Funding woes worsen at Twin Falls Salvation Army

The national recession once only led more people to the glass doors of the Twin Falls Salvation Army office. Now, it's started to pound on those glass doors itself.

The Christian-based, nonprofit community outreach organization is seeking new means of funding as it faces a $26,000 budget deficit heading into its next fiscal year, which starts in October.

The Salvation Army's summer day camp and after-school programs, along with its weekday noon meals and emergency welfare assistance programs, help between 175 and budget of $700,000 next year.

"The recession is starting to hit us and we are behind in our budget $26,000," Patterson said.

Obama appoints Warren to set up consumer agency

By Brady Dennis and Scott Wilson
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In naming Elizabeth Warren to set up a new consumer protection agency on Friday, President Obama swiftly delighted the liberal base of his party after months of disenchantment.

Warren, 61, a Harvard law professor with a long track record of consumer advocacy, will oversee all aspects of the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection. Technically, Warren will be only an adviser, a role that does not require Senate confirmation — a maneuver that outraged Republicans, who accused Obama of creating a "czar" position without congressional oversight.

But senior administration officials appeared unconcerned about angering an opposition party likely to oppose any nominee. If anything, the White House embraced the chance to strike a populist tone. In naming her to the post during Friday's Rose Garden event, Obama called Warren, a janitor's daughter from Oklahoma, "one of the country's fiercest advocates for the middle class."

"She has seen financial struggles and foreclosures affect her own family," he said. He was joined by Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and senior adviser Valerie Jarrett, who helped shepherd through the appointment over the concerns of other senior officials.

The rifts within the administration, as described by advisers, reflected a wider split over Warren: A polarizing figure, she is adored by consumer groups and liberal lawmakers who lobbied hard for her appointment, but she is disliked by many banking groups and conservatives on Capitol Hill who expressed fear that she will clamp down unfairly on the financial industry and crimp access to credit.

Woman sentenced for May break-in at liquor store

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Judge G. Richard Bevan got a better answer out of Megan Marovich than he did from Brina Krohn.

Prior to hearing sentence from the 5th District Court judge on Friday, Marovich, 18, addressed the Twin Falls courtroom to explain what she was thinking when she and five others rammed a car through the front of the Kimberly Road state liquor store and burglarized it: she wasn't thinking at all.

"That may be the best explanation I've heard yet," Bevan said, 10 days after hearing Krohn's statements during her sentencing.

Bevan ultimately imposed a sentence similar to, albeit a bit harsher than, Krohn's: six years of state prison each on counts of burglary and grand theft, with both suspending for a five-year probationary period. Marovich also faces 80 days in the Twin Falls County Jail, with periodic releases throughout the week to attend classes at the College of Southern Idaho. Bevan also imposed restitution of $34,638.41 to be shared by all co-defendants.

Marovich is currently serving jail time handed down from a juvenile sentencing barely one month ago.

At 5:26 a.m. May 20, Twin Falls police found a stolen Pontiac car lodged inside State Liquor Store No. 201. Surveillance video from the store showed suspects ramming the car through the store's front doors and destroying the entrance, the clerk's station and the bourbon section. Suspects entered the store and took approximately

Idaho Power wins approval to buy solar power from large Calif. provider

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

The red tape has finally unraveled from the first sales agreement between a solar power project and Idaho Power Co.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission announced Friday it had approved an agreement for California-based Grand View Solar PV One to provide supplemental energy to Idaho Power. The PUC began evaluating the agreement under the provisions of the federal Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act on July 1 and wrapped up its review this week.

PURPA requires electric utilities such as Idaho Power to offer to buy power produced by qualifying small-power producers. Now that Grand View Solar PV One has qualified for the 20-year agreement, which begins Jan. 1, it can begin construction of a field of solar panels on 180 acres leased from J.R. Simplot Co. 16 miles west of Mountain Home Air Force Base.

Idaho Power representative Donovan Walker said the utility has bought solar power before from small residential projects, but this will be its first contract with a "utility-scale" provider. The project's total capacity will be 20 megawatts, but Idaho Power doesn't have to pay lower PURPA rates for any more than an average of 10 megawatts monthly. Based on average home use, that would power almost 4,000 homes per month.

Part of the review process included public comment. PUC spokesman Gene Fadness said in July that such projects rarely receive comments, and that held true in this case.

"We got one comment from a customer who said solar power was too expensive," Fadness said. "But the rest of the few comments we received were in favor."

Company owner Robert Paul of Desert Hot Springs, Calif., said the approval took longer than he hoped because he had wanted to start construction this fall. The time to build is now, Paul said, because of various incentives. But working with Idaho has been a good experience, he said.

"It's the last box we had to check before getting financing," Paul said. "But this pushes financing into the last quarter so we'll probably start building after the first of the year."

Authorities: 2 tornadoes struck NYC during storm

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The storm that churned through New York City spawned two destructive tornadoes and a fierce macroburst with wind speeds up to 125 mph that barreled across a large swath of Brooklyn and Queens, authorities said Friday.

The storm on Thursday evening toppled trees, peeled away roofs and killed a woman in a car who had just swapped seats with her husband.

The fury of wind and rain that pummeled the area was New York City's ninth and tenth tornado since 1950, the National Weather Service said Friday night.

Kyle Struckmann, a meteorologist with the agency, said it was amazing that only one person died.

"It's practically a miracle considering the population that was affected by this," he said.

One of the tornadoes struck Brooklyn at 5:33 p.m. Thursday, with winds up to 80 mph, and carved its way northeast from the Park Slope section, Struckmann said.

The second one hit

Queens at 5:42 p.m., with winds up to 100 mph, traveling 4 miles from the Flushing section to a mile north of Bayside.

It was that second twister that snapped trees and scattered them like bowling pins, downing power lines and crushing vehicles, including a car in Queens where Iline Levakis was killed, according to the National Weather Service. She was in the parked car with her husband, Billy Levakis. The couple, from Pennsylvania, had just switched seats in the car, said a former business partner, Peter Markos. Billy Levakis survived.

But it was the macroburst that packed the biggest punch with its winds up to 125 mph, said Brian Ciemnecki, a National Weather Service meteorologist. Stretching 8 miles long and 5 miles wide, the macroburst started in the Middle Village section of Queens and ended in Forest Hills. A macroburst is an intense gust of wind that pours down from a storm.

"The large majority of damage was associated with the macroburst," Ciemnecki said.

$300 in liquor items. Damage to liquor stock destroyed in the break-in is estimated at $6,000.

Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Melissa Kippes argued for the sentence that was handed down, noting that Marovich acted as the lookout for the group, acquired the clothing used in an attempt to conceal their identities and attempted to gather hair nets lost during the burglary. Kippes added that Marovich was on juvenile probation at the time of the burglary — just one reason why Bevan went with the state's recommendation.

"She needs to be punished despite her youth and lack of (adult criminal) record," Kippes said.

Defense counsel Tim Williams countered that Marovich was at the mercy of peer pressure and that she only has a juvenile criminal record. He also noted that Marovich's parents have been out of the picture — her mother is incarcerated, and her father is deceased.

Four co-defendants in the burglary await sentencing dates: Kristan McKean on Sept. 27, Kristopher McKean and Charles Marovich on Oct. 4, and Esperansa Valladares on Nov. 15.

and gas money. Patterson said if his organization's funding situation becomes dire enough, full-time staff may be cut.

Salvation Army funding comes from corporations, grants and individuals. But because of the recession, people have been giving more in-kind donations than money, Patterson said. Goods and services are always helpful, but when it comes to building programs and keeping them running, cash is what is needed most.

Patterson said that while people have continued to give to larger, well-established nonprofits through the recession, even that giving is starting to wane.

"If you have to take off from each program, that takes away from people and that is why we are here," Patterson said. "The Salvation Army is here to help people with their spiritual and physical needs."

The organization serves as both a place of ministry and a place where tangible needs are met.

Last year, St. Luke's Magic Valley Health Foundation gave a grant of about $5,000 to the group to help teach children about exercise and eating right.

Patterson said the lessons learned by participating children were transferred to their families, and his goal is to continue the program's success.

On Sept. 25, the Salvation Army and Magic Valley Bank will host a dinner and auction to raise money for the fight for healthy kids.

Proceeds will be used for gym improvements, exercise equipment and program costs. More than $20,000 in prizes will be auctioned off and Magic Valley Bank will match up to $5,000 of the proceeds.

Consultant: Blaine schools need to improve communication

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County School District needs to get more community members involved in the work of the district.

It needs to enhance two-way communication with staff. It needs to develop key messages to help the public learn about its critical issues. And it needs to develop strategies to enhance the district's image.

"You have a good product here. You need to make sure you maintain that reputation," consultant Bob Noyed told the district's board Tuesday night.

Noyed, with the Rockville, Md.-

based National School Public Relations Association, was brought in earlier this year to determine how well the school district is communicating and what can be improved. The audit was ordered after candidates in the last school-board election charged that the district was doing a poor job of communicating, winning seats through that platform.

Noyed said that interviews with 11 focus groups and other sources showed that the district is doing many things well but has room for improvement.

His recommendations included creating a strategic communication plan to support the strategic plan already in place, providing communication training for staff members, expanding social media for the small-but-growing number of residents using it, and hiring a full-time person to direct and manage the district's communication program.

"You need to implement strategies to create a culture of communication," he said.

Noyed said participants in his focus groups indicated that the district's website is an effective means of communication. They responded favorably to the district's web-cast, and said word-of-mouth and local newspapers are significant sources of information. He suggested the district purchase newspaper ads to make sure it gets its message across.

"Word-of-mouth is often inaccurate. If the information's not flowing, people will make it up," he said.

Board President Julie Dahlgren noted that the board wants to hold a town hall meeting in late October to reach out to patrons.

Noyed cautioned that the district should instead figure out a way it can tap the community to brainstorm on a particular issue, whether it be establishing new school boundaries or improving high-school academics.

"Generally, the people who come to (town hall meetings) are upset about something," he said.

In other news, enrollment on the fourth day of the school year was up by 82 students, said District Finance Manager Mike Chatterton, not including another 12 in the district's developmental preschool.

Chatterton said the district had 3,400 students enrolled so far this year, compared with 3,318 students on the fourth day of school last year and 3,331 students at the end of school.

The district had projected enrollment at 3,416 students when it began planning two years ago for a plant facilities levy passed last year.

Rupert City Council supports changes to electricity contract

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — The Rupert City Council voted Tuesday to support proposed changes to its electricity contract with the Bonneville Power Administration.

The vote came after a presentation on the contract changes by Ralph Williams, manager of United Electric Co-op in Heyburn. He said the changes are optional, but would help to lock in a lower power rate.

Rupert signed a 20-year power purchase agreement with BPA in November 2008.

It was signed early because the contract parties feared possible problems as the Obama administration was about to take office.

The agreement was drawn up over a four-year period, but some parts of the contract still needed to be fixed. The spirit of the agreement was not effectively met, Williams said.

United and BPA are now trying to refine the language to avoid unintended consequences from five different items.

"This was something that was agreed upon before that was just written down inappropriately, and the meaning of the words did not follow the spirit of the agreement," Williams said.

Issues to be rephrased include a basis for irrigation-rate discounts, and the ways that power services interface with the transmission business line to deliver power to Rupert.

Sponsors of the revisions include the Northwest Requirements Utilities Association, Pacific Northwest Generating Cooperative and Washington Power Agency Group — all customer groups that represent Rupert to BPA. BPA itself has also provided input and asked for a vote.

Williams recommended the council support the changes.

In other action, the council approved a resolution to change the city's rates for animal control services, bringing them in agreement with the city of Paul. Beginning Oct. 1, the new rates include:

- $10 to bail out an animal, or $50 for the second offense.
- $20 for vaccinations

when a dog is checked out.

- $40 for adoption.
- $150 to quarantine a dog.
- $50 for euthanasia, or $150 for a biting dog.
- $262 for dog-bite cases where the owner keeps the dog.

Resident Don Hoffner requested permission to haul his own trash to the landfill rather than pay the city's $17-per-month fee, pleading financial hardship. He was denied, but told to apply for the circuit-breaker program, which would give him discounts in city services and property taxes. Council members also offered to look at his case, but said they'll avoid setting any risky precedents.

Coreen Hart may be reached at jimmreenie@pmt.org or 436-1186.

Warren

Warren will oversee every element of the bureau's creation, from recruiting staff to designing key policy initiatives. She also will play a central role in helping to identify a permanent director for the bureau, Obama said.

Her selection as the bureau's chief architect, if not its leader, fits seamlessly into the broader appeal that Obama is making to voters this midterm election season — that only the Democrats are helping the economically beleaguered middle class. It also helps calm critics on Obama's left who have complained that some of the president's senior economic advisers favor the interests of Wall Street and big business over the middle class.

In his daily briefing, White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said Warren's job would be to set up an agency designed "to protect the consumers and middle class of this country." He declined to say whether Warren would be a candidate to run the agency she sets up. Warren has said that she does not want the five-year appointment, and Gibbs said that she would be "instrumental" in choosing the director.

Asked if naming Warren to an interim position was a way of undermining the Senate's "advise and consent" authority, Gibbs said nearly 200 nominations are pending now and that, because of partisan bickering, the confirmation process has "virtually ground to a halt."

"Nobody was going to be confirmed any time soon," he said, adding that Obama did not want a months-long delay in getting to work on creating the bureau. "There is certainly an advise and consent, a very important provision. It is not advise, delay and consent. It should not be that way."

The highly anticipated appointment has been two months in the making, and its arrival did little to stem the controversy surrounding the critical position. Obama's decision to appoint

Warren to a dual role as assistant to the president and special adviser to the Treasury secretary — giving her primary responsibility for shaping the bureau while avoiding a potentially vicious confirmation battle — only stoked the clamor surrounding the appointment.

Sen. Lamar Alexander, R-Tenn., described the appointment as "just another disturbing trend in this administration of creating unaccountable czars and czarinas."

"She represents a view, which is a view represented in the financial regulatory bill, that makes credit harder to get on Main Street, that imposes Washington decisions on local banking issues, and that would put her and the agency in charge of making millions of decisions that ought to be made by the free market or by community banks," Alexander said in a statement.

Liberals were equally vociferous in her defense. The politically powerful Service Employees International Union said that Warren "understands the tremendous hardships facing families struggling to recover from the greatest economic crisis in generations ... Elizabeth Warren was our first and only choice to start the hard work of establishing this historic watchdog for consumers and families."

Americans struggle to regain their shrunken wealth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' long journey to regain the wealth they lost in the recession is stalled. Households failed even to run in place during the April-June quarter as sinking stock prices eroded wealth. Stocks have since recovered about two-thirds of those losses. But based on last quarter's data, household net worth would have to surge 23 percent to reach its pre-recession peak.

Net worth — the value of assets like homes and investments, minus debts like mortgages and credit cards — fell 2.7 percent last quarter, or $1.5 trillion, the Federal Reserve said Friday. It now stands at $53.5 trillion.

That's above the bottom hit during the recession, $48.8 trillion in the first quarter of 2009.

But it's far below the pre-recession peak in wealth of $65.8 trillion.

The drop from April to June was the first quarterly decline in Americans' wealth since early 2009. Before then, net worth had risen slowly for four straight quarters.

Economists generally think household wealth has ticked up in the July-to-September quarter so far, because of higher stock prices. Yet given last quarter's setback and expectations of scant gains ahead, some economists have pushed back their forecast for when Americans will regain all their lost wealth: Not until the middle of this decade.

Their stagnant wealth will likely keep Americans from spending freely — and the struggling economy from picking up strength. Consumers tend to spend according to how wealthy they feel. And their spending accounts for about 70 percent of the economy.

In the meantime, people are saving more and paring debt, Friday's data showed.

The decline in net worth from April to June amounted to an average drop of $12,941 per household. Average household wealth now amounts to $455,173. That's up from $415,185 during the recession.

But it's down from a peak of $563,438 in 2007.

One reason why economists foresee only slight gains in wealth is they expect real-estate values to stay weak.

Residential real-estate accounts for 32 percent of net worth; individual stocks make up 13 percent. The balance includes retirement accounts, taxable mutual funds, bank accounts, bonds and possessions such as cars and jewelry.

ENGLAND
Pope calm after 6 nabbed in suspected plot

LONDON — Police raided a garbage depot and arrested street cleaners in a suspected terror plot against Pope Benedict XVI on Friday. Undeterred, the pontiff stuck to his message, reaching across Britain's religious and secular divide to demand a greater role for faith in public life.

Despite the six arrests, the pope did not alter a schedule rich in symbolism in this officially Protestant country with a history of anti-Catholicism: He prayed with the Archbishop of Canterbury and became the first pope to worship in Westminster Abbey.

Benedict was informed of the pre-dawn arrests while visiting a Catholic college, the first stop on the busy second day of his state visit.

Five of the suspects were street cleaners arrested at a garbage depot in central London and a sixth was picked up later in the day. All six were arrested "on suspicion of the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism." Police said they ranged in age from 26 to 50, and media reports said some were Algerian, though authorities would not confirm that.

Police said they received information about a potential threat against the pope overnight, prompting the arrests under Britain's Terrorism Act. All six were being questioned and had not been formally charged.

AFGHANISTAN
Rocket hits Kabul on Afghan voting day

KABUL — Police say a rocket struck Kabul about three hours before citizens planned to head to the polls to vote in Afghanistan's parliamentary elections.

Afghan police officer Mohammad Abraham says the rocket landed around 4 a.m. in the yard of Afghanistan's state-owned television station. It's a couple of blocks from the presidential palace, NATO headquarters and the U.S. Embassy.

