Lawmakers: Lean times still ahead for Idaho

By Ben Botkin Times-News writer

> There's no question that the state budget will dominate the 2011 legislative session.

Lean times are still ahead, and with state reserves drying up, lawmakers will face tough choices without the advantage of federal stimulus funding to patch the budget.

But other major issues will come up too, including a look at improving how the state collects sales taxes from online purchases. Legislators also expect urban renewal reform to be on the agenda.

Both issues came up in the 2010 session as various bills that died. Area legislators mentioned them again at a panel presentation about the 2011 session on Wednesday at the Idaho Chamber Alliance Regional Legislative Policy Summit in Twin Falls, which was sponsored by the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce.

Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls and a member of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, has been at the forefront of both the urban renewal and online sales tax issues. Smith is interested in getting Idaho to the table in discussions with the Streamlined Sales Tax Project, a compact of 22 states that want to streamline the process of states collecting sales tax on purchases made by their residents.

Smith said that without a change, Idaho businesses are at an unfair disadvantage with Internet vendors. Estimates from the Idaho State Tax Commission and the compact organization show a potential $12 million to $30 million gain in revenue, he said. But House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said he's kept track of his online purchases to see how many charge the tax.

Fifty-nine percent of those running in a statewide race this polled said they oppose the therace.

For parents paying higher fees "You have to consider Luna the for school activities as their children funnel into fuller classrooms, interest in the election seems to have grown sooner than usual, said Sherri Wood, president of the Idaho Education Association.

> "I think what has happened with the public education cuts is parents – at least those who have enrolled their children in schools - have sort of gotten a jump on the political season," Wood said.

> Laurie Boeckel, legislative vice president for the Idaho Parent Teacher Association, also said that there's a high level of interest in Olson.

"Our members are extremely concerned," Wood said. "They want an educator leading our schools and they believe that someone like Stan Olson, who has spent his life and his career in education, knows what it's like to be in a classroom, knows what it's like to work with children on a daily basis."

Wiley Dobbs, superintendent of Twin Falls School District, said that the data from the survey's questions about education funding reflects the sentiments he hears in monthly meetings with parent-teacher associations.

Proposed Medicaid rule change could impact special-needs children

By Laura Lundquist Times-News writer

Facing a shrinking Medicaid budget, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare has developed a plan to change the way people spend those few remaining dollars. already-limited Idaho school funds.

On Sept. 1, Health and Welfare released a final version of a proposal to change the way Idaho education and community-service classifies two childhood disability programs. The Developmental Therapy and Intensive Behavioral Intervention programs help Medicaid-qualified children who have developmental problems and learning disabilities. Medicaid reimburses public schools for the extra care these children need, and have allowed many such children to join their peers in classrooms.

The proposed rule would change the two programs into "waivered services," which the federal government would not fund in a school setting under Medicaid, But it may do so by imposing on IDHW spokesman Tom Shanahan said. Shanahan said the rule change is "cost neutral," allowing children a wider range of options, including respite care, parental options, for the same cost. But the only way that can happen is to get less of any one program.

"People can still get DT or IBI; it just has to happen after school," Shanahan said.

Higher ed budget: Half full or half empty?

By Kelsey Husky

Moscow-Pullman Daily News

MOSCOW of Idaho University administrator expressed surprise at the tepid support for increased higher education funding in a recent poll of 625 prospective Idaho voters, while the top official at Lewis-Clark State College found it "reasonable."

The poll, sponsored by the Times-News and six other daily newspapers, shows 42 percent of Idahoans think state funding for higher education is "about right." Thirty-five percent think it's too low, while 14 percent think it's too high.

Keith Ickes, executive director of planning and budget at the U of I in Moscow, said he's surprised by the findings.

He said the current eco-A nomic environment is reflected in the results, and as salaries and jobs return, he hopes people are more willing to see greater funding for higher education.

Idaho is looking to be globally competitive, he said, and it can't happen if higher-education funding is reduced. He said global competitors use the dips in funding as an opportunity to get ahead.

Tony Fernandez, interim president of Lewis-Clark State College in Lewiston, said it's "certainly not discouraging" that 35 percent think higher education funding is lacking.

"It shows they've been thinking about (funding)," he said, and people are starting to realize a degree is essential to have in this economy, causing more people to support higher funding.

" ... we are on a better path thanks in no small measure to Larry's wise counsel."
– President Barack Obama after the announcement that his top economic adviser, Lawrence Summers, plans to leave the White House at the end of the year

EDITORIAL

It should be hard to tamper with the Constitution

ught it to be easier to change the U.S. Constitution? Not on your life. That's why U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick, D-Idaho, is wrong to back a congressional resolution that advocates allowing states to petition Congress to call constitutional conventions addressing specific topics rather than to consider a broader rewrite of the country's founding document.

The legal consensus is that Congress probably does not have the power to limit a convention to a single amendment or a single subject, because

Our view: Idaho Congressman Walt Minnick should rethink his support for a measure that would make amending the U.S. Constitution easier.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues. the language of Article V of the Constitution leaves no discretion to Congress. So as it stands, if a constitutional convention is summoned, the entire Constitution is fair game for change.

That makes it more difficult to amend our national charter, and that's as it should be.

The rule discourages wingnuts who are keen, for example, to repeal the 17th Amendment because the Second Amendment might also be on the table for reconsideration.

Frankly, we don't want to make it simpler for temporary passions to foul up the most important document in American history.

And make no mistake, today's hyper-conservatives would do just that in a heartbeat if they had a chance.

The 17th Amendment, which gives citizens — not legislatures — the power to elect U.S. sena-tors? Gone, if some had their way.

The 10th Amendment, which reserves to the federal government powers not specifically allocated to the states? It could be drastically altered, with far-reaching consequences.

The Republican tax racket

K ice middle class you got here," said Mitch McConnell, the Senate minority leader. "It would be a shame if something happened to it."

OK, he didn't actually say that. But he might as well have, because that's what the current confrontation over taxes amounts to. Mr. McConnell, who was selfrighteously denouncing the budget deficit just the other day, now wants to blow that deficit up with big tax cuts for the rich. But he doesn't have the votes. So he's trying to get what he wants by pointing a gun at the heads of middle-class families, threatening to force a jump in their taxes unless he gets paid off with hugely expensive tax breaks for the wealthy.

