POLL: REFORM SALES TAX, PROTECT SCHOOLS

Cesar Ledezma pumps gasoline into his car at the Mr. Gas station on the corner of Blue Lakes Boulevard and Falls Avenue, Tuesday afternoon in Twin Falls. Idaho's 6 percent sales tax will not capture an estimated $1.75 billion in fiscal 2011 due to sales-tax exemptions such as the one on fuel.

Public says it doesn't want repeat in 2011

Idahoans favor reform of the state's tax structure, but the path to change is full of obstructions.

In a Times-News poll done in collaboration with six other daily newspapers, 54 percent of respondents said they want tax reform, with 33 percent saying the system is fair and adequate.

But three questions on removing sales tax breaks totaling $1.75 billion prompted high rates of undecided returns and no majority for lifting some or all of the breaks.

"With the high undecided, I think they're just telling us there are too many elements they don't understand," said Sen. Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, a member of the Senate tax committee and leading advocate of reform.

The Idaho State Tax Commission itself hasn't been immune to a decline in state tax revenue. In August the commission closed its satellite offices, such as the one seen here in Twin Falls, for all but one day each month.

59 percent said Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and GOP legislative leaders were right to rule out tax increases in 2010. But by a 48 percent to 38 percent margin, they would support raising taxes to avoid another round of cuts similar to the 7.5 percent reduction in school support in 2010.

"People are extremely concerned about what's happened to education, but they don't have a clear idea of how to get us out of it," Rusche said.

Corder has pressed for a review of tax breaks but has been rebuffed by his GOP colleagues. His outspokenness made him a target of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry, which tried to defeat him in the 2008 primary. Corder won but now says a serious look at reform is likely only with business backing. He's been meeting with IACI officials, including President Alex LaBeau and incoming Chairman Mike

Lawmakers: More budget cuts coming

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Idaho legislators are preparing for more scrounging when the 2011 session starts in January.

Even if tax revenue next year is 10 percent greater than the current year, Idaho faces a $140 million budget shortfall, according to Legislative Services analysts in the Capitol.

If revenue grows just 1 percent, expect a $350 million shortfall — and calamity.

The Republican-dominated Legislature could improvise, including raiding an $80 million fund from Idaho's settlement with tobacco companies. And everybody is hoping for better-than-expected economic growth.

But with state reserve and federal stimulus funds largely exhausted, trimming budgets sounds more likely in hyper-conservative Idaho than the prospect of raising taxes, said Rep. Maxine Bell, House budget committee leader.

"There's no expert way to read this economy," Bell said. "You've got to fly by the seat of your pants and say, 'I don't think it's going to be there, so let's not spend it.'"

The state Division of Financial Management says a new recession is unlikely, but only slow economic growth is forecast.

Legislative Services analyst Ray Houston in Boise said the just-ended downturn left deep scars on Idaho's ability to balance its books. Despite recent news that Idaho's tax revenue in the first two months of this fiscal year is $10 million ahead of oft-reduced expectations, the budget remains out of kilter.

"Idaho's general fund budget is structurally out of balance by $140 to $350 million," Houston told state agencies in a presentation obtained by The Associated Press.

Republicans and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter argue that balancing 2011 spending with tough cuts was a sign of their fiscal responsibility. That's attracted barbs from Democrats, including gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred, especially for a $128 million public education hit.

They suggest more could have been done, including bolstering tax collector ranks, tackling $1.7 billion in tax exemptions that help privileged sectors, or raising beer and wine taxes that have long gone unchanged.

GOP lawmakers say a tax hike to fill this vacuum sounds like heresy. "People are not happy with the taxes that they're paying now, let alone paying more taxes," Geddes said.

Jaquet to propose tax commission revamp

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Jaquet

Rep. Wendy Jaquet plans to introduce legislation in the next session aimed at revamping and modernizing the Idaho State Tax Commission.

In recent months, the tax commission has fallen under a cloud of scandal. Eight auditors, a mix of current and former commission employees, have publicly voiced concerns about the commission's allegedly long-held practice of giving tax breaks and cutting deals with well-connected companies and individuals out of the public's eye.

The concerns from whistleblower auditors are in sworn court affidavits included in a lawsuit filed by Rep. Shirley Ringo, D-Moscow, against the tax commission. Ringo is asking a judge to rule that the current system violates mandates in the Idaho Constitution, and issue a court order stopping all further agreements until a constitutional system is established by the Legislature and tax commission.

In court documents, they allege the state could lose more than $75 million from the tax deals.

Jaquet, a Democratic lawmaker from Ketchum, cited problems with the current system, which has four tax commissioners appointed by the governor,

A consumer's guide to health care overhaul

By Mary Agnes Carey
Kaiser Health News

WASHINGTON — By Thursday, the six-month anniversary of the enactment of the health care overhaul, many of the law's provisions will be in effect. Most consumers, however, won't see any changes until after Jan. 1, when their new health plan year begins.

Meanwhile, employees will be getting ready for fall's "open enrollment" period, when they pick their health coverage for the following year. In addition, people who buy their own health insurance will be researching their options. Medicare beneficiaries will be able to change their coverage later this year if they want.

Here's a look at how the law affects people who get their coverage at work, buy their own health insurance or are enrolled in Medicare.

Q. I get my coverage through work, and the "open enrollment" period for next year is approaching. I'd like to keep my current health plan. Will the new law affect it?

A. Your plan will feature some new consumer protections. For example, it won't be able to set a lifetime limit on coverage. If you have an adult child up to age 26 who can't get health insurance at a job, you'll be able to keep him or her on your health plan. These changes kick in for plan years that begin on or after Thursday.

If your employer makes significant changes, such as cutting benefits or raising your out-of-pocket costs beyond a specific amount, the plan is considered new — rather than an existing "grandfathered" plan — and must include a wider set of consumer protections.

Q. Like what?

A. Patients will get, for example, certain preventive services such as breast cancer screenings and cholesterol tests without paying deductibles or co-payments. They'll be able to see obstetricians and pediatricians without getting prior authorizations. Recommended immunizations also must be provided at no cost.

Q. What if my employer offers a new plan and I want to switch to that?

A. In that case, your coverage would include the wider set of protections.

Q. Will my health insurance cost less?

A. Probably not. Health insurance premiums have been increasing steadily over the last decade, and that trend is continuing. According to a new report from the Kaiser Family Foundation and the Health Research & Educational Trust, workers nationwide on average are paying 14 percent, or

Continued from Main 1 including the chairman. Two commissioners are Democrats and two are Republicans.

“We now have a 1950s model, with no accountability except to a politically elected governor who won’t take action,” Jaquet said in a statement. “It is time to appoint a professional administrator who would not be tied to special interests.”

Her bill would create an agency called the Department of Revenue and Taxation, led by a director of revenue who would oversee the agency. The new agency would take over most of the commission’s duties, while the tax commission would serve part-time as the state board of equalization to preserve its constitutional duties.

Jaquet noted that the commission’s current chairman, Royce Chigbrow, has served in the past as the campaign treasurer for Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and has given political contributions to Otter.

“The governor appoints the chairman, but he appears unwilling or unable to get his long-time political associate to address the obvious mismanagement at the commission,” Jaquet said.

The Idaho Attorney General’s Office, which is representing the tax commission in the lawsuit, would not comment on Jaquet’s proposal. Jon Hanian, spokesman for Otter, also declined comment, saying he cannot because it’s in the context of both a lawsuit and proposed legislation, which the governor doesn’t comment on.

Jaquet is also calling for a forensic audit of the commission by an out-of-state firm that would report to legislators by the end of the 2011 session.

She said she fears that Attorney General Lawrence Wasden’s office may have a conflict of interest, noting that Wasden previously has been on the commission staff and alleging that his office staffs the commission when secret deals are made.

Ringo’s offered to put her lawsuit on hold if Wasden agrees to form a bipartisan investigatory panel to look into the situation. The last they’ve heard is that the attorney general’s office doesn’t want to do that, Ringo said, adding she’s still encouraging Wasden’s office to reconsider.

“We’d love to see the attorney general’s office reconsider,” Ringo said. “Then we could drop the lawsuit and all work together.”

Ringo said she hasn’t seen all the particulars of Jaquet’s proposal yet.

“I certainly welcome any attention given to improving the situation with the tax commission, so I applaud her interest and I applaud her efforts,” Ringo said.

Some of the information accompanying a Friday article on water-bill changes for Kimberly residents was incorrect. A merged “bond” category on water bills will total $23.42 each month, and city officials have not set a specific date for when they’ll phase in the reformatted bills. Budget

“Let’s get industry to start the talk,” Corder said. “Let’s see which part of the balloon gets sucked in and which gets pushed out.”

LaBeau is cool to the idea because he says the ground has been trodden and his members oppose net tax increases. “Why would we go down that road other than to raise revenue?”

GOP legislative leaders agree. Said Senate President Pro Tem Bob Geddes, R-Soda Springs: “The elimination of exemptions would not be designed to reduce revenue, but rather to increase revenue. That makes an elimination a tax increase and that is problematic for me.”

Geddes said the poll questions are too general to prompt policy change. “Most people are unsure of what the tax exemptions are specifically and how they would be impacted.”

Poll respondents, even those who want reform, support Geddes’ view.

Brett Hymas of Payette has four children in public schools and wants more revenue, particularly after the 7.5 percent cuts. “They don’t have new books, they changed the bus routes, they’ve cut back on games and extracurricular activities,” he said.

Yet Hymas opposes taxing health care — the biggest exemption at $397 million — and is concerned about how the Legislature would pick winners and losers. “At least right now you know where it’s coming from,” he said. “Just leave it the way it is.”

Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee Chairman Brent Hill, R-Rexburg, has favored a review of exemptions but said the poll results are inconclusive. When voters learn the specifics they often resist the idea of change, he said.

“It’s a lot easier to give a ‘yes’ to a pollster than it is to give a dollar to the tax collector,” Hill said.

Diana Zuckerman of Boise, a stay-at-home mother with children ages 7, 5 and 4, told the pollster she’ll give another dollar.

“It’s hard times and we all need to sacrifice a little, get our priorities straight and make sure our kids get a good education so they can have a better future,” Zuckerman said. “I’m willing to pay more taxes to pay the teachers more, have smaller classes and fresher food in the cafeteria.”

House Assistant GOP Leader Scott Bedke of Oakley said he’s hearing similar sentiment. “Everybody’s in school and sees the ‘after’ picture,” he said. “There’s a perception that the quality of education is going to diminish because of the cuts.”

But by the time lawmakers meet in January, Bedke speculates that may wane and ease pressure for tax increases. “I think there might be a new normal,” Bedke said. “When you talk about it in the aggregate, eliminating tax exemptions sounds good. But when you look at each exemption, I just don’t think there’s political critical mass to start removing them.”

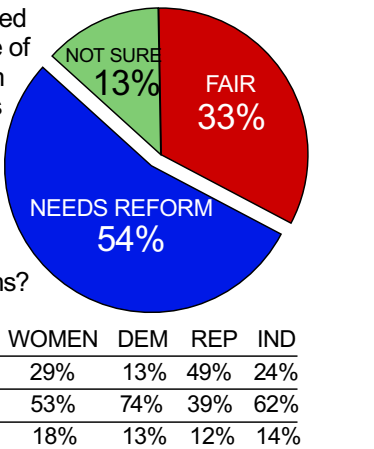

The gatekeeper on any such changes is House Revenue and Taxation Committee Chairman Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot. He said he doubts lawmakers can stomach more deeps cuts in K-12. “I just don’t see it.”

But he’s undecided about initiating a review of exemptions, in part because he tried and largely failed in 2008. “I got put in my place pretty quickly,” Lake said.

DEFINING 'HISTORIC'

By Nick Coltrain

Time may march on, but the city of Twin Falls Historic Preservation Commission is trying to keep Warehouse District design guidelines from doing the same.

The commission is pursuing a $6,000 grant from the state so it can hire a consultant to establish design guidelines for buildings in the area. Commission Chairman Darrell Buffaloe said the group's aim is to give architects and building owners a starting point when deciding to renovate or update buildings in the area.

"We all have our own ideas of what preservation means, but we had no standards," Buffaloe said.

Buffaloe and the commis-

Twin Falls commission to set guidelines for design changes in Warehouse District sion's vice chairman, Ryan Horsley, said they intend to keep the guidelines flexible enough to allow for economic development, though they want to keep the impression that the Warehouse District is part of the city's history. Even with the guidelines, the commission will retain the ability to waive certain requirements.

"Nobody on the commission wants to say, 'We need to keep these buildings just like they were in the 1920s,' or whenever," Buffaloe said, adding that the guidelines will "answer a lot of questions" about what is and is not allowed.

Buffaloe and Horsley said the design guidelines, slated to be completed in April, will remove some of the subjective reasoning for allowing or denying certain changes to the area, and will keep commission decisions more standard. The specifications also will give clear guidelines to the Twin Falls City Council in case of business owners appealing a commission decision, they said.

T.F. fire crews respond to smoldering lint

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

AmeriPride had a close call Tuesday morning.

The uniform-cleaning company on Main Avenue in downtown Twin Falls was host to police cars and multiple fire trucks as city personnel responded to a fire alarm. Turns out, the lint trap on one of the dryers was clogged and possibly caught fire, according to Twin Falls Fire Department Battalion Chief Brian Cunningham.

Twin Falls police and firefighters responded at about 11:45 a.m. as employees evacuated the building into its parking lot. No smoke was visible from outside the building, though Cunningham said some employees had reported seeing smoke — possibly from smoldering lint.

Cunningham added that the hot spot was contained to the building's ductwork, and dealt with within 15 minutes.

One of four Twin Falls men accused of distributing drugs has pleaded guilty in federal court.

Troy D. Sabrosky, 20, of Twin Falls, entered his plea on Thursday in U.S. District Court in Boise to one count of conspiracy to distribute oxycodone. He is scheduled to be sentenced by Judge Edward J. Lodge on Nov. 30. He remains in the custody of U.S. Marshals Service.

