran for office it was to be a statesman, not a branch of the Republican Party,” Mikesell said. “I don’t think that I can continue to do that and watch my peers in elected office throughout the state worry more about the fringes of the party and the party itself rather than what’s right for the state.”

He’s right. In a year when the Tea Party has driven the national GOP far to the right, extremists are part of the mainstream of an Idaho Republican Party that now endorses repeal of the 17th Amendment to the Constitution, requires a loyalty oath of GOP candidates, advocates taking back the 70 percent of Idaho owned by the federal government, urges Idahoans pay their state taxes in gold or silver and wants the Federal Reserve dissolved.

Otter has refused to take the loyalty oath and said Wednesday he’s not in favor of repealing the 17th Amendment. Yet the governor has so far declined to distance himself from the rest of the loopy GOP platform.

That doesn’t sit well with Republicans like Noh, Bunderson and Killeen, who believe government should do the people’s business and not waste the taxpayers’ money jousting at windmills.

The 1970 GOP defections helped Democrats take and hold the governor’s office for 24 years. During most of that period, moderate Idaho Republicans — and especially Magic Valley pragmatists such as Sens. Dick High and John Barker and Reps. Bill Lanting and Bill Roberts — were at the heart of reforming the way Idahoans govern themselves.

As was the case 40 years ago, the current batch of Idaho GOP moderates has no place to go. So, alienated from their own party, they’ve made common cause with a Democrat.

Education — and Idahoans’ perceptions of which party is committed to support it — has driven public policy in this state since World War II. One of the weaknesses of contemporary Idaho Republican conservatives is that they’ve forgotten that.

Time and again — in 1948, 1956, 1958, 1970, 1978, 1988 and 1990 — the Idaho GOP lost ground because voters thought Republicans were beggaring the public schools.

To their credit, Republican Gov. Phil Batt, state Senate President Jerry Twigg, R-Blackfoot, and Speaker of the House Mike Simpson, R-Blackfoot, figured that out in 1995. From that day until 2010, education funding increased every year — and the GOP stayed firmly in control.

But the Legislature’s action in dialing back public school support by 7.5 percent this year — done with Otter’s blessing — once again called into question the Idaho GOP’s commitment to education. That in turn has alienated moderate Republicans and given Democrats an opening.

Whether Allred can capitalize on that remains to be seen, but regardless of how this year’s gubernatorial election turns out the Idaho GOP is once again a house divided.

The past indicates that’s a problem for them.

Maybe all isn’t lost for Democrats

Apparently, there’s no need to chronicle the autumn campaign season, because the conventional wisdom has already forecast a Republican takeover on Capitol Hill, and it seems that the sole remaining mystery is whether to characterize the November results as a “massacre” or a “tsunami.”

Nobody has actually voted yet, of course, but that trifling detail won’t slow the madly spinning wheels of our ever-accelerating news cycle. We’re still 40-some days shy of the balloting, yet the zeitgeist arbiters on the Politico website are already naming the high-ranking Democrats who will likely be blamed for the (a) massacre or (b) tsunami.

Far be it for me to defy conventional wisdom, particularly since all the polls are signaling a GOP congressional rebirth that will rival or exceed the Newt Gingrich takeover of 1994, nearly two years into Bill Clinton’s presidency. But rather than wrap up the shortest column in journalistic history, I see some value in offering a counter-narrative — if only because the CW sometimes errs, because surprises in politics do occur, because Dewey did not beat Truman.

So I asked a few Democratic strategists to list the reasons President Obama’s party might actually retain (shrunken) majorities in the House and Senate. At first they seemed utterly flummoxed, as if I had asked them to devise a method for removing their pants over their heads. But soon enough, like good partisans, they warmed to the task and concocted a plausible victory scenario (sort of):

Polls measure current sentiment, not future behavior. The current public mood is obviously toxic for the incumbent party, and the polls reflect that. But most people have barely begun to focus on the midterm races. Democrats still have time to get a fair hearing, and to frame this election — not as a referendum on Obama, but as a choice between Obama’s party and the party that flamed out in 2006 and 2008.

More money, better organization. The House Democratic campaign committee has a 2-1 cash advantage over its GOP counterpart. That means more money for TV ads, and more money for the ground game. Meanwhile, the Democratic National Committee, having absorbed Obama’s Organizing for America campaign operation, is spending lavishly to methodically target the 15 million people who chose Obama while voting for the first time in 2008.

By contrast, the Republican National Committee is a disaster zone, thanks to the ineptitude of chairman Michael Steele. GOP operatives have been trying to work around him, a move akin to political bypass surgery, but the Democrats remain stronger on the ground.

“Republicans have successfully surfed the public’s anger and frustration over the economy, but the polls consistently show that the congressional GOP is broadly unpopular.”

Obama in Truman mode. Yeah, the president’s general popularity has plummeted since the inauguration, but he’s still the party’s best hope for juicing the liberal base. If the base stays home on Election Day, the voting will be dominated by angry conservatives. That’s what happened in 1994: Newt’s army showed up; Clinton’s base did not.

Twice in the past week, Obama was feisty on the stump: “Do we return to the same failed policies that ran our economy into a ditch, or do we keep moving forward with policies that are slowly pulling us out? ... It’s still fear versus hope; the past versus the future. It’s still a choice between sliding backward and moving forward. That’s what this election is about.”

It’s easy to poke holes in that kind of rhetoric, but it’s solely aimed at persuading grass-roots Democrats to shake off their torpor. They just might, if Obama can shelve his cerebral vibe and sustain a give-’em-hell spirit for the next few weeks.

The other party is even worse. Republicans have successfully surfed the public’s anger and frustration over the economy, but the polls consistently show that the congressional GOP is broadly unpopular. That gives Democrats an autumn opening to sow fresh doubts about the out party, to tag the GOP as a party with no new ideas.

Republicans keep promising to unveil a governing agenda; so far, nothing. Their economic prescriptions are simple: Extend the Bush tax cuts for the rich, and oppose whatever Obama wants to do — including various tax credits for small businesses, a proposal they have long supported, at least until Obama suggested it. As the president quipped on the stump last Monday, “If I say the sky is blue, they say no. If I say fish live in the sea, they say no.”

In a season of rare ideological fervor, money and organization don’t matter as much; in a season of economic anxiety, the incumbent party’s message risks being ignored.

There are indeed a few publicly upbeat Democrats (Joe Biden, for instance), but their bullshitness somehow brings to mind the very old joke about the guy who takes a dive off the Empire State Building, and as he passes the 34th floor, he declares:

“So far, so good!”

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Slowing down brings right perspective

Life without a quiet center is self-destructive and has a domino effect of bringing down everything and everyone around us. On the other hand, in the serenity of solitude, we see others as friends with whom we share the gifts of life. Sometimes, we have to slow down to get the right perspective for life.

It’s easy to take care of what we love. Problems arise when we let the busy clutter of the noisy world and our own mental chatter dump into the life-giving flow of our love. We have to stop and find the natural rhythm of our quiet place, where we can get back in step with our core values, purpose and connection to vibrant community of family and friends. Life is so much easier when we give ourselves the loving reasons we need for what we do.

The psalmist wrote that we had to be still to know God. Sometimes we need to come apart into a quiet place to find rest. Thank God for friends who slow us down enough to stay in touch with our core values. I still remember when some of my friends insisted that I leave my stressful management job in Denver for a weekend men’s retreat in the mountains. The soft clicking of aspen leaves in the gentle breeze and rippling water over the rocks in the nearby stream soon soothed away the jagged edges of my stressful week. The heaviness lifted and my feet danced for joy as I entered into the garden of God’s wonderful peace.

I carried that renewal of strength back into the workplace. My world hadn’t changed, but I had. I could now see a life of possibilities instead of restrictions. I had things back in perspective.

The Obamacare Inquisitions: A brief, brutish history

Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius is just the latest creepy keeper of the Obamacare enemies list. The White House has been keeping tabs on individual and corporate critics of the federal health care takeover for more than a year. It started with the health czar's Internet Snitch Brigade. Remember?

Last August, the White House Office of Health Reform called on its ground troops to report on fellow citizens who talked smack about the Democratic plan. Team Obama issued a bulletin on the taxpayer-funded White House website soliciting informant e-mails:

"There is a lot of disinformation about health insurance reform out there, spanning from control of personal finances to end of life care. These rumors often travel just below the surface via chain emails or through casual conversation. Since we can't keep track of all of them here at the White House, we're asking for your help. If you get an e-mail or see something on the Web about health insurance reform that seems fishy, send it to flag@whitehouse.gov."

Then-health czar office spokeswoman Linda Douglass appeared in an accompanying video singling out conservative Internet powerhouse Matt Drudge. Why? Because his website featured a video compilation of Obama and other Democrats — in their own words — exposing the "public option" as a Trojan Horse for government-run health care and the elimination of private industry.

The Obama dog whistle rang out loud and clear: Report online dissidents immediately.

Calling on the White House to cease and desist, GOP Sen. John Cornyn pointed out that "these actions taken by your White House staff raise the specter of a data collection program. ... I can only imagine the level of justifiable outrage had your predecessor asked Americans to forward e-mails critical of his policies to the White House." The flagging operation was shut down, but a plethora of federal disclosure exemptions protect the Obama administration from revealing what was collected, who was targeted and what was done with the "fishy" database information.

In February, the White House coordinated a demonization campaign against Anthem Blue Cross in California for raising rates. Obama singled out the company in a "60 Minutes" interview, and Sebelius sent a nasty-gram demanding that Anthem "justify" its rate hikes to the federal government. A private company trying to survive in the marketplace was forced to "explain" itself to federal bureaucrats and career politicians who have never run a business (successful or otherwise) in their lives. Sebelius went even further. She called on Anthem to provide public disclosure on how the rate increases would be spent — a mandate that no other private companies must follow.

On Capitol Hill, Democratic chief inquisitor Henry Waxman trained his sights on executives from Deere, Caterpillar, Verizon and AT&T in a brass-knuckled effort to silence companies speaking out about the cost implications and financial burdens of Obamacare. He scheduled an April 21 show trial of corporate heads who dutifully reported writedowns related to the Obamacare mandates. Obama Commerce Secretary Gary Locke joined in on the witch-hunt, pummeling the companies on the White House blog and TV airwaves for their "premature" and "irresponsible" disclosures.

After the Democrats' own congressional staff pointed out that the companies "acted properly and in accordance with accounting standards" in submitting filings that were required by law, Waxman called off the hounds. But it was a temporary reprieve. Sebelius' threat last week against individual market health insurers who raise rates to cope with new federal coverage mandates will be far from this desperate administration's last.

As health costs skyrocket, doctors abandon the profession, hospitals lay off workers and private insurers shut down, the only way to quell the Obamacare backlash will be through an even more thuggish campaign to demonize, marginalize and silence nationwide dissent.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Interfaith volunteers provide great service

Early this month, I turned 89. I live alone and am, for the most part, homebound. My life would be very dreary if it were not for Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers.

For the past four years since moving to lower-income housing, the program's three volunteers assigned to me do many things for me that are above and beyond just casual aid.

Thanks to IVC, one volunteer takes me shopping, to doctors and to the bank; another volunteer visits me once a week with her visiting dog, Tawnya. She does small household tasks and helps with forms, if I need assistance, and takes me to get my hair cut. My third volunteer comes to visit each week with the newspaper and we discuss the week's happenings. My three friends shop when I need more than groceries and keep me supplied with books and other reading material.

Most important, though, I know there are others that care about me and I am not alone. Thanks to IVC, my life is pretty full.

Loss of Pandora's and music will be felt

The departure of Pandora's Restaurant in Old Towne is unfortunate. The citizens and visitors of Twin Falls lose more than a nice pub atmosphere to drink a quality beer and enjoy from-scratch cooking. We also lose a venue that supported the local jazz players and more importantly, the jazz listeners.