Most discussion of the tax fight focuses either on the economics or on the politics - both of which suggest that Democrats should hang tough, for their own sakes as well as that of the country. But there's an even bigger issue here – namely, the question of what constitutes acceptable behavior in American political life. Politics ain't beanbag, but there's a difference between playing hardball and engaging in outright extortion, which is what Mr. McConnell is now doing. And if he succeeds, it will set a disastrous precedent.

How did we get to this point? The proximate answer lies in the tactics the Bush administration used to push through tax cuts. The deeper answer lies in the radicalization of the Republican Party, its transformation into a movement willing to put the economy and the nation at risk for the sake of partisan victory.

So, about those tax cuts: back in 2001, the Bush administration bundled huge tax cuts for wealthy Americans with much smaller tax cuts for the middle class, then pretended that it was mainly offering tax breaks to ordinary families. Meanwhile, it circumvented Senate rules intended to prevent irresponsible fiscal actions rules that would have forced it to find spending cuts to offset its $1.3 trillion tax cut - by putting an expiration date of Dec. 31, 2010, on the whole bill. And the witching hour is now upon us. If Congress doesn't act, the Bush tax cuts will turn into a pumpkin at the end of this year, with tax rates reverting to Clinton-era levels.

In response, President Obama is proposing legislation that would keep tax rates essentially unchanged for 98 percent of Americans but allow rates on the richest 2 percent to rise. But Republicans are threatening to block that legislation, effectively raising taxes on the middle class, unless they get tax breaks for their wealthy friends.

That's an extraordinary step. Almost everyone agrees that raising taxes on the middle class in the middle of an economic slump is a bad idea, unless the effects are offset by other job-creation programs — and Republicans are blocking those, too. So the GOP is, in effect, threatening to plunge the U.S. economy back into " ... this is no time for Democrats to play it safe: if the midterm election were held today, they would lose badly. They need to highlight their differences with the GOP – and it's hard to think of a better place for them to take a stand than on the issue of big give-aways to Wall Street and corporate CEOs."

party that shut down the federal government in 1995 in an attempt to force President Bill Clinton to accept steep cuts in Medicare, and is actively discussing doing the same to Mr. Obama. So, as I said, the deeper explanation of the tax-cut fight is that it's ultimately about a radicalized Republican Party, which accepts no limits on partisanship.

So should Democrats give in?

On the economics, the answer is a clear no. Right now, fears about budget deficits are overblown but that doesn't mean that we should completely ignore deficit concerns. And the GOP plan would add hugely to the deficit about $700 billion over the next decade — while doing little to help the economy. On any kind of cost-benefit analysis, this is an idea not even less for the economy. On the politics, the answer is also a clear no. Polls show that a majority of Americans are opposed to maintaining tax breaks for the rich. Beyond that, this is no time for Democrats to play it safe: if the midterm election were held today, they would lose badly. They need to highlight their differences with the GOP and it's hard to think of a better place for them to take a stand than on the issue of big giveaways to Wall Street and corporate CEO?

But what's even more important is the principle of the thing. Threats to punish innocent bystanders unless your political rivals give you what you want have no legitimate place in democratic politics. Giving in to such threats would be an economic and political mistake, but more important, it would be morally wrong.

Let's put it charitably: George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and John Adams were geniuses of the art of expression of rights of free peoples. Many of our contemporary rabble-rousers aren't. recession unless Democrats pay up.

What kind of political party would engage in that kind of brinksmanship? The answer is the same kind of worth considering. And, by the way, a com-

Kimberly will issue sample bills before change to metered rate

This letter is in regard to the article, which ran Friday, Sept. 17, "Kimberly to soon finalize new water rates," and the correction "Water-bill changes incorrect," which ran Sept. 22.

The original article stated "An existing $6.58 bond and the $16.84 project bond will be a new category of $13.42."

This is inaccurate. The correction was run, which stated the merged bond amount would total $23.42 ($6.58 existing bond and $16.84 new bond), which is correct; however,

The Utility Advisory Committee (a group of volunteer citizens) are still working toward their tiered rate suggestions to present to the council. 5 myths about prostitution arlier this month, Craigslist, the popu-lar provider of Internet classified advertising, halted publication of its "adult services" section. The move followed criticism from law enforcement officials across the country who have accused the site of facilitating prostitution on a massive scale.

Selling sex is one of the fastest-changing businesses. And as a result, most people's perceptions of the sex trade are wildly out of date.

1. Prostitution is an alleyway business.

Only a few big cities, such as Los Angeles and Miami, still have a thriving outdoor street market for sex. New York has cleaned up Times Square, Chicago's South Loop has long since gentrified, and even San Francisco's infamous Tenderloin isn't what it used to be.

These red-light districts waned in part because the Internet became the preferred place to pick up a prostitute. Even the most down-and-out sex worker now advertises on Craigslist, as well as on dating sites and in online chat forums. As a result, pimps' role in the sex economy has been diminished. The online trade has helped bring the sex business indoors, with johns and prostitutes increasingly meeting up in bars, in hotels, in their own homes or in apartments rented by groups of sex workers.

2. Men visit sex workers for sex.

Often, they pay them to talk. I've been studying high-end sex workers in New York, Chicago and Paris for more than a decade, and one of my most startling findings is that many men pay women to not have sex. Well, they pay for sex, but end up chatting or having dinner and never get around to physical contact. Approximately 40 percent of high-end sex worker transactions end up being sex-free. Even at the lower end of the market, about 20 percent of transactions don't ultimately involve sex.

The observations of one

4. Prostitutes and police are enemies.

When it comes to the sex trade, police officers have in recent decades functioned as quasi-social workers. They typically hand out phone numbers for shelters, soup kitchens and emergency rooms, and they tend to demonstrate a great deal of sympathy for women who have been abused. Instead of arresting an abused sex worker, police officers will usually let her off with a warning and turn their attention to finding her abusive client.

Unfortunately, officers say it is becoming more difficult to help such women; as they move indoors, it is simply more difficult to locate them. For police officers, it makes day-to-day work quite challenging.

5. Closing Craigslist's "adult services" section will significantly affect the sex trade.

Although Craigslist offered customers an important means to connect with sellers of sexual services, its significance has probably been exaggerated.

Even before the site's "adult services" section was shut down, it was falling out of favor among many users. Adolescent pranksters were placing ads as hoaxes. And because sex workers knew that cops were spending a lot of time responding to ads, they were increasingly hesitant to answer solicitations.