The rocket was an apparent warning from insurgents trying to scare people from going to the polls. About 2,500 candidates are vying for 249 seats in the parliament.

The Taliban have written threats on leaflets passed out at mosques, whispered them in villages and posted Internet messages saying those who cast ballots should be prepared to be attacked.

How many Afghans ignore this intimidation campaign and turn out at the polls will be one measure of whether the vote is considered a success.

The elections — the first since a fraud-ridden presidential poll a year ago — are seen both as a test of the Afghan government's commitment to rooting out corruption and as a measure of the strength of the insurgency.

Hanging in the balance is the willingness of the U.S.-led international coalition to continue supporting Afghan President Hamid Karzai's government with 140,000 troops and billions of dollars nearly nine years into the war.

UNITED STATES
Deputies: Dad threatened school kids who teased his teen daughter

SANFORD, Fla. — A father furious because his 13-year-old daughter who suffers from cerebral palsy had been bullied stormed onto a school bus and threatened the children who teased her, deputies in Florida said.

The girl had to be hospitalized because of stress from the confrontation. The father, James Willie Jones, was arrested Thursday after he stormed onto the bus two weeks ago and was later released on bail. He hopes to apologize to the children, said his attorney, Natalie Jackson.

"The little girl was scared to go to school. There has to be something done about school bullying," Jackson said.

Jones boarded the school bus Sept. 3 because several boys were allegedly bullying his daughter, according to the sheriff's office report. He told deputies the boys placed an open condom on his daughter's head, smacked her on the back of her head, twisted her ear and shouted rude comments at her, the report said.

Video surveillance from the bus shows Jones asking his daughter to point out the students accused of harassing her. Jones is heard on the video threatening those who bully his daughter, and he also threatens the bus driver.

Man, abducted as a boy, turns his father in BEDFORD, Texas — Twenty-year-old Stephen Michael Palacios came across a newspaper story recently about a boy allegedly abducted by his father in 1993. Palacios, it turns out, was that boy.

After learning about his past, Palacios persuaded his father to turn himself in — even accompanying him to a lawyer's office this week — and will soon be reunited with the mother who desperately searched for him for 17 years.

"I am so excited," his mother, Dee Ann Adams, 40, told the Waco Tribune-Herald. "I'm really not even sure how I feel right now. It has been such a long time, and I had to move on. I had other kids I had to take care of. I am happy, and I am hoping we can rebuild our relationship, but the main thing is that I am in shock right now."

Palacios could not be located for comment Friday.

He was 3 when he disappeared after a visit with his father, Stephen Palacios Jr., a high school Latin teacher and basketball coach in Waco who had been granted visitation rights after the couple's divorce. A warrant for the father's arrest was issued, and over the years detectives chased several leads.

Cement starts flowing to plug BP well

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Crews started pumping cement Friday deep under the seafloor to permanently plug BP's blown-out well in the Gulf of Mexico.

A BP spokesman said there no longer was a need to use mud in tandem with the cement because pressure from the well wasn't an issue. BP expects the well to be completely sealed on Saturday. The government had previously said it expected the well to be declared dead by Sunday, but on Friday the Coast Guard indicated the culmination was likely to be today.

Jupiter making close approach to Earth

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Better catch Jupiter next week in the night sky. It won't be that big or bright again until 2022.

Jupiter will pass 368 million miles from Earth late Monday, its closest approach since 1963. You can see it low in the east around dusk. Around midnight, it will be directly overhead. That's because Earth will be passing between Jupiter and the sun, into the wee hours of Tuesday.

The solar system's largest planet already appears as an incredibly bright star. The only thing brighter in the night sky right now is our moon.

QUOTABLE

“This is probably one of the worst places and the worst times to have an election anywhere in the world. We have to put it into perspective.”
 — Staffan de Mistura, the top U.N. envoy to Afghanistan, as the country prepares for elections

Public deserves to know names of grazing permit-holders

CHEERS: To U.S. District Judge Candy Dale, for ruling that the federal Bureau of Land Management must release the names and addresses of people who hold grazing permits on public land.

The Forest Service already does that.

This week’s decision came after two environmental groups sued for the names under the Freedom of Information Act.

In this case, Hailey-based Western Watersheds Project — one of the plaintiffs in the suit — was absolutely right.

There’s no legitimate reason why the names of grazing permits holders shouldn’t be public information. After all, this is the public’s land.

JEERS: Think the hatchet that the Legislature took to the state budget earlier this year doesn’t have real-world consequences?

A survey that would have chronicled more than 15,000 Idaho teens’ experiences with drugs and alcohol won’t happen next month, another victim of budget cuts.

The Idaho School Climate Survey has been conducted every other year since 1996. School districts, state agencies and nonprofits across the state use its data to win grants for various prevention programs.

“It’s a huge blow,” said Matt McCarter, safe and drug-free schools coordinator for the Idaho Department of Education. “We’ll lose the trend data. ... It’s going to be a huge impact, because we’ll have less data to be able to inform programs, policy and funding.”

Idaho has made much of a startling statistic: that teen meth use in the state dropped 52 percent from 2007 to 2009. It’s the largest percentage drop of any state and coincided with the Idaho Meth Project ramping up its graphic anti-meth TV ads and billboards.

But that 52 percent figure was boosted by a small increase from 2005 to 2007; 11 states actually saw greater declines from 2005 to 2009, according to the national Youth Risk Behavior Survey.

The School Climate Survey, which has a much larger sampling pool, shows smaller, steadier drops, similar to drops seen for the past decade nationwide.

The absence of the School

Climate Survey means that Idaho school districts, state agencies and nonprofits will be flying blind in their substance-abuse prevention efforts for the next year. And unable to make intelligent estimates of what will be needed beyond.

CHEERS: To the Idaho Hall of Fame, for including former Idaho Speaker of the House Bruce Newcomb — a longtime Burley Republican legislator — in its Class of 2010.

Newcomb was the longest-serving speaker — and arguably the best — in the state’s history. A moderate conservative, he stuck to his principles without forgetting that those who disagreed with him deserved respect — and always fair hearing.

Politics rarely got personal with Newcomb — a Republican who’s now a faculty member and lobbyist at Boise State University — and he never believed his opinions were gospel. That’s in stark contrast with the speakership of state Rep. Lawrence Denney, R-Midvale, Newcomb’s successor, who isn’t all that interested in anybody’s views that don’t reflect his own.

Newcomb was the only Magic Valley honoree this year besides the Idaho Youth Ranch, the nonprofit organization dedicated to saving kids that sprung up in the desert of Minidoka County in 1952. The Rev. James Crowe’s vision has saved thousands of lives.

Since its inception in 1985, more than 70 individuals and more than 20 businesses, corporations and special-interest groups have been recognized by the Idaho Hall of Fame.

None more deserving than Newcomb and the Idaho Youth Ranch.

Help in Twin Falls was fantastic

Wonderful people in Twin Falls, Idaho!

We are new RV owners who were on a road trip after picking up our new RV trailer in Ohio and driving it back home to California. We stopped to get gas on our way through Twin Falls. We miscalculated the turn into the gas station pump and almost took out the side of our trailer. There we are stuck when along comes Danielle (Grumpy) and her wonderful husband who jumps into our truck and backs our trailer to safety. As he is doing this one of the brakes locks up on the trailer.

Danielle’s husband quickly assesses that we have a major problem and volunteers to take the tire off and see what’s going on. He does this as well as call his brother-in-law to bring over a stronger jack. He removes our broken damaged brake, puts the tire back on and Danielle makes phone calls to get us hooked up with Les Schwab. These wonderful people spent over an hour of their time to help out some newbie California RV’ers.

I know the people of Idaho are not crazy about all the California folks moving up there but if people in Twin Falls are all as great as Danielle her husband, Jerry, her brother-in-law and Luke at Les Schwab, I guess I can understand why Californians want to live there!

Mr. Smith goes to Anchorage

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Autumn in Alaska. Leaves are falling. Glaciers are melting. The walruses have abandoned their vanishing ice floes and are piled up along the coast in a formation that is apparently not dangerous, unless one rolls over at the wrong time.

We do not generally compare Republicans to walruses, but things are unusually crowded in that quarter, too. The Alaskan Republican Party expected to float to an uneventful victory in November with its incumbent senator, Lisa Murkowski. Then she got dumped in the primary by Joe Miller, a Tea Party candidate who wants to eliminate everything federal — from the Department of Agriculture to the student loan program.

Gail Collins

Taxpayer rage has been the rule in Republican primaries lately. But it was hard to predict that the fury would spread to a state that has virtually no taxes.

Mitch McConnell, the Senate Republican leader who is looking like an endangered species himself lately, threw in with Miller and announced that Murkowski should “move on.” But where can she go? She’s already in Alaska.

Instead, Murkowski is contemplating a write-in candidacy, a dim prospect that became slightly brighter when election officials allowed that they would probably count “Lisa M.”

Meanwhile, Scott McAdams, the Democratic candidate, is introducing himself to the voters. This will take some time because McAdams’ big claim to fame is being mayor of Sitka, a town of 8,700 with no road access.

“I’m a big guy from a small town,” he told a group at the Anchorage Senior Activity Center.

“Will you have the courage to tell us what we don’t want to hear?” demanded a man with a long, gray beard.

This sounded like a trick question. Obviously, the bearded man wanted to hear, “yes.” Did that mean McAdams should be brave and say “no”?

McAdams said that he would definitely have the courage to say no to lobbyists.

The mayor’s big adventure began when it was Sitka’s turn to hold the Democratic state convention this year and the delegates were looking under every rock, melting glacier and sleeping walrus for a respectable candidate to face Murkowski. Voila! A star was born, sort of.

For weeks, McAdams ran in obscurity with no staff and a budget adequate to cover a meal for four at Red Lobster. Then the Tea Party struck, and now he’s Mr. Smith, trying to go to Washington. Unfortunately, even in the movie, Mr. Smith had a pretty limited agenda; he wanted to start a camp for boys, which was a nice idea, but, good grief, the Depression was on.

McAdams is on a quest to do stuff for Alaska. He believes that, as a “young state,” Alaska deserves to be covered with roads, bridges and septic treatment plants like other states. “There was a time,” he says frequently, “when the transcontinental railroad was a Railroad to Nowhere.”

This scenario is playing out around the country: The new, empowered Tea Party Republicans preach

“The rest of us may yearn for a new budding statesman, but the folks at the Anchorage senior center had more practical concerns.

Such as the fact that (Republican Senate nominee Joe) Miller does not seem to feel George Washington would have approved of Social Security payments.”

their national agenda, which seems to involve not spending federal money on anything George Washington didn’t personally shop for. The Democrats respond with a hymn to crop subsidies and infrastructure improvements.

The rest of us may yearn for a new budding statesman, but the folks at the Anchorage senior center had more practical concerns. Such as the fact that Miller does not seem to feel George Washington would have approved of Social Security payments.

“What about resources?” asked a woman who was worried that McAdams lacked the cash to take on the might of Miller, George Washington and Sarah Palin combined.

The national Democratic establishment has been ignoring McAdams. They must be totally distracted now that the Republicans in Delaware have decided to nominate a woman who won’t tell anybody where she lives because she’s afraid her political enemies will come and hide in the bushes.

McAdams may be an imperfect candidate, but he’s also an extremely inexpensive one. An Alaskan political campaign costs less than a tenth of one in big-media states. He could probably run a competitive race for a million dollars, which is about the equivalent in California of Barbara Boxer’s postage budget.

McAdams theorized that the national Democrats are hanging back because people in the Lower 48 mistakenly believe that Alaska is superconservative — “this far-off land of Palin.” His own view, he told his audience, is that the state is full of “independent moderates.”

“A man who stands in the middle of the road gets hit going both ways,” called out a woman. It was one extremely tough group of senior citizens.

Taxes, education show policy differences

We are in that blissful, six-weeks-out period before the November election and in Idaho, the fault lines between the two political parties has pretty well jelled. The differences can be seen in their different views on taxation and government spending, mostly on education.

Voter preferences between Democrat Keith Allred and incumbent Republican Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter have barely changed from an early summer poll to a more recent one. Otter continues to enjoy an 18-point margin, just as he did in July, with less than 10 percent undecided. Despite the fall campaigns of both, voter opinion now seems pretty much set. In the legislative contests, the smart money says the GOP will add seats to its current 52-18 margin in the House, and may do so to its

READER COMMENT
Stephen Hartgen

28-7 Senate margin.

Democrats are keeping up a good front so as not to overly scare off even more Democratic voters from the Allred-Otter race. Allred is arguably a weaker candidate than the Democrats would have preferred, a decidedly wonkish former college professor, academic and liberal lobbyist who is wholly devoid of either business or government experience.

Idaho's political debate this fall is again about taxes and government spending, mostly as it relates to education. Allred faults Otter and the Legislature for cuts to education and failure to “close loopholes” in tax collections. He clearly means to narrow or repeal some (but not all) existing tax exemptions and to try to force the Legislature to raise taxes to support higher levels of spending on education.

Otter defends the trims to government as essential to balancing Idaho's budget as Idaho's Constitution requires and trumpets the balanced budget with no major tax increases as consistent with the prudent approach to government Idaho has long expected from its state leadership.

Come Nov. 2, Otter's view is likely the prevailing one. There is no popular call for significant tax increases.

People in Idaho are on fire today about deficit spending, excessive government intrusion into people's lives and higher taxes. The Obama-Democrat tide of 2008 has crested and will now be rolled back, not just in Idaho but across the country. Spenders, in whichever party, will be replaced by conservatives. This does not bode well for Allred.

Allred says current sales tax exemptions are all “on the table,” but he hasn't mentioned several from which he or his family business may well benefit. One production exemption covers materials used in production of goods for resale, including, it would seem, the educational materials produced by Positive Action, a Twin Falls company started by Allred's mother which sells self-esteem educational materials to schools. It seems unlikely Allred will call for removing that exemption.

Nor is he likely to touch exemptions for materials produced by non-profit entities, such as reports and policy papers from his own lobby, The Common Interest, or the exemption schools get for buying educational materials, such as those produced by Positive Action. It seems likely he'll focus on removing exemptions which benefit others.

When legislators return to Boise in January, we're likely to face a slow economic recovery. Even with a static recovery, costs continue to rise and just “staying even” with Idaho's governmental costs means we will need to find further cuts and maybe revenue. Further trims to state government costs are likely, while tax increases, if any, will likely be minimal and focused.

This is the kind of fiscal responsibility Idahoans expect of their government and that is what they will continue to vote for and receive. Elections have real consequences and this one, although intense, is really no different.

Stephen Hartgen, a Republican from Twin Falls, has represented Twin Falls and Owyhee counties in the Idaho House of Representatives since 2008.

Jerome reunion was a great time

The Jerome High School Class of 1950 recently held its 60th class reunion at the Jerome Senior Center.

Every effort was made by the staff and management to make our evening very enjoyable. The meal was excellent and everyone had a good time reminiscing on our high school days.

The class also would like to thank Patty Boyd Callen for her effort and dedication on putting this reunion together. She did an excellent job of locating so many classmates since 60 years have gone by. She also had a beautiful album of the class printed that was made available to all.

Zombie banks have us right where they want us

Two years after the collapse of Lehman Brothers and what rightfully should have been the death of American International Group, U.S. capital markets face a crucial question.

How long will it take before we see some semblance of robust free-market capitalism return, where the value of an asset is based on what bona fide market participants will pay for it, the cost to borrow money is based on a company's fundamental financial strength rather than its ability to access a government safety net, and corporations are free to fail no matter what their size?

No one can say. And the longer it remains this way, the more entrenched the status quo becomes.

Consider AIG. Is it a failed financial institution? Yes. Is AIG systemically important? Yes. Will U.S. government officials force it into receivership now that the Dodd-Frank Act gives them the tools they say they lacked two years ago? Of course not. Why? Because doing so could send the markets back into a tizzy, which the government has decided isn't allowed. Heaven forbid any AIG bondholders should ever be forced to take a loss.

Here's the kind of thing that passes for free enterprise now. Last month a fellow named Michael Carpenter, who is the chief executive officer of Ally Financial, got on a conference call with securities analysts and gushed with delight about the $3.5 billion price that General Motors had just agreed to pay for the subprime auto lender AmeriCredit. Based on that transaction, he proclaimed, Ally might be worth $30 billion.

GM, which owns a 6.7

Jonathan Weil

percent stake in Ally, is Ally's former parent.

“I love the AmeriCredit deal,” said Carpenter, whom some might remember from his days as the head of the securities firm Kidder Peabody. “I don't have any doubt about our ability to repay the U.S. Treasury. So I think it's great.”

The federal government so far has spent $17.2 billion to bail out Ally, the lender formerly known as GMAC. Taxpayers hold a 56.3 percent stake in the company, which says it may hold an initial public offering next year if it can't find a buyer.

What a spectacle. Here you had the CEO of a thrice-bailed-out zombie bank, drooling over how much a government-owned carmaker was going to pay for a publicly traded subprime lender, and using this price as a yardstick for his own bank's paper worth. In a sane world, Ally would have been liquidated already. Any capital it's able to raise is money that otherwise might go to more deserving enterprises.

That pretty well captures the essence of Bailout Nation. In this economy, the strange has become the new normal.

Home prices continue to be propped up by the Treasury's unlimited support for Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, along with low mortgage rates fueled by the Fed's easy-money policies. That's good for homeowners' balance sheets, but not for renters who might like to buy a home. Two years after the government placed Fannie and Freddie in conservatorship, there's no sign they'll be wound down anytime soon.