The three other men — Cooper T. Chapin, 23; Ryan J. Simmons, 21; and James Toliver Latham, 23 — await jury trial on one charge of conspiracy and seven charges of distributing oxycodone. Trial is set for Oct. 5 in Boise. The four men were indicted by a federal grand jury on April 14.

The indictment alleges that Cooper, Simmons, Latham and Sabrosky distributed the drug, an opiate-based painkiller, from December 2009 through February of this year. The maximum penalty for trafficking a Schedule II drug such as oxycodone is up to 20 years in federal prison on each count and a $1 million fine.

What the candidates say about sales-tax exemptions

By Dan Popkey
The Idaho Statesman

Democratic nominee Keith Allred said he would end sales-tax exemptions on services, but use the money to reduce the 6 percent rate and eliminate the sales tax on groceries.

“We can get lower taxes by closing special-interest tax exemptions that don’t make sense,” Allred said. “A good place to go on sales tax is to extend it to services, with the exception of health care.”

Foregone revenue on those services is estimated at $586 million in fiscal 2011. That includes professional, business, information, social, repair, education and transportation services. (Taxing health and medical services would raise $397 million).

“I disagree,” said GOP Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter. “Listen, I’m not going to be a part of taxing the services for a single mother that’s putting her child into day care all day long to go to work, nor the teacher who has to do that.”

Otter said results from a poll commissioned by the Times-News and six other daily newspapers were inconclusive on exemptions because voters aren’t familiar enough with how taxes would rise. “One of the reasons they’re fuzzy is because people don’t understand the consequences.”

Allred said he would shift money to schools by reforming prison and health-care spending. He would boost substance-abuse treatment for offenders and spend more on primary and preventive care and less on specialized and catastrophic care.

The poll found 59 percent of voters supported Otter and the Legislature in balancing the budget without raising taxes this year. But 48 percent said they would favor tax increases next year if it meant avoiding public school cuts similar to the 7.5 percent imposed by the 2010 Legislature.

Otter said it’s too early to say whether cuts of that magnitude might be necessary, in part because of efficiencies and innovations, including distance learning.

“I do believe we’re going to have significant savings,” Otter said. “Is it going to be enough to cover the gap? I don’t know because I don’t know what the gap is.”

TOP 10 SALES TAX BREAKS

The 6 percent Idaho sales tax will not capture an estimated $1.75 billion in fiscal 2011, according to the Division of Financial Management. Not taxed are 28 specific uses, 15 goods, 15 services and 29 specific entities. The top 10 among the 87 breaks account for $1.36 billion of foregone revenue. They are:

- 1 Health and medical services, $397 million. Doctors, dentists, hospitals and nursing homes are the principals.
- 2 Professional services, $181 million. Legal, accounting, architecture, consulting, scientific research and advertising, among others.
- 3 Motor fuels, $152 million. Fuels subject to fuel taxes are not assessed sales taxes.
- 4 Business services, $118 million. Office, employment, building, facility and security services, among others.
- 5 Construction, $101 million. Labor is not taxed. To equalize with standard construction, mobile and manufactured homes are taxed at 55 percent of the sales price.
- 6 Production exemption, equipment, $94 million. Equipment used to produce a taxable product.
- 7 Utility sales, $91 million.
- 8 Electricity, gas, water.
- 9 Information services, $84 million. Phones, cable TV, Internet providers.
- 10 Production exemption, supplies, $71 million. Supplies used to produce a product for resale.
- 11 Social services, $69 million. Adult and child day care, residential care, adoption services, among others.

$482, more for family health insurance coverage this year than they were last year. Employers, struggling with the recession, aren’t increasing their share. Instead, they’re shifting more costs onto employees, according to the survey. (Kaiser Health News is a program of the foundation.)

A recent study by the National Business Group on Health found that almost two-thirds of employers planned to ask employees to contribute more toward their premiums.

Q. I'm a small business owner. Do I have to offer coverage to my workers this fall? If I do, will the government help me pay for it?

A. No business owner — small or large — is required to offer coverage. However, small businesses with 25 or fewer full-time employees who earn an average yearly salary of $50,000 or less will qualify for a tax credit of up to 35 percent of the cost of premiums. The credit increases to 50 percent in 2014 for most small employers. To qualify for the credits, businesses must cover at least 50 percent of the cost of workers’ insurance.

Starting in 2014, businesses with 50 or more employees that don’t provide health care coverage and have at least one full-time worker who receives subsidized coverage in the health insurance exchanges will have to pay a fee of up to $2,000 per full-time employee. (The firms’ first 30 workers will be excluded from the cost of the fee.) Businesses with 50 or fewer workers will be exempt.

Q. I buy my own health insurance. How will the health law affect my coverage?

A. For policy years that start after Sept. 23, all health insurance policies in the individual market will be barred from canceling coverage once you get sick — a practice known as “rescission” — unless you committed fraud when applying for coverage. Insurers will be prohibited from setting lifetime limits on your coverage. The plans also must allow you to keep an adult child up to age 26 on your health plan if he or she can’t get coverage through a job.

New policies can’t deny coverage for children up to age 19 based on pre-existing medical conditions. “Grandfathered” plans can, however; they also can set annual dollar limits on coverage and require patients to help pay for some preventive services.

Most people in the individual market are expected to move to new plans by 2014. Analysts say most plans in the group market also probably will have lost their “grandfathered” status because of changes made to them.

Other provisions of the law will kick in later. For example, as of 2014, insurers won’t be able to refuse to cover adults who have pre-existing medical conditions. That same year, individuals whose incomes are up to 400 percent of the poverty level — $88,200 for a family of four, at the current poverty level — will qualify for subsidies to help purchase health insurance on exchanges, or marketplaces where consumers can shop for coverage. At that point, most people will have to have health insurance or pay a fine.

Q. I'm on Medicare. Will my benefits change?

A. Your basic package of Medicare benefits will expand under the law. If you’re in a Medicare Advantage plan, however — a private plan that offers Medicare benefits — you might lose some extra benefits at some point.

In terms of the Medicare program overall, let’s start with prescription drugs. As of late August, 1 million Medicare beneficiaries had received $250 checks to help cover prescription drug costs in what’s known as the doughnut hole. That’s the gap in coverage in which beneficiaries must pay the full cost of their prescriptions until catastrophic coverage kicks in.

Starting next year, beneficiaries will receive 50 percent discounts on brand name drugs and 7 percent discounts on generic drugs while they’re in the coverage gap. The new health law closes the gap entirely by 2020.

In addition, beginning next year, Medicare beneficiaries won’t have to pay co-payments or deductibles on many preventive health care services, including diabetes and cervical cancer screenings. Medicare also will pay for an annual wellness visit to the doctor.

To help pay for the health overhaul, Congress is cutting payments to Medicare Advantage plans, beginning the year after next. Beneficiaries won’t lose any of their basic Medicare benefits as a result of the reductions, but some Medicare Advantage insurers could decide to stop offering additional benefits, such as coverage for eyeglasses or gym memberships.

Q. Many Republicans have criticized the health care law as too intrusive and too expensive. If they gain congressional seats in the November election, how could that affect the law?

A. Some Republicans have threatened to block funding for implementing the law; others have called for repealing it outright. Accomplishing either would be tough, however, unless they win large majorities in both the House of Representatives and the Senate.

President Barack Obama probably would veto any legislation to gut the law, and Republicans would need a veto-proof majority — two-thirds of both chambers — to override him.

Also, some Republicans might be reluctant to repeal provisions of the bill that are popular, such as keeping a child up to age 26 on parents’ health care plan or outlawing rescissions and lifetime and annual limits.

Salvation Army needs your help

There are many groups and thousands of people in the Twin Falls area who do good things for our neighbors who need help most. But they — and the community — really couldn’t do without the Salvation Army.

The organization is where the rubber meets the road when families are truly in trouble.

And now the Salvation Army is having trouble.

The Christian nonprofit community outreach organization is seeking new means of funding as it faces a $26,000 budget deficit heading into its next fiscal year, which starts in nine days.

The Salvation Army’s summer day camp and after-school programs, along with its weekday noon meals and emergency welfare assistance programs, help between 175 and 200 people each day.

Salvation Army Maj. Ed Patterson said he doesn’t see that number declining anytime soon, and it continues to strain the organization’s funding — a total budget of $700,000 next year.

That’s significant because if you’re a single mom with three kids in tow, no money, no home and literally no place else to go, the Salvation Army is where you turn first.

If the organization can’t backfill its deficit through fundraising or other sources, the Twin Falls office faces cutbacks to part-time staff and an emergency-assistance program that helps people with rental payments, bus tickets and gas money. If the organization’s funding situation becomes dire enough, full-time staff may be cut.

That’s not good enough, Twin Falls. The Salvation Army has earned our support many times over.

The organization and Magic Valley Bank will host a dinner and auction at 6 p.m. Saturday at Lighthouse Christian School, 960 Eastland Dr. in Twin Falls. Tickets are $15 and are available at Magic Valley Bank locations, the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and the Salvation Army.

Proceeds will be used for gym improvements, exercise equipment and program costs. More than $20,000 in prizes will be auctioned off and Magic Valley Bank will match up to $5,000 of the proceeds

Be there, and if you can’t be there, write a check to the Salvation Army.

The organization is truly this community’s best friend in need.

Our view: The Salvation Army is the Twin Falls community’s most effective means of helping its most disadvantaged members.

As the Arctic melts due to climate change, its iconic marine mammals are feeling the heat. The Arctic Ocean held less sea ice in June of this year than any previous June on record. For the last four summers, the ice melt has exceeded what even pessimistic climate models predicted only a few years ago.

Scott Highleyman and Henry Huntington

Yet ice and its inhabitants define this region: take away the ice, take away the Arctic. Without wildlife conservation measures and a serious attempt to address climate change, the adverse impacts will only grow.

Between 1979 and 2000, the Arctic held an average of 7 million square kilometers of sea ice even in late summer. In 2007, only 4.3 million square kilometers of ice remained, meaning that 40 percent of this habitat was lost. By comparison, about 20 percent of the Amazon rainforest has been destroyed by clear-cutting — an environmental tragedy that has been widely covered.

Changes this large impose consequences. Since prehistoric times, up to 250,000 walrus have moved northward each summer into the Chukchi Sea, following retreating sea ice. There, off the northern coast of Alaska, walrus feed on clams in the seabed, resting on ice between their dives. Female walrus nurse their young on the ice floes. When the ice rapidly disappeared there during the summer of 2007, thousands of walrus were forced onto land where they risked trampling deaths, predation by bears and depletion of food sources.

As an occasional occurrence, this might not be cause for alarm. A few dozen walrus have often come ashore in Alaska. Along the Russian coast of the Chukchi Sea, thousands of walrus congregate on beaches in late summer before heading south to the Bering Sea. But the conditions in today’s Arctic are prompting a major ecological shift and walrus face new pressures as they try to adapt.

Meanwhile, rapidly melting sea ice is opening the region to increased industrial activities, including oil and gas development and more ship traffic, which in turn have the potential to further stress marine mammals. The United States has halted commercial fishing in its Arctic waters for the foreseeable future as a precautionary measure. But commercial shipping plus offshore oil and gas activities are likely to spur extensive coastal infrastructure development and introduce oil rigs to waters where walrus feed. These human impacts must be minimized if walrus are to survive and flourish.

In the eastern Canadian Arctic, the narwhal’s future is just as uncertain. Long a source of fascination, Europeans once thought that the creature’s long spiral tooth protruding from the front of its head was like the horn of the unicorn. Instead, scientists discovered that the tooth is an extraordinary sensor for temperature, salinity and other ocean conditions and may help with navigation and feeding. Today, up to 60,000 narwhal, or 85 percent of the world’s population, migrate in summer through Lancaster Sound, at the eastern entrance to the Northwest Passage. They spend winters feeding on Greenland halibut more than a kilometer below the surface of Baffin Bay.

As sea ice retreats and takes longer to re-freeze each fall, narwhal will also have to respond. Scientists have rated it as the marine mammal most vulnerable to the loss of sea ice. As with walrus, however, habitat changes are not the only risks for narwhal. Increased commercial fishing in Baffin Bay could reduce the species’ food sources as well.

The development of a sound, fishery-related ecosystem management plan will allow these marine mammals every chance to adapt as best they can. The Canadian government’s promise to create a national marine conservation area in Lancaster Sound also is a crucial step towards helping protect narwhal.

Losing sea ice not only impacts high-profile animals such as walrus and narwhal. Many species have adapted to live only in the Arctic, supporting a food web that begins with tiny algae growing under and in the ice. Conservation measures that encompass wildlife, fishing, shipping and drilling are needed now in Arctic waters, lest its ecology becomes a historical artifact rather than a vital part of our global heritage. And ultimately, if the loss of sea ice is to be slowed or reversed, the human causes of climate change must be addressed. An Arctic without ice deprives not just the narwhal and walrus, but all of us.

Scott Highleyman is director of the Pew Environment Group’s international Arctic program and Henry Huntington is science director for the Arctic program. They wrote this commentary for McClatchy-Tribune News Service.

Reckless biker caused accident in South Hills

This letter is for the mountain biker that left my teenage daughter lying, bleeding, in the rocks and dirt way out in the middle of nowhere up in the South Hills last Sunday afternoon (Sept. 12).

My daughter went riding and this mountain biker came up going fast and blind and just about connected. The little mare spun to get out of his way, fell and rolled my daughter into the rocks. The horse then left the country, scared to death and, in the process, ripped open her legs on the lava rock. This biker just went on down the trail leaving my daughter lying there, bleeding and shook up.

I thank God she wasn’t unconscious or seriously hurt. And I am so grateful she didn’t hang up in the process. It would have been all over at that point. She finally got herself up, and it was a long hike to find her little mare up on top of the canyon, shaking and bleeding. They both slowly hiked down the mountain. We will be doctoring the horse for many weeks to come.

