Political newcomer challenges Ysursa

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Idaho Secretary of State Ben Ysursa faces a challenger on Nov. 2 who wants to "give him an early retirement."

Mack Sermon, a Democrat, seeks in the fall election to unseat Ysursa, a Republican running for a third term.

The secretary of state serves a four-year term and has duties that include serving on the Board of Land Commissioners, administering election laws, keeping the state seal, filing legislative and executive documents like bills and orders, and overseeing the state's disclosure laws for campaign financing and lobbyist reports.

Ysursa

The secretary of state's office also keeps business-related records such as articles of incorporation, trademarks and notary public statements. The position will be paid $90,006 in 2011.

Sermon, a speech and debate director at the College of Idaho in Caldwell, is a relative newcomer to Idaho politics. He said he favors putting a vote-by-mail system in place for elections, in which voters are mailed ballots, and making government more transparent by putting more information online.

Sermon, 44, said he only accepts campaign contributions from individuals, concerned about the influence corporate donations can wield.

"I don't believe corporations are citizens," he said. "I don't think that they should have as much of a say."

Though running on the Democratic ticket, he stressed being a "nonpartisan guy" ideal to be the state's election referee.

In 1993, Sermon graduated

Tea party surge, independent trends show subtle shift among Idaho voters

By Betsy Z. Russell
The Spokesman-Review

BOISE — Idahoans are dead-set against handing over selection of U.S. senators to the state Legislature, and Idaho Republicans are even more against the idea than Democrats or the state as a whole, according to a recent poll.

Yet that move is a plank in the Idaho Republican Party platform, raising questions about how closely the leadership of the state's largest political party reflects its members.

Meanwhile, two-thirds of Idaho Republicans and nearly half of the state as a whole say they generally support the agenda of the tea party movement, with the numbers in northern Idaho rising to a 56 percent majority, compared with 47 percent support in southeastern Idaho and 43 percent in the Treasure Valley.

"I lean Republican real hard," said Tom Duman of Craigmont, who was among the 625 Idahoans polled. But as for repealing the 17th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which allows voters to directly elect senators, "they need to rethink that," said Duman, a 55-year-old agricultural co-op manager. "I think you should be able to choose your official, somebody else shouldn't pick 'em. That way, if the bum's not performing, we can throw him out like we're trying to do now."

The poll, commissioned by the Times-News and six other daily newspapers, showed a divided state when it comes to political party affiliation, even though Republicans

ABOUT THIS POLL

How the poll was done
Mason-Dixon Polling & Research Inc. of Washington, D.C., interviewed 625 randomly chosen registered Idaho voters Sept. 13-15, limiting the interviews to people who said they are likely to vote in November. The statewide poll's margin of error is 4 percentage points, with a 95 percent probability that results would fall within that margin if the entire population were sampled. Sixty additional interviews were conducted in the 1st Congressional District to bring the total sample size there to 400 likely voters, and 15 additional interviews were conducted in the 2nd Congressional District to bring the sample size there to 300. The margins of error are 5 percent in the 1st District and 6 percent in the 2nd. The extra interviews covered only the congressional races.

Proposal would allow BLM to enforce alcohol laws

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

The boonies may become less attractive for teenage keg parties if proposed rules increasing law enforcement on public lands are approved.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management's Idaho office proposed rules Wednesday that would allow rangers to enforce drug and underage drinking laws on BLM land. They would also create an open-container law that would apply to all vehicles, including off-road. The proposed rules are now open for public comment until Nov. 22.

"This is just us catching up to other states and agencies," said BLM Staff Law Enforcement Ranger Keith McGrath, who wrote the supplemental rules.

McGrath said most states with BLM land — including Oregon, Washington and Utah — already have such rules. He used their rules as a template but, he said, it's still taken two years to get them through the approval process.

McGrath said the rules are necessary to protect the land and the safety of visitors. Most people don't break laws, McGrath said, but throw alcohol into the mix and some start tearing things up.

"On BLM land nationwide, we've seen an increasing trend in crime over the past decade," McGrath said. "Regardless of the offense, the commonality is alcohol."

Federal agencies can normally enforce only federal laws, said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Julie Thomas. Underage drinking and open-container laws are state statutes. Without supplemental rules, BLM rangers have to rely on other law-enforcement officers to cite or arrest offenders.

That also applies to rangers with the Sawtooth National Forest, Thomas said.

"We have such a good working relationship with the county sheriffs' departments that we probably won't change it," Thomas said.

McGrath said the BLM also has good connections with sheriffs' departments but the rules would take pressure off those departments.

Capt. Tim Miller of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office said the BLM contracts with his department for the service, so it's not really a burden.

"We have four deputies that work in the hills anyway," Miller said. "Deputies and rangers are out there on their own, so we tend to back each other up."

But the rules would give BLM rangers the tools to do immediate enforcement, Miller said.

All agree about the increase in crime on public lands. Thomas said Forest Service rangers know keg parties regularly occur at one Minidoka County campground. She said an increase in crime is predictable with a growing population. Miller said patrols have been more active in towns, so people move out to the country for illegal activities.

"Look at the pot in the cornfields outside Twin Falls," Miller said. "It's because they can hide it out there."

T.F. commission candidates field questions at Kiwanis meeting

Event first to feature all three candidates

By Nick Coltrain
Times News writer

Three candidates for one seat on the Twin Falls County Commission fielded questions Thursday ranging from what to do with the soon-to-be-vacated hospital building on Addison Avenue to their thoughts on commissioner pay.

Independent Randy Carpenter, Democrat Gary Eller and Republican D. Leon Mills appeared for short introductions and a question-and-answer session at a Twin Falls Kiwanis meeting — their first group event of the election season, where time constraints left some questioners with their hands spiked in the air. The comfort level of the candidates behind the podium ranged from the visible nervousness of Carpenter to the direct statements of Eller, a former Army officer and schoolteacher.

The three opened with their political credentials, with Mills defining himself as a conservative who said he'd treat the position as more watchdog than boss and Eller asking that credentials and experience, not political party, determine which candidate gets elected.

"If I were king for a day, we'd all be running as (non-partisans), because frankly, at the city and county level, this party politics nonsense is just that, nonsense," said Eller, who described himself in a prior interview as a former Republican who left when the party swung too far right.

Carpenter, a small-business owner, said he doesn't fit in either party and that, even in a down economy, the two parties are going to rake in more cash than ever before. He described himself as a Libertarian Democrat because he likes the ideals of libertarianism, but also says there is a need for government's social goods, such as roads.

Of four questions asked of the candidates, one on what to do about jail overcrowding perhaps drew the most varied response. Eller said he met with Sheriff Tom Carter on the matter and got the impression that expanding the current county jail would be the best option. Eller was also open to using the hospital when it empties and to creating a regional jail for the Magic Valley, though he said that would create problems with every county wanting to be in charge.

Mills said he'd rather see better rehabilitation of prisoners than he would like to spend more cash for jails. But if a new jail is necessary, he said he'd like a facility that could grow into itself or expand later.

Carpenter suggested using the vacant hospital to make money from overcrowded jails throughout the Magic Valley. He said the county could ship in nonviolent offenders from penses. "More than 50 percent of inmates don't need bars on the windows," Carpenter said, citing a conversation with Brent Reinke, director of the Idaho Department of Correction. "They need a place to spend their time."

Kiwanian Steve Lincoln, who asked about the jail issue, called converting the hospital into any kind of jail "just pie-in-the-sky" thinking. Overall, he praised Eller's credentials, but also supposed "basically the Republican is going to get elected," which he wouldn't be unhappy with either.

Curt Stewart, another Kiwanian, said he likes Eller best of the three, but didn't dislike the others.

"(Eller) seemed to have the experience of managing large groups of people," Stewart said, brandishing Eller's business card. "But the others did well, too."

with a bachelor's degree in social science from Boise State University.

He hasn't held elected office before, but he has a resume that shows a long interest in politics. He ran for an Idaho House seat in east Boise in 1990 while a student at BSU. He's also worked as a public speaking adviser for Republican and Democratic candidates.

He doesn't have any problems with Ysursa's performance, other than to suggest that the incumbent's 36-year career in the office has been long enough. "I think Ben Ysursa is a terrific man," he said. "(But) I don't think that the founding fathers intended that we have professional politicians."

Ysursa, 61, isn't ready to retire just yet.

"With two terms already and an overall 36 years in the office, there are still things to do," Ysursa said.

Ysursa said he wants to focus in a third term on working with county clerks to implement the new election consolidation law, which goes into effect in January.

As a state land board member, Ysursa also wants to explore ways to maximize the income from public lands, including diversifying revenue sources through more alternative energy uses like wind, geothermal and solar.

He also stressed the value of customer service and making more services available online to the public, like renewing annual statements and filing business paperwork.

A new tool this year allows voters to check the status of their absentee ballots online.

Ysursa said a bill that would have put a vote-by-mail system in place died in the Legislature several years ago, noting legislators still have reservations about the proposal but may still discuss it.

Ysursa graduated in 1971 from Gonzaga University and earned his law degree in 1974 from St. Louis University Law School. He began in 1974 as a deputy secretary of state and in 1976 became chief deputy secretary of state before being elected to his first term in 2002.

1 p.m. Participants are asked to bring a new pair of shoes in remembrance of a loved one.

"We want to symbolize people who have been lost. There is a person who belongs in those shoes," said Lori Stewart, event organizer and victim care coordinator with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

The shoes will be donated to the Valley House homeless shelter in Twin Falls. Stewart said shoes for children would be appreciated because the shelter is currently home to 39 children.

In the nation, Idaho has the 12th-highest rate for suicides — 19 per 100,000 people. Stewart said the number of suicides in the state jumped 22 percent between 2008 and 2009.

"We don't know why — if we did it would make our jobs easier," Stewart said. "The Mountain West states' (suicide rates) are all high. It may be the cowboy mentality — the 'I can do it myself' attitude or maybe the rural areas."

SPAN's main goal is to provide suicide prevention and education. Since Idaho is one of a handful of states without a suicide help line, Stewart said it's crucial for people to know where to turn if they are suicidal or know someone who is. Stewart said people are scared to ask their friends and family if they are suicidal but added that taking that risk may save a life.

"These deaths are preventable. There are resources and there is help," Stewart said. "People can call the national help line (800-273-8255), Canyon View (Behavioral Health Services) or 911 and they will get them connected to resources."

Docs ask Idaho to withdraw from health care suit

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Some Idaho doctors want the state attorney general to pull out of a federal lawsuit that they say wastes taxpayer money and bars Idahoans from the care they need.

On Tuesday, doctors belonging to Doctors for America sent Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden a letter requesting that he withdraw from a lawsuit to block implementation of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. Doctors in 19 other states did the same, said Doctors for America representative Josh Spaulding. Doctors for America is a nonprofit organization of 15,000 physicians and medical students that works to gain affordable access to quality care for all.

Meridian physician Tim McHugh said he and other doctors sent their letter to coincide with the law's six-month anniversary Thursday when some benefits kicked in. Tuesday was also when a Florida district court judge heard the case. The judge said he will probably dismiss parts of the lawsuit and will render his decision on Oct. 14.

Wasden added Idaho to a list of 11 lawsuit plaintiffs in March, shortly after President Barack Obama signed the act into law. In a March statement, Wasden said the health care reform bill was unconstitutional, making a states' rights argument.

Wasden spokeswoman Kriss Bivens Cloyd maintained the lawsuit was about "balancing the respective authority of federal and state government." McHugh and the other doctors disagreed in their letter.

"...we believe, as do many leading constitutional scholars, that the PPACA is not an attack on states rights, nor does it represent actions that exceed the powers of the federal government," the letter said. "Continuing to pursue your lawsuit, regardless of whether it succeeds or fails, will cause harm to our state and our patients."

When asked if Wasden would consider pulling out, Bivens Cloyd said Wasden was willing to meet with the doctors about their concerns.

"The constitutionality is sound and the case can't win," McHugh said. "So their only motivation has to be political."

McHugh said politics doesn't help his patients. He said one of his older patients suffers from ALS — known as Lou Gehrig's disease — lost his job and can't work. He can't get health insurance because of his pre-existing condition. The law could change that, McHugh said, but not if it's held up in the courts.

Hazelton man dies in industrial accident

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A Hazelton man died Thursday as the result of an industrial accident in Eden.

Michael Louder, 36, became pinned between a forklift and a potato cellar door while working that morning. Jerome County sheriff's deputies and Jerome County paramedics responded shortly after 9 a.m. in attempts to free Louder and revive him. Despite their efforts and assistance from air ambulance paramedics, Louder died at the scene.

Landlord accused of attacking pregnant woman

A Twin Falls landlord faces accusations of attacking a former tenant who was moving out.

Vivian L. Leazer, 65, allegedly struck Lori Bertsch on the morning of Aug. 25 while Bertsch was removing belongings from her rental property at 222 Eden St. W., Twin Falls. Leazer was arraigned on one charge of felony aggravated battery Wednesday in Twin Falls 5th District magistrate court and pleaded not guilty.

Leazer and her husband, Bob, had won an eviction lawsuit that day to remove Bertsch from the premises.

According to the police report, Bertsch told Twin Falls Police Officer Dan Heil that Leazer approached her and started to punch her in the face without provocation. Later, Leazer was alleged to have brought back a wooden post and taken swings at Bertsch's pregnant body. Bertsch claimed contact was made on her left hip. Leazer is also accused of breaking the tail light and denting a passenger-side door of Bertsch's 2008 Nissan Altima sedan.

The report further states that a Joshua Martinez witnessed the alleged battery while walking by the residence. Chris Bettis, who was helping Bertsch move her belongings out of the residence, also corroborated the story.

When interviewed by police, Leazer stated that as she went to write down the license plate of a vehicle used to haul Bertsch's property, they began arguing. Leazer told police that Bertsch instigated the fight by punching her in the face, going on to admit that she damaged Bertsch's car. She denied that she ever struck Bertsch with the post.

Leazer was cited for damaged property and issued a summons on the complaint of aggravated battery. A preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 8.

Jerome Co. deputies search for abduction suspect

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

There's a possible predator on the loose.

The Jerome County Sheriff's Office is asking the public for help with identifying a male suspect in the attempted abduction of a child.

Deputies responded to the Big Little Ranch/Sawtooth Acres subdivision Monday afternoon in regards to the attempted abduction of an 11-year-old girl. She told deputies that she had seen the same man in the subdivi-vision multiple times prior to Monday. Late that afternoon, he approached her while in a car, asking her to help him look for a lost dog.

Police composites of suspect

The girl ran and told adults what had happened.

The subdivision is located north of Golf Course Road and west of U.S. Highway 93 in southern Jerome County.

The subject is described as a white male, approximately 30 years old, standing 5 feet, 9 inches tall, with blond hair, and sometimes wearing sunglasses. He was reported as seen riding a dirt bike or driving an older blue, four-door sedan.

"With school back in session, parents should talk to their children about stranger danger," Sheriff Doug McFall said. "There could be people in the Magic Valley trying to do harm to children. Parents should teach their children to stay away from strangers and do like this girl did."

Anyone with information on the suspect may call the Jerome County Sheriff's Office, 644-2770, or the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, 324-1911.

planning and serving as an advocacy group for the citizens and the city. Two non-voting council members will also sit on the board. Two non-voting city staff members will serve the committee in an advisory fashion. The city requested that all applicants have financial knowledge or business experience and a commitment to the city of Twin Falls.

"I'm pretty impressed because I think all 15 could have served," said Johnson, who spearheaded the creation of the committee. "I don't think we could have made a bad choice."

The people who didn't make it to the interview stage of selection included two Twin Falls lawyers, a vice president at a local bank and Twin Falls County Commission candidate Randy Carpenter.

Councilmen on the task-force said some of the applicants presented concerns of time constraints and one applicant posed a problem of conflict of interest. That applicant withdrew himself from consideration.

Clow said he wanted the committee members to come from different backgrounds so it wouldn't be five people who were exactly the same.

"Almost everybody (who applied), in one way or another, was qualified," Clow said. "I don't think we ever said 'this person is not qualified for the position for some reason.'"

Johnson said he expected about a year of ramp-up time for the committee because of how complex city finances can be to learn, but that he would "lobby for anything to help them ramp up."

"Let's get this thing done," he said. "Let's get these volunteers to work."

"I used to say I'm a Democrat in my heart and a Republican in my pocket, but I kind of don't say that any more," said Paula Tucker of Nampa, a 47-year-old stay-at-home mom. "The Republican Party I think has lost its way with their fiscal perspective — they've said one thing and done another."

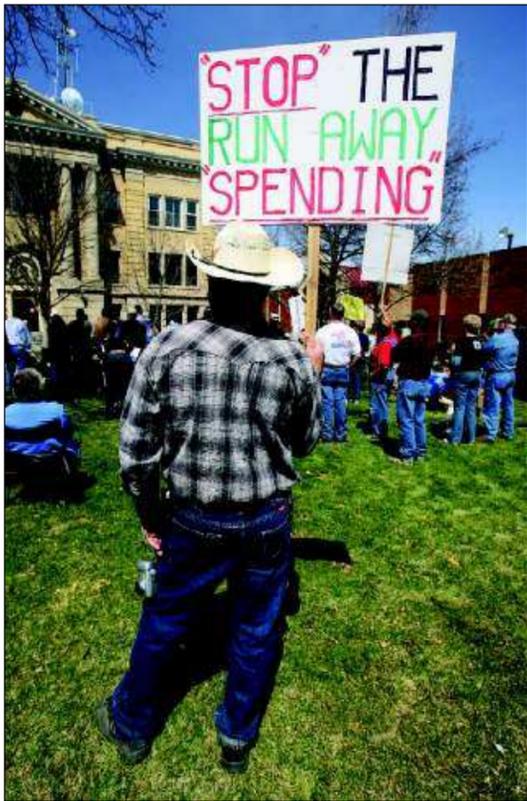

When compared to past Boise State University public policy surveys, which have measured party affiliation in Idaho for the past two decades, the new poll "would seem to indicate the Republicans gaining a little ground," said Jim Weatherby, BSU political scientist emeritus. "They have before when the Democrats have been in the White House. But it is also interesting to me how stable these numbers are over time, and how this is such a Republican state when it comes to elective office."