How the sex trade will evolve from here is anyone's guess, but the Internet is vast, and already we are seeing increasing numbers of sex workers use Twitter and Facebook to advertise their services. Apparently, the desire to reveal is sometimes greater than the desire to conceal.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

We are in a new progressive era

The news is full of pundits relating and endlessly repeating pat economic theories. Most of these people, I would bet, have never seriously studied economics.

For instance, income distribution or redistribution is a hot topic. Actually the United States has had a policy of redistributing income since our founding. The founders endeavored to create a country where merit, not inheritance, was the means to wealth hence, over time, the estate tax (now called the death tax). Other tax policy and laws were created in the 1800s to promote competition and redistribution (anti-trust laws and federal income tax) when wealth became concentrated.

In the last 20 years, the middle class has been squeezed by an economy which favors the wealthiest Americans. The top 20 percent have gendered an increasing portion of the total income. When people say the rich pay most of the taxes, it's true. They are the ones who hold most of the income. The distribution is skewed to the top. If you have a large tax bill, congratulations, you are probably doing well!

The first Progressive era (Theodore Roosevelt) helped to make America what it is today. A second progressive era is upon us. Obama's policies need time. He is trying to create infrastructure of physical assets like roads and airports and, in addition, human service infrastructure of health care and education. Together they will help put America back on track.

Let's not return to the Bush years where we relied on economic policies that created the financial meltdown of the last few years. The past tax cutting and deregulation policies have not proven effective. More of the same is yesterday's answer – not for today and America's future.

As the election draws near, think about what kind of America, and what

System works against children's interest

"Children are to be raised by those with the most money, those who live in town and carry the biggest stick for physical discipline." That is what the child custody evaluators are saying nowadays! Seems that the welfare and the happiness of the children don't matter anymore!

The father is living with a woman he is not married to: the woman claims to be the mother/stepmother to his children. Evervone involved has had DUIs and are either on probation or have been. The father and "girlfriend" fight all the time, leaving the children in fear of where they will be living tomorrow. The abuse is atrocious. The children are not allowed to see their mother nor anyone on the maternal side; therefore, when the father and girlfriend want to "party," the children are shuffled from one place to another. When the children are allowed to talk to their mother, they are forced to leave the phone on speaker phone. They are not allowed to be alone with their own mother, even though the evaluator sees no problem.

The children want to see their mother and little sister and grandmothers and uncles, and they are not allowed to do so. What is with that? Children don't have a say?

The mother is heartbroken. She is the one that is being punished for doing less than what the father/girlfriend are still doing. Is this not a "double standard"? She is getting treatment; she is towing a straight line. What sort of image is this for the children?

Let me tell you what I see:

It is OK for daddy to drink but not for momma. It is OK for daddy to abuse the children. It is OK for the girlfriend to treat the children like "redheaded stepchildren." Children can't tell the truth to anyone for fear of being "disciplined" for doing it.

The evaluators, court systems and attorneys seem to be in it for the money!

Luna's leadership is showing results

I probably pay more attention than the average Idahoan to down-ticket races we will see on the November ballot - particularly the race for superintendent of public instruction. It was amusing to watch the hand-wringing of the education establishment when Tom Luna. a businessman and longtime school board member, was elected to that post in 2006. A non-educator as superintendent? Gasp!

I think Tom Luna has surprised a lot of people, and he has proven that you don't have to be a teacher to understand and to lead the state's education system. In fact, he's been able to think and act more creatively than someone who's spent their career within the "system."

We have results from the last four years with Superintendent Luna leading our public education system. A number of new initiatives are proving to be successful, and student achievement results are rising through the roof in comparison to the previous administration.

Give Superintendent Luna credit for moving Idaho's education system out of the old status quo. Do we really want to take steps in the wrong direction and fall back to the past? I don't, and you shouldn't either. Vote for Superintendent Luna on Nov. 2!

Big Apple-based sex worker are typical: "Men like it when you listen ... I learned this a long time ago. They pay you to listen - and to tell them how great they are." Indeed, the high-end sex workers I have studied routinely see themselves as acting the part of a counselor or a marriage therapist. They say their job is to feed a man's need for judgment-free friendship and, at times, to help him repair his broken partnership.

3. Most prostitutes are addicted to drugs or were abused as children.

The population of women choosing sex work has changed dramatically over the past decade. High-end prostitutes account for a greater share of the sex business than they once did. And as Barnard College's Elizabeth Bernstein has shown, sex workers today tend to make a conscious decision to enter the trade not as a reaction to suffering but to earn some quick cash. Bernstein suggests that prostitution is viewed as a part-time job, one that grants autonomy and flexibility.

Tax, spending cuts top GOP 'Pledge'

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON – Six weeks before midterm elections, House Republicans vowed to cut taxes and federal spending, repeal President Obama's health care law and ban federal funding of abortion as part of a campaign manifesto designed to propel them to victory in November and a majority in the next Congress.

The "Pledge to America," circulated to GOP lawmakers Wednesday, emphasizes job creation and spending control, as well as changing the way Congress does business. It steered clear of controversial issues such as Social Security and Medicare, big drivers of deficit spending.

Republicans are favored to add substantially to their ranks, perhaps enough to seize control of the House. Details of their plan emerged as President Obama tried to reintroduce voters to his health care overhaul law, a signature issue of his first two years that Americans don't much like or understand. Democrats, who pursued overhaul for decades, have been surprised by its unpopularity.

IRAN Bomb attack at Iranian parade kills at least 11

TEHRAN - A bomb exploded Wednesday among spectators at an annual army parade in a restive, predominantly Kurdish city in northwestern Iran, killing 11 people and wounding at least 93, officials said.

A Kurdish separatist group that authorities suspected of involvement denied any responsibility for the blast in the city of Mahabad, near Iran's borders with Iraq and Turkey. The explosion occurred about 10 a.m. local time during a parade commemorating the 30th anniversary of the start of the Iran-Iraq war.

Ten of those killed were women, and one was a child, Iranian officials said.

Iran's Arabic news channel al-Alam reported that the bomb was a timed device left in a bag along the parade route. The semiofficial Mehr News Agency said the bomb exploded in an area where VIPs were gathering to watch the parade.

confirmed reports that the CIA is running an all-Afghan paramilitary group in Afghanistan that has been hunting al-Oaida, Taliban, and other militant targets for the agency.

A security professional in Kabul familiar with the operation said the 3,000-strong force was set up in 2002 to capture targets for CIA interrogation. A former U.S. intelligence official said members of the covert Afghan force are used for surveillance and long-range reconnaissance and some have trained at CIA facilities in the United States.