This biker was wearing a bright orange Spandex biker top. You know who you are! I hope someone knows you and reports you, especially to the police. You are lucky I did not come upon you first. I cannot believe a person can just walk over the hurt, especially a child and go home like nothing happened. You do not belong in this agricultural, family town. Go back to the city and stay there. I cannot believe what a scum you are, and I pray you don’t have children of your own. You

Republicans erect Berlin wall of ‘no’

I will be 90 years old this coming May. My parents emigrated from Finland and raised six kids on a small farm in Lovelock, Nev. I have never had a job other than being a Marine captain in World War II. I have owned small businesses, and when my fellow workers did well, we all did well.

I lived through and watched FDR bring us out of the Great Depression. It took him six years. President Truman, the great common man president lead the country through eight years of progress for the working man. Our great President Kennedy killed mafia-style, no one to question. The Great Society President Johnson stymied by lying generals keeping him in the Vietnam War. Clinton, all Democrats trying to bring prosperity to the nation and keep the American dream alive for all of us.

Now I see President Obama fighting against a Berlin-style wall of ‘no’ to bring back the American dream. Stymied by a winless war, the fat cat Republicans would plunder our Social Security system because old folks are living too high off the hog. Some living on $1,000 a month on money they paid into Social Security. Much too good for them, the fat cat Republicans say, itching to get their paws on that fund that is not going broke and can easily be adjusted and not destroyed.

President Obama has a bill pending that will stimulate the economy on a Kennedy-style pump primer. It is all paid for and ready to roll except for the Berlin-style wall of ‘no’ that will not let it out for a vote, the fat cat Republicans only way to stop the bill. They would not dare vote against it if it were put to a vote as the public would see their true colors.

Now because the fat cat Republicans are terrified that their wall will be destroyed in the coming election, they are coming up with all types of lies and half-truths. They were handed a balanced budget when they took office. Plundered it for the fat cats and think we are dumb enough to vote them back in office.

Tea Party time: Republican establishment is in trouble

A bootleg Bob Dylan 1966 concert recordings carries the incendiary title “While the Establishment Burns.” That could serve as a metaphor for what seems to be happening to the Washington establishment in general and the Republican Party establishment in particular.

The Tea Party Express roared through several primary elections last Tuesday, shaking the foundations of the Republican and media establishments. In a remarkable exchange on Sean Hannity’s Fox show, Karl Rove, George W. Bush’s “architect” within the political establishment, said that Delaware Senate nominee Christine O’Donnell can’t win in November. He then gave the Democrats enough negative sound bites about O’Donnell for them to use in their TV ads for far-left Democratic Senate candidate Chris Coons.

The days when it was more important to preserve party over principles, as O’Donnell put it in an election night interview with CNN, may be coming to an end. Conservatives are tired of being taken for granted and their agenda ignored by the Republican establishment, especially when those they vote for get in power and too often vote with Democrats. If ever there was a Republican in name only, it is Rep. Mike Castle, a 40-year incumbent whom O’Donnell defeated. Tea Partiers think their candidates have convictions that matter to them and they are refusing to put party first.

The full force of the Washington and media establishments will now be brought to bear on O’Donnell and other Republicans identified as Tea Party candidates or just strong conservatives. “Fringe” and “extreme” are just some of the labels that are already being applied to them. They will also be called “ignorant wing nuts,” and in O’Donnell’s case loaded with “too much baggage.” Who is free of baggage, including several current and former members of Congress?

Conservative candidates should ignore it all and tell voters: “You elected this president and this Congress to bring change to Washington. They haven’t, so we need to change them if we truly want to transform the country and return it to its founding principles, among which are living within our means.”

This nation needs an occasional turnover, even revolution, not only to “throw the bums out,” but also to reboot the system and remind ourselves of what America was designed to be and what we have instead become. The establishment won’t go quietly because they have large amounts of turf to protect, so they must be dislodged, evicted, even burned out in a metaphorical sense.

The big media treated the anti-establishment rebellion of the ’60s as something good. They will treat this attempt to overthrow the establishment as something bad, mainly because they are now the establishment. When Dylan sang, The Times They Are A-Changin’, the pot-smoking, free love, anti-establishment hippies sang with him. If overcoming the establishment then was a great idea (it wasn’t in view of what and who replaced it), overcoming today’s establishment is a better one.

The establishment hates people it can’t control and who are not beholden to those who run it. Conservative candidates who are scoring well understand this is a contest between the Washington establishment and the rest of the country. The establishment has one set of interests and the country has another. The conservatives are beholden to the people. The establishment is beholden only to itself and those it chooses to admit to the inside-the-beltway inner circle.

Syndicated columnist Cal Thomas can be reached at tmseditors@tribune.com.

Is Haley Barbour the Republican’s hope for White House in 2012?

If Republicans score what looms as a substantial victory in November’s elections, one GOP leader will have a special reason to celebrate.

For Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour, orchestrating a Republican comeback against a freshman Democratic president would be, in the words of Yogi Berra, “deja vu all over again.”

In 1994, when Republicans overturned a prior Democratic Congress, Barbour headed the Republican National Committee. This time, he heads the Republican Governors Association, where his fundraising prowess has fueled GOP state campaigns and helped other races.

Acclaimed by Politico as the “most powerful Republican in American politics,” Barbour concedes he may seek the goal that eluded Republicans after their 1994 triumph: the White House.

No potential GOP 2012

candidate is smarter, more politically adept, more engaging and more experienced. He’ll have an advantage in seeking the many Southern delegates. But as recent events and some of his own comments have shown, no candidate carries more political baggage.

A successful lobbyist for major economic interests at a time both Washington and his profession are highly suspect, Barbour has shown a propensity for saying controversial things that add to doubts this rapidly diversifying country would replace its first black president with a white Southern conservative.

Of course, if unemployment persists at near 10 percent, anything may be possible.

For better or worse,

Barbour, 62, sounds like the good-old-boy Mississippian he is. Like Bill Clinton, he’s prone to spouting Southernisms, though with a more pronounced accent. Of Obama, he said, “Democrats are running from him like scalded dogs.”

A recent interview with the Hoover Institution’s Peter Robinson and a media breakfast sponsored by The Christian Science Monitor illustrated some of his potential problems. Among them:

• His lobbying past. In the Hoover interview, Barbour contended it would be an asset because the next president would have to lobby Congress, other countries, the business community, labor unions and governors. “I was a pretty good one,” he told the breakfast session.

• Race. He turned some heads, and attracted some negative columns, by telling Robinson that he attended integrated schools in predominantly segregated 1960s Mississippi and “never thought twice about it.” At the breakfast, he said he had “a very pleasant experience” at the University of Mississippi and told of sitting next to a black woman, Verna Bailey, who let him copy her notes. McClatchy Newspapers’ Margaret Talev contacted Bailey, who said she didn’t remember meeting him and that her time as Ole Miss’ first black female student “certainly wasn’t a very pleasant experience for me.”

• Social issues. He said he agreed with Indiana Gov. Mitch Daniels that candidates should stress economic issues over social ones because “people are concerned about jobs and the economy.” But fearing a backlash, he touted his “bona fides” as a social conservative by noting Americans United for Life honored him and said Mississippi was “the safest state in America for an unborn child,” an assessment the group made because of the state’s efforts to curb abortions.

• Obama’s background.

Asked about those who question the president’s religion and birthplace, Barbour said he took “totally at face value” Obama’s statement he is a Christian. But he gave a nod to “birthers” seeking to sow doubts by adding, “This is a president that we know less about than any president in history.”

Barbour says he won’t consider running until after November, declaring not totally convincingly, “I haven’t given that the least bit of thought.” Someone has, because his political committee, Haley’s PAC, sent an appeal for funds recently to first caucus state, Iowa.

Idaho personal income back over $50B in second quarter

Times-News

Total personal income in Idaho rose back over $50 billion this spring on an annualized basis, marking the first time personal income has been that high since summer 2008.

The nine-tenths of a percent increase from the winter quarter was driven by a substantial rise in the amount of transfer payments — Social Security, disability, pension, unemployment and other benefits — Idahoans received during the second quarter of this year. The increase also reflects a modest increase in worker wages that was partially offset by a slight decline in business profits.

Idaho's increase ranked 38th among the states, but it was just a tenth of a percentage point below the national increase of 1 percent.

The U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis estimated total personal income for Idaho at $50.2 billion during the April-June quarter, up $444 million from the January-March quarter and nearly $1.4 billion more than the second quarter of 2009..

Although the recession began in December 2007, Idaho's personal income continued growing through mid-2008, when it hit nearly $50.8 billion. According to the National Bureau of Economic Research, the country's 18-month recession officially ended in June 2009, when Idaho personal income dropped to $48.8 billion for the second quarter. Idaho's economy has continued to feel the impact of the recession over the past year, but personal income has been steadily, if slowly, rising since mid-2009.

While paychecks were up only 0.6 percent from the winter quarter, the gains were spread across nearly every sector of the economy including construction. Farm earnings fell $100 million on an annualized basis while earnings in restaurants and hotels were off just a fraction.

The money Idahoans earned on their investments was up but only a fraction, reflecting the continued problems in real estate and uncertainty in the stock market.

Idaho career information system marks 30 years by eliminating fees

Times-News

After three successful decades of helping Idahoans make informed career decisions, the Idaho Career Information System is celebrating by eliminating fees for access to its information files.

“Our goal is to make this funding change permanent, increase accessibility to CIS information for all Idaho citizens and give those without access an opportunity to try this incredibly valuable tool,” Career Information System Administrator Christie Stoll said in marking the program's 30th anniversary.

Last fall, access to the eCIS system was made available free through public libraries across the state. Feedback was positive and thousands of Idaho citizens took advantage of the initiative. The next phase of the plan to expand statewide access is to provide the information in a public version of the popular system. Idaho citizens will be able to use the system without a login through a link on the CIS website. The Idaho Career Information System plans to release this version in November.

Additional financial support from the Idaho Department of Labor, which assumed administration of the system in mid-2008, is allowing basic fees to be eliminated. A nominal fee will remain for access to enhanced exploration tools, portfolios and administrative support services. Optional modules such as the IDEAS assessment and Peterson's Practice Tests will continue to be available for an additional fee.

The Career Information System at www.idahocis.org is the only comprehensive source of Idaho-specific career information on a broad array of topics including jobs, career requirements and postsecondary schools. CIS also contains the most current and comprehensive information about financial assistance, scholarships and sources of education or training needed to qualify for specific jobs. CIS is available in nearly every Idaho school district and at the 25 local Labor Department offices around the state.

“CIS helps people make informed career decisions,” Stoll said. “Idaho is one of the nation's leaders in providing unprecedented access to career and education planning resources to its citizens.”

Beer-dispensing tables turn bar patrons into bartenders

By Gus G. Sentementes
The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE — A Parkton, Md., man had an idea that even the casual beer drinker would appreciate: What if you could draw your own frothy pint at the local pub?

Turns out, perhaps not surprisingly, that someone across the Atlantic already had the same idea.

So when Josh Goodman discovered he had a kindred entrepreneurial spirit in Ireland, he teamed with the small company there to introduce Americans to the Draft Master this year. The mobile table, fitted with beer taps designed to let bar patrons draw their own brews, can be found in establishments in Washington, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Las Vegas.

“Being from Dublin myself, I've seen them in action for a long time,” said Stuart Delves, who recently installed two of the tables at The Gas Station, a gastro-pub he manages near Harrisburg, Pa. “I always thought it was a good idea here.”

How the Draft Master tables came to market in the United States and Europe is a tale of enterprise, international trade and the transformation of an Irish company's business model during a deep recession.

The Draft Master could become a regular fixture in bars, especially as global conglomerate Diageo, the world's largest beer, wine and spirits company, has put its marketing muscle behind it. Diageo, based in London, has bought 900 of the tables, which typically feature Diageo's Guinness beer, for use in more than 250 pubs across Ireland.

Ellickson International, the Waterford, Ireland-based company that makes the Draft Master, is advertising the table as an efficient dispenser of beer that encourages camaraderie in pub and restaurant settings. It's starting to sell them in markets across Europe and is preparing to enter Asia. Its U.S. office is in Annapolis, Md.

“It's a unique hook,” said Charlie Kleinrichert, president of A.C. Beverage, an Annapolis-based beer-equipment distributor that partnered with Ellickson to sell the Draft Master in the U.S. “It's an opportunity for bars to set themselves apart. Everybody is looking for tools to improve the marketability of their establishment.”

Annual per-capita consumption of beer dropped 1 gallon last year, to 29.5 gallons, from 30.5 gallons or more in previous years, according to the Beer Institute, an industry lobbying group.

The Draft Master makes it easy for a consumer to buy beer on demand. The table features two taps that swivel 360 degrees. A

Competition hurts ConAgra 1st-quarter net income

The Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Food maker ConAgra Foods Inc., which owns and operates potato processing plants in Twin Falls, said Tuesday that tight competition, inflation and a sluggish retail environment pushed first quarter net income down 12 percent.

The company reported that it earned $146.4 million, or 33 cents per share, for the quarter. That's down from the $165.9 million, or 37 cents per share, in the same quarter last year.

ConAgra says its revenue fell 2 percent to $2.82 billion from $2.89 billion in the quarter last year.

The results missed analyst expectations of 39 cents per share on revenue of $2.96 billion.

In the company's consumer food segment, which accounts for about 65 percent of its revenue, sales fell 2 percent to $1.82 billion. Revenue was hurt by discounting in frozen foods, table spreads and popcorn.

That segment has benefited as consumers began eating at home more often during the tough economy. But ConAgra's commercial division continued to see soft sales due to weakness in the restaurant industry.

In ConAgra's commercial food segment, revenue fell 3 percent to $993 million. The company's Lamb Weston specialty potato segment had higher sales and unit volume, but operating profit was hurt by a poor-quality potato crop a year ago.

White House economic adviser Summers departs

By Kevin G. Hall and Steven Thomma
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — A day after President Obama hinted at possible departures from his economic team, the White House announced late Tuesday that National Economic Council chief Lawrence Summers is returning to academia.