The 47 percent tally for Republicans matches the 2005 high mark the party got in the BSU survey over the last decade and a half, and is up from the 2008 survey's 40 percent. The 22 percent figure for Democrats is down from 25 percent in 2008, but equal to marks set several times in the past decade. Jonathan Parker, Idaho Republican Party executive director, said, "A lot of people that are conservative, who agree with many things in the Republican Party platform, don't necessarily consider themselves Republican. ... I think you're seeing a shift of those conservatives who are coming back."

Idaho's election results show many of those who say they're independents vote Republican, Parker said.

But independents differed from Republicans in the new poll on the question about generally supporting the agenda of the tea party movement, with Republicans overwhelmingly in support — 69 percent supporting to 13 percent opposed — and independents more opposed, with 38 percent supportive and 45 percent opposed. Among Democrats, just 18 percent supported the movement, and 75 percent were opposed.

"We've certainly speculated a lot over the years about who these independents are," Weatherby said.

"That gives you an idea they're a little more moderate than Republican voters."

Jim Hansen, executive director of the Idaho Democratic Party, said people are frustrated over everything from a severe economic downturn to concerns about affording health care. "The frustrations and the feelings and sentiments are very real."

But, he said, "When you say what is the solution, you get a long list of different ideas. Is repealing the 17th Amendment a solution?"

Parker said the Idaho Republican Party is strongly supportive of states' rights, and that's what delegates had in mind when they pushed for the platform plank on 17th Amendment repeal. "I think you would see a strong majority of Republicans supportive of granting more rights to the states, less to the federal government," he said.

Plus, he said, "That's a pretty prevalent theme amongst the tea party crowd, and many of those in the tea party who are new to politics, who haven't necessarily been party regulars, were very energized, got involved, ran and got elected as delegates to the state convention."

Chris Roeper of Emmett, a 47-year-old paint store operations manager and self-described conservative, said of the repeal effort: "I think it's just a step in taking some of the power and the responsibility away from the people, and I think the power needs to lie with the people."

But he likes the tea party movement. "I favor a lot of what they're talking about," Roeper said. "I like their kind of grass-roots approach."

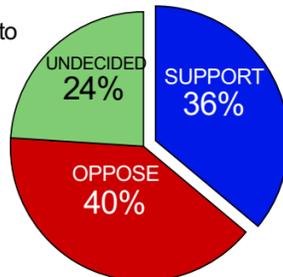

Tucker agreed. "I don't know exactly what their agenda is, but what I've seen of what they're doing I like, which is holding people accountable. ... I like that," she said. "I think it's mixing things up politically, and that's great."

Denney: Hart tax panel exit 'might be best'

BOISE (AP) — House Speaker Lawrence Denney says it "might be the best" for a lawmaker embroiled in a $700,000 tax dispute to be stripped of his assignment on a key legislative tax committee.

A seven-member House ethics panel voted Wednesday to recommend Rep. Phil Hart's removal from the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

Denney told The Associated Press Thursday he won't make a final decision until December. He first wants to sit down with Hart and discuss the matter. Still, Denney, a Republican from Midvale, said removing Hart from his tax panel duties, at least while he pursues his tax protest, "might be the best thing."

Before making their removal recommendation, a majority on the ethics committee concluded Hart didn't violate House conflict-of-interest rules or abuse privileges of his elected position in his tax dispute.

Woman charged in toddler's death appears in court

BOISE — A Boise woman has made a brief court appearance to hear a grand jury indictment on charges that she killed a 2-year-old boy. The Idaho Statesman reports that 4th District Magistrate Richard Schmidt did not allow a bond argument and did not acknowledge Boise attorney John Meienhofer, who was hired by the family to represent Katherine Stanfield on Wednesday. Boise police say Stanfield was caring for Wyatt, the son of her future son-in-law, last Dec. 11 when paramedics were called to the home. Emergency workers found the child unresponsive and rushed him to a hospital where he died. Stanfield's daughter Stacie Duval and her fiancé Lance Fesler, Wyatt's father say they believed she is innocent. Schmidt set her next appearance for Tuesday and said she could argue for bond reduction then.

Romney to campaign for Gov. Otter in Idaho Falls

BOISE — Former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney plans to campaign for Republican Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in Idaho Falls and Boise next month. Romney, discussed as a potential GOP presidential candidate in 2012, is set to visit on Oct. 6. Romney is a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, so campaigning with Otter in eastern Idaho's Mormon country may be aimed at giving him a boost in his race against Democrat Keith Allred. Allred is a Mormon, Otter a Catholic.

Federal grant to support climate research center

BOISE — The federal government is giving three Northwest universities $3.6 million over the next five years to collaborate on climate science and ecology. U.S. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar announced the grant Thursday for the University of Idaho, Oregon State University and the University of Washington. The schools will cooperate to form the Northwest Regional Climate Science Center. It's goal will be to support research and help natural resource officials better manage and adapt to climate change.

University of Idaho President Duane Nellis says the grant and the research that emerges from the center will have a significant influence on state industries and public agencies that oversee natural resources across the three-state region.

Labrador fundraiser planned in Puerto Rico

BOISE — Republican state lawmaker Raul Labrador plans to travel to his native Puerto Rico next week to raise money for his campaign against Democratic U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick.

A campaign flier says Puerto Rico Gov. Luis Fortuno is expected to attend a $500-per-person reception next Thursday for Labrador, who was born in the U.S. territory.

Labrador is challenging Minnick for Idaho's 1st Congressional District seat.

Eric Labrador, a Republican who served in former Puerto Rico Gov. Pedro Rossello's cabinet and is Labrador's half brother, is among nine dignitaries hosting the fundraiser.

40 groups write Northwest lawmakers on wide loads

BOISE — Forty environmental groups told Northwest lawmakers they want a "full project assessment" of oil equipment transports through Idaho and Montana to tar sands in Alberta, Canada.

Exxon Mobil has proposed more than 200 oversized shipments weighing up to 300 tons starting this winter from the inland port city of Lewiston along a narrow mountain highway on their way to the Kearl Oil Sands.

The groups, including Sierra Club, National Wildlife Federation and Trout Unlimited, on Wednesday wrote U.S. senators from Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Montana contending Exxon's project will harm people, towns, economies and environments in those states.

Many of the organizations oppose the shipments along U.S. Highway 12 that runs parallel to Idaho's Clearwater and Lochsa rivers.

Officials poison reservoir to kill invasive bait fish

LEWISTON (AP) — Idaho fisheries officials have poisoned the Deer Creek Reservoir with the chemical rotenone in an attempt to kill tens of thousands of golden shiners, an invasive bait fish.

Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials say they took the action to restore the reservoir as a trout fishery and prevent the shiners from reaching Dworshak Reservoir downstream.

"Right now we are letting the water sit in the reservoir for six weeks," Joe DuPont, the department's regional fish manager at Lewiston, told the Lewiston Tribune. "By that time (the rotenone) will become inert and we will drain the reservoir, which will take about four to six weeks, and then we will treat it again."

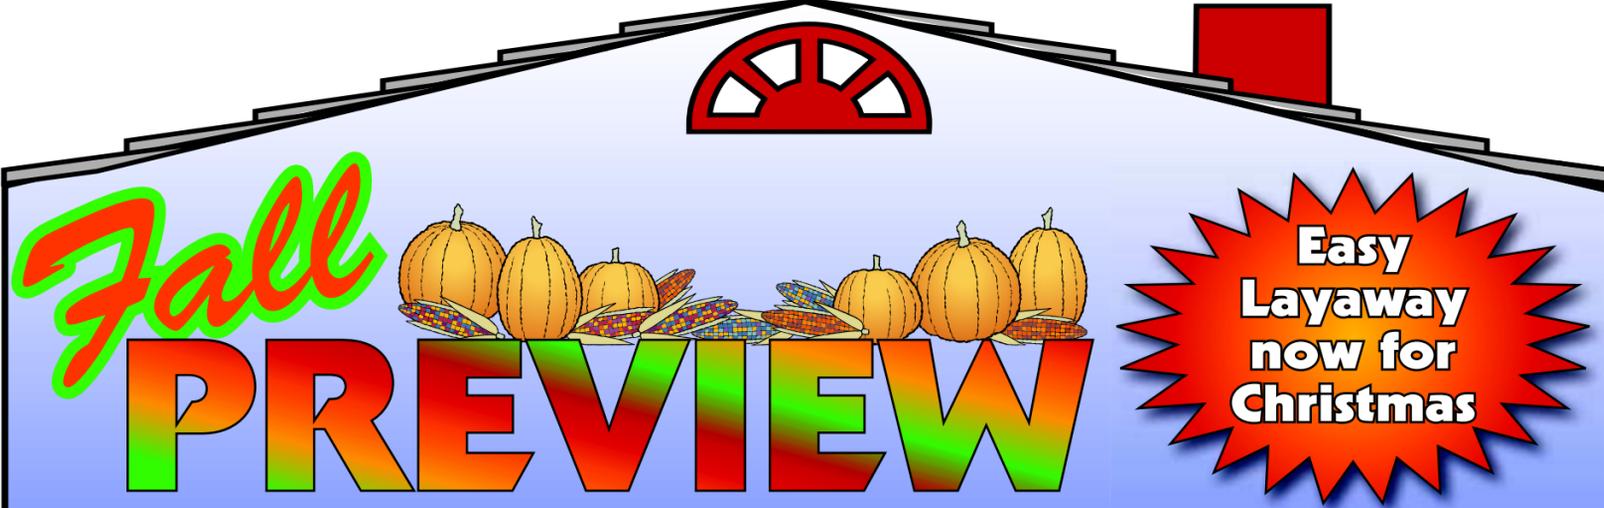

It's the second time in four years the agency has used the poison to try to eradicate shiners, a bait fish that can overwhelm and out-compete trout and other fish species. The reservoir was refilled and restocked with rainbow trout following the 2006 treatment. For three years, no golden shiners were detected there.

They came back this year, and DuPont says he believes they could have been planted maliciously by an angler. There is also a chance the 2006 treatment didn't kill all the fish, and that it took several years before they reached a population big enough to detect.

"If you look at the golden shiners, in places there are just thousands of these little pin-sized fry. It's possible these little fish can find little refuges and seeps that are hard to see," Dupont said. "We think we got them all, but you just never know."

To be sure, the reservoir will be drained and the stream will be treated again. Then the reservoir will be left empty over the winter so any damp areas outside of the stream will freeze.

New poll shows Idahoans can't be taken for granted

They're conservatives, but they're still independent, often contrarian Idahoans. That's the prevailing impression from Mason-Dixon Polling and Research Co.'s survey of Gem State voters' attitudes less than two months before the 2010 general election.

Among the highlights of the survey commissioned by seven Idaho newspapers and released this week:

- Idahoans support the decision by the Legislature not to increase taxes during the last legislative session, but they're not at all happy about the level of spending on the state's public schools.
- More than half of respondents say state spending on higher education is too high or about right. That's bad news for Idaho colleges and universities, which have experienced record-breaking cuts in state support over the past two years.

Our view:

Results from a new Mason-Dixon pre-election survey indicate that Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and the Republicans who control the Legislature underestimated the public's opposition to deep cuts in public education.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

lands from the federal government.

- In perhaps the most surprising finding, taxpayers would support raising taxes to avoid additional cuts in funding for public schools.
- While Republican U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, and U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, are solid favorites for re-election, Republican Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter still has less than 50 percent support with 20 percent of voters undecided. And the percent of voters who view him unfavorably — 29 percent — is high by Idaho standards for an incumbent governor seeking re-election.
- GOP Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, who is running for a second term against Democrat Stan Olson — a former Boise School District superintendent — still has the support of less than 50 percent of the electorate six weeks before the election. That's notable since 53 percent of voters don't even recognize Olson's name.
- While most Idahoans support the ideals of the tea party, only 7 percent consider themselves members.

So while it's a largely Republican electorate trending conservative, it's not overwhelmingly so. Voters still have significant doubts about some GOP incumbents, and they don't like what Otter and the Legislature did to public education in the past two years.

We'll find out more when Mason-Dixon releases another poll in October, but for now Idaho's electorate is — as it often has been in the past — unpredictable.

In America, two different worlds

The movers and shakers of our society seem similarly oblivious to the terrible destruction wrought by the economic storm that has roared through America. They've heard some thunder, perhaps, and seen some lightning, and maybe felt a bit of the wind. But there is nothing that society's leaders are doing — no sense of urgency in their policies or attitudes — that suggests they understand the extent of the economic devastation that has come crashing down like a plague on the poor and much of the middle class.

The American economy is on its knees and the suffering has reached historic levels. Nearly 44 million people were living in poverty last year, which is more than 14 percent of the population. That is an increase of 4 million over the previous year, the highest percentage in 15 years, and the highest number in more than a half-century of record-keeping. Millions more are teetering on the edge, poised to fall into poverty.

More than a quarter of all blacks and a similar percentage of Hispanics are poor. More than 15 million children are poor.

The movers and shakers, including most of the mainstream media, have paid precious little attention to this wide-scale economic disaster.

Meanwhile, the middle class, hobbled for years with the stagnant incomes that accompany extreme employment insecurity, is now in retreat. Joblessness, home foreclosures, personal bankruptcy — pick your poison. Median family incomes were 5 percent lower in 2009 than they were a decade earlier. The Harvard economist Lawrence Katz told The New York Times, "This is the first time in memory that an entire decade has produced essentially no economic growth for the typical American household."

I don't know what it will take, maybe a full-blown depression, for policy makers to decide that they need to take extraordinary additional steps to cope with this drastic economic and employment emergency. Nothing currently on the table will turn things around in a meaningful way. We're facing a jobs deficit of about 11 million, which is about how many new ones we'd have to create just to get our heads above water. It will take years — years — just to get employment back to where it was when the recession struck in December 2007.

If Republicans take over the policy levers, forget about it. The party of Palin, Limbaugh and Boehner — with its tax cuts for the rich and obsession with the deregulatory, free-market zealotry that brought us the Great Recession — will only accelerate the mass march into poverty.

The GOP wants to further shred the safety net, wants to give corporations even greater clout over already debased workers, and wants to fatten the coffers of the already obscenely rich.

While working people are suffering the torments of joblessness, underemployment and dwindling compensation, corporate profits have rebounded and the financial sector is once again living the high life. This helps to keep the people at the top comfortably in denial about the extent of the carnage.

Millions of struggling voters have no idea which way to turn. They are suffering under the status quo, but those with any memory at all are afraid of a rerun of the catastrophic George W. Bush era. An Associated Press article, based on recent polling, summed the matter up: "Glum and distrustful, a majority of Americans today are very confident in — nobody?"

What is desperately needed is leadership that recognizes the depth and intensity of the economic crisis facing so many ordinary Americans. It's time for the movers and shakers to lift the shroud of oblivion and reach out to those many millions of Americans trapped in a world of hurt.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Americans need to look in the mirror

Campaigning at the Twin Falls County Fair, I was approached by a man who identified himself as a conservative Republican. He said he was concerned about partisan polarization and its impact on the country. We talked a bit and then he said, "We need a common enemy to pull us together." I answered, "We have one and it is 'us.'" He thought a minute and then nodded his head in agreement.

Our problems are self-imposed. We have abandoned in large measure the ideals this country was founded on. We have taken on the colonial arrogance that we fought to free ourselves of. Greed and the quick buck have been made virtues. Hard work, once a valued currency, is looked down on and avoided at all cost. Self and selfish interest plays above the common good. Less government can only come about through more personal responsibility.

It is our nation's ethnic, cultural and spiritual diversity that makes us the incredible tapestry that we are. Why would we want everyone to be the same? We learn a great deal when exposed to other belief systems. We're enriched by mixing with other cultures. Our horizons are expanded when we interact with others that have real interest and passion in what they do. Are we so into competition that we have lost the value of cooperation, of community? If so, then truly we are our own worst enemy. We can do much better.

BILL CHISHOLM Buhl
(Editor's note: Bill Chisholm is the Democratic nominee for the Idaho House of Representatives Seat 23B).

Jerome jail proposals leave many questions

Jerome really needs a new jail. That's a fact. Should we purchase a jail the way our county commissioners are proposing? I wouldn't. Also, I don't think there is a bank that would let me.

I assume that the reason Jerome voters turned down two jail proposals was due to the lease option, giving the commissioners $13 million to do what they thought was best. The voters wanted a bond so they would know what they were getting for their money. So far, I still can't find out what we would get for $13 million. I haven't seen a full set of blueprints. I don't know who will build the jail. I have no idea how much it will cost the taxpayers to run this jail.

We are getting a bunch of maybes: Maybe it will be 18,400 square feet or maybe it will be 40,300 square feet. Maybe the county can rent bed space and make extra income. Will this new jail be "green" or be your standard energy-consuming building? Has the county submitted the proper materials to the ISA Standards Committee for review? I don't think so.

To me, the same circumstances that caused taxpayers to vote down the lease option still exist. Nothing has changed. The commissioners decided to put down $10K (non-refundable) for 80 acres across from the airport for the proposed jail. These questions should have been answered before the down payment: Can a jail be built near the airport? Is there water on this farm ground? Can the county hook up to the city sewer and water? Is $5,375 per acre a good buy? What is the county going to do with the excess land? Would you purchase land this way? I wouldn't.

I'm voting no until the commissioners get it right.
RALPH FRIEDEMANN Jerome

It's our fault, but we can fix it in November

The government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the Earth. When is this great nation going to be a government of the people, by the people and for the people?

It would appear to me it is time to stand up as our forefathers did and take our government back. We need to get our vote back, the real vote so when the lawmakers vote on a law we have at least been informed in a just and timely manner, where we can let our representatives know what our vote is.

