CSI kicks off reading program at Twin Falls schools

The question boomed through the speakers in the multipurpose room at Perrine Elementary School: "How are we going to do that?"

The answer, shouted in chorus by the students, came back even louder: "Read!"

The "that" in the question could have been any number of things — learn history, improve problem-solving or just have fun.

That fact gets to the heart of the "Read Like an Eagle" program, kicked off Monday by the College of Southern Idaho's athletics department with a pair of afternoon assemblies at Perrine Elementary.

The program, offered at all seven elementary schools in Twin Falls, is designed to get kids excited about reading and offer them a reward for their efforts.

Students will receive a general-admission ticket good for any regular-season CSI athletic event to use as a bookmark. Each time students finish a book, their teachers will sign the back of the bookmark, making it valid for free admission.

Additionally, students who achieve the reading goals set by their teachers for the current semester will receive a "Read Like an Eagle" T-shirt and will be honored during halftime at CSI basketball games on Jan. 13 and 20.

"It's the whole motivational process," Perrine Principal Bill Brulotte said. "There's a lot of kids who just think reading is only during the school hour, and it's much more than just the school hour — it's a lifelong learning environment that we teach kids."

That goal got a boost Monday from six CSI athletes. Men's basketball players Pierre Jackson of Las Vegas, Paul Bunch of Chicago and Gerson do Espirito Santo of Brazil were joined by women's basketball players Guilhermina El-Mir of Australia, Kylee Schierman of Oregon and Holly Checketts of Preston. Women's basketball assistant coach Tessa Balsick was also on hand, along with Jason Vickrey, CSI's coordinator of marketing and athletic promotions.

The athletes shared their favorite books, with Dr. Seuss' "Green Eggs and Ham" and the Harry Potter series among those mentioned repeatedly. Then the 5-foot-10 Jackson beat out 7-footers Bunch and Santo in a dunk contest judged by the students' cheers.

Chisholm challenges Hartgen for House seat

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

A longtime candidate in Magic Valley elections faces Rep. Stephen Hartgen in the Nov. 2 election.

Bill Chisholm of Buhl is running on the Democratic ticket against Hartgen, the Republican incumbent seeking a second two-year District 23 term.

For Chisholm, 64, running for office has been a pastime in every election since 1978.

While he hasn't been elected, Chisholm said his campaigns still serve a purpose of bringing awareness to issues and possible solutions to the forefront.

"I've won every campaign; I've just lost every election," he said.

Chisholm said he's concerned about a lack of proactive approaches and solution-finding within the Legislature.

"I don't see any thinking that's going on about what can we do to put a little vibrancy back into the economy," he said.

He believes that legalizing industrial hemp in Idaho is one example that would rejuvenate the economy, noting that it's a crop allowed in Canada.

"We need to open up the door and put ideas on the table — think them through instead of doing all this knee-jerk reactionary stuff," he said.

Chisholm said his diverse background would make him a suitable candidate. For example, he was a Bureau of Land Management firefighter for 17 years, and has served on boards of organizations such as the Idaho

Pacific Ethanol to pay tax on plant's $90M assessed value

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia County commissioners denied a request on Monday to cancel property taxes for a Burley ethanol company.

The request by Pacific Ethanol Inc. arrived as a letter addressed to commissioners, asking that the county cancel the company's 2010 tax bill under an Idaho law that allows county commissions to cancel taxes due to an error or double assessment.

Cassia County Assessor Marty Holland said the reason why the company's tax bill increased in 2010 is that the company's Burley plant wasn't operational in 2009. The company shuttered the plant for nearly a year while it was reorganized in bankruptcy court.

In 2009, the plant's valuation was reduced from nearly $90 million to

McKean to serve 90 days for liquor-store burglary

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Tears and a 2-year-old daughter to care for didn't save Kristan McKean from jail time.

McKean became the third of six individuals to be sentenced for the May burglary of the Kimberly Road liquor store when she appeared Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Judge Randy Stoker imposed six years in state prison each on counts of burglary and grand theft, with both sentences suspended for a six-year probationary period. In addition, he ordered McKean to serve a 90-day jail term and pay, at least in part, $34,638.41 in restitution her co-defendants have also been ordered to pay.

McKean's statement prior to being sentenced was brief and barely audible through tears and a broken voice: "I'm sorry for the emotional and physical damage I caused anybody."

Stoker's comments during the hearing echoed those of Judge G. Richard Bevan, who sentenced two of McKean's co-defendants.

"I still do not understand the

At 5:26 a.m. May 20, Twin Falls police found a stolen Pontiac car lodged inside State Liquor Store No. 201. Surveillance video from the store showed suspects ramming the car through the store's front doors and destroying the entrance, the clerk's station and the bourbon section. Suspects entered the store and took approximately $300 in liquor items. Damage to liquor stock destroyed in the break-in is estimated at $6,000.

McKean, 19, of Twin Falls, received a bit of leniency from Stoker as the state, represented by Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Melissa Kippes, argued for 180 days in the county slam. When Stoker asked Kippes to explain the difference in jail

MORNING BRIEFING

Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

● Diane Josephy Peavey talks about her journey from East Coast city life to a sheep ranch in Idaho in the “The Journey From East to West, Urban to Rural” at 6 p.m. at the Hailey Public Library, 7 W. Croy St.

● The world’s longest mountain bike race is chronicled in the award-winning documentary, “Ride The Divide,” at 7:30 p.m. at Sun Valley Resort Opera House. Tickets are $10.

● Rediscover the South Hills. With the trees changing for autumn, now is the time for a drive. There are plenty of places to stop and picnic, walk or just enjoy the fall reds and yellows on the trees with nice music playing on your car stereo.

Conservation League, Idaho Rural Council and Twin Falls County Local Emergency Planning Committee.

He’s also a carpenter and handyman. Chisholm has a bachelor’s degree in business from Idaho State University, which he received in 1970.

Hartgen, 65, was appointed to his seat to fill a vacancy in July 2008 and successfully ran for re-election the following November.

Hartgen said he’s interested in pursuing legislation that will encourage geothermal development on the state’s public lands by making the lease rates more attractive to developers. Currently, rates on state public lands are not competitive with the rates on federal public lands such as those overseen by the Bureau of Land Management, he said.

“There’s quite a bit of geothermal potential in southern Idaho, so if we can free up the leasing process a little and make the leasing process easier and more competitive, that may help us with that sector of energy development,” he said.

Before entering public office, Hartgen worked from 1982 to 2004 for the Times-News, first as the editor and then as publisher starting in 1990. In 1966, he graduated with a bachelor’s degree in history from Amherst

“I think I’m seen as someone who is a good conservative on the issues, but also I think I bring an open mind and a willingness to talk and listen to pretty much anybody, so I would say that I think I’m ready for another term,” he said.

Hartgen said he’s also interested in serving on the House Revenue and Taxation Committee or the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Hartgen is also a member of the Idaho Capitol Commission, which planned the restoration of the State Capitol. With the restoration completed, Hartgen said he’ll sponsor legislation that scales back the role of the commission.

$45 million by the county’s board of equalization. The assessment was increased back to nearly $90 million after the 60-million-gallon-per-year plant reopened in January.

Commissioners unanimously voted to have Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus draft a letter citing why the request would be denied.

Barrus said the company’s letter cited several reasons for the tax cancellation request, adding that, “Basically, it came down to the bankruptcy.”

Holland said the company had until June 28 to appeal the 2010 assessment. Now, he said, because the tax rolls have been turned over to the state auditor’s office, it’s simply too late.

Holland said if the county diverges from its cut-off date for appeals, it will open the floodgates for other late appeals.

“These folks have been good to deal with and to talk to,” Holland said of Pacific Ethanol officials.

Holland said his office would be willing to work with the company regarding next years’ assessment if company officials don’t think it’s fair.

The city of Burley and its urban renewal district have met certain financial obligations to bring Pacific Ethanol in and have a dog in the fight as well, Holland said.

Barrus said statute states that county commissioners can cancel taxes if there is a lawful reason they shouldn’t be collected. But a doubling of assessed value doesn’t constitute a double assessment.

“We don’t have the authority to cancel those taxes,” Barrus said. “I don’t think there is a lawful reason.”

nant” to be forced to carry advertising on his car without compensation. The lawsuit never got out of district court.

Scates proposed legislation that would have allowed Idahoans to choose between “Famous Potatoes” and “Scenic Idaho” on their license plates. It never got out of the House Transportation Committee.

J.R. Simplot, then Idaho’s richest and most powerful man, lobbied hard to keep “Famous Potatoes,” and the slogan lingered after the state adopted its current license plate design following the 1990 state centennial.

Yet the motto is only to be found on Idaho’s standard plates nowadays — and on its specialized tags featuring a baked potato — and not on the dozens of other commemorative plates that now adorn more than one-third of Idaho cars, vans and light trucks.

That wouldn’t sit so well with state Sen. Fred Gustafson, R-Idaho Falls, a Swedish-born spud farmer who pushed a bill through the Legislature in 1947 requiring each license plate issued by the state to bear the words “World Famous Potatoes.”

But back then, spuds dominated Idaho agriculture. Now they’re just 15 percent of the total sales of the state’s ag commodities, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

So how much longer will potatoes be with us — all of us, wherever we drive? Depends on how many more specialized plates the state issues, and how many Idahoans buy them.

But don’t expect “Famous Rice” tags anytime soon.

“Pierre’s about as tall as them,” quipped Vickrey, “so when they see how he can dunk they get pretty excited.”

CSi athletes will return to Twin Falls elementary schools throughout the school year to read books to students.

“It’s something we enjoy,” said Jackson. “I like to do this more than practice during the season.”

Vickrey, who is heading up the program and hopes to see it expand to Jerome, Kimberly and Filer schools next year, was thrilled with the students’ reaction

Monday. With each question he tossed to them, the response was loud, clear and enthusiastic.

“I think it’s great,” said Vickrey. “Look how excited these kids are right now just to have these players here.”

Brulotte agreed. “What they’ve done to bring this to the Twin Falls School District and the elementary schools around here is amazing. And the kids’ excitement level, you could see it — they were ready to read.”

time compared to other co-defendants — Brina Krohn, 18, is serving 60 days and Megan Marovich, 18, received 80 days — Kippes said it had to do with McKean lying to police during their investigation.

Krohn and Marovich “spilled their guts,” Kippes added. Also, the state claims that McKean secured the key to the stolen Pontiac, as the owner was an ex-boyfriend.

Defense counsel Stephen McCrea disputed that claim, offering that McKean’s husband, Kristopher McKean, was in possession of the key for months. McCrea also claimed that Kristan McKean was under duress from Kristopher to help commit the crime: if she didn’t help, McCrea said, Kristopher threatened to pin the crime on her and use it in a custody dispute for their daughter. They were going through a divorce at the time, McCrea said.

McCrea further asked the court for leniency in jail time, as McKean claims there is no one to care for the child if she and Kristopher, who faces sentencing next week, are both incarcerated.

Stoker said that no matter if McKean took the key or not, she still acted as a lookout for the crime. The judge was also unmoved by McKean’s domestic situation.

“A child doesn’t provide an excuse to avoid incarceration,” he said.

Stoker made McKean eligible for work release so she can start making payments toward restitution, provided she find employment.

Co-defendants awaiting sentencing are Charles Marovich, 17, who will be sentenced Monday; Kristopher McKean, 19, also to be sentenced Monday; and Esperansa Valladares, 17, to be sentenced Nov. 15.

T.F. Co. announces hospital open house

Polling place in Kimberly changed; county rents out old Safe House building

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

If you have a suggestion for the Addison Avenue hospital building — or better yet, if you have a potential buyer — then the Twin Falls County commissioners want you to fill them in at an open house Oct. 20.

The open house — which will be at the county courthouse, 425 Shoshone St. N. in Twin Falls — aims to solicit ideas from the general public and, if interest is high enough, may lead to a citizen advisory committee, Commissioner Terry Kramer said in a meeting Monday with realty group Westerra.

Kramer said commissioners want to get two lists of suggestions: one for all possible uses of the building, from maximum-security prison to nursing home, and another for what people's ideal use for the building would be. He called it a community brainstorming session.

“We’re going to set the flavor for this part of town, let’s face it,” Kramer said.

In other county news:

- One of the Kimberly polling places for this fall’s election was changed from the Redeemer Lutheran Church to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints at 222 Birch St. South, Kimberly. The new location is less than half a mile away. Affected voters will be sent notices of the change, County Clerk Kristina Glascock said.

- The county will rent out its vacant Safe House building to the safe-and-sober transitional housing program Bill’s Place, named for former county commissioner Bill Brockman. The program recently changed its aim from helping young men from 18-24 years old to become productive members of society, to mostly helping women on felony probation transition back into society. In its first year, six of its 11 participants have been able to move on.