There was no word on who might replace Summers as the chief of the council, which coordinates economic policy, but there was speculation that Obama might choose a nationally recognized executive who's run a business, rather than another academic or investment banker, to help rally the private sector.

A former treasury secretary in the Clinton era, Summers, the president's top economic adviser, was thought to be on the hot seat after Obama mused aloud about his possible exit during a town hall meeting Monday.

With Republicans poised to make gains in congressional elections this November, the administration is taking heat for the sluggish economic recovery and for an unemployment rate that seems stuck at nearly 10 percent and could go higher. A new McClatchy-Marist poll this week found that four of five U.S. residents think the nation's economy is still in recession despite four straight quarters of positive growth, and 52 percent said the worst was yet to come, while only 44 percent said the worst was behind us.

Word that Summers will leave at year's end came weeks after Christina Romer, then the head of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, left her post to return to teaching. Budget chief Peter Orszag announced his departure in June, in part because of repeated policy clashes with Summers.

Summers will return to a teaching post at Harvard University, the White House said in a statement after financial markets had closed. He heads the morning economic briefings for Obama and had the president's ear during the dark days of last year's economic slump, as well as during the debate over revamping financial regulations.

"I will always be grateful that at a time of great peril for our country, a man of Larry's brilliance, experience and judgment was willing to answer the call and lead our economic team," the president said in a statement. "Over the past two years, he has helped guide us from the depths of the worst recession since the 1930s to renewed growth."

With the economy stuck in first gear, few but the president were lamenting Summers' departure.

"Too late to help," said Larry Mishel, the president of the Economic Policy Institute, a liberal policy research group, who added, "Not sure it'll change policy."

Poll shows health care law leaves many in U.S. confused

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar and Trevor Tompson
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Six months after President Obama signed the landmark health care law, the nation still doesn't really know what's in it.

More than half of Americans mistakenly believe the overhaul will raise taxes for most people this year, an Associated Press poll finds. But that would be true only if most people were devoted to indoor tanning, which got hit with a sales tax.

Many who wanted the health care system to be overhauled don't realize that some provisions they cared about actually did make it in. And about a quarter of supporters don't understand that something hardly anyone wanted didn't make it: They mistakenly say the law will set up panels of bureaucrats to make decisions about people's care — what critics labeled "death panels."

The uncertainty and confusion amount to a dismal verdict for the Obama administration's campaign to win over public opinion. Before the final votes in Congress, Obama personally assured wavering Democrats he'd take the case to the American people after the law passed. But it hasn't worked. And in the final stretch before the midterm elections Republicans are united by their call for repeal.

"I'm insecure about a document that was as big as the health care bill and wonder if anybody understands exactly what's in it," said Diann Kelley, 61, a retiree from Marietta, Ga., who says she's "somewhat opposed" to the law. The AP poll was conducted by Stanford University with the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

"The main fear is the cost," explained Kelley. "I'm not sure that we can afford to take on something quite as massive as the health care reform with the economy the way it is."

It's not that Kelley has a negative opinion about everything in the law. The prohibition on health insurance companies denying coverage to people because of pre-existing medical conditions "is really a fine idea," she said.

The poll's questions included a true-or-false quiz on 19 items, some of which are in the law and others not. People were also asked how confident they were about their answers.

For the most part, majorities picked the right answers. But a sizable number also got things wrong. And right or wrong, people were unsure of their answers. Two-thirds or more were uncertain about their responses on eight of nine core provisions of the legislation.

Analysis of the findings indicated a split as far as the impact of accurate knowledge, between Democrats and independents on one side and Republicans on the other.

Accurate knowledge of the law made no difference in the overwhelming opposition from Republicans.

Republicans block bill to lift military gay ban

By Anne Flaherty
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans on Tuesday blocked an effort by Democrats and the White House to lift the ban on gays from serving openly in the military, voting unanimously against advancing a major defense policy bill that included the provision.

The mostly partisan vote dealt a major blow to gay rights groups who saw the legislation as their best hope, at least in the short term, for repeal of the 17-year-old law known as "don't ask, don't tell."

If Democrats lose seats in the upcoming congressional elections this fall, as many expect, repealing the ban could prove even more difficult — if not impossible — next year. With that scenario looming, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said that a lame-duck session was being planned and that lifting the ban would be taken up then.

The episode upset advocates who believe that neither President Obama nor Reid did enough to see the measure through.

"The whole thing is a political train wreck," said Richard Socarides, a White House adviser on gay rights during the Clinton administration.

Democrats included the repeal provision in a $726 billion defense policy bill, which authorizes a pay raise for the troops among other popular programs. In a deal brokered with the White House, the measure would have overturned the 1993 law banning openly gay service only after a Pentagon review and certification from the president that lifting the ban wouldn't hurt troop morale.

But with little time left for debate before the November ballot, the bill languished on the Senate calendar until gay rights groups, backed by pop star Lady Gaga, began an aggressive push to turn it into an election issue.

Strange shapes, colorful fruits

Unique offerings at Magic Valley farmers markets

By Melissa Davlin ♦ Times-News writer

Purple potatoes? Funky squashes? Cucumbers that look like lemons? These are fruits and veggies you might not find in a typical Idaho grocery store.

As farmers market season winds down, this might be your last chance to sample some of the more unique offerings from Magic Valley's gardens. Here are just a few options.

Not sure how to prepare it? Ask the producer. You might be surprised at how easy it is to enjoy these uncommon wares.

All Blues lend a playful color to potato salads.

H O T P O T A T O E S

Potatoes with different colored skins aren't anything surprising. Red potatoes, white potatoes and even blue potatoes are available in stores.

But usually, the potatoes' flesh is white or yellow. So when Buhl farmer Mike Heath displays his purple-fleshed All Blue potatoes, the tubers turn heads.

All Blues hold their form well, so use them for potato salads, scalloped potatoes and home fries. Get them from M and M Heath Farms, either at the Twin Falls Farmers Market or Idaho's Bounty.

Think you know your melons?

While most cantaloupes have peachy-orange flesh and honeydews typically sport green flesh, Valrea Farnsworth's melons have swapped colors.

Green-fleshed cantaloupe and orange-fleshed honeydew throw off Farnsworth's customers. Eat them exactly like you would any melon, or mix the meats together to surprise dinner guests.

Don't limit yourself to bells alone. Italian roasting peppers are among the flavorful selections from Overton Farms. The long, slender peppers are sweet and have no heat, said Sally Overton.

When the Overtons first started offering these, they had to give them to market patrons for free. "We know they're so good, and people come back for them," Sally said. Their strategy worked: Now loyal customers buy them by the cooler-full.

But you don't need that many for a delicious dinner. Brush the peppers with olive oil and grill them, or stuff them with herbed rice, wheat berries and chopped veggies.

Pattypan squashes may look alien, but their shape is perfect for stuffing.

These aren't the smooth green cucumbers you're used to.

Armenian cukes have ridges running up the side. When you slice them, those ridges turn into pretty scalloped edges, said Valrea Farnsworth of Hagerman Valley Fresh Produce. The firm fruit is great in salads or dipped, like chips, in hummus.

Lemon cucumbers look like their namesake. The small yellow spheres taste mild and crisp. Slice them up and toss with salad or eat one plain, just like an apple, Farnsworth said.

You might have seen the slender, ridged Armenian cucumber in grocery store aisles. But how about the lemon cucumber?

S P A C E S H I P S Q U A S H

The edges on scalloped squashes — also known as pattypan — make them look out of this world.

The UFO-like compacts are fun for harvest decorations, but they also taste good, too.

The shallow bodies make them perfect for stuffing. Slice off the top of a pattypan, stuff with cooked sausage, wild rice and peppers, and stick it under the broiler.

Gluten-free has gone big time, but why so popular?

By Michael Hill
Associated Press writer

Gwyneth Paltrow gushes over gluten-free. Chelsea Clinton's wedding cake was baked without it. The new Old Spice guy avoids the ubiquitous protein to help stay buff. In fact, odds are good you too have tried — or at least encountered — a product with the gluten removed.

Because gluten-free is what low-carb was a decade ago: The “it” diet discussed on daytime talk shows, promoted by hyper-slim actresses and adopted by masses. Grocery aisles are stocked with the likes of gluten-free pasta, crackers, cereal and beer.

Americans are enthusiastically exiling a dietary staple that wasn't even in most people's vocabulary a decade ago.

But why? Unlike some other dietary boogeymen like trans-fats, gluten is not inherently bad to eat. Only a small percentage of people can't tolerate the protein, which occurs naturally in wheat, barley and rye. Plus, banning gluten from your diet can be really hard.

Not only is gluten an essential element of traditional breads and pastas (it's the protein that gives them their structure), it often is used as a thickening agent in processed foods, such as ketchup and ice cream. And cutting out gluten is no guarantee of weight loss.

The fad seems to be partly fueled by the celebrity factor: Paltrow talks it up on her website, Clinton stirred online chatter this summer when she ordered a gluten-free cake for her big day, and the muscular guy on the funny Old Spice commercials recently told Jay Leno gluten is one of the things he cut from his diet.

Then there are the claims that going “G-free” makes you feel more energetic.

“I feel better when I don't do it. If I go out to a restaurant with friends and I have a beer and a plate of pasta I'm going to feel it the next day. No one wants a gluten hangover,” said Silvana Nardone, former editor-in-chief of Every Day with Rachael Ray magazine. Nardone, the mother of a teenage boy with a gluten intolerance, just released a cookbook of gluten- and dairy-free recipes titled “Cooking for Isaiah.”

These sort of claims are common, if hard to prove. But that hasn't slowed the industry's growth.

U.S. sales of gluten-free food have more than doubled since 2005 to more than $1.5 billion, according to the market research company Packaged Facts. And the growth spurt is expected to continue at least through 2012.

Gluten does affect some people, notably people with celiac disease. But celiacs, who suffer an immune reaction if they eat food with gluten, such as bread or pasta, are estimated to represent less than 1 percent of the population.

Some other people have less severe gluten allergies or sensitivities. Dr. Alessio Fasano, director of the Center for Celiac Research at the University of Maryland School of Medicine, figures that up to 7 or 8 percent of the U.S. population have some kind of sensitivity to gluten.

Yet about a quarter of U.S. adults are either trying to reduce or completely avoid gluten in their diets, according to the marketing firm NPDI Group's Dieting Monitor. That means most of the people eating gluten-free foods probably don't have to, but want to.

“Some of the people we're talking about most are people who are dabbling in raw foods and dabbling in vegan and dabbling in different things and they see gluten-free as part of that world,” said Shauna James Ahern, better known as the popular blogger “Gluten-Free Girl.” Ahern, diagnosed with celiac at age 38 after feeling “low-level lousy” her whole life, said that even as dabblers drop the diet, they build awareness of gluten-free, which leads to more people getting diagnosed. That's why she thinks the diet will still be around in a decade.

Many of these gluten watchers are people like Akiia James, a 33-year-old news producer from Durham, N.C., who already was healthy and fit before she decided to cut out home, we want to hear from you. Today or tomorrow, call Times-News reporter Ariel Hansen at ahansen@magicvalley.com or 788-3475, and include your name, phone number and a good time to reach you.

gluten and dairy several months ago.

“The main thing is just feeling better after you eat, not feeling the weight of eating,” James said. “I mean, I never anymore feel like I'm stuffed ... I think I still eat the same amount, but the ingredients play a big part.”

Why people report feeling better is not totally clear. And the connection may be indirect. People who eliminate gluten-rich foods may eat more produce, and therefore have a healthier diet overall, said Dee Sandquist, a spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association.

Fasano suggests that gluten is generally harder to digest.

Dr. Brian Bosworth,

associate director of the Gastroenterology Fellowship Program at New York Presbyterian Hospital/Weill Cornell Medical Center, noted that while gluten can certainly be an irritant to some people, he wouldn't make a blanket statement that it's harder to digest for everyone.

“I don't think that, in general, that there's a reason to strictly avoid it,” said Bosworth, who has celiac disease.

Sandquist says there's no harm in avoiding gluten, as long as you eat a balanced diet. But she said it can be a challenge to eat a nutritionally sound diet without gluten, despite the recent proliferation of products.

And watch out: Just because a product is labeled gluten-free doesn't mean it's low in calories. And some gluten-free prepared meals can run high in both calories and salt.

“There are just as many calories, if not more, depending on the food choices,” Sandquist said. “It's all about the food choices.”

What's that haze on my chocolate?

McClatchy Newspapers

Q: I have some semi-sweet chocolate squares that have turned white. Can I still use them?

A: The white haze is called bloom. It's caused by cocoa butter rising to the surface, and it happens to chocolate when it is stored in a place that is too warm.

Chocolate is like Goldilocks — it likes to be just right, not too warm and not too cold. Storing it in the refrigerator isn't great because it can get damp, which can make it grainy.

The best place to keep it is in a dark cabinet that stays cool, between 60 to 70 degrees. In most kitchens, that means the cabinet that is farthest from the stove. It also picks up other flavors easily, so make sure you wrap it well.

The good news is that bloom doesn't mean you can't use the chocolate. It will disappear when you melt it in a recipe. But it's a good idea to taste a little bit just to make sure it hasn't picked up an off flavor.

New books help you get to know your food culture

By Michele Kayal
For The Associated Press

If you think apple pie is the all-American food, think again. An inspiring collection of new books dips deep into the melting pot to serve up stories and recipes that trace the multi-ethnic and cultural origins of what our country eats.

Jane Ziegelman's "97 Orchard" (Smithsonian/Harper Collins, 2010) offers an eminently readable history of five families — German, Irish, Italian and Eastern European — all living in a tenement on New York's Lower East Side at the turn of the last century. The book is filled with fun facts — that pickles were once considered a stimulant; that goose pastrami was bar food.