With that said, I am going to hear, "That's the president's fault." I say bullpucky. No one person in the United States has that power! It's our fault; we have failed each other. We can fix that in November with sensible votes (not party votes). The parties are just fighting amongst themselves to see who's going to dictate to us this term.

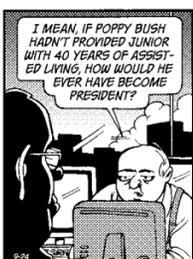

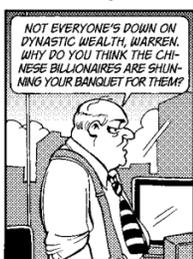

Remember history; elected officials were only paid to make up for their losses from their regular jobs. Now they are some of the highest paid people in the United States. They are our employees. It's time to start firing until we get ones that listen to us — ones that follow the rules, not change them to suit their needs.

It's not about them; it is about us. They extended retirement laws. The president is limited to two terms, and the rest have unlimited terms. They are quick to simply change the law or the language of the law to get their way. Maybe some of us should run for office. Oh, I forgot, we don't have enough money; sorry Freudian slip. That's why I didn't run for Congress.

Thanks for reading.

Craigslist can't sell my sink and sex too

It is with great regret that I conclude Craig Newmark of the near-eponymous website Craigslist doesn't deserve me.

Looking around my house, I see a Shaker chest of drawers, English pine table, espresso machine and a semi-antique Serapi rug all acquired by way of Craigslist for a fraction of what I would have paid elsewhere. Then there's the 1998 Honda still running like a dream. Thanks to Newmark, no one from Philadelphia to the Philippines ever needs to pay full price for a futon again.

My regret comes from having to exit the community of willing buyers and sellers when I still have a garbage disposal and stainless-steel sink, left over from a kitchen renovation, to sell.

But exit I did, because of how mightily Craigslist co-founder Newmark and Chief Executive Officer Jim Buckmaster have resisted efforts to curtail the rampant prostitution facilitated by ads on their site, at least some of which, I and others believe, involves non-consensual sex and underage victims.

Part of what makes Craigslist such a bad player in all this is that it makes the deviant seem normal. The ease of use that has made Craigslist such a phenomenal success applies equally to mundane transactions and illegal ones.

In one section you can buy a couch — "six-springs, hand-tied and lightly used" — and in another order up a boy or girl. Descriptions such as "fresh" and "new to town" are code for the underage models. The only difference is that the "adult services" posts (formerly known as "erotic services") charge fees that could bring Craigslist an estimated $44 million this year, according to The New York Times.

Earlier this month, under pressure of legal action from 17 attorneys general, Craigslist shut down, at least temporarily, the "adult services" section, putting a black "censored" banner over it, as if its First Amendment rights had been violated. It has since pulled the "censored" label from the site.

If it was a form of censorship, then it was self-censorship in hopes of keeping law enforcement at bay. It also was unlikely to make a real difference, since Craigslist's executives themselves have said the ads in question can simply migrate to other sections of the website.

There can be little doubt that there's a huge problem, here and internationally, in sex trafficking of underage kids and that Craigslist helps the trade. A study in Georgia found that Craigslist ads offering sex with young females receive three times as many responses as the same ads on competitor sites.

Recent advertisements in The Washington Post and the San Francisco Chronicle helped bring attention to the problem. Sponsored by groups including the Rebecca Project for Human Rights, the ad was written as a letter to Newmark from two women, identified only by their initials.

One, "A.K.," told of having her picture posted online by a male acquaintance twice her age who forced her into a life of prostitution: "I was sold for sex by the hour at truck stops and cheap motels —

10 hours with 10 different men every night. This became my life."

Buckmaster reacted by publicly requesting police records for the crimes alleged in the ad, thus raising doubts about its veracity while insincerely saying Craigslist wanted "to learn more so we can improve our preventative measures." Maligning the victims is an age-old strategy of lawyers defending accused sex offenders.

Buckmaster does have his defenders — First Amendment absolutists, some of his peers in the tech community, some online publications that seem to consider Newmark a fellow traveler in a brave new medium.

One common line of defense goes like this: It's easier to trace culprits on Craigslist than it is with just a telephone number from an ad in the newspaper or phonebook, so we're better off keeping these solicitations active on Craigslist. But I have to believe the police are competent enough that they don't really need, or want, Craigslist's help.

Craigslist says that it manually screens all ads, looking for evidence of trafficking in minors. Yet the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children received fewer than 50 reports of misuse in 2009, out of millions of users who frequent the site, a woefully inadequate effort at monitoring the ads.

Count this journalist as recoiling in horror at a website that enables the worst mistreatment of the most vulnerable — even if it means for the time being holding onto an extra kitchen sink.

Big spenders find GOP success

The Republican establishment in Washington is bracing itself for an influx of fiscally conservative insurgents this fall, as Tea Party candidates from Utah, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Wisconsin, Nevada and other states have either secured their party's Senate nominations or are running strong. Bemoaning the earthquake their arrival on Capitol Hill portends, former Senate majority leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., told The Washington Post, "We don't need a lot of Jim DeMint disciples" in the Senate, adding "as soon as they get here, we need to co-opt them."

Jim DeMint can rest easy. It is unlikely that folks like Mike Lee, Ron Johnson or Sharron Angle will be co-opted if they win. But come November there may be some new Republican senators eager to join the club. While the media has focused on the rise of the Tea Party movement and the success of conservative insurgents in GOP primaries, there is another smaller insurgency taking place under the radar screen — a quiet insurgency of more moderate Republicans for whom fiscal discipline is not a top priority.

With the departure of Sen. Arlen Specter to the Democratic Party, it seemed as if Republican moderates were a dying breed. All that was left of the troika that put President Obama's $787 billion stimulus over the top were the women from Maine — Sen. Susan Collins and Sen. Olympia Snowe. But then Sen. Scott Brown arrived in January, and he has hewed a centrist course — recently joining Collins and Snowe in providing the GOP votes needed to pass both President

Marc A. Thiessen

Obama's big spending "jobs" bill (aka "son of stimulus") and his financial regulation bill filled with budget gimmicks that will eventually add more than $5 billion to the deficit. Judging from the comments on Brown's Facebook page, many Tea Party activists believe they were duped. But the Republican senator from Massachusetts is simply voting like, well, a Massachusetts Republican.

In North Dakota, Republican Gov. John Hoeven has a huge lead over his Democratic opponent and will almost certainly be elected to replace retiring Sen. Byron Dorgan. Hoeven is a solid conservative on many issues, and he would certainly be an improvement over Dorgan. But he is a big spender. According to the Cato Institute, he has raised per capita spending by almost 7 percent annually since 2003. In just two legislative sessions beginning in 2007, Hoeven presided over a whopping 60 percent increase in spending. Last year, North Dakota Democrats even launched ads declaring Hoeven the "biggest spender in North Dakota history." While he is not a deficit spender, he is not, suffice it to say, a spending hawk in the Tea Party mold.

Then there is Rep. Roy Blunt, who is running slightly ahead Secretary of State Robin Carnahan in Missouri. Like Hoeven, Blunt is a conservative on many fronts — but spending is not one of them. Blunt has been a prolific earmarker during his 12 years in Congress. In 2010 alone, he has requested $153 million in earmarks — prompting Carnahan to swear off all earmarks in a bid to get to the right of Blunt on fiscal issues. Carnahan campaigns as if she were the Tea Party candidate, accusing Blunt of having "become famous for his pork-barrel spending" and calling him a "prodigious porkmeister." This month, Blunt responded with an ad promising he would vote as a fiscal conservative in the Senate: "Irresponsible spending and crippling debt are killing jobs today and our children's future tomorrow. That's wrong and I'll fight to change it." Blunt is not alone in trying to regain ground on fiscal discipline. In the current environment, even GOP moderates are tacking to the right on fiscal issues — at least rhetorically. Republican Mark Kirk, who is running for Obama's old Senate seat, recently warned that Illinois is rapidly falling into the same financial situation as Greece (his opponent is, conveniently, of Greek descent) and declared that "Spending is not the way to go."

In this year's election, the driving force behind the conservative insurgency is a demand for fiscal responsibility. So it is ironic that the GOP revolution of 2010 may well sweep some big-spending Republicans into the Senate. If several Tea Party candidates stumble and fall, there is even a chance the big spenders could even make up a majority of the new Republican senators. That would undoubtedly bring a smile to Trent Lott's face.

Police lead Matthew Perkins into the Coffee County Jail in Manchester, Tenn., early Thursday. Perkins is a suspect in a triple murder in Manchester after Perkins' girlfriend and her two young children were found dead in a closet of their home.

Family slayings shake police in Tenn. town

By Lucas L. Johnson II
Associated Press writer

MANCHESTER, Tenn. — A soldier who served in Afghanistan and Iraq is accused of killing his girlfriend and her two young children, stuffing their corpses into plastic garbage bags and hiding them in a closet for days.

A neighbor says he noticed an unusual stillness at the house normally busy with the toddlers and their friendly mother. When police in this small town investigated a missing person's report Wednesday night, they said they found a "very gruesome" crime scene that rattled even veteran investigators.

"It's the worst I've seen, and I've been here 30 years," said Ray Stewart, a police investigator in this town of 10,000 that hosts the Bonnaroo Music and Arts Festival each summer.

Manchester Police Chief Ross Simmons identified the victims as 26-year-old Stephanie Hershman and her sons, 3-year-old Jathan and 1-year-old Jaylon.

Police said 30-year-old Matthew Perkins, of Tullahoma, told someone Wednesday night that he had killed the family, and the person went to police. The U.S. Army recruiter who has served overseas is charged with three counts of first-degree murder and is being held in the Franklin County jail on a $6 million bond.

Army records show Perkins enlisted in 2000 as an infantryman out of Murray, Ky., and served in Afghanistan from April 2004 until April 2005 before a tour of Iraq, from August 2006 until October 2007. He has been a recruiter in Tullahoma since July 2008.

His arraignment was set for Tuesday. A spokeswoman for the clerk's office said it wasn't known if Perkins had an attorney.

Police believe the three were killed on Sunday. They did not release a cause of death but said the bodies have been turned over to a medical examiner.

Perkins was not the children's father. Investigator Billy Butler said Perkins is separated from his wife of 10 years, Jennifer Perkins. She was at the police station for questioning on Thursday morning, but declined to be interviewed by a reporter.

Clint Orr, who leased a house to the Perkins for two years until May, said they had been good tenants.

"He seemed like a pleasant person," Orr said. "I didn't see anything like what I heard today."

Butler said the couple have two children and that Jennifer Perkins described her husband as a good father.

The slain children's father, Jeremy Hershman, is currently incarcerated on drug charges, Simmons said. Police said he is very distraught.

Newark, NJ, schools to get $100M Facebook donation

The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — Mark Zuckerberg, the 26-year-old wunderkind behind Facebook is making a move to become a philanthropy just before the opening of a film that portrays him as less than charitable.

Zuckerberg

The recipient of his $100 million donation — thought to be the biggest of his young life — is the Newark public schools, a long-struggling district that could use the money to become a laboratory for reforms.

The donation is being announced today on Oprah Winfrey's TV show in an arrangement that brings together the young Internet tycoon, Newark's celebrated Democratic mayor and a governor who has quickly become a star of the Republican party.

The unusual coalition is more evidence of the growing cache of the cause of remaking urban public schools, an issue that has long confounded educators and advocates.

"What you're seeing is for the reform-40 set, education under is what feeding kids in Africa was in 1980," said Derrell Bradford, the executive director of the Newark-based education reform group Excellent Education for Everyone. "Newark public schools are like the new Live Aid."

Bugs in baby formula? Recall worries parents

The Associated Press

Worried parents have bombarded the maker of Similac with phone calls and peppered Facebook and Twitter pages over fears about insects in the top-selling baby formula after millions of cans were recalled.

But the company said Thursday it's unlikely any of the formula already sold is tainted, and doctors offered more reassurance: Even if babies drink bug-tainted formula, the chance for serious harm is slim.

"There's no reason for parents to panic," said Dr. Joseph Gigante, an associate professor of pediatrics at Vanderbilt Children's Hospital in Nashville, Tenn. Symptoms might include a mild upset stomach, but he says that should last only a few days.

Still, parents like Stephanie Roseman of Farmington Hills, Mich., are upset. Her 3-month-old son seemed like he had a stomach ache this week after drinking formula from one of Abbott's recalled lots. So Roseman's switching to a rival formula.

"He was definitely fussy, and he's not a fussy kid at all," said Roseman, 33. "I wish they were a little more careful screening what's going into the formula."

North Chicago, Ill.-based Abbott voluntarily recalled 5 million cans and plastic containers of Similac powdered formula only as a precaution after small common beetles were found at its Sturgis, Mich., manufacturing plant, said company spokeswoman Kelly Morrison.

The bugs are a common warehouse beetle that were found near a production line late last week.

FIND OUT MORE

Abbot has set up a website, www.similac.com/recall, and consumer hot line, (800) 986-8850, where consumers can find out if they have products with the affected lot numbers. It said those products should be returned to the company for a full refund.

Abbott immediately stopped production and then tested containers of formula from that line. Morrison said "99.8 percent of product was not contaminated."

"Chances are really, really remote" that beetle parts made it into formula that was sold to consumers, but the products were recalled just in case they might contain beetle parts or larvae, Morrison told AP.

Similac is the top-selling infant formula in the United States. Abbott's nutritional products, including adult brands like Ensure, had worldwide sales of $5.3 billion last year.

Morrison said Abbott expects to lose $100 million because of the recall.

Recalled products include certain lots of Similac Advance LCP with iron powder, Go and Grow milk powder and Isomil Advance Powder. Morrison stressed that liquid formula is not involved.

Affected products were sent throughout the United States, and to Bermuda, Guam, Puerto Rico and 17 other countries in the Caribbean region including Jamaica and Haiti.

"Delivering anything less than the highest quality formula ... is unacceptable to us," Morrison said. "We will do whatever is necessary to maintain the trust of parents."

Congress to send small business bill to Obama

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-controlled Congress on Thursday sent President Barack Obama a long-delayed bill to help struggling small businesses with easier credit and other incentives to expand and hire new workers.

The $40 billion-plus bill is the last vestige of the heralded jobs agenda that Obama and Democrats promoted early this year. They ended up delivering only a fraction of what they promised after emboldened Senate Republicans blocked most of the agenda with filibusters.

The Senate passed the measure last week. The 237-187 House vote Thursday that sent the bill to the president split along party lines as Democrats praised the measure for creating a $30 billion federal fund to help smaller banks issue loans to small businesses and for cutting taxes by $12 billion over the coming decade.

"It combines ... tax relief with increased access to critical financing so that our nation's small businesses can move forward on new or delayed expansion plans," said Rep. Chellie Pingree, D-Maine. "Small-business growth means job creation."

Republicans, poised for big gains in midterm elections just six weeks away, said the new loan fund is just a smaller version of the unpopular 2008 bailout of the financial system.

"What we have today before us is junior TARP," said Rep. Lincoln Diaz-Balart, R-Fla.

While community bankers enthusiastically support the measure, it's getting only tepid support from GOP-leaning small-business groups, which are more focused on expiring tax cuts.

"There's some OK stuff in it, but the impact's going to be minimal," said Bill Rys, tax

Agriculture Corn extends slide

By Jeff Wilson
Bloomberg News writer

CHICAGO — Corn prices fell for a third day Wednesday since reaching a 23-month high on speculation that farmers will increase sales of newly harvested crops in the United States, the world's largest grower and exporter.

"Farmers have little incentive to store corn in commercial elevators, so we probably will see more corn sold at harvest this year," said Dale Durchholz, the senior market analyst for AgriVisor in Bloomington, Ill. "Harvest will be in full swing by this weekend."

In north-central Iowa, the biggest U.S. producer, farmers sold corn for $4.51 a bushel on Sept. 17, the highest price since September 2008 and up 38 percent since the end of June, government data show. Corn futures for delivery in March traded at a 13-cents premium to the December contract, less than the 18 cents to 20 cents that commercial grain elevators will charge to store grain until after Jan. 1, Durchholz said.

Corn futures for December delivery fell 0.25 cent to settle at $5.05 a bushel at 1:15 p.m. on the Chicago Board of Trade. On Sept. 20, the most-active contract touched $5.2375, the highest price since Sept. 30, 2008. The grain has risen 35 percent since the end of June, heading for the first consecutive quarterly increases since the end of June 2008.

Corn also fell on speculation that yields from the remaining U.S. crop will improve after disappointing results during the early harvest, Durchholz said.

An estimated 18 percent of the crop was harvested as of Sept. 19, up from the average of 10 percent at the same time in the previous five seasons, the USDA said last week. Farmers will collect a record 13.16 billion bushels, down from 13.365 billion forecast in August, the department said on Sept. 10.

Blockbuster tries to rewrite script in bankruptcy

By Mae Anderson and Michael Liedtke
Associated Press writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Blockbuster video stores used to be the town square for home entertainment, bustling with people roaming the aisles in search of a movie that the whole family could enjoy in their living room for just a few bucks.

The stores melded discovery and convenience, making it possible to stumble upon a movie that you would never have bothered to see in the theaters and be back on your couch in a matter of minutes with your own bowl of popcorn.

And if you were on the fence about buying a VCR back in the 1980s, Blockbuster was everywhere, turning the decision into a no-brainer.

Now we're more likely to pluck DVDs out of a mailbox or a vending machine in the local supermarket — or get even more immediate gratification by playing a movie through cable or high-speed Internet.

The long shift finally pushed Blockbuster Inc. into bankruptcy

Thursday, raising the possibility that another cultural touchstone could crumble amid the upheaval unleashed by new technology and savvy entrepreneurs who know how to exploit it.

For now, Blockbuster intends to continue operating its remaining 3,300 U.S. stores under Chapter 11 protection, although analysts expect hundreds of them to close under new owners led by billionaire investor Carl Icahn.