“Might as well utilize this property,” County Commission Chairman George Urie said. “It’s better for the property, it’s better for this program and it’s better for this community.”

The six-month, $300-a-month lease is intended to be

Business owners dispute plan for BID’s last $100K

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

It’s hard to tell if it was Twin Falls City Councilman Will Kezele’s statement that the city should “divorce” former Business Improvement District members that riled them up, or if it was just the very idea of the city spending their money without their approval that did it.

Either way, the business owners present at Monday’s council meeting were mad about a proposal to use up the defunct BID’s remaining budget on downtown projects. No phone calls were made to consult former BID members, they said, and the council was being cavalier with decisions and rhetoric.

“I have a real problem with that Will Kezele,” said Michele Hamilton, a former BID board member and co-owner of Scrappin’ Girlfriends in downtown Twin Falls. “You want to divorce me? Great. I’m a downtown merchant and I pay a lot of taxes.”

downtown business owners. Proponents were more varied: Lanting argued that a new committee with business owners would result in the same proposal, and Clow said the BID had washed its hands of the ordeal without settling debts.

The end compromise was to create another committee or to host a town hall meeting to address the money, proposals downtown building owner Robert K. Myrland said would satisfy him.

“I just resent being treated like a child and told how they are going to spend our money,” he said.

In other council news, the members unanimously approved a grant application for $400,000 from the Environmental Protection Agency to test for areas of downtown suspected to be contaminated from former industrial uses. Though Kezele voiced concern about strings attached to free federal money, Craig said the city has used these types of grants before and no strings were attached.

In an effort to help rural Twin Falls County with business expansion, relocations and new business development, Southern Idaho Rural Development recently announced the hiring of Larry Hall as its director.

Hall will work with the seven rural communities in Twin Falls County — excluding the city of Twin Falls — to create economic development opportunities through the use of urban renewal agencies, according to a release from the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization, a private, nonprofit group that markets south-central Idaho to new or expanding businesses. While urban renewal agencies are being developed, SIRD will identify projects that could draw new businesses, expand local business and build jobs.

Hall now serves as a board member of the city of Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency, and will work out of the Twin Falls offices of the Region IV Development Association.

"Most of our rural communities don't have the means to hire their own economic development person," Hall said. "In this new position, I look forward to utilizing my skills to help each of them grow business and add jobs in their communities."

"There has been an interest to support economic development in our rural communities for several years, but the funding just wasn't there," said Joe Herring, president of Region IV. "Thanks to Twin Falls County, who submitted the grant to the Idaho Department of Commerce, and to supporting groups, the (SIRD) program was established.

"This is just another valuable economic development effort in our region that will focus on rural communities, which we've never done before. We're thrilled to have Larry Hall oversee this effort," he said.

"This new position will be vital to the business and employment growth of our many rural communities," said Jan Rogers, executive director of SIEDO. "Larry is the ideal person to develop, implement and coordinate business development programs in these smaller communities."

The Times-News recently asked Hall questions about his job and what he hopes to accomplish.

Q. What does Southern Idaho Rural Development plan to accomplish?

Hall

A. SIRD is about getting all of the rural communities into potential economic development. We know that there are opportunities for economic development that are not being "shepherded" to fruition. SIRD is to build capacity and confidence within rural Twin Falls County to pursue economic development activities. This can range from installing pro-business attitudes, to marketing a property, to arranging financing, to getting in necessary infrastructure to facilitate economic growth.

Q. How will Southern Idaho Rural Development know if it is making progress?

A. Each community will have its own projects, timeliness, budgets and roadblocks. Success will primarily be reported through the media and other community channels. At a minimum, we will prepare monthly progress reports required by the Department of Commerce that will be shared with our partners.

Q. What will the organization's structure be like?

A. SIRD is a new program of Region IV Development. SIRD goals and activities will be assisted by a volunteer board comprised of community partners and private sector representatives.

Q. How will the board members be chosen?

A. Since the grant from commerce is to Twin Falls County, and Region IV Development is responsible for operating the program, County Commission Chairman George Urie and RIVDA President Joe Herring are recruiting board members.

Q. Will the grant eventually expire?

A. This Idaho Department of Commerce grant program has been operating for over nine years. The grant funds a one-year program and is expected to be renewed based on our successes. We anticipate that the funding from Commerce will cease at some point three to five years out.

Q. If so, how will SIRD obtain financing?

A. For 2010, funding has been provided by a grant from the Idaho Department of Commerce, along with funds from Twin Falls County, Business Plus, Region IV and the rural communities that will benefit from this effort. The intent of the Department of Commerce is that the program will be successful and that local funds will replace the commerce funding in the future.

Q. Tell us a little about your background and why you are well-suited to direct SIRD.

A. My career encompasses over 30 years of corporate finance, project management, private business ownership and banking. I am also a board member for the Urban Renewal Agency of Twin Falls, which has provided me with great information and insight.

Q. What are the differences between economic development for rural areas versus urban areas?

A. Drawing business to a rural community builds tax revenues and potential income for area businesses. Bringing new economic development opportunities to the rural communities will help them revitalize and rebuild their communities. For the city of Twin Falls, economic development will happen without any additional economic development efforts. The city of Twin Falls, its urban renewal agency, CSI, Region IV, and SIEDO all contribute. This is not true in our rural areas.

Q. What is the advantage/disadvantage of drawing business to a rural setting?

A. Luring a new business to an area requires the right fit of an available work force, the right property, transportation access, community, schools, recreation, etc. The advantages or disadvantages are based upon the desires of a business wishing to relocate to the Magic Valley. A successful rural business is either a destination point or does not rely on heavy customer traffic for success. The Internet has changed where successful business can be located — Internet-based business can locate where they would like to or can afford to live.

Hearing begins in alleged plot to murder Afghans

By Gene Johnson
Associated Press writer

JOINT BASE LEWIS-MCCHORD, Wash. — A soldier's videotaped statements describing how he and his colleagues randomly killed three Afghan civilians came under scrutiny Monday at a hearing into one of the most serious war-crimes cases from the war in Afghanistan. Cpl. Jeremy Morlock of Wasilla, Alaska, is among five Stryker soldiers charged with premeditated murder and conspiracy to commit premeditated murder. In interviews with Army investigators, he described a plot led by Staff Sgt. Calvin Gibbs to randomly kill civilians for sport while on patrol in Kandahar Province.

Prosecutors have also alleged that members of the platoon mutilated Afghan corpses and even collected fingers and other body parts, and that some posed for photos with Afghan corpses. Morlock talked about how they threw a grenade at a civilian to "wax him."

Morlock's attorneys are seeking to suppress the statements, saying they were made under the influence of muscle relaxants, sleeping pills and anti-nausea medicine prescribed for repeat concussions suffered during war.

One in critical condition after crash

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

An Oregon man lost control of his vehicle and crashed head-on with another Sunday night, sending three people to the hospital.

Homero Garibay-Alvarez, 36, of Ontario, Ore., was southbound on U.S. Highway 93 when at around 8 p.m., he crossed the center line with his 2001 Dodge Dakota pickup truck and struck an oncoming vehicle near milepost 8 in Twin Falls County. Kevin L. Leonard, 27, and Samantha K. Leonard, 23, both of Mountain Home Air Force Base, were heading north on the highway in a 2001 Volkswagen GTI as Alvarez crashed into them, throwing both vehicles off the road. The Leonards' vehicle overturned to the west while Alvarez's vehicle rolled multiple times to the east.

All had to be extricated from the wreckage.

Samantha Leonard was taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls by air ambulance, then flown to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. She was listed in critical condition as of 6 p.m. Monday. Kevin Leonard was treated at St. Luke's and released. Alvarez was also treated at St. Luke's.

All were wearing seat belts, and air bags deployed in the Leonards' vehicle.

U.S. Highway 93 was closed for approximately 30 minutes while the air ambulance landed.

No charges have been filed, but the crash is still under investigation by Idaho State Police, who were assisted by the Idaho Department of Transportation, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, and Elko County, Nev., authorities.

Filer man arrested for possessing stolen motorcycle

Skylar Wade Meade, 18, of Filer, was arraigned Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on a criminal complaint of possession of a stolen vehicle.

According to a Twin Falls police report, a resident of Pierce Street said he attempted to help a man, later identified as Meade, who was in the middle of the street and having trouble starting his motorcycle. As they moved it off the road, Meade called for someone to pick him up. Later, a female identified as Tonia Dawn Huber arrived in a white Ford F150 pickup to take Meade to get gas for the bike.

The resident believed their behavior to be suspicious, and he called police, who matched the cycle's Vehicle Identification Number to a green 2003 Kawasaki motorcycle, reported as stolen on Sept. 15. The motorcycle had been painted black at some point.

Twin Falls police found Meade and Huber in the pickup and stopped them on Fillmore Street. Both were removed from the vehicle and detained. Police also found a 9 mm semiautomatic pistol, which allegedly fell out of Meade's pants. They also recovered a fully loaded magazine in Meade's pants, as well as a flashlight, gloves and a knife.

When interviewed, Meade did not cooperate regarding the motorcycle or pistol. He was arrested and transported to the Twin Falls County Jail on $25,000 bond. His preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 8.

Montana, Idaho seek wolf kills

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press writer

BILLINGS, Mont. — Documents released Monday show that Montana is seeking federal approval to kill 186 endangered gray wolves in a special "conservation hunt" and neighboring Idaho wants permission to remove up to 50 of the predators that officials say are eating too many elk.

The states' proposals to kill the wolves come despite a court ruling that restored the animals' endangered species status.

In separate applications filed over the last two weeks with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Idaho and Montana said their new plans to kill wolves were permissible under the Endangered Species Act.

Wildlife managers contend the Aug. 5 ruling from U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy did not account for the growing impact of wolves on livestock and big game herds across the Northern Rockies.

Hunters in Idaho and Montana killed about 260 wolves last year during the states' inaugural wolf hunt seasons. An estimated 1,700 of the animals still roam the Northern Rockies — almost six times the region's original recovery goal of 300 wolves.

"We've done an excellent job. We want to manage them as we do any other of our wildlife," said Bonnie Butler, natural resources adviser to Idaho Gov. C. L. "Butch" Otter.

She said the 40 to 50 wolves that would be removed from the Lolo area of central Idaho have decimated area elk populations. The wolves would be killed by government wildlife agents.

Idaho also wants public hunting of wolves but has not applied for a permit. Rather, the state is seeking a hunt through negotiations on an agreement to allow Idaho to manage wolves on behalf of the federal government.

No quota figures for Idaho's hunt proposal were available, Butler said.

The proposals have drawn criticism from wildlife advocates who accuse the states of making an end-run around the courts.

A federal lawsuit that could derail Idaho's plans already is pending.

3-D images of bones draw worldwide attention

By John O'Connell
Idaho State Journal

POCATELLO — The Idaho Museum of Natural History has become a worldwide draw and a resource for hundreds of researchers, thanks to a one-of-a-kind, virtual collection of Arctic animal bones it offers.

More than 1,500 users from throughout the world have downloaded more than 500,000 pages and images on the museum's Website according to interim museum director Herbert Maschner.

The museum received a $310,000 pilot grant from the National Science Foundation in 2008 to attempt the creation of a new kind of museum. With the funding, the IMNH hired two full-time programmers and two full-time scanner technicians to create 3-D images of Arctic bones in the museum's collection, as well as bones mailed to the museum for scanning from the Canadian Museum of Civilization and the Burke Museum of Natural History and Culture located on the University of Washington campus.

Based on the initial success of the project, the IMNH recently received another grant from the National Science Foundation for about $1.03 million.

<http://vzap.iri.isu.edu>.

"We're the only people in the world doing this at this scale," Maschner said.

More than 3,000 3D images and 12,000 digital photographs of animals found in northern Siberia, Northern Alaska, Greenland and Canada have been entered into the database already, Maschner said. Many of those species are also found in Idaho, making their bones germane to the IMNH's collection.

"It allows a researcher anywhere in the world to identify and analyze a bone from any northern region in the world," Maschner said of virtual museum. "It's useful to archaeologists, paleontologists, marine biologists anyone who is working in the north that is dealing with those kinds of species."

By pooling resources with the partner museums, Maschner said the virtual museum will offer one of the few complete sets of northern bones available. He intends to work with the Smithsonian Institute to provide any bones that may be missing from the virtual collection. He anticipates the 3D collection will be completed within another two years, and he said some of the grant funding will be used to hire undergraduate and graduate student employees to assist with the work.

Maschner acknowledges the 3-D images aren't exactly the same for researchers as working with the real thing, but they're pretty close.

Animal bones recovered from northern paleontological and archaeological sites are known for being well preserved and offer superb records for studying ancient animal populations, human behaviors, climate data and ecological variability, Maschner said. He also anticipates the virtual collection will be an asset to casual learners and school students from kindergarten through high school.