WEST BANK Violence in east Jerusalem clouds peace efforts

JERUSALEM - Crowds of Palestinian youths violently rampaged in east

Jerusalem on Wednesday following the shooting death of a local man, clouding fragile peace efforts even as the Palestinian president signaled he may back away from threats to quit negotiations if Israel resumes West Bank settlement construction.

At one point, Israeli riot police stormed the hilltop compound known to Jews as the Temple Mount and to Muslims as the Noble Sanctuary – the most explosive site in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and the place where the last Palestinian uprising began almost exactly 10 years ago.

Wounded warriors visit S.C.Idaho for memorial hunt

By Andrew Weeks Times-News writer

BUHL - First the sound: a highpitched "cukoo-cukoo."

Heads turned.

It wasn't a pheasant Friday morning in the parking lot of Mimi's Saddlehorn Event Center, but Bradley Garfield practicing his pheasant call.

Nearby, hunting companion Bill Woods stood in the back of a pickup, checking through bags to make sure he wasn't leaving anything behind. Then a voice: "We gotta head out."

It was Monte Bruhn, who organized this trip that would start with a pheasant hunt that morning at Tows Pheasant Ranch and end in a horseback archery deer and elk hunt this weekend near Salmon. He was trying to get on the road while it was still early. The sun was still climbing in the sky as people headed to their cars. They'd come to Mimi's, about 75 of them, for an early-morning breakfast to support the two wounded veterans participating in the first Doug Bridges Memorial Hunts.

Garfield of Quantico, Virg., and Woods of Grand Rapids, Mich., have been preparing for the trip since about February. On Friday, they could hardly believe it had finally arrived.

"I'm real excited," Woods said. "Everything's really settling in now that we're here. We're really doing this."

Bruhn and his wife, Diane, were inspired to do something for the veterans after watching the TV show "Hunts for Heroes" last fall. Bruhn sent an email to the producers of the program and was contacted by Bob Bowden, founder of TheLink-up.org, which hooks up veterans with hunters in various states.

Bruhn was given insight on how to make his dream of serving the vets become a reality, and named the hunting campaign after Army Cpl. Doug Bridges of Buhl, who was killed in action Nov. 4, 2006, while serving in Iraq.

Garfield and Woods said they're thankful for the people of south-central Idaho who've helped make their dreams of coming to the Gem State a reality.

"The people here are so generous, so Christian-minded," Woods said.

And if the vets don't bring home a deer or elk? No worries, they say.

"The experience is what we're here for, to spend time with nature," Garfield said. "The hunting is just icing on the cake."

Weigh your trophy fish

O: "My buddy caught a huge bass the other day that we both thought might be a new state record. We froze it and brought it to the Fish and Game office about a week later to be weighed. The biologist who checked our fish told us we shouldn't freeze it and should have weighed (it) right away. Are there some tips how to handle a fish we think might be a new state record?"

A: That's a great question and we wouldn't want anyone to miss out on an opportunity for a new state record.

You can save yourself a lot of time if you first know the current state records. The current Idaho state fish records are listed in the back of the fishing regulations brochure or can be found on the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's website, http://fishandgame.idaho.g ov/cms/fish/record_fish/.

Idaho fish records are based on the weight of the fish, so you should have a scale of some kind with you while you're fishing to get a feel for just how big your fish really is. Your personal measurement won't count for the record, but it will let you know if you're close to the existing record.

If you catch a large fish and it seems like you may have a shot at the new state record, then time is of the essence. A fish begins to lose weight the moment you harvest it.

The best way to keep a fish's weight from dropping is to keep it in a cooler on ice (not water and ice) and wrapped in a wet towel, Tshirt, or something to keep it moist. Avoid freezing, don't keep it in a live-well (since it's illegal to transport live fish), and don't fill a cooler with water and store the dead fish, since all of these methods essentially dehydrate your catch. Dehydration means weight loss.

Now, you need to quickly get to a location that has an Idaho State Certified Scale and get the fish weighed the sooner the better. Any stores that sell food by weight such as grocery stores, meat processors, even the U.S. Post Office has a certified scale. However, not everybody is willing to weigh your fish on their scale, so it pays to call ahead.

To be eligible for a new state fish record, you must have at least one witness to verify the weight, so bring a friend or make sure the employee who weighed your fish signs something confirming the certified weight. Most grocery stores can print out the weight of the fish on a label, and it's easy to have your witnesses sign the weight label.

Be sure to get additional information about the scale used to weigh the fish, such as when it was last inspected by the State of Idaho. If the scale isn't certified by the Idaho Department of Weights and Measures then the weight will not be official.

One mistake often made by anglers is to place the fish on a plate or tray when weighing the fish. You must make sure to subtract the weight of the tray or plate holding the fish to get the actual fish weight.

Last but not least, make arrangements to stop at the nearest Fish and Game Regional Office and have the staff confirm the species of fish, weigh it again, and take a few pictures. They usually take photos for press releases, plus everyone likes bigfish pictures. There's also a bit of paperwork, but they'll help you through it. Don't be surprised if they feel around a bit and look deep inside the fish's stomach to confirm the fish hasn't recently "eaten" buckshot or rocks ... it's happened before!

For questions: Magic Valley Regional Office at 324-4350 or e-mail through the Fish and Game website.

Outdoors news from across the nation

North Platte flushing flow deferred until spring

CASPER, Wyo. – The Wyoming Game and Fish Department will not request flushing the North Platte River downstream of Gray Reef Reservoir this fall.

That's because high water flow on the river throughout the summer has eliminated the need for a fall flushing flow to improve trout habitat.

The agency says it will consider a flushing flow next spring after river ice has melted.

Game and Fish often request the flushing flow in the fall to clean fine sediment from fish spawning habitats and to increase production of invertebrates fish depend on for food.

Many anglers look forward to fishing around a flushing flow because it can potentially stimulate feeding by trout.

DNRE offers special hunts for youth, disabled vets

LANSING, Mich. – The Michigan Department of Natural Resources and Environment is offering some special deer hunting opportunities for young people and disabled veterans.

The department says hunters ages 10 through 16 will be allowed to hunt antlerless deer in certain parts of southern Michigan from Tuesday through Friday.

Also, this coming weekend, the state says young people and disabled vets will be allowed to kill one antlered or one antlerless deer statewide.