The largest banks, such as Bank of America and JPMorgan Chase, still have too-big-to-fail guarantees, or at least that's the logical perception. While most of those lenders have repaid their bailout cash, the majority of small banks that received money from the Troubled Asset Relief Program have not.

Hundreds of small banks remain grossly undercapitalized, unable to raise new funds, and yet continue to operate.

Meanwhile, executives who lie about their companies' financial condition still have little to fear. Criminal prosecutions for such transgressions are rare. On those few occasions when the Securities and Exchange Commission sues a large company for fraud, chances are that its bosses will get off scot-free or, if they're unlucky, with a wrist-slap.

It's no wonder many investors now conclude the whole game is rigged. It would be easy to limit the blame to government and crony capitalists.

Ultimately, though, we are responsible for the leaders we choose. As long as the American people remain unwilling to bear the full economic consequences of the last financial crisis, there will be no end to the bailout culture. The lords of finance still have us right where they want us.

Fuzzy numbers

Unemployment estimates don't paint true picture of south-central Idaho labor market

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Don't believe everything you read.

August unemployment rates increased in almost all counties across rural Idaho, but labor officials say the rise had more to do with "fuzzy" reporting methods than people actually losing jobs.

According to unemployment estimates released Friday by the Idaho Department of Labor, the unemployment rate in the Twin Falls micropolitan area increased four-tenths of percentage point from the previous month to 8.7 percent. That's about 200 more people who lost their jobs in August.

The Burley micropolitan area reported a full percentage point increase to 8.3 percent. Lincoln County jumped nearly two percentage points to 14 percent — one of the highest rates in the state.

This is typically the time of year when unemployment goes down rather than up, because of agricultural harvests and job openings created when students return to school.

But don't read too much into Friday's numbers, said Department of Labor Regional Economist

Jan Roeser.

"Everybody across the state is having problems with the statistical model we use to report unemployment numbers," Roeser said. "This is typically the time of year when we should see declining unemployment."

The confusion surrounding the report has to do with the way the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics and state labor departments estimate county-by-county unemployment rates. The bottom-up reporting system requires that the BLS match unemployment estimates with surveys and population reports — the county rates are often manipulated to fit state and federal jobless rates.

Some counties, like Minidoka, weren't even reported because the "Folks in their 50s don't have that much wiggle room."

Demographic squeeze play

DAI SUGANO/San Jose Mercury News/MCT

Simone Cox takes a breather in her office at Ariba Network in Sunnyvale, California, before heading off to lunch. Cox, a 54-year-old, single woman, was laid off in early 2009 from Motorola, where she worked as a technical writer. She found a job in September 2009 at Ariba Network.

Workers in 50s face steep climb from layoff's depths

By Patrick May
San Jose Mercury News

SAN JOSE, Calif. — In this bloody free-for-all of a recession, Americans in their 50s are really taking it hard on the chin.

Their 401(k)s have been cut down. Their pensions have been frozen, or worse. Their home equity has evaporated just as their kids' college bills come due. And while younger workers may have been hit harder by unemployment, 50-something Americans who get laid off are stuck in jobless limbo longer than any other age group.

It is a demographic squeeze play of historic proportion, with a jobless rate not seen since the Great Depression. Many 50-somethings not only need to "reinvent" themselves after a late-in-life job loss, but also must "recalibrate" their expectations, said Santa Clara University professor and psychologist Tom Plante.

"If you lose your job in your 30s or 40s, you have the opportunity to correct the error over time," Plante said. "Folks in their 50s don't have that much wiggle room. Plus there's this sense of embarrassment and shame. Patients I see are suffering in silence. It's as if the rug has been pulled out from these people at a highly vulnerable time in their lives."

Peek inside this statistical slaughterhouse: As older Americans headed for retirement, the recession cut into their plans, sending retirement account balances down 32 percent from a peak of $8.7 trillion in September 2007 to $5.9 trillion in March 2009, according to AARP. As the recession kicked in, more than one of every four foreclosures and delinquencies involved Americans age 50 and older, this on top of the decade's already sharp increase in bankruptcy filings for the 55-and-above set.

The jobs picture isn't getting any prettier for older workers, whose unemployment rate nationally has jumped sharply through the recession, hitting 7.1 percent in February, just shy of the historic high of 7.2 percent in December, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

A Pew Economic Policy Group report in April said nearly 30 percent of jobless people 55 or older have been out of work for a year or longer, a higher rate than any other age group.

Another factor pressuring older Americans looking for a job is more competition as labor-force participation among peers continues an upward 15-year trend. That, experts say, has been fueled in part by the demise of traditional pension plans. Throw in the stock market's whiplash and the need to work longer to replenish lost savings, and it's no surprise that Pleasanton, Calif., career coach Randy Hlavin has been seeing so many clients "desperate for some guidance."

Rotary announces new club in T.F.

Service group to meet later in day

Times-News

There is new club in town.

Rotary International, the world's oldest service organization, added a third charter in Twin Falls that caters to business people who prefer to meet later in the evening.

The new charter is being dubbed Twin Falls Rotary After Hours, after receiving its official charter to the global association of Rotary International in August.

The club will meet at 5:15 p.m. at the Rock Creek Restaurant on Addison Ave. in Twin Falls every Tuesday. The club celebrated its new charter Friday at Centennial Park.

Rotary, a worldwide organization of more than 1.2 million business, professional and community leaders provides humanitarian service, encourages high ethical standards in all vocations and helps build goodwill, according to the club's website.

The Twin Falls Rotary After Hours joins the Blue Lakes Rotary Club, which meets at the Red Lion Hotel on Tuesday mornings at 7 a.m. and the Rotary Club of Twin Falls, which meets at the Turf Club on Wednesdays at noon.

"This club will meet the needs of those who want to be part of a service organization, but due to business or family commitments cannot make a breakfast or lunch meeting," Nancy Koonce, a past president of the Rotary Club of Twin Falls and the district governor's representative, said in an earlier interview.

2009 a dismal year for Western lumber production

The Associated Press

MEDFORD, Ore. — The Western lumber industry had its worst year in 2009 since records have been kept and the outlook for this year is even more dismal.

The Mail Tribune says statistics from the Western Wood Products Association show just 10.4 billion board feet of lumber were produced last year in 11 states, the lowest annual volume since figures were first compiled in the late 1940s. Production in each of the states dropped by double digits from 2008.

A board foot is equal to a square foot of lumber 1 inch thick.

Southern Oregon Timber Industries Association spokesman Dave Schott told the newspaper that 2010 totals may be worse because of the continuing recession and poor housing market.

The statistics released Thursday show Oregon mills produced 3.8 billion board feet worth $875.7 million in 2009, the most in the nation. Washington was second at 3.2 billion board feet worth $828.3 million, followed by California with 1.4 billion board feet worth $468.6 million.

Idaho produced 1.1 billion board feet worth

Farmers target Walmart for allegedly holding down ag prices

By Jeff Bliss
and Sara Forden
Bloomberg News writers

Walmart Stores is the target of an unlikely alliance between a labor union and farmers and ranchers who say the world's largest retailer is using its power to hold down prices in the agriculture industry.

The United Food and Commercial Workers International Union, which has tried unsuccessfully to unionize Walmart's employees, is urging the Obama administration to broaden its antitrust inquiry into An unlikely alliance between a labor union and farmers and ranchers says Walmart has hurt the agriculture industry by keeping prices down.

meat, dairy and seed businesses to include the retailer.

Walmart's defenders say its policies benefit consumers, ensuring them low prices.

The viewpoint of the union, the UFCW, is echoed by such groups as the National Farmers Union, a 190,000-member organization. Until recently, farmers and ranchers had mostly been directing their ire at meat producers such as Tyson Foods and Smithfield Foods. Now some are saying Walmart, whose motto is "Save money. Live better," is unfairly cutting food costs at their expense.

"We've got to really join forces if we're going to win against this abusive market power," Mike Callicrate, a rancher based in Colorado Springs, Colo., said.

Walmart's critics said they anticipate, after years of government reluctance to regulate farming, that President Obama will inject more competition into the food-producing business. Those concerns were at the forefront of an Aug. 27 public meeting in Fort Collins, Colo., with Attorney General Eric Holder and Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack.

The event was the latest in a series of workshops held by the administration to air competitive and regulatory issues in the agriculture industry. Grocers such as Walmart will be a focus of the final workshop on Dec. 8 in Washington.

A spokeswoman for Kroger Co., the largest U.S. grocery chain, declined to comment on its pricing or supplier policies.

Walmart's goal is to streamline its supply chain for customers' benefit by working with, not undercutting, farmers, said Lorenzo Lopez, a spokesman for Bentonville, Ark.-based Walmart.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 13.02, or 0.1 percent, to close at 10,607.85. The Dow is up 5.9 percent in the month to date, defying skeptics who predicted a decline in September, which is historically a weak one for stocks. It has risen in seven of the past eight days. The Standard & Poor's 500 index inched up 0.93, or 0.08 percent, to 1,125.59, and the Nasdaq composite rose 12.36, or 0.5 percent, to 2,315.61.

For the week, the Dow and S&P are both up 1.4 percent, and the Nasdaq is up 3.3 percent.

About four stocks rose for every three that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume was relatively heavy at 4.6 billion shares. Volume was exceptionally high because of the simultaneous expiration of a series of futures and options contracts on stocks and stock indexes.

4-Hers in style

Members show off work today at Revue

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

Minidoka County 4-H will host the 4-H District Style Revue at 11 a.m. today at the Wilson Theatre in Rupert.

“(The Revue) is a way for 4-Hers to show off their hard work,” said Julie Hulet, coordinator of the event.

Minidoka County last hosted a district review in 2001 at the McGregor Center.

“We are really excited to have it in such a nice facility available,” said Jeni Bywater, 4-H program coordinator.

The counties in Minidoka’s district also include Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls. Each hosts a county-level Style Revue either before or during their fair. Participants are judged on how well they model garments they have either sewn or bought, competing in construction or consumer divisions, respectively.

4-H members who receive a district blue award in their counties are eligible to compete at the District Style Revue against the other district blue winners in each county.

Both contest divisions are divided into age classes.

Contestants today include five from Minidoka County, Hulet said. All are girls, though boys have modeled at the event in past years.

Participants pay $3 per division to enter the contest. The fee covers the cost of the ribbons they receive. Winners also receive sewing-related items as prizes.

Emceeding this year’s show are Debbie Branaum and her daughter, Staci. Debbie is a 4-H leader in Minidoka County and Staci is a 4-H Ambassador and an active 4-H teen member. Staci emceed the county revue and will be training her mother this time. Judges will be Connie Studer, Laura Beaver and Carrie Collier.

“We will have 4-H Teen Association members leading the pledges, delivering paperwork, playing music, and greeting people as they arrive,” Bywater said. “It should be a great event and we hope the public will attend.”

The event is free. Information: Minidoka County Extension Office, 436-7184.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Community Action offers food, info at annual event

Food, music and a chance to connect with services you need may be found at Twin Falls City Park today, where South Central Community Action Partnership will hold its fourth-annual Community Partnerships in Action event.

The gathering, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., will feature booths staffed by representatives of as many as 80 organizations from around the Magic Valley, providing a range of services from job training and financial management to medical services. The Lions Club will have its mobile eye-screening unit on site to offer free screenings, supporting the theme of “Building a Healthier Community.”

Three high-school bands and the Old Time Fiddlers will perform, and Community Action will offer a free barbecue, including hamburgers, hot dogs, French fries, cold drinks and ice cream.

More than 5,000 people attended last year’s event.

Steam train to pass again through Shoshone

Union Pacific Portland Rose Train No. 844, a historic steam locomotive, will pass through Shoshone on Tuesday during a 15-day tour of the Pacific Northwest.

The train will make a brief stop from noon to 12:20 p.m., its second this month. It also passed through Shoshone on Sept. 10 on its way across Wyoming, Idaho and Oregon.

The trip of more than 2,300 miles, starting and ending at the train’s home base of Cheyenne, Wyo., is being made to celebrate Union Pacific’s role in building the western U.S. and give the public the chance to see a steam train long after such engines have fallen out of regular use.

The train’s stops in Idaho also include visits to Montpelier, Pocatello, Boise and Nampa.

Free dental sealants for Robert Stuart students

Robert Stuart Middle School seventh- and eighth-graders can receive free dental sealants from Wednesday to Oct.13 at the school to help prevent cavities. Sealant clinics run Wednesdays through Fridays.

Dental sealants fill the deep grooves of a child’s back teeth, where 90 percent of children’s cavities occur.

The sealants are painless to apply and can last several years or more. To receive this free cavity-prevention treatment, children must have a parent or guardian sign a health history and permission form, which were distributed at the school.

Delta Dental of Idaho provides sealants on-site at schools serving low-income families as part of its Community Outreach program.

Help law enforcement help you

I have talked in the past about how you can help the police — for example, talking to your troublesome neighbors before calling the police. I thought I’d share some other ways that you can help out law enforcement.

If you are driving down the road, please look in your rear-view mirror at least every 30 seconds or so. If the police are using their lights to get to an emergency scene somewhere, it is much easier if they don’t have to slow or stop because someone’s not paying attention to what is behind them. Also, looking in your rear-view mirror could save your life if a pursuit is taking place behind you. I know of one incident where a car being pursued ran into the back of a vehicle and caused a major crash.

Speaking of vehicles, I would like to ask all of you who get stopped by the police to stay in your vehicles unless otherwise told. Officers are already on guard for any suspicious actions and you getting out of your vehicle tops that list. Also, keep your hands visible. Hidden hands usually are hidden for a reason and we train to deal with that reason.

Closer to home, I want to remind you that 911 is for emergencies only. 911 is not the number for information or to find out what all the sirens are for. Using it for any of those purposes or more could get you a hefty fine along with jail time.

One thing that officers wanted me to relay was that not all of them know the details of every incident that happens in or out of their areas. If an officer tells you that they don’t know anything about what you are asking, then don’t tell them that they must because it was in their area.

Officers are human (I know, big shock) and do require days off, which means they don’t know the details of things that happen on those days off.

ASK POLICEMAN DAN

Sometimes, officers do know about an event but are not allowed to talk about it, either because an investigation is not complete or there is a gag order on the case.

Finally, the greatest thing you can do to help the police is to take responsibility for your kids. Nobody likes to hear that their kids messed up, but if yours does, don’t give them excuses — give them consequences. The kids we deal with time after time have one thing in common: they are kids of the “not-my-kid” excusers. If you know your kid did wrong, give him or her a consequence that might keep you and the police from encountering any future problems.

Quote of the month:

“The ability to speak does not make you intelligent.” — Qui-Gon Jinn (from “Star Wars”)

Officer down

Please put these officers, killed in the line of duty, and their families in your prayers. God bless these heroes.

• Officer John Zykas, U. S. Department of Homeland Security.

• Sgt. Thomas Alexander, Rayville Police, La.

• Trooper Mark D. Barrett, Virginia State Police.

• Officer Dan De Kraai, St. Joseph Police, Mo.

Be safe, I’ll talk to you next week. Email your questions to policemandan@yahoo.com.

Dan Bristol is the Heyburn Chief of Police.

Newest diet fad involving fertility drug should be avoided

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been reading about a diet using hCG drops on Facebook. Apparently, three drops under the tongue three times a day rids you of hunger pain, and then you only eat 500 calories a day for a month with a loss of 30 pounds a month. What do you know about this drug?

DEAR READER: This diet fad frightens me.

First, hCG (human chorionic gonadotropin) is an FDA-approved prescription-only drug for fertility. HCG is a hormone present in pregnant women’s urine and was first discovered in 1927. To this day, physicians look for this hormone to determine pregnancy. Levels peak at around 14 weeks’ gestation and then drop off for the remainder of the pregnancy.

ASK DR. GOTT

It is known that hCG plays many roles, including guaranteeing that a developing fetus receives the calories and nutrients it needs to grow. It is able to do this by releasing fat from the hips, buttocks, abdomen and thighs to give the developing fetus the nutrients it needs.

In terms of the hCG diet, the dieter must find a physician willing to prescribe the medication. Next, following a 26- to 43-day cycle, the user must inject the medication once a day for 23 to 40 straight days, skipping the last three days of the cycle. Some physicians also prescribe appetite suppressants. This is because the daily caloric intake while using the drug for the purpose of weight loss is 500. That is one-quarter of the normal recommended daily caloric intake.

Following the cycle, the hCG must then be discontinued for at least six weeks because the body will develop temporary immunity. The process may then be started all over again, for a total of no more than four cycles, including breaks.

Now, to the reasons I oppose this diet. Any diet that restricts caloric intake to 500 calories a day is going to cause weight loss whether or not there is a medication or supplement involved. The reason for the weight loss is starvation. The body can survive on drastically reduced calories for a time, but it will lead to some serious complications.

Also, given that hCG is a naturally occurring pregnancy hormone, it can lead to symptoms of pregnancy, such as swollen, tender breasts and water retention. There are also reports of health problems resulting from the diet, including increased risk of blood clots, depression, restlessness and headaches.

This diet isn’t covered under insurance. The injection itself costs about $10. Multiply that by the number of days you need the injection, that’s between $230 and $400. Add that to the consultation that can typically cost $150 or more, and one cycle can cost in excess of $400.

Finally, the studies. A physician’s initial “discovery” and published findings of hCG’s ability to aid weight loss have not held up to scrutiny. Subsequent studies found that there was no weight loss difference between people using hCG and those taking a placebo along with the required calorie cuts. One study even found that both groups

Vandals host UNLV, aim for another win over MWC

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

What has the Idaho football team learned about itself after two weeks? It's hard to say.