He noted it's exceedingly difficult in the modern world, given the constraints of legislation such as the Endangered Species Act and the Marine Protection Act, to create extensive collections.

"We just presented this about a month ago at a conference in Paris and blew them out of the water," Maschner said. The next virtual project will focus more emphasis on Idaho collections, Maschner said.

Technology to create the high-resolution images was developed in the Informatics Research Institute and the Idaho Virtualization Laboratory.

The grant's other principal investigators are Corey Schou, professor of information systems and director of the ISU Informatics Research Institute, and Matthew Betts, curator of Atlantic Provinces Archaeology at the Canadian Museum of Civilization and a former postdoctoral researcher at ISU.

"This is a tremendous tool for researchers," Betts said in a press release. "At the same time, the interactive technology and scanning protocols we are developing have significant applicability to the museum communities. This is a system that can be transferred to any heritage collection."

AROUND THE WEST

IDAHO Capitol renovation final tally tops $123M

BOISE — The price tag for the Idaho Capitol renovation and expansion will come in at just over $123 million.

That's more than the original $120 million estimate, but less than the $125 million that had been set aside to make sure all work was finished and paid for.

Revenue from cigarette taxes is paying for the work.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter says getting the work done close to the original estimates shows how well Idaho manages its finances.

Legislators moved in for the 2010 session, but work on several remaining items has continued. Still to be installed are historic replica street lights around the Capitol block.

The project included restoring the original Capitol, completed in 1913, as well as the addition of two wings of meeting rooms on the western and eastern sides of the building.

Idaho parks visits up; verdict out on fee hike

LEWISTON — Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation officials say overall visitation numbers rose this year, though it's still too early to judge the effect of increased recreation fees.

That's because many of those who stayed at campgrounds in Idaho's 30 state parks made their reservations before price hikes began this year.

A year ago, 79,669 people stayed overnight at state parks in tents, camp trailers or cabins and yurts.

This year, the numbers rose to just over 80,600, so far.

Agency spokeswoman Jennifer Wernex says those figures may not accurately represent just how people are reacting to paying more to experience Idaho's great outdoors. She's says, "It's still too early to say."

The fee hikes are part of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's plan to get the agency to wean itself off taxpayer support, if it can.

Oracle sues Micron over price-fixing claims

BOISE — Oracle Corp. sued semiconductor maker Micron Technology Inc. in federal court over price-fixing claims.

In its complaint in U.S. District Court in California, Oracle says its Sun Microsystems business bought billions of dollars worth of microchips from 1998 to 2002.

Oracle, based in Redwood Shores, Calif., bought Sun in February.

Oracle says Boise-based Micron was among conspirators including South Korea's Hynix and Samsung and Germany's Infineon that artificially inflated microchip prices above what Sun should have paid, had the companies actually competed.

The lawsuit says five companies have agreed to a nearly $1 billion fine and that Micron was granted amnesty from a U.S. Department of Justice criminal prosecution because it cooperated.

UTAH Colorado artifacts dealer taking plea deal

SALT LAKE CITY — One of the biggest players in the Four Corners bust of artifact trafficking is set to take a plea deal.

A defense lawyer says in court papers that Durango, Colo., artifacts dealer Carl "Vern" Crites has reached a deal with the government on charges that led him to surrender five truckloads of American Indian relics earlier this year.

The 75-year-old Crites was a dealer described in government affidavits as a "price setter" for antiquities because of his influence over the market. Federal agents have said he had an astonishing collection at his Durango home. Crites was set to go on trial at federal court in Salt Lake City on Monday. He was one of 26 people charged last year in a government sting operation that spanned Colorado, New Mexico and Utah.

HAWAII Hawaii telescope discovers asteroid

HONOLULU — An asteroid that will come within 4 million miles of Earth in mid-October has been discovered by a University of Hawaii telescope.

The university's Institute for Astronomy said Monday that the object located by the Pan STARRS PS1 telescope on Maui has a diameter of about 150 feet. It's the first potentially hazardous object it has been used to discover. A university member of the PS1 Scientific Consortium, Robert Jedicke, says the object won't hit Earth in the immediate future. It was discovered in images acquired Sept. 16, when it was about 20 million miles away.

WYOMING Meth program helping combat problem

CASPER — A survey shows that teenagers in Wyoming are more aware of dangers associated with using methamphetamine than they were two years ago.

The Wyoming Meth Project released the survey results after a study from the University of Washington suggested a similar program in Montana was not responsible for a decline in meth use in that state.

The Wyoming Meth Use and Attitudes Survey asked 2,652 students aged 12-17 in 22 randomly selected schools about how they perceive and use methamphetamine. The Casper Star-Tribune reports nearly two-thirds of teenagers surveyed said there is "great risk" in trying meth once or twice. And 80 percent said there is "great risk" in taking meth regularly.

Gulf oil spill panel: Federal confusion lost public trust

By Seth Borenstein and Dina Cappiello
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration's repeated low estimates of the huge BP oil spill undermined public confidence in the government's entire cleanup effort, leaders of a White House-appointed commission declared at an investigatory hearing Monday. One likened the mistakes to Custer's disastrous decisions at Little Big Horn.

Federal officials botched the government's response, a local official and government and university scientists contended as the commission focused on the questions of who was in charge and how much oil spewed out of the well into the Gulf of Mexico.

Eventually, U.S. officials said the spill was about 60 times bigger than originally estimated. Instead of 42,000 gallons a day, the volume of leaking oil was closer to 2.4 million gallons a day.

"It's a lot like Custer," said panel co-chairman Bob Graham, a former Florida senator and governor, referring to the battle that killed George Armstrong Custer and wiped out most of the Army's 7th Cavalry in 1876. "He underestimated the number of Indians on the other side of the hill and paid the ultimate price."

And who was in charge? Billy Nungesser, president of Plaquemines Parish, one of the coastal areas most affected by the spill, referred to another famous leader, this one fictional.

"It became a joke," he told the commission. "The Houma command was the Wizard of Oz, some guy behind the curtain."

Mistakes in the information that was being given out

AP photo

Plaquemines Parish, La. President William Nungesser, right, with Richard Harrell of the Mississippi Department of Environmental Quality, makes his remarks Monday at a National Commission on the BP Deepwater Horizon Spill and Offshore Drilling meeting on response following the BP spill, impacts on the Gulf and approaches to long-term restoration in Washington.

sapped confidence in the government on the issue, Graham and co-chairman William Reilly said at a news conference. Reilly described "repeated wrong numbers" on the amount of oil that was spilling.

Retired Adm. Thad Allen, in charge of the government's response, told commissioners that the low estimates didn't hamper government efforts to deal with the spill. But Reilly, former chief of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said he had trouble believing that, that it contradicted common sense.

A senior government scientist, Bill Lehr of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said once NOAA realized the spill was much larger than estimated, things changed tremendously. Vacations were canceled, retirees were called in and oil response staff was "given a blank check," he said.

Florida State University's Ian MacDonald said it took eight attempts by the government to arrive at the correct estimate. He said BP's estimate of 210,000 gallons a day was about 100 times less than federal guidelines said it should have been based on the thickness and color of the oil.

"Five thousand barrels a day (210,000 gallons) was not in the right ballpark, and I think we could have done better," MacDonald said.

Allen acknowledged that the public and even political leaders were confused about who was in charge. He blamed a 20-year-old law that he said may need to be changed to allow a third party from the oil industry to coordinate cleanup.

By law, BP had a major role in responding and cleaning up — and paying for it. But it also remains responsible to its shareholders not to spend too much, Allen said. He proposed allowing a third party from industry that would not be beholden to the polluter's profit margins to run the cleanup.

Allen said the enormity of the response that was required, not a lack of money from BP, was the problem in the cleanup.

As for the future, Graham said the government should take a stronger role regulating oil wells in the Gulf.

"There is a tendency to forget the fact that this property out in the Gulf of Mexico where all this is happening belongs to all of us," he said. "We are the landlord. They are the lessees. And we need to start acting like a landlord."

Beatrice Chugg

RUPERT — Beatrice Selma Smith Chugg, age 93, of Rupert, passed away Friday, Sept. 24, 2010, at the Minidoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert.

Beatrice was born Oct. 7, 1916, in Salt Lake City, Utah, the daughter of Thomas Henry and Catherine Ellen (Livesley) Smith. She received her education in Utah, graduating from Ogden High School. She married Duard Bailey Chugg on July 23, 1934, in Tremonton, Utah. Their marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake LDS Temple.

Beatrice was a homemaker and rancher. After the passing of her husband, she worked as a nurse assistant. She was a hard worker and was the first to get in and get the job done. She was instrumental in helping a bond election to pass that resulted in the consolidation of Minidoka County High schools into the present Minico High School. Additionally, she was a huge supporter of the Minidoka Memorial Hospital.

Beatrice was an active and devoted member of the LDS Church and had served as a stake missionary and in the MIA and Relief Society. She enjoyed ranching, quilting, genealogy and her flower gardens, just to name a few. Beatrice was an extremely friendly person and had many friends. Her friendships endured because of her ability to communicate. She was a devoted wife, mother and grandmother. Her family was her life.

She is survived by her son, D. Boyd (Ida) Chugg of Rupert; a daughter, Carolyn (Dell) Taylor of Ogden, Utah; a daughter-in-law, Mary Chugg of Rupert; 16 grandchildren; 56 great-grandchildren; and seven great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents; her stepfather, Alfred Rose; one brother, Melvin Smith; a son, Bryce M. Chugg; two daughters, Janice Whitesides and Sharon Chugg; a granddaughter, Alicia Taylor; and a great-grandson, Richard Mark Jensen.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 30, at the Acequia LDS Church, 20403 Fifth St. in Acequia, with Bishop Calvin M. Bailey officiating. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 29, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Thursday at the church.

Alice Nora Jacobs

KIMBERLY — Nora Alice Jacobs, known to family and friends as Alice, died Monday, Sept. 20, 2010, at her son's home in Eagle.

and enjoyed her grandchildren and great-grandchildren the most.

She is survived by her three children, Keith and Bonnie, Richard and Cristy, and Christine and Alice was born in Seth and Ruby Mulkey's home in Twin Falls, Idaho, on Oct. 20, 1921. She married Keith L. Jacobs Sr. on June 19, 1943. Mom was a longtime Kimberly resident and was employed by and retired from Amalgamated Sugar Co. as a sugar clerk.

Mom was strong and faced life with a positive outlook and would help anyone she could. She loved Rick; six grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren.

Obama presses for longer school years

By Erica Werner
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Barely into the new school year, President Barack Obama issued a tough-love message to students and teachers on Monday: Their year in the classroom should be longer, and poorly performing teachers should get out.

American students are falling behind some of their foreign counterparts, especially in math and science, and that's got to change, Obama said. Seeking to revive a sense of urgency that education reform may have lost amid the recession's focus on the economy, Obama declared that the future of the country is at stake.

"Whether jobs are created here, high-end jobs that support families and support the future of the American people, is going to depend on whether or not we can do something about these schools," the president said in an interview on NBC's "Today" show.

U.S. schools through high school offer an average of 180 instruction days per year, according to the Education Commission of the States, compared to an average of 197 days for lower grades and 196 days for upper grades in countries with the best student achievement levels, including Japan, South Korea, Germany and New Zealand.

"That month makes a difference," the president said. "It means that kids are losing a lot of what they learn during the school year during the summer. It's especially severe for poorer kids who may not see as many books in the house during the summers, aren't getting as many educational opportunities."

Obama said teachers and their profession should be more highly honored — as in China and some other countries, — and he said he wanted to work with the teachers' unions. But he also warned that unions should not defend a status quo in which one-third of children are dropping out. He challenged them not to be resistant to change.

The president also endorsed the firing of teachers who, once given the chance and the help to improve, are still falling short.

"We have got to identify teachers who are doing well. Teachers who are not doing well, we have got to give them the support and the training to do well. And if some teachers aren't doing a good job, they've got to go," Obama said.

They're goals the president has articulated in the past, but his ability to see them realized is limited. States set the minimum length of school years, and although there's experimentation in some places, there's not been wholesale change since Obama issued the same challenge for more classroom time at the start of the past school year.

One issue is money, and although the president said that lengthening school years would be "money well spent," that doesn't mean cash-strapped states and districts can afford it.

"It comes down to the old bugaboo, resources. It costs money to keep kids in school," said Mayor Scott Smith of Mesa, Ariz. "Everyone believes we can achieve greater things if we have a longer school year. The question is how do you pay for it?"

Some U.S. executions held up by shortage of drug

By Andrew Welsh-Huggins
Associated Press writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Some executions in the U.S. have been put on hold because of a shortage of one of the drugs used in lethal injections from coast to coast.