Great Riff Jazz had the pleasure of playing many weekends at Pandora's and we can tell you, there is a dedicated audience seeking a more eclectic musical experience. Pandora's was a welcome refuge from the drone of worn-out country and the mind-numbing throb of rock and roll. This community has lost an important, musical resource with the closing of this restaurant.

I hope the readers of this letter will actively support the next entrepreneur starting a restaurant, pub, wine bar or nightclub that gives the people of Twin Falls a better choice of music.

Thanks again to Pandora's and its staff. Good luck!

Twin pillars of nation remain standing

Reference Sept. 5 opinion of Brent Jensen of CSI, "Ongoing discussions of separation of church and state":

Since the group appears to be under CSI jurisdiction, I suggest it researches the following:

First, by former lecturer at our college — maybe 20-plus years ago — John Eidsmoe, Christianity and the Constitution with its subtitle, The Faith of Our Founding Fathers, publisher Baker Book House, Grand Rapids, Mich. 49516;

Second, America's God and County Encyclopedia of Quotations, William J. Federer; Fame Publishing Inc., Coppell, Texas 75019.

Current historian and frequently on television, David Barton as president of Wallbuilders Ministries shows government buildings' engravings of Christian writings. Point he makes again and again: USA was founded by people of various Christian persuasions — primarily Protestants. Plus, Mr. Barton has current literature.

In summary: Research above for the 1931 U.S. Supreme Court's ruling; "We are a Christian people ..." Plus, workings of Liberty counsel based in Orlando, Fla. Recently quoted George Washington's second farewell address wording, "the twin pillars of America are religion and morality."

Thus far into our history, these twin towers still stand intact! The research into separation of church will disclose our founders rejected a single Protestant denomination! Recall, our Pilgrims were "separatists" as they broke from the Church of England, where earlier the break was away from Roman Catholicism.

Wolf population grows as goal posts move

"Gov. Otter applauded for issuing Feds wolf management deadline." Our state is being held hostage by radical pro-wolf groups, activist judges, along with the federal government over wolf management. Our state has complied with everything asked in order to achieve state management. However each time concessions are made, the pro-wolf groups along with the federal government establishment move the goal posts. These same groups have a stated goal to have 3,000 to 5,000 wolves roaming our wilderness. This is in spite of them originally agreeing to a target level for 150 wolves in Idaho. Because of this agreement, Idaho "willingly" participated in the introduction in spite of many citizen objections. It's been a history of one lie after another.

Now some 10 years later, Idaho has a wolf population of well over 1,000, growing at an annual rate of 30 percent. Wolves in Idaho remain unmanaged and are included on the endangered species list. This is in spite of North America having a population of over 40,000.

Hardly endangered. Wolf population in Idaho surpasses the original agreement by over 900 percent! State veterinarian autopsies confirm 70 percent of these wolves contain echinococcus granulosus — a tapeworm parasite that is potentially fatal to animals and humans.

Wolves saturate our backcountry; they have killed off and infected our state's ungulate wildlife to a point in which the ungulate reproductive rates are below sustainability levels. Gov. Otter along and our state Legislature realize that the pro-wolf groups will never be satisfied, and thus they have no choice but to react.

This ongoing "bleeding" of our ungulates must stop. It's time for Idaho to play hardball with those who perpetrated this introduction. Action must be taken to protect our state's wildlife resources from this top-tier foreign invader before it's too late.

Trees at ground zero provide sign of hope

I want to comment on the article, "9 years later, signs of life emerge at ground zero."

Sept. 11 was Saturday. In the post-9/11 fallout, many people were frightened, and many people sought the answers of "who is to blame?" and "what can we do?"

I looked to the future and saw there a hope. I wrote my novel, Creeton, at <http://publishamerica.com>, inspired toward peace, and Creeton has an acknowledgement page dedicated to all of those who died or were injured in the horrific tragedy.

The new trees planted at ground zero are a sign of hope. I hope and dream for our world to have a peaceful future.

Poll finds Americans have little trust in major U.S. institutions

By Alan Fram and Jennifer Agiesta
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Glum and distrusting, a majority of Americans today are very confident in — nobody.

Of what confidence there is in institutions, the military and small business are at the top in an Associated Press-National Constitution Center poll released Thursday. But even they get very-confident or better ratings from far less than half the people.

Blogs, banks and Congress get the most distrust.

What would people change if they were in charge? The poll found growing sentiment for legal protections for same-sex couples, with 58 percent saying they should have the same government benefits as married heterosexuals and nearly as many backing federal recognition of gay marriage. Respondents overwhelmingly opposed a stronger federal hand in two other areas: enhancing presidential powers to bolster the economy and requiring people to buy health insurance, as this year's health care overhaul law does.

Out of 18 fixtures on the American scene, none won the strong faith of even half the country.

The military did best with 43 percent saying they are extremely or very confident in it, and small business and science were the only others to garner solid trust from at least 3 in 10 people.

On the flip side, 54 percent said they have little or no confidence in blogs and other citizen media, 52 percent said the same about banks and financial firms and 49 percent said so about Congress.

The survey, conducted last month, conforms with others detecting a general glumness as this fall's congressional elections approach. While analysts say the discontent is largely fed by the prolonged economic downturn, the AP-NCC poll suggests a broader angst, with public confidence lagging in many of society's pillars.

"Does anybody have common sense anymore?" said Rosanne Favaloro, 53, of Lebanon, Pa. "Is anybody worried about the middle-class family anymore? I wonder?"

Asked about their trust in people running major institutions, 39 percent said they are extremely or very confident in small and local business leaders, close to the military's mark. Then came the scientific community at 30 percent. Organized religion was next at 18 percent.

On the other extreme, about one in four said they have absolutely no confidence in Congress, banks, the federal government, blogs and organized labor.

Tax time

of the April 15 deadline, thinking they'd get their returns together in less than six months. But many are in the same situation now. The solution: Don't try to do it yourself.

The disorganized owner needs a bookkeeper or a bookkeeping service who will use accounting software to keep track of the company's finances. For those worried about the expense, consider hiring an accounting student who can put your books together for you. Any of these options will help you meet the Oct. 15 deadline.

The owner who's just time-pressed should be visiting certified public accountants or other tax professionals and have the returns done for them.

All owners should have certified public accountants anyway to help make tax and business decisions. In other words, think beyond the immediate crisis, and work toward preventing it from happening again.

DON'T EVEN THINK ABOUT NOT FILING

Some owners who believe they just can't get their returns together may be tempted not to file at all. That is a huge mistake. The IRS is likely to hit you with a late filing penalty, plus penalties and interest on the tax you owe. The money you owe the government can add up quickly. Here's the warning the IRS has for non-filers or late filers:

"Failure to file a return or filing late can be costly. If taxes are owed, a delay in filing may result in penalty and interest charges that could increase your tax bill by 25 percent or more."

If you didn't file a return last year, don't assume that you therefore cannot file one this year. You can file now and still catch up to the return you missed, although it's likely you won't be able to do that without engaging the help of a tax professional.

Not filing can only lead to deeper problems. For example, if you want to apply for any type of loan, or for financial aid for your college-bound son or daughter, you'll need to show your tax returns.

WHAT IF YOU DISCOVER YOU CAN'T PAY THE GOVERNMENT

Owners, especially those who haven't kept good books, may find that they don't have the money to pay the IRS. File your return by Oct. 15 anyway. The government recognizes that not everyone can pay right away, so it is willing to set up installment payment plans.

You can apply for a payment plan online on the IRS website, www.irs.gov. Or you can fill out and mail in Form 9465, Installment Agreement Request.

If you owe the government more than $25,000, you may need to complete Form 433-F, Collection Information Statement, which asks for information including your assets, liabilities and income.

CSI students participate in INBRE

Four College of Southern Idaho students participated in last month's Idea Network of Biomedical Research Excellence (INBRE) in Moscow, hosted by the University of Idaho.

Eli Andersen, Tristan Froerer, Cassandra Bastien and Richard Martinez took part in an intense 10-day research experience on the CSI campus, followed by the three-day conference in Moscow. They presented two posters outlining their research on sustainability, both of which were well received.

CSI biology professors Jan Simpkin and Randy Smith were also recognized for initiating the Summer Sustainability Research Program in Twin Falls. One of the INBRE initiatives is to establish and promote a K-grad school pipeline that funnels Idaho students to Idaho schools to participate in biological research as undergraduate and graduate students.

Kidney-failure diagnosis can be tricky

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am an 86-year-old doctor's daughter concerned that both my parents died of kidney failure, although I never knew how it happened.

Perhaps you could tell me what steps I should take first to deal with it, as I just got a report from my doctor indicating that I have chronic kidney disease that has stabilized. What does that mean?

DEAR READER: The kidneys are fist-sized, bean-shaped organs located at the back of the upper abdomen. Their purpose is to filter and clean blood. When the kidneys lose their ability to perform as intended, the condition is known as kidney failure. Stabilized failure simply means that your kidneys have lost some function but are no longer deteriorating.

Symptoms of failure vary, depending on the type experienced. Diagnosis can be difficult for a physician because symptoms and complaints can be attributed to other, unrelated symptoms. I will cover a few possibilities.

ASK

Stones form when the accumulated urine in the kidneys contains too high a concentration of uric acid, calcium or oxalate. Low levels of citrate and magnesium can also contribute to the formation. While there are four types of stones, the most common are the result of excess calcium. This can result from some prescribed diuretics, the ingestion of large amounts of vitamin D, dehydration or from excess hormones — specifically thyroid and/or parathyroid.

Pyelonephritis is a common kidney inflammation. This disorder is rather common in women but can also occur in conjunction with kidney stones, bladder tumors, urinary infections or an enlarged prostate gland in men.

Chronic kidney failure can occur from injury, blocked blood vessels, or can be the result of complications from a surgical procedure. Chronic failure occurs when the function of the kidneys has decreased to less than 25 percent of what it should be. With acute or chronic failure, waste products build up in the blood and cannot be eliminated.

Symptoms include loss of appetite, nausea, vomiting, drowsiness and a decrease in urine output. Treatment consists of determining the cause for the failure, controlling infection and prescribing diuretics. In extremely advanced cases, dialysis may be necessary.

Your failure may be the result of diabetes, hypertension or untreated or repeated kidney inflammation. Make an appointment with your physician or a nephrologist to determine what can be done to bring things under better control.

While I understand you have already requested a copy of my Health Report "Kidney Disorders," other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, PO Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title or print out an order form from my website, www.AskDrGottMD.com.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I would like to receive a copy of your "No Flour, No Sugar Diet." How may I order it?

DEAR READER: Oddly enough, your request is not unique. I receive inquiries every day, and my website has specific instructions for ordering. Most of my books are offered on the bottom of the "About" page, but if a reader doesn't scroll to the bottom of the page, the section is likely missed. We are presently working on a more user-friendly site with better links that will assist readers. In any event, follow the links that will take you directly to Amazon.com. Thank you for your inquiry.

Gunman kills mother, then himself at Johns Hopkins

By Alex Dominguez
Associated Press writer

BALTIMORE — A man who became distraught as he was being briefed on his mother’s condition by a surgeon at Johns Hopkins Hospital pulled a gun and shot and wounded the doctor Thursday, then killed his mother and himself in her room at the world-famous medical center, police said.

The gunman, 50-year-old Paul Warren Pardus, had been listening to the surgeon around midday when he “became emotionally distraught and reacted ... and was overwhelmed by the news of his mother’s condition,” Police Commissioner Frederick H. Bealefeld III said.

Pardus pulled a semiautomatic gun from his waistband and shot the doctor once in the abdomen, the commissioner said. The doctor is expected to survive.

Pardus then holed up in the room in a more than two-hour standoff. When officers made their way in, they found Pardus and his mother, 84-year-old Jean Davis, shot to death, he on the floor, she in her bed.

“I guess he just couldn’t bear to see her the way she was,” said Pardus’ brother, 59-year-old Alvin Gibson of Remington, Va. He said their mother suffered from arthritis and rheumatism and had surgery last week, but it didn’t help her.