FCC opens up unused TV signals for broadband

By Joelle Tessler
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission is opening up unused airwaves between television channels for wireless broadband networks that will be more powerful and can reach farther than today's Wi-Fi hotspots.

The five-member FCC voted unanimously Thursday to allow the use of so-called "white spaces" in the broadcast TV spectrum to deliver broadband connections that can function like Wi-Fi networks on steroids. The agency is calling the new technology "super Wi-Fi" and hopes to see devices with the technology start to appear within a year.

FCC Chairman Julius Genachowski said white spaces networks will serve as "a powerful platform for innovation," driving billions in industry investment.

Leading technology companies, including Google Inc., Microsoft Corp. and Dell Inc., are eager to develop the market. They say television white spaces are ideally suited for broadband because they are able to penetrate walls, have plenty of capacity and can travel several miles.

Just like the spectrum used by Wi-

Fi, white spaces will be available to all users for free, with no license required. The FCC hopes they will help ease strain on the nation's increasingly crowded airwaves as more consumers go online using laptops and data-hungry smart phones.

Computer maker Dell, for one, envisions white spaces networks that will be able to send streaming video and other multimedia content to electronic devices around the home, deliver broadband to rural areas that currently lack high-speed Internet access and create "large-scale hot spots."

"By opening this broadcast spectrum for Internet use, the commission is helping to unleash a whole new class of mobile wireless broadband services with applications that are nearly limitless," Dell Chairman and Chief Executive Michael Dell said in a statement.

Although the FCC first voted to allow the use of white spaces for broadband nearly two years ago, the plan ran into serious opposition from television broadcasters worried about interference with their over-the-air signals. Wireless

President Obama addresses the United Nations General Assembly at U.N. headquarters in New York on Thursday.

Obama challenges world: Time for Mideast peace

By Christi Parsons and Paul Richter
Tribune Washington Bureau

UNITED NATIONS — President Obama on Thursday pushed Arab nations to provide more political and financial support for the Middle East peace effort, warning that they should not risk the failure of the latest initiative if they truly seek an independent Palestinian state and stability across the region.

Obama, speaking to the United Nations General Assembly, deplored efforts, assisted by some Arab and Muslim countries, to isolate or “delegitimize” Israel.

But Obama also asked for a sacrifice by the Israelis, using the U.N. forum to renew his call for Israel to continue its freeze on construction in disputed areas that is set to expire Sunday.

“Our position on this issue is well known,” Obama said. “We believe that the moratorium should be extended. We also believe that talks should press on until completed.”

Those who support self-government of the Palestinians should help the Palestinian Authority by giving political and financial support to build the institutions of their state, Obama said. Compromise will be hard, he said, but it is better than the alternative.

“If an agreement is not reached, Palestinians will never know the pride and dignity that comes with their own state,” Obama said. “Israelis will never know the certainty and security that comes with sovereignty and stable neighbors who are committed to coexistence.”

Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas was present in the chamber for Obama’s speech, but Israeli Prime Minister

Benjamin Netanyahu did not come to New York for the assembly.

The remarks came in a speech in which Obama spoke broadly of the international community’s shared responsibility to support democracy and human rights, and he called upon world leaders not to “stand idly by” as dissidents are imprisoned and protesters are beaten.

He praised his administration’s attempts to fight threats from extremists without deploying large U.S. armies, obliquely referring to a sweeping strategy that includes collaboration with foreign governments and strikes by unmanned aircraft against terrorist targets. The administration does not publicly discuss the drone program.

Obama’s appeal to Arab leaders comes at a time when it appears that the 3-week-old U.S.-led Mideast peace initiative could collapse over the issue of the moratorium. Leaders of the Palestinian Authority have threatened to abandon the negotiations if the moratorium is allowed to expire.

As that issue simmers, the Obama administration has been trying to build support in the Arab world for the peace talks. Without it, the weak Palestinian Authority leadership may not have the stature to make risky and unpopular compromises with the Israelis.

Obama is pressing for cooperation on a range of security and economic matters during his three days at the United Nations.

A constant in all of Obama’s one-on-one meetings with world leaders this week is the push to curtail the Iranian nuclear program, and in his speech the president again called on Tehran to confirm the “peaceful intent” of its nuclear ambitions.

HOW THEY’D GOVERN

GOP, Democrats offer dueling governing plans

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — These are two remarkably different visions for governing America. Republicans are pledging to shrink the government, cut taxes and undo health care and stimulus laws. President Obama and Democrats want tax cuts for the middle class, more stimulus spending and an end to the outsourcing of U.S. jobs.

With Thursday’s release of the GOP’s “Pledge to America” — a strongly worded manifesto promising to return government to the people, trim it through deep spending cuts, and refocus it on defense and tax cuts — the two parties have laid out deeply contrasting agendas for the next two years.

Less than six weeks before midterm congressional elections, it’s promise-making time for both parties, and voters are getting some insight into how the two parties want to change the country.

Still, many of the vows on both sides are deliberately vague. The reality behind each party’s stirring rhetoric is that little may change after Election Day.

Republicans are poised to add substantially to their ranks in the contests, perhaps enough to give them control of the House and to whittle Democrats’ margin of control to almost nothing in the Senate.

If Democrats hang onto power, their majority is virtually certain to be weakened considerably, leaving them little room to maneuver on unfinished items on their agenda, including energy legislation to curb carbon emissions and creation of a path to legal status for millions of illegal immigrants.

Either way, it’s a recipe for likely gridlock, with the GOP positioned to stymie Obama on everything from the budget to immigration policy. Veto showdowns could become common, and neither party would command enough votes to force through major initiatives.

The starkest differences are on spending and taxes. Republicans want to extend

Republicans outline pledge to Americans

House Republicans promised to end a slew of Democratic policies and restore Americans’ trust in government as they rolled out a campaign manifesto that recalled Republicans’ 1994 “Contract With America.”

“Pledge to America,” 2010 “Contract with America,” 1994

ECONOMY

- Permanently stop all tax increases
- Allow small business owners to take a tax deduction equal to 20 percent of their business income
- Require congressional approval of any new federal regulation that has an annual cost to our economy of $100 million or more
- Repeal the mandate of reporting any purchases that run more than $600 to the IRS
- Introduce legislation for $500 per child tax credit, and to begin repeal of the marriage tax penalty
- Introduce legislation to raise the Social Security earnings limit, repeal 1993 tax hikes on Social Security benefits
- Introduce legislation for small business incentives and to make cuts in the capital gains tax

GOVERNMENT SPENDING

- Reduce wasteful spending and immediately cancel unspent “stimulus” funds
- Set strict budget caps to limit federal spending on an annual basis
- Hold weekly votes on spending cuts
- End the Troubled Asset Relief Program, which assisted banks and financial institutions
- Impose a net hiring freeze on non-security federal employees
- Require a three-fifths majority vote to pass a tax increase
- Implement zero base-line budgeting
- Introduce a balanced budget/tax limitation amendment and a legislative line-item veto “to restore fiscal responsibility to an out-of-control Congress”

HEALTH CARE

- Repeal and replace the health care reform law and enact medical liability legislation
- Prohibit taxpayer funding of abortion
- Prohibit welfare to minor mothers and deny additional federal assistance for “additional children” while on welfare; cut welfare spending; enact a “two-years-and-out” welfare provision with work requirements
- Provide tax incentives for private long-term care insurance

GOVERNMENT REFORM

- Ensure that bills be published online for at least three days before coming up for a vote
- Require each bill moving through Congress to include a clause citing the specific constitutional authority
- End the practice of packaging unpopular bills and advance legislative issues one at a time
- Promise a “first-ever vote on term limits to replace career politicians with citizen legislators”
- Require all laws that apply to the rest of the country also apply equally to the Congress
- Cut the number of House committees, and cut committee staff by one-third

NATIONAL SECURITY

- Require that all troop funding bills be free of any extraneous issues
- Prevent the government from importing terrorists onto American soil
- Ensure foreign terrorists, such as the 9/11 conspirators, are tried in military court
- Introduce a bill requiring no U.S. troops under United Nations’ command all of George W. Bush’s income tax cuts permanently — at a cost of some $4 trillion over 10 years — and add new ones including a 20 percent deduction for small businesses.

Democrats are proposing to keep the rates where they are for individuals making up to $200,000 and for families earning up to $250,000 — but to hit wealthier individuals and some small businesses with tax hikes in January. Their plan would cost $3 trillion. They’re also proposing to give investment tax breaks to small businesses. In addition, Democrats want to impose tax penalties on companies that move jobs and factories overseas and to offer tax breaks for firms that bring jobs back to the United States.

On spending, Republicans say they want to roll the government back to 2008 levels, although they would leave intact three politically untouchable constituencies: veterans, seniors and the military. They say they’d freeze stimulus projects and impose hard limits on future spending, although they did not propose a ban on earmarks — the now-infamous practice of individual lawmakers steering projects to their districts.

It’s unclear how much could be saved through these measures. Most of the $814 billion in stimulus money has already been spent. The GOP estimates its cuts would amount to $100 billion in savings a year, but budget experts say the figure could be far less.

Exempting veterans, seniors and defense spending “leaves a pretty small slice of pie to be whittling away at, and hard to believe there is $100 billion in savings available as promised,” Steve Ellis of the watchdog group Taxpayers for Common Sense wrote in an e-mail.

“Political promises come and go, we will have to see if this product has any traction or is even remotely imple-

House Minority Leader John Boehner of Ohio pauses as he announces the GOP agenda, ‘A Pledge to America,’ Thursday at a lumber yard in Sterling, Va.

Democrats, for their part, are calling for more spending to jump-start the ailing economy. Obama has proposed a $50 billion road-, railway- and runway-building plan as well as a new infrastructure bank to pay for future projects.

The two parties are deeply at odds on health care.

Republicans would repeal this year’s big overhaul, presumably canceling parts that began taking effect Thursday: letting young adults remain on family health plans until they turn 26, providing free preventive care and ending denials of coverage to kids with pre-existing conditions.

The GOP proposes to replace the measure with an array of changes to make it easier for individuals to find private insurance and pay for medical care. Those include letting people buy coverage outside their states, expanding state programs that cover high-risk patients who can’t otherwise get insurance and expanding the use of tax-advantaged savings accounts to cover medical costs.

Like Democrats, Republicans say they would put an end to lifetime and annual coverage limits and bar insurers from canceling coverage for people who get sick. But the GOP stops short of making it illegal to deny insurance to anyone with a pre-existing condition. The Pledge to America says that would be so only for people who already had coverage.

There are plenty of question marks in both parties’ agendas. Neither has been specific about how it would accomplish the trickiest items.

Democrats delay vote on extending Bush tax cuts

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders decided Thursday to delay a vote on preserving soon-to-expire middle class tax cuts until after congressional elections in November.

President Obama has made extending the cuts a priority, and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid tried to forge a consensus among fellow Democrats to pass a bill before voters choose their congressmen and senators on Nov. 2.

But Reid, a Democrat from Nevada, decided to delay any vote after a meeting with other Senate Democrats failed to produce an agreement on how to proceed.

“Democrats believe we must permanently extend tax cuts for the middle-class before they expire at the end of the year, and we will,” Reid spokesman Jim Manley said. “Unfortunately, to this point we have received no cooperation from Republicans to do so.”

First woman executed in U.S. in 5 years despite outcry

By Steve Szkotak
Associated Press writer

JARRATT, Va. — The first woman executed in the United States in five years was put to death in Virginia on Thursday for arranging the killings of her husband and a stepson over a $250,000 insurance payment.

Teresa Lewis, 41, died by injection at 9:13 p.m. Thursday, authorities said. She became the first woman executed in Virginia in nearly a century. Supporters and relatives of the victims watched her execution at Greensville Correctional Center in Jarratt.

Lewis enticed two men through sex, cash and a promised cut in an insurance policy to shoot her husband, Julian Clifton Lewis Jr., and his son, Charles, as they slept in October 2002. Both triggermen were sentenced to life in prison and one committed suicide in 2006.

Lewis appeared fearful, her jaw clenched, as she was escorted into the death chamber. She glanced tensely around at 14 assembled corrections officials before being bound to a gurney with heavy leather straps.

Moments before her execution, Lewis asked if her husband’s daughter was near.

from the inmate’s view by a two-way mirror.

“I want Kathy to know that I love her and I’m very sorry,” Lewis said.

Then, as the drugs flowed into her body, her feet bobbed but she was otherwise motionless. A guard lightly tapped her on the shoulder reassuringly as she slipped into death.

More than 7,300 appeals to stop the execution — the first of a woman in Virginia since 1912 — had been made to the governor in a state second only to Texas in the number of people it executes.

Texas held the most recent U.S. execution of a woman in 2005. Out of more than 1,200 people put to death since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976, only 11 have been women.

The 41-year-old woman, who defense attorneys said was borderline mentally disabled, had inspired other inmates by singing Christian hymns in prison. Her fate also had drawn appeals from the European Union, an indignant rebuke from Iran and the disgust of thousands of people.

The Lewis execution stirred an unusual amount of attention because of her gender, claims she lacked the intelligence to mastermind the killings and the post-conviction emergence of defense evidence that one of the triggermen manipulated her.

Lewis’ supporters also said she was a changed woman. They pointed to testimonials from former prison chaplains and inmates that Lewis comforted and inspired other inmates with her faith and the hymns and country gospel tunes she sang at the Fluvanna Correctional Center for Women where she was long held.

Twin Falls CROP Hunger Walk is Saturday

The annual Twin Falls CROP Hunger Walk will be held on Saturday. Registration starts at 9:30 a.m. and the four-mile walk begins at 10 a.m. at Twin Falls City Park.

Looking to make a difference in these trying times, the CROP (Communities Responding to Overcome Poverty) Hunger Walk has set a goal of 100 walkers and hopes to raise $10,000 to help stop hunger and poverty in the community and around the world, through self-help initiatives. A portion of the funds raised in Twin Falls will go to the food pantry of the Crisis Center of

Sarcoidosis treatment: Watch and wait in some cases

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was diagnosed with sarcoidosis after many bone-marrow tests, blood work, X-rays, pet scans and finally by removal of my spleen, which was greatly enlarged and filled with nodules. I requested a second opinion on the diagnosis, and the second doctor agreed with the first. It is inactive but in my lungs, and he tells me the normal treatment is 60 milligrams of prednisone daily for up to two years to reduce the scarring and inflammation. But, with that high dose, it will cause other major problems.

I am white, in my late 50s and have multiple other problems — asthma, fibromyalgia, high blood pressure, rosacea, borderline high cholesterol, osteoarthritis and low oxygen at night that isn't sleep

ASK DR. GOTT

apnea. I've had a detached retina that is now a buckle and a cyst on the retina in my other eye. Thus, my doctor chooses to watch rather than treat at this stage.

Do you have other information that I might find useful?

DEAR READER: Sarcoidosis is an inflammatory disorder that can affect any organ in the body. It is marked by small, round bumps in the tissue around the affected organs to include the lungs, spleen, mucus membranes, salivary glands, lymph nodes and skin. Less common are the eyes and liver that can also be affected. The lesions can disappear after a period of months or years but can lead to widespread swelling and fibrosis.

Symptoms may include a persistent cough, weight loss, arthritic pain in the joints, shortness of breath and fatigue.

While the exact cause of the disease is unknown, it appears linked to the immune system overreacting to an unknown pathogen, toxin or drug that enters the body through inhaling. Genetic factors also play a role, as do race and age.

Our immune systems are structured to fight bacteria and viruses that enter the body, allowing us to remain healthy. With sarcoidosis patients, the white blood cells respond too strongly to bacteria and viruses, triggering small but specific areas of inflammation known as granulomas. With progression of the disease, those granulomas can damage healthy tissue and cause scarring.

Diagnosis can be made by visual examination of the lesions, enlarged lymph nodes and redness of the eyes. A chest X-ray will be abnormal, laboratory testing will likely reveal higher-than-normal blood-calcium levels, and pulmonary-function testing will reveal lung changes. Beyond that, there are numerous other tests available for confirmation, if necessary.

Some people do not need any treatment at all. When symptoms are present, treatment will vary depending on which organs are affected. Anti-inflammatory drugs known as corticosteroids are commonly prescribed. When a patient cannot tolerate steroid treatment, other options, such as methotrexate, azathioprine or hydroxychloroquine, may help.

While you may never recover completely, there are steps you can take to lessen symptoms. If your physician prescribes medication, be sure to take it according to the recommendations. Abstain completely from smoking, and avoid as many other irritants as possible, such as air pollution and dust. Last but not least, consider joining a support group. Your local chapter of the American Lung Association can assist you in finding a chapter nearby.

Some Medicare drug plans to see double-digit hikes

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Millions of seniors face double-digit hikes in their Medicare prescription premiums next year unless they shop for cheaper coverage, a new analysis of government data finds.

Premiums will go up an average of 10 percent among the top 10 drug plans that have signed up about 70 percent of seniors, according to an analysis of Medicare data by Avalere Health, a private research firm.

Marketing for next year's drug plans gets under way Oct. 1, and seniors will see some of the biggest changes since the Medicare prescription benefit became available in 2006. More than 17 million are enrolled in private drug plans offered through Medicare.

"People are just going to have to get on top of this and shop around," said Dan Mendelson, president of Avalere, which does research for industry and government. "Beneficiaries are really going to have to reassess their plans for next year."

On the plus side, benefits will improve with a new 50 percent discount on brand-name drugs for those who land in the program's coverage gap, the dreaded "doughnut hole." It's a major step toward phasing out the gap by 2020, required under the new health care law. Seniors don't have to take any action to qualify for the discount.

But changes decreed by Medicare to force insurers to winnow down duplicative plans could cause some head-scratching and confusion.

More than 3 million seniors will see their plans discontinued, according to Avalere. Medicare says all but 300,000 will be seamlessly switched to another plan offered by the same insurer, but the Avalere data suggest it may not be that simple.