The Vandals crushed a middling FCS team in North Dakota, then lost at No. 8 Nebraska. Tonight, finally, Idaho (1-1) goes against similar competition, hosting UNLV in an 8:30 p.m. (MST) kickoff at the Kibbie

“We have the makings of a good football team,” Idaho head coach Robb Akey said. “We have to have a great sense of urgency in what we do. We have to clean up things we weren't happy about from the previous ballgame.

“Everybody has to be accountable for what they're accountable for. That's the way you go about it.”

OPPORTUNISTIC BRUINS

Twin Falls benefits from Burley miscues

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — If it wasn't for bad luck, the Burley football team wouldn't have any luck at all.

Despite outplaying Twin Falls for most of Friday night, Burley gave away any hope of upsetting the No. 2-ranked Bruins by its turnovers and penalties.

Twin Falls continued its undefeated streak with the 28-6 win, improving to 4-0 overall and 2-0 in Great Basin Conference play.

“We're snake bit,” said Burley coach Jeff Green.

Indeed, Twin Falls won despite gaining 219 yards of offense to Burley's 348. The Bobcats controlled the football by running 68 offensive plays to Twin Falls' 30. Of the Bruins' eight possessions, five ended in a three-and-outs.

“Our philosophy is bend, don't break,” said Twin Falls senior defensive back Tyler Wolters. “Every offense is going to get their chunk of yards, but we can't give up touchdowns. A lot of teams are going to fumble, get penalties or throw interceptions.”

That's exactly what Burley did — and the Bruins were more than happy to capitalize on the Bobcats' errors. Burley committed 10 penalties and the Bruin defense caused three turnovers, including two fumbles returned for touchdowns.

“We gave it to them and they took it. That's why they're better. They took what we gave them,” Green said.

Twin Falls' biggest offensive play was Josh Settemoier's 68-yard touchdown run late in the first quarter.

On the ensuing possession, Burley drove inside the Twin Falls 20-yard line before it coughed up the football and outside linebacker Zayne Sloten scooped it up and ran 75 yards for a touchdown.

Just before halftime, the Bruins put together a 58-yard drive that culminated in T.J. Ellis' 21-yard touchdown pass to Ricky Akridge to make it 21-0 at the break.

Burley moved its first possession of the second half inside the Bruin 20, but a fumbled snap ended up in the hands of Wolters, who returned the ball 85 yards for a score. Wolters also had an interception in the game.

“I saw the ball pop out in the middle of the field and it got kicked right at me,” Wolters said. “As a DB, we're taught to pick it up and run with it. I picked it up and looked behind me, saw someone and turned it on as fast as I could. When you're deep in the red zone and you get a fumble like that, it's huge.”

By the end of the night, the Twin Falls defense had more yards on fumble returns (160) than the Bruin offense had rushing (134).

“It feels good to get out of here with a win,” Wolters said. “We didn't move the ball very well offensively

Kimberly tops fumble-prone Viking squad

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

Valley helped gift-wrap this win for Kimberly.

Five lost fumbles by the Vikings created a short field for the powerful Kimberly offense which rumbled for more than 200 yards in the 48-22 win over Valley Friday.

“You can't put the ball on the ground five times and expect the defense to bail you out,” Valley coach Brian Ayers said.

Down 7-0, Valley caught a break as Kimberly fumbled the ball on its own 38-yard line, but the Vikings promptly returned it back to the Bulldogs with their own fumble.

Kimberly marched the ball down the field and senior running back Cody Casperson punched the ball in from 4 yards out for the score.

Casperson rushed for 90 yards and two touchdowns.

“Running the ball is just our mentality. We worked all week on blocking the inside linebackers and we were able to get to the next level,” Casperson said. “Our O-Line did a great job tonight.”

Kimberly wasted no time on its first possession of the game as running back Seth Champlin took the outside sweep 71 yards down the sideline.

Valley got on the board in the final seconds of the first quarter on a Matt Ivey 10-yard run to bring the score to 13-6.

Casperson ripped off his second touchdown run of the game in the second quarter to give Kimberly the 27-6 lead at halftime.

It was as close as the Vikings would get.

Jerome fights its way past Canyon Ridge

DREW NASH/Times-News

Canyon Ridge's Nick Kytle carries the ball as Jerome's Cody Davis tries for a tackle Friday night at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls.

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Jerome's players jumped up and down in the end zone, loudly chanting the last name of their freshman quarterback. A hundred yards away, Canyon Ridge's players stood sullenly in the opposite end zone, a couple wiping tears from their eyes.

The thrill of one side, the agony of the other made deeper by the way each side reached its emotional destination.

In his first-ever football game, Jerome's Salvador Mercado kicked a 25-yard field goal with 5:12 remaining and the Tigers got the final defensive stop they needed to break into the win column with a 24-22 win over the Riverhawks on Friday.

“Wow,” Jerome coach Gary Krumm said as his team celebrated.

In his first varsity start,

Jerome freshman quarterback Zach Thibault completed 12 of 25 passes for 102 yards and two passing touchdowns, while running for the game's first score from a yard out in the second quarter. But he took a jarring hit on a keeper with 9:30 left in the game and lay motionless on the field for more than 10 minutes before being taken off in an ambulance. Krumm said the initial diagnosis is a concussion.

Sophomore Simon Espinoza, Jerome's junior varsity QB, came in for Thibault and made several key runs to set up Mercado's field goal.

“Thibault did a heck of a job, but Simon Espinoza, he had no idea he'd play tonight,” said Krumm. “... He did a really nice job. Great poise. And great poise by our kicker.”

A standout soccer player for Jerome, Mercado acknowledged some nerves when he lined up for the field goal. “Big time,” he said. “It was a close match and it was my first game so I was pretty nervous.”

While Jerome made key plays to win it, Canyon Ridge imploded. The Riverhawks used three timeouts on their final drive, two for lining up improperly, and had no way to stop the clock after Tyler Myers was picked off by Milton Hernandez with 1:46 left.

“We kind of shot ourselves in the foot,” said Canyon Ridge coach Bill Hicks. “... We're just not there yet. We just don't understand when it's within your grasp how to take it, how to grab the win. We're growing, we have some great kids and I like the attitude.”

Olympian Kristin Armstrong considers a comeback

BOISE (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Kristin Armstrong is considering a comeback to professional cycling just days after giving birth to a son and a year after leaving the sport. The 2008 Beijing Olympics time-trial champion says she may rejoin the ranks of the women’s peloton.

Armstrong gave birth to a boy, Lucas William Savola, on Wednesday.

Now, the Boise, Idaho, resident told The Associated Press that she and her husband, Joe Savola, are “definitely going to enjoy the weeks and days ahead with our new little addition” but that’s she’s not ruling out a comeback.

The most successful American women road cyclist, Armstrong won the 2009 World Cycling Championship in Mendrisio, Switzerland, before retiring.

She won her first world championship gold medal at a time trial near Salzburg, Austria in 2006.

CSI volleyball team wins two at home tourney

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The eyeball test didn't suggest the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team played that well, but the stats told another story.

In a measured, composed performance on Friday's opening day of the Starr Corp. Invitational, CSI picked up a pair of wins over opponents that hung tough but didn't truly threaten.

No. 3 CSI defeated Northwest (Wyo.) 25-23, 25-23, 25-16 before beating Navarro (Texas) 25-23, 25-23, 25-20 to set up a titanic clash with No. 5 Salt Lake this morning. In the win over Northwest, Beth Carey had 19 kills to just one error and Rosie Becerra and Elisa Brochado each had a double-double. Becerra had 14 kills and 11 digs while Brochado had 12 kills and 10 digs. Barbara Alcantara had 12 digs and 49 assists.

CSI (14-2) let Northwest hang around but appeared in full control of the match no matter what the Trappers tried. The Golden Eagles didn't have a hitter with negative efficiency and committed just 13 errors in attack.

"I think Northwest gave us a lot of opportunities. They kept a lot of balls in play and kept rallies going," said CSI coach Heidi Cartisser. "We never panicked and really kept our composure."

Against Navarro, CSI went to the reserves ahead of today's matches.

Becerra led the team with 11 kills, while Brochado and Taylor Wilkinson each had five. Jesse Dill and Dama Cox were next with four, while Sierra Hansen had 18 assists.

The winner of today's CSI-Salt Lake match will likely move to No. 2 in Wednesday's NJCAA Division I poll after current No. 2 Iowa Western took its first defeat of the season and No. 4 San Jacinto-Central (Texas) was forced to forfeit its first 15 matches of the season because it didn't file its eligibility paperwork on time.

CSI also faces No. 13 Frank Phillips (Texas) this afternoon to conclude the tournament.

Davis leads Southern Miss to 31-16 win

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — There was no wild celebration after Southern Miss' 31-16 victory over Kansas on Friday night.

Instead, quarterback Austin Davis gave some high fives, hugged a few teammates and then jogged toward the locker room. After all, the Jayhawks aren't the first BCS opponent to be humbled on the Golden Eagles' home field.

"We thought this was very winnable coming in," Davis said. "We played with the attitude we were supposed to play with and had a lot of fun out there."

Davis completed 19 of 24 passes for 155 yards and ran for 61 yards and a touchdown, and Desmond Johnson ran for 89 yards and a touchdown.

NEVADA ROUTS CAL

The Nevada Wolf Pack beat Cal 52-31 late Friday Reno. For a final score, visit Magicvalley.com.

Southern Miss (2-1) has won 10 straight home games dating to 2008. The Golden Eagles have been hard on BCS teams who have ventured to Hattiesburg in recent years, also beating Virginia 37-34 last season and North Carolina State 37-17 in 2006.

The Golden Eagles won despite several missed opportunities, dropping two easy interceptions in the first half, including one that would have been a sure touchdown. Star receiver DeAndre Brown didn't have a great game either, catching three passes for 34 yards.

But thanks to Davis, solid defense and big plays from the special teams, perfection wasn't needed. Southern Miss broke the game open late in the first half when Johnson ran untouched 49 yards for a touchdown to make it 14-3 with 3:45 remaining in the second quarter.

Barely 2 minutes later, Tim Green burst through the line to block a punt and Deron Wilson scooped up the ball for an easy 7-yard score and a 21-3 half-time lead.

Kansas (1-2) briefly regrouped in the third quarter, putting together an 11-play, 59-yard drive that ended with DeShaun Sands' 8-yard touchdown run that made it 21-10.

tonight. It wasn't a great night for us altogether. We definitely need to play better. We need to focus next week on moving the ball better."

Burley (0-3 overall, 0-1 GBC) finally got on the board in the fourth quarter — despite two penalties inside the red zone on the scoring drive. Branson Handy punched it in from 6 yards out.

"I love my kids, they're playing hard. They're just making mental mistakes," Green said. "The mental aspect of the game is escaping us right now, and sometimes that's the hardest part to get."

The win gives Twin Falls an early jump in the Great Basin Conference race before it ventures out of conference next week at Pocatello.

Burley will cross the Snake River and tangle with Mini-Cassia rival Minico next week.

and struggled in his opening snaps, tossing two second-quarter interceptions. But he hit Colton Sweesy for scores of 39 and 6 yards, the latter leading to the Riverhawks' first lead when Nick Kytle ran a fake kick in for a 2-point conversion and a 22-21 edge with 10:08 left in the fourth.

Kytle also blitzed Thibault in the third quarter, forcing a fumble that Derek Bastian scooped up and returned 10 yards for a score. Bastian made a key catch on a fourth-and-9 on Canyon Ridge's final drive, but four plays later the Riverhawks' fourth pick of the game ended their hopes.

DREW NASH/Times-News
Canyon Ridge's Burhan Hetemi tackles Jerome's Dylan Dowton Friday night at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls.

"We made a lot of stupid mistakes," said Bastian. "We stopped thinking, we started making penalties, dropped passes. That's the reason. We couldn't capitalize. We just couldn't seem to get it there at the end."

Jerome (1-3) hosts Wood River for homecoming next week, looking to continue their newfound momentum.

"We came through when we needed," said Krumm. "I've got nothing but praise for our kids. It was tough."

Canyon Ridge (1-2) steps out of conference for a trip to Kimberly next Friday.

"We're never satisfied," said Bastian. "We feel like we can beat any team when we play and when we lose it hurts us pretty bad. We look for wins."

fumble in the third quarter, leading to a Clay Matthews 22-yard run.

"It felt great out there to score that touchdown. Valley is a tough team and played us well," said Matthews, who finished with 43 rushing yards.

Facing its first 4-4 defensive scheme this season, the Bulldogs had no problem moving the ball on the ground.

Eight players rushed the ball for the Bulldogs who amassed over 250 yards on the ground.

"They're a good team over there," Ayers said. "They run the ball really well and have a lot of good athletes. We had trouble stopping them, but we kept giving the ball right back to them with our fumbles."

Valley started moving the ball with consistency in the fourth quarter, leading to two scores. Brett Miller came in at quarterback, replacing Ivey, and scored on a 4-yard run. Ivey added his second touchdown of the game with a 29-yard scamper to bring the score to 41-14 with eight minutes remaining.

Two outsiders kicks failed and Kimberly's Garrett Quinn scored on a 2-yard plunge with six minutes remaining in the game.

"We still took some positives from this game and learned we can move the ball if we don't put it on the ground," Ayers said.

The Vikings (2-1) play Wendell next week.

Kimberly avenged its loss to Valley from last year.

"For all the seniors out there, that was our motivation. We didn't want to lose to Valley again," Matthews said.

ISU opens conference play at UNC

By Mark Liptak
Times-News Correspondent

POCATELLO — When Idaho State takes the field today at Northern Colorado (1:30 p.m.. Altitude), the Bengals will start to answer the question of what kind of team they are in 2010. So far, they’ve beaten up NAIA school Montana Western and taken a beating from Western Athletic Conference member Utah State.

Idaho St. at No. Colorado

1:30 p.m.
TV: Altitude (Dish Network Channel 410, DirecTV Channel 681)
Radio: 930 AM

This is the Big Sky Conference opener for the Bengals (1-1) and the first time this season they’ll face another FCS team, but the Bears (1-1) won’t be a pushover.

“What an offense,” Idaho State head coach John Zamberlin said. “They’ve got it going right now and they are going to be mad after what happened last week.”
What happened last week was UNC losing in four overtimes at Weber State, a team expected to be one of the best in the Big Sky Conference. The Bears already scored 13 touchdowns in two games and are averaging 50 points and 235 rushing yards.

The key player for the Bears today is running back Andre Harris, who is averaging 135 yards per game with five touchdowns.
“Pretty good back,” Zamberlin said.
ISU heads into the game with quarterback questions again. Senior Russel Hill played last week in the loss at Utah State, his first appearance of the season, and showed his knee wasn’t slowing him down much. Hill went 13 of 22 for 162 yards and two touchdowns in the second half.

Zamberlin declined to name a starter for the UNC game, saying he’ll make the call today between Hill and Kyle Morris, who started the first two games.
“Both kids will get reps this week in practice. If I start Russ and he goes down, Kyle needs to be ready and Russ is still a little gimpy especially when he has to scramble,” said Zamberlin.

Notes: UNC will play the first half Saturday without junior cornerback Brandon Owens. Owens was suspended by the conference for throwing a punch in the third overtime last week at Weber State. ... The last road win for the Bengals came at UNC in 2006.

FSU prepares for either of BYU’s QBs

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Brigham Young coach Bronco Mendenhall isn’t sure which Cougar quarterback he’ll play the most today (1:30 p.m., ESPN), leaving Florida State coach Jimbo Fisher in a bind when it comes to preparing his defense.

Mendenhall says he’ll open with the more experienced Riley Nelson, a better runner, but then he’s also excited about acclaimed freshman, Jake Heaps, a highly regarded passer who Fisher tried to recruit.
“You’ve got to be careful that when you prepare for two, you say ‘OK, he does this, he does this, and he does this,’ and if they ever cross you up at all, you’ve still got to be sound on all facets of your game,” Fisher said.

Fisher’s club was anything but sound a week ago, confounded by a no-huddle offense in a 47-17 bashing at Oklahoma against a passing quarterback who wasn’t a threat to run. BYU, meanwhile, didn’t fare much better at Air Force where the Cougars were run over 35-14.

The losses dropped both schools from the Top 25.
BYU visits Florida State for the first time, eager to avenge an embarrassing 54-28 loss at home last year to the Seminoles, who have won the three previous games in the series that include two games played at neutral sites.
“Hopefully we’ll play well enough to win,” Mendenhall said. “If we don’t there will be lessons we have to apply and apply quickly to get better.”
Nelson, a junior, has run for 140 yards in the first two games and passed for another 204 yards and a pair of touchdowns. He’s assured only the first snap but played most of the game in last week’s loss to Air Force.

“We’ve never guaranteed that whoever gets the first snap will end up playing the most,” said Mendenhall.
He could be tempted to go with the younger but more passing-savvy Heaps after seeing what Oklahoma’s Landry Jones did to the Seminoles last week.
Fisher doesn’t have the same problem, despite a capable backup in sophomore EJ Manuel.
Although Florida State’s brief “CP7 Heisman” promotion for Christian Ponder has quieted after a poor showing at Oklahoma, the senior quarterback is Fisher’s main man, period.
“He went back to fundamentals and back to basics,” Fisher said. “How we play around him is going to be very important, too. He had a good week.”
Ponder badly needs a young receiver to step up to give him a downfield target. His two most reliable targets, juniors Bert Reed and Taiwan Easterling, are possession receivers.
“It’s going to open up the passing game even more, being able to spread the ball around,” Easterling said. “Even the running game.”
While Mendenhall may be tempted to work on Florida State’s young, somewhat beleaguered secondary, Fisher could be just as anxious to run the ball after seeing the Cougars give up more than 400 yards rushing last week to Air Force’s option attack.