Several of the 35 states that rely on lethal injection are either scrambling to find sodium thiopental — an anesthetic that renders the condemned inmate unconscious — or considering using another drug. But both routes are strewn with legal or ethical roadblocks.

The shortage delayed an Oklahoma execution last month and led Kentucky's governor to postpone the signing of death warrants for two inmates. Arizona is trying to get its hands on the drug in time for its next execution, in late October. California, with an inmate set to die on Wednesday, said the shortage will force it to stop executions after Sept. 30.

The sole U.S. manufacturer, Hospira Inc. of Lake Forest, Ill., has blamed the shortage on unspecified problems with its raw-material suppliers and said new batches of sodium thiopental will not be available until January at the earliest.

Nine states have a total of 17 executions scheduled between now and the end of January, including Missouri, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Texas.

"We are working to get it back onto the market for our customers as soon as possible," Hospira spokesman Dan Rosenberg said.

But at least one death penalty expert was skeptical of Hospira's explanation, noting that the company has made it clear it objects to using its drugs for executions. Hospira also makes the two other chemicals used in lethal injections.

Sodium thiopental is a barbiturate, used primarily to anesthetize surgical patients and induce medical comas. It is also used to help terminally ill people commit suicide and sometimes to euthanize animals.

Thirty-three of the states that have lethal injection employ the three-drug combination that was created in the 1970s: First, sodium thiopental is given by syringe to put the inmate to sleep. Then two other drugs are administered: pancuronium bromide, which paralyzes muscles, and potassium chloride, which stops the heart.

Ohio and Washington state use just one drug to carry out executions: a single, extra-large dose of sodium thiopental.

um thiopental.

Hospira has blamed the shortage on "raw-material supplier issues" since last spring, first promising availability in July, then October, then early 2011. The company has refused to elaborate on the problem.

Vada Ann Smith Little

BUHL — Vada Ann Smith Little was born Aug. 16, 1946, in Blackfoot, Idaho, to Jed C. Smith and Mary Reader Smith. She met the love of her life and soul mate, Charles Ray Little, at Minico High School. They were married Feb. 24, 1964, in Jerome, Idaho.

Vada died Sept. 25, 2010, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center following a brave battle with leukemia.

Vada is survived by her husband, Charles Little; daughter, Terrilyn Little Bennett; son, Steven Ray (Toye) Little; grandchildren, Levi (Stacey) Bennett, Denum (Robby) Kolb, Kodi Little and Devin Little; great-grandchildren, Charli Bennett, Arizona Bennett, Dominic Kolb and eagerly anticipated Dakota Ann; brothers and sisters, Theda Smith, Ronald (ZoAnn) Smith, Ralph (Jean) Smith, Mar Jean (Darrel) Hansen, Jennie (Boyd) Hanson, Victor (Mavis) Smith, David (Peggy) Smith, Carol Smith and Lou (Bud) Ball; and several nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; brother, Jerry Smith; sisters-in-law, Susanne Smith, Patsy Smith and Marnell Little Norton Frye; brother-in-law, Mac Charles Ray Little, at Minico High School. They were married Feb. 24, 1964, in Jerome, Idaho.

The pride of her life was her children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and her yard. You would always find her out in her yard or camping. She knew every flower and plant and how to best grow them. Her yard was well known by all who knew her. She loved to travel and visit historical sites.

Vada's zest for life was contagious to all who knew her. She never met a stranger and made friends easily. She loved her family and friends and she was always the first to help someone in need. Her kindness and generosity was bar none. She will be greatly missed by all who loved her.

Vada's wish was to be cremated and a memorial service will be held in her honor at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 30, at Buhl's West End Cemetery.

Lois 'Jean' Magleby Wilson

RUPERT — Lois "Jean" Magleby Wilson, an 85-year-old Rupert resident, passed away Friday, Sept. 24, 2010, in Rupert.

Jean was born Feb. 9, 1925, in Monroe, Utah, to John Bert and Rosetta Magleby. She was raised in Monroe. After high school, she attended Snow College and BYU, where she earned her bachelor's degree. Later she attended the University of Utah and Idaho State University for teaching credentials. After college, she worked as a home economics extension agent in Moab, Utah, until she married William "Chase" Wilson. They lived in Richfield and Kamas, Utah; Rupert, Idaho; and Salt Lake City, Utah. After marriage and having her family, she taught school in the Minidoka and Cassia County schools for a total of 27 years. She was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and served in Relief Society, genealogy and temple assignments. She was a member of the American Association of University Women, where she served as an officer. During her teaching years, she actively supported Special Olympics and Torch Club. Jean enjoyed cooking, sewing, gardening, playing the piano and reading.

Jean is survived by her children, Blaine (Janice) Wilson, Brent (Karla) Wilson and Jeanette (Marc) Atkinson; 18 grandchildren; 40 great-grandchildren, with one on the way; brother, Dallin Magleby; and sister, Venice LeFevre. She was preceded in death by her husband, William C. Wilson; her parents; one son, Kyle; three brothers; and one sister.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 1, at the Acequia LDS 2nd Ward Chapel, with Bishop Richard Poteet officiating. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. A viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 30, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, and one hour prior to the service Friday at the church.

Ryan J. Reinhardt

COEUR D'ALENE — Ryan J. Reinhardt passed away Sunday, Sept. 12, 2010, as a result of a vehicle accident.

Ryan was born Oct. 1, 1991, in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. Ryan was a sports enthusiast, playing baseball, soccer, basketball, track, cross-country and Coeur d'Alene High School varsity football. He brought enthusiasm, integrity and humor to all teams. His most recent team, men's softball, was comprised of close family and friends who laughed and joked their way to division champions. Ryan gave 110 percent to all endeavors, accomplishing them with style and making it look effortless.

Ryan is survived by his parents, Laura (Joe) Wilson and Ron Reinhardt; siblings, Nathan, JB, Cassie, Becky and Nikki; grandparents, Rob (Cathy) Leth, Frank Wilson, Vicki Adamson and Don (Bev) Reinhardt. Ryan was met in heaven by Aunt Kara Leth; and grandparents, Leonard (Mary) Leth, Sharon Wilson and Floyd (Ora) Williams.

A memorial celebration of Ryan's life was held Sept. 18 in Coeur d'Alene.

Donations to the Ryan Reinhardt Memorial Fund to benefit the Coeur d'Alene Football Athletic Facility can be sent to 2707 N. Ninth St., Coeur d'Alene, ID 83815. Please visit Ryan's memorial and sign his online guest-book at www.yatesfuneral-homes.com.

Michael Ray Walton

Michael Ray Walton, 64, of Twin Falls, passed away Thursday, Sept. 23, 2010, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center following an extended illness.

He was born Jan. 2, 1946, to Brick and Elaine Walton in Pocatello, Idaho. He graduated from Pocatello High in 1966. He joined the Air Force in June 1966 and served his country honestly and honorably for 20-plus years. After retirement he went on to graduate from Trend College in business management.

He is survived by his wife, Alice Walton, who he married in Sept. 1992; children, Tonya Walton of Georgia and Lonnie Walton of Washington; five stepchil-dren that truly loved him, Mark Jeffs of Gooding, Whendy Standlee of Eden, Clayt Sanderson of Filer, Sean Sanderson of Bellevue and Justin Sanderson of Twin Falls; 13 grandchildren; eight great-grandchildren; three brothers; and one sister of the Pocatello area.

Mike enjoyed music and he had written several songs; he also enjoyed dancing, horses, camping and fishing, fishing, fishing!!

A graveside service will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 29, at the Hazelton Cemetery.

Arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park."

Arlen Elsworth Harger

BOISE — Arlen Elsworth Harger, 77, of Boise, passed away Saturday, Sept. 25, 2010, at a Boise care center.

Arlen was born June 6, 1933, in Filer, Idaho. Arlen grew up in the Filer area with his father and brother. As a young man, he served his term in the United States Navy. He worked for a while as a butcher, then as a plumber. Later he faithfully worked as a janitor for 30 years for General Services Administration. When he retired in early 1996, he was the janitor at the federal building in Boise. Arlen was a kind, loving man who spent his working life assisting those who were less fortunate than he.

Many a hurting person, whom others would turn away as being beyond help, had a place in Arlen's home. Arlen never married or had children, but his only brother, Kenneth, had eight children. They always looked forward to "Uncle Arlen" coming over with his guitar. He would play the guitar, and they would sing together 'til late at night. One of their favorite memories includes how he would get into the music, tapping his feet and bobbing his head to the music. He would laugh heartily when he became aware that they were amused at his movements.

Arlen was preceded in death by his father, Gala I. Harger; his mother, Lucy R. Harger; his stepmother, Dorothy Harger; and his brother and sister-in-law, Kenneth E. Harger Sr., and Margaret D. Harger. He is survived by his nephews, Kenneth E. Harger Jr., Brent Harger, Tim Harger, Mark Harger and Joel Harger; his nieces, Ruth Rebman, Paula Hanks and Margaret Taylor; and by his longtime friend, Ron McFarland.

A visitation will be held from 10 a.m. to noon Thursday, Sept. 30, at the Alsip Funeral Chapel. A memorial service will follow at 3 p.m. Thursday at AarenBrooke Place Assisted Living, 9327 W. Cory Lane, Boise, ID 83704. Private family interment will be held at Kuna Cemetery in Kuna.

Please visit Arlen's online guest book at www.alsip-funeralchapel.com.

Arrangements have been entrusted to Alsip and Persons Funeral Chapel, 404 10th Ave. S., Nampa, ID 83651; 466-3545.

DEATH NOTICES

David J. Short

FILER — David Jerry Short, 41, of Filer, died Thursday, Sept. 23, 2010, in a motorcycle accident.

Arrangements will be announced later.

Eleanor (Ellie) Marie Wolfe

KIMBERLY — Ellie Wolfe was born March 20, 1932, the youngest of three children to Constance and Peter Silva in Honolulu, Hawaii. She left this world to be reunited with her beloved husband, Ben, on Thursday, Sept. 23, 2010, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Hospital in Twin Falls. Ellie had been a resident at Alpine Manor II in Kimberly for the past year. Previously she had lived in Emmett, Gooding and Fairfield.

Ellie grew up in Honolulu and, as a young woman, taught dance classes and drove a taxi cab. She met the love of her life, Ben Wolfe, in 1954 while he was stationed with the Navy in Hawaii. They were soon married and moved to Fairfield, Idaho, along with Ellie's two young daughters, Betty and Sherry, whom Ben adopted and raised.

Within a few months, Ellie's life changed dramatically from a Hawaiian city girl to a Fairfield country girl and from a life under the sun to winters in the snow. Ellie was a quick learner and was soon milking cows, gathering eggs and doing all things farm related. When Ben accepted a job with a road construction crew, Ellie and the girls moved with him from job to job throughout southern Idaho and western Wyoming. During this time, two more daughters, Sally and Tina, joined the family.

They settled in Fairfield again for three years before moving to Boise, where Ellie worked for Sears Department Store quickly becoming a department manager and earning many achievement awards. After Ben suffered a devastating work-related accident, they moved to Gooding, where she helped Ben start a new construction business and she opened a pet shop. She also started "Ellie Mae's Kennels," which she loved and enjoyed for many years, eventually raising champion Pomeranians. Ellie was a very kind-hearted woman whose compassion for animals permeated her daily life. She could also create beautiful music on her organ and accordion. In 1998 she and Ben moved to Emmett, where she continued with her dog kennel business. After the death of her beloved husband of 54 years, she struggled to cope and finally moved to Kimberly's Alpine Manor II where she met lots of new friends and seemed happy and content until her death.

Ellie was preceded in death by her parents; her brothers, Joseph and Stephen Silva; and her husband, Ben. Her memory survives through her four daughters, Betty (Butch) Taylor of Kimberly, Sherry (Chuck) Coble of Boise, Sally (Ron) Howard of Emmett and Tina (Jim) Holland of Gooding; 12 grandchildren; 20 great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild.

A graveside service will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 29, at the Idaho State Veterans Cemetery in the Boise-Eagle area, under the direction of the Potter Funeral Chapel in Emmett. A celebration of life will be held at a later date.

QUOTABLE

“I have never in my life portrayed myself as a perfect man. But I am not the man that’s being portrayed on the television.”
— Bishop Eddie Long promising to fight accusations that he lured four young men into sexual relationships

EDITORIAL

Should kids who can’t afford it have to pay for college sports?

What price glory? At Boise State University, about $206. That’s how much an undergraduate student from Idaho will pay this year in fees which go toward supporting the school’s storied intercollegiate sports program.

Spread over 20,000 students, that will top $3 million this academic year — nearly 10 percent of BSU’s athletic budget.