But the book's beauty lies in the insight and intelligence with which Ziegelman tells the story of real, live people who came to this country and brought their food with them. Using census records, shopping lists, recipes and other documents, she brings her characters to life, and illuminates how immigrant food such as hot dogs and pizza became American food. A must-read for anyone interested in food, ethnicity and culture.

In "Breaking Bread: Recipes and Stories from Immigrant Kitchens" (University of California Press, 2010), chef and English professor Lynne Christy Anderson has collected stories about the power of food to recall a lost world for those who have left much behind. She leads us around Boston and its suburbs to a Lebanese family that cuts grape leaves at the nearby arboretum, a house painter from Cote d'Ivoire who makes a mean fish dish, a nurse's aide who clings to the groundnut stew of her native Ghana.

Anderson also turns the pages over to her subjects, who offer advice (only talk to your husband when he's got a full stomach) and reminiscences (rum coke, and dancing always fueled cooking in Xotchil Gaarn's Venezuela home) that informs and delights.

Told with verve and voice, Joseph Dabney's "The Food, Folklore and Art of Lowcountry Cooking" (Sourcebooks, 2010) offers an exhaustive (and sometimes exhausting) history of this Southern cuisine and the immigrants who influenced it. More than 130 recipes for items like she-crab soup, chicken bog, and shad roe with grits are sprinkled lightly through text from locals, home cooks and well-known chefs in the coastal regions of South Carolina and Georgia. A thorough and informative look at this very specific Southern cuisine.

Joan Aller's "Cider Beans, Wild Greens and Dandelion Jelly" (Andrews McMeel, 2010) tackles the foods of southern Appalachia with credit to the native and immigrant cultures that spawned them. Cherokee Indians originally cultivated the area from East Tennessee across the northern parts of the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, and were closely followed by the Spanish, African slaves and Europeans from other American colonies.

Primarily a cookbook, "Cider Beans" offers more than 100 recipes for items like Cherokee pepper pot soup made of beef bones and bell peppers; an African chicken-cabbage soup sweetened with Vidalias and tomato; German cabbage and meat pies called bierocks; and chocolate gravy from the Melungeons, a tribal people possibly descended from Iberians who fled the inquisition.

An outlier in this category but fascinating nonetheless is "What I Eat: Around the World in 80 Diets" (Ten Speed Press, 2010). Photographer Peter Menzel and writer Faith D'Alusio — whose award winning 2006 "Hungry Planet: What the World Eats" launched its own genre — offer a coffee table-sized photo essay documenting what 80 individuals in 30 countries eat in a single day.

Organized according to the number of calories consumed — from least to most — the photos take you from a Maasai herdsman in Kenya posing next to her 800 calories worth of corn porridge, banana, tea and water to the 12,300-calorie fiasco of the British snacker, ballooned by cookies, chips, Twix bars and bacon sandwiches. A commentary on food, health and culture that would communicate across any lines, even without the absorbing text and stunning statistics.

An elegant, fast – and child-friendly – dessert

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

The problem? An abundance of pears and no real desire to eat them raw.

The solution? An easy dessert that took five minutes of my time and was both elegant enough to serve to company but child-friendly enough to prompt my 6-year-old to demand seconds. And to ask for it again for breakfast the next day. And lunch.

I worked no real magic. I simply peeled the pears then used a melon baller to scoop out the core (working up from the bottom). I then poached the pears in a bath of red wine (the remnants of several open bottles), some spices and sugar.

That's it. The pears were beautiful and delicious.

For my son, I simply served them as is. I also could have tipped the pears on their side and placed a scoop of vanilla ice cream in the cavity. For company, I scattered some crumbled blue cheese and toasted walnuts over and around them and added a dollop of creme fraiche.

They also can be prepped ahead, then refrigerated. Either briefly warm them in a 300-degree oven, or serve them chilled.

If you don't happen to have any bottles of red wine kicking around, opt for something in the $5 to $10 range.

Think beyond cheese sauce for dressing up broccoli

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

When it comes to broccoli, there really is flavor beyond cheese sauce.

Not that cheese sauce is bad way to mask some of the sulfurous smell and assertive flavor many people object to with this wonderfully healthy vegetable. But there are healthier ways of dressing it up, as in this savory, salty sauce made from olives, capers and lemon juice.

While broccoli is always available, it is at its best late summer through early winter. Look for bunches that are dark green with tightly closed florets. Avoid broccoli that is limp, yellowing or has too strong an odor.

Preparation is simple — rinse the broccoli thoroughly and separate the stalks from the florets. The stalks are edible and flavorful, but you should use a vegetable peeler or sharp paring knife to remove the

The salty sauce of this recipe will make this healthy vegetable more palatable to those who object to broccoli's sulfurous smell and assertive flavor.

tough outer skin.

To achieve the most evenly cooked broccoli, always cut the florets into consistently sized pieces. Since the tougher stalks take longer to cook, it is best to cut them into even smaller pieces.

To steam, put broccoli in a steamer basket set over a large saucepan filled with about an inch of water. Cover and steam until tender, about 3 to 6 minutes.

To microwave, put about 4 cups of stalks and florets in a microwave-safe bowl. Add a few tablespoons of water, then cover and microwave on high for 3 to 5 minutes, or until the broccoli is just tender.

Roasting concentrates the flavors. Toss the broccoli in a tablespoon of extra-virgin olive oil and roast at 450 degrees until tender and the bottoms are well browned, about 10 to 12 minutes.

BROCCOLI WITH LEMON, OLIVE AND CAPER SAUCE

Start to finish: 15 minutes. Servings: 4 to 6.

4 cups fresh broccoli florets
1 teaspoon butter
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 clove garlic, minced
1/4 cup sliced Kalamata olives

3 tablespoons lemon juice, or to taste
1 tablespoon capers, rinsed
Ground black pepper, to taste

In a medium saucepan fitted with a steamer basket, bring 1 inch of water to a boil. Steam the broccoli until tender-crisp, 4 to 5 minutes. Transfer the broccoli to a serving bowl, cover and set aside.

Meanwhile, in a small saucepan over medium heat, melt the butter. Add the oil and garlic and cook, stirring, for 1 minute. Stir in the olives, lemon juice and capers and cook until heated through, 1 to 2 minutes.

Pour the sauce over the reserved broccoli and season with black pepper. Toss well to coat.

Time to introduce yourself to TOMATILLOS

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

You've probably looked right at them dozens of times, those greenish, papery, lantern-like things in the bin next to the tomatoes at the market. And then you probably moved on.

They're called tomatillos and they are worth stopping for.

Tomatillos can be used raw or cooked much as you would a tomato. The berry inside the husk can range from marble- to plum-size and has solid, seedy flesh. Raw, they taste a bit like green apple with hints of lemon or lime, but cooking mellows the flavor.

Nutritionally speaking, tomatillos have roughly the same amount of vitamin C as a red tomato and a bit more potassium.

When selecting tomatillos choose smooth, green fruits (when they start to turn yellow they lose some of their tanginess), free of bruises and blemishes. The husks should be clean and dry.

To prepare tomatillos you will need to peel away the husk and wash away the sticky resin on the skin.

For a touch of tartness, consider adding chopped tomatillos to your favorite greens. Or to make a salad where they're more prominently featured, combine wedges of tomatillos and tomatoes with slivered red onion, then toss in a dressing made with extra-virgin olive oil and lime juice spiked with chopped cilantro and red pepper flakes.

This mellow salsa verde is made by pureeing char-grilled tomatillos, sweet onion and poblano chili peppers. The recipe can be made spicier or milder by varying the type of chili pepper you use.

Serve this green salsa with chips for dipping, or mash it up with avocado and additional lime juice for an easy guacamole.

To make huevos verde, melt some shredded Jack cheese on corn tortillas and top with a couple poached or fried eggs and a liberal amount of the salsa. Serve with black beans and additional warm corn tortillas for scooping.

CHARRED TOMATILLO, POBLANO AND SWEET ONION SALSA

Start to finish: 50 minutes (10 minutes active). Servings: 4 (1/2 cup each).

- 1 pound tomatillos, husks removed, rinsed
- 1 medium sweet onion, cut into 1/2-inch-thick slices
- 1 small poblano chili pepper
- 2 tablespoons rice vinegar
- 1 tablespoon lime juice
- 1 to 2 teaspoons honey, to taste
- 1/8 teaspoon salt, or to taste

Heat a gas grill to high or light a charcoal fire.

Grill the tomatillos, onion slices and poblano, turning occasionally, until soft and charred, 10 to 15 minutes. Remove the vegetables as they are ready. Set aside to cool for about 15 minutes.

Peel, seed and stem the poblano. Coarsely chop the onion.

In the bowl of a food processor, combine the tomatillos, onion, poblano, vinegar, lime juice, honey and salt. Pulse until the mixture is well blended but still a bit chunky. Serve warm or cold.

Don't be afraid of the heat

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Q: My favorite Food Network chef, Ina Garten, loves to roast. Recently, she roasted tomatoes at 450 degrees. Sometimes she goes as high as 500 degrees. That's a little scary to me. Is it possible to roast at a lower temperature for a longer period and have similar results?

A: There's more than one approach to roasting. The one to use depends on the effect you're after.

High-heat roasting got a lot of attention when Barbara Kafka published her book "Roasting" in 1995, and it has returned recently as a popular method for turkey. The advantage to high-heat roasting, particularly with meat and poultry, is that it can crisp the skin, promote browning, and keep in a lot of moisture. It also speeds up cooking and saves time.

In slower roasting at a lower temperature, food has more time to dry out. That can be bad for something like roast poultry, but it can be good for things like roasted vegetables. It intensifies flavors and allows more caramelization. In his book "Think Like a Chef," New York chef (and "Top Chef" host) Tom Colicchio advocates the slower approach as a way to build flavor.

Then there's a middle path, combining both high and low heat. That's an approach I often take, particularly with meat and poultry: Start at a high temperature to crisp the skin and start releasing juices, then reduce the temperature to let the food finish more slowly.

If you decide to go with the high-heat method, there's no reason to be afraid. Ovens are built to handle heat. But as I have learned the hard way, you do need to make sure your oven is clean and use your exhaust fan. It also helps to put the food on a rack and make sure there's some water in the bottom of the pan. Otherwise, you'll find yourself running to turn off the smoke detector.

Can home cooking be hazardous to your health?

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press writer

Could your kitchen at home pass a restaurant inspection?

New researcher suggests that at least one in seven home kitchens would flunk the kind of health inspection commonly administered to restaurants.

The small study from California's Los Angeles County found that only 61 percent of home kitchens would get an A or B if put through the rigors of a restaurant inspection. At least 14 percent would fail — not even getting a C.

"I would say if they got below a C, I'm not sure I would like them to invite me to dinner," said Dr. Jonathan Fielding, director of the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health.

In comparison, nearly all Los Angeles County restaurants — 98 percent — get A or B scores each year.

The study is believed to be one of the first to offer a sizable assessment of food safety in private homes. But the researchers admit the way it was done is hardly perfect.

The results are based not on actual inspections, but on an Internet quiz taken by about 13,000 adults.

So it's hard to use it to compare the conditions in home kitchens to those in restaurants, which involve trained inspectors giving objective assessments of dirt, pests, and food storage and handling practices.

What's more, experts don't believe the study is representative of all households, because people who are more interested and conscientious about food safety are more likely to take the quiz.

"You'll miss a big population who don't have home computers or just really don't care" about the cleanliness of their kitchens, said Martin Bucknavage, a food safety specialist with Penn State University's Department of Food Science.

Food safety quiz: bit.ly/aMyldw
CDC publication: www.cdc.gov/mmwr

A more comprehensive look would probably find that an even smaller percentage of home kitchens would do well in a restaurant inspection, he suggested.

In 2006, the county health department began a home kitchen self-inspection program, designed to help consumers learn how to store and prepare food safely. The department also began offering an online quiz with 45 yes or no questions that simulates a restaurant inspection checklist.

People are asked, for example, if their refrigerator temperature is 41 degrees Fahrenheit or lower, whether raw meat is stored below other foods on refrigerator shelves, and whether fruits and vegetables are always thoroughly rinsed before they are eaten.

The study is based on quizzes taken through 2008.

Overall, 34 percent got an A, meaning they correctly answered at least 90 percent of the questions. Another 27 percent got a B, 25 percent a C, and 14 percent failed to score at least a 70.

An estimated 87 million cases of food-borne illness occur in the United States each year, including 371,000 hospitalizations and 5,700 deaths, according to an Associated Press calculation that uses a CDC formula and recent population estimates.

Many outbreaks that receive publicity are centered on people who got sick after eating at a restaurant, catered celebration or large social gathering. In this summer's outbreak linked to salmonella in eggs, several illnesses were first identified in clusters among restaurant patrons.

But experts believe the bulk of food poisonings are unreported illnesses from food prepared at home.

The study is being published in Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, a publication of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Coffee can do more than wake you in the morning.

Here are some other uses suggested by online retailer Coffee.org:

- Remove odors from your hands from cooking with foods such as garlic or fish by washing your hands and then rubbing a few coffee beans in them.
- Freshen kitchen drains by pouring in a mixture of used coffee grounds and boiling water.
- Combine used coffee grounds with a little water to create a cleaning paste for stain-resistant surfaces such as greasy kitchen surfaces.
- Sprinkle used coffee grounds on the soil around acid-loving plants, or add the grounds to your compost pile.
- Suck on a coffee bean to freshen your breath.

A shrimp dinner in 35 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

Skewers keep broiled shrimp in line, so to speak. Here, a "semplice" (simple) treatment keeps the timing within the boundaries of a busy weeknight, even with peeling and deveining. The mint is a nice, unexpected touch.

Panko bread crumbs can be used for this dish, but they don't brown quite as nicely as plain dried bread crumbs.

You'll need 16 to 20 small or medium wooden or metal skewers.

If you have the time, let the shrimp marinate in the garlic mixture for up to 30 minutes. You'll be rewarded with even more flavor, and the dish still will take less than an hour to prepare, start to finish.