“I guess because he thought my mom was suffering because the surgery wasn’t successful and she probably wouldn’t be able to walk again,” he said about a possible reason for Pardus’ actions. “She was a dear, sweet lady.”

The doctor, identified by colleagues as orthopedic surgeon David B. Cohen, collapsed outside the eighth-floor room where Pardus’ mother was being treated.

The standoff led authorities to lock down a small section of the Nelson Building while allowing the rest of the sprawling red-brick medical complex — a cluster of hospital, research and education buildings — to remain open.

Hopkins, a world-class institution, is widely known for its cancer research and treatment.

Pope admits church failed in priest sex abuse scandal

By Nicole Winfield
and Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press writers

EDINBURGH, Scotland — Pope Benedict XVI waded into the hostile atmosphere Thursday of highly secular Britain, admitting the Catholic Church did not act decisively or quickly enough to remove priests who molested children in his strongest comments yet on the worldwide sex abuse crisis shaking his church.

In a visit unprecedented for the bitter opposition to his papacy, Benedict warned against “aggressive forms” of secularism. The German pope recalled how Britain had stood against “Nazi tyranny that wished to eradicate God from society.”

Benedict’s historic four-day state visit has been overshadowed by disgust over the abuse scandal and indifference in Britain, where Catholics are a minority of 10 percent and endured centuries of bloody persecution and discrimination until the early 19th century.

The trip is the first state visit by a pope to the U.K., and his meeting with Pope Benedict XVI, accompanied by Britain’s Queen Elizabeth II, is greeted by children as he leaves the Palace of Holyroodhouse, Thursday in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Queen Elizabeth II was symbolically significant because of the historic divide between the officially Protestant nation and the Catholic Church.

Only 65,000 of the faithful had tickets to an open-air Mass at Bellahouston Park in Glasgow, far less than the 100,000 initially expected. The British media has been particularly hostile to the pope’s visit, noting its $18.7 million security cost to taxpayers at a time of austerity measures and job losses.

Many in Britain also strongly oppose Benedict’s hard line against homosexuality, abortion and using condoms to prevent the spread of AIDS. Protests were planned and “Pope Nope” T-shirts were spotted around London.

Still, a crowd of 125,000 in Edinburgh welcomed Benedict warmly as his Pope-mobile paraded through the streets, with cheers on Princes Street heard from a mile away and well-wishers waving the Holy See’s yellow-and-white flag.

Storm sweeps through NYC; 1 dead

By Cristian Salazar
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A fast-moving storm packing winds of up to 100 mph ripped through the city Thursday, knocking down trees and power lines, snarling traffic, tearing off roofs and leaving one person dead.

The person was killed when a tree fell on a car in Queens, fire officials said. Numerous minor injuries were reported elsewhere.

The storm created havoc with the evening commute. Amtrak trains were running with delays. The Long Island Rail Road said service was temporarily suspended between Penn Station and Jamaica because of fallen trees. Service east of Jamaica was extremely limited. New Jersey Transit reported delays of 20 to 30 minutes during rush hour but normal service was restored around 7:45 p.m.

At least 30,000 customers were without power Thursday night, according to Alfonso Quiroz, a spokesman for Consolidated Edison. He said hardest hit was Queens, with 27,000 outages.

Residents in the Park Slope neighborhood of Brooklyn look at a car that was crushed by a falling tree Thursday.

The storm hit just after 5 p.m., when the National Weather Service issued a tornado warning for Staten Island. Shortly afterward, warnings were issued for Brooklyn and Queens.

“A huge tree limb, like 25 feet long, flew right up the street, up the hill and stopped in the middle of the air 50 feet up in this intersection and started spinning,” said Steve Carlisle, 54. “It was like a poltergeist.”

“Then all the garbage cans went up in the air and this spinning tree hits one of them like it was a bat on a ball. The can was launched way, way over there,” he said, pointing at a building about 120 feet away where a metal garbage can lay flattened.

Lowe family performs in Burley

>>> Entertainment 2

DREW NASH/Times-News

Jon Fortner and his son, Nate, play Killer Bunnies while they have dinner at their home on a recent Thursday evening. The game, which uses amusingly decorated cards and many-sided dice, is one of an explosion of family-oriented board and card games on the market.

BOARD, n o t BORED

ARIEL HANSEN/Times-News

5 Second Rule is one of this year's best games at The Imagination Station in Twin Falls, said employee Rose Pilcher. The store carries a variety of board games appropriate for families.

WHERE TO BUY

Although many stores carry board games, the widest selections are available at specialty game and toy stores such as The Imagination Station in Twin Falls, 837 Pole Line Road, 734-2725.

If a store doesn't carry the game you're looking for, ask whether the manager can order it, or search for it online. Sites like Amazon.com and Boardgamecentral.com offer a variety.

Jerome game enthusiast Scott Belnap recommends using the site Boardgamegeek.com to read reviews and descriptions of games you are considering. Or better yet, find a friend who already owns it and play it before you purchase to ensure the game doesn't end up in the back of your closet.

ARIEL HANSEN/Times-News

Making sets of six tiles — the same shape, but different colors; or same color, different shapes — is the goal of Qwirkle, a game that combines strategy and luck.

By Ariel Hansen ♦ Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Nate Fortner is feeling a little huffy at his parents and his sister. “I’m mad at all of you! As soon as I get a bunny, you’re going down!” he says, slumping in his kitchen chair and downing a mouthful of chicken noodle soup.

He doesn’t mean an actual rabbit, of course, but a playing card in Killer Bunnies, one of the family’s favorite table games. At least once a week, they play it or another of the dozens of games that fill a bookshelf in their dining room, sometimes just with each other and sometimes with visiting friends or family.

“It gives us a chance to talk,” said Sylvia, 17, who has a quieter, more defensive strategy in Bunnies than her little brother. “When we play games we get to chat and tease and build relationships.” And have fun, of course.

Board games — from the classics like Sorry!, Monopoly and chess, to modern favorites like How to Host a Murder, Munchkin or Rush Hour — are a popular entertainment for all ages. They are cheaper than a movie, get teenagers talking and help keep brains busy and learning.

That’s one thing Myrtle Harmaning likes about Rummikub (variations are called Rummy Que, Rummy-O or other names), which features tiles with numbers of various colors that must be matched into runs or of-a-kinds, much like the rummy card game.

“It takes a lot of brain work to figure out what you’re going to do,” said the 96-year-old Twin Falls woman, who has been playing the game at least weekly since she was introduced to it a quarter-century ago. “I got into it years ago, with my friend and her husband and my husband, a bunch of us, we would get together and play. ... We played for years until one by one they’re gone.”

Now she plays with other friends and her daughter and son-in-law (who is so competitive, Harmaning said, that because she wins so much he now refuses to play with her).

Though her vision has faded enough over the years that she needs an extra-bright light shone on her tiles, Harmaning loves it.

“I keep busy, but the board game is a recreation, it’s kind of restful,” she said. “It’s a relaxation to me, when we do it of an evening.”

DREW NASH/Times-News

Nate Fortner, 9, plays a game called Killer Bunnies with his family. The Kimberly family, which also includes mom Maggi and sisters Sylvia, 17, and Amy, 15, gathers at least once a week to play a board game.

TRY THESE GAMES

Pay attention to the age range the game is intended for; those listed for older children may have small pieces or might frustrate younger kids. Also note the length of game-play; time and space could be an issue for games that last several hours.

See page 3 for top game picks from our sources.

Seven-sibling act comes to Burley

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Lowe Family combines every kind of musical, theatrical and dance talent you can dare to imagine, promoters say.

The performers, sponsored by The Mount Harrison Foundation, will appear at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Burley's King Fine Arts Center. Tickets are $6 for economy seating, $10 for general seating and $12.50 for reserved seating. Buy tickets at Book Plaza or Welch Music in Burley, Book Store in Rupert or Crowley's in Twin Falls; or call 678-6868 to reserve.

The Lowe Family has been entertaining around the world for more than 25 years. All seven siblings began studying music and performing from young ages.

"They're the opposite of the Osmonds — they have five girls and two boys," said Wayne Blauer, a Mount Harrison Foundation board member and publicity chairman.

The Lowe Family has appeared in Twin Falls before but never in Burley, and Blauer said the foundation was delighted to get the act.

"We happened to be between two points, and they heard of the King Fine Arts Center and contacted our president to see if we would be interested in them coming. We jumped at the chance," Blauer said.

Most recently, the Lowes appeared with the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and orchestra on their national TV and radio broadcast. They also have been featured as guests during the Olympics and on China's televised New Year's celebration.

"They sing, dance, play instruments, Irish dancing, all kinds of things. My favorite is when they stand in a line and pick their own violin and play the violin next to them," Blauer said.

Imagine 250,000 hours of practicing, 15,000 lessons, 50 instruments, 25 years of entertaining and one family. That's the Lowe Family.

"It's two power-packed hours of high-energy entertainment, an unforgettable show," Blauer said.

Sample the entertainment online: thelowefamily.com.

Versatile with many instruments, the Lowe Family offers a blend of classical, Broadway, Irish, jazz, bluegrass, old-time favorites, dance, six-part harmony and gospel.

Radio storyteller lectures in Hailey

Times-News

Radio host and producer Ira Glass will kick off this fall's Sun Valley Center for the Arts Lecture Series with his laid-back storytelling, at 6:30 p.m. Sept. 25 at the Community Campus auditorium in Hailey.

With his nasal voice and quirky point of view, Glass upends the traditional image of an all-knowing baritone radio broadcaster, the center's press release said. Each week on his radio show, "This American Life," Glass presents mostly true stories of everyday people. Popular episodes have examined summer camp, babies who were switched at birth, what it's like to attend America's top party school and two days in the life of a rest stop on the New York State Thruway.

"The stories Glass chooses remind me how important, curious and funny daily life can be," said the center's Britt Udesen. "The show has also taught me a great deal about important national events and crises by making them human and comprehensible."

Glass started in public radio in 1978 as an intern at National Public Radio's headquarters in Washington, D.C. Over the next 17 years, he worked on nearly every NPR news show and did nearly every production job: tape-cutter, desk assistant, newscast writer, editor, producer, reporter and substitute host.

In 1995, Glass premiered "This American Life" in Chicago. The program was quickly picked up for national distribution by Public Radio International and today is heard on 500 radio stations by about 1.7 million listeners each week. It is often the most popular podcast in America (www.thisamericanlife.org/podcast), with more than half a million people downloading each episode.

The other lectures in the series: water advocate Maude Barlow on Nov. 4; Neil deGrasse Tyson, director of New York's Hayden Planetarium, on Nov. 17; investigative journalist Eric Schlosser on Feb. 24; and Ari Fleischer, former press secretary for President George W. Bush, on March 10.

Series tickets are $120 for Sun Valley Center members and $170 for others. Individual tickets for the Glass lecture are $25 for members and $35 for others.

Tickets: 726-9491, ext. 10, or sunvalleycenter.org.

CSI explores film in classes, movie series, amateur competition

Times-News

For the next few months, take a journey into the world of film.

The College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center will offer courses in film making and appreciation, film screenings and a competition for local amateur filmmakers.

Filmmaker Ben Hicks will teach an "Introduction to Filmmaking" course, 6- 8 p.m. Saturdays, Sept. 25 through Oct. 9, in CSI Library 101. Students will go through the stages of pre-production, production and post-production and will work in teams to create short films. Cost is $65, and students must have their own equipment.

Then in January and February, CSI will present a six-week film series, dubbed "The Hottest Ticket in Town," at 7 p.m. Thursdays and 2 p.m. Sundays in the CSI Fine Arts Recital Hall. Admission is $6 each or $30 for the series of six movies; buy tickets at the CSI box office or at tickets.csi.edu or 732-6288. Movie goers may also participate in an informal, off-site gathering to discuss the film.

The series schedule:

- Jan. 20 and 23 — "Sunset Boulevard," winner of three Academy Awards.
- Jan. 27 and 30 — "The Station Agent," an indie film.
- Feb. 3 and 6 — "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," a milestone of the silent film era.
- Feb. 10 and 13 — "Mad Hot Ballroom," a documentary.