That percentage is even higher at the University of Idaho and Idaho State University, which don’t enjoy the Broncos’ box office and national TV revenue.

But on all three campuses, such fees aren’t optional for non-athletes (mandatory student fees also go toward supporting the athletic departments at the College of Southern Idaho, North Idaho College and Lewis-Clark State College).

Question is, should they be? A study published in April by Matthew Denhart and Richard Vedder of the Center for College Affordability and Productivity, a Washington, D.C.-based research group, found that NCAA Bowl Subdivision schools with less-affluent student populations are providing intercollegiate sports programs with relatively large subsidies.

The problem is much of that money comes through types of institutional and financial support that divert resources away from academics.

Of the 11 FBS conferences Denhart and Vedder studied, the four with the highest percentages of students receiving Pell Grants (which go to the neediest students) were Conference USA, the Sun Belt Conference, the Mid-American Conference and the Western Athletic Conference, home of BSU and Idaho.

“Those who can most afford to pay a subsidy tax actually pay the smallest amount,” Denhart said. “Those who can least afford it pay the most.”

“We’re in a major financial crisis in higher education,” David Meabon, director of the Russel Center for Education Leadership at the University of Toledo, told USA Today. “I call it the backdoor tuition increase. For many people, this is a hidden tuition fee or cost — and a backdoor way to fund institutional activities.”

Which raises a troubling question for Idahoans. After two years of sharp increases in fees at BSU, Idaho and ISU, have rising athletic fees played a part in pricing some Gem State students out of an Idaho college education?

The vast majority of students at BSU and Idaho have no qualms about financially supporting their schools’ athletic programs. But doesn’t the state have some responsibility to those who can’t?

The bloodless and the barmy

Christine O'Donnell is in a fantasy world. Literally.

The pretty Palin Mini-Me identifies with the women of Middle Earth, comparing herself to the female characters in the “Lord of the Rings” novels by J. R. R. Tolkien.

“Look at the significance that he gives to Eowyn, the Lady of Rohan,” O'Donnell said on C-Span in 2003. “She was a warrior spirit and, to me, that’s who I love. I mean, I aspire to be soft and gentle like Arwen, but realistically, I’m a fighter, like Eowyn.”

O'Donnell said she liked Tolkien's outlook on gender: “On the one hand, there’s the attitude that’s normally on the conservative side — as a conservative woman, I feel I can say this — that stifles women. There’s almost the stereotypical attitude of, to be a true woman, you have to stay at home. And I’ve actually had people say to me, ‘Why do you choose a career over marriage?’ Honestly, I’ve had only a few significant relationships, and they’ve broken up with me. And one of the things I’ve been told is, ‘If you weren’t so strong, you’d be married by now!’”

This anti-abortion, anti-masturbation, anti-premarital-sex, anti-stem-cells, anti-gay-marriage, dubious-about-evolution Christian conservative has rocked politics by snatching the Delaware

Maureen Dowd

Republican nomination for the Senate away from the seemingly sure-thing moderate Mike Castle.

O'Donnell cited another fantasy world to conjure up a Christlike image for the Tea Party.

“We’re rowdy, we’re passionate,” she told the enraptured crowd. “It reminds me of the C. S. Lewis Narnia books, where the little girl asks someone about Aslan the lion, who represents God, and she says with a little concern over such a fearsome lion, ‘Is he safe?’ And her friend says, ‘Safe? Who said anything about safe? Of course he isn’t safe. But he’s good!’”

She’s right that there’s an untamed beast rampaging through American politics. But this beast does not seem blessed; rather it has loosed a kind of ugliness and wildness in the land.

Speaking to Sean Hannity on Fox, Karl Rove dismissed O'Donnell as an absurd choice with a sketchy background and dubious character. He alluded to facts in The Weekly Standard that chronicled her lawsuit against her former employer, the Intercollegiate Studies Institute, a conservative nonprofit based in Delaware.

Although O'Donnell said in 1998 that wives should “graciously submit” to their husbands, her 2005 suit charged she suffered “mental anguish” after being demoted and fired because the institute’s conservative philosophy deemed that women must be subordinate.

We the People in the Ruling Class Elites do think O'Donnell comes across as alarmingly loopy. But maybe she’s smart as a fox in doing a Single-White-Female, Fox anchor makeover to look more like her queen-maker, Sarah Palin. She’s also smart to think of politics in terms of passion and myth — two elements Barack Obama was able to summon during his campaign that are sorely missing from his presidency.

She might have gone a broom too far, though, when she once told Bill Maher that she had “dabbled into witchcraft” and went on a date with a witch that included “a midnight picnic on a satanic altar.”

Obama’s bloodless rationality has helped spawn the right’s bloodletting of irrationality. His ivory tower approach to the nation’s fears and anxieties about the economy gave rise to a tower of angry babble. Tea Party is basically a big tent for anger.

The president’s struggle to connect and inspire passion is a dispiriting contrast to, as Yeats said, the worst, full of passionate intensity.

The first African-American president now faces anger on an unprecedented scale from a mostly white movement.

He seems weary of crisis management, conveying the attitude of the hero in “The Incredibles” who has to keep saving the world: “Sometimes I just want it to stay saved!”

The president seems put upon and impatient with reality while his foes seem happy to embrace fantasy.

Obama can connect with policy. He just can’t connect with the objects of policy. Empathy seems more like an abstract concept than something to practice.

He has never shaken off that slight patronizing attitude toward the working-class voters he is losing now, the ones he dubbed “bitter” during his campaign. There is no premium in trying to save people’s jobs and lift them up and give them health care if they feel that you can’t relate to them.

The insane have achieved political respectability while the sane act too good for it all. The irrational celebrate while the rational act bored and above-it-all.

Maureen Dowd is a columnist for The New York Times.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Allred has already proven he is a leader

I would like to respond to the reader comment by Stephen Hartgen published in the Sept. 18 issue of the Times-News entitled “Taxes, education show policy differences,” referring to differences between Keith Allred’s and Gov. Otter’s political stances.

First, the governor and most of the legislators applaud themselves for not raising taxes during this last legislative session. They did not raise taxes. Instead, they abrogated their responsibility in this regard and transferred the job of raising taxes to the local level. Nearly every school district in Idaho passed emergency override levies to close the funding gaps facing their schools. The majority of these levies passed, which indicates the average Idahoan knows the value of education. Teachers who took salary cuts must wonder why they were chosen to take the brunt of the budget cuts rather than asking all Idahoans to help.

There were many avenues open to find monies for education, among them Mr. Allred’s suggestion for evaluating the current sales tax exemptions. No one is suggesting that this alone would raise all the necessary funds, but other options such as taxing online purchases, reforming the state tax commission’s practice of forgiving or reducing owed taxes, collecting all the taxes due the state by hiring more auditing staff and eliminating legislators’ medical insurance benefits would have gone a long way to alleviate the cuts to education. The real hardship which results from this legislative inaction is that it takes time to get changes in place; this year’s legislation may not result in increased money for the 2011-12 school year.

Mr. Hartgen characterizes Mr. Allred as a “wonkish” academic. I hope that Idahoans of all persuasions will find Mr. Allred a thoughtful, capable, concerned Idahoan who has a proven track record in the realm of helping people come to agreement on divisive issues.

Keith Allred’s leadership in The Common Interest not only helped enact legislation which reduced homeowner’s property taxes, but helped pass three laws that protect private property rights against abuse of the government’s power of eminent domain, and measures that protect the public’s access to legislative meetings. It is time to opt out of the party of “no” — which is really the party which has opted out of the responsibility of governance. Vote.

Commissioners haven't done homework about new jail

Support a new Jerome jail but twice opposed the lease option.

Now, the three commissioners in charge of the public checkbook, Roemer, Davidson and Howell, finally listened to the citizens by opting for a bond election.

The same circumstances that caused me to oppose the lease option still exist.

We, the paying public, don't know what we're buying for $13 million, which, in the life of the bond, becomes $18 million and an increase in our taxes.

The commissioners are asking us to trust them, once again, that they know what they're doing. I did a public records request for all jail-related information generated after the failure of the May election. Their due diligence to obtain required information is non-existent. There is no firm contractor, blueprint, contract, definite cost analysis; in short, they are lacking everything you'd need to go to the bank to build a house.

They paid $10,000 of your tax money toward 80 acres of farm ground and agreed to a purchase price of $430,000. That same land was rented for $2,500 a year and is assessed by the Jerome County assessor at $53,180. There is no paperwork showing any kind of negotiation to reduce the price of the land or the $10,000 earnest money. If the bond fails, we lose the $10,000. And the land does not come with water, which means we are purchasing just the land for $5,375 an acre even though it's assessed at $664.75 an acre.

Cathy Roemer stated in the Sept. 8 meeting that one of the contractors who is being considered wanted $25,000 for a set of blueprints. On Sept. 14, she got a quote of $15,000 from EHM engineers. After the failed May election, several citizens informed the board that if they put out the word to established companies who build jails, those companies would arrive with several blueprints, cost projections, everything needed to make a decision on what the building would be. And it would be free because they want our business. The all-knowing commissioners ignored these facts.

Instead, the board has "guesstimates" on square footage ranging from 18,400 square feet to 40,300 square feet with costs ranging from $3 million to $13 million.

Aren't we repeating the last two elections except that this one is a bond, but we still don't know what we're buying? At the Sept. 14 meeting, Roemer said they'd schedule a phone conference with Chris Pomeroy of TO engineers to learn more about whether the FAA will allow a jail next to the airport. Our county attorney said the FAA won't make a decision based on "concepts"; they want plans, on paper, in ink.

The property has to be re-zoned commercial to allow buildings next to the airport, and since the jail only needs 10 acres that would leave us owning 70 commercial acres. If they opt to sell it, the county-owned property would be in competition with private commercial landowners like the 93 corridor and Crossroads. And would you believe that it'll be two to three years, we hope, before the city of Jerome puts a sewer line out that far.

Chapter 18 of the Idaho Jail Standards manual lays out the minimum requirements for building a jail. We don't have that. Roemer is convinced that if they show the public a "conceptual" drawing of a jail, a parking lot, a fence with pretty clouds in the sky that will be enough for you to vote yes, raise my taxes and surprise me with a jail that may be loaded with future expenses we can't afford.

GOP busy co-opting the Tea Party

On the surface, the Pledge to America that House Republicans unveiled last week, in obvious imitation of Newt Gingrich's famous Contract with America, feels like a triumph for the Tea Party.

Whereas the Gingrich-era contract was a terse, 865-word list of legislative priorities, the 2010 pledge reads like an expansive, even radical manifesto. It runs to almost 8,000 words, bristles with charts and graphs and inspiring quotations, and includes a lengthy preamble modeled on the Declaration of Independence. And whereas the original contract's language was carefully pollitested to appeal to squishy moderates, the pledge has the aggressively small-government tone of a Rand Paul stump speech, complete with attacks on "self-appointed elites," praise for Americans' speaking out "in town halls and on public squares," and pledges "to honor the Constitution as constructed by its framers."

But style can be deceiving. House Republicans have adopted the atmospheres of the Tea Party movement, but they've evaded its most admirable substance.

The Tea Party is a grassroots movement — wild, woolly and chaotic — which sometimes makes it hard to figure out exactly what it stands for. But to the extent that the movement boasts a single animating idea, it's the conviction that the Republicans as much as the Democrats have been an accessory to the growth of spending and deficits, and that the Republican establishment needs to be punished for straying from fiscal rectitude.

The Tea Partiers have a point. Officially, the Republican Party stands for low taxes and limited government. But save during the gridlocked 1990s, Republican majorities and Republican presidents have tended to pass tax cuts while putting off spending cuts till a tomorrow that Tea Partiers, and more about their potential co-option by Republican politics as usual.

That would be unfortunate. Their eccentric elements notwithstanding, the Tea Parties have something vital to offer the country: a vocal, activist constituency for spending cuts at a time when politicians desperately need to have their spines stiffened on the issue. But it's all too easy to imagine the movement (which, after all, includes a lot of Social Security and Medicare recipients!) being seduced with rhetorical nods to the Constitution, and general promises of spending discipline that never get specific.

It wouldn't be the first time a mass protest movement won a rhetorical victory without achieving a lasting policy shift. The antiwar movement, for instance, seemed to effectively take over the Democratic Party in the middle years of the Bush administration. But here we are, two years into a Democratic presidency, and Gitmo is still open, the U.S. is still in Iraq, and Barack Obama has escalated the war in Afghanistan.

Whether the Tea Party's zeal for limiting government meets a similar fate may depend on the class of Republicans elected in November. From Sharron Angle in Nevada to Joe Miller in Alaska to Marco Rubio in Florida, many of the party's insurgent candidates have gone further than the Republican leadership in acknowledging the painful necessity of entitlement cuts — and it hasn't yet cost them their chances at high office.