Medicare "is really reshaping the market," said Mendelson. "There are a lot of plans that are shutting down."

Among them is the second-largest, the AARP MedicareRx Saver plan, with more than 1.5 million members nationally. It's being discontinued in 2011, according to Medicare data analyzed by Avalere.

Seniors in the AARP Saver plan are expected to be switched to AARP MedicareRx Preferred, the leading national plan with nearly 2.8 million members. Both are offered by UnitedHealthcare.

But the switch will raise premiums by close to 15 percent on average for seniors in the Saver plan. They now pay an average of less than $31 a month, and would be paying nearly $35 if they decide to stay in the Preferred plan next year.

And there's another wrinkle: Seniors who are already in the AARP Preferred plan this year and decide to stay will see their premiums fall 11 percent on average. Instead of an average of $39 a month, they'll be paying under $35.

A spokesman for UnitedHealthcare declined to comment on the analysis.

Entertainer Eddie Fisher dies at 82

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Eddie Fisher, whose singing career was overshadowed by scandals of his marriages to Debbie Reynolds and Elizabeth Taylor, has died. He was 82.

His daughter, Tricia Leigh Fisher, told The Associated Press that Fisher died Wednesday night of complications from hip surgery at a hospital in Berkeley.

Fisher sold millions of records in the 1950s with hit songs including "Thinking of You," "Any Time" and

"Oh, My Pa-pa." His singing and good looks brought him a devoted following with teenage girls.

He married movie darling Debbie Reynolds in 1955 and they were touted as "America's favorite couple." Their daughter Carrie Fisher later became a film star herself. But amid sensational headlines, Fisher divorced Reynolds and married Taylor in 1959. Taylor dropped him a few years later when she fell in love with Richard Burton.

Defense chief says he has no doubts about Afghan war strategy

By Anne Gearan Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Robert Gates said Thursday that the Obama administration's redrawn Afghanistan war strategy is sound, answering claims in a new book that the plan was a politically driven hodgepodge.

announced the plan his entire administration and the military swung behind it, Gates said during a Pentagon news conference. The Pentagon chief also predicted no big shifts as the war moves into its 10th year.

Obama overrode some close advisers last December after months of debate, when he added about 30,000 forces and shifted battlefield priorities. Neither did he satisfy his generals. The resulting divisions and bureaucratic backbiting are laid out in Washington Post writer Bob Woodward's book "Obama's Wars."

Gates shrugged off those divisions. "Conflict sells," Gates said.

The Obama administration sought a new counterinsurgency strategy to blunt the momentum of the resurgent Taliban. The home-grown Afghan insurgency was defeated in the 2001 invasion but allowed to regroup during several years of what Obama and his advisers call inattention by the Bush administration.

The book suggests the final strategy was fashioned by committee and was partly driven by anti-war politics within the Democratic Party.

The White House will conduct a long-planned review of its Afghan strategy at the end of this year, and some Democrats had hoped that Obama would use the opportunity to signal a swift end to the protracted and costly conflict.

Gates said the Afghan war may have dragged on for years, but the Obama plan to address it is new and only beginning to bear fruit.

THE DRAW OF THE ARTS

What sets Thousand Springs Festival apart?

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Is it the gorgeous Ritter Island scenery? The array of crafts? The regional musicians?

The lure of the Thousand Springs Festival has brought arts and crafts fans to Thousand Springs State Park in the Snake River Canyon for 18 years — last year, more than 4,000 people came. But the art isn't the only thing that draws crowds. The scenery, entertainment and people set the event apart from other art shows.

The festival stands out to Twin Falls' Cooc Ohlmstead, who attends arts and crafts events throughout the year. The area is beautiful, the weather usually mellow and the entertainment fun.

"The music is wonderful," she said.

The musical lineup this weekend includes Boise swing group Shakin' Not Stirred, Hailey-based singer Sheryll Mae Grace, Mountain Home singer and guitarist Mike Bush, and Boise bluegrass-celtic-jazz-blues fusion group The Heard.

Another aspect that appeals to Ohlmstead: The event is the primary annual fundraiser for conservation group Southern Idaho Land Trust. It turns the entrance fee into a feel-good deed.

"When you're paying to get in there, you're helping," she said.

But most of all, it's the art that brings her to the park. In recent years, Ohlmstead has walked away with metal art and glasswork. Last year, she bought a piece from artists who make paintings on repurposed tin from old buildings.

"It's really cool because on the back of it, it tells exactly what building it was taken from," she said. "Mine was from New York, I believe."

Dance troupe opens Arts on Tour season Thursday

Times-News

A Boise-based dance troupe getting great buzz in the dance world will open Arts on Tour's 2010-11 season next week.

Trey McIntyre Project performs at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium. Tickets are $25 for adults and $18 for high school students and younger.

Don't be late to this show: The troupe is strict about latecomers remaining outside the theater until a pause or intermission.

In 2005, Trey McIntyre Project burst onto the national dance scene as a summer touring company with its debut performance at The Vail International Dance Festival. The project's fresh choreography was an immediate sensation with both critics and audiences, promoters say.

The company went on to perform at prestigious summer venues, including Jacob's Pillow and Wolf Trap National Park for the Performing Arts, premiering works created during annual residencies at White Oak Plantation. Guided by Trey McIntyre's ear for musical structures, the project's repertoire spans rock ("A Day In The Life," set to music by The Beatles and "High Lonesome" to music by Beck), classical music ("The Blue Boy to Beethoven" to Henry Cowell, "Ten Pin Episodes" to Chopin) and jazz ("Ma Maison" and a new piece in a 2011 collaboration with Preservation Hall Jazz Band), historic bluegrass music selections ("Go Out") and folk music ("Leatherwing Bat" to Peter, Paul and Mary).

Galvanized by critical success during the summer tours, Trey McIntyre Project launched as a full-time, year-round company in 2008-09. It embarked on a 25-city tour across the U.S. and abroad from its new home in Boise, with institutional support from The MAP Fund, National Endowment for the Arts, M.J. Murdock Charitable Trust and National Dance Project.

In Twin Falls next week, the company will perform three pieces from its repertoire including "Wild Sweet Love," a loosely narrative ballet about a lonely woman and her search for love featuring the music of Queen, Lou Reed, Roberta Flack, Jose Alfredo Jimenez, The Partridge Family, Felix Mendelssohn and The Zombies.

Learn more about Trey McIntyre Project: www.treymcintyre.com.

Hemingway Symposium becomes less eulogy and more writers' roundtable

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

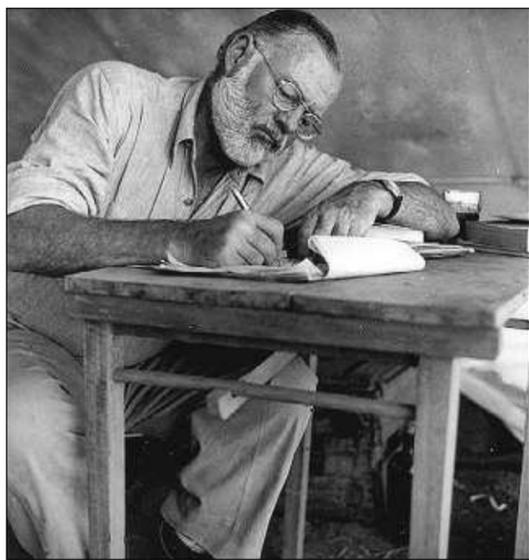

The Old Man and the Creek will be in the spotlight next weekend when the annual, free Hemingway Symposium opens in Sun Valley.

For the first time, symposium attendees will visit Silver Creek Preserve. Bird hunting at Silver Creek was one of the primary reasons writer Ernest Hemingway returned to Idaho time and time again until he finally bought a home in Ketchum.

"He had gotten past trout fishing by that time — he had really gotten into deep-sea fishing because he wanted something that took more from him. The only time he fished here was on behalf of Sun Valley Resort," said Sandra Hofferber, The Community Library's regional history librarian.

In fact, Hemingway stayed away from Idaho for a few years in the 1950s after the state imposed a four-duck limit. He ended up writing some nasty comments about the four-duck limit and the tourists he said were "ruining the Sun Valley area," said Hemingway's niece Hilary Hemingway.

This year's symposium kicks off with a pre-symposium talk by Ernest

Ernest Hemingway on safari in Kenya in 1953. In Idaho, Sun Valley Lodge's room 206 — the site where he wrote 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' — and his gravesite in the Ketchum Cemetery are popular stops on the Hemingway Haunts tour.

Hemingway's nephew at 6 p.m. Wednesday. That's followed by the keynote talk by Time and GQ columnist Walter Kirm at 6 p.m. Thursday.

The remainder of the schedule includes additional talks, two screenings of "The Hemingway Play," a tour of Hemingway haunts in Ketchum and Sun Valley, and a nature and bird walk at the Nature Conservancy's Silver Creek Preserve near Picabo.

All events, with the exception of the two tours, will be held at The Community Library, 415 Spruce St. N. in Ketchum. The symposium is free, thanks to a grant from the Idaho Humanities Council.

This year organizers strove to make the symposium less of a eulogy and more pertinent to people of today, said Hofferber.

In that vein, several authors, including Brady Udall, Clay Morgan and Mitch Wieland, will discuss Hemingway's influence on modern writers and writing.

"He changed the way literature was written," said Hofferber, who will lecture the morning of Oct. 2 on "Hemingway in Idaho." "And people still use Hemingway to prove their points about life and philosophy and the way to live."

When Hemingway was here, he was not the macho man the press portrayed, Hofferber said.

The pulp men's magazines of Hemingway's time went out of their way to portray Hemingway as America's role model for the post-World War II years with articles titled "Hemingway: Rogue Male" and "Hemingway: America's No. 1 He-Man," even though Hemingway's health was declining by then, said David Earle, a Sun Valley native who wrote the book "All Man! Hemingway, 1950s Men's Magazines and the Masculine Persona."

"My parents described Hemingway as a polite, quiet, frail man," he added.

KETCHUM — In the market for a new chair?

You'll find plenty of creative choices at the Second Annual Chair-ity fundraiser for nexStage Theatre.

Local artists, architects and others have turned chairs into works of art. They will be unveiled during an opening reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday at the nexStage Theatre, 120 S. Main St. in Ketchum.

The chairs will be available for viewing for the following two days before being auctioned off in a silent auction. Proceeds will benefit the nexStage Theatre, live theatrical productions performed there, Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival, performing arts education and performing arts scholarships.

This year, Heidi Albrecht's chessboard chair, for example, comes with chess pieces.

Last year's Chair-ity event featured an array of chairs from Dave Almquist's Stool Pigeon to a chair created by Susan Desko, Kevin Werbinski and John Brathwaite that resembled a mass of adult-sized pick-up sticks.

"It was so New York," said Ketchum resident Renata Beguin. "Really creative."

'Nerd' cast announced

Times-News

Oakley Valley Arts Council announced the cast for its November comedy production of "The Nerd," directed by Walt Robberson and assistant Joyce Merrill.

The cast: Dave Jones as Willum Cubbert, Brenda Pierce as Tansy McGinnis, Aaron Merrill as Axel Hammond, Denny Davis as Warnock Waldgrave, Theresa Jenks as Clelia Waldgrave, Levi Welch as Thor Waldgrave and Tom Nilsen as Rick Steadman.

Larry Shue's "The Nerd" is about an aspiring architect, Willum, who has often told his friends about the debt he owes to Rick, a fellow veteran, whom he has never met but who saved his life after he was seriously wounded in Vietnam. He is delighted when Rick shows up unexpectedly on the night of his birthday party. His delight soon fades as it becomes apparent that Rick is a hopeless nerd with little social sense and less tact.

The production will be Nov. 4-6, 8-9 and 11-13 at Howells Opera House in Oakley. Tickets will become available Oct. 4 at 677-2787.

'Sax gone wild' Saxophobia's act commands new appreciation for jazz instrument

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

From the smallest saxophone in the world, the soprano, to the 6 1/2-foot-tall contrabass sax and everything between, these saxophones are ones you won't experience by listening to the pep band at a high school football game.

You can, however, enjoy these saxophones and many more during Wednesday's concert by the four performers of California-based Saxophobia, presented by the College of Southern Idaho's Jazz Club.

Perhaps not even Adolphe Sax, who invented the saxophone in 1847, could have imagined the wild, unusual and rare variations presented by Saxophobia, including straight alto, straight tenor, C-melody, Grafton all-plastic, Conn-O-Sax, slide and bass saxophones and even an original 1880

With his passion for saxophone history, Rob Verdi has accrued a collection of rare and unique saxophones. His Saxophobia group ventures into the little-known world of some of the most unusual saxophones ever manufactured and pays homage to great jazz performers.

Adolphe Sax tenor.

Only seven contrabass saxophones were ever produced, said Rob Verdi, Saxophobia founder and leader, who calls the show a "who's who of sax gone wild."

"The sax may not be a formal member of the symphony but is a very expressive, versatile instrument," Verdi said during a telephone interview. "Our 75-minute concert will showcase that versatility."

In a jazz-combo format, Saxophobia sets each different saxophone to a song that pays tribute to great jazz legends, from the genre's beginnings in the early 1920s beginnings through the developed and pop sound of the 1950s.

Song-instrument pairings will include Sidney Bechet's popular "Si Tu Vois Ma Mere" on the Conn-O-Sax, an instrument with an innovated straight design and bubble-shaped bell produced in 1928 and 1929 by Conn; Rudy Wiedoeft's 1920 hit "Saxophobia" on the tiny, curvy soprano; and a medley featuring songs like the theme from the television show "My Three Sons," "Tequila," "The Pink Panther" and Boots Randolph's unforgettable 1963 recording of "Yakety Sax," also known as the theme from the "Benny Hill" television show.

"We wanted a medley of songs that were fun, popular, and songs that audience

Brent Jensen, director of jazz and woodwind studies at CSI, is excited to have Saxophobia coming.

"Their wide-ranging presentation of jazz historical periods coupled with these very interesting and unusual saxophones is a smorgasbord. You're not getting just one flavor of ice cream, it's Baskin Robbins 31 Flavors," Jensen said.

This isn't Verdi's first time through Twin Falls. All four musicians in Saxophobia are also part of the Side Street Strutters ensemble, Verdi's professional jazz group, and played in the Magic Valley years ago, Jensen said.

Gene Conley, co-director of the CSI Jazz Ensemble and Percussion Ensemble director, said the audience will walk away from the performance with a rich lesson in jazz history — and hopefully a greater appreciation for one of the style's stand-out instruments.

"It really should expand their horizons," Conley said. "It's important, as musicians and listeners, to get outside your comfort zone. I'm hoping my students learn how valuable it is as musicians to be comfortable playing many horns."

year's festival will feature new artists, including Utah illustrator Cat Napier and Jerome furniture maker Dennis Mitchell.

The event is also kid-friendly, Morishita said. This year, face painters will keep kids occupied from 1 to 3 p.m. each day. The kids' area will also feature tiny organic pumpkins for children to take home.

Photographer Jackie Plastino, who has sold her work at Thousand Springs for the past several years, said the crowds are steady, but the park is never too crowded. It gives her a chance to connect personally with potential customers.

This weekend Plastino will sell landscape photos from her travels, including scenes from Mexico, Argentina, China and Hawaii.

"I always get people who are really interested in photography," Plastino said. "Some people love to tell me about their own photography, and that's always fun to hear."

With decades of music headlines, New Christy Minstrels head for Burley

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The New Christy Minstrels are busier than they have ever been, and that is saying a lot. They have been recording and performing since 1961, but it's not only baby boomers who are buying the tickets.

They'll perform Oct. 1 at Burley's King Fine Arts Center, opening the Mini-Cassia Community Concerts season.

Randy Sparks, founder and manager of New Christy Minstrels, is something of a star maker. Many of his singers have gone on to solo careers — among them, Barry McGuire, Kenny Rogers and Kim Carnes. Some went to other groups such as The Byrds, The First Edition, The Association and The Back Porch Majority.

Perhaps his favorite was John Denver.

"I named him," Sparks said. "John Deuschendorf was too long to fit on my marquee, so I had to shorten it."

Denver lived with Sparks and his wife for a year while getting started. He was a tender 20-year-old with a haunting voice who was too innocent for the Hollywood scene. Before Capitol Records picked him up, Sparks was recording him. Denver never joined The New Christy Minstrels because his career took off like a Nascar favorite.

One thing still rankles, Sparks said. Denver told reporters he'd been hungry in the beginning of his music career. The truth was, he lived with the Sparks in an upscale home, and when his car wouldn't run he borrowed Sparks' Porsche.

Here is something to watch for at next week's concert. Denver's uncle, Dave Deuschendorf, now performs with the New Christy Minstrels. He has a bass voice that rattles windows, Sparks said. He got a standing ovation on his first note in October 2009, his first time with the group.

Three members of the original group, circa 1961, still perform — Sparks, Pete Henderson and Dolan Ellis — along with new talent. Becky Jo Benson, a relative newcomer, started in 1997 even as her husband, Gene Benson, was dying of a liver disease. He had never seen her on stage before. The auditorium was sold out, so Sparks arranged for a seat in the orchestra pit for him, and Becky chose to sing a Dolly Parton song for him, "I Will Always Love You."

"The lighting was behind Gene and it came up around him like a halo," she remembered. "He told me later that it was the best moment of his life."

Gene died later that year. After nearly five decades of Grammy winning and popularity, the New Christy Minstrels now give back by doing free concerts in public schools.

"We try to give three free concerts for each paid concert," Sparks said, "but it's getting harder. Our bookings are up." The group aims to establish a museum for the preservation of folk music history and music teaching.

"We want to let the young people know that music is more than what you can get on your car radio," Sparks said. "We want to expose them to folk music that is old-fashioned, which means that the words are very important; the songs memorable."