- Feb. 17 and 20 — "Schultze Gets the Blues," in German with English subtitles.
- Feb. 24 and 27 — "Chinatown," fine film noir.

CSI is inviting local filmmakers to show their stuff in an amateur film contest held in conjunction with the film series. The top five entries, as determined in a juried process, will receive a public screening before each of the feature films and will receive a free pass to the film series. The audience favorite of the five will receive $500 cash, and second place will receive a high-definition camcorder. For rules and entry form, visit finearts-center.csi.edu/filmseries/. Submissions are due Dec. 1.

And there's more: In the spring semester, beginning in January, students can take the online, one-credit course "Film Appreciation," taught by English professor Shelley McEuen. The course is a study of the techniques film uses to present narration and various literary elements.

Information on the courses, or on the film series and competition: communityed.csi.edu or 732-6442.

At the other end of the spectrum, both age-wise and energy-wise, is Scott Belnap's 3-year-old. The boy received Battleground for Christmas last year, a game that has players shoot gentle catapults to knock down plastic figurines. Because his parents made him wait for a count of five each turn to shoot, the toddler can now do the counting on his own.

Belnap has long been a board game lover, since he worked for store credit at a friend's game shop in Rexburg. That morphed into a game club in Rexburg and then in Idaho Falls, and Belnap would like to find like-minded gamers to start one in Twin Falls.

"It's a lot of fun if we ever get someone who wants to join us," the Jerome man said with a laugh. In addition to his family's regular Monday-night gaming at home, friends come over to play — sometimes just adults and sometimes entire families, toddlers and all.

"It's a very wholesome activity. You don't have to worry, 'Is this something that's going to be OK to show my family?'" with very few exceptions. They're a great way to spend an evening."

Belnap is discerning about the games he plays, and he likes to try them out before buying new ones. He often goes to The Imagination Station in Twin Falls to ask the salespeople's opinions — as they test-play all the games they sell — or he'll check out reviews on specialty online sites like Boardgamegeek.com.

"Start talking to some of those people, and you will start finding out what kind of experiences they've had with different games, and that's a really great way to prevent getting a game you don't like," he said.

Salespeople at the Station take pride in their ability to recommend a game that customers will like after asking just a few questions.

"We aren't going to sell you a game that's going to sit on your shelf," said Rose Pilcher, a Station employee.

Pilcher said her own kids will rush to finish their chores and homework so they can play games as a family.

"It's the interaction, the communication. They might not talk to you after school, but when you're playing, you can slip (a question) in," she said. "You make a memory; you never forget a good game."

And games are a good way to get to know potential friends, new in-laws or even someone you're dating.

"You can learn how competitive they are, how well they can work as a team, you learn if they're a good sport or not," Belnap said, also mentioning how people learn new concepts or adapt to unusual situations. "Surprisingly enough, how they deal with things when they're not going their way, whether they joke about it or get upset. It's a good way to decide if this is a

FOODIE HEAVEN

Revised festival capitalizes on interest in food- and wine-inspired travel

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — SEGO Restaurant, one of Ketchum's newest casual luxury restaurants, doesn't have a freezer save for a small stand-up unit used to store ice cream.

Chef Taite Pearson says he hopes that's the wave of the future as more restaurants — and home cooks — seek to replace frozen with fresh.

"Freezing breaks down the tissue of meat. Thawing lets out 50 percent of the flavor that could have been retained. Europeans know what flavor is because they buy their eggs fresh. They cook with vegetables and fruit they bought that day at the street market," Pearson said.

Pearson will share his vision of the future — a future he says could be much tastier if we use fresh, locally produced food — as part of next weekend's Sun Valley Harvest Festival, Sept. 24-26.

The festival will kick off at 11 a.m. Sept. 24 with cooking demonstrations and a culinary trade show featuring regional farmers, producers and vendors at Carol's Dollar Mountain Lodge.

A Restaurant Walk that evening will give a chance to stroll from restaurant to restaurant, sampling tastings paired with regional wines and beers.

A Beer Garden with live music from Cow Says Moo and Seattle recording artist Danny Barnes, beer tasting, a home brew competition and a beer making talk will be held from noon to 4 p.m. Sept. 25 at Ketchum Town

Chef Taite Pearson, slicing heirloom tomatoes in the kitchen of SEGO Restaurant, will be among the chefs highlighted at the Sun Valley Harvest Festival next weekend.

Plaza. Chefs' demonstrations and the trade show will continue that day from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Carol's Dollar Mountain Lodge. There also will be a Harvest Tasting Room and Wine Cellar from 2 to 5 p.m. at Carol's and a workshop on dry rubs, marinades and simple grilling sauces offered by Sawtooth Club owner Tom Nickel at 4 p.m. at The Roosevelt Bar and Grille.

A Harvest Martini and Caviar Party will be held at 5:30 p.m. Sept. 25 at SEGO Restaurant. And Chef's Dinners featuring special Harvest Festival menus will round out the evening Sept. 25.

The festival will feature 15 chefs and presenters preparing Idaho food, wine and spirits in unique ways. They include Viking chef Vaughn Hobbs, who cooked for such notables as Presidents Ford and Carter, Johnny Mathis, Joan Rivers, Sammy Davis Jr. and stars from "Charlie's Angels" and "Dynasty." Also: Kristi Echols-Preston and Chris Preston of Boise's Chocolat Bar; Moshit Mizrachi-Gabbitas of Boise's Janjou Patisserie; comfort food specialist Dustan Bristol of Nampa's new Brick 29; and John Turenne, who transformed the cafeteria at St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center from a chicken nugget factory to a green cuisine cafe.

Cristina Cook of Cristina's Restaurant will demonstrate how to make pumpkin tiramisu; Ketchum Grill's Scott Mason will present a demonstration titled "Autumn Foraging from the Forest to the Table." Big Wood Bread founder Art Wallace, who learned to bake pain au levain in a wood-fired oven at the Boulanger in France, will present "The Art of Bread." And the Arid Club's Alvin Charlton will present a workshop titled "How to Feed Your Friends and Family and Still Enjoy the Party."

The Sun Valley Harvest Festival grew out of the Sun Valley Food and Wine Festival, which the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau started a few years ago to take advantage of burgeoning interest in food- and wine-related travel, said chamber spokeswoman Carrie Westergard.

WHAT'S IT COST?

A Harvest Festival Pass for Sept. 24-26 costs $125 and includes entry to 14 cooking demonstrations, access to the Harvest Festival Marketplace, admission to the Restaurant Walk, and Idaho Beer Garden for a limited number of free beer tastings, admission to the outdoor grilling demonstration and discounts for golf, spa treatments and shopping.

A Harvest Festival Pass combined with two tastings at the Harvest Festival Tasting Room costs $155. A Gold Pass that includes the Martini and Caviar Party costs $195 per person. The party is for Gold Pass holders only and will include a talk from chefs Taite Pearson of SEGO Restaurant and Randy King of Sysco of Idaho, who will talk about what we can expect on our plates in a couple of years.

Tickets for individual demonstrations are $20 each and include entry into the Harvest Marketplace. Admission to the Harvest Tasting Room and Wine Cellar on Sept. 24-25 costs $25 per day. Entry into the Beer Garden costs $15 and helps benefit the Sun Valley Nordic Ski Team. Tickets to Tom Nickel's grilling presentation cost $20.

Passes are available at Chapter One Bookstore and Atkinsons' Market in Ketchum, online at idahotickets.com or by calling 450-6430.

Details: sunvalleyharvestfestival.com or 450-6430.

The chamber started it with the intention of having someone else take it over. And that happened this year when self-proclaimed Ketchum foodies Heidi Ottley and Ed Sinnott claimed it for their own. They moved it to fall to better showcase Idaho's harvest, revamped the format and rechristened it the Sun Valley Harvest Festival.

"As food- and wine-related travel has become the fastest growing segment of the tourism industry, why shouldn't Idaho and Sun Valley be on that map?" said Ottley. "The best caviar, which apparently even gives our Russian friends a run for their money, is raised right here in Bliss, Idaho. Pair that with some of our locally produced vodka made in Rigby and you have an amazing party with a great story."

Sinnott said festival organizers have concentrated on marketing the event to foodies in Boise, Twin Falls and southern Idaho this year, rather than taking it nationwide.

"This is an Idaho event — Idaho chefs, Idaho foods," he said.

Pearson, of SEGO Restaurant, says he hopes the festival will help spur an interest in buying local. That would give producers like Lava Lake Lamb and CA Bull Elk the incentive to sell more fresh meat, and it might induce produce growers to offer more variety.

Pearson also hopes it inspires more creativity and confidence in home cooks.

"We all should be eating more home-cooked food. And I think that's happening, as I'm getting a lot more questions from people asking me how to use certain kitchen gadgets or how to cook certain foods," he said.

'Tapped' film screening criticizes bottled-water industry

Times-News

Sun Valley Center for the Arts is offering a free screening of the movie "Tapped," a look at the big business of bottled water, at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

The movie will be shown immediately after a free 5:30 p.m. guided tour of the center's new exhibition, "Water." Tour participants are served a glass of wine.

"Tapped," which has won awards at independent film festivals, takes a behind-the-scenes look into an industry that aims to privatize and sell water.

"Eye-opening, informative and incredibly important for you to see," wrote Ben Lyons in E!

Entertainment and At the Movies. "This is a passionate documentary, well-executed from engaging and intelligent voices ..."

According to the center's press release, Peter Rothberg had this to say about "Tapped" in The Nation: "With style, verve and righteous anger, the film exposes the bottled water industry's role in suckering the public, harming our health, accelerating climate change, contributing to overall pollution, and increasing America's dependence on fossil fuels."

Event information: sunvalleycenter.org or 726-9491, ext. 10. Information about the film: tappedthemovie.com.

CATCH of the DAY

Buhl
chamber keeps Trout Festival
after all

By Blair Koch

Times-News correspondent

BUHL — It must have been one catch worth saving.

After deciding to release the Trout Festival this year, the Buhl Chamber of Commerce will keep the event after all.

It will take place on a blocked-off section of Main Street, from the intersection with Broadway Avenue to about the 12th Avenue block. Not all details have been ironed out, but Milestone, a versatile rock band regularly featured across Magic Valley, has been booked.

"It will be on a much smaller scale than in years past," said chamber administrator Michelle Olsen. "Instead of an all-day event, the fest will be a Friday evening with a street dance and activities for children."

With just weeks to plan the Sept. 24 Trout Festival, organizers are rushing to bring things together.

On Monday, the chamber's special-use permit for a beer and wine garden was narrowly approved after Councilman Kyle Hauser voted against it.

"While I support the chamber," Hauser said, "I don't think an event has to have a beer and wine garden to be a success."

Mayor Tom McCauley cast the final yes vote that approved the application.

Olsen said the Trout Festival has had a beverage garden in the past without negative incidents; this year, the garden will feature locally produced wine.

Also expect a rededication ceremony for the city's trout sculpture erected in 2007. Commissioned for the city's 2006 centennial celebration, the sculpture was taken off the wall of the West End Senior Citizens Center earlier this year so the wall could be refurbished and the aluminum trout cleaned and repainted. (Pigeon poop was ruining the sculpture's varnish.) The trout is set to be re-hung within the week.

Event chairwoman Holly Langdon said the centennial committee had funding for long-term maintenance of the sculpture; that paid about $8,000 for the refurbishment.

"There were three different kinds of brick and tile that made up the wall," said L.L. Langdon shop foreman and painted, in uniform. The pigeons can no longer nest right inside the wall."

L.L. Langdon welder Bud Martin sprays paint onto Buhl's centennial-commissioned trout sculpture at the Buhl shop. The trout and the downtown brick wall it hangs on have been refurbished; the fish will be rehung in time for re-dedication during the Sept. 24 Trout Festival.

Holly Langdon is in discussion with the city's restaurants to provide trout-inspired hors d'oeuvres and other eats, for purchase.