Democrats are eager to paint these candidates as dangerously extreme. But on the evidence of last week's pledge, a little more extremism in the defense of fiscal responsibility is exactly what the Republican Party needs.

The Delphi disaster: An economic horror story

The White House believes it can win back depressed voters by turning President Obama into the storyteller-in-chief again. But victims of Obama's Chicago politics don't want to hear any more of his own well-worn tales of struggle and sacrifice. They've got their own tragedies to tell — heart-wrenching dramas of personal and financial suffering at the very hands of Obama.

Michelle Malkin

Consider the real-life horror story of 20,000 white-collar workers at Delphi, a leading auto parts company spun off from GM a decade ago. As Washington rushed to nationalize the U.S. auto industry with $80 billion in taxpayer "rescue" funds and avoid contested court termination proceedings, the White House auto team schemed with Big Labor bosses to preserve UAW members' costly pension funds by shafting their nonunion counterparts. In addition, the nonunion pensioners lost all of their health and life insurance benefits.

The abused workers — most from hard-hit northeast Ohio, Michigan and neighboring states — had devoted decades of their lives as secretaries, technicians, engineers and sales employees at Delphi/GM. Some workers have watched up to 70 percent of their pensions vanish.

John Berent of Marblehead, Ohio, lost one-third of his pension: "I worked as a salaried employee for GM (30 years) and Delphi (10 years). After 40 years of dedicated service, I was forced to retire. Then Delphi terminated my health care, life insurance, vision, dental, then terminated the pension plan. Everything I worked 40 years for was wiped out."

Obama's team of auto-crats decided to "cherry pick" which obligations the new Government Motors company would assume and which they would abandon based on their own political whims and fealty.

Kelly Fabrizio of Franksville, Wis., saw her pension reduced by 55 percent after working 30 years at Delphi/GM: "I am truly scared for my future. Every day I wake up, shake my head and say out loud — This Is Not How It Was Supposed To Be."

Roger Hoke of Columbus, Mich., and his wife were both longtime Delphi workers. His pension shrunk by more than 40 percent: "After 33 years with GM and another 10 with Delphi, what did I do wrong to deserve such a fate?"

Paul Dobosz of the Delphi Salaried Retiree Association, which represents the pensioners and is suing the feds, recounts how they got screwed: The Auto Task Force hatched a plan to dump their pensions on the federally run Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, which slashed their benefits. At the same time, the White House and Treasury officials devised "a clever way to make the UAW pensions whole using GM and TARP money to accomplish it. The scheme was documented in sworn depositions (that) revealed ... that some groups of workers were more 'politically sensitive' and would be afforded special treatment (i.e. subsidy using TARP money) while others less politically worthy would be left out." The PBGC, which had the fiduciary duty to represent the best interests of all the Delphi workers, helped sacrifice the non-union employees at the UAW altar.

In other words: Obama's team of auto-crats — stocked with Big Labor-friendly appointees and self-admitted know-nothings about the car industry — decided to "cherry pick" (one Obama official's own words) which obligations the new Government Motors company would assume and which they would abandon based on their own political whims and fealty. Due process and equal treatment of union and nonunion workers be damned. Administration officials assert that the Delphi workers' pension fund was underfunded, but two separate actuarial analyses undercut the claim.

The Delphi workers sued the feds. They are not asking for a bailout. They are simply asking for fair treatment under the rule of law. Delphi supporters also point out that the very scheme used to "top up" the union workers' pensions with taxpayer subsidies was challenged by the federal government and ruled illegal by the Supreme Court in the 1990s.

A separate investigation by TARP inspector general Neil Barofsky, announced last week, will also probe "whether political considerations played a role in favoring hourly over salaried retirees." It shouldn't take long to unearth the facts. Obama's own former auto czar Steve Rattner admitted in his new memoir that "attacking the union's sacred cow" could "jeopardize" the auto bailout deal.

While Obama conducts his worker empathy tour at staged town halls and rallies across the country, his Treasury Department continues to stonewall and refuses to answer questions about the Delphi disaster. But many workers left out in the cold know the truth: Lip-biting, yarn-spinning Obama doesn't feel their pain. He caused it

Cash for Clunkers stimulus program was a money guzzler

Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood called it "the stimulus program that really worked." President Barack Obama said it was "successful beyond anyone's imagination." They were referring to Cash for Clunkers, a program tried last year to pay consumers to trade in old gas-guzzlers for fuel-efficient new models.

On the surface, it did work, spurring motorists to rush to their local dealers to take advantage of the generous credits, which went from $3,500 to $4,500 per vehicle. New car sales, which had plunged during the recession, suddenly rebounded, to the delight of dealers and carmakers.

In fact, the demand was so great that the program ran out of money far ahead of schedule, prompting Congress to provide additional funds. Some 680,000 older cars and trucks were traded in and destroyed, to make sure they wouldn't be out on the road wasting petroleum.

But the flurry of action last year was not the whole story. When the exhaust settled, it became apparent that Cash for Clunkers didn't accomplish much — and much of what it accomplished wasn't beneficial.

It didn't raise auto sales so much as briefly accelerate them. A study by Amir Sufi of the University of Chicago's Booth School of Business and Atif Mian of the University of California, Berkeley, found that "almost all of the additional purchases under the program were pulled forward from the very near future."

The $3 billion cost was higher than it needed to be. George Mason University economist Russ Roberts says any member of Congress watching the showroom stampede should have concluded that "$4,500 per clunker was too big a subsidy and that you can achieve the same effects with a much smaller amount."

The administration can claim the brief burst of demand was valuable because it gave auto makers and the economy a jolt of adrenaline at a crucial moment. But the value of helping automakers is debatable, and the economy showed no lasting benefit.

The lesson from this experiment is that the government can bribe people into doing things if it's willing to spend enough of their money. But as an attempt to show that such efforts can do more good than harm, this program is the real clunker.

AFGHANISTAN NATO airstrikes in Pakistan kill more than 50 militants; Islamabad protests

KABUL — Pakistan disputed NATO's claim Monday that its forces have the right of hot pursuit across the Afghan border after coalition helicopters launched airstrikes that killed more than 50 militants who had escaped into Pakistan following an attack on an Afghan security post.

Pakistan said it had strongly protested to NATO over the airstrikes, which a coalition spokesman justified on grounds of "self-defense." Pakistan is sensitive about attacks on its territory, but U.S. officials have said they have the right to cross a few miles (kilometers) into Pakistani airspace if they are attacked and in hot pursuit of a target.

Pakistan denied Monday such an understanding exists. Its Ministry of Foreign Affairs said in a press release the mandate of foreign troops in Afghanistan ends at the Afghan border and said the strikes were a violation of its sovereignty. Pakistan said that unless corrective measures are implemented, it will have to "consider response options."

SOUTH KOREA North Korea leader Kim Jong Il's son is promoted to four-star general

SEOUL — North Korean leader Kim Jong Il promoted Kim Jong Un to the rank of general in the Korean People's Army, the state news agency reported, the clearest signal yet that the younger Kim is on track to succeed his father in ruling the impoverished country.

Kim Jong Il issued an order handing six people — including son Kim Jong Un — the rank of general, the Korean Central News Agency reported in a dispatch published early Tuesday, though dated Monday. Also promoted was Kim Kyong Hui, which is the name of Kim Jong Il's sister. Her name was listed ahead of Kim Jong Un's in the report.

The Korean-language report gave only the names of those promoted and did not offer any personal descriptions. However, it appeared highly likely that the people named are Kim's son and sister given their names and the timing of the promotions hours ahead of the start of the country's biggest political meeting in three decades and amid intense speculation they could also be given key posts at the gathering.

If confirmed, it would mark the first time that Kim Jong Un's name has appeared in official media.

CALIFORNIA Heat wave gives downtown Los Angeles an all-time record high of 113 degrees

LOS ANGELES — A blistering fall heat wave sent temperatures to an all-time record high of 113 degrees in downtown Los Angeles on Monday and roasted even coastal cities in triple digits.

The city of Los Angeles opened cooling centers for citizens while firefighters were on alert for wildfires, but there was little wind amid the onslaught of dry heat.

Downtown hit 113 degrees for a few minutes at about 12:15 p.m., breaking the old all-time record of 112 degrees set on June 26, 1990, said Stuart Seto, a weather specialist at the National Weather Service office in Oxnard. Temperature records for downtown date to 1877.

It was not clear whether 113 would remain the day's high. Temperatures continued to fluctuate around 112 later in the afternoon, Seto said. The old record high for a Sept. 27 was 106 degrees.

As Mother Nature served up California in a roasting pan the lucky few who didn't have work or school sought relief at the beaches. Hundreds of thousands turned out over the weekend as the heat wave built.

NEW YORK Southwest Airlines to buy AirTran for $1.4B

NEW YORK — Southwest agreed to buy AirTran in a $1.4 billion deal that will combine two of the country's largest low-fare airlines and give Southwest a bigger slice of the market in the Northeast and in Atlanta, the busiest hub in the nation.

The acquisition announced Monday moves Southwest, which already carries more passengers than any other American airline, into 37 new cities.

It gains a foothold in cities like New York and Boston, where it has already been expanding, and adds to its push to expand internationally. Southwest gains routes to Mexico and the Caribbean, where remaining discount airline JetBlue has a big presence.

Southwest has been targeting Atlanta, where AirTran currently competes with Delta Air Lines, because it is a hub for business travelers, who tend to pay higher fares.

Palestinians wait on decision to quit peace talks

By Amy Teibel
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — The Palestinian president said Monday he would wait at least a week before deciding whether to quit Mideast peace talks, giving U.S. mediators precious time to broker a compromise after Israel refused to extend its 10-month moratorium on new West Bank settlement construction.

President Mahmoud Abbas has repeatedly threatened to withdraw from the newly launched negotiations if Israel resumes building in the settlements. But with the stakes so high, Abbas said during a visit to Paris that he would not make any hasty decisions. He said he would consult with the Palestinian leadership before discussing the matter with representatives of the 22-member Arab League next Monday.

"We will not have any quick reactions," he said at a news conference standing beside French President Nicolas Sarkozy. "After this chain of meetings, we will be able to put out a position that clarifies the Palestinian and Arab opinion on this issue now that Israel has refused to freeze settlements."

A senior Palestinian official said the Palestine Liberation

Organization's 18-member decision making body would meet Wednesday or Thursday to determine how to proceed. He was speaking on condition of anonymity because he was discussing internal Palestinian deliberations.

The construction restrictions that the Israeli government ordered expired at midnight Sunday with no sign Israel was heeding U.S. and Palestinian pressure to keep the curbs in place. That threw the peace talks, which only restarted three weeks ago, into doubt. But the Americans said they were still working with Israeli and Palestinian negotiators to find a formula that would keep the negotiations alive.

Abbas on Monday urged Israel to extend the settlement slowdown for three or four more months to allow for a discussion of "fundamental issues" in negotiations.

In Cairo, an Arab League official said Arab foreign ministers were expected to endorse whatever position Abbas took. He spoke on condition of anonymity because no decision had been made.

Immediately after the restrictions expired at mid-night, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu appealed to Abbas to keep negotiating.

Petraeus: Taliban have reached out to reconcile

BAGRAM, Afghanistan (AP) — Top Taliban leaders have made overtures to reconcile with the Afghan government, the top commander in Afghanistan said Monday.

Afghanistan President Hamid Karzai has long said that he will talk to insurgents if they renounce violence, sever ties to terrorists and embrace the Afghan constitution. Publicly, the Taliban have said they won't negotiate until foreign troops leave Afghanistan, yet there are many indications that back-door discussions have occurred.

"There are very high-level Taliban leaders who have sought to reach out to the highest levels of the Afghan government and indeed have done that," Gen. David Petraeus told reporters after touring a U.S. detention center near Bagram Air Field — the main American base in the country.

Reconciling with Taliban leaders is being "pursued by the Afghan leadership at the very highest levels," Petraeus said.

"President Karzai's conditions have been very clear, they're very established and certainly we support that, as we did in Iraq, as the United Kingdom did in Northern Ireland," Petraeus said. "This is the way you end insurgencies."

While opposed by some factions within Afghanistan, talking with the Taliban is gaining traction as thousands of U.S. and NATO reinforcements seek to reverse the insurgents' momentum. Neighboring Pakistan and other nations are beginning to stake out their positions on possible reconciliation negotiations that could mean an endgame to the nearly 9-year-old war.

Presidential spokesman Waheed Omar said Karzai was waiting until after he announces the members of his High Council for Peace before initiating any formal talks.

TOP: A flat roof, giant windows and sharp angles characterize the modern architecture of this Bellevue Triangle home. ABOVE: When the first winter after completing her home approached, Polly Noe-Holland of Bellevue took eight koi from an indoor fountain and put them in an outdoor pond. Six years later, the fish have survived thick ice and snow and multiplied into an estimated 120, despite heron attacks.