TODAY’S OTHER BIG GAMES

No. 8 Nebraska (2-0) at Washington (1-1)

1:30 p.m. (ABC)
Line: Nebraska by 3.
Series Record: Tied 3-3-1.
Last Meeting: 1998, Nebraska, 55-7.

WHAT’S AT STAKE

It’s test time for the Cornhuskers. After cleaning up Western Kentucky and Idaho at home, and with South Dakota State coming to Lincoln next week, Nebraska gets its first challenge before opening Big 12 play Oct. 7 at Kansas State. Washington hasn’t defeated a ranked team from a BCS conference since beating Michigan to open the 2001 season. QB Jake Locker’s Heisman campaign would benefit from a huge game, as well, with more than half the country getting the broadcast.

KEY MATCHUP

Nebraska’s secondary vs. Washington’s receivers. This could be fun. The Cornhuskers boast two of the best cornerbacks in the country in Prince Amukamara and Alfonso Dennard, plus another handful of ball-snagging DBs. They’ll face a Washington receiving corps that’s averaging 13 yards per catch through two games. Amukamara against Jermaine Kearse could be especially entertaining.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Nebraska: QB Taylor Martinez. All Martinez has done in his first two starts is run for 284 yards and five touchdowns. Husky Stadium isn’t the most cozy place to make your first road start, but the Huskies have struggled with similar spread offenses in recent years.
Washington: RB Chris Polk. If there is one place Nebraska has been suspect so far it’s stopping the run. Polk rushed for 117 yards last week versus Syracuse and has 100-yard games in five of his last seven dating back to last season.

FACTS & FIGURES

Washington is 21-20-2 all-time against teams from the current Big 12. ... Cornhuskers expecting upward of 20,000 fans at Husky Stadium.

Air Force (2-0) at Oklahoma (2-0)

1:30 p.m. (FSN)
Line: Oklahoma by 17.
Series Record: Oklahoma leads 1-0.
Last Meeting: 2001, Oklahoma, 44-3.

WHAT’S AT STAKE

Sitting just outside the Top 25, Air Force gets a rare chance to prove itself against a team from one of the conferences with automatic BCS berths. The Falcons are 0-2 in such games under Troy Calhoun, although they have a win against Notre Dame in that span. Oklahoma has won 32 straight at home.

KEY MATCHUP

Air Force run game vs. Oklahoma defense. The Falcons are averaging an NCAA-best 423 yards rushing per game and will need to find holes against a Sooners D that’s been among the top 20 teams against the run for nine straight years.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Air Force: CB Anthony Wright Jr. A playmaker on defense and special teams, Wright led the Mountain West with seven interceptions last season and returned two of them for scores, to go along with a punt he ran back for a touchdown. He also had a punt return TD called back two weeks ago.
Oklahoma: DE Frank Alexander. After missing the Sooners’ opener with a sprained ankle, Alexander doubled his sack total from last year with a pair last week against Florida State. His test this week will be slowing the Falcons’ option along the edge.

FACTS & FIGURES

Air Force hasn’t faced a Big 12 opponent since losing to Oklahoma in 2001. ... Oklahoma has scored a touchdown on its opening possession in three straight games.

No. 9 Iowa (2-0) at No. 24 Arizona (2-0)

8:30 p.m. (ESPN)
Line: Iowa by 1½.
Series Record: Tied 6-6.
Last Meeting: 2009, Iowa, 27-17.

WHAT’S AT STAKE

The first true test for both teams after a pair of pushover games to start the season. Arizona beat up on FCS schools Portland State and Northern Arizona by a combined score of 93-8, while Iowa beat Eastern Illinois and Iowa State by a total of 72-14. A win Saturday could be the springboard to a big season.

KEY MATCHUP

Arizona QB Nick Foles vs. Iowa’s pass rush. Foles has been superb in his first full season as starter, completing an astounding 83 percent of his passes. Iowa, led by big, agile DE Adrian Clayborn, figures to get more pressure on the junior than Portland State and N. Arizona. The Wildcats must keep Clayborn and the gang away from Foles long enough for him to get passes off.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Iowa: QB Ricky Stanzi. The senior can look like the best quarterback in the country at times, and miss receivers badly in others. He’s been solid so far this season, with a QB rating of 183.59 and 433 yards and three TDs passing. With a solid running game behind Adam Robinson, Stanzi shouldn’t have to, and shouldn’t try to, carry the Hawkeyes against Arizona.
Arizona: RB Nic Grigsby. The senior has scored five TDs already this season and has pulled off multiple highlight reel-worthy runs the first two games. With Iowa likely to go after Foles hard, Grigsby will need to find holes and take the pressure off with big runs.

No. 14 Utah (2-0) at New Mexico (0-2)

6 p.m. (The Mtn.)
Line: Utah by 22½.
Series Record: Utah leads 37-17-2.
Last Meeting: 2009, Utah, 45-14.

WHAT’S AT STAKE

After opening with two wins at home, the Utes hit the road for the first time this season. The Lobos are trying to be competitive after getting blown out by Oregon (70-0) and Texas Tech (52-17) in the first two weeks.

KEY MATCHUP

Utah’s offense vs. the Lobos’ beleaguered defenders. New Mexico ranks last nationally in total defense and scoring defense. Even if Utah QB Jordan Wynn sits out a second straight week with a sprained right thumb, backup Terrance Cain could lead the Utes to their biggest offensive day of the young season.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Utah: LB Chaz Walker. Walker followed his team-high 11 tackles in the season opener by making 16 last week against UNLV.
New Mexico: QB B.R. Holbrook completed 30 of 50 passes for 323 yards and a touchdown — the Lobos’ first of the season — last week against Texas Tech.

FACTS & FIGURES

The Lobos face a ranked team for the second time in the first three weeks of the season. ... New Mexico’s last win over a ranked team was against No. 24 Utah in 2003 in Salt Lake City — the Utes’ only Mountain West Conference loss that season. ... Utah has allowed a blocked punt in each of the first two games. ... Utah RBs Eddie Wide and Matt Asiata have split the rushing duties with 24 carries apiece. Wide is averaging 5.2 yards per carry and Asiata 4.3.

TV reporter's locker room foray touches off debate

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Jets have apologized for boorish behavior directed at a female TV reporter in their locker room. A training session for players is in the works. The reporter herself says it wasn't really so offensive. So we can all move on, right?

Of course not. Because in less than a week, Ines Sainz has become the focus of renewed debate over the thorniest of issues: Women's access to men's locker rooms; their choice of attire on the job; and even the highly charged question of whether the way a woman dresses can ever mean she's "asking for" consequences. First, the background: Sainz, a reporter from Mexico's TV Azteca, entered the Jets locker room last weekend to interview quarterback Mark Sanchez. She was wearing tight jeans and a snug white blouse. She felt uncomfortable — the actual behavior by the players is in dispute — and tweeted that she was "dying of embarrassment."

Sainz didn't complain to the team, but others did. Jets owner Woody Johnson called to assure her it wouldn't happen again.

And on Friday evening, the NFL announced it was implementing a training program for all 32 teams on proper conduct in the workplace. The league said an investigation had showed that while there was "unprofessional conduct" in the locker room, Johnson and his staff had acted promptly to correct the situation.

Whether the NFL action would quell the chatter on the airwaves and in the blo-gosphere was another story, however, because Sainz had people talking from the get-go.

She went on several TV shows to discuss the incident, wearing an undeniably revealing black blouse that seemed more risque than what she'd worn in the locker room. On Fox News, her interviewer, Jon Scott, ignored the top but said of her earlier attire: "Could they get any tighter, those jeans?"

"They are my size," she responded.

The NFL Network's Brian

Baldinger laid the blame squarely on what he called Sainz's "painted-on jeans."

"If you come into the NFL dressed the way that she is dressed you are just asking," he told a Philadelphia sports radio show. "I mean the boys are just having fun," he said. "If she walked into any locker room in the league, the exact same thing would have happened." He said he felt the Jets had no need to apologize.

In a statement e-mailed to The Associated Press, the NFL Network said: "We discussed with Brian his comments. He understands they were not appropriate."

But similar thoughts were echoed by many on Twitter and Facebook.

"You dress provocatively, you'll get provocative attention," Stephen Peters, a 25-year-old sports reporter from Irving, Texas, wrote on Facebook.

"Testosterone is high in those locker rooms and she needs to realize the clothes/style she wears is solely to catch attention. Dress like a professional and you'll receive professional attention."

Oswalt, Phillies stroll past Nationals

PHILADELPHIA — Roy Oswalt threw six sharp innings to earn his seventh straight win, and NL East-leading Philadelphia beat Washington 9-1 on Friday night.

Oswalt (13-13) allowed one run and six hits, striking out seven. The right-hander is 7-0 with a 1.41 ERA in his last eight starts and 7-1 overall since Philadelphia acquired him from Houston on July 29.

The Phillies won their fifth straight game and reduced their magic number for clinching their fourth consecutive division title to 12. The two-time NL champions entered with a three-game lead over Atlanta.

BRAVES 6, METS 4

NEW YORK — Jason Heyward hit a three-run homer to cap a six-run inning spurred by David Wright's error and Atlanta shook off the road blues by starting a critical nine-game trip with a win.

Tommy Hanson (10-11) won for just the second time in 14 starts and Omar Infante had a two-run double for the Braves, who came into the series in New York having dropped three of four at home and falling three games behind the Phillies in the NL East.

PIRATES 4, DIAMONDBACKS 3

PITTSBURGH — Ronny Cedeno's single in the bottom of the ninth scored Andrew McCutchen and Pittsburgh snapped a four-game losing streak.

Cedeno's soft line drive to right-center off Esmerling Vasquez (1-6) came after one-out walks to McCutchen and Ryan Doumit. McCutchen was pinch-hitting after being scratched from the lineup about 30 minutes before game time due to a stomach ailment.

CUBS 2, MARLINS 0

MIAMI — Ryan Dempster pitched seven crisp innings for Chicago.

Alfonso Soriano and Geovany Soto each hit an RBI double for the Cubs, who matched their season best with their fourth consecutive victory.

ASTROS 5, REDS 3

HOUSTON — Angel Sanchez hit a tiebreaking two-run single off Aroldis Chapman in the seventh inning to spark Houston.

Houston starter Wandy Rodriguez took a no-hitter into the sixth inning before giving up a leadoff double to Joey Votto and a three-run homer that gave the Reds a 3-2 lead.

CARDINALS 14, PADRES 4

ST. LOUIS — Yadier Molina went 4 for 4 with a career-high five RBIs to lead the St. Louis Cardinals over Mat Latos and the San Diego Padres.

Matt Holliday homered and drove in three runs for the Cardinals. Albert Pujols added three hits and two RBIs. Colby Rasmus had three hits and scored four times.

AMERICAN LEAGUE YANKEES 4, ORIOLES 3

BALTIMORE — Alex Rodriguez hit a three-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning, his second of the game.

The Yankees posted their 46th comeback win of the season and improved to 2-5 on their nine-game road trip. They moved back into first place in the AL East, a half-game ahead of Tampa Bay.

ANGELS 4, RAYS 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. —

Torre to retire as Dodgers manager

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joe Torre never got the Los Angeles Dodgers to the heights his Yankees once reached, and now the veteran manager is moving on.

Torre said Friday he will retire after his third season with the Dodgers, and Los Angeles immediately announced hitting coach Don Mattingly will replace him in 2011.

Torre took over the Dodgers before the 2008 season after 12 successful years and four World Series titles with the New York Yankees. Although he revitalized the Dodgers while making the playoffs twice during his relatively brief stint in Hollywood, he never matched his success in the Bronx.

He led Los Angeles to division titles in each of his first two seasons, but lost both times to Philadelphia in the NL championship series. His current Dodgers began their penultimate homestand of the season Friday at 72-75 and in fourth place, 11 games behind San Francisco, with their playoff chances all but erased.

"It has been an incredible honor to wear the Dodger uniform, and I will always carry with me some very special memories from the past three seasons," Torre said in a statement. "This was not a decision I took lightly, but I believe it's the right one for myself and my family, and I'm truly thrilled that Donnie will be the one leading the Dodgers."

Sponsorship dries up for top NASCAR stars

LOUDON, N.H. (AP) — For sale: Prime real estate on the hood of cars driven by former Cup champions Tony Stewart and Jeff Gordon.

All it takes to fill the prime made-for-TV locale is a deep-pocketed sponsor looking to jump into NASCAR or bolster its profile by forming a partnership with one of the sports marquee stars. Gordon and Stewart — who have six championships between them — are chasing corporate America's dollars just as much they're driving for a title over the 10-race Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

They're not alone.

Corporate sponsors have dried up to the point that Kyle Busch says he may have to fold his truck team next season. Busch could be one-and-done in the low-budget series if a full-time sponsor can't be signed to keep it afloat.

"The people that have the money to do it, can't or don't want to do it," Busch said Friday at New Hampshire Motor Speedway. "The guys that want to do it, don't have the money to do it."

Busch has run into circumstances in the Trucks Series where other teams are slicing rates and practically giving away sponsorship, leaving him scrambling to find a company willing to pay a higher price that a driver like Busch commands.

"I think it's going to be pretty detrimental to not have myself in the series," Busch said.

In a troubling sign that NASCAR and corporate America have not emerged unscathed from the economic swoon, Stewart and Gordon have done everything short of putting out a want ad to stir sponsorship interest. Gordon is nearing the end of a nearly 20-year relationship with DuPont and Stewart needs a primary sponsor for 14 races next season. Old Spice announced earlier this year it

Keselowski wins pole, Johnson a career-worst 25th

LOUDON, N.H. (AP) — Brad Keselowski crashed the party at New Hampshire Motor Speedway, winning the pole for the first race in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

Keselowski broke Juan Pablo Montoya's year-old qualifying record with a lap of 133.572 mph Friday to earn the top starting spot Sunday. The Penske Racing driver nudged championship contenders Clint Bowyer and Tony Stewart, who qualified second and third for the first event in the 10-race Chase.

Keselowski, mired in a rough first season at NASCAR's top level, is ranked 26th in the standings and not eligible to race for the title. Only the top 12 drivers race for the championship.

"I would love to be the spoiler of the Chase," Keselowski said. "I would live for that moment."

On Sunday, though, he'll have to do his best to not become part of the Chase storylines. A win would be fabulous for NASCAR's newest polarizing driver, but the aggressive driving he's become notorious for would best be held back when it comes to the championship contenders.

As is, the bulk of them will have a ton of work to do just trying to catch Keselowski.

Only four Chase drivers qualified inside the top 10. Bowyer and Stewart will line their Chevrolets up right around Keselowski's Dodge, while Kyle Busch will start ninth in a Toyota and Carl Edwards rolls out 10th in a Ford.

would withdraw Stewart's sponsorship based on a change in marketing strategies.

Dandy Dozen: Most undeserving Heisman winners

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

Reggie Bush gave back his Heisman Trophy. There are a few more that folks would like to see change hands. Not because the players didn't go on to be good pros, but simply because there were better players that season.

Here are 12 nominees for the most undeserving Heisman winners, with some help from the AP Top 25 voters. Notice that Michigan's Charles Woodson, who beat out Peyton Manning in 1997, is NOT on the list?

1) Paul Hornung, qb, Notre Dame, 1956. The Notre Dame hype machine has produced a few unworthy Heisman winners but none more so than Hornung. He was a great player, but the Irish went 2-8. Any of the next four players in the voting — Johnny Majors from Tennessee, Tom McDonald and Jerry Tubbs from Oklahoma or Syracuse's Jim Brown, who finished FIFTH — would have been more deserving.

2) Archie Griffin, rb, Ohio State, 1975. The only two-time Heisman Trophy winner never should have won his second. Griffin's numbers were down across the board compared to 1974 and three other tailbacks — Cal's Chuck Muncie, USC's Ricky Bell and Pitt's Tony Dorsett — had better seasons.

3) Gino Torretta, qb, Miami, 1992. Good quarterbacks on great teams tend to get too much support from Heisman voters. Torretta is not the only one on this list who falls into that category, but the most glaring. He beat out Marshall Faulk, who was a one-man show at San Diego State, running for 1,630 yards and 15 touchdowns.

"Torretta only threw 19 touchdown passes that season. There's no way a quarterback could win the award with those kind of numbers today," John Shinn, The Norman (Okla.) Transcript.

4) Tim Brown, wr, Notre Dame, 1987. Brown was a tremendous player, but he won the Heisman by being a great decoy. He had 990 yards from scrimmage and scored all of seven touchdowns, three of those on punt returns. Meanwhile, quarterback Don McPherson led Syracuse to an undefeated season and Pitt's Craig Heyward ran for more than 1,600 yards.

5) Andre Ware, qb, Houston, 1989. Ware put up crazy numbers in the run-n-shoot (4,699 yards and 44 TD passes). And the Cougars were not afraid to run it up — remember 95-21 against an SMU program in its first season back from the so-called death penalty? The numbers overwhelmed Heisman voters — and NFL scouts — but Indiana's Anthony Thompson ran for 1,793 yards and scored 25 touchdowns and would have been a better pick.

6) John Huarte, qb, Notre Dame, 1964. Considering the era, Huarte's numbers were good: 2,062 yards and 16 touchdown passes for a Notre Dame team that went 9-1. But the guy who finished third, you might have heard of him: Illinois linebacker Dick Butkus.

"That one needs to be revoted," Bob Asmussen, the Champaign (Ill.)

News-Gazette.