"We're really hoping that the businesses of Buhl come out, set up booths and such and participate in the festival," Langdon said. "With so many people who didn't want to see the Trout Fest go away, we thought we might as well combine all of that and have a good time."

Detective novelist will speak Thursday about latest mystery

By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Blaine County Sheriff Walt Fleming is up to his neck in another murder mystery — this time involving a former steroid-crazed NFL star who made a lot of enemies while abusing drugs.

Only this time the likable sheriff has some help from Seattle's legendary detective Lou Boldt.

Hailey's best-selling detective novelist Ridley Pearson has included both of the detectives he created in his newest book, "In Harm's Way."

But not by choice. Lou Boldt, who set Pearson's career on fire, was a walk-in, the writer insists.

"Sometimes when you're writing fiction, you're not in control. I was writing a chapter where Boldt suddenly appeared — he walked right into the book. I literally looked down at my keys and said, 'What's he doing in this book?' I had to push my chair away and think about it, but he ended up playing a significant role in the book and it was a blast for me to have him back."

Readers appear pleased with how things turned out, as well, judging by the number of e-mails that have "swamped" Pearson since they learned of Boldt's return to the pages of creative fiction.

The book is the fourth in Pearson's mystery thriller series set in Sun Valley. The first had Sheriff Fleming, inspired by real-life Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling, tracking down a would-be assassin targeting a Hillary Clinton-like presidential candidate during Sun Valley's annual Allen and Co. conference.

The second had him dodging avalanches to thwart an act of environmental tourism. And the third had him infiltrating Sun Valley's glamorous Wine Auction to catch the thief of an irreplaceable bottle of wine.

The latest one starts off with a bang when a bunch of Boy Scouts cleaning Idaho Highway 75 find a body in a pile of avalanche debris. It weaves in Sun Valley's wealthy residents and its outdoor wilderness. And, like the first three books, it drops plenty of names and locations that Wood River Valley residents will be familiar with.

Pearson will talk about his latest book and how he comes up with his ideas during a free talk at 6 p.m. Thursday at The Community Library, 415 Spruce Ave. N., in Ketchum.

Bev Reeves, a Ketchum resident who has first-edition copies of every book Pearson has written, can't wait.

"He's absolutely charming and interesting. And he has a very engaging quality that always makes me think he's talking directly to me," she said. "As a former speech teacher I can be critical, but I've never heard anybody give a better speech. He's very amusing and he always has such good stories to share."

The latest book garnered Pearson and Femling a seven-minute spot on NPR Radio's "Morning Edition."

And garnered more reader praise for Femling, who has to keep reminding people it's fiction.

"Doing the book with him was a lot of fun. He has a quick mind — he'd have been a good detective," said Femling.

Taste local foods during Saturday garden celebration

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — It was mid-June and mounds of snow still dotted Baldy and Dollar Mountain when volunteers for the Blaine County Hunger Coalition planted their first seeds on land that used to host the Blaine County Jail.

Now, 400 pounds of lettuce, kale, spinach and other produce later, the coalition will celebrate the bounty of fresh vegetables and herbs harvested from its Hope Garden with a Harvest of Hope Celebration.

The celebration will be 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday at the garden, which sits next to Blaine County Courthouse at First and Walnut streets in Hailey.

Chefs from Big Bella Deli, Esta's, Full Moon Catering, Lorna's Catering and 5BBQ will prepare — for sale — dishes from the garden's produce, along with food donated by Big Wood Bread, Lava Lake Lamb, Fair Mountain Farm, Deschutes Brewery and other food vendors. Hailey firefighters will grill dogs.

Expect free-admission live music and plenty of free family activities, plus a no-host beer and wine bar. And there will be opportunities for the family to learn about ways to contribute to the Hunger Coalition as it heads toward fall and winter.

"We gathered more than 400 pounds of produce and herbs from our garden, which went to clients of our mobile food bank. That's pretty amazing, and we're pretty proud of it," said Meagan Stasz.

The number of people utilizing the Hunger Coalition's services weekly dropped during the summer from 300 families to 250 as people found landscaping and other summer jobs. But Executive Director Jeanne Liston said she anticipates the numbers will rise again as fall slack hits.

"I worry it will be more difficult this winter than last," she said. "We're seeing a level of desperation in our clients that we haven't seen before. A lot of people have tried to make ends meet on their own, but now they're running out of savings and their homes are in foreclosure."

Former Big 10 big man makes pit stop at CSI

Aziz N'diaye. Chris Patton. Paul Bunch. All three have had a hand in Kyle Rowley's pit stop at the College of Southern Idaho. The 7-foot, 280-pound Rowley played two seasons at Big 10 school Northwestern and is spending this semester at CSI before moving on to St. Mary's College in California.

While he'll never play a minute on the court for the Golden Eagles, Rowley is already making a major impact on the team in the two weeks since he arrived on campus. As for why and how Rowley wound up in Twin Falls, it's all about connections — namely, connections to one former and two current CSI big men.

Patton's role? The 6-foot-10 freshman center from Australia has committed to play at St. Mary's after spending a couple seasons with the Golden Eagles.

While talking with St. Mary's head coach Randy Bennett about Patton, CSI head coach Steve Gosar mentioned how relatively inexpensive it is to attend school at CSI.

Gosar said Bennett replied, "Let me get back to you, I might have something we need to talk about."

That something was Kyle Rowley, who needed a semester of junior college to get things lined up academically for his transfer to St. Mary's.

A native of Trinidad and Tobago, Rowley came to the United States at age 16 to attend school at Lake Forest Academy in Chicago. There he was a teammate of N'diaye, who spent the past

Turnovers, penalties key to Bobcat - Bruin matchup

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Most of the time, numbers don't lie. The Burley football team commits eight penalties per game. Twin Falls averages four.

Burley gives away 2.5 turnovers per game. Twin Falls averages 1.6.

Burley is 0-2. Twin Falls is 3-0.

When the undefeated and No. 2-ranked Bruins visit Burley at 7 p.m. today, the winless Bobcats aren't so much worried about Twin Falls beating them — they're more concerned about not beating themselves.

"We need to cut down on mental errors," said Burley senior running back and linebacker Branson Handy. "As a team we shoot ourselves in the foot."

This week's other big Great Basin game

Jerome at Canyon Ridge

7 p.m.

Radio: none

The skinny: This game will certainly be closer than the teams' 2009 matchup, a 70-3 Jerome win. Both squads have some uncertainty at quarterback. Canyon Ridge senior Tyler Myers is questionable after injuring his leg against Twin Falls last week. If he can't go, Colton Sweesy will slide from receiver to QB. Jerome junior Jake Hollifield moved from QB to receiver during last week's loss to Middleton, with freshman Zach Thibault getting some time under center. As for who will take the majority of the snaps this week, Jerome coach Gary Krumm was cryptic. "We're going to do what's best for our offense. That could mean a couple of switches," he said.

The Riverhawks (1-1) will also be without linebacker Braden Metcalf, who was ejected last week and must sit out this week, while two-way starters Joe Carey and Riley Parrish are questionable for Jerome (0-3).

Canyon Ridge coach Bill Hicks: "(Jerome) lost a lot of seniors last year, so they're young and inexperienced. I really think we match up pretty well. ... We're going to have to be able to run the ball. ... We'll come out with what we have and be ready to play."

Jerome coach Gary Krumm: "We took a resurgent-type approach (after three nonconference losses) and the kids responded well. Now we've got to apply everything and do the job. ... (Canyon Ridge is) going to have a little bit of revenge on their mind, so that will help them a little bit. ... I don't care if the score's 3-2, we've just got to get a win."

Twin Falls boys soccer claims 4-2 victory over Canyon Ridge

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls boys soccer team finally got to experience what the rest of the school's varsity athletic programs enjoyed last year: victory over Canyon Ridge.

Chris DeLaCruz scored a hat trick as the Bruins twice wasted one-goal leads before hitting twice inside the final 10 minutes for a 4-2 win over the Riverhawks at Sunway Soccer Complex Thursday.

The senior attacker's penalty kick seven minutes from time gave Twin Falls (3-3-3, 2-2-1 Great Basin, 7 pts.) a lead it held until the end. He completed his hat trick in stoppage time.

"We wanted this really bad," DeLaCruz said. "That was our incentive, to finally beat them. We came out hard and played well."

Taylor Hammond opened the scoring 10 minutes in on a rebound after Canyon Ridge keeper Josh Clark made a brilliant save. The Riverhawks felt it shouldn't have counted because the preceding free kick was taken before the whistle, but the goal stood.

Canyon Ridge leveled the match 15 minutes later when Suren Thapa converted a rebound of his own saved penalty kick for the first of his two goals. He scored in the second half, also from the penalty spot.

DeLaCruz took over in the meantime, capitalizing on a missed clearance to put Twin Falls back in front 2-1. His successful penalty kick put the Bruins ahead to stay, and he put the finishing touches on his hat trick by reacting first to Ben Worst's free kick, which squirmed between Clark's hands.

CSI volleyball gears up for 2nd home tournament

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The last chance to make a statement before Scenic West Athletic Conference play is here.

Seven JUCO volleyball teams will take to the College of Southern Idaho's gymnasium as part of this weekend's Starr Corporation Invitational.

The host Golden Eagles and their six guests will each play two matches today and two on Saturday.

Last season had the Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6 and 17 teams in the nation set in a straight round-robin format. This time there are four ranked teams: No. 3 CSI, No. 5 Salt Lake, No. 13 Frank Phillips (Texas) and No. 19 North Idaho.

While this year's tournament isn't as loaded as far as the poll goes, the field still provides plenty of pitfalls.

"These are good volleyball teams that are coming in here," said CSI coach Heidi Cartisser. "We've put ourselves

Castaneda, Burley top Minico 4-1

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Gustavo con gusto.

Burley senior forward Gustavo Castaneda had a hand in each of his teams' goals Thursday as the Bobcats beat rival Minico 4-1 in front of an energetic crowd.

"That's just how we play," Castaneda said. "We played awesome. I want to thank all the fans for the support we got today. I hope it's like that every game we play. It gives us motivation so we can take the victory."

Burley earned a much-needed win to give it nine points in the Great Basin Conference standings with a 2-0-3 record (6-1-3 overall). Minico dropped to 5-3-0 overall (2-3-0 GBC, 6 pts.)

Castaneda scored on a penalty kick just before half-time after Minico was called for a hand ball in the box.

In the 44th minute, Castaneda crossed to Alex Greener, who headed in the Bobcats' second goal.

"We knew their defenders were bigger, so our game plan was to play it wide," Greener said. "We wanted to dominate the ball, keep our passes crisp and play our game."

Minico got on the board in the 60th minute when Juan Lopez played the ball over the top and a streaking Alberto Ramirez chased it down and booted it in the net.

"I wanted to pick up the team and after I scored it brought us back a little bit," Ramirez said. "But then after (Burley's) goals started coming, it got us down. Our team didn't come to play. We got off focus after the PK and the second goal. It threw our game off a little bit."

Castaneda nailed a high, bending free kick from 25 yards out in the 64th minute to put Burley up 3-1 and swing all momentum back to the Bobcats. In the 75th, Nate Searle buried a penalty kick after Minico was called for taking Castaneda down in the box.

"We have them at our home (Oct. 5) and we'll be ready," said Ramirez. "We'll (fix) the mistakes we made and we're going to come back 10 times better than we did today."

Minico travels to Bonneville on Saturday and Burley hosts Jerome on Monday.

Burley girls pull away to beat Minico

Times-News

After a spirited halftime speech by Burley girls soccer coach Sara Edwards, the Bobcats increased their intensity in the second half and beat rival Minico 3-0 Thursday.

"They really picked it up the second half," Edwards said. "We could have done better the whole game for sure, but at least we came away with a win."

Megan Graham buried a penalty kick in the 31st minute after Minico was whistled for a handball foul in the box.