Serve with slices of ripe tomato. Adapted from "La Cucina Semplice," by Alba Carbonaro Johnson (Go Dutch, 2009).

AMALFI-STYLE SHRIMP

4 servings

- 1 pound large shell-on shrimp (thoroughly defrosted if using frozen)
- 2 to 3 medium cloves garlic
- 12 to 16 mint leaves
- Kosher salt

- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1 or 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1-ounce block Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
- 3/4 cup fine plain dried bread crumbs (may substitute plain panko bread crumbs)
- 2 lemons

If you are using wooden skewers, soak them in water for 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, peel and devein the shrimp, leaving the tails on if you prefer to eat the shrimp by hand. Pat them dry with paper towels and place them in a quart-size resealable plastic food storage bag.

Mince the garlic and add it to the bag. Finely chop the mint leaves, reserving a third of the chopped leaves for garnish; add the rest of the mint to the bag. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Drizzle in the oil as needed. Seal the bag and massage the contents to coat the shrimp evenly. Refrigerate for at least 10 minutes.

Position an oven rack 6 to 8 inches from the broiler element; preheat the broiler. Have a rimmed baking sheet at hand.

Grate the cheese (to yield 1/4 cup) into a wide, shallow bowl, then add the bread crumbs. Shake off any excess marinade from the shrimp, then press them into the cheese-bread-crumbs mixture to coat them on both sides.

Thread 4 or 5 shrimp onto each skewer, laying the soaked skewers flat on the baking sheet as you work. Broil for 2 minutes on each side, so the coating is golden and the shrimp turn pink. Be careful not to overcook.

While the shrimp are in the oven, cut 2 lemons into wedges for serving.

Arrange the skewers on individual plates; top with any stray breadcrumbs from the baking sheet. Squeeze a few of the lemon wedges over each skewer and sprinkle with the remaining chopped mint. Serve hot, with the remaining wedges passed at the table.

Ex-city manager among eight arrested in California scandal

By John Rogers
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — The mayor and former city manager of Bell were led away in handcuffs Tuesday, charged with six other officials with taking more than $5.5 million from the working-class suburb in a scandal that triggered nationwide outrage and calls for more transparency in government.

Former City Manager Robert Rizzo, Mayor Oscar Hernandez and the other current and former city officials were rounded up during morning raids on their homes that prompted many of their neighbors to burst into cheers.

They were charged with dozens of counts of illegally paying themselves huge salaries in what District Attorney Steve Cooley called a case of “corruption on steroids.”

“They used the tax dollars collected from the hardworking citizens of Bell as their own piggy bank, which they then looted at will,” Cooley told a news conference as he stood next to photos of the eight suspects.

In Bell, where one in six residents lives in poverty, people began honking their horns at the news of the arrests. At City Hall, dozens gathered to laugh and applaud as someone played the Queen song “Another One Bites the Dust.”

“From day one, we’ve been asking, ‘Why aren’t these individuals in jail?’” said resident Christina Garcia. “I think today everyone’s feeling vindicated for everything they’ve been doing.”

Resident Violeta Alvarez, 31, said: “I got so excited that, oh my God, I couldn’t breathe. ... I’m happy. I have tears of joy in my eyes.”

Rizzo, who was making nearly $800,000 a year, was booked on 53 counts of misappropriation of public funds and conflict of interest. Messages left at his home and with his attorney were not returned.

He and the others were scheduled to be arraigned Wednesday, with officials seeking bail amounts ranging from $3.2 million for Rizzo to $130,000 for former Councilman George Cole. The amounts were based on how much authorities believe each person took.

Others taken into custody were former assistant city manager Angela Spaccia, Vice Mayor Teresa Jacobo, council members George Mirabal and Luis Artiga and former council member Victor Bello.

Spaccia was making $376,288, and four of the five City Council members were paying themselves nearly $100,000 a year.

“I seen them take out Mirabal in handcuffs,” longtime resident Hassan Mourad said after the arrests. “I seen them drag him out.”

At the mayor’s house, police briefly used a battering ram when Hernandez didn’t immediately come to the door.

Former Police Chief Randy Adams, who was also scrutinized in the salary scandal, was not arrested.

Cooley, who knew Adams when he was the police chief in Glendale, said there was no evidence Adams illegally obtained his $457,000 annual salary. The figure was $150,000 more than the Los Angeles chief of police gets paid.

“Being paid excessive salaries is not a crime,” Cooley said. “Illegally obtaining those salaries is a crime.”

Authorities said Rizzo made $4.3 million by paying himself through different employment contracts that were not approved by the City Council. Meanwhile, council members paid themselves a combined $1.25 million for what Cooley called “phantom meetings” of various city boards and agencies.

Rizzo also was accused of giving $1.9 million in loans to himself, Spaccia, Hernandez, Artiga and dozens of others.

Italian police seize $30M from Vatican in probe

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press writer

VATICAN CITY — Italian authorities seized $30 million from a Vatican bank account Tuesday and said they have begun investigating top officials of the Vatican bank in connection with a money-laundering probe.

The Vatican said it was “perplexed and surprised” by the investigation.

Italian financial police seized the money as a precaution and prosecutors placed the Vatican bank’s chairman and director general under investigation for alleged mistakes linked to violations of Italy’s anti-laundering laws, news reports said.

The investigation is not the first trouble for the bank — formally known as the Institute for Works of Religion. In the 1980s, it was involved in a major scandal that resulted in a banker, dubbed “God’s Banker” because of his close ties to the Vatican, being found hanging from Blackfriars Bridge in London.

The Vatican expressed full trust in the chairman of the bank, Ettore Gotti Tedeschi, and his director-general, identified by the Vatican directory as Paolo Cipriani. It said the bank had been working for a while to make its finances more transparent to comply with anti-terrorism and anti-money-laundering regulations.

“The Holy see is perplexed and surprised by the initiatives of the Rome prosecutors, considering the data necessary is already available at the Bank of Italy,” it said in a statement.

Gotti Tedeschi told state-run RAI television that he was “humiliated and mortified” by news of the probe, which he said had arrived just as he was implementing new transparency procedures at the bank.

News reports circulated more than a year ago that Italian investigators were scrutinizing millions of euros worth of Vatican bank transactions to see if they violated money-laundering regulations.

In Tuesday’s case, police seized the money from a Vatican bank account at the Rome branch of Credito Artigiano Spa, according to news agencies ANSA and Apcom. The bulk of the money, $26 million, was destined for JP Morgan in Frankfurt, with the remainder going to Banca del Fucino.

Helicopter crash kills 9 NATO troops in Afghanistan

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press writer

KABUL, Afghanistan — A helicopter carrying international troops crashed in a rugged section of southern Afghanistan, killing nine service members in the deadliest such incident in four years for coalition forces.

A “large number” of Americans were among the dead, according to a senior military official in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The official was not authorized to discuss the matter publicly.

One other coalition service member, an Afghan National Army soldier and a U.S. civilian were wounded in Tuesday’s crash.

The coalition would not disclose the helicopter’s mission, and the cause of the crash was not immediately clear. NATO said there were no reports of enemy fire in the early morning hours in the Daychopan district of Zabul province, where the crash took place.

However, Taliban spokesman Qari Yousef Ahmadi told The Associated Press by telephone that insurgents shot down the helicopter. The Taliban often exaggerate their claims and sometimes take credit for accidents.

“The Taliban are not involved in this crash at all,” said Mohammad Jan Rasoolyar, a spokesman for the provincial governor in Zabul.

“The investigation is still going on, but the military told us that the helicopter crashed due to technical problems.”

Another coalition service member died following a separate explosion in southern Afghanistan, the coalition said. No further details were available.

So far this year, at least 524 U.S. and NATO forces have been killed in Afghanistan, surpassing the 504 killed last year. This year has been the deadliest for international forces since the war began in 2001.

Tuesday’s helicopter crash took place not far from Chanaryan village, but there was no damage to buildings, Rasoolyar said. U.S. and Romanian forces make up most of the NATO contingent in Zabul province.

Scientists find theater box at Herod’s palace

By Aisha Mohammed
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — Israeli archaeologists have excavated a lavish, private theater box in a 400-seat facility at King Herod’s winter palace in the Judean desert, the team’s head said Tuesday.

Ehud Netzer of Jerusalem’s Hebrew University said the room provides further evidence of King Herod’s famed taste for extravagance.

Herod commissioned

Roman artists to decorate the theater walls with elaborate paintings and plaster moldings around 15 B.C., Netzer said.

Its upper portions feature paintings of windows overlooking a river and a seascape with a large sailboat.

This is the first time this painting style has been found in Israel, Netzer said.

Herod was the Jewish proxy ruler of the Holy Land under Roman occupation from 37 to 4 B.C. He is known for his extensive building throughout the area.

The team first excavated the site — sitting atop a man-made hill 2,230 feet high — in 2007. Netzer described the site as a kind of “country club,” with a pool, baths and gardens fed by pools and aqueducts.

But archaeological evidence shows the theater’s life was short-lived, Netzer said.

Builders deliberately destroyed it to preserve the conic shape of the man-made hill.

After Herod’s death in the 1st century B.C., the complex became a stronghold for Jewish rebels fighting Roman occupation, and the palace site suffered significant battle damage before it was destroyed by Roman soldiers in A.D. 71, a year after they razed the Second Temple in Jerusalem.

Minico midfielder Eduardo Lopez (10) heads the ball while Twin Falls' Ricky Sanchez defends during a Great Basin Conference boys soccer match Tuesday at Minico High School.

Call's header lifts Minico past T.F.

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minico took the lead, lost it, regained it and then nearly lost it again in its 3-2 win over Twin Falls on Tuesday.

Senior Bryant Call's header off a corner kick in the 74th minute lifted Minico, which moved to 6-4-0 overall (3-3-0 Great Basin Conference, 9 pts.).

"We knew (Twin Falls) would be a tough team because they beat us up there, but we knew we could get them here if we played hard enough," said Call. "We just had to come out, be aggressive, pass the ball and play our game."

It was a back-and-forth battle from start to finish, and even after the Spartans took the late lead the contest

"If we could have finished our shots we probably would have taken it back."

— Twin Falls coach Ben Harman

still seemed up for grabs. A majority of the final six minutes plus stoppage time was played on Minico's defensive half as Twin Falls worked for an equalizer that never came.

"If we could have finished our shots we probably would have taken it back," said Twin Falls coach Ben Harman. "I think our guys, once (Minico) scored on us and were up by one, we picked it up then. We should have had it up the whole time."

The Spartans went up 1-0 in the eighth minute as Omar Rojas headed in a cross by Eduardo Lopez.

Twin Falls (4-4-2, 2-3-1, 7 pts.) pulled ahead on back-to-back goals by Nate Goss. On his first score, Goss slipped through the Minico defense in the 15th minute. The second goal came in the 28th when Goss stole the ball from a Spartan defender, took two dribbles and sent a rocket to the back of the net.

Minico dominated second-half play, and Alberto Ramirez made it 2-2 after rebounding and finishing a shot by Enoch Coats in the 47th minute.

The game winner came when Andres Madrigal perfectly placed a corner kick over the top to Call on the back post.

"Andres is one of our leaders on the team and I knew that if I got there, he would place it there and all I had to do was put a head on it," Call said.

Minico coach Armando Tapia credited the victory to his midfield.

"We've been practicing with them because we've been losing a lot of balls in the midfield," Tapia said. "Today they did awesome and really controlled the pace of the game."

Taste of victory

CRHS beats Burley, falls to Filer

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

Canyon Ridge could get used to this winning feeling.

The Riverhawks won their first Great Basin Conference contest of the season, sweeping Burley 25-14, 25-17, 25-14 Tuesday night at a home tri-match.

"We needed that win," said Kelly Ann Buddecke, who had a team-leading seven kills. "It's a great feeling. We're already so much better than we were last year. We've improved so much and are playing together as a team."

Breyana Burk and Keri Schwarz each recorded four blocks to help control the net against the Bobcats and setter Kylee Denney dished out 20 assists.

"It's the biggest relief winning that game," Denney said.

First-year coach Stacy Boer compared the win to the taste of ice cream.

CSI basketball hosts annual coaching clinic

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

NCAA Division I men's basketball coaches are a common site at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium as they recruit Golden Eagle players. But one weekend each year, some of those coaches gather at CSI to share tips and pointers with anyone who'd like to listen.

CSI's sixth annual coaching clinic will be held Saturday at the gym. Southern Miss head coach Larry Eustachy, Idaho State coach Joe O'Brien, College of Idaho coach Rod Jensen and Xavier's associate head coach Pat Kelsey will spend about 60 minutes apiece sharing their insights.

Nearly 100 individuals, including a number of high school coaches, attended in 2009.

"For us a staff we enjoy having these Division I coaches come in and getting a chance to talk to them," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "To make that available to area coaches, people in the Magic Valley and those that come from Boise and Salt Lake, it's a great way for them to ask some of the questions that have been on their mind about how to build a program."

A former Boise State head coach, Jensen was hired in April at College of Idaho and will kick the clinic off at 9 a.m. Saturday. O'Brien, in his fifth year with the Bengals, will go next, followed by Eustachy and Kelsey. Eustachy was previously the head coach at Idaho, Utah State and Iowa State.

CSI's players and coaches will then demonstrate some drills in a practice format. In the past, the clinic has included a dinner, but that is being replaced this year by a social at Applebee's, which is slated for 3 p.m.

Gosar said the social will be "an informal chalk talk" and a chance for clinic participants to ask questions they might not have gotten to during the clinic.

The cost of the clinic $40 and includes lunch. For more information, contact CSI assistant Colby Blaine at 340-7588 or cblaine@csi.edu.

Coming soon: CSI signee Mitch Bruneel completed his LDS mission in the Philippines and flew home on Tuesday night. Gosar said Bruneel will likely join the team early next week. A 6-foot-5 guard out of Eagle High, Bruneel is expected to add some outside shooting to this year's lineup.