7) Jason White, qb, Oklahoma, 2003. Good quarterback, great team. White had a huge season, but when he bombed in the BCS title game against LSU, it became very clear that Pitt receiver Larry Fitzgerald, the runner-up, or Mississippi's Eli Manning, who finished third, should have won the award.

8) George Rogers, rb, South Carolina, 1980. Rogers was a stand-out college running back and ran for 1,781 yards, but Herschel Walker was a freshman at Georgia in 1980 and just as good. He finished third in voting behind the guy who really should have won it: Pitt defensive end Hugh Green, the Ndamukong Suh of his time.

9) Matt Leinart, qb, USC, 2004. Better than White and Torretta, but he had so many other stars at his disposal: Bush, LenDale White, Steve Smith and Dwayne Jarrett. Adrian Peterson was the runner-up that season as a freshman. Being a frosh surely didn't help Peterson. Nor did White finishing third and pulling some of the Oklahoma vote away from Peterson.

10) Pat Sullivan, qb, Auburn, 1971. Sullivan and Ed Marinaro, the Cornell running back and future "Hill Street Blues" star, finished one-two in a fairly close race. Oklahoma tailback Gregg Pruitt ran for 1,665 yards, averaged 9.4 yards per carry, and scored 17 TDs, and really should have won the Heisman.

11) Ron Dayne, rb, Wisconsin, 1999. Dayne had a big year, 1,834 yards and 19 touchdowns, but this was really a career achievement award for breaking the NCAA record for yards rushing. Third-place finisher Michael Vick led Virginia Tech to the national championship game and was truly the best player in the country.

12) Les Horvath, qb, Ohio State, 1944. He led the Buckeyes to an undefeated season, but two sophomores for Army — Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard — finished second and third and had to wait to win their Heismans so the senior Horvath could win his.

Idaho running back Princeton McCarty (20) runs against Nebraska on Sept. 11. The Vandals host UNLV tonight.

Vandals

UNLV is 0-2, but both losses have come to top-15 teams in Wisconsin and Utah. The Rebels of the Mountain West have mustered just two passing touchdowns thus far, and quarterback Omar Clayton leads UNLV in rushing with 87 yards.

"There's the blend of the option game and the throwing game," Akey said of Clayton. "There's a challenge right there in front of us: Be strong in that fashion and be accountable for our assignments.

"There were some times we were good at that against Nebraska. There were some times it faltered a little bit, and you could certainly see when it did."

On the offensive side of the ball, Akey is hoping to find more balance tonight.

"We need to get back to being able to run the ball," he said. "We need to be able to run and throw the football equally."

Notes: The Vandals went 2-0 last year against the MWC. ... Safety Shiloh Keo has an interception in each of Idaho's games thus far, ranking him third nationally and first in the WAC.

Boise State

Texas and led the Longhorns in the second quarter before returning home with a 34-7 loss.

"Wyoming has a good team and they are going to be excited to play us," Petersen said. "It's no mystery what we're walking into."

What Boise State is walking into is a bona fide trap game — an opponent it should easily handle but one that is dealing with the emotional loss of freshman Ruben Narcisse, who died in car accident less than two weeks ago.

However, Boise State has had two weeks to prepare for the Cowboys' wide-open offense and the dual-threat game of sophomore quarterback Austyn Carta-Samuels. Coming into the contest, Carta-Samuels has completed 42 of 56 passes for 479 yards and three touchdowns with only one interception.

While Carta-Samuels doesn't have the speed of Virginia Tech quarterback Tyrod Taylor, he isn't afraid to go off script, which gives Boise State's defense reason for concern.

"Wyoming throws a lot of funky stuff at you," Boise State senior safety Jeron Johnson said. "We're going to have really read our keys this week to be able to play with them. They go at a faster pace than Virginia Tech and they come out in a completely different formation every other play. We have to be prepared for whatever they've got."

Boise State's secondary also hopes to silence any mild criticism after the opening game — and will have a formidable challenge with Carta-Samuels, who has a 161.0 quarterback rating and a 75-percent completion percentage.

"Of course, we hear the criticism," Johnson said, speaking for the Broncos' secondary. "It's added motivation for us. We didn't play a horrible game, but we gave up some big plays that we shouldn't have. We have room for improvement and we're going to come out this week and prove ourselves."

Boise State's ground game rotation worked well in the opener, producing 168 yards with 83 from Doug Martin and 80 from D.J. Harper. Boise State should take advantage of Wyoming's defensive front and poor tackling to establish a run game early.

Despite what should be an easy victory, Boise State is aware that it is getting its opponent's best shot each week — and nothing will be easy.

"Wyoming is a great opponent—and we are just trying to focus on one game at a time," said senior tight end Tommy Gallarda. "We can't worry about anything else. We have to take care of each game and see where we are at the end of the season."

The matchup: No. 3 Boise State at Wyoming

Line: Boise State by 23½.

Series Record: Boise State leads 4-0.

Last Meeting: 2007, Boise State, 24-14.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

For starters, this game offers Boise State a preview of what's in store when the Broncos jump ship to the Mountain West Conference after this season. Even more, it's a chance for the Broncos to climb closer to Alabama and Ohio State in the polls. For Wyoming, this is an opportunity to make national headlines. Boise State is coming off a bye week after a big win over Virginia Tech in the opener. The Cowboys lost to sixth-ranked Texas, 34-7, in Austin. The danger for Boise State may be overlooking Wyoming with No. 25 Oregon State looming a week later.

KEY MATCHUP

Wyoming CBs Tashaun and Marcell Gipson

vs. Boise State WRs Titus Young and Austin Pettis. The Gipson brothers will have their hands full covering one of the top tandems in the country. Young and Pettis combined for 12 catches and 153 yards against Virginia Tech. Marcell Gipson forced two fumbles in the opener against Southern Utah.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Boise State: DE Ryan Winterswyk, who is one sack away from tying for the fifth spot on Boise State's career sacks list. Winterswyk will have to keep a close eye on Wyoming quarterback Austyn Carta-Samuels, who's not afraid to take off and run if a play breaks down.

Wyoming: FS Chris Proinski. The senior from Buffalo, Wyo., always seems to be in the middle of a play. He had 11 tackles at Texas, which was near his average last season when he finished 10th in the nation.

FACTS & FIGURES

Wyoming will honor freshman linebacker Ruben Narcisse, who was killed in a car accident in Colorado on Sept. 6. Team captain Brian Hendricks will don Narcisse's No. 12 jersey for the game and "RN" decals will be worn on Wyoming's helmets. The Cowboys are distributing 5,000 T-shirts with his number and "Ruben Narcisse, Always a Cowboy" printed on it. ... No. 3 Boise State is the second-highest ranked team ever to play in Laramie. The Cowboys hosted No. 2 Texas last season, losing 41-10. ... Pettis is five catches from passing Jeremy Childs (2006-08) for second place on Boise State's all-time receptions list. With 164 career catches, Pettis is 25 away from tying Don Hutt's school mark of 189 set from 1970-73. ... The Broncos have won 15 straight games.

MVS announces return to NASCAR

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Magic Valley Speedway owner/associate promoter Eddy McKean, along with associate promoter Terry Buell announced Friday morning that Magic Valley Speedway is returning to the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing beginning with the 2011 season.

MVS was a NASCAR sanctioned track from 1991 through 2007 and the move to embrace the popular racing sanctioning body once again is welcomed by both NASCAR and the speedway.

George Silbermann, Managing Director of Racing Operations with NASCAR, made the trip to the Magic Valley to give details on what the NASCAR affiliation means to drivers, fans and sponsors.

"Magic Valley Speedway is a beautiful track and it has always generated great racers," Silbermann said. "The NASCAR Wheelen Racing Series offers a whole infrastructure supporting short-track racing.

"From the competitors side, the drivers are literally in competition with other drivers from race tracks all across North America and there are financial rewards in addition to the prestige that comes with being either a NASCAR track champion, state champion or perhaps a national champion. It is also nice to be able to explain to a potential sponsor that you race for NASCAR."

In addition to the overall advantages NASCAR has to offer, McKean praised the new level of thinking regarding tapping potential from the younger set.

"I was a NASCAR driver and I always have been excited about NASCAR," McKean explained. "But I feel very strongly about getting the younger drivers started early and since NASCAR has changed their program, they're able to do that now. It's just going to be a big plus all the way around."

Closing out the 2010 season this evening, Magic Valley Speedway will crown champions in the Rocky Mountain Challenge Series, Budweiser Super Stocks, Brennan's Carpet Pony Stocks, Quale's Electronics Hornets and Magic Valley Pipe Super Sixes.

The top three drivers in

MVS POINT STANDINGS

Budweiser Super Stocks: 1. Kris McKean 1,390, 2. Daniel Shirley 1,309, 3. Willie Dalton 1,166, 4. Ernie Hall 1,125, 5. Brennan VanderMeer 1,098.

Brennan's Carpet Pony Stocks: 1. Todd Audet 1,781, 2. Ray Homolka 1,748, 3. Jerry Slocum 1,539, 4. JC Brookshire 1,417, 5. Wade Henslee 1,415.

Quale's Electronics Hornets: 1. Andy Brennan, Ty Garibay (tie) 1,436, 3. Jeff Peck 1,415, 4. Bob Gilligan 1,412, 5. Brandon Mortensen 1,249.

Magic Valley Pipe and Steel Super Sixes: 1. Bob Bachman 401, 2. Dean Waltman 355, 3. Randy Sellars, 301, 4. Jasen Skyberg 284, 5. Travis Burke 158.

Rocky Mountain Challenge Series: 1. Steve Jones 1,490, 2. John Newhouse 1,470, 3. Bruce Quale 1,339, 4. Lynn Hardy 1,337, 5. Brett Thompson 1,167.

the Rocky Mountain Challenge Series points battle for the championship are well acquainted with the one-third mile oval at Magic Valley Speedway. Steve Jones, John Newhouse and Bruce Quale are all former MVS track champions.

Jones' margin over Newhouse is just 20 points going into tonight's events. Facing qualifying, a heat race and a 100-lap main event race, Jones realizes 20 points does not warrant making room on the shelf for the championship trophy just yet.

"Technically it's really nothing in our world," Jones said of the narrow advantage. "It's all going to be about qualifying tonight. If we can get a good qualifying lap in it takes all the pressure off, then we can just ride it out because of the way our point system is set up. But if I don't get a good lap in qualifying and John does, it's a whole new game."

Newhouse, RMCS 2007 champion, is equally aware that the 2010 title is basically up for grabs this evening.

"I feel really confident,"

Newhouse said. "We won the championship before going in a lot more points down than we are now, so 20 points is really not anything. It's just a matter of us just finishing ahead of (Jones) though qualifying, the heat race and the main event. Then we can make something happen."

Jerome resident Brett Thompson, who has been tackling other traveling venues as well as full-time competition in the Rocky Mountain Series, is currently fifth in the standings but is out for the rest of the season after suffering severe damage to his car at Rocky Mountain Raceway in Salt Lake City, Utah, in a recent event.

In the local series battles, Kris McKean already has a firm grip on the championship in the Super Stocks division leading Daniel Shirley by 81 points. Likewise, Todd Audet can feel fairly confident about his 33-point lead over 2009 champion Ray Homolka in the Pony Stocks division.

However, the picture is completely different for Hornets division drivers Ty Garibay, Andy Brennan, Jeff Peck and Bob Gilligan. Garibay and Brennan are tied for first place going into this evening's final event with both drivers seeking out their first championship in the series. Peck is 21 points back from the leaders and Gilligan, who is shooting for his third championship in a row, is 24 points behind.

For the traveling Idaho Super Sixes drivers, Bob Bachman rides in a comfort zone with a 46-point advantage over Dean Waltman.

Gates for the Quale's Electronics Championship night open at 4 p.m. and green flag racing begins at 6.

Pavin: Woods could have reduced Ryder Cup role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Corey Pavin has no concerns about Tiger Woods' passion for Ryder Cup play, even if he doesn't choose the world's top player for every match next month in Wales. Pavin praised Woods' talent and teamwork Friday while discussing his final preparations for the Ryder Cup, which will be held Oct. 1-3. The U.S. captain also realizes everybody will be watching Woods, who could rebound from a mediocre season on tour and a nightmare year in his personal life with a strong performance for his country.

"We've talked about how many times he wants to play," Pavin said. "He said, 'I want to play five matches.' We talked about him not playing as many, and he said, 'Whatever's best for the team.'"

Pavin selected Woods 10 days ago as a captain's pick. Woods missed the 2008 competition while recovering from knee surgery, but is eager to play — despite occasional questions in the past about his motivation and results in international team play.

"He's more than ready," Pavin said. "When he's there, he's 100 percent there. I think people maybe look at his record and come to some conclusion from that. Just because he doesn't have a winning record in the Ryder Cup doesn't mean he's not fully committed to it."

Pavin believes his Americans are underdogs against a powerful European team that has more familiarity with the course built specifically for the Ryder Cup at Celtic Manor, the site of the European Tour's Wales Open for the past three years. He expects European captain Colin Montgomerie to add tweaks to the course to negate the U.S. team's few advantages, perhaps countering the Americans' greater power off the tee with additional rough at about 280 yards.

"That's what I'd do if I were him," Pavin said, laughing.

Pavin has spent plenty of time poring over possible pairings in the past several weeks, but wasn't ready to reveal any decisions. He got a list of preferred partners from each player, but hasn't promised he'll stick to them.

"I didn't see any surprises," Pavin said, noting every player suggested at least three potential partners. "There might be surprises in there for the fans, but I didn't see anything out of the ordinary."

Pavin is aware of Woods' past success playing with Steve Stricker, who teamed with Tiger to win all four of their team segments last year in the Presidents Cup in San Francisco, and Jim Furyk — the only other player on the U.S. roster who has a winning record as Woods' partner.

"I did notice that," Pavin said coyly of Stricker's success with Woods. "I noticed a lot of things. It's important to look back at the history of who has played where, but it's not the only factor."

Magic Valley faithful worship together despite differing beliefs

BLAIR KOCH/For the Times-News

Rev. Carol Thompson, pastor of the Jerome and Filer United Methodist churches, officiated the outdoor, non-denominational Community Church Service during Live History Days at the Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum on Sunday in Jerome.

JEROME — When pioneers set out across America's western expanse they trusted not only on sturdy oxen to get them to new homes, but on God.

It was that faith that Lula Mae Coats thought about on Sunday during the Live History Days Community Church Service, the non-denominational wrap-up of the annual event at the Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum in Jerome.

Wearing a flowered calico bonnet like those fashionable amongst pioneering women, Coats played an antique Chicago Cottage organ for the church service, held outside of the IFARM's Canyonside building.

Coats, of Jerome, said the annual service strengthens her own faith.

"I think people have an appreciation. I know I have that reverence, for the work and trials that our ancestors went through to get here," she said. "They never lost their faith and when I think of that, my own faith becomes stronger"

Peg Roberson, of Jerome, attends the United Methodist Church and enjoyed seeing believers from a variety of congregations gather for the community service.

"It's usually the singing I like and the sermons are different," Roberson said. "Being outside is a calming atmosphere and I think it lifts all our spirits."

Kelly Alverbeck, a member of The Church of Jesus Christ Latter-day Saints, said, "I like that we can all come together in our worship."

Alverbeck shared the sentiment expressed by Rev. Carol Thompson that such services allow believers to focus on their commonalities instead of differences.

"These services aren't so much about church doctrine, but biblical faith and honoring the Lord," Alverbeck said.

To prepare for the service, Thompson, who leads both the Jerome and Filer United Methodist churches, researched pioneer and southern Idaho history.

"Many churches celebrating their history go back and learn about the founders, the costs to build the church, but they may not go and look at

Matthew C. Harrison, president of the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod, leaves the Chapel of Saint Timothy and Saint Titus at Concordia Seminary at the conclusion of the installation service Sept. 11 in St. Louis.

Lutheran group installs new leader

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod installed its new president, the Rev. Matthew C. Harrison, in a service last Saturday at Concordia Seminary in St. Louis.

Harrison was elected to the position last July, defeating the Rev. Gerald Kieschnick, who had held the job for nine years when he lost re-election.

The Kirkwood, Mo.-based denomination has about 2.5 million members and is theologically conservative. The largest Lutheran group in the country is the liberal-leaning Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, which has about 4.5 million members.

"Bring back the doubting, those who are not sure whether to follow the Bible or to follow the postmodern views of our day," said Presiding Bishop Walter Obare of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Kenya, who preached at the installation service. He was quoted by the synod's magazine, The Lutheran Witness.

Harrison had served as head of the church's World Relief and Human Care, and was previously a pastor in Westgate, Iowa, and Fort Wayne, Ind. He and his wife, Kathy, have two sons.

"On this very special day, I am filled with emotion," Harrison said. "Joy and hope, to be sure, but also and always a great sense of my unworthiness and sinfulness. But I also know that our Lord is in the blessing business. It's what he does by nature. So I know that he will continue to bless our beloved Synod and newly installed officers and leaders He has raised up among us."

Pope urges Britain not to let secularism overshadow Christianity

By Henry Chu
Los Angeles Times

LONDON — Pope Benedict XVI arrived Thursday in Britain to an enthusiastic reception by fellow Roman Catholics and promptly warned the country not to let rampant secularism swamp or destroy its Christian roots.

"The United Kingdom strives to be a modern and multicultural society," the pontiff said shortly after landing in Scotland to begin a four-day tour. "May it always maintain its respect for those traditional values and cultural expressions that more aggressive forms of secularism no longer value or even tolerate. Let it not obscure the Christian foundation that underpins its freedoms"

The German-born pope cited the evils of Nazism as an example of the consequences of "atheist extremism."