Burley rocked the frame in the second half, hitting the crossbar in the 47th minute, the right post in the 48th, the left post in the 59th. The Bobcats finally put the ball in the net six minutes later when Taylor Rawlins rebounded another shot off the crossbar and scored.

Graham scored her second goal in the 75th minute.

Burley (3-7 overall, 3-2 Great Basin Conference) travels to Jerome on Tuesday. Minico hosts Bonneville on Saturday.

Rowley

two seasons at CSI before signing with the University of Washington.

The connection to N'diaye sealed the CSI deal for both Rowley and Gosar. "Traditionally I wouldn't want anybody in our program that wasn't somebody we weren't directly coaching and going to have all year long and spend some time on," said Gosar. "Until I knew it was Kyle."

Gosar was familiar with Rowley through his recruitment of N'diaye. And N'diaye's experience at CSI made Rowley feel confident he'd get good coaching and competition in Twin Falls.

"He made tremendous strides since his senior year in high school," Rowley said of N'diaye. "He got hurt and still came back strong. He's about to play at Washington so I know he did well here."

Decision made, Rowley flew to Boise, marking the first time he'd ever set foot in Idaho. But a familiar face quickly made him feel at home. During the two-hour drive to Twin Falls, CSI assistant coach Colby Blaine filled Rowley in on the Eagles' roster. When Blaine mentioned 7-foot freshman center Paul Bunch, Rowley was shocked.

"Crazy coincidence," Rowley said. Two years Rowley's junior, Bunch was on a rival AAU team in Chicago. When Rowley arrived in Twin Falls, he said, "First guy I saw in the dorms was Paul Bunch."

Rowley started 28 games as a freshman at Northwestern, but only five last season. He averaged 2.8 points and 2.0 rebounds in 11 minutes per game during his two years with the Wildcats. Seeking more playing time and a better situation, he verbally committed to St. Mary's in May and plans to sign with the Gaels in November. He aims to graduate from CSI in December and then complete his redshirt season at St. Mary's before resuming his career in the 2011-12 season.

For now though, he's helping the guys who played a role in making CSI his destination.

"That's the benefit I saw, having a mature player that can help our younger guys understand and almost be like a player-coach," Gosar said of Rowley. "... He's been great. When we're doing some skill work, he'll be on the baseline in our players' ears explaining to them what they did wrong or what we're asking them to do. It's like having a big brother down there to help lead the way."

It's a role Rowley has embraced.

"Especially with the centers I feel the need and responsibility to help motivate them," he said, "tell them, 'Hey, push through that extra sprint.' If they're tired, I want to run it with them. I want to be there every step of the way to help them out and give them whatever advice I can."

Even coming from two seasons of Big 10 play, Rowley's impressed with the talent at CSI. He called the Golden Eagle guards "very explosive" and praised the physical play of CSI big men like Patton, Bunch and sophomore Kenny Buckner. But another aspect of the 2010-11 squad has left the most indelible impression on Rowley.

"One thing I really notice and like about the team here is they're like a family," he said. "Every day I come in I'm amazed. They have 16 or 17 freshmen and only like five returners and it's crazy that the coaching staff has been able to mesh all these personalities and have everyone going and competing hard day in and day out."

A similar family atmosphere is one reason Rowley chose St. Mary's.

"If the guys on the team bond together and you have that chemistry it makes things on the court 10 times easier," he said.

Still, it's strange for Rowley to work out daily with teammates he'll never play alongside in a game that counts.

"It does play in the back of my mind," he said. "When that happens I think even though I can't play and can't help the team on the court, I'm going to do everything I can to help them off the court, whether that be in practice, playing hard every day, competing just to give people good looks. I just try to always make sure I'm being positive and motivating."

That mission is being accomplished, evidenced by Gosar's succinct appraisal: "Kyle's fantastic."

Interestingly, the 7-footer's assessment of this year's Golden Eagles is much the same.

Said Rowley: "I think they have the right group of guys to do something special here."

chipped effort cleared off the line in the first half, DeLaCruz wanted to be sure.

"It's just instinct. With the ball and an open net you want to get it in there," he said. "You never know if someone from the other team is going to get to it."

Thapa's goals ended a lengthy scoring drought for the Riverhawks (1-8-0, 0-5-0), who were blanked in their previous four games. Thapa twice hammered the ball just over the crossbar in the game's latter stages.

DeLaCruz could have had ever more goals as he had one effort cleared off the line and grazed the crossbar with a couple more. Clark made four top-notch saves to keep Canyon Ridge in contention, but the Riverhawks couldn't fashion many chances from open play.

"We wanted to win the game, but this was a confidence booster for the boys," said Canyon Ridge coach Brian Gillenwater. "Josh didn't play like a freshman (in goal), and he made huge saves to keep us in the game. I think we're pretty happy with the way we played ... that's a good team that beat us today."

Both teams are back in action Saturday when Twin Falls visits the Community School and Canyon Ridge hosts McCall-Donnelly.

CSI has the schedule placed perfectly for itself. The Golden Eagles play Northwest (Wyo.) College at 3 p.m. today and Navarro (Texas) College at 7 p.m. On Saturday, CSI plays Salt Lake at 11 a.m. before facing Frank Phillips

It will be tough for CSI not to overlook a pair of unranked foes ahead of bitter rival Salt Lake.

"We know we can't take it easy and look ahead to Salt Lake," said sophomore outside hitter Elisa Brochado. "We've got to take each match and play the best we can. If we do that, I think we'll be fine."

Yankee sleight of hand: Jeter cheater?

NEW YORK (AP) — Derek Jeter has a bit part in a box-office hit, and he's putting those acting skills to good use.

The New York Yankees captain, with a cameo in the Will Ferrell comedy "The Other Guys," gave an Oscar-worthy performance by pretending to get hit by a pitch in a pennant race game Wednesday night.

Howling, hopping and hurting — seemingly, anyway — Jeter even got the team trainer to examine his left arm. And then the All-Star often hailed as a model of good sportsmanship took his base.

More like stole it, fans in Tampa Bay hollered.

"Jeter cheater!" they chanted.

Replays clearly showed what really happened: Chad Qualls' fastball squarely struck the knob of Jeter's bat, not him. But Major League Baseball doesn't use instant replay in these situations.

For more than a century, ballplayers have tried to bend the rules. Pitchers throw spitballs, outfielders fake catches on balls that bounce, short-stops make phantom tags. This isn't golf, where players are expected to call penalties on themselves.

Coming off the Steroids Era, where cheating often meant illegal performance-enhancing drugs, some actually found a charm in Jeter's old-fashioned chicanery.

Yet seeing the squeaky-clean Jeter involved in Yankee hanky-panky was startling. So was his response. Asked where the ball hit, he readily admitted his sleight of hand.

"The bat," he said, without apology. "It's part of the game."

To his legion of admirers, Derek's deke was a savvy play. The bat flew, he spun around, doubled over and convinced the home-plate umpire he'd been plunked. He wound up scoring a key run in the seventh inning.

To Jeter's detractors, it was a cheap trick. Tampa Bay manager Joe Maddon argued so much he got ejected, though he praised Jeter after the Rays rallied past the Yankees 4-3 into first place in the AL East.

"There's several thespians throughout baseball," Maddon said. "I thought Derek did a great job, and I applaud it, because I wish our guys would do the same thing."

Both the Yankees and Rays were off Thursday, but Jeter Theater played throughout the majors.

On the Cincinnati Reds' telecast of their game against Arizona — a matchup with no direct connection to what occurred at Tropicana Field — there was a fan text poll with this question: Are you OK with the Derek Jeter play? Fans were split on whether it was gamesmanship or farce.

Batters often try to pretend they've been hit by pitches that just miss; it's something they're taught to do. But it usually takes them a split-second to start acting, and that rarely tricks the ump's.

Jeter, however, got right in character, especially after the ball hit the bat and sent vibrations up his arm. He fooled home-plate umpire Lance Barksdale, then managed to sneak a peek to watch Maddon's dispute.

"What can you do? My job is to get on base. He said it hit me, so I'm not going to argue with him," Jeter said.

A former World Series MVP, the 36-year-old Jeter currently is stuck in one of the worst slumps of his career. With his team trailing by a run, he would take anything.

"I've been hit before when they said it hit the bat. It goes both ways," he said.

While the four umpires huddled to discuss the call, Maddon was certain the ball had nicked Jeter's bat and rolled out near the pitcher's mound. Maddon told Qualls to retrieve the ball and throw to first base, to get Jeter out.

No chance.

"Nobody could tell me that the ball hit his hand, in any way, shape or form, or his wrist. But everybody could tell me that the ball hit the bat," Maddon said. "I really hoped the play would be reversed based on pure, pure logic."

No luck there, either.

"Basically it hit the knob and it was a fair ball, and he was out at first. That's all there is to it," Qualls said. "He's Derek Jeter, but you know what? It's still the game of baseball and he was out, and that's the play that should have been called."

Westbrook, Cardinals blank Padres

ST. LOUIS — Jake Westbrook pitched eight effective innings and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Diego Padres 4-0 on Thursday night in the opener of a key four-game series.

Albert Pujols hit a run-scoring double in the Cardinals' four-run sixth inning, snapping an 0-for-9 skid, and Yadier Molina added a two-run single.

St. Louis snapped a three-game skid and moved within seven of NL Central-leading Cincinnati, which lost 3-1 to Arizona. The Cardinals have 17 games left on their schedule.

San Diego lost its second consecutive game and dropped into a tie for the NL West lead, pending San Francisco's late game against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Westbrook (2-3) gave up six hits and walked three in his longest outing since he was acquired from Cleveland in a three-team deal July 31.

DIAMONDBACKS 3, REDS 1

CINCINNATI — Rodrigo Lopez held the NL's top offense in check for seven innings, getting his first win in more than two months, and Arizona slowed Cincinnati's playoff push.

The NL Central leaders went 4-3 on a homestand against the league's two worst clubs — Pittsburgh and Arizona — to keep control of the division.

Lopez (6-14) gave up one run and eight hits while winning for the first time since July 8.

METS 6, PIRATES 2

NEW YORK — Mike Pelfrey earned his 15th win, pitching seven strong innings and hitting a tiebreaking single to help the Mets finish a four-game sweep.

Slumping rookie Lucas Duda had a two-run double and the Mets rallied for their first four-game sweep since June 2006 at Arizona. Angel Pagan added three hits, two RBIs and an outstanding catch in center field.

New York (74-73) has won seven of nine to move over .500 for the first time since Aug. 24.

AMERICAN LEAGUE INDIANS 3, ANGELS 2, 11 INNINGS

CLEVELAND — Trevor Crowe scored from third base on a two-out error by third baseman Alberto Callaspo to give the Cleveland Indians a 3-2 win in 11 innings over the Los Angeles Angels on Thursday night.

Crowe doubled with one out in the 11th off Bobby Cassevah (0-1) and went to third on a groundout by Drew Sutton.

TWINS 8, WHITE SOX 5

CHICAGO — Delmon Young hit his 18th homer, Carl Pavano got his 17th win and the Minnesota Twins beat the fading Chicago White Sox 8-5 to complete the three-game sweep on Thursday night.

Paul Konerko hit a solo homer in the third against Pavano (17-11) after being drilled in the face by a pitch in the first inning. A.J. Pierzynski and Alexei Ramirez also went deep, but the Twins walked away with their 11th win in 12 games.

St. Louis Cardinals first baseman Albert Pujols is congratulated by teammates in the dugout after he and Jon Jay scored on a single by Yadier Molina during the sixth inning against the San Diego Padres Thursday in St. Louis.

NFL locker room flap almost unthinkable in Europe

PARIS (AP) — Viewed from Europe, the story making news in American football this week of the New York Jets players who disgraced themselves by directing "Whoooo-weee!" catcalls at a television reporter working in their locker room is bizarre and alien.

Ines Sainz's embarrassment is easy to understand and empathize with. And even on this side of the Atlantic, we grasped enough of the subsequent debate to disagree with those in the United States who argued that Sainz, of Mexico's TV Azteca, perhaps invited trouble by dressing too sexily. That can never be an excuse for such boorishness.