MORE CONCERTS TO COME

Mini-Cassia Community Concerts are available by season ticket (the best deal) but also by tickets at the door. The series offers four concerts this year beginning with The New Christy Minstrels at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 1. The others:

- Nov. 13: In "Legacy of Floyd Kramer," Kramer fans will hear echoes of the legendary player in his grandson Jason Coleman's performance.
- March 12: Buddy Jewell, winner of the television reality competition "Nashville Star" in 2003, earned the Academy of Country Music honors as Best New Artist, took the Country Music Awards' Horizon award and was nominated for a Grammy.
- April 29: Sharon Owens and Sebastian Anzaldo will impersonate Barbra Streisand and Frank Sinatra in "The Concert That Never Was." The solo stars never performed together, but the possibilities are endless.

All concerts begin at 7:30 p.m. at the King Fine Arts Center, 2100 Park Ave. on the Burley High School grounds. Buy season tickets by mail or at the door, at $40 for adults, $20 for students and $110 for families (includes children living at home older than 5). All seats are first-come, first-served. Season tickets may also be used at community concert series in Idaho Falls and Boise with no limit. Tickets for single concerts are available only at the door for $20 per concert. Legal thriller is fine debut for T.F. writer

It is always fun when reading a first novel — especially one classified as a legal thriller — to think you may be meeting the next Scott Turow. I certainly found myself thinking that as I read "Dismissed with Prejudice" (Tate Publishing, $27.99), written by lifelong Twin Falls resident Christopher Meyerhoeffer.

The story is set in fictional Lakeland, Idaho, a city on the banks of the Susquehanna River.

Protagonist Nick Jelaco, a successful attorney practicing in Lakeland, is living in a nightmare with a time bomb. His wife has been viciously murdered and his precious 3-year-old daughter is missing. In trying to get help and answers to this senseless crime from the police, he uncovers a conspiracy involving the partners in his own law firm, a corrupt prosecutor and some unethical cops.

Meyerhoeffer does an excellent job with those people; from Nick to his unlikely ally, Simone Panache, to unlikable Detective Phil Gates (my favorite), the characters are well-developed, interesting and believable. And I am sure more than a few readers will wonder if any of them are based on people they know!

The book begins with this intriguing paragraph which pulls in the reader immediately:

"The giant of a man had been standing motionless in the dark for the better part of four hours. The complete lack of movement would have been maddening for most people, but he actually enjoyed the mental challenge."

Avoiding detection required complete control of his mind and body. Besides, hiding in the shadows was nothing new to him. For as long as he could remember, Edgar had struggled to blend in with his surroundings. Unfortunately, anonymity was a scarce commodity for a man of his size and physical appearance."

Characters and plot combine to make an intriguing page-turner; there are plenty of twists and turns to keep readers guessing. Details describing the crime scene and investigation are absorbing and totally believable.

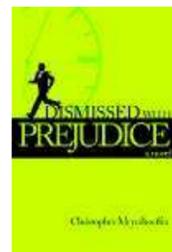

The book is not without its bumps, however. In places, the pace drags and the dialogue — the bane of most writers — seems stilted and forced. And I never quite felt the overwhelming pain and anguish of a father searching for his missing daughter. Thankfully, typographical and grammatical errors are few in number. (Note to all would-be writers: Before publishing your book, have several people outside your family and friends read the manuscript; have at least one read it aloud to you, to hear how it plays on the ear.)

Meyerhoeffer said it took about six months for him to write the book, and the sequel, "Sins of the Brother" is already completed. He hopes to have it out shortly after the first of the year. A third book is in progress, this one also a legal thriller, but with different characters. I have a strong feeling both titles will be even better.

Congratulations to Meyerhoeffer! "Dismissed with Prejudice" is a fine debut, and I predict a long writing career in the making. And those of you who read this first novel will be able to say, "Oh yes, I was a fan of his from the beginning ..."

("Dismissed with Prejudice" is available locally at Kurt's Hallmark, Dick's Pharmacy and Hastings; and from Amazon.com and BN.com.)

Judi Baxter owned and operated Judi's Bookstore in downtown Twin Falls from 1978 to 1992. From 2000 to 2004 she wrote a twice-weekly column for Publisher's Weekly's online edition called "Reviews in the News."

Weekend 'Wall Street' rally likely

By Paul Dergarabedian
For The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — If greed is good, big box office is better.

The return of Michael Douglas' iconic movie villain Gordon Gecko in Fox's "Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps" is expected to open on top this weekend with a rally nearing $20 million.

Director Oliver Stone's 1987 original earned nearly $90 million in today's dollars, as well as an acting Oscar for Douglas and an enduring place in popular culture for Gecko and his greed. So anticipation for the sequel is strong.

With very few options in the weekend marketplace for the family crowd, Warner Bros' "Legend of the Guardians: The Owls of Ga'Hoole" should take flight in the mid to high teens, showcasing a shift into PG territory for director Zack Snyder, who built his reputation on highly stylized R-rated fare.

Ben Affleck's "The Town" from Warner Bros. opened last week with a stronger-than-expected $23.8 million and should hold up well in its second outing. With midweek grosses in the $2.5 million to $3 million range, the R-rated heist drama has been generating strong word-of-mouth and kudos for Affleck's directing prowess. A gross in the mid teens against a minimal mid-40 percent drop is to be expected.

Sony's "Easy A" has also been generating strong buzz and is already a solid profit-making machine for the studio. Star Emma Stone has proven herself to be an appealing draw for teen audiences and the $8 million film should wind up with close to $10 million in its sophomore weekend for a gross of $30 million so far.

Disney newcomer "You

Again" should occupy the weekend's fifth position in the $8 million to $10 million range. The ensemble comedy will have strong female appeal with an all-star cast that includes Kristen Bell, Sigourney Weaver, Jamie Lee Curtis, Kristen Chenoweth and Betty White.

Many movies this fall are feeling claustrophobic

By Robert W. Butler
McClatchy Newspapers

Feeling trapped? Welcome to the club.

It's a funny thing about movies: They rarely change anybody's mind about anything (except, perhaps, for a really hard-hitting documentary), and yet they're an awfully good way of gauging the contemporary zeitgeist.

Musicals were big in the '30s because, film historians explain, Depression-era Americans desperately wanted to escape their economic fetters. Movies about rich people nightclubbing apparently offered that release.

What, then, are we to make of the tsunami of movies about trapped individuals that is about to wash over our megaplexes?

Check out these titles: "Buried" (Oct. 8): Ryan

Reynolds plays an American contractor in Iraq who is captured by insurgents and buried alive. The entire film takes place in a coffin where our hero uses his cell phone, a book of matches and a flashlight to survive.

"It's Kind of a Funny Story" (Oct. 8): A depressed teen (Keir Gilchrist) seeks help in a hospital E.R. and finds himself committed for a week in the psych ward, where the other patients (including Zach Galifianakis) have problems that make his look like child's play.

"Stone" (Oct. 22): An inmate (Edward Norton) is so desperate to get out that he sends his foxy wife (Mila Jovovich) to seduce the prison parole officer (Robert De Niro).

"Conviction" (Oct. 29): When her brother is wrongly convicted of murder and exhausts all legal remedies, a working mother (Hilary Swank) puts herself through law school so she can continue the fight.

"Saw 3D" (Oct. 29): You know the program by now. A fiendishly inventive killer places his victims in situations where they can only escape by killing someone and/or mutilating themselves.

You could even argue the animated "Tangled" (Nov. 24) fits the trend: Of all the fairy tales Disney could adapt, why "Rapunzel," about a girl locked in a tower?

Can it be just coincidence that all these movies about individuals who feel trapped and helpless are coming down the movie pipeline almost simultaneously?

Or could it reflect some of the fears and frustrations percolating through America?

Hmmm. Well, let's see, now ...

Millions of us are unemployed for the first time in our adult lives.

Those of us who still have jobs are terrified of losing them.

The long-cherished notion of economic mobility lies in tatters. People no longer are confident that if they quit a job they'll find another.

Even a dead-end job that offers little satisfaction and limited remuneration is too precious to blow off.

It might not be as bad as waking up in a prison cell or a buried coffin but, yeah, lots of us are feeling trapped.

My question: Having set up these scenarios, what conclusions will these films leave us with? Will these characters battle back and emerge stronger than before? Or will they fold and give up?

And will moviegoers, already feeling besieged, even care about titles that only remind them of what desperation feels like?

SOMETHING TO PROVE

OSU aims for upset of No. 3 Boise St.

By Cliff Kirkpatrick
Gazette-Times (Corvallis, Ore.)

Oregon State football coach Mike Riley has been asked this question so many times this week, he has a prepared response.

How can the No. 24-ranked Beavers compete with No. 3 Boise State on the road Saturday night?

Boise State is so good at home, and the game will be its statement game for a shot at the national title game on national network TV during prime time (6 p.m., ABC).

"The important thing is to not get up by 14 points," Riley said.

The last two times the Beavers traveled to Boise State they jumped out to 14-point leads and then it all fell apart quickly in humiliating losses.

Interceptions by veteran OSU quarterbacks Derek Anderson and Matt Moore provided big momentum shifts for Boise State.

"I've been looking forward to this since I was a freshman when we lost up there, and Riley said we were going to get another shot at them," senior cornerback James Dockery said. "I remember that game very vividly, so do other players on our team."

OSU hasn't been the only team to experience beat-downs on the eye-catching blue turf. The Broncos (2-0) are 63-2 in their last 65 home games and 26-0 in Chris Petersen's four seasons as head coach.

"That's a decade of dominance," Riley said.

The Beavers are 17 1/2-point underdogs. Boise State's offense is quick, efficient and diverse, and OSU can expect the deep ball.

The defense is fundamentally sound, aggressive and shows different looks. The special teams are even more complicated.

"The football end of it is all the challenge," Riley said. "We just have to play a great football game. We have to be in attack mode on offense and defense and be smart on special teams. If they punch, we have to counter punch."

Keeping up with the Broncos will be a big task, especially for OSU's defense, which has given up 453 yards in both of its first two games.

The Beavers used turnovers and goal line stands to help keep the game close against Texas Christian and to defeat Louisville. They will need more of the same and better overall run containment against Boise State.

"It's a great opportunity for us to go to the blue turf and play a top-three team," linebacker Dwight Roberson said. "I'm ready. It's time to get ready for Boise State and see what they are about."

Staying focused on the task at hand can be difficult for visiting teams. It takes time for anyone to adjust to the look of the field.

Jeremiah Silva, 18, poses for a portrait Tuesday afternoon at the ISDB soccer fields in Gooding. Silva is visually impaired.

Despite being legally blind, Jeremiah Silva makes an impact for Gooding soccer

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

GOODING — Talk to him for a few minutes, and you almost forget Jeremiah Silva's legally blind.

That's the way the 18-year-old student at the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind prefers it. But at the same time he doesn't much mind being known as the blind kid on Gooding's boys soccer team. He knows you'll think there's no way he can play soccer, or that even if he can, he'll never get into the game.

Go ahead and think that. All it does is motivate him.

"When I was little the doctors listed a bunch of things I wouldn't be able to do," Silva said. "I proved them wrong then, and I'm still proving people wrong now."

Including on the soccer field.

"I just look for the ball and follow it. I can see OK far away, but when it gets closer it takes some time to focus," he said. "A sighted person can just stare down the field and pretty much see all of it, while I have to scan it."

Silva was born with what Gooding coach Roger Johnson termed fatty tumors in his brain that put pressure on his optic nerve. Because of their proximity, the tumors are inoperable.

Fully sighted at birth, Silva completely lost the vision in his left eye before he turned 2 and his right possesses 20/70 vision at best. He doesn't know whether he'll lose his sight completely one day.

"I hope I don't, and I don't think I will," he said. "But it's not that big of a deal."

It became a big deal for a few moments on Monday when Silva was hit flush in the right eye with a ball during a game with Filer, leaving bruises and causing temporarily-worsened vision.

"He was so scared," Johnson said. "But the referees blew play dead as soon as they saw who it was and we got him out of there and tended to."

While it presents a unique situation for opponents and referees, including ISDB kids on the Gooding team is

A 'PRIDE' THING

Burley and Minico renew rivalry tonight

An open letter by Times-News sportswriter Ryan Howe, to first-year Burley head football coach Jeff Green.

Dear Coach Green, Since tonight will be your first Burley-Minico rivalry football game, I need to fill you in on some of the particulars.

For 94 years, high school kids in Mini-Cassia have crossed the Snake River to battle their rivals on the gridiron. It's the biggest annual clash of green and red besides my aunt Nancy's Christmas sweater. It's the one game for which players buckle the chinstrap a little tighter.

Minico's Spartan mascot is named Brutus. The Burley Bobcat mascot doesn't officially have a name, according to school administration, but in a column a few years back I went ahead and dubbed him Bob. Bob the Bobcat. No one called to complain, so I guess it's settled.

Many traditional football rivalries play for a trophy, like the Governor's Cup, Little Brown Jug or Old Oaken Bucket. Many rivalries also have a fancy name, like Holy War, Civil War or Iron Bowl. Heck, even Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge play for a military helmet in their Service Bowl, and that rivalry's only been around for two years.

But despite nearly a century of history, your Mini-Cassia rivalry doesn't have any of that. Instead of playing for a trophy, "it's just a pride thing," says Minico quarterback Kade Miller. And despite efforts by my former Mini-Cassia sports colleague Chuck Nunn, his "Snake River Stomp" moniker never seemed to stick. It's just Burley-Minico — or if you live on the north side of the river, it's Minico-Burley.

Since moving to the area four years ago, I've lived on both sides of the river and found the dislike is mutual. However, you won't find real hatred. Many of your guys are friends with Spartans.

"There's a lot of trash talk," says Burley lineman Aaron Tolman. "On game day we're at each other, but other than that we're friends."

Like any longtime rivalry, it ebbs and flows. Since Minico opened in 1955, the Spartans hold a 31-24 edge in the series (the old Rupert High owned the series 35-12 from 1916-1954). Burley won nine of the first 13 meetings until 1967, and then won five in a row in the late 70s.

But recently Minico has reigned, winning 11 of the last 15. The Spartans have taken the last five while outscoring the Bobcats 209-31.

On the opposite sideline tonight will be Tim Perrigot and his heralded coaching staff. The Minico football program runs as efficiently as Amalgamated Sugar during the beet campaign. But it hasn't always been that way. Fifteen years ago, Perrigot was where you are today. He and his staff took over a struggling program and has since turned it into one of the most respected in the state. With 66 victories, Perrigot is the winningest coach in school history. Under his watch, Minico is 10-4 against Burley.

Just between you and me, however, I think Perrigot is nervous about tonight — and for good reason. I mean, did you see your Bobcats physically handle Twin Falls last week, moving the ball up and down the field like a combine harvester? Take away your three turnovers and who knows, maybe you win that game.

But Minico is coming off a bye week after losing two games to tough opponents. In an established system, those Minico kids have been in middle school, freshman and JV programs that have laid the foundation for what they're doing now as varsity players on Friday nights. Consequently, Minico's sets feature several different flavors.

PREP RALLY

High School High Five A look at this week's biggest prep football games

Twin Falls at Pocatello

7 p.m., At Holt Arena

Radio: 102.9 FM

The skinny: The Bruins last started 4-0 in 2005 and are riding high with confidence, but will face their toughest test yet against 3-0 Pocatello. Defense has been the driving force behind Twin Falls' strong start and the defensive line will have to control the line of scrimmage against the strong rushing attack of Pocatello. The Bruins' offense only ran 33 offensive plays last week against Burley compared to their usual 60-70, so it's important for that unit to sustain drives and give the defense a rest.

Twin Falls coach Allyn Reynolds: "We can't have any special teams breakdowns. We have yet to meet all of our special teams goals that we have for each game. We need to get more consistent play from our guys who have played for two years now. This has to change if we are going to compete for a state championship."

Wood River at Jerome

7 p.m.

Radio: 1400 AM

The skinny: Wood River is 2-1, but has faced only Class 3A competition ahead of its Great Basin Conference opener at Jerome. The Tigers lost three tough out-of-conference games but won at Canyon Ridge last week and look to deliver on homecoming. Jerome will be without freshman QB Zach Thibault (spinal concussion), while lineman Tom Crozier is also sidelined.

Wood River coach Kevin Stilling: "Our defense has been playing great and they'll need to continue to do so for us to be successful Friday. Regardless of who (Jerome's) quarterback is their offense always has the ability to score in bunches."

Jerome coach Gary Krumm: "Wood River football has a new look and outlook. ... We'll need to stop the run defensively, and run it well on the other side to have a chance. We've not yet had a turnover-free game. I'd love to see that this week."

Canyon Ridge at Kimberly

7 p.m.

Radio: none

The skinny: Canyon Ridge is banged up as it looks to bounce back from consecutive Great Basin Conference losses to Twin Falls and Jerome. The Riverhawks will be without QB Tyler Myers (separated left shoulder), center Sean Hughes (ACL tear) and Chase Smith (disciplinary reasons). The Bulldogs have rebounded from an opening loss with back-to-back wins over Class 2A squads. Both teams will look to establish the run tonight, especially with Myers out.

Canyon Ridge coach Bill Hicks: "It's going to be a good challenge. They're a pretty physical team and they like to run the ball and we're going to have to rise to a physical game. It'll be a good game for us."

Kimberly quarterback Seth Champlin: "They're going to be better (than last year) for sure, but we've got a better team too. It should be a good game."

Declo at Filer

7 p.m.

Radio: none

The skinny: A pair of 1-2 teams collides as Declo visits Filer for the Wildcats' homecoming. It's important for Filer to pick up some momentum heading into next week's SCIC battle with Buhl. Declo (1-2) hopes to snap its two-game losing streak before Canyon Conference play begins.

Filer coach Russ Burnum: "It's a huge game for us. It's a must-win for us. We've been beat up by them the last two years and we feel like it's our turn to turn the tables. They have a really good running back and great coaching, and that takes you a long way. They have a lot of tradition there. Our defense has been playing tough, it's just a matter of getting our offense on track. We feel like we can give them a run for their money."