Bellevue home contrasts modern with antique, landscape with architecture

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

BELLEVUE — The house rises out of 80 acres of prairie, a startling expanse of angles and glass surrounded in every direction by Idaho's khaki mountains.

The unexpected continues at the driveway, where a sign reading "Erehwon" welcomes visitors, and a large, shallow pond sparkles with scores of orange, white and black koi, swirling in concert.

Perhaps the most surprising moments in the home that Polly Noe-Holland and Robert Holland share in the Bellevue Triangle, though, happen when the front door opens.

An antiques dealer and home appraiser, Noe-Holland grew up in the Northeast. After living there for about five decades, she grew tired of pitched-roof houses, front porches and windows with tiny panes of glass.

"When I came out West and saw all the space, I had to bring it inside," she said.

So the southern side of the house is almost entirely windows, held up with giant beams that also support the flat, beige roof. Pendant figures descend from metal swirls hung from the ceiling, and the interior paint and exterior stucco match the tans and taupes in the natural environment outside.

But the decor is antique — silver side table trays, intricately carved furniture, Oriental rugs.

"I think every room in a home needs an antique piece, and every room needs a mirror," Noe-Holland said. "It gives warmth, where contemporary can be stark and cold."

A stone fountain dominates the great room, formerly with running water but now overflowing with potted plants. Several seating areas, interior and exterior, welcome conversation and admiration of the views.

"We have 100 places to eat, and I love to cook," Noe-Holland said.

The home totals nearly 8,000 square feet, but half of that is the conservatory and the upstairs guest space, where a caretaker lives to keep an eye on the place when the owners leave town during the Wood River Valley's slack seasons.

The great room, which is never heated above 45 degrees but can rise as high as 80 degrees in winter when the sun warms the dark concrete floors and radiates heat, can be shut off from the main living space. That leaves about 2,500 square feet of ordinary living space, which includes kitchen, combined living and dining room, bedroom, two offices and an unusually designed bathroom.

Husband and wife have their own toilets, vanities and dressing areas, but they share a shower and tub that are placed down the middle of the bathroom so they can be accessed from both sides.

And the customization on the six-year-old home

With several outdoor dining spaces, including this one that can be covered for shade, Polly Noe-Holland loves to entertain.

doesn't end there.

The conservatory looks from the outside like a greenhouse, and Noe-Holland uses it to grow decorative and edible plants year-round. It also houses a 35-foot-long, narrow pool, which adds humidity to the home and allows for easy exercise for the homeowners and recreation when relatives visit.

The architect, Jamie

Bourret of Ketchum, said the conservatory, which juts out farther south than most of the house, also serves as a wind block.

"The Bellevue Triangle gets scoured by westerly winds; it's kind of relentless out there," he said. "Enjoying the outdoors is difficult unless you have a place to sit out of the wind."

Throughout the home, tall walls draw the eye from inside to outside, and add more calming effects to the weather. They also help create the modern aesthetic lines that Noe-Holland is so drawn to.

"A house out in a very open environment like that needs to have some pretty strong gestures to make a visual impact; it can't be meek," Bourret said, describing the architecture's "grand gestures." "You see it from a distance, and it's a big landscape it sits in."

The couple chose to minimally landscape and planted no trees, to increase the impact of the 360-degree mountain view.

Today, after living in Hulen Meadows and Indian Creek farther north in the valley, Noe-Holland said she finally has enough land around her, and her husband has come around to the appeal of the site.

"We thought this was an excellent investment for land," Holland said, remembering that he was reluctant to build a home there. "I didn't think it was a very good idea, but now I do."

And that sign at the entrance?

It's "nowhere," backwards, a nod to the 1872 Samuel Butler novel based on the author's experiences in New Zealand, Holland said. "He thought that was the end of the world, literally."

The joke hasn't ended there, though. The couple has another property in Oregon closer to family where they intend to spend their last years, and that place they've dubbed "Erehwemos" — "somewhere," backwards.

In the meantime, though, they've found their somewhere.

Ariel Hansen may be reached at 788-3475 or ahansen@magicvalley.com.

The great room of the Holland home mixes antique furniture with contemporary architecture, while huge windows show off the 360-degree mountain view.

The deep purple wall in Polly Noe-Holland and Robert Holland's Bellevue home conservatory traps heat, then releases it at night to keep the home at a more even temperature. Noe-Holland, here caring for plants near the greenhouse windows, said purple is also her favorite color.

Weatherproof fabrics offer options for decorating the great outdoors

By Kelly Wilkinson
Special to The Washington Post

The lush foliage of summer may be thinning a bit, but that doesn't mean you can't add some color to a back yard or deck this time of year. Have you seen the selection of oilcloth and laminates at fabric stores lately? It's not just gingham and tropical flowers. These days, you can find some of the most creative and talented fabric designers offering part of their collections in oilcloth or laminated cotton and linen.

Laminates are cousins to wipeable vinyl oilcloth, but the new ones are coated cotton, so they have more drape and softness than traditional oilcloth, while still being water-resistant.

Put a piece in an old frame to bring a hit of color and pattern to an outdoor area. I spray the wooden frame with polyurethane to make it waterproof but bring it indoors during the winter to be on the safe side.

And if you have fabric left over, you can use laminates to make place mats and tablecloths. The fabric doesn't fray, so there's no sewing required: Simply snip and you're done.

Of course, this project doesn't need to be made with water-resistant material. If you find fabric that makes you swoon, there's no reason you can't simply hang a piece of it in a frame indoors. Because these days, there's no question that many fabrics qualify as art.

- You'll need:
- Old frame with mat (no glass needed)
 - Spray polyurethane (optional)
 - Laminated cotton or linen, or oilcloth, enough to fit your frame
 - Pencil or pen
 - Ruler
 - Scissors
 - 2 to 3 cans of food or soft drink (for weights)
 - Glue
 - Duct tape
 - Hardboard or corrugated

To frame waterproof fabric, first determine your fabric area (left). Use duct tape to secure the fabric over a mat (center). Hardboard or corrugated cardboard will hold the fabric panel in the frame (right). You can spray the wooden frame with polyurethane to make it waterproof.

An old frame and a new piece of oilcloth make an alfresco statement. These days, there's no question that many fabrics qualify as art.

- cardboard, big enough to fit in frame (optional)
- Utility knife
- 4 panel pins or small nails
- Hammer
- How to:
1. Remove the mat from the frame. If you want to coat the frame in polyurethane, do so now and let it dry.
 2. Determine the section of fabric you want to use by placing the empty frame over it. Make a small pencil or pen mark inside each corner of the frame on the fabric.
 3. Remove the frame and position the mat according to the marks. Use a ruler and pencil to mark lines 1 inch beyond the edges of the mat. Cut the fabric along the lines.

4. Center the mat on the front of the fabric and place two or three cans on the mat to keep it in place. Pull each edge of the fabric over an edge of the mat, and trace along the mat edges onto the fabric. This will show you where to place the mat once you flip the fabric.
5. Turn the fabric so the back faces up, and connect your marks with a ruler. At each corner, make a diagonal cut from the corner of the fabric to the corner of the mat to make folding easier.
6. Starting on one edge, apply a strip of glue along the fabric and wrap the fabric over the edge of the mat. Secure in place with duct tape.
7. To make a neat corner, trim the fabric "point" that extends past the edge you just glued. When you glue the adjacent edge of fabric, cut the point again, but this time at an angle so the piece of fabric you trim away is the shape of a triangle. This will allow you to fold the corner so it is tidy.

8. Repeat steps 6 and 7 with each edge of fabric.
9. Insert the fabric into the frame. You may want to cut a piece of hardboard or corrugated cardboard to secure the fabric panel in the frame, since there's no glass and the fabric panel may be loose. To do so, cut a piece of hardboard or cardboard the same size as the fabric-wrapped map, and insert it. Add one panel pin or small nail on the backside of each edge of the frame to keep everything in place.

How chlorine bleach works

By Marshall Brain
HowStuffWorks.com

Chlorine bleach is one of those things that you probably have around the house because it is incredibly versatile. It is great for making whites whiter in the washing machine. It is a good disinfectant, killing germs on counters and bathtubs. It will remove stains on tile and outdoor furniture. And it is pretty safe, relatively speaking — so safe that people drink it every day in their tap water and swim in it in swimming pools. Let's take a look at how chlorine bleach works.

When you buy a bottle of chlorine bleach at the store, what you are buying is sodium hypochlorite mixed with water. Sodium hypochlorite is NaOCl. Since table salt is NaCl, bleach is very similar to table salt and reverts to table salt if left out. For example, the bleach in tap water will be gone if you let an open container of water stand for 24 hours. This is especially important if you have fish in an aquarium. Fresh tap water will kill fish because of the chlorine. But if you let the water stand for 24 hours, it is fine for fish.

How does bleach remove stains? Many natural stains from things like grass (green), carrots (orange), mildew (brown) and tomatoes (red) are caused by chemicals called chromophores. A chromophore molecule creates a color by absorbing some colors of white light and reflecting others. If you can change the shape of a chromophore or break it apart, it becomes colorless. The oxygen in a bleach molecule is able to attack chromophores and break them up. Of course it will attack other molecules in the fabric as well, so frequently-bleached fabrics (especially cotton) tend to break down faster if washed repeatedly with bleach.

How does bleach kill bacteria to disinfect surfaces? It works in something of the same way that heat does to kill germs. Inside a bacteria cell are thousands of protein molecules that are intricately folded. These proteins are essential to a bacteria's life. Bleach causes these proteins to unfold or to clump together. This clumping is the same kind of thing that happens when you heat an egg — the protein molecules in the egg solidify as they clump together.

If you put bleach in water, it will kill bacteria and tend to lessen anything that might be coloring the water. That's why chlorinated water is so common in municipal water systems and swimming pools. Tap water might have a chlorine concentration of 1 part per million (anywhere from 0.2 ppm to 4 ppm is legal). A swimming pool can go as high as 4 parts per million for swimming, and can go much higher for shock treatments.

If you are stuck in an emergency situation or you are out hiking, you can purify water yourself with chlorine bleach. You can add 8 drops of bleach per gallon of water, or 2 drops per liter of water, cap it, shake it and let it sit an hour. It won't kill some parasites, but it will kill most everything else in the water.

However, strong chlorine bleach (like you find in a bottle of bleach, which is 5 percent to 6 percent sodium hypochlorite mixed with water) is not something to treat lightly. You do not want it getting on your skin, in your eyes or into your lungs. If you dilute one ounce of bleach with 8 ounces of water you have a solution that kills germs but is not nearly so dangerous to your eyes and skin. But still, treat it with respect.

Work with bleach in a well ventilated area. If you are using it in a bathroom, turn on the fan or open a window. If you get chlorine bleach on your skin, wash it off immediately using plenty of water. If you do not, you can get chemical burns from undiluted bleach that are not pleasant at all. Use gloves to keep bleach off your hands. Use goggles to keep bleach out of your eyes. Be very careful when pouring bleach out of a bottle. Also avoid mixing bleach with any other chemicals, especially ammonia. It produces toxic vapors.

But if you take care, bleach is great stuff for cleaning, whitening and disinfecting. I used it recently to eliminate mildew stains from some outdoor furniture, and it looked like new when I was done.

Fall is a good time to add mulch to the garden. This is pallet material mulch dyed golden.

As fall begins, so should mulching

By Kathy Van Mullekom
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

Mulch in the garden provides you with benefits you may not always see.

In addition to deterring weeds, conserving moisture and making your garden look pretty, mulch decomposes to improve your soil and provides a habitat for beneficial micro-organisms and earthworms.

Mulch also helps prevent soil compaction, soil erosion and pollution runoff.

You can mulch any time of the year. If you mulch in spring, fall can be a time to replenish mulch to help stabilize roots during freezing and thawing times in winter.

Mulches can be organic or inorganic.

Organic types include tree bark, wood chips, recycled wood and paper, grass clippings, pine needles, straw, leaf litter, newsprint and animal manure. Check with composting facilities in your area to see if yard debris and leaves are recycled into mulch you can purchase for your yard.

Designer mulches created from pallet or hardwood material and dyed brown, red, black, chestnut, walnut and golden are available in bulk and bagged from commercial mulching sites and garden centers if you want staying power in your color choice.

If you use grass clippings, spread them immediately to avoid heating and rotting.

If you use newsprint, apply four to six sheets together, anchored with grass clippings or wood mulch to prevent blowing away.

If you use fallen leaves, use a mulching mower to turn them into a finer material that decomposes quicker; cover them with a light layer of heavier wood mulch to keep the leaves in place. A light layer of mulched leaves is also beneficial for your lawn, and will not smother the grass.