But reporters in the dressing room? What folly is that?

To those who work in sports outside of the United States and who jealously guard the privacy of locker rooms, the liberal access for reporters covering U.S. leagues is unthinkable and a recipe for problems or, depending on your point of view, the way of the future.

In the English Premier League, at the football World Cup, in international cricket or at the Olympics, Sainz — or any reporter — would never have been given access to the locker room. Nor will that change any time soon. Manchester United boss Alex Ferguson will have retired long before a reporter ever gets to see him unleash one of his famous "hairdryer" locker-room rants at a player who has angered him.

"Our managers would say that the dressing room is sacrosanct," says Premier League publicity manager Philip Dorward. "It will be a long time before that one comes to these shores. There's no call for it."

Ditto for the Olympics. "I can't imagine it," says International Olympic Committee spokesman Mark Adams. "One can never say never, but it is extremely unlikely to be considered."

Same for the World Cup. "How can you open access to hundreds of journalists?" asks

FIFA spokesman Nicolas Maingot. "It would be absolutely impossible for you to work in there."

"There's also, of course, the necessity of the privacy of the team," he says. Post-match happenings in the locker room — celebrations, sadness, tactical post-mortems, etc. — "are privileged moments which should be reserved for the teams."

One argument cited in Europe is that reporters don't need to enter locker rooms because they can speak to coaches and players in press conferences and in "mixed zones" the athletes walk through before or after they shower and change. There are no such zones in team sports in the United States. Instead, NFL and baseball locker rooms open to journalists of both sexes and to cameras starting 10 minutes after a game.

Another reason cited outside the United States is that locker rooms are often too small to accommodate reporters. For example, they hold "at a squeeze, 25-30 people, absolute max" at Lords, the London home of cricket, says James Fitzgerald, a spokesman for the sport's governing body, the ICC.

Cricket also wants to prevent any contacts between match-fixers and players or any leaks of information from within teams, such as when a player might bat, that could be valuable to gambling syndicates. Allegations that Pakistan players may have acted in cahoots with fixers are a current concern. Under ICC rules, only players, team staff and a handful of others are allowed into dressing rooms.

Former Chelsea winger Pat Nevin says that in football, players would want locker rooms kept shut because they don't trust the reporters who cover them. British tabloids are especially ruthless in exposing the unsavory sides of players' lives, like the recent claims that Man United striker Wayne Rooney paid prostitutes for sex.

Floyd Mayweather Jr. hit with more felony charges in Vegas

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Undefeated boxer Floyd Mayweather Jr. was hit Thursday with three more felony charges in a domestic violence case that already had him facing a theft charge.

Clark County District Attorney David Roger significantly raised the ante in the case alleging that Mayweather hit and threatened the life of his ex-girlfriend, Josie Harris, and threatened to beat two of their children during a pre-dawn argument at the woman's home a week ago.

Mayweather, 33, is one of boxing's most recognizable figures, with a record of 41-0 and 25 knockouts. The welterweight goes by the nickname "Money" and earned more than $20 million in May in one fight in Las Vegas against "Sugar" Shane Mosley.

Mayweather remained free on $3,000 bail pending arraignment Nov. 9 following his arrest last Friday on a felony grand larceny charge.

Authorities alleged he took cell phones belonging to Harris and two of their children following the altercation. That felony charge carries a possible sentence of five years.

The new criminal complaint filed Thursday added two felony coercion and one felony robbery charge along with one misdemeanor domestic battery and three misdemeanor harassment charges.

Convictions on all eight charges would increase the possible penalty Mayweather could face if convicted of all charges to 34 years.

Mayweather's lawyer, Richard Wright, told The Associated Press he hadn't seen the new complaint and declined immediate comment.

Wright has previously denied wrongdoing on Mayweather's behalf.

Police initially labeled the scuffle with Harris a domestic battery case after she told police Mayweather was angry about her relationship with another man when he confronted her at the Las Vegas home where Harris and the children live.

Mayweather wanted to evict her from the house, which he owns, Harris said.

The new charges name the couple's 10-year-old and 9-year-old sons as victims of coercion, for alleged threats to beat them if they called 911 or left the apartment during the scuffle.

Under Nevada law, coercion is when a person compels or forces someone to do something they have a legal right to do.

The harassment charges allege that Mayweather threatened Harris and the two children, and the battery charge alleges Mayweather grabbed Harris by her hair, hit her and twisted her arm.

The couple had three children, now ages 7 to 10, during what Harris characterized for authorities as a 15-year relationship. She said she lived with Mayweather for seven years before separating in May.

Mayweather also made headlines earlier this month with an online video laced with expletives and racial rants against boxing rival Manny Pacquiao.

When a catch isn't really a catch

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

With NFL rules, there's often a catch whether someone actually made a catch. Ask Calvin Johnson. When the Detroit receiver came down in the end zone with the football in the final seconds of the Lions' opener at Chicago, the victory celebrations began for the visitors. A little too soon, it turned out. Replays show Johnson seemingly so eager to celebrate that he doesn't complete the catch according to NFL rules. Yes, it sure looks like he's done the job and the Lions have roared back to beat the Bears, but, no, the finishing touch is missing. And that's all that matters to the officials, who look to see if in the original momentum of going to the ground, the receiver comes to a complete stop on the ground with the ball. As long as he is still moving, the continued momentum, or his rolling over, are part of the process of making the catch. "What we try to do with the rule is eliminate the gray area," NFL director of officiating Carl Johnson said. "That way, it is very clear for our officials to officiate. I was on the field for nine seasons and that is the way we have officiated that play since I have been in the league. "All our officials look at is when the action ends, does he have the ball?" Unlike a runner breaking the plane of the goal line for a touchdown — another rule that sparks controversy — a receiver in the end zone is required to secure the ball, get two feet inbounds and, if he goes to the ground, have complete control of the ball in doing so. Calvin Johnson did everything but the latter, according to the rule. As Carl Johnson suggests, maybe the Detroit wideout should have "handed the ball to the official. Some players automatically do that and then go celebrate with their teammates." The clamor over whether it should have been a touchdown is not lost on Carl Johnson, who took over this year from the retired Mike Pereira. Nor is it lost on Pereira. "I am not surprised at the uproar," Carl Johnson said. "It reminds me of the tuck rule, which a lot of people didn't know when it became a headline. But it was properly ruled on the field. Now, when it happens, it's a nonevent because the fans know it." Pereira also references the tuck rule, the first thing that made Tom Brady famous back in 2002. "Yes, it's the same as with the tuck rule, and that was not one of the most understood rules in the game," said Pereira, now the officiating analyst for Fox. "The networks slow down the play in such slow motion it seems like he has it forever. You see that in real time it's nearly simultaneous that the ball bounces out very shortly after he hits the ground." Cris Carter, one of the NFL's leading all-time receivers with 1,101 catches, was known for his ability to make spectacular grabs. He also prided himself on knowing the rules, and he's not so sure some of today's top pass catchers are so knowledgeable.

Carter notes there are two sets of rules, one for the 100 yards of the field and one for the 10 yards of the end zone. If a player doesn't know all of those rules, he is doing himself and his team a disservice. "To be a craftsman, you have to know all those things," Carter said. "That's why they bring the referees at practices and in training camps, so you know what they are trying to do." Carter said when he played, he'd notice teammates nodding off during meetings with the officials. "They probably don't know the rules as well as they should have. I think (Calvin Johnson) doesn't know the rule and when he pulls the ball away from the DB, you should hand it to the ref," Carter said. "When you are in the end zone, the only thing without argument is when the ball does not move and you then hand it to the ref." Arguments over such catches and non-catches have existed for decades. Soon after the 1999 NFC title game in which Tampa Bay's Bert Emanuel was denied a critical catch on a late drive when the tip of the ball touched the ground, the NFL's competition committee tweaked the rule about possessing the ball on a reception. In the San Diego-Oakland opener last season, the Raiders' Louis Murphy had a catch similar to Johnson's ruled a drop. Lots of uproar — temporarily. "Yeah, it seemed like a big thing in Week 2 and then as the season went on, it kind of was sent to the wayside," Pereira said. Carter doesn't think the catch rule will be re-examined. Pereira believes the competition committee will discuss it. "The committee is very thorough and a lot of issues are discussed and I know they will get back to it and talk about it this year," Pereira said. "I would not be confident they will come up with any real change." That would disappoint Jaguars coach Jack Del Rio, who believes the Lions were robbed. "There's a common sense part that's missing in this league," Del Rio said. "When I saw Detroit play ... how that's not a catch, that's incredible."

Bush: Giving up Heisman not an admission of guilt

METAIRIE, La. — Reggie Bush said Thursday that his decision to relinquish his Heisman Trophy is "not an admission of guilt," just the best way to end the controversy. "It's me showing respect to the Heisman Trophy itself and to the people who came before me and the people coming after," Bush said after Saints practice. "I just felt like it was the best thing to do, the most respectful thing to do because obviously I do respect the Heisman. I do respect all the things it stands for." The Heisman Trophy Trust had discussed reviewing Bush's eligibility for the award after an NCAA report concluded that Bush and his family had improperly accepted cash and gifts from sports agents while Bush was playing for Southern Cal. Bush said he thought returning the award was the best way to move forward. "I felt just to kind of silence all the talk around it, all the negativity around it — I felt like this would be the best decision to do right now so I could focus." Bush was the landslide winner of the Heisman following a highlight-filled 2005 season in which he piled up 2,890 all-purpose yards and helped lead USC to the BCS national title game, which the Trojans lost to Texas. Bush is now the first winner in the 75-year history of the Heisman — one of the most prestigious prizes in American sports — to forfeit the award. "I feel like he's tried to put himself in a position to do whatever he can do to help the situation," said Saints defensive tackle Sedrick Ellis, also a former USC teammate of Bush. "He's always been a good guy as long as I've known him at USC and here in New Orleans. ... Hopefully (people will) finally leave him alone about it. It's five or six years ago. We need to let it go and move on." Coach Sean Payton said Bush has "matured a ton here since we drafted him" and has "the full support of the players in the locker room." "I know that he feels like this is a family — a close-knit family — and for him, just like the rest of us, it's about winning championships," Payton said. "He's done that once already and we're aspiring to win more." Bush said he consulted family and some associates before forfeiting the Heisman, a move some of those close to him opposed. "My mom and dad didn't want me to give it back," Bush said. "That's just the motherly and fatherly nature of parents. They understand it at the end of the day. They understand I'm a grown man and I've got to make my own decisions and this is a learning experience for me and anybody else coming after me. ... All I can do is grow stronger from here." Allegations that Bush and his parents had accepted improper benefits while he was still an amateur athlete surfaced in 2006 and the NCAA began a years-long probe into the matter soon afterward. JETS CB REVIS LIMITED WITH TIGHT HAMSTRING FLORHAM PARK, N.J. — Deep breath, Jets fans. Darrelle Revis says he'll be just fine. The star cornerback was limited in practice

Thursday with tightness in his left hamstring, but fully expects to play Sunday in New York's game against the New England Patriots. "It's just a tightness," Revis said. "It's not anything that serious to where I will not be playing on Sunday." Coach Rex Ryan opened his daily news conference with the injury report, saying linebacker Calvin Pace is out with a broken foot, and then cleared his throat. "This next one's got me a little choked up," he quipped. Ryan later said he wasn't "overly concerned" about the hamstring, and wanted to "err on the side of caution." Defensive coordinator Mike Pettine characterized it as "a real minor thing." COWBOYS FB ANDERSON HAS KNEE SURGERY; WARE RETURNS IRVING, Texas — Cowboys fullback Deon Anderson will be out 2 to 4 weeks after left knee surgery. Anderson underwent the procedure Thursday to repair a torn meniscus. While Dallas has another fullback in rookie Chris Gronkowski, coach Wade Phillips said it's possible they will add another fullback or tight end. Also Thursday, linebacker DeMarcus Ware returned to practice on a limited basis as he recovers from a slight concussion. He's expected to participate fully on Friday. Offensive linemen Marc Colombo and Kyle Kosier made it through the whole workout and are expected to start Sunday against Chicago. — The Associated Press

STYLISH FUNCTIONALITY

2010 HONDA ELEMENT CROSSOVER

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

Restyled last year, the Honda Element has built on its spacious and versatile character by adding a more chiseled exterior appearance and a refreshed interior design with an expanded selection of available high-tech and functional features. Exterior styling changes to the front of the vehicle provide a more substantial and bolder look. Changes to the front fascia and side profile involve a new hood line that follows a continuously horizontal plane extending from the A-pillar to the front of the vehicle.