Declo coach Kelly Kidd: "We're working hard and we will get better. To be a successful football team we have to be more consistent."

Valley at Wendell

7 p.m.

Radio: none

This is the league opener for both sides in the newly expanded Canyon Conference, which now boasts five teams thanks to the additions of Gooding and Wendell. Valley opened 2-0 before suffering five fumbles in a lopsided home loss to Kimberly last week. The Trojans are also looking to bounce back after consecutive nonconference road losses that saw them score just 20 points combined.

Valley coach Brian Ayers: "We're excited about starting the conference season and we're excited about the expanded conference schedule. We're looking forward to the challenge."

Wendell coach Brad Neuendorf: "Right now we're focused on how our team is going to come out. We need to fix the mistakes we've had the last two games. We've had 10 turnovers in two games and it's tough to win football games like that."

HIGH 5 BONUS GAMES: CLASS 1A SPOTLIGHT

Oakley at Shoshone

7 p.m.

The skinny: Shoshone is coming off a bye week, which gives the young Indians (starting only two seniors) extra time to prepare for the three-time conference champions from Oakley. Shoshone will need to manage Oakley lineman Braxton Sagers, who dominates the line of scrimmage. The Hornets are 3-0, including two wins over 11-man junior varsity squads. Adjusting for the 11-man game led to some offensive issues, but the added chance for playing time was beneficial, according to Oakley coach Tim Behunin.

Shoshone coach Mark Sant: "We're looking forward to a measuring stick to see where we are. They've been the class of the conference for years now. They have a ton of size, but I think we match up better than we have the past couple years against them. We've had good practices and we're ready for this conference season."

Oakley coach Tim Behunin: "We anticipate (Shoshone) being well-coached and prepared. We're just excited to have the opportunity. ... We're going to have to play great defense, but we're very happy with what our defense has done so far this year."

Alamo (Nev.) at Carey

7 p.m.

The skinny: High-flying Carey (4-0) will find out just how good it really is tonight when it faces perennial Nevada eight-man power Pahrnatag Valley, which has won four of the last five Nevada eight-man titles. The Panthers of Alamo, Nev., have outscored their opponents 134-28 this season and set a national eight-man single-game record with 128 points in 2008. This is the third long trip for Pahrnatag Valley this season, having already traveled both to Challis and to Long Beach, Calif., for lopsided wins. Carey has beaten its four opponents by a combined margin of 192-12.

Carey coach Lane Kirkland: "This kind of game is what this group of kids needs at this point of the season. It should be a telling game of our strengths and weaknesses in preparation for coming conference match-ups and the play-offs. Both teams are scoring points and both defenses are tough. Our kids are excited about the challenge and look forward to doing our best to defending Idaho's football reputation in the eight-man realm."

Burley's only flavor right now is vanilla. Without continuity in offenses the three years prior to your arrival, plus the implementation of your scheme, the Bobcats haven't been able to expand the playbook much yet.

Nothing wrong with that — vanilla is my favorite flavor — as Burley only ran four plays against Buhl and racked up 362 rushing yards. Last week your leading rusher Shaw Green went down with a hamstring injury, but you still have a deep stable of running backs, like Branson Handy, Jason Konrad, Jason Rebollozo and Juan Labra.

All Burley needs now is to somehow shake the invisible curse that's causing your players to fumble the ball or earn yellow flags in crucial situations. I don't know if you need a voodoo man, a rabbit's foot or magic-potion in the Gatorade. Tonight is a full moon, so maybe that will help.

Last year, the Minico-Burley rivalry was competitive, tied 0-0 at halftime. But Minico won 29-0 by scoring all its points in the third quarter, fueled by Eddy Espinoza's interception return for a touchdown. Burley couldn't overcome four turnovers. Sound familiar?

Tonight's game will be played at Bill Matthews Field, where a football game is more than a game — it's an event. They have tailgating, live bands and radio DJs in hot tubs. Motorcycle gangs roar onto the field. Skydivers drop in with the game ball. Crop dusters do flyovers during the national anthem. A few years ago, a helicopter landed at midfield. For next week's game against Jerome, Minico has reportedly obtained the NFL's giant football field-sized American flag for the national anthem. Tonight's crowd will be the biggest of the season. Nobody misses the Burley-Minico game — not even the sportswriter who is writing this letter from the maternity ward of the hospital after the birth of his first child. Should have known she'd come early, just in time for the big game.

Best regards,
Ryan Howe

nothing new for Johnson. In his time at Gooding he's coached nearly three dozen deaf players. Silva is his second blind player.

Coaching so many deaf players has made Silva's integration into the team easier, Johnson said.

"He's able to hear your instructions and adjust to what you're telling him. We don't feel like this is a handicap (for soccer)," Johnson said. "It's really great to be a part of the program the way we've set it up. It's been a blessing and an honor."

This isn't Silva's first time playing sports. He's been a member of ISDB's basketball team for several years, but tried soccer for the first time this fall. Conditioning for soccer shape was an uphill task, but eventually he caught up to the rest of his teammates during running drills.

Johnson tries to get Silva around 15 minutes a game if he can, usually playing him on the wide side of midfield. He plays right or left side, depending on which way the team is going — always on the side closest to the benches so he can hear Johnson's instructions.

Johnson won't risk him against bigger, more physical teams, as that presents a greater danger of getting hurt. Against the Community School earlier in the season, Silva played more than 35 minutes.

When he's in, a clean kick of the ball earns a bigger cheer than when the Senators score a goal — something they do with regularity.

"I can't always see it, but I can hear when guys are getting close," Silva said. "I just know I need to get rid of the ball quicker."

Johnson paused the interview at that moment, turning to the rest of his team. "I want you to listen to this. You need to get rid of it quicker," he quipped. In handing his charges a lesson, he underscored the bond the team shares — they all laughed in return, before Johnson burst into a smile.

"We have fun here," Johnson said. "I don't want them out here if they're not going to have fun. ... It's like Jeremiah's got 19 brothers now."

Silva's enjoying every minute of his soccer experience. He's still in search of his first goal — though an assist would do, he said. He wants to earn whatever he gets, though, and not have it handed to him.

But regardless of whether he gets on the score sheet in any capacity, Silva has already made his point.

"A lot of times people say you can't do something because you're blind. I just want to prove to the community that a blind person can do anything they put their mind to," he said. "Sometimes we just have to do it in different ways."

CSI's Everett commits to Utah State

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Alyssa Everett wants nothing more than to focus on helping the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team win its second straight national championship. So much so that she already has her next collegiate step planned.

Determined to keep distractions out of her game, Everett confirmed Thursday her verbal commitment to Utah State University.

"I've been talking to them since April, and after talking to them and to (CSI coach Heidi Cartisser) it just seems like the right place to be," Everett said. "I really wanted to stay someplace close to home."

So far this season Everett has posted 148 kills, 40 blocks and 18 service aces in her sophomore season for the Golden Eagles. Last season the 6-foot-2 Perry, Utah, middle blocker had 156 kills and 103 blocks as CSI won its ninth national championship in the sport.

Everett

"I'm really excited for her. I think it's a great fit for her and she's a great fit for them," Cartisser said.

Everett plans to sign a National Letter of Intent during the early signing period, which runs from Nov. 10-17. She'll transfer to Utah State after the fall semester.

"It's tough because I know we've only got six months with her, but I know it's the best thing to get her up to speed in their spring program," Cartisser said.

Canyon Ridge hosts Filer on Saturday, while Minico is at Preston.

WENDELL 6, BUHL 2

Wendell all but clinched home-field advantage throughout the High Desert Soccer Conference playoffs with a 6-2 win at Buhl on Thursday.

Mateo Londano, Jorge Diaz, Eder Macias, Lupe Ruelas and Johnny Macias (2) were among the goalscorers for the Trojans (10-1-0, 9-0-0 HDSC, 27 pts.), who led 3-1 at the break. They'll make their regular-season championship official with one more win. Their first chance is at Declo on Monday.

Alex Arizmendi and Gustavo Magana scored for Buhl (3-6-2, 3-3-2, 11 pts.), which hosts Filer on Monday.

BUHL 5, WENDELL 0

Kali Archibald scored two goals to lead Buhl over Wendell 5-0 Thursday in the High Desert Soccer Conference matchup.

"We had lots of good communication and teamwork out there from the girls," said Buhl coach Araceli Huicochea. "We started off a little slow, but we riled each other up and gave a good effort."

Ruth Loza, Sklyer Barger and Brittany Barger each added a goal to finish off the scoring for the Indians.

Buhl (8-3, 7-2 High Desert, 15 pts.) plays Filer (5-2-1 HDSC) Monday in a pivotal conference game with district seeding on the line.

TWIN FALLS 9, JEROME 0

Twin Falls routed Jerome 9-0 in Great Basin Conference play Thursday.

Allie Webb scored three goals and recorded an assist. Six other Bruins scored: Jordan Clark, Erin Grubbs-Imhoff, Morgan McInnes, Clarie Goss, Brooke Wagner and McKenzie Johnson.

"The girls came out and played well. We're still missing some players, so we had some girls playing in different spots and they did a great job. You've got to be happy about that," said Twin Falls coach Katie Kauffman.

Becca Barrons and Grubbs-Imhoff each dished out two assists and Clark added one.

The Bruins (9-1, 7-0 Great Basin, 18 pts.) play GBC rival Wood River on Tuesday.

CANYON RIDGE 1, MINICO 0

Canyon Ridge spent most of the game on Minico's side of the field and came away with the 1-0 win over the Spartans Thursday.

Jade Wartluff scored for the Riverhawks.

"It was a really good game. We controlled the ball well on offense and had a lot of opportunities to score," said Canyon Ridge coach Christa Tackett.

Canyon Ridge (3-4, 2-8 Great Basin) plays a nonconference game against Filer on Saturday.

WOOD RIVER 7, BURLEY 0

Burley lost to visiting Wood River 7-0 on Thursday.

The Bobcats were down a few players due to injuries and only had two subs, said coach Sara Edwards.

Burley (4-8, 4-3 Great Basin) plays Canyon Ridge on Tuesday.

Wood River (8-2-1, 7-1 Great Basin) hosts Great Basin Conference foe Twin Falls on Tuesday.

Kimberly's Brian Crane crossed the finish line in 17 minutes, 54 seconds to edge teammate Wesley Kelly by five seconds at the Declo Invitational in Albion on Thursday. The pair were the only top 10 finishers for Kimberly, however, as Buhl placed five in the top 10 to win the team event by 11 points over the Bulldogs.

In the girls event Ellie Dalton of Dietrich won going away with a time of 20:43, more than two minutes over the next finisher. Declo won the team title with 35 points, two ahead of Kimberly.

Miami running back Damien Berry (20) breaks away from Pittsburgh linebacker Greg Williams (38) in the second quarter in Pittsburgh, Thursday.

No. 19 Miami romps by Pitt

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Seven years after they last played as Big East members, nothing's changed at all in the Miami-Pitt series.

Jacory Harris led quick touchdown drives to start each half and No. 19 Miami dominated Pittsburgh much like it did when the schools were conference rivals, winning 31-3 on Thursday night.

Harris had two more floater-type interceptions, like the four he threw in the Hurricanes' 36-24 loss to No. 2 Ohio State two weeks ago, but shook them off to throw for two scores and 248 yards while going 21 of 32. Damien Berry did the rest by running for 87 yards and a touchdown on 21 carries in an offense that out-gained Pitt's 348-232.

The Hurricanes (2-1), faster, deeper and more athletic than the Panthers (1-2), never gave Pitt quarterback Tino Sunseri any time to throw in his third college start, and he was pulled in the fourth quarter after completing 8 of 15 passes for 61 yards.

Dion Lewis, the nation's leading returning rusher, was given little running room by an overwhelmed offensive line and ended with 41 yards on 12 carries. Lewis, coming off a 1,799-yard season as a freshman, has been held to 143 yards in three games.

No. 4 TCU wants to keep SMU from making statement

DALLAS (AP) — SMU coach June Jones is sending mixed messages about the significance of the Mustangs' home game against fourth-ranked TCU.

He is probably doing that on purpose.

Jones, in his third season trying to return SMU to prominence, talks about "hoping one day we can be in that class with them" while also saying the underdog Mustangs (2-1) can't worry about TCU more than they do any other team.

But with a Friday night game against the Horned Frogs (3-0) at home, where SMU has won five straight for the first time since 1985-86, Jones isn't ignoring reality.

"You've got a chance to make a statement on national TV," Jones said.

TCU, which has won 17 consecutive regular season games, is favored by more than two touchdowns in the Dallas-Fort Worth rivalry. The Frogs have won nine of the last 10 meetings.

"I guess it comes with having a ranking to you, it's a statement game for those people," TCU coach Gary Patterson said. "June has done a good job with words. I don't quite understand it. ... It's not a big game, or is it a big game? What exactly is it?"

For the Frogs, this is the fourth step toward in what they hope is another undefeated regular season and a chance to be a BCS buster again.

SMU last year went to a bowl for the first time since 1984, before the so-called "death penalty" from the NCAA for rampant violations that included paying players and led to two years without fielding a team. Until last year, the Mustangs had posted only one winning record since the program was reinstated in 1989.

OSU decided to paint the practice field blue Monday so the team can practice on it the next three days in hopes players will be able to get over the novelty.

An anonymous donor covered the cost of the paint. There were 70 gallons of white grass paint, 280 gallons of water-based paint and 110 gallons of blue grass paint used.

"We honest to God think it's not different," Petersen said Monday of the blue turf. "Maybe we see it all the time but we don't notice if (the field played on) is green or blue. I wouldn't say it takes time get used to, but obviously it does."

Taking a step like this goes beyond a big game against a stellar opponent. A rivalry has developed between the teams.

Riley wanted to take the Beavers to Bronco Stadium for a walk-through today but can't get on the field because high school football games are being played in the afternoon when the team is scheduled to arrive.

He still plans to take the team by the stadium to get the shocking view over with before game time.

"Obviously they imported the blue, but you better tell them it's blue turf not blue grass," Petersen jokingly said of OSU painting its field.

Recent games in the series have been exciting with each side winning twice since Riley and Petersen have been with their programs.

Getting major teams to Boise State has been difficult. Oregon and OSU have gone there, not afraid of Boise State's success at home.

All three teams look for nearby quality nonconference opponents.

"It's great for the fans," Riley said. "With what Boise has done nationally it has gotten bigger and bigger since the first time we played. It's always exciting and a natural series."

The Beavers went into this season knowing how difficult the nonconference slate would be. They opened with a 30-21 loss to then-No. 4 TCU, and now this.

Riley's plan was to prepare his team for the Pacific-10 Conference with these encounters.

"It's tough in our football world to do this," Riley said. "Sometimes I shake my head at the nonconference schedule. But I think in the long-run this will be good for the Beavers. We'll be ready for any atmosphere when we get into our (conference)."

Suzuki sets record, but M's lose

TORONTO — On a day of milestone hits, Jose Bautista's big shot won the game.

Bautista hit his major league-leading 50th home run, connecting off Felix Hernandez and sending the Toronto Blue Jays over the Seattle Mariners 1-0 on Thursday.

Seattle's Ichiro Suzuki also became the first player with 10 straight 200-hit seasons, breaking his own record with a fifth-inning single.

"We got to see some things happen today that I've never seen before," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "It's a day I'll always remember."

Bautista became the 26th player in baseball history to reach the 50-home run mark with a first-inning drive off Hernandez (12-12).

"It's really a big honor to be put in that elite group of hitters," Bautista said.

Suzuki struck out in the first, doubled to left in the third and collected his 200th hit when he lined to center on the first pitch he saw from Shawn Hill (1-2) in the fifth.

In a difficult season for the Mariners, Suzuki wasn't sure how his teammates would react. They came to the top step of the dugout to applaud him, and he responded by stepping off to tip his cap as the crowd of 12,590 gave him a standing ovation.

"After I accomplished 200 hits and I looked to the dugout, everyone was celebrating, everyone was very happy. They were showing congratulatory feelings,"

Suzuki said through a translator. "That's when I finally felt I could express my feelings in a good way and say I'm happy for what I've achieved."

RAYS 10, YANKEES 3

NEW YORK — B.J. Upton and Carl Crawford each drove in two runs in a seven-run sixth inning, and the Tampa Bay Rays knocked around CC Sabathia in his much-anticipated rematch with David Price and beat the New York Yankees 10-3 Thursday night.

Price (18-6) labored through six innings but Sabathia (20-7) struggled even more. The Rays beat New York for the second straight day, splitting the four-game set and pulling within a half-game of the first-place Yankees in the AL East.

ROYALS 4, INDIANS 2

CLEVELAND — Sean O'Sullivan earned his first win as a starter for Kansas City and Joakim Soria converted his 33rd straight save in a victory over Cleveland.

O'Sullivan (3-6) gave up two runs and six hits over six-plus innings to beat Mitch Talbot (9-13). The right-hander left with a 3-0 lead and two on in the seventh. Philip Humber allowed both Indians to score, but stranded runners at second and third to end the inning.

NATIONAL LEAGUE GIANTS 13, CUBS 0

CHICAGO — Juan Uribe hit a grand slam and a two-run homer, both shots coming during a nine-run second inning that sent the San Francisco Giants past the Chicago Cubs 13-0 Thursday night.

Giants pitchers have gone 17 straight games giving up three or fewer runs, the longest streak since the Chicago White Sox set the record with 20 in a row in 1917, the Elias Sports Bureau said.

CARDINALS 9, PIRATES 2

PITTSBURGH — Albert

Pujols hit his 40th and 41st home runs and Matt Holliday reached the 100-RBI mark, leading the slumping St. Louis Cardinals over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Cardinals snapped a three-game losing streak and won for just the 13th time in 38 games since Aug. 14, the last day they were in first place in the NL Central.

NATIONALS 7, ASTROS 2

WASHINGTON — Michael Morse homered, doubled and drove in three runs, Roger Bernadina and Danny Espinosa hit two-run homers and Ross Detwiler earned his first win in nearly a year as the Washington Nationals beat the Houston Astros.