His exhortation, delivered at the British royal residence in Edinburgh, launched the first-ever state visit by a pope to this increasingly non-religious nation, which broke with Rome almost half a millennium ago under Henry VIII.

The current occupant of the throne, Queen Elizabeth II, was on hand to welcome the pontiff in a simple meeting Thursday morning that brought together two octogenarians who are both heads of state as well as leaders of their own separate strands of Christianity. The queen is the titular head of the Church of England.

Later, more than 100,000 well-wishers greeted Benedict as he traveled the streets of Edinburgh in his specially designed Popemobile, with his shoulders wrapped in a green Tartan scarf. Scattered protests made hardly a dent in the larger din of cheers and applause.

The pope also led tens of thousands of participants in an open-air Mass in Glasgow early Thursday evening under brilliant blue skies in the same park where his predecessor, John Paul II, met even larger, more rapturous crowds in 1982 on a pastoral visit.

Utah troopers want rehearing of cross case

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Highway Patrol on Wednesday asked the federal appeals court in Denver to rehear a case involving 14 memorial crosses on Utah highways that had been ruled unconstitutional by an appellate panel.

Attorneys for the UHP, the state Department of Transportation and two other state agencies filed a petition for the rehearing, arguing that the full 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals must decide whether the ruling “erroneously” holds that “private monuments erected on public land with the permission of the government” is government speech.

The patrol wants to leave in place the 12-foot-high white crosses, which were erected by the Utah Highway Patrol Association to memorialize fallen troopers.

In August, a panel of three judges from the 10th Circuit said the crosses were an unconstitutional endorsement of religion. They found that the giant crosses, which bear the shield of the patrol, leave the “reasonable observer” with the impression that the state and the police endorse Christianity and that Christians would receive preferential treatment from UHP troopers.

But the state agencies contend the crosses only serve to remind travelers that troopers have died in the line of duty and to encourage safe driving.

It wasn’t immediately clear Wednesday when the court would decide whether to rehear the case.

First erected in 1998, the cross monuments were paid for with private funds raised by the association and erected with the permission of the troopers’ families. Nearly all the 14 crosses are on public land.

The Texas-based American Atheists Inc., and three of its Utah members, sued the state of Utah in 2005 over the use of the highway patrol’s logo and said the crosses should be removed. The group said the memorials infer that the troopers who died at each location were in fact Christians.

Brian Barnard, who represents the American Atheists, said the petition doesn’t raise any new arguments.

“They didn’t like the answer they got,” Barnard said. “They’re hoping that if all of the other judges on the 10th Circuit hear those same arguments, that maybe the result will be different.”

Barnard said he anticipates attorneys for the UHP Association will submit a similar rehearing request. The filing deadline is Thursday, he said.

Archbishop: Church must address past

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press writer

DUBLIN — Catholic leaders must confront their cover-ups of child abuse honestly and completely if they want to fulfill their mission as Christians, Dublin Archbishop Diarmuid Martin said Thursday as the pope arrived in neighboring Britain.

“Abuse was reinforced by covering it up,” said Martin, the Irish church’s most outspoken advocate for Catholic openness on its child-abuse scandals.

Martin, a veteran Vatican diplomat before taking the Dublin post in 2004, has clashed with other bishops over their culpability in shielding priests from the law for decades in this predominantly Catholic country.

In his own March pastoral letter to Irish Catholics, Pope Benedict XVI condemned the abusers but sidestepped any Vatican role in promoting a culture of concealment.

Last month the Vatican appeared to undermine Martin by rejecting the resignation offers of his two Dublin auxiliary bishops.

Archbishop of Canterbury Rowan Williams, right, and Cardinal Walter Kasper attend a vespers service in Rome in 2009. As Pope Benedict XVI takes his campaign to revive Christianity in an increasingly secular Europe to Britain, he faces a daunting task in a nation where disgust over the church sex abuse scandal runs high.

Martin had sought their removal because both were implicated in a state investigation into the cover-up of more than 170 cases of suspected pedophile priests in Dublin from 1975 to 2004.

Martin also handed the church’s long-secret Dublin abuse files to the government investigators, whereas his predecessor sued to try to keep them locked away.

Martin told a Dublin audience he had “never for a moment imagined, in my work as a pastor, that I would have had to address the sexual abuse of children on such a wide scale.” And he said the church still had a painful road to travel to complete its penance.

“There is no way forward for the church in carrying out its mission without adequately addressing its past,” he said. “Assessing the truth of the past objectively and accurately is a precondition for assessing what is happening today. ... The church has to address its past honestly and completely.”

Martin noted that the Dublin Archdiocese employs an official to monitor and support pedophile priests who have been released from prison, but this was only “one small step” and not regular practice in the church.

“There is no adequate monitoring of perpetrators who are living in society. Many may constitute serious ongoing risk to children,” Martin said, calling for Irish mental therapy and child-protection services to be beefed up.

“It is not a question of witch-hunting, which is never in the interests of child protection and safeguarding,” the archbishop said. “We must provide programs which provide support to perpetrators and which at the same time protect children.”

That visit was generally more warmly received than this one, in part because of John Paul’s personal charisma and his status as a heroic crusader against communism. Benedict’s state visit, by contrast, has inspired strong opposition from human-rights activists, scientists, feminists, gay-rights advocates and critics of the Vatican’s response to widespread allegations of child molestation by priests and religious workers.

Speaking to reporters on the flight from Rome, Benedict acknowledged that the church had been too slow to remove abusive clerics and to protect their victims.

“The authority of the church wasn’t sufficiently vigilant and not sufficiently quick or decisive,” he said, adding: “How can we repair, what can we do to help these people overcome this trauma, find their lives again and find again the trust in the message of Christ?”

The pope is expected to meet with abuse victims during his visit. They and other critics say that the Vatican has been more concerned with damage limitation and covering up suspected abuse than with seeking justice for those subjected to it.

At his public appearances Thursday, the pontiff sounded one of the principal themes of his papacy and one of the clear goals of his visit to Britain, which is to call Europe back to Christian values and beliefs.

Expanding on his warning about the “aggressive forces of secularism” earlier in the day, Benedict urged attendees at the Mass in Glasgow to fight back against those “who now seek to exclude religious belief from public discourse ... or even to paint it as a threat to equality and liberty.”

Change is the one constant in our lives

My Mom used to say that I was a lover not a fighter. I think that was her way of saying that I’m sort of a wuss.

And I’m OK with that. I’m not a fighter — I’ve only been in one fight in my entire life, and that was when I was in sixth grade and pretty much consisted of me pushing another kid to the ground and sitting on him (when you’re a lot taller and heavier than your opponent, you can get away with that tactic).

So it’s probably no surprise that I’ve never been much on killing things. For example, I’m not a fisherman or a hunter. This is not a moral position on my part. I don’t think fishing and hunting are intrinsically wrong. In fact, the notion of fishing and hunting is sort of appealing to me in a pastoral, rustic, outdoorsy way. If you could take the whole camping thing out of hunting and fishing — uh, I’m not much on camping, either — I might be inclined to go.

Until you come to the part where you kill something and clean it. Then I’m outta there.

I even struggle a little with killing in defense of my home. Just ask my kids. They’ll tell you about the time I trapped a mouse in one of those sticky traps that doesn’t actually kill the creature but just captures them in goo. Then it’s up to you to — you know — dispose of the mouse. It didn’t seem right to me to just toss the poor little guy (I’m assuming gender here — I can’t bear the thought that maybe I captured somebody’s mother) into the trash to leave him there to suffer a long, slow, garbage can death. I wanted to put him out of his misery quickly and painlessly, but I couldn’t think of a humane way to do it. So I —

VALUE SPEAK

Joseph Walker

On second thought, never mind. The nightmares will start all over again.

So OK — I’m a wuss. But in the minds of two or three correspondents, I’m a ruthless, cold-blooded killer. Writing to me at my place of business, they cite as evidence the number of critters whose mortal remains line the shoulders of a new road project the government agency for which I work recently completed. Setting aside the fact that I had nothing to do with the actual building of the road — my job is to talk to people about the work we’re doing, or as Mom would say, I’m a talker not a doer — it is difficult to argue the point. Dozens of lifeless skunk, raccoon and other assorted — and sadly, unrecognizable — animal bodies offer mute testimony to one of the saddest of all road-building realities.

I try to explain that this is natural selection at work. In this case, survival of the fittest means those who are quicker than a Camaro will survive. Those who aren’t won’t (you’d be surprised how many really fat skunks there are out there — er, I mean — used to be out there). And I promise them that eventually the animals will figure it out — or the really slow ones will be naturally selected out of the population. The body count will decline, and while it will never be completely eliminated, the road will have less impact — pardon the expression — on local wildlife.

None of which matters to my correspondents. As far as they’re concerned, I’m the Sweeney Todd of flora and fauna. But even if it doesn’t mean much to them, it does make me feel a little better to know that at some point in time the animals will adapt. They’ll find safer routes to travel. And they’ll survive.

All of which makes me wonder if I’m as capable of adapting and adjusting — and as proficient at surviving — as others in the animal kingdom. I’m pretty good at avoiding instant intimacy with cars on roadways, but other changes in my daily life throw me for a loop. My cable TV company goes digital, and six months later I’m still trying to figure out if I should stay with the cable or go to satellite TV. My youngest daughter gets married and I find myself tearing up every time I walk by her room. The doctor tells me I have diabetes and suddenly all I can think about is Almond Joy candy bars, Quisp cereal and —

Wait a second. WHY CAN’T I EVER FIND QUISP CEREAL ANYMORE?!?!?! Change is the one constant in our lives. Our ability to adjust to change will, to a great degree, determine our happiness and success in life. Adapting to change brings growth, and as long as you’re growing, you’re surviving.

Even if you’re — you know — a wuss.

American Indian church sues feds over peyote use

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — An American Indian church is suing state and federal police and prosecutors over the right of its members to use peyote in religious ceremonies, even if they aren't of Indian ancestry.

The lawsuit was filed Monday in Utah's U.S. District Court on behalf of the Oklevueha Native American Church. It contends that federal laws that protect peyote use by American Indians should apply to anyone who belongs to the church.

The lawsuit seeks to block state and federal law enforcement from arresting or bringing criminal charges against church members who "fear reprisal from both state and federal governments for openly practicing their religion," court papers state.

Named as defendants in the lawsuit are the U.S. Department of Justice, the FBI, Drug Enforcement Agency and the Utah attorney general's office. Messages left with the federal agencies were not all immediately returned on Thursday, although an FBI spokesman in Salt Lake City said he could not comment on pending litigation.

Paul Murphy, spokesman for the Utah attorney general said the office could not comment until after it had seen the lawsuit.

A plant with hallucinogenic properties, peyote is considered a sacred medicine by Indians. Court papers say it has been used by indigenous populations for thousands of years. Although considered a controlled substance, federal law allows for the use of peyote by Indians for religious reasons.

The Oklevueha church is a federally recognized American Indian church with roots in the Native American Church founded in 1918. Court documents say the faith has practicing members on many reservations and across 29 states, Canada, Mexico and Peru.

The lawsuit was filed in Utah because since 1999, church members here say they have been harassed, arrested and prosecuted for using peyote, court papers say.

Those cases include the 2000 prosecution of medicine man James "Flaming Eagle" Mooney on multiple felony charges, including drug possession and distribution for giving peyote to church members and others during religious ceremonies.

Mooney's conviction was thrown out by the Utah Supreme Court on appeal. The ruling from justices said an exemption in federal law that allows for peyote use should include all church members regardless of the arbitrary "blood quantum" standard — the primary basis for determining who is a protected American Indian religious practitioner, the lawsuit states.

"It is time that such a basis be abolished in favor of extending full religious freedom and protection to the NAC as a broader based, American religious choice," attorneys for the Oklevueha wrote in court papers.

Lawyers argue in court papers that interest in American Indian religious practices has spread far beyond the boundaries of those with tribal ancestry. They also contend that proving the "blood quantum" standard is increasingly difficult as "American Indians continue integrating with the broader American population."

Denying the exemption prohibits church members from practicing their religion, court papers say.

MISSIONARIES

Elder Wood and Sister Picola Wood have been called to serve a two-year mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as temple workers at the Ghana Accra Temple. They will speak in sacrament meeting at 2:20 p.m. Sunday at the Burley 7th Ward church, 2200 Oakley Ave. They will leave for their mission on Oct. 18.

Elder Wood is 85, and Sister Wood is 80. He served his first two-year mission to Paris, France, shortly after they were married. After returning, he completed his education and taught school in Salt Lake City, then took his family to serve a mission as a building supervisor with headquarters in Belgium. Upon their return, the family settled in Burley and he taught school in the Cassia County School District for several years. Elder and Sister Wood then lived in Barbados, where he served as mission president in the West Indies Mission. Following that mission, they served as Church Educational System missionaries in Lyons, France, and have since been temple workers in the Switzerland, Boise and Twin Falls temples.

U.S. files religious discrimination suit against California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department has filed a religious discrimination lawsuit against the Southern California city of Walnut, claiming it unfairly denied a permit to a group seeking to build and run a Buddhist center.

The lawsuit filed last Monday in Los Angeles seeks a court order saying the city violated the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000, which prohibits religious discrimination in land use and zoning decisions. The suit also requests an injunction to prohibit Walnut officials from discriminating against the Chung Tai Zen Center and other religious organizations.

Federal officials said the city of Walnut denied the center's application in January 2008 and had not denied any other religious group since at least 1980.

The lawsuit also contends the city treated the Zen Center differently than other religious facilities, including approval of an August 2008 permit for a church that will be larger than the Buddhist center when completed.

"Religious freedom is among our most cherished rights, and our nation's laws prohibit cities and towns from discriminating based on religion when they make zoning decisions related to houses of worship," said Thomas Perez, assistant attorney general of the civil rights division. "No faith should be singled out for inferior treatment when it seeks to build a house of worship in compliance with local zoning laws."

Walnut's city manager, Robert Wishner, said he couldn't comment on the lawsuit because he hadn't seen it. Attempts to reach the Zen Center were unsuccessful.

Gilgal Garden celebrates 10 years as public park

SALT LAKE CITY — Gilgal Garden is celebrating its tenth year as a city park.

Named for the spot where ancient Israelites crossed the Jordan River in the Middle East, Gilgal Garden contains a dozen original sculptures with biblical themes. More than 70 engraved stones contain quotes from hymns, scripture, poets and philosophers.

The garden's best-known sculpture is an Egyptian sphinx with the face of Joseph Smith, founder of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The garden was created by stonemason and LDS Bishop Thomas Battersby Child Jr., with help from Utah sculptor Maurice Brooks, as a tribute to faith and the craft of masonry. The quartzite and granite sculptures date from 1945 until Child's death in 1963.

The garden was donated to Salt Lake City for a park in 2000.

Pentecostal church files for bankruptcy

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A Pentecostal church that had expanded to a new building a year ago has filed for bankruptcy.

The New Vision Ministry Center outlined debts of $1.8 million to its creditors, including various banks and contractors. The church also dismissed its pastor, John David Boggs, in June.

The Courier-Journal reports that the church filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy on Tuesday.

The filing includes liabilities related to New Vision's move in September 2009 to a former Walmart building.

Nine months after moving from its longtime home, the congregation moved back to its original site. The landlord for the property sued New Vision this year to collect unpaid lease payments from the church, which the company said were $30,000 per month.

New hearing ordered in inmate head scarf case

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal appeals court has ordered a new hearing for a Muslim woman who was made to remove her religiously mandated headscarf by Orange County deputies in a courthouse holding cell.

The Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said last Monday that a majority of its 27 judges voted to set aside the court's earlier ruling in the case.

A three-judge panel of the court decided in May that deputies had not violated Souhair Khatib's rights when they ordered her to remove the head scarf for security reasons.

The incident occurred after a judge revoked Khatib's probation for a conviction on a misdemeanor charge.

At issue is whether a courthouse holding cell qualifies as a pretrial detention facility under a federal law that protects inmates' religious practices.

The case is scheduled for rehearing in December.

the price of crops at that time. But it is important not to ignore parts of our past," Thompson said. "You can't ignore a part of your life, especially if that part is faith. When faith is that part of your life you ignore, that is when we get into trouble."

She also referenced the history of Shoshone Falls, as written about in Virginia Rickett's "Then and Now in Southern Idaho," a book Thompson used to prepare for the service.

"There were two camps of thought as to what was the best thing to do with Shoshone Falls — one camp wanting to preserve the Falls and the other wanting to harness its power and develop the falls," she said. "That argument, in a sense, continues today and it's an example of how neither side lost sight of their goal."

Thompson, using the New Revised Standard Version of the Bible, read Hebrews 12:1-3 to illustrate not losing faith and keeping believers' eyes on their goal: Jesus.

"Therefore, since we are surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses," the passage states, "let us also lay aside every weight and the sin that clings so closely, and let us run with perseverance the race that is set before us, looking to Jesus the pioneer and perfecter of our faith, who for the sake of the joy that was set before him endured the cross, disregarding its shame, and has taken his seat at the right hand of the throne of God. Consider him who endured such hostility against himself from sinners, so that you may not grow weary or lose heart."

According to those assembled, thinking of Jesus as a "pioneer and perfecter" of faith is something all Christians, regardless of their denomination, can appreciate.

Cancer claims MCI founder John Goeken

By Karen Hawkins
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — John "Jack" Goeken, founder of telecom giant MCI and the father of air-to-ground telephone communication, has died after a long battle with cancer. He was 80.
Goeken died Thursday at a hospital in his hometown of Joliet, according to Pat Schneider, a close friend and executive vice president of the Goeken Group Corp., a company he founded in Chicago's suburbs after leaving MCI.