The state says veterans must be determined to be 100 percent disabled by the U.S. Department of Veteran Affairs to be eligible for the special hunt. And all young hunters must be accompanied by a parent, guardian or someone 18 years of age or older designated by a parent or guardian.

opening act long ago. Polaris is the North Star by happenstance. Over the span of 260 centuries, the Earth's polar axis slowly traces a circle in the sky like a wobbling top, and just happens to currently point at Polaris.

(Actually, Polaris now lies 0.7 degrees from the pole; its closest approach of 0.5 degrees will come in the early 22nd century.) There are hundreds of stars that are currently more accurate markers of the north celestial pole than Polaris, but none are bright enough to be seen with the naked eye.

The pole's slow wandering gives other stars the opportunity to play the role of North Star. Nev. wildlife panel to consider bear hunt seasons

By Sandra Chereb Associated Press writer

CARSON CITY, Nev. - Nevada wildlife commissioners, considering allowing black bears to be hunted for reduce human-bear conflicts that the first time in state history, are proposing a six-month season from June to December.

will be considered by the nine-member commission that sets wildlife policy when it meets in Las Vegas on Saturday, the last day of a two-day meeting.

The commission will discuss setting two different bear seasons, an archery-only season running June 1 through Sept. 14, and another Sept. 15 through Dec. 15 allowing hunters to use any legal weapon and dogs. Using dogs would be prohibited in summer, not seem to be a solution to the nuiand the killing of a cub or a sow with cubs would be illegal any time.

One proposal is for setting a quota of 45 tags that could be used to hunt in any area open to bear hunting. The season would close when either six female bruins or a total of 20 are taken.

Nevada's bear population around Lake Tahoe is estimated at 200-300. Bears also are found in the Wassuk and Sweetwater areas farther south of Lake Tahoe, though biologists do not have an estimate on their numbers.

A tag fee of $50 for residents and $200 for nonresidents would generate $3,000 for the wildlife agency. Other application and bear management fees could bring in thousands more, depending on the number of applicants, according to background docu- ly during the archery season. ments included on the Nevada Department of Wildlife's website.

Commission Chairman Scott Raine has said initiating a hunt could help often lead to bears becoming a nuisance and having to be destroyed.

"They get a little bit of fear of people Regulations to implement the hunt in them (from being hunted) and hopefully they won't come in contact with people," he said earlier. "It might prevent some from being euthanized."

Critics disagree, and point to a 2004 report from biologists with the Nevada Department of Wildlife that said after a male bear is removed from urban neighborhoods, another will appear and take up residence "within days or weeks."

Molde and others say the wildlife department that is overseen by the commission has worked hard over the years to build a coalition and educate people about not feeding bears or leaving trash out that attracts them.

"Of course getting hunters to donate an annual average of 23 bears have money requires having an open bear season."

Jeremy Drew, with Safari Club International's northern Nevada Don Molde, a former board member chapter, said the hunters organization has not taken a position on the bear proposal.

Schuele, a Rawlins resident, was with Bruce and Bill Romios of Romios Outfitters and TJ Murray and Sonny Jaramillo. He also had his rifle and a clean shot, which was important considering a potentially award-winning bighorn sheep was about 100 yards away.

Schuele didn't miss. One shot dropped the sheep. Forty-five minutes later the animal was loaded into a truck and on its way to be processed and scored.

While the story's climax would be sweet to any hunter, the crescendo arguably has just as much merit.

said of drawing one of two licenses in area 18, where he hunted.

In a twist of fate, Schuele had been convinced by a coworker to apply for area 18. He said the previous few years he had applied to hunt the Laramie Peak region.

On opening day he wasn't disappointed with his location.

"I didn't have any idea they there," he said.

The night before opening day, the men saw the sheep in at the top," he said.

"We waited maybe 45 bination of all four, Matt minutes," Schuele said. "There were six rams together and we finally got a shot at the one we wanted."

Jaramillo, who has hunted with Schuele in the past, said the group had a pretty good idea that the animal was sizable. After Schuele dropped the bighorn with a single shot, they had a chance to verify.

"It was everything that we thought it was, it was pretty amazing," Jaramillo said. "(Schuele) was excited, he was really excited. You don't really know until you walk up to something like that?"

A sheep is considered award-winning by Boone and Crockett Club, the organization that scores and records big game, if it scores a 175. The world record is held by Guinn Crousen, who shot a ram that scored 208 and three-eighths in Luscar Schuele said the scoring "I was really surprised," he isn't complete until 60 days after the ram is killed.

"It's going to score pretty good I think," Jaramillo said.

Schuele said he does most of his hunting – namely elk, antelope and mule deer - in Carbon County but has taken trips to Manitoba and the Yukon.

"Carbon County is, as far as I'm concerned, one of the best," places to hunt, he said.

It doesn't hurt that he had had sheep that size over the best hunting experience of his life in the county.

Fractures in arm cause problems 13 years later

DEAR DR. GOTT: About 13 years ago, I fractured my humerus in multiple places. The fracture was cast only and did not heal properly. If you run your finger up my arm, you can feel where the bones are misaligned.

I have always had pain in this arm, but for the past five or so years, I have had numbness in my hand that is getting worse. Within the past year, I've had sharp pains in my forearm, almost like someone is splitting the bone in two. I'm concerned that if I mention this to my PCP, he will just want to prescribe me a painkiller and send me on my way, possibly labeling me a drug seeker.

What kind of treatment is available for something like this? I don't want painkillers.

DEAR READER: I'm not sure why you didn't have a pin in your arm if you broke it in multiple places, but I'm sure that your orthopedist had his or her reasons for simply casting it. Without reviewing the X-rays, there is no way of telling how severe the fractures were.

You appear to be levelheaded. I cannot believe that if you present the facts as you did to me in your brief letter that painkillers would be prescribed. While you may experience pain and would like relief, the prime concern is to determine why you have the numbness. You should be followed by an orthopedic specialist to avoid further progression of whatever is going on. An X-ray can determine bone alignment and see whether there is nerve impingement. Only then can your doctor plan an appropriate course of action. Good luck.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been plagued for years by an incurable skin condition I am told is called prurigo nodularis. Nothing has helped in clearing it up, and it has been active for more than two years. I have tried a sunlight box and a tanning bed, as well as cortisone injections, medical cortisone tape and creams - both over-the-counter and prescription. All seem to help only a little.

Do you have any idea as to how I can get rid of this or at least keep it under control? I eat healthy and take vitamins.