The new design replaces the downward slope that began mid-fender on the previous models and results in a more vertical front appearance. Steel front fenders replace the composite body panels on all models (the rear fenders retain composite construction). The new grille design provides a consistent appearance similar to other Honda truck models. The rear skylight, previously exclusive to Elements equipped with RealTime 4WD, has been discontinued.

Offered in LX, EX and SC trim levels, power for the Honda crossover is generated by a 2.4L i-VTEC® four-cylinder engine that is bolted to a five-speed automatic transmission. Real Time 4WD™ is an available option.

The Element's fully independent suspension uses a front MacPherson strut design and a rear compact double wishbone design for responsive handling and a comfortable ride. Chassis safety highlights include Vehicle Stability Assist (also known as Electronic Stability Control) and four-wheel disc brakes with ABS, Electronic Brake Distribution (EBD) and Brake Assist. Vehicle Stability Assist helps sense oversteer and understeer, and can adjust brake pressure at each wheel and/or reduce engine power to help restore the driver's intended course. Electronic Brake Distribution helps to balance braking forces depending on dynamic loading. Brake Assist helps apply full braking force in some emergency braking situations. A Tire Pressure Monitoring System (TPMS) alerts the driver when tire pressure is significantly under-inflated.

Additional LX and EX standard features include power rack-and-pinion steering and front and rear stabilizer bars (30.0x4.5 mm tubular front / 21.0 mm solid rear). The Element SC adds 18-inch alloy wheels, P225/55R18 tires, exclusive spring and damper tuning (30 percent firmer), a lowered ride height (approximately 0.7 inches) and increased rear stabilizer bar size (25.0 mm, solid). Compared to Element LX and EX, the solid front stabilizer bar is 25 percent stiffer and the rear stabilizer bar is 30 percent stiffer. The steering rack also provides a 6 percent faster ratio (2.94:1 compared to 3.26:1). Interior changes with the restyling include new, brighter color schemes with titanium-look side linings, new fabric patterns, and revised switchgear designs and meter graphics. A restyled low-profile center console is standard on the Element LX. The Element EX adds a new convertible center console with a removable cooler/storage box while the Element SC retains its exclusive center console. For additional storage, the Element EX and SC are equipped with a modular three-compartment overhead console based on the Raipoint™

Vehicle Personalization System, expanding the vehicle's hidden storage versatility compared to the previous version. The new overhead console includes two large storage bins that can accommodate CD cases and similar items and a rear storage area for sunglasses.

Available new features on the Element EX and SC include the Honda Satellite-linked Navigation System2 with Voice Activation and a rearview camera (automatic transmission-equipped vehicles only); USB digital media connectivity; and improved overhead console storage areas with modular compartments.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to "Emile" for eight years. We have been together for the last 15. Emile has always been demeaning and sarcastic to me. When he gets upset about something he blames me. This has been going on for so long I don't know what to do anymore. I am so depressed and hurt that all I can think of is "going away" permanently. I don't think I'd ever harm myself, but I feel more desperate and hopeless every day. I'm down so low I don't know how to come back up. Please advise.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR NO TEARS LEFT: Has no one told you that the effects of constant put-downs can be equally — if not more — debilitating than being physically abused? After 15 years of having your self-esteem chipped away, I'm pleased that you finally found the strength to ask for help.

If you have family, arrange to visit them — a LONG visit. If you can afford to separate from your husband, pick up the phone and call the National Domestic Violence Hotline ((800) 799-7233) and ask for help to safely get away. I'm not exaggerating when I say your mental health depends on it.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a suburban neighborhood where the homes are very close together. My back yard is too small to have a clothes-line. Because I love the smell of my bed sheets after they have dried outside, I hang them out to dry by pinning them to the chain link fence that surrounds the perimeter of my back yard. My girlfriends say they would be offended if they were my neighbors. I say it's environmentally friendly, and because I'm hanging out only linens and not underwear, nobody should be offended. Who is correct?

— IN THE BREEZE
IN OTTAWA,
ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR IN THE BREEZE: Many neighborhoods have codes, covenants and restrictions that dictate what can and cannot be done within their boundaries. Review the documents to ensure you are not breaking any rules. If you're not, you have had no complaints from the neighbors, and your laundry isn't becoming soiled from flapping against the chain link fence or freezing solid in January, it's all right with me.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, we got a new neighbor. When I was out walking my dog one day, my neighbor was doing the same. At first I thought this person was female, but as we got to talking I began to doubt myself. First off, my neighbor is petite, has a boyish haircut, no breasts, dresses like a guy and speaks in a voice that could be male or female. I stood there and decided I'd ask for a name, thinking it would solve my problem. Wrong! The person's name is "Chris." Abby, I don't know what to do. I feel bad for not knowing this person's gender. Is there any way I can find an answer without Chris knowing? I don't want to refer to this person as a "he" if she's a "she," and vice versa.

— GIRL NEXT DOOR
MISSOULA, MONT.

DEAR GIRL NEXT DOOR: Refer to your neighbor as Chris. Asking other neighbors what they have learned about Chris could create more conversation — and problems — than it would solve. My advice is to continue being kind and neighborly to Chris. The more you get to know this person, the more likely the answers you're seeking will present themselves.

TO MY JEWISH READERS: Sundown marks the beginning of Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. During this 24-hour period, observant Jewish people fast, engage in reflection and prayer, and formally repent for any sin that might have been committed during the previous Hebrew year. To all of you — may your fast be an

the 260th day of 2010.
There are 105 days left in the year. The Jewish Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur,

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 17, 1862, in the bloodiest battle day in U.S. history, Union forces fought Confederate invaders in the Civil War Battle of Antietam in Maryland; more than 3,600 men were killed.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1787, the Constitution of the United States was completed and signed by a majority of delegates attending the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia.

In 1920, the American
Professional Football Association – a precursor of the National Football League – was formed in Canton, Ohio.

In 1939, the Soviet Union invaded Poland during World War II, more than two weeks after Nazi Germany had launched its assault.

In 1944, during World War II, Allied paratroopers launched Operation Market
Garden, landing behind
German lines in the Netherlands. (After initial success, the Allies were beaten back by the Germans.)

In 1948, the United Nations mediator for Palestine, Count Folke
Bernadotte, was assassinated in Jerusalem by Jewish extremists.

In 1949, more than 120
people died when fire gutted the Canadian passenger steamship SS Noronic at a pier in Toronto.

In 1959, groundbreaking took place for Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles.

In 1978, after meeting at Camp David, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin
(men-AH'-kem BAY'-ginh)
and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat signed a framework for a peace treaty.

In 1980, former
Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza was assassinated in Paraguay.

In 1984, Progressive Conservative leader Brian Mulroney took office as Canada's 18th prime minister.

Ten years ago: A U.N. refugee worker (Mensah Kpognon) was killed and a second (Sapeu Laurence Djeja) kidnapped in a raid in Guinea (the abducted staffer was later released). In Sydney, Australia, swimmer
Tom Dolan of the United States won the 400-meter individual medley.

Five years ago: Two passengers were killed, more than 80 people hurt when a Chicago Metra commuter train derailed while changing tracks at high speed.
Insurgents assassinated a Kurdish member of parliament, his brother and their driver in an ambush north of Baghdad.

One year ago: President
Barack Obama abruptly canceled a long-planned missile shield for Eastern Europe, replacing a Bush-era project that was bitterly opposed by Russia with a plan he contended would better defend against a growing threat of Iranian missiles. An 18-year-old man armed with an ax, knives and Molotov cocktails attacked his high school in Ansbach,
Germany, injuring nine students and a teacher before being shot and arrested.
Police in New Haven, Conn. charged Raymond Clark III,
a Yale animal lab technician, with murdering graduate student Annie Le.

IF SEPTEMBER 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Too much confidence can be your downfall. You are feeling lucky this month and might have a great time, but the business or financial strategies that attract you are at odds with your basic nature. In October, guard against extravagance and avoid beginning anything of great importance, such as a new job. The second half of December is much more favorable for important decisions about your career or your finances or even jockeying into position for a raise or promotion. New contacts or joining a group or organization might be in the stars for you in March. That is a good time to meet people who will have your best interests at heart.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get the stone rolling, because it won't gather any moss. It is a good time to hire employees or start a creative project. The universe may provide what you need and give you necessary tools to succeed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Learn to lean on loyalty. Pick up the phone and do your best to call in favors from those who can help you rise higher on the ladder of success. Make plans for the future with a favorite playmate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reach for the moon. You could meet a helpful individual who can light the way to a better future. If you let creative imagination flow and create a picture of success, you are likely to achieve it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Charity begins at home. Be generous to those in close emotional proximity and they will be good to you when the chips are down. It is a good day to make an agreement, a promise or to get advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Like a ballerina, you need to stay on your toes. Your ability to think creatively and act with split-second timing is enhanced. Write down inspirations and ideas, as they may be useful at some future juncture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may have unfounded fears. You may be concerned that too many ears are connected to too many mouths. Put important plans into motion late in the day when confidence has built to a high point.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The older the fiddle, the sweeter the tune. You can expect that tried and true old buddies will buoy you up and sweep you along toward a more productive future. Pluck a few heartstrings adventurously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Birds of a feather flock together. It is a fine time to talk over your ideas with someone in a position to help you out. An impulsive idea or an inspiration can work magic to put a deal through.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sell to the highest bidder. If your career involves selling anything, know that people are willing to put their money where their mouths are. Luxury items and extravagances are in the spotlight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Leniency will bring you luck. Try a little tenderness rather than hardnosed business tactics to get your way. This might even be a better day for networking and exploration than for commerce.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The spirit of adventure is awesome. This might be a perfect day to explore new ideas or to test principles. The boss may ask you for advice or those in high places may look upon you sympathetically.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Advertise to survive. Show off your best qualities to gain recognition and network to form firm friendships. A bit of compassion and sympathy can work magic on a sticky situation that causes tension.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Not wrung from speculations and subtleties, but from common sense and observation."

— Thomas Browne

The Lederer tournament, an invitational teams event for eight of the top squads in Europe, will begin on Oct. 30 and will be relayed on bridgebase.com. All this week's deals come from last year's event.

Victor Silverstone usually provides a couple of stimulating hands, and today's deal, which is one of his, contains some interesting points.

Four spades doubled was typical of the rough and tumble of international play, with chances for both sides to do better. In the auction, the one-club opening was clubs or balanced, and the one-heart response showed spades, a style that is becoming increasingly popular at the very top levels of the game.

West cashed his minor-suit winners and exited with a club, ruffed by South, a key play. In retrospect Silverstone believed he should have taken a first-round trump finesse, but he recovered well.

After cashing the spade ace and discovering the bad news, he led a heart to dummy's jack. Now he repeated the spade finesse, crossed to a diamond, ruffed another club, returned to dummy with the heart ace, and led another club to trump-coup East in the two-card ending.

You will perhaps have spotted West's error: he should have inserted the heart king on the first round of the suit, after which declarer is an entry short for the coup. Better still would have been to exit with a diamond rather than a club at trick four; then finding the blocking play would have been unnecessary.

ANSWER: Your partner has shown a great hand by doubling again. The second double is also takeout. Having passed over one heart at your first turn, you can hardly do less than bid four spades now. Partner can't really expect you to have any more than this.