Goeken is widely viewed as the father of air-to-ground telephone communication. As a founder of MCI and Airfone Inc., he sought to make communication possible anywhere people go — an idea that at the time revolutionized the telecommunications industry.
He also won a reputation as "Jack the Giant Killer" because of his passion for busting up communications monopolies like AT&T.

"You do it because it's something you believe in," Goeken told The Associated Press for a 1994 profile. "Everybody comes in and says you can't do something, so I do it just to prove it."

He defied convention and was one of the founders of Microwave Communications Inc. in 1963, setting up a system of microwave towers to provide long-distance service between Chicago and St. Louis to compete with American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The company went on to become MCI Communications Corp., the nation's second-largest long-distance telephone provider after AT&T. He left MCI in 1974 and two years later founded Airfone Inc., the first air-to-ground telephone service.

Always restless, Goeken went on to several other ventures after Airfone, and founded Naperville, Ill.,-based Goeken Group Corp. in 1995.

"To know Jack was to love him, because he always had a quick smile, a joke to share and a kind word," Goeken Group said in a statement. "He was very appreciative of the people around him."

Goeken was cracking jokes even on the day he died, making the friends and family assembled around him laugh, Schneider said.

"They don't make men like Jack, they just don't anymore," she said.

Goeken, an avid pilot and plane owner, offered his employees and their families flights during emergencies. If he couldn't fly them himself, he made sure to greet them at the airport, Schneider said.

Goeken was born on Aug. 22, 1930, in Joliet to the Rev. John Goeken, a Lutheran minister, and Signe Lydia Goeken. He started out fixing radios and television by trial and error as a senior high school student. He continued his education in the Army Signal Corps in the early 1950s but had no college training in electronics. He later received honorary degrees from the University of New Hampshire, Drexel University and Lewis University.

Goeken is survived by his wife of 59 years, Mona Lisa Goeken, two children, seven grandchildren, one great-grandchild and two sisters.

ATF forms teams in 7 cities to thwart gun smuggling

PHOENIX (AP) — A federal agency trying to stop guns from being smuggled from the United States into Mexico for use by drug cartels has formed teams in seven American cities to combat the problem.

The teams set up by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives are a follow-up to earlier temporary groups of investigators who worked in Houston and Arizona and seized about 2,000 guns.

The permanent 10-member teams will be based in two cities in the border region — in Brownsville,

Texas, and Sierra Vista, Ariz. — and away from the border where smugglers have set up trafficking routes and recruit gun buyers in Dallas, Las Vegas, Oklahoma City, Atlanta and Miami.

"We can't put all of our resources in one point, because what we learned from other agencies is that if you put all resources to go after illegal activity in one point, guess what? It goes some place else," said Kenneth Melson, ATF's deputy director.

Many guns used by criminals in the Mexican government's war against drug cartels are bought in the United States, the bureau says. Cartels recruit "straw buyers" in the United States who make purchases on their behalf and then pay people to bring the weapons across the border.

Agents on the teams will inspect records at firearms shops, investigate suspicious purchases and use traces from guns recovered in Mexico to track down straw buyers.

Melson said a team will be based in the southern Arizona city of Sierra Vista because the Sinaloa drug cartel uses the area as a transit route.

Dennis Burke, the U.S. attorney for Arizona, said his state has become the gun locker for the cartels and warned of the serious consequences for people who buy guns on behalf of cartel members.

"For a lot of these straw purchasers, they don't think it's a big deal," Burke said. "They think it's like buying beer for an under-aged kid, but it's not. It's an offense that violates federal law, and it's leading to deadly consequences in Mexico."

IDAHO Rep. Minnick ad targets Labrador's immigration work

BOISE — The race for Idaho's nationally targeted 1st Congressional District has taken a nasty turn.

It all started after Democratic U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick picked a fight with Republican challenger Raul Labrador, then got smacked with a personal attack involving one of his children.

Minnick's campaign launched a political ad Thursday that targeted Labrador and his work as an immigration attorney.

The 30-second spot tells TV viewers that illegal immigration is good business for Labrador because more than half his legal work helps illegal immigrants "stay in the United States."

Labrador says his statements in the ad were twisted and demanded Minnick yank it, calling him a hypocrite. Labrador says that in the 1990s, he worked at the law firm that helped Minnick finalize the adoption of "his foreign born child."

Minnick and his wife have four children, including a daughter they adopted from China.

Prosecutor reaches plea deal in teen marriage case

POCATELLO — A plea agreement was reached with a 28-year-old woman charged with engaging in sexual relations with a 16-year-old boy she said she plans to marry, officials said.

Deputy Prosecutor JaNiece Price told the Idaho State Journal that Thursday's plea deal with Amanda E. Lindstrom reduced the charges to two counts of misdemeanor injury to a child.

"We have kind of an uncooperative victim, although he did not want to call himself a victim," Price said. "We decided to do some kind of plea bargain that made her accountable as well as, hopefully, send a little bit of a message that you can't be doing that."

Under Idaho law, it's a felony for any person at least five years older than a child of 16 or 17 years of age to engage in sexual conduct with the child. A 16-year-old can marry with the written consent of a parent.

The mother of the boy said in court documents the parents approved of the marriage plans.

No bail for Haiti missionary 'adviser' in Vermont case

BURLINGTON, Vt. — A former adviser for American missionaries accused of taking children out of Haiti is being held without bail in Vermont, where he was returned to face charges in a 2002 illegal immigrant smuggling case.

Thirty-two-year-old Jorge Torres was in the spotlight in February after the Haiti earthquake, when he acted as a lawyer and spokesman for 10 Baptists from Idaho who were detained in Haiti on child kidnapping charges.

Arrested in March in the Dominican Republic, Torres — whose aliases include Jorge Puello and Jorge Torres-Puello — was extradited this week to Vermont. He pleaded not guilty Friday in federal court and was ordered held after prosecutors said he would be a flight risk if released.

Caldwell couple indicted in marijuana conspiracy

BOISE — A Caldwell couple has been charged in a conspiracy to manufacture and distribute 1,000 or more marijuana plants in Idaho, Oregon and California.

Federal prosecutors say 45-year-old Jose Cardona-Ramirez and 37-year-old Victoria Villa-Gonzalez brought groceries and other supplies to an illegal marijuana grow site on Bureau of Land Management property in Oregon's Malheur County and at least one other in California in 2009 and 2010.

The Department of Justice says those grow sites produced over 12,000 marijuana plants.

The Idaho Statesman reports Cardona-Ramirez and Villa-Gonzalez were arrested on Aug. 29 and indicted by a federal grand jury in Boise earlier this week. They also face a charge of conspiracy to travel and transport (supplies) in aid of racketeering enterprises.

WYOMING Small wildfire burns in north-central Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK — A small wildfire is burning northeast of Dunraven Pass in north-central Yellowstone National Park.

The fire has grown to 60 acres including an area within the perimeter of the 1988 fires.

Park officials say the Antelope Fire is burning in the backcountry well away from the road linking Canyon Village, Tower Fall and Roosevelt Lodge.

No roads, trails or campgrounds have been closed because of the fire.

Yellowstone has had 11 wildfires this year. The largest was southwest of the Bridge Bay Campground and was contained at 520 acres.

Canadian company drops plans for power line

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — A Canadian company is shelving for now its plans to build a $3 billion high-voltage power line from south-central Montana to Nevada due to lack of interest from wind farm developers.

"We don't have sufficient commercial interest to proceed with the project at this time," TransCanada's project manager John Dunn said Thursday.

The proposed high-voltage Chinook power line was planned to carry up to 3,000 megawatts of electricity from south-central Montana to south of Las Vegas.

Dunn said Friday that TransCanada was turning its focus to a similar-sized transmission line called the Zephyr, which is planned to run from southeastern Wyoming to south of Las Vegas. The company successfully solicited bids from wind developers to ship 3,000 megawatts on the Zephyr line.

Chinook has received less interest, but still could be pursued if more wind developers step forward, Dunn said. He added that an "open season" in which companies can bid for space on the Montana line ends Dec. 16.

"We're not dropping the project. If we had sufficient commercial interest with Chinook we would move forward," he said.

It's unclear what the lack of interest in the Chinook project could mean for NorthWestern Energy's proposed Mountain States Transmission Intertie, said Jim Bellessa, an investment analyst for D.A. Davidson & Co. in Great Falls.

The $1 billion MSTI project calls for shipping wind power from southwestern Montana to southeastern Idaho.

The demise of the Chinook project removes a direct competitor for NorthWestern's transmission line, Bellessa said. However, "if TransCanada is hitting some issues with customer reception, it's conceivable maybe MSTI is, too," he said.

Paraglider found dead in Utah

PARADISE, Utah (AP) — Northern Utah authorities say a man whose wife reported him missing after he didn't come home from paragliding was found dead near the launch area.

The Cache County sheriff's office says 65-year-old Richard Rallison, of Paradise, had gone paragliding alone Thursday.

Rallison's wife reported him missing late Thursday after finding she found his truck in the parking lot below the paragliding launch site, but no sign of her husband.

Deputies discovered Rallison's body while hiking up the mountainside to the launch site.

Cache County Sheriff's Lt. Matt Bilodeau says investigators don't believe Rallison's death was flight-related and don't know whether he launched his aircraft.

Today's Highlight:

On Sept. 18, 1810, Chile made its initial declaration of independence from Spain with the forming of a national junta.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1759, the French formally surrendered Quebec to the British.

In 1793, President George Washington laid the cornerstone of the U.S. Capitol.

In 1850, Congress passed the Fugitive Slave Act, which created a force of federal commissioners charged with returning escaped slaves to their owners.

In 1927, the Columbia Phonograph Broadcasting System (later CBS) made its on-air debut with a basic network of 16 radio stations.

In 1940, Harper and Brothers published "You Can't Go Home Again" by Thomas Wolfe, two years after the author's death.

In 1947, the National Security Act, which created a National Military Establishment, went into effect.

In 1961, United Nations Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld was killed in a plane crash in northern Rhodesia.

In 1970, rock star Jimi Hendrix died in London at age 27.

In 1975, newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was captured by the FBI in San Francisco, 19 months after being kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army.

In 1990, the city of Atlanta was named the site of the 1996 Summer Olympics. The organized crime drama "GoodFellas," directed by Martin Scorsese, had its U.S. premiere in New York.

Ten years ago: The first working day of a transit strike that had begun over the weekend forced nearly half a million Southern California commuters to scrounge for rides or get behind the wheel themselves. Workers began rebuilding a railway line between the capitals of North and South Korea.

Five years ago: Tropical Storm Rita formed south-east of the Florida Keys. Millions of Afghans defied a Taliban boycott call and militant attacks to vote for a new parliament. German conservative challenger Angela Merkel's bloc won the most votes in elections, but fell short of a clear mandate to govern. "Everybody Loves Raymond" won the Emmy for best comedy in its final season; first-year hit "Lost" was named best drama.

One year ago: Tens of thousands of protesters rallied in defiance of Iran's Islamic leadership, clashing with police and confronting state-run anti-Israel rallies. Writer-editor Irving Kristol, known as the godfather of neoconservatism, died at 89. The final episode of "Guiding Light" aired on CBS, ending a 72-year run on radio and television.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Kyle," and I decided to elope two weeks ago. His mother and mine had both said they'd be fine with an elopement. My sister and Kyle's brother were our witnesses — other than that it was just us.

When we told Kyle's family, they were elated and congratulated us on the spot. When I called my mother, she didn't say much. A couple of days later, I called to make plans to visit her, and she began telling me how many people I had "hurt" by eloping. Mom and I have always had problems communicating and she has a long history of holding me to a higher standard than my siblings. (My sister also eloped, and there were no hard feelings then.)

I am frustrated with Mom and the other members of my family who have chosen to be hurt rather than happy for us. I wouldn't have eloped if I hadn't received the green light from Mom earlier. I have sent out a letter of apology, but I am annoyed that it takes the place of a real wedding announcement. Please help.

— BAFFLED

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne
Phillips

DEAR BAFFLED BRIDE: I'm sorry you sent a letter of apology instead of a wedding announcement. You did not have to. If questioned about your elopement, all you had to say was you had the blessing of both your mothers before you did it.

Your mom may be upset that she was not among the "chosen few" to be present when you said "I do" — and her criticism now may be a reflection of it. You have a husband who loves you and at least one sibling with whom you are close. Treasure that and stop depending on your mother's approval, and you will be better off emotionally than you are right now.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Dwight" for a while now, and things are becoming more serious. Dwight has expressed a desire to make a trip several states away so I can meet his parents. We have even gone so far as discussing how we would handle religion if we have children. I have mixed feelings about the trip. I am both elated and terrified.

Dwight's father is a minister in a small town. My parents were not religious at all and neither am I. Dwight understands that, and he is fine with it.

When I meet his parents, I'm sure they will inevitably ask why I don't share their beliefs. How do I answer them honestly without offending them?

— NON-BELIEVER
IN TENNESSEE

DEAR NON-BELIEVER: I see nothing offensive about explaining to them — as you did to me — that your parents were not religious and they didn't raise you to be.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend, "Keira," has been dating someone I dated for a short time. Although I was the one who ended the relationship, I still feel uncomfortable with her dating him. The guy means nothing to me and I have moved on to someone else, but it still bothers me.

I told Keira how I feel. She told me I need to be happy for her. It has been three weeks since we last spoke, and I just don't know what else to say. Should I end our friendship since she obviously doesn't care about my feelings?

— DISCONNECTED
FRIEND IN OHIO

DEAR DISCONNECTED: You say Keira is your "best" friend. What about HER feelings? You rejected the guy, which means (to me) that in some way he didn't measure up to your standards. Why begrudge Keira her happiness? Answer that question and you'll know whether this is really worth ending the friendship over.

IF SEPTEMBER 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You will find you aren't quite up to snuff if you attempt to be businesslike or entrepreneurial in the next several weeks. Luckily, divine providence seems to be watching your back and will keep you out of any major trouble. However, you should maintain a low profile and avoid taking any major initiatives in October when your expectation of good luck can blind you to potential problems. Don't buy more than you can afford and don't make any major changes in your work habits. You may be champing at the bit to get a change of scenery or restless for excitement. In December your business sense will be more reliable and in January you will be able to successfully implement some desirable changes.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Line your wallet with gold. Let others know that you are the right person for the job. Your sensual allure is at a high point and you can attract others for business or pleasure. First impressions count.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance gets the green light today. Enjoy precious times in public venues with loved ones. An atmosphere of blissful cooperation exists for several days ahead so spin your wheels in the right direction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Sing a happy romantic duet with your special someone. Pitch-perfect harmony is possible if you follow your instincts. Plan to ask for favors or recommendations from the boss after the weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Indulge in the whimsical. A spirit of blissful agreement settles in like a kitten in a bed, making significant relationships a centerpiece of tranquility. Snuggle up and discuss long-term plans together.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Love and marriage go together like a horse and carriage. You could hook up with the perfect playmate that is willing to help you achieve your long term dreams. Find ways to harness mutual aims together.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be adventurous. A romantic partner may seem timid, so hold hands as you traverse the log over the stream or visit new places. Loved ones are looking for reassurances and dependability.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Start the weekend off by taking a romantic retreat. Hide away with a loved one and indulge romantic fantasies. Peacemaking efforts will be certain to improve a situation by the middle of the week.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get a giant thumbs-up. Your public appearances or career activities might give you a chance to earn approval. Knowledge really is power so study and peruse the information highway for the best results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lure a lover into your lair. Create a tranquil atmosphere that makes everyone feel right at home. Ask for cooperation or a favor from your cohorts while a feeling of team spirit is in the air.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Listen with your heart instead of with your mind. Perfect attunement can make a relationship soar to new heights of ecstasy under these stars. Work on big improvements at home early in the day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Review your long-range plans. Those closest to your heart will be happy to make binding promises or delighted to discuss possibilities. Lucky breaks can improve your career outlook.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Fight fire with fire. Some enthusiasm for shared moments will strike a harmonious chord with a significant other in your life. Get important business matters and planning sessions tended to early in the day.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"We meant full well and we tried full hard, And our failures were manifold."
— Richard Burton

The best-played hand of the 2009 Lederer was also a candidate for the best-defended hands at some tables, and a missed opportunity at another.

In our featured auction, Cameron Small, for the TGR Super League winners, contented himself with a game-try on the South cards, which his partner was quick to decline. Against three spades, West led a diamond, and East won and switched to the spade 10 to the jack, queen and king. A heart to the jack and ace saw West play a second trump, which was won in dummy with the nine.

Now Small ruffed a heart and exited with the diamond queen to the king. East was endplayed — a heart or diamond is clearly fatal — so he exited with a club. Small covered with the nine and pitched a diamond from dummy to end-play West for nine tricks.

At another table, when David Bakhshi was South, he simply bid game at his second turn when his partner Zia raised, and West, Andrew McIntosh, for the Gold Cup team, raised the stakes by doubling. Again West led his singleton diamond, and East, Nick Sandqvist, won and continued with the diamond king and jack, theoretically a fatal error. Now South misguessed when he ruffed with the trump jack and went down.

The winning line was to ruff with the ace, cross to dummy with the king of trumps, and discard the heart king on a diamond. This line succeeds if the opposing trumps are 2-2, or if West has queen-third of spades.

ANSWER: Your partner's redouble shows a good hand, so you have enough to drive to game. The simplest way to find out about your partner's hand and set up a game-forcing auction is to cue-bid three spades. Your plan would be to pass three no-trump if your partner bids it.