Broncos say no signs McKinley was suicidal

By Armie Stapleton
Associated Press writer

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Denver Broncos wide receiver Kenny McKinley, who is thought to have killed himself with a gunshot to the head, had made previous statements about committing suicide, according to a sheriff's investigative report released Tuesday.

The Arapahoe County Sheriff's report quoted one investigator as saying McKinley had been depressed over a knee surgery he had a month ago.

"He had made statements while playing dominoes shortly after the surgery that he should just kill himself," the officer reported. "No one believed he was serious."

The report provided no explanation for the source of the investigator's information.

The report also said McKinley had made statements about not knowing what he would do without football. It said McKinley had flown to South Carolina 10 days earlier to see his young son and had brought him back with him to Denver on Sunday night.

Vick to start at quarterback for Eagles

By Rob Maaddi
Associated Press writer

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Vick earned himself a starting job by being — of all things — a pocket passer.

Vick will take over as the Philadelphia Eagles' No. 1 quarterback, coach Andy Reid said Tuesday, a day after he announced he would go back to Kevin Kolb.

"When someone is playing at the level Michael Vick is playing, you have to give him an opportunity," Reid said. "This isn't about Kevin Kolb's play. You're talking about Michael Vick as one of the best quarterbacks in the NFL right now."

Vick is considered the greatest scrambling quarterback in NFL history, but he won the job over Kolb by demonstrating he no longer has a run-first mentality.

Kolb missed the last six quarters because of a concussion, and Vick played well in his absence. Kolb was cleared to practice and was expected to run the first-team offense on Wednesday.

"Kevin is fine. It's not an injury-related issue," Reid said. "It's not about judging him. He's going to be a championship-caliber quarterback."

Vick threw for 175 yards and one touchdown and ran for 103 yards in a 27-20 season-opening loss to Green Bay. He had 284 yards passing and two TDs in a 35-32 win at Detroit on Sunday.

Halladay earns 20th win

PHILADELPHIA — Roy Halladay became Philadelphia's first 20-game winner in 28 years, Jayson Werth hit a three-run homer and the Phillies increased their lead in the NL East to five games with their ninth straight win, 5-3 over Atlanta on Tuesday night.

Halladay (20-10) allowed three runs and seven hits in seven innings to reach 20 wins for the third time in his career. Hall of Famer Steve Carlton was the last to do it for the Phillies when he won 23 in 1982.

The two-time defending NL champions are 43-15 since July 21, when they trailed the Braves by seven games. They are 17-3 in September.

The Phillies reduced their magic number to clinch the division to six.

REDS 4, BREWERS 3

MILWAUKEE — Edinson Volquez allowed one run over eight innings and Cincinnati held on for the win.

Jim Edmonds homered before hurting himself rounding the bases and the Reds didn't make it easy in the ninth.

Closer Francisco Cordero converted his 38th save, but two runs scored with two outs on two errors when right fielder Jay Bruce made a wild throw that also went through Cordero's legs.

PIRATES 5, CARDINALS 2

PITTSBURGH — Paul Maholm became the latest slumping pitcher to shut down fast-fading St. Louis and Pittsburgh won its season-high fourth straight.

The Pirates remain two losses from their first 100-loss season since 2001, but are 4-0 on a homestand that began with a three-game sweep of Arizona. Pittsburgh hadn't won four straight since a five-game run from Aug. 17-22, 2009, against the Brewers and Reds.

NATIONALS 8, ASTROS 4

WASHINGTON — Ivan Rodriguez hit a tying homer off the left-field pole to spark a seven-run rally with two outs in the bottom of the eighth inning.

Washington trailed 3-0 in the first inning, then 3-1 in the eighth. But Adam Dunn walked and, two outs later, Rodriguez hit his fourth homer, a two-run shot off Felipe Paulino (1-9). After the next two batters reached, pinch-hitter Adam Kennedy hit a go-ahead RBI single.

MARLINS 5, METS 2

MIAMI — Gaby Sanchez hit a tie-breaking three-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning for Florida.

The loss officially eliminated the Mets from playing in the postseason.

Jose Veras (3-2) worked one inning and picked up the win despite losing the lead in the top of the eighth.

GIANTS 1, CUBS 9

CHICAGO — Matt Cain and three relievers combined on a two-hitter, Buster Posey homered and NL West-leading San Francisco beat Carlos Zambrano and the Chicago Cubs.

Cain and Zambrano each pitched six scoreless innings, but the Giants did just enough to prevail. Leading San Diego by a half-game and Colorado by 1½ when the night began, San Francisco finally broke through with one out in the eighth when Posey drove a 3-1 pitch from Andrew Cashner to center field, pumping his fist as he rounded the bases.

AMERICAN LEAGUE TWINS 6, INDIANS 4

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Twins are one game away from the AL Central title.

Denard Span's RBI-single highlighted a four-run eighth inning to rally the Twins to a 6-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians on Tuesday night, reducing their magic number to one.

The Twins trailed 4-2 in the eighth. Delmon Young had an RBI-double and pinch-hitter Jose Morales added the game-tying sacrifice fly before Span's single scored Danny Valencia for the lead. Orlando Hudson added an RBI-double to finish off the burst.

YANKEES 8, RAYS 3

NEW YORK — Nick Swisher homered off James Shields (13-13) to key a five-run burst in the first inning and New York opened a 2½-game lead over the Rays in the AL East.

The Yankees cut their magic number for clinching a playoff spot to three over Boston. The Red Sox lost 9-1 to Baltimore on Tuesday night.

ROYALS 9, TIGERS 6

DETROIT — Mike Aviles drove in three runs, and rookie Jerrod Dyson scored three times for Kansas City.

The Royals, who got three hits from Billy Butler, were aided by three errors by Detroit pitchers — one by starter Armando Galarraga and two by reliever Alfredo Figaro.

ORIOLES 9, RED SOX 1

BOSTON — Ty Wigginton hit a tie-breaking three-run homer in the seventh and Brad Bergesen pitched six strong innings for Baltimore.

Wigginton drove his 21st homer of the season just inside the right field foul pole off Scott Atchison, who came in after Clay Buchholz allowed one unearned run and four hits in six innings.

BLUE JAYS 5, MARINERS 3

TORONTO — Vernon Wells and Travis Snider hit two-run homers and Edwin Encarnacion added a solo shot.

Left-hander Marc Rzepczynski (2-4) gave up two runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings to win for the first time since an Aug. 13 road victory over the Los Angeles Angels. Rzepczynski, who had not won in six starts, walked three and matched a season-high with eight strikeouts.

"Now the kids know the taste of a victory. It's like ice cream, you get that taste and like it and you go and get some more," Boer.

The Riverhawks (1-2 GBC) will have to savor that taste, as they lost their next match 25-21, 25-22 in a spirited affair against Filer.

The Wildcats middle blocking duo of Audrey Croy and Jessica Hughes dominated the net, each recording four blocks to slow down the Riverhawks' attack.

"I thought Audrey played great and really set the tempo for our team," said Filer coach Ed Richards.

Croy also recorded eight kills from her middle blocking position and her passion and aggressiveness helped dig the Wildcats out of a five-point hole late in the second game.

"I'm just really into the game and love to play and love to win. I'm a pretty competitive player," Croy. "I received great passes from my teammates and fortunately I was able to get the kills."

Senior outside hitter McKenzie Jasper also added eight kills and three blocks and Richards praised the play of libero Moriah Boon, who recorded 15 digs.

"She may be the best libero in the region," Richards said.

Filer (7-8-1) beat Burley in three games its first match, winning 21-25, 25-23, 17-15.

The Bobcats (3-7, 2-2) played Filer tough and had a chance to win late in Game 3 when they tied the game at 15.

"Game 3 was a heck of a game," said Burley coach Tiffany Green. "That's the toughest I've seen us play Filer in a long time."

Burley's Stephanie McGill led the team with seven kills and added four blocks from her middle blocker position.

"That was an intense game. It was a lot of fun," McGill said. "We bounced back after our game against Canyon Ridge. I just think we weren't mentally prepared against them."

Canyon Ridge plays Jerome Thursday in another Great Basin Conference matchup.

Rogers is hopeful both players will be ready to go when the season tips off in November.

Five goals, two ejections as Wood River boys soccer team edges by Canyon Ridge

Times-News

Alejandro Garcia scored twice as the Wood River boys soccer team edged Canyon Ridge 3-2 in Hailey on Tuesday, in a tussle that saw both teams end the match with 10 players.

Garcia struck twice in the first half as Wood River took a 2-0 lead into halftime.

Jesse Partida made it 2-1 and then Craig Bartlett scored the equalizer for the Riverhawks but was ejected for taunting during his celebration. Wood River made the man advantage count as Charlie Evans netted the match-winner about 15 minutes later.

Wood River's Trevor Brand, who assisted on Garcia's second goal, was also tossed for unsportsmanlike conduct late in the match.

Dylan Carey had five saves for Wood River, while Bryan Donoso assisted on two of the Wolverines' goals.

Canyon Ridge is at Minico on Thursday, while Wood River hosts Burley.

FILER JV 2, TFCA 0

Twin Falls Christian Academy dropped a 2-0 game to the Filer junior varsity on Tuesday. Ryan Karel scored for Filer on an assist from Sergio Campos, while Wiley Taylor netted a goal set up by Enrique Nunes.

Walking wounded: Two sophomore guards on the CSI women's team continue to miss time with injuries sustained in a collision a couple weeks ago during an outdoor conditioning run. Returning starter Felicity Jones has ligament damage in her wrist and is expected to receive a second opinion today regarding possible surgery.

Preston product Holly Checketts came away from the tumble with a partially torn meniscus and fractures in her leg and kneecap. She is also waiting for a decision regarding surgery. Without surgery, women's coach Randy Rogers said Checketts would be out 2-4 weeks and then wear a brace. Surgery would mean 4-6 weeks on the shelf.

Rogers is hopeful both players will be ready to go when the season tips off in November.

Times-News

Baby steps.

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team took a few in Pendleton, Ore., Tuesday, dominating the first set of its match with Blue Mountain Community College before coasting to a 25-10, 25-18, 21-25, 25-19 victory.

The Golden Eagles (15-4) had just one hitting error in the first set. But that proved to be the best stretch of the match for CSI, which let up and saw the errors creep back into its play.

"It's that whole thing about learning how to finish, protecting every point and every ball," CSI coach Heidi Cartisser said. "We need to learn how to play mistake-free volleyball. The first game was a huge bright spot because (the Timberwolves) were digging balls and there were some rallies but we stayed with it. It's there — we just need to be consistent."

Elisa Brochado led CSI with 15 kills, while Alyssa Everett and Beth Carey shored up the middle with 12 and 11, respectively. Barbara Alcantara shook off her weekend injury and posted 33 assists, while backup setter Sierra Hansen chipped in with 13.

Defensively, Kimberly grad Teighlor Bair had a team-best 14 digs, while Ashleigh Pollard had 13 and Kianna Niu added 12.

CSI opens Scenic West Athletic Conference play Saturday when it hosts in-state rival North Idaho College.

Jets GM says Edwards will play despite arrest

NEW YORK — Braylon Edwards will play in the Jets' next game against the Miami Dolphins. When he gets on the field against New York's AFC East rival is up to Rex Ryan.

General manager Mike Tannenbaum told The Associated Press on Tuesday night that the star wide receiver will be active Sunday night despite being arrested for drunken driving Tuesday morning.

Tannenbaum said that after speaking with Ryan and owner Woody Johnson, the team determined that Edwards won't start but will play in Miami.

"Braylon's actions clearly come under the purview of the league's substance abuse policy," Tannenbaum said. "This is going to have to run its course through the legal system, and any discipline that occurs will be by the league under that program."

Edwards was arraigned on drunken-driving charges after a breath test showed he had a blood-alcohol level twice the legal limit after he was stopped on Manhattan's West Side around 5 a.m. Tuesday, prosecutors said.

New York Jets wide receiver Braylon Edwards is arraigned Tuesday in New York on charges of Driving While Intoxicated.

Bush's broken leg likely will sideline him about six weeks but not the rest of the season, a person familiar with the injury said.

Bush was expected to be examined again Tuesday, according to the person who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the team has not officially updated Bush's condition.

The Saints had the day off after returning early in the morning from their 25-22 Monday night victory at San Francisco. Saints spokesman Greg Bensel said there were no planned updates on Bush's injury.

The bone in Bush's lower right leg was broken when recovered his muffed punt with 6:58 remaining. He had trouble catching the ball at windy Candlestick Park and was injured during the scrum after he dove for the ball and players landed on him.

"Last second it kind of shifted a little bit, just enough for me to drop it," he said. "I tried to recover it and somebody took my leg out. I don't know who it was, what happened or how it happened. I just know my leg got taken out. That's it.

"It hurt like hell," Bush said. "When I got back up and tried to walk on it, it felt terrible."

GIANTS RB JACOBS FINED $10,000 FOR HELMET TOSS
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — New York Giants running back Brandon Jacobs has been fined $10,000 by the NFL for tossing his helmet into the stands against the Indianapolis Colts.

In a statement released by the Giants on Tuesday, Jacobs apologized again for tossing the helmet during the third quarter of the Giants' 38-14 loss on Sunday night.

Jacobs said he had "no business tossing my helmet" and he's "thankful that nobody was hurt."

BYU loses QB Nelson to shoulder injury

PROVO, Utah — BYU says quarterback Riley Nelson is done for the season because of an injury to his right shoulder.

Coach Bronco Mendenhall said in a release Tuesday that Nelson will need surgery on his non-throwing shoulder and be out four to five months. Nelson injured his shoulder in BYU's 34-10 loss at Florida State.

Nelson started the first three games this season and shared time with freshman Jake Heaps, who is now the Cougars' most experienced QB.

"We will miss Riley's leadership, toughness and play-making ability," Mendenhall said in the release. "Unfortunately, injuries are part of football. Riley is a great young man and we will look forward to his return."