I am 22 years past breast cancer diagnosed at the age of 32. I had nine rounds of chemotherapy and took tamoxifen for 10 years. I was divorced in 2006 after a lengthy marriage of much discord. I'm now stressed. as I was a homemaker and never worked. I face a mortgage and a pile of bills and am trying to find a job. I haven't worked in two years, my unemployment ran out several months ago, and I have a pile of bills and no health insurance. It's difficult to maintain my sanity under all the stress.

DEAR READER: Prurigo nodularis resembles multiple soybean-sized nodules on the skin, particularly the legs and thighs of women. While the urge to scratch is overwhelming, repetitive touching results in plaque buildup and hyperkeratosis (thickening of the skin). Therefore, covering, wrapping or avoiding touching the nodules is extremely important. Anxiety exacerbates the symptoms.

Current available treatments only provide mild to moderate improvement of the condition. Capasicin cream applied four to six times a day, vitamin D3, antihistamines, dapsone, gabapentin, cryotherapy and topical anesthetics might be options. Thalidomide appears the drug of choice at this stage, but it was a horror drug in the 1960s that can cause peripheral neuropathy, and I can't endorse it without further research. Chinese herbs have been reported to help, but I am unfamiliar with the remedies recommended and, again, cannot endorse these, either. Share my suggestions with your physician for his or her consideration.

Study: Mammograms offer modest benefit

ANGELES LOS Mammograms don't help women over 50 as much as has been believed, new research suggests.

Only a third of the reduced risk of death credited to breast cancer screening is actually deserved – treatment and greater awareness of the disease, a large study in Norway found.

4-0, and that was before losing five straight to end the season en route to an 18-game losing skid spanning three seasons.

It seems like ages since the Bruins won the 2004 state championship, but a surprise third-place finish in the state playoffs last year had the Bruins excited for a promising 2010 season.

And that excitement has grown since Ryan Fuchs made his catch in the closing seconds against Skyview in week one.

"It's not just that the team is winning, it's how they're winning. They are representing themselves with dignity and class every week," Federico said.

Meanwhile at my alma mater, Colorado State University, the football team is 0-3. has been outscored 106-19 and is wearing pumpkin orange uniforms Saturday when Idaho comes to town - not a great display of dignity or class.

I hear from friends back at CSU that the entire campus lacks any sort of buzz, school spirit and attendance at other fall sports – including a nationally ranked volleyball team - is down and free student tickets for Saturday's home opener are still available.

All because of a losing football team.

"There is a definite correlation between the success of the football program and the attitude of the school," Federico said. "Not only does it affect the other sports, but it affects attendance in the classroom, the pep rallies, school spirit. It gives kids something to rally around."

From the breathtaking opening win over Skyview, that's exactly what's happened. And the other fall sports teams feel that love too.

Posters for the Bruin cross country and volleyball teams hang in the hallways and attendance at soccer and volleyball games has been higher than in the past so far this season, according to coaches.

The positive vibe from the field also flows into academics, Federico said.

"Our football players are not just players on the field, they're also succeeding in the classroom and are all good citizens," he said.

All's good at Twin Falls High. And to think I picked the Bruins to lose to that other school in Twin Falls.

Martin's physical style gives Broncos added punch

Declo boys rally past Cutthroats

Times-News

Erik Henrickson's 67th-minute penalty kick capped a three-goal rally as Declo took its first-ever win over the Community School, 3-2 in Declo on Wednesday.

The Cutthroats took the lead in the first half through Tim Kanellitsas and Cassidy Carson, but the Hornets stormed back after halftime.

"You're so afraid of getting scored right after the goal, and Community School possesses the ball so well," said Declo coach Tim Henrickson. "But the kids did a great job keeping the shape and I give credit the boys, they tasted it tonight. At 2-0 they could have given up."

Jaime Alonzo netted five minutes after the break on an assist from Henrickson, and freshman Nic Westfall equalized 20 minutes later by cleaning up on a scramble in the box for his first career goal.

Henrickson scored the winner after Dakota Willett, hurt and biding his time for a stoppage in play to be subbed out, was first to a ball in the box and was hauled down.

"Once they got their (first) goal they were up for it," said Community School coach Richard Whitelaw. "That's a good confidence booster for them."

CSI slips to No. 7 in volleyball poll

By David Bashore

Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team has it all to do again.

After losing twice at its own invitational tournament last weekend, the Golden Eagles tumbled four spots in Wednesday's NJCAA Division I Volleyball Poll, falling out of the Top 5 for the first time all season by checking in at No. 7.

It was the first time CSI (15-4) dropped consecutive matches since Oct. 17 and 23, 2009, when it lost matches at home to North Idaho and then at Eastern Utah. Saturday's losses also marked the first time CSI dropped two matches on the same day since Aug. 31, 2007, when it lost three straight in Salt Lake City.

The ranking is the lowest for CSI in more than a year.

"It's disappointing but at the same time you've got to perform," said CSI coach Heidi Cartisser. "If you look at history we've done a little bit better (playing with a lower ranking) but at the same time we can still move up. We can't really worry about any of that, we've just got to keep plugging away with these conference matches coming up."

Bowyer's car fails inspection; racer loses 150 points

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - Clint Bowyer's NASCAR championship chances were crippled Wednesday when his car failed a follow-up inspection and he was penalized 150 points after winning last weekend's first race of the Chase for the Sprint Cup.

NASCAR also fined crew chief Shane Wilson $150,000, and suspended him for the next six Sprint Cup races. Car chief Chad Haney was also suspended six races, and team owner Richard Childress was docked 150 owner points.

Bowyer was permitted to keep Sunday's victory at New Hampshire – NASCAR does not typically strip wins and an official said the Richard Childress Racing team probably was punished enough.

"We don't consider taking away the win," NASCAR vice president of competition Robin Pemberton said. "If you ask some, they would consider a 150-point penalty with only nine races to go in the Chase a pretty hefty penalty."

With Sunday's win in the opening race of the Chase, Bowyer vaulted from 12th to second in the standings. The penalty drops him back to last place, 185 points behind leader Denny Hamlin.

NASCAR said the No. 33 Chevrolet from

Beavers will test BSU defense

OSU boasts dynamic duo Rodgers brothers By Tim Booth Associated Press writer

BOISE Ryan Winterswyk understands why Boise State's offense gets all the attention.