BREWERS 8, MARLINS 3

MILWAUKEE — Corey Hart hit one of three Milwaukee homers, helping Yovani Gallardo and the Brewers beat the Florida Marlins.

Quarterback stability: some teams don't care

The Associated Press

Call it the QB Shuffle. Or the QB Quandary.

Whatever it's called, the NFL position that normally needs more stability than any is in a state of flux from coast to coast.

Nine teams — Buffalo, Jacksonville, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Tennessee, Oakland, Philadelphia, Carolina and Detroit — already have used their backup quarterback. Some of the moves were because of injuries, but five clubs already have turned to No. 2 by choice, even if just temporarily.

So what in the name of Peyton and Eli Manning, Tom Brady and Drew Brees is going on?

"It is getting tougher and tougher to play the position, not only from a physical standpoint of throwing the ball, but from a mental standpoint and what you are seeing from defenses," says Ron Jaworski, the former Eagles starter and now ESPN's analyst for Monday night football games. No one watches more film of quarterbacks than Jaworski, which gives him particular insight into the upheaval at the position through just two weeks of the schedule.

"You always will have the elite guys, but once you start getting beyond No. 12 or 13, it's hard to find the other 19 consistent quarterbacks in this league."

Hard? Maybe impossible. The quarterback changes thus far run the gamut from bad health to bad play to bad vibes.

In Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit and Cleveland, injuries had plenty to do with the switches. Even those, however, merit further examination.

The Steelers knew since April that Ben Roethlisberger would be suspended for at least four weeks. They hoped to get by with Byron.

But Byron Leftwich, an eight-year veteran, hurt his left knee in the preseason, which meant third-stringer Dennis Dixon moved behind center. Dixon was a winner in Week 1, even though the Steelers didn't score a touchdown until overtime, and that came on a long run.

He went down in Week 2 with a left knee problem, bringing in Charlie Batch and making wide receiver Antwaan Randle El, a quarterback in college way back at the beginning of the century, the second-stringer.

Now Leftwich, who was waived last weekend and resigned Monday, is back. And backing up Batch.

"He's been with the starters, he's been with the second team, he's been with the third team," wide receiver Hines Ward sums up Batch's career. "He understands all the wide receivers. He probably understands this offense better than anybody. We feel good, we've just got to protect Charlie."

The Eagles couldn't protect Kevin Kolb well enough and he sustained a concussion in an opening loss. Michael Vick came in and starred, then did even better in a victory over Detroit with Kolb sidelined.

So Vick stays as the starter after coach Andy Reid reversed his earlier decision not to strip Kolb of the job because of injury.

"I think Kolb probably is a basket case right now," says Jaworski, who knows the Eagles as well as anyone.

"Kolb was their guy, they traded Donovan McNabb to give him a chance. To yank the guy and take his job away has got to be brutal for him."

A brutal hit by Julius Peppers on Matt Stafford sidelined the 2009 top overall pick with a right shoulder injury in Week 1, and Shaun Hill took over for the Lions. When Stafford is ready, he will step back in.

So, it seems, will Jake Delhomme in Cleveland once his ankle as healed enough for him to replace Seneca Wallace.

Casey looking for another prize

ATLANTA (AP) — Paul Casey won't be going to the Ryder Cup. He wouldn't mind a $10 million consolation.

Casey was the only player among the top five in the FedEx Cup standings to break par Thursday, running off three straight birdies around the turn at East Lake for a 4-under 66 and a share of the lead with Geoff Ogilvy and Luke Donald in the Tour Championship.

It was the seventh time Casey has shot in the 60s in the nine rounds since European captain Colin Montgomerie left him off the Ryder Cup team. Whether that's motivating him to play well, the Englishman isn't saying.

A different kind of cup does have his attention.

At stake in this playoff finale is a $10 million bonus to the FedEx Cup champion. The top five in the standings

— Casey got to No. 5 with his runner-up finish two weeks ago at Cog Hill — can claim golf's biggest payoff by winning, no matter what anyone else does.

"I've got an opportunity to accomplish one of the goals which I set for myself at the beginning of the year," Casey said. "I'm just trying to put myself in that position to win and then tick off that goal, which would be a huge goal. I'm not getting wrapped up in any sort of extra motivation. I don't need extra motivation. I'm motivated enough."

Breaking par was hard work on a difficult course in steamy conditions. The fairways are fast and more narrow than ever, and only nine players in the 30-man field broke 70.

One of them was defending champion Phil Mickelson, who has an outside chance to win the FedEx Cup and a better chance to replace Tiger Woods at No. 1 in the world. Woods did not qualify for the Tour Championship for the first time in his career.

Mickelson had two eagles in a span of four holes, including a shot he holed from the fairway on No. 12. Not so good was making bogey after both eagles, along with consecutive bogeys after his first birdie of the tournament. He shot 69, not a bad start.

"It's a better position than I started last year," said Mickelson, who opened with a 73 and went on to a three-shot victory. "Could have been better, could have been worse, and it was an interesting day."

Jim Furyk had a 67, while K.J. Choi was at 68. The group at 69 included Hunter Mahan, Jason Day, Kevin Na and Mickelson.

Matt Kuchar, the top seed in the FedEx Cup whose golfing career is rooted in Atlanta, chipped in for eagle on the 15th hole. That wasn't enough to offset for four bogeys in his round of 72, including a tee shot into the stands on the par-3 18th.

Dustin Johnson, the No. 2 seed, struggled off the tee on his way to a 73, while Steve Stricker (No. 4) also had a 74. Charley Hoffman, part of the top five from his victory at the TPC Boston, had a 71.

It only helps Casey and his bid to win the FedEx Cup when the four players ahead of him are behind him on the leaderboard, and he took notice of that when he glanced at video screens around East Lake.

"The big screens they have out there never go past the top 20, and I wasn't seeing anybody in the top five (in FedEx Cup standings) in that top 20," Casey said. "There is a very long way to go, though."

Source: Nelson expected to leave Warriors Monday

The Associated Press

Coach Don Nelson is expected to part ways with the Golden State Warriors on Monday, an NBA source told The Associated Press, possibly ending the career of the league's victory leader.

The source spoke on condition of anonymity Thursday night because the surprising move by new team owner Joe Lacob likely won't be announced until the start of the Warriors' training camp next week.

The 70-year-old Nelson has a record 1,335 victories in 31 seasons coaching Milwaukee, Golden State, New York and Dallas. The former Boston forward won five championships largely as a sixth man with the Celtics, but he has never led a team to a title or even reached the NBA finals.

He passed Lenny Wilkens' NBA record of 1,332 wins on April 7, near the close of the fourth season in his second stint with the Warriors. Golden State finished 26-56 last season.

The source wasn't certain whether Nelson technically would resign or be fired, but the sometimes-litigious coach is expected to be paid the full $6 million he's owed for the final year of his contract.

ESPN.com first reported Nelson's departure. Assistant coach Keith Smart, the former player and Cleveland head coach long considered Nelson's heir apparent in Oakland, is expected to succeed Nelson.

Nelson and general manager Larry Riley didn't immediately return phone calls seeking comment. Riley was Nelson's assistant coach until the 2008-09 season, when he took over personnel decisions while the Warriors phased out top basketball executive Chris Mullin.

The Warriors waited until the final days before camp to make a major change under new owners Lacob and Peter Guber, who bought the club for a record $450 million in July from Chris Cohan, the long-reviled owner who's blamed by Bay Area fans for the franchise's absence from the playoffs in 15 of the past 16 seasons.

Nelson was hailed when

Mullin hired his former coach to return to Golden State in 2006, and Nelson immediately led the Warriors into the postseason, where the eighth-seeded club upset the top-seeded Dallas Mavericks in 2007. Golden State then won 48 games but barely missed the playoffs after the 2007-08 season.

Golden State won just 55 games over the past two seasons while dismantling the core of the 2007 and 2008 teams led by Baron Davis and Stephen Jackson. Nelson was criticized for sticking with his style of run-and-run offense and little defense, while some young players got extensive minutes and others never got off the bench.

A MAGICAL RIDE: 2010 CHEVROLET CAMARO SS COUPE

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

Combining great looks, performance and advanced technology with a design that is very close to the original concept, the all-new Camaro SS acknowledges its heritage from the first-generation Camaro, produced from 1967 through 1969. The long hood and short deck are pushed to the far corners of the muscular fender forms and a fast, 67-degree rake windshield contributes to aerodynamic performance. Built on the new global rear-wheel-drive passenger car platform, Camaro SS embodies GM's global vehicle development and design process. The original design concept was conceived in the United States, with engineering shared by both Australian and U.S. teams. Camaro SS was validated on roads throughout the world, with assembly at GM's award-winning plant in Oshawa, Ontario, Canada. Base power for the performance-oriented variant of the aggressive Chevrolet coupe is generated by a pair of 6.2L V-8s, including the new L99 on automatic-equipped vehicles and the LS3 on manual-equipped models. Both engines are derived from the LS3 that debuted on the 2008 Corvette. This 90-degree V-8 includes an aluminum block (with cast iron cylinder liners) and aluminum cylinder heads. The bottom end of the engine includes a new structural cast aluminum oil pan, with an oil capacity of 8.9 quarts (8.5 liters), while the two-valve cylinder head design is based on race-proven airflow dynamics. A Tremec TR 6060 six-speed manual gearbox is standard while the Hydra-Matic 6L80 six-speed automatic is an available option. Both automatic transmissions feature aggressive first gear ratios that deliver strong launches, but also provide tall overdrive ratios that decrease engine rpm and provide better fuel efficiency. Each also includes driver shift control, allowing the driver to take control via paddle shifts located on the steering wheel after selecting the M mode on the console-mounted shifter. Performance Algorithm Shifting (PAS) is included with the 6L50 and 6L80. It lets the electronic transmission controller override the automatic gear selection during high lateral acceleration maneuvers. Control hardware for the 2010 Camaro SS features fully independent front and rear suspensions. The standard independent rear suspension is a first for Camaro and is a 4.5-link system that includes a unique, L-shaped upper control arm that attaches to the knuckle at one end and incorporates a ride bushing in the rear. The FE3 performance suspension package is standard featuring a dual ball strut front suspension with a direct-acting stabilizer bar that measures 23x4.2mm. Hollow bars are used for mass savings.

Motor News Media Corporation Photos

Rear suspension features include high lateral stiffness for handling via three lateral ball joints per side. A sub-frame at the rear is double-isolated to minimize vehicle body motions and dampen road imperfections. Coil-over shock absorbers are used in the rear with a decoupled, hollow stabilizer bar that measures 23 x 3mm. Inside the four-passenger cabin, a well-executed balance of heritage, modern design and attention to detail conveys simplicity and refinement with contemporary details in the cluster, switches, dials and lighting. An available ambient light package, for example, offers advanced LED light pipe technology, giving the cabin a distinctive glow. Deep, recessed gauges, located in square housings outlined in chrome, give a nod to the classic Camaro interior. The instrument panel gauges include both speedometer and engine rpm, with a driver information center located between the large gauges - its readouts and features controlled via a stalk on the steering column. An optional, console-mounted gauge package includes oil pressure, oil temperature, volts and transmission fluid temperature. The gauge package is included on ZSS models.

In 1869, thousands of businessmen were ruined in a Wall Street panic known as "Black Friday" after financiers Jay Gould and James Fisk attempted to corner the gold market.

In 1929, Lt. James H. Doolittle guided a Consolidated NY-2 Biplane over Mitchel Field in New York in the first all-instrument flight.

In 1948, Mildred Gillars, accused of being Nazi wartime radio propagandist "Axis Sally," pleaded not guilty in Washington, D.C. to charges of treason. (Gillars, later convicted, ended up serving 12 years in prison.)

In 1955, President Dwight D. Eisenhower suffered a heart attack while on vacation in Denver.

In 1960, the USS Enterprise, the first nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, was launched at Newport News, Va. "The Howdy Doody Show" ended a nearly 13-year run with its final telecast on NBC.

In 1963, the U.S. Senate ratified a treaty with Britain and the Soviet Union limiting nuclear testing.

In 1969, the trial of the Chicago Eight (later seven) began. (Five were later convicted of crossing state lines to incite riots at the 1968 Democratic convention, but the convictions were ultimately overturned.)

In 1976, former hostage Patricia Hearst was sentenced to seven years in prison for her part in a 1974 bank robbery in San Francisco carried out by the Symbionese Liberation Army. (Hearst was released after 22 months after receiving clemency from President Jimmy Carter.)

In 1981, four Armenian gunmen seized the Turkish consulate in Paris, killing a guard and holding 56 hostages for 15 hours before surrendering.

In 1998, the government began releasing the new, harder-to-counterfeit $20 bill.

Ten years ago: For the first time, citizens of the Yugoslav federation — Serbia and Montenegro — voted directly for president. (Supporters of opposition candidate Vojislav Kostunica declared victory the next day, but the election commission said a runoff was needed, prompting massive protests that toppled President Slobodan Milosevic.)

Five years ago: Hurricane Rita struck eastern Texas and the Louisiana coast, causing more flooding in New Orleans. Crowds opposed to the war in Iraq surged past the White House, staging the largest anti-war protest in the nation's capital since the U.S. invasion. Vice President Dick Cheney had surgery to repair aneurysms on the back of both knees.

One year ago: With President Barack Obama presiding, the U.N. Security Council unanimously endorsed a sweeping strategy aimed at halting the spread of nuclear weapons and ultimately eliminating them. The heads of the Group of 20 nations began a two-day meeting in Pittsburgh aimed at making sure a fledgling global recovery remained on track. Massachusetts Gov. Deval Patrick tapped former Democratic National Chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. to temporarily fill the Senate seat held by the late Edward M. Kennedy. Susan Atkins, 61, a member of the Charles Manson "family" who admitted stabbing actress Sharon Tate to death in the cult's 1969 murder rampage, died in prison at Chowchilla, Calif.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Oh I get by with a little help from my friends."
— Lennon and McCartney

Defensive signaling is a subject that is often neglected. Players think they understand attitude and count signals, but suit preference is the stepchild of signals. The point is that in just about every deal, one defender or the other has the opportunity to legitimately pass a message to his partner. Although that signal does not always translate into tricks, that does not take away from the usefulness of the signal.

Against three no-trump, West led the spade three to the king, and East returned the suit. Declarer won the queen as West contributed the eight. Declarer now thoughtfully led a heart to the ace and tried a low diamond from the board. If East had played low, declarer would have been home, since West's diamond entry would have been dislodged before the spades were established. However, East alertly rose with the diamond king to play a spade and defeat the game. Why did East find the play? On the second spade, West had followed with the eight, in a position where he could not have started life with three or four small cards, or he would have led a larger spot-card initially. The most likely meaning for the spade eight was suit preference for West's remaining entry. Following with the jack would have suggested an entry in hearts, so the eight suggested diamonds.

East knew that unless West had an ace, the game was surely not going to be defeated, and East had to preserve his partner's entry until the spades were established.

ANSWER: Frequently when your partner makes a simple overcall and the opponents bounce to game in an agreed suit, it puts you under the gun in fourth seat. Best here is to double, meaning it simply as values. (In an ideal world those values would be transferable, meaning tricks on both offense and defense.) The overcaller is expected to bid again with significant extra length in his suit, or with a two-suiter.

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

DEAR ABBY: I met a man here in Afghanistan. (We are both deployed.) Since that day we have been together. "Ben" knows that I love him very much. He is scheduled to leave in two months. I am scheduled to leave two months after that.

Ben lives in Georgia, and I come from Texas. We want to make it work when we leave here. I'll continue with my job, but because he's a contractor, Ben will be unemployed. I'm not worried about it because I know he's a go-getter.

Abby, I have had difficulty when it comes to relationships. I am scared to let my guard down and let this good man provide a life for my children and me. I trusted my kids' father and he walked out of our lives. Ben is everything I have prayed for. He took the step of giving me a promise ring and told me he'd always be here for me. Please give me some good advice on how I should handle this.

- IN LOVE IN AFGHANISTAN

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR IN LOVE: Being under life-and-death pressure sharpens all of the senses. When people are in a strange or dangerous environment, their emotions can be heightened. This is not to say that people in a war zone can't fall legitimately in love - it does happen. And it may have happened for you and Ben. However, the test of the strength of your relationship will come after you are both back home in the USA.

You two have a ways to go before you step up to the altar. Your children need to meet Ben, get to know him and accept him. And he needs to prove to you that he can be not only a life partner to you, but a father to your children.

So my heartfelt advice is to take this one step at a time. Don't rush into anything. If this was meant to be, it will happen in its own time.

DEAR ABBY: A close female friend moved near me with the intention of starting a serious relationship. We're in our 20s and finishing college.

"Hallie" has just been diagnosed with stage 2 ovarian cancer. While her prognosis is fairly optimistic, her doctors say she'll be unable to have children. Hallie loves kids. Knowing she can't have any has broken her heart. I love kids, too, but it's not an absolute requirement for me.

I just started student teaching and can't be there for her during her chemo treatments and doctor visits. Last night, after a few days of pushing me away, Hallie offered me an "out." She told me I should think carefully about everything before deciding to go through all of this with her. I want to be with her in every way I can, but I can't help wondering how things may change for both of us if she beats this.

- TORNAPART IN MICHIGAN

DEAR TORN APART: Hallie is an intelligent young woman. She understands the strain a diagnosis like hers can place on a relationship, so do as she has asked. If she beats the cancer, and you stay together and decide to marry, you will be like many other childless couples - deciding whether to remain childless, adopt or hire a surrogate. You will also appreciate more fully than most what a gift each day you have together really is. And you'll love each other until death do you part.

DEAR ABBY: What is an acceptable time frame to receive a response to a question you send via phone texting?

- WAITING IN MONTGOMERY, ILL.

DEAR WAITING: Although we live in a world where most of us seek instant gratification, the answer depends upon how busy the person you are texting is.