Nelson has completed 20-of-40 passes for 205 yards and two touchdowns while adding 148 yards and one touchdown on 31 rushing attempts.

BYU (1-2) is at home Saturday (4 p.m., the mtm.) against Nevada.

LEAVING BIG 12 COSTS NEBRASKA, COLORADO MILLIONS
LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska's departure from the Big 12 will cost the university more than $9 million and Colorado is leaving more than $6 million from the conference behind to join the Pac-10 next year.

The Big 12 and the universities announced settlements on Tuesday in which the conference will withhold millions in distributions.

The Big 12, under its bylaws, had sought to withhold an estimated $19.4 million from Nebraska and between $15-$20 million from Colorado.

"We are pleased that, with this issue behind us, the Big 12 is poised to begin the transition to its exciting future as a 10-member Conference beginning in July," Big 12 commissioner Dan Beebe said in a statement.

Under the settlement mediated by Eric Green of Boston, Nebraska can reduce its penalty to $8.755 million if the Cornhuskers are one of two Big 12 teams to play in a BCS bowl game this season.

Nebraska Chancellor Harvey Perlman said the BCS condition was negotiated because Nebraska would be creating a $4 million to $5 million windfall for the Big 12 if it and another conference team make it to one of the high-profile bowl games.

"We feel the long-term benefits of entering into the Big Ten, both academically and athletically, will make this a very good investment," athletic director Tom Osborne said.

The settlement with Colorado calls for a reduction of $6,863,000 in revenue to the school for this fiscal year.

MSU COACH DANTONIO RELEASED FROM HOSPITAL
EAST LANSING, Mich. — Michigan State's Mark Dantonio was released from the hospital Tuesday, two days after suffering a mild heart attack following a daring overtime win against Notre Dame.

Don Treadwell, the offensive coordinator for the 25th-ranked Spartans, is leading the team in the coach's absence.

"I'm anxious and excited to be home with my family," Dantonio said in a statement released Tuesday night. "I haven't established a timeline for my return, but I have the utmost confidence in Coach Treadwell and the rest of the coaching staff to carry on with business as usual in my absence. I know that I must gradually work

Vick

McNabb was traded to Washington. Kolb struggled in the first half against the Packers in the season opener, but he became the first QB in league history to throw for 300 yards in his first two career starts last year.

Though the Eagles have been grooming Kolb to be the starter since drafting him in the second round in 2007, Vick forced Reid to make a difficult decision by playing better than he did when he was a superstar in Atlanta.

"Michael did an exceptional job and my job is to evaluate the players," Reid said. "It's my obligation to make the proper decision."

Vick's start against the Lions was his first in nearly four years. A three-time Pro Bowl pick during six seasons with the Falcons, Vick missed two seasons while serving an 18-month sentence in federal prison for his role in a dogfighting operation. He signed a two-year contract with the Eagles before last season, then played sparingly behind McNabb and Kolb.

Vick has completed 63.8 percent of his passes and has posted consecutive games with a passer rating above 100 for only the second time in his career.

"His accelerated play was brilliant," Reid said. "This is what I think is right. He's back and maybe even a little better."

The knock on Vick used to be that he moved too quickly through his reads and took off running. He clearly benefited from watching McNabb operate the offense last year, and has excellent teachers in Reid and offensive coordinator Marty Mornhinweg. Vick proved against the Lions that he can be effective in the pocket. Despite getting sacked six times and being under constant pressure, he scrambled enough to buy time and find open receivers.

Given Philadelphia's struggles on the offensive line, Vick's speed and quickness is vital. Kolb has a quick release and can escape pressure, but few quarterbacks have as elusive as Vick.

In 2006, Vick set a record for QBs with 1,039 yards rushing. His 10 career 100-yard rushing games are the most by a QB, and he ranks third behind Randall Cunningham and Steve Young with 4,094 yards rushing.

"I think his play has even exceeded expectations over the last two weeks," Reid said. "Very few quarterbacks can go out and play the way he played the last couple weeks and do the things that he did."

McKinley

Two female friends who were taking care of his son discovered McKinley's body Monday and called 911. Detectives who responded to his home a few miles from the Broncos headquarters found McKinley's body with a pillow over his head and a semiautomatic pistol on top of the pillow. They also noted a strong odor of freshly burned marijuana, according to the report.

Arapahoe County Coroner Michael Dobersen said Tuesday that McKinley died of a gunshot wound to the head. He said a preliminary investigation "suggests the wound to be self-inflicted."

McKinley's teammates and coaches said Tuesday that they didn't see any hint of the gregarious 23-year-old wide receiver was suicidal. Neither did the players at his alma mater, South Carolina, when he visited there earlier this month.

"I actually saw Kenny a week and a half ago. He was over here picking up some stuff out of his locker," Broncos linebacker Wesley Woodyard said. "He was always a guy that used to love to joke with me and I would joke back and forth with him. But he had a big smile on his face. He just walked out of the building.

"And that's the last thing we remember, that huge smile. Like coach said, he always showed every tooth in his mouth, just smiling and being happy."

This is the third time in four years the Broncos have had to deal with the death of a teammate under stunning circumstances. Cornerback Darrent Williams, 24, was slain in a drive-by shooting on New Year's Day 2007, and three months later running back Damien Nash, 24, collapsed and died after a charity basketball game in St. Louis.

Broncos coach Josh McDaniels said in a tearful news conference Tuesday that nobody with the Broncos sensed any warning signs from McKinley about his state of mind.

"We've all seen him recently. He's been the same person every time we see him. Liked junk food and chips and things like that," McDaniels said. "He was in the cafeteria, or in the training room, when we were seeing him the last so many weeks here. Nothing that would alarm us to anything like this."

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 22, the 265th day of 2010. There are 100 days left in the year. Autumn arrives at 11:09 p.m. EDT.

Today's Highlight:

On Sept. 22, 1776, during the Revolutionary War, Capt. Nathan Hale, 21, was hanged as a spy by the British in New York.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1761, Britain's King George III and his wife, Charlotte, were crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln issued the preliminary Emancipation Proclamation, declaring all slaves in rebel states should be free as of Jan. 1, 1863.

In 1927, Gene Tunney successfully defended his heavyweight boxing title against Jack Dempsey in the famous "long-count" fight in Chicago.

In 1938, the musical comedy revue "Hellzapoppin," starring Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson, began a three-year run on Broadway.

In 1960, the independent Republic of Mali was proclaimed.

In 1964, the musical "Fiddler on the Roof" opened on Broadway, beginning a run of 3,242 performances.

In 1975, Sara Jane Moore attempted to shoot President Gerald R. Ford outside a San Francisco hotel, but missed. (Moore served 32 years in prison before being paroled on Dec. 31, 2007.)

In 1980, the Persian Gulf conflict between Iran and Iraq erupted into full-scale war that lasted nearly eight years.

In 1985, rock and country music artists participated in "FarmAid," a concert staged in Champaign, Ill. to help the nation's farmers.

In 1989, songwriter Irving Berlin died in New York City at age 101.

Ten years ago: President Bill Clinton directed the release of 30 million barrels of oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the government's emergency stockpile. Kraft Foods recalled all taco shells sold nationwide in supermarkets under the Taco Bell brand after tests confirmed they were made with StarLink, a genetically engineered corn not approved for human consumption.

Five years ago: Hurricane Rita, weakened to Category 4 status, closed on the Texas coast, sending hundreds of thousands of people fleeing on a frustratingly slow, bumper-to-bumper exodus. John Roberts' nomination as U.S. chief justice cleared the Senate Judiciary Committee on a bipartisan vote of 13-5.

One year ago: President Barack Obama, visiting New York, brought together Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas for their first three-way meeting. Al-Qaida released a 106-minute long video predicting President Obama's downfall at the hands of the Muslim world.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"They tell me when the fleeting charm Of novelty is o'er, Thou'lt turn away with careless brow And think of me no more."

— Emma Embury

Some bridge books totally transcend the test of time. Others just need to be brought up to date to reflect bidding changes of the last two decades. Our thanks go to Ron Klinger of Australia who updated the classic "The Mistakes You Make at Bridge" by Terence Reese and Roger Trezel.

This is a book with something for everyone. It concentrates on the errors even experienced players commit from time to time, and a frequent flip through should keep your game well honed, no matter what your level of ability.

In today's deal, North asked for the trump queen, then took a stab at the spade grand slam. After drawing trumps in two rounds, what do you do next?

Did you, in a moment of aberration, discard the club jack on the third diamond, cash the heart ace, and run the spades, hoping for a miracle in hearts or a squeeze? If so, down you go!

A far better chance exists — namely, that either the heart queen drops doubleton, or that hearts divide 3-3. Accordingly you must take the chances in the right order. After drawing trumps, cash the ace and king of hearts. If the queen has failed to appear, continue with the three top diamonds and discard not the club jack, but the heart jack, on the third diamond. Then ruff a heart. With hearts breaking 3-3, dummy is re-entered in trumps, and only now is the club jack jettisoned — on the 13th heart.

ANSWER: This double is for take-out, suggesting five spades and relatively short hearts. North rates to have three cards in each minor, or to be planning to correct a bid in clubs to two diamonds to show something akin to five spades and four diamonds. For the time being, simply bid two clubs and await developments, if any.

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

DEAR ABBY: My mother passed away two years ago, and her first great-grandchild will be born in less than two months. I had hoped when I was still in my 30s to have a child of my own, so I had Mom crochet me a baby set — sweater, booties, cap and blanket. Sadly, motherhood for me was not to be.

Do you think this baby set should go to the firstborn great-grandchild, or to Mom's favorite grandchild's children? The color is gender-neutral. Should I perhaps "loan" it to each of the great-grandchildren when they arrive to ensure that it will be maintained as a family heirloom? I paid for all the materials and Mom's time in creating these items. I feel it would be selfish not to share them.

— SOON-TO-BE-GREAT-AUNT

DEAR SOON-TO-BE-GREAT-AUNT: If you wish to establish that the baby set will become a family heirloom, stipulate that it is your intention that it be shared among the family members as more children come along. I do not recommend playing favorites with it, because to do so could create resentment.

However, it is important that you understand that once the baby set is given, it will be out of your control. There are no guarantees that it won't be damaged or hoarded. So unless you are ready to let go of it emotionally, don't give it away.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about a random act of kindness. Last night my husband and I went out to dinner with our two small children. He's in the Army and wore his uniform because he had gotten off late and he didn't want to keep the kids from eating while he changed.

While we waited for our meal to be served, our waiter came to us and said it was our "lucky night." The couple seated next to us was paying for the entire meal. Things like this have happened to my husband before — with small lunches or drinks — but never something as large as dinner for four. The gesture was touching and thoughtful, and made more special by the fact that it was the woman's birthday. That she thought of someone else on "her" day made me smile. We only got the gentleman's name — it was Russell, like our son's — but not hers. We want to express our gratitude to her. And we hope her birthday was as delightful as our evening was, thanks to her.

— TOUCHED BY HER KINDNESS IN FORT HUACHUCA, ARIZ.

DEAR TOUCHED: I'm sure it was. Happy people like to spread the joy around. And thank you for reminding me and my readers how much an expression of gratitude to our members of the military can mean to those who receive one.

DEAR ABBY: I have a beautiful 2-month-old daughter, and I like to dress her in little pants and shirts rather than dresses. Often these clothes are in gender-neutral colors — yellow, green and, yes, sometimes blue.

Whenever she's wearing something other than pink, people assume she's a boy and say things like, "Oh, what a handsome little guy!" or, "Hi, big boy!" How would you suggest I respond to these people? Should I ignore them and go on with my errands or correct them? I hope that by reading this people will think before they assume a baby's gender based on the color of his/her clothing.

— ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: They may or may not. The next time it happens, smile at the person and say, "It's a girl!"

IF SEPTEMBER 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You will be saved from making a costly mistake by a happy set of circumstances. Your business skills are lacking during the next several weeks, so you might as well take a vacation or spend extra time with your hobbies. Between December and the end of February, your popularity might be a prominent factor, so be sure to get a new diary to jot down all your social engagements. In March you might experience what will turn out to be a permanent change, but it will be a change for the better even if you won't be able to tell at the time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't let personal ambitions cause you to shirk social responsibilities and ignore the needs of others. Taking some time to chew the fat with others could provide new ideas and insights to help your cause.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Suit up with your battle armor. Conflicts and confrontations are certain, as people just can't seem to figure you out. Don't compromise your views just to appease someone else's ego. Stand firm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can't do it all alone. Don't be afraid to ask an experienced friend or mentor for advice. You may not hear what you hoped to hear, but the words still hold merit. It is not a good time for opening up the wallet.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Out of sight, out of mind. Tensions are running high, but if you don't hear or see it, it doesn't affect you one bit. Focus on taking care of your own responsibilities and leave squabbles for those with nothing better to do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Set your standards high, but at the same time keep them reasonable. Aiming too high could cause hurt feelings with someone who cares. Take time to carefully evaluate plans for a long-term investment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Home is where the heart is. Spend your free hours surrounded with loved ones and enjoy a group activity with mom and dad, the kids, your spouse or merely the usual gang gathered at the old watering hole.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't make a mountain out of a molehill. A situation can be either grave or trivial depending upon your perspective. There's no need for the undue stress created by making a big deal out of nothing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bide your time. Jumping into action at the wrong time could result in an epic failure. Gather all facts and cover all the angles before making your move. You are likely to be disappointed with spending choices.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): No one will know what you are thinking if you don't tell them. Unless you are hanging out with a gang of clairvoyants, speak your mind and let everyone know exactly where you stand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. Your sensible nature will have you wisely counting every penny. You may not be rich, but a full piggy bank is invaluable for the peace of mind it provides.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Love is a many-splendored thing but, just is often a temporary lapse in judgment. That new hookup could stir your heart or desires. Hold off on making any commitments and keep it casual.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid snap judgments. Make sure you hear all the facts from both sides before leaning one way or the other. Understanding can be reached only if one is willing to listen to the needs and concerns of others.