Maybe it's time for the Bronco defense to get some, too

"I think we're pretty good," said Winterswyk, the Broncos' star defensive end. "I'm not usually one to brag, but I think our defense has the right mentality right now that we're doing things right and if we keep that mentality we can be a pretty good defense."

After getting challenged by Virginia Tech and quarterback Tyrod Taylor in their thrilling, season-opening win, the third-ranked Broncos get another significant test Saturday (6 p.m., ABC) in the form of No. 24 dynamic duo of Jacquizz and James Rodgers.

The Broncos defense started getting recognition a year ago when they ranked in the top 15 in the country in yards and scoring. Those numbers continued an upward trend that started a year earlier when facing a weaker schedule, Boise State allowed 12.6 points per game.

But it wasn't until their Fiesta Bowl victory over TCU that Boise State's defense gained respect. A year earlier when the teams met in the Poinsettia Bowl, the Horned Frogs continually pounded Boise State on the ground, wearing down the Broncos and handing them their only loss in the past two seasons.

The Fiesta Bowl was the complete opposite of a year earlier. While Andy Dalton threw for 272 yards, he was intercepted three times, and Boise State held TCU to 20 yards rushing and 1 of 12 on third downs.

"They were very good. We knew we were going to have to play our absolute best, (and) on defense we played our very best," Petersen said.

After giving up 30 points and 314 yards to Virginia Tech in its opener, Boise State rebounded with a suffocating effort at Wyoming last weekend. The Cowboys finished with minus-21 yards rushing and 135 total vards. Defensive lineman Shea McClellin recovered a fumble for a touchdown and the Broncos finished with four sacks.

expect to get stops in the red coach Robb Akey said of zone. They expect to get to get stops if their backs are against the wall."

Indeed, the Vandals have been the stingiest team in the nation in the red zone, allowing only two touchinside the 20-yard line. That success has spilled over from spring and fall camp, when goal-line stands were almost everyday occurrences.

Following season after season of roster upheaval and new personnel, nearly every member of the defense has at least one year secondary to cover their of experience with the man, trust in the linebackcoaching staff. The Vandals lost just one defensive starter from last year safety Jeromy Jones - and Lavarias, who had two have since added speed and depth at key areas.

That stability and familiarity are just two of many reasons Idaho players and coaches point to when asked about the early season success.

"This is the first time ever since I've been up here that we have numbers like this," starting cornerback Isaac Butts said. "And we have people that can play, that can compete for jobs."

Butts mentioned Aaron Grymes, a sophomore whose play suffered last vear after a broken hand but tackles and has 2.5 tackles for loss. Last week against UNLV, he supplanted opposite Butts.

"Every time he got in the tackle well."

ballgame, he showed up," Grymes. "You felt his presence. He's hitting people and he's playing full speed and he's covering well."

The improved coverage of Grymes, Butts and others in the secondary has downs in eight possessions allowed Idaho to become more aggressive and creative in trying to get to opposing quarterbacks. The Vandals have stuck with the same basic schemes under defensive coordinator Mark Criner, but they're now able to send more defenders on blitzes.

"It's having trust in the ers to hit their right gaps, and trust in the D-line to fill the right gaps too," said sacks last week. "It's just a trust that we've developed."

Colorado State coach Steve Fairchild, whose team hosts Idaho on Saturday afternoon, has noticed the major leap the Vandals have taken. When the Rams played in Moscow last year, Idaho gave up two quick scores and fell behind 14-0 a trend that haunted the club throughout 2009.

No longer does that seem to be an issue.

"This will probably be as good a defensive team as we have played," Fairchild said. "From a personnel standnow leads the Vandals in point and a production standpoint, this will be the best defense in our first four games. They fly around, Kenneth Patten as a starter they play extremely hard, they pursue the ball, they

The Grantee shall be required to provide standard performance bonds and insurance requirements for encroachment and/or right-of-way work permits.

SECTION 7 TERMINATION AND TECHINICAL VIOLATIONS

- 7.1 Default, Notice and Termination. A. If the Grantee willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the material provisions of this franchise agreement, the franchising authority shall give written notice to the Grantee of the alleged non-compliance of its franchise. The Grantee shall have thirty (30) days from the date of notice of non-compliance to cure such alleged default or, if such default cannot be cured within thirty (30) days, to present to the City a plan of action whereby such default can be promptly cured. The Grantee shall be entitled to attend the hearing, respond to questions and explain why termination would be justified.
- B. If such default continues beyond the applicable dates agreed to for such cure, the franchising authority shall give the Grantee written notice that all rights conferred under this franchise agreement may be revoked or terminated by the Council after a public hearing. The Grantee shall be entitled to not less than thirty (30) days prior notice of the date, time and place of the public hearing.
- 7.2 Termination for Non-compliance. Subject to State and Federal law, in the event that any franchise is terminated by the franchising authority by reason of the Grantee's non-compliance, the Grantee shall have the right for six months after the final decision by the Council to attempt to sell that part of the system under such franchise to a third party. If the Grantee is unable to find a buyer within such period, the franchising authority may elect to acquire the property of the system located in the streets and public property at a cost consistent with the provisions of Section 627(b)(1) of the Cable Act, as currently constituted or as may be amended. If the franchising authority or a third party does not purchase the system, the Grantee shall, upon order of the franchising authority, remove the system from the public ways of the franchising authority. The Grantee agrees that in no case shall a termination for cause be considered as a "taking"
- 7.3 Technical Violations. The parties agree that it is not the franchising authority's intention to subject the Grantee to penalties or termination for technical violations of this agreement. Technical violations shall include, but are not limited to the following: (a) instances where a violation or a breach by the Grantee of this agreement was a good faith effort that resulted in no or minimal negative impact on subscribers or (b) where there existed circumstances reasonably beyond the control of the Grantee and which precipitated a violation of this agreement or which were deemed to have prevented the Grantee from strictly complying with the terms of this agreement.

SECTION 8 MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

- 8.1 Actions of Parties. In any action by the franchising authority of the Grantee that is mandated or permitted under the terms hereof, such party shall act in good faith in a reasonable and timely manner. Furthermore, in any instance where approval or consent is required under the term hereof, such approval or consent shall not be unreasonably withheld.
- 8.2 Equal Protection. In the event the franchising authority grants another franchise to any person or entity for the purpose of constructing or operating a cable system within the service area, such additional franchise shall not present materially better terms or lesser obligations for the new franchisee over the terms of the franchise. Nevertheless, if such does take place, the franchising authority will immediately modify this franchise so that it is in conformity with the language of the new franchise.
- 8.3 Notices. Notice required hereunder shall be in writing and shall be deemed to have been duly given to the required party upon actual receipt. Acceptable methods of delivery include hand delivery, certified or registered mail and overnight express mail. Notice required hereunder shall be addressed as follows:

to talk about themselves. and they'll think YOU'RE a great conversationalist. But, when asking questions as a means to get the other person talking, take care that your questions are tactful, discreet and not too person-

Stay current on what's going on in the world and in the headlines. The more informed you are, the better company you will be. But don't be a know-it-all. People who come off like they're an authority on everything are about as welcome as a skunk at a garden party. That's not to say it pays to be ignorant; rather that the know-it-alls make those of us who are just average feel insecure and uncomfortable.

When talking to people, look them in the eye. And when you're being spoken to, focus your attention on the person who's addressing you. Nothing turns people off quicker than trying to carry on a conversation with someone whose eyes are constantly wandering - to see who just came in or who else is in the room.

I offer many more tips on how to be socially successful in my booklet, which can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus a check or money order for $6 (U.S. funds), to Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. And remember, a good conversationalist doesn't brag, and doesn't constantly put himself down. A good conversationalist is an upper. Find something positive to say. Be open and listen to other people's viewpoints. And don't have a stiff drink for "courage" because it loosens the tongue and can cause a social disaster.

In 1962, New York's Philharmonic Hall (later renamed Avery Fisher Hall) formally opened as the first unit of the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts.

In 1973, former Argentine president Juan Peron won a landslide election victory that returned him to power; his wife, Isabel, was elected vice president.

In 2001, 13 coal miners were killed in explosions at the Blue Creek Mine No. 5 in Brookwood, Ala.

Ten years ago: At the Sydney Olympics, Maurice Greene took the men's 100meter in 9.87 seconds: Marion Jones won the women's 100 final in 10.75 seconds. (However, in 2007, Jones forfeited the three gold medals and two bronzes she'd won in Sydney after she admitted taking a designer steroid.) Commentator Carl T. Rowan died in Washington at age 75.

Five years ago: Hurricane Rita, down to Category 3, steamed toward refinery towns along the Texas-Louisiana coast, creating havoc even before it arrived; levee breaks caused new flooding in New Orleans, and 23 people were killed when a bus carrying nursing-home evacuees caught fire in Texas. Embattled FDA Commissioner Lester Crawford abruptly resigned. Puerto Rican nationalist Filiberto Ojeda Rios, wanted in a 1983 robbery of a Connecticut armored truck, died during a gunbattle with FBI agents.

One year ago: President Barack Obama addressed the U.N. General Assembly, where he challenged world leaders to shoulder more of the globe's critical burdens, warning they could no longer castigate the U.S. as a go-it-alone bully while still demanding it cure all ills.

IF SEPTEMBER 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Don't let ambition or business steer you away from what is really important during the next several weeks. It could be that family, travel or studies will bring you the most bliss. In January, the reverse is true and you should concentrate on moneymaking activities and be careful not to take relationships for granted. You will need to produce what you promise if you want to succeed. Between February and April, your social life should rock and there may be many new people joining your circle of friends.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stay out of the fast lane, This is the time for brainstorming and careful planning, not for action or aggression. Save decisionmaking for tomorrow. Be sure to keep an ear open to the wants and needs of your loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Always tell the truth, even when it hurts. You can sweep a matter under the rug and pretend it never happened or own up to your mistake. You might be surprised with the praise you receive for your honesty, GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be a people person, Be honest and forthright and attentive to the ideas and needs of those around you. Kindness will return to you in spades as the cosmic cycle of karma. Don't meddle in the arguments of others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down. Go out of your way to offer kind words and assistance to those who may be going through trying times. Help disputing parties find a resolution.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Not every play results in a touchdown. It's the smaller plays, gaining yards inch by inch, that add up to the big score. There's no need to take drastic action to make a situation improve. All that is required is patience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pent up aggression needs to find creative outlets. It is a poor time for business dealings, so you would be better served by clearing your head with a jog or some vigorous physical exercise.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"I see the better way, and approve it; I follow the worse."

– Ovid

It is especially satisfying to declarers when they can take more tricks seeing only two hands than the spectators and commentators can envision viewing all four hands.

Consider this deal, where, trailing by 68 IMPs going into the final 15-board segment of the U.S. International Team Trials in 2000, the Schwartz team started a huge charge. They made up half the deficit in the first three boards, though they fell just short at the end.

The commentator saw Zia Mahmood and Michael Rosenberg reach six no-trump and foolishly said that this looked like a big pickup for their opponents, since there was no play for the slam. Michael Rosenberg, who did not hear this comment, proved it inaccurate.

On West's deceptive lead of the spade jack, the defense had already started to create a problem for themselves. Rosenberg won, cashed the diamond ace, then led a club from dummy. East missed his first chance to settle declarer's hash by rising with the ace and returning the suit — a play that, in retrospect, could hardly have cost.

As it was, West won his club king and played a second diamond. Now declarer rose with the king and ran the diamonds, East's first discard being an encouraging heart. At this point, instead of pitching spades to clarify the position to his partner, West chose to believe his partner's discard and pitched a heart. Curtains! Declarer ran the diamonds and spades to squeeze East in hearts and clubs: contract made.

ANSWER: A jump in balancing seat is not weak and pre-emptive, even if you play weak jump overcalls in almost every other seat. Jumps in this seat should be intermediate (say 12-15 with a good six-card suit). You want to drive the hand to game, but three notrump could easily be best. Cuebid three clubs, planning to follow up with three no-trump, offering partner the choice of games.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go with what works. Trying to make drastic changes to improve production could be a grave mistake. You've done well enough so far so there's no need to stop now. Find balance and harmony with a loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Before you act, stop and think. Your first instinct on any given issue today is to be aggressive or defensive. Take a moment to gather your thoughts first and use the diplomatic approach instead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You don't know what you've got until it's gone. Don't risk your current standing for an unattainable goal or risk losing everything. The green light is on for making minor purchases and investments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Dress to impress. A sharp appearance coupled with your social charms will make you the center of amorous attention. Be on your best behavior, as you can never be to sure who is watching you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Sometimes the best side to choose in a dispute is to not get involved. Let others hash out their own problems; you have your own issues to attend to. Look for valuable knowledge from unlikely sources.