Inorganic kinds include crushed stone, gravel, plastic sheeting, landscape fabric and recycled tire chips. Beware of some of these because they can harbor too much heat and moisture around plants, and can be difficult to keep clean.

MORE MULCHING MATTERS

- Apply mulch 2 to 4 inches deep; deeper mulch benefits sandy soils that dry out quickly while moist soils need a lighter layer. Remove old mulch before applying new to avoid a "sinking feeling" for your plants. Too much mulch suffocates plant roots. Work old, aged mulch into new gardens to improve soil.
- Keep mulch 3 to 6 inches away from building foundations and away from the base of tree and shrub trunks. Rodents nesting in mulch may chew on bark; mulch too close to your home's foundation could cause the soil to stay too moist.
- Acidic mulch like pine bark and pine needles is ideal around acid-loving plants such as azaleas, rhododendrons, camellias and gardenias.
- Hardwood mulches are also beneficial in vegetable gardens. Use them to camouflage soaker hoses that you leave laying on the ground for convenience.
- Instead of annually adding mulch to your garden, use a small rake to "fluff" up existing mulch for a fresh look.

If you want the greenest, healthiest lawn possible, fall is the season to obtain your best results by stimulating strong networks of roots and growth on turf.

How to get a thick lawn

By Joel M. Lerner
Special to The Washington Post

It is said, “To everything there is a season,” and we just reached one of those times of the year. If you want the greenest, healthiest lawn possible, fall is the season to obtain your best results by stimulating strong networks of roots and growth on turf. Your grass doesn’t have to be the non-water-retentive groundcover that is frowned upon by some gardeners. You can take steps to discourage runoff and encourage soil percolation and have golf course type turf.

Lawns slow rainwater by allowing it to percolate into the soil. It takes a lot of time and work to encourage turf to grow well enough to slow runoff and allow water to permeate more than just the upper inch or two of soil. It can have a huge, negative effect on your carbon footprint, thanks to the use of gas-powered lawn equipment. It requires herbicides (even safe ones), mowing once or twice a week, overseeding, use of compost and deep aeration.

But I still like the appearance of a lawn and love the smell of freshly mown turf. A healthy lawn can reduce sedimentation and runoff into rivers and streams, control dust, dissipate heat and noise, reduce glare, lower fire risk, and improve soil and water quality.

Cool-season grasses are good varieties because they thrive in moist, well-drained soil. Growing a thick lawn requires six hours of sun or more.

Here are some tips to keep grass green, thick and healthy:

Aerating: I consider this the most important step to enrich the soil as deeply as possible. At least four times, use a core aerator by walking over the lawn with a power aerator. For the aerators to properly penetrate, soil should have some moisture but never be soggy. Be sure to use one that removes plugs of soil and doesn’t just punch holes.

Incorporating compost is an important part of the aeration process. It’s the conditioning agent for the soil. Sprinkle it into aeration holes, trying not to cover healthy blades of grass. If you have fine-textured compost, try using a broadcast spreader. Otherwise, sprinkle it by hand or with a shovel.

Fertilizing: Spreading fertilizer over the soil surface after aerating and sprinkling compost offers another opportunity to get nutrients into the root system, where they are needed. But first make sure you need fertilizer by having the soil tested. The results of the soil test from your county extension service will determine whether supplemental fertilizer is required.

Mowing: Mow your lawn until growth has slowed and it doesn’t need it any longer. Generally, growth stops in November or December.

Mow leaf debris on your lawn into tiny particles. They fertilize as they decay. If leaves become thick, grind them with the mower and take them to your compost pile. Grass decays quickly, so matted leaves will kill it.

Weed Control: Thick turf is the best hedge against weeds. Use synthetic chemicals sparingly and only if necessary. Pull weeds by hand before they go to seed. If they become intolerable, use spot treatments with liquid broadleaf lawn weed killer.

Pre-emergent weed killers are especially effective on annual weeds, such as crabgrass and annual bluegrass. There are many corn-gluten-based materials that keep roots of newly germinated seeds from growing and young weeds at bay and are natural weed controls.

Seeding: Sow grass after aeration when there are hundreds of holes providing excellent seed distribution and soil contact. Over-seed existing lawns with three to four pounds per 1,000 square feet.

Use a blend of several cool-season seed varieties. Warm-season grasses turn brown in winter and begin growing when average temperatures are over 60 degrees Fahrenheit. Cool-season grasses stay green in cooler temperatures in spring and fall, as well as in summer if you irrigate.

Turf-type tall fescue varieties are wear-tolerant and disease-resistant and can be mowed higher, up to 4 inches. Use compact, turf-type tall fescue blends of three or more seed varieties. Don’t buy generic seed; use named hybrids.

Fall lawn care is a lot of work, but the results are worth it.

A potting bench should be convenient to gardening activities and water.

The potting bench, every gardener’s dream

By Norman Winter
McClatchy Newspapers

The dream of a potting bench runs rampant among real gardeners who long for a hidden retreat in their landscape, to not only add organization to their passion, but perform a little horticultural magic.

The past couple of years I have been able to see the difference between a real, or should I say really used potting bench, and those who had benches but whose dreams never materialized. I am certainly not poking fun at those who failed to see their dreams come to fruition. After all, I too have used exercise equipment for a clothes rack. Maybe in similar fashion you store cookbooks in the microwave.

The first thing that all of the successful benches had in common was a close proximity to the home. The further the walk to the work area, it seemed, the least likely to be placed in proper use.

Think about it — one of the hoped-for aspects of the bench is organization, a place where the Felco or Corona pruners are kept safe and secure. The gloves are right where you want them to be. The bench that is far away loses its purpose and the garden treasures start to end up in cubbies in the garage or the storage shed or the kitchen.

The second aspect of the most successful potting benches has been the proximity of water. To be honest, most had water incorporated into the overall design of the bench. Others definitely had a water hose with spray nozzle close at hand. The least successful, on the other hand, required dragging a hose the length of the yard or attempting to use a watering can.

Thirdly, the benches were designed or constructed with the user in mind, just the right height to keep the gardener from bending, kneeling and more bending that would otherwise made the gardener feel they had been in horticultural boot camp.

Forth, the benches provided adequate shelving and compartments for items like pots, soil, tools, fertilizer, rooting hormone and more — one-stop shopping.

There were those that actually became gathering places. We have outdoor rooms for entertaining and relaxing, but these work areas also became a gathering place for gardeners to relax and even share cuttings.

One rustic bench that had everything I’ve described also had a large compost pile in close proximity. This was great for recycling purposes but to also gather some of the material that had turned into black gold.

The key to organizing: Know what works for you

The Washington Post

Centreville, Va.-based organizer Janet Schiesl joined Post staff writers Jura Koncius and Terri Sapienza for an online chat. Below is an edited excerpt.

Q: There are a lot of products that promise to help simplify and organize your life. In your experience, which types of items are actually helpful?

Schiesl: Products are not the answer to organizing. To simplify your space, you must consider the amount of stuff you have.

After purging what is not needed, find a home for everything. For different people, this means different things. Where will you use this object? That’s where it should live. For storage, you must know if you are an out-of-sight, out-of-mind thinker. Storage can be open or closed. It depends on what will work for you.

Q: I have purchased shoe racks in the past, but my shoes never end up in them. I tend to step out of my shoes in front of my dresser, or maybe in my closet, and that is where they stay until I feel like moving them to a rack. Do you have any suggestions that might work with my natural inclination?

Schiesl: You are right in that you have to work with your natural inclination. If you are not inclined to lift them up off the ground to put them away, then consider under-the-bed storage for your shoes. It may be an issue of the type of shoe rack you are using. I recommend a rack with flat, solid shelves. I don’t like the slanted racks. Shoes tend to fall unless you place them perfectly.

Q: I’m looking at my side of the bedroom: nightstand and floor covered with books, magazines, newspapers.

I’ve tried baskets — they’re overflowing! Any ideas?

Sapienza: Yes: De-clutter. Be conscious and consistent about reading and quickly recycling the magazines and newspapers. If you’re saving the magazines for certain stories, tear out the pages and keep them in a folder. And take a few minutes to decide which books you actually need right next to your bed. I’m guessing two at the most. Keep the others on a bookshelf in another room until you want to read them.

Q: I’m stymied about what needs to be in our kids’ playroom. We have a large white craft table, and that’s about it. What do you consider essentials?

Schiesl: Most essential: storage. You’ve got to have some place to store those toys. Many places offer inexpensive storage units, easy to put together and colorful. Try Target! I like their offerings because they are short-er, so kids can reach everything, and the bins are small. Label everything with words or pictures, so your children will know where the homes for items are when it’s time to clean up.

I like wall stickers. Again, not too expensive, so when you get tired of them they can go. Easier than painting.

Q: I used to get invitations, important letters or coupons and hang them on my refrigerator. Thanks to my new house’s fully open floor plan with virtually no walls and my lovely suite of stainless appliances, all of these things now have no place to go. Ideas?

Sapienza: How about hanging some cork on the inside of one of your kitchen cabinets? Get some cork from a hardware store and cut it to the exact size you need. You could probably hang it with a few strips of Velcro.

Answer:
Regular carpet cleaners and shampoos will not work! What you need is Don Aslett’s Bacteria/Enzyme DIGESTER. This amazing product eats away the bacteria and eliminates biological odors. It provides immediate relief with deodorizers while the enzymes go to work.

P.S. Many nursing homes use this product to eliminate biological human odors caused by urine, feces & vomit. (Sorry if I sound gross, just trying to help!)

Fragrances can awaken a room

By Kim Cook
For The Associated Press

You may have sensed, pardon the pun, that there are hundreds of new home fragrance products in stores. The industry has sniffed out a trend: We're spending more time at home, and we want our rooms to smell good.

"Good" might mean clean, or exotic, or even yummy. Always wanted to visit a Moroccan bazaar? Craving a spa day? Comforted by the waft of a fresh-baked cookie? Whatever your preference, chances are there's a spray for that. Or a luminary, plug-in or diffuser.

Among the newest products are scent "stories" that cycle through a timed series of fragrances; wooden wicks that evoke crackling fires; flameless candles; and no-spill diffusers.

According to Barbara Miller, spokeswoman for the National Candle Association, "The most notable trend is toward fragrances that transport you; that have a dreamlike or escapist quality."

Holly Bohn, founder of online retailer See Jane Work, agrees.

"I want my house to smell like the great outdoors even if all the windows are shut and the a/c is on," she says.

Her go-to product is Good Home Co.'s Beach Days. It's part of a category known as the "ozones" — scents that are considered refreshing and evocative of fresh air and water. There are half a dozen versions of crisp, clean linen alone. Citrus-based scents are similar; many find them a finishing touch to a newly cleaned house. And they'll provide a temporary freshening-up for closets or bathrooms without laying on heavy fragrance.

"Over the past couple of years, in a colder economic climate, gourmand fragrances — like vanilla and pumpkin — have become very popular," says Mei Xe, founder of Chesapeake Bay Candles. "Generally speaking, these scents help bring back happy memories. They make you feel safe and warm, and in these times people are longing for a sense of security."

Pier 1 has also focused on "cozy," with scents such as Spiced Cake and Fall Fireside.

Glade and Febreze, mass market leaders in home fragrances, recently launched an array of products in attractive containers to accent home decor; scents for fall include Cranberry Pear, Pumpkin Pie and Cashmere Woods.

To avoid fragrance overload, Xe recommends "staying within the same category, whether it's florals, fruity notes, woody fragrances, whatever. Don't mix fragrances that are too different from each other."

Not sure what you like? Take the fragrance profile quiz on the Chesapeake Bay Candle website.

Christopher Brosius was the first artist to have fragrances showcased by the Cooper Hewitt Museum. His 1999 concoction, "Snow," won two Fragrance Foundation awards. His perfumes and home sprays carry names such as Gathering Apples and Burning Leaves. Others capture his interpretation of Russian caravans (smoky black tea and bergamot) and gardens (hyacinth, green shoots, moss).

Marie Gartshore, spokeswoman for New Jersey's Research Institute for Fragrance Materials, says the industry is always looking at what scent chemicals might cause problems, and a five-year study into potential irritants is under way. So far, she said, "no fragrance material has been shown to be a definitive" allergen.

For those who prefer to go completely natural, essential oils such as citrus, rose, lavender and others can work well as air fresheners. Mix 4 ounces of distilled water, 2 ounces of rubbing alcohol and 30 drops of essential oil (or blend fragrances such as 15 drops of orange and 15 drops of clove for a winter holiday air freshener) and put in a carefully labeled spray bottle.

Brosius once found inspiration in a favorite first-edition novel in a London bookstore, which he noted "had a marvelous warm woody smell." Long hours of experimenting finally yielded In the Library, now part of his collection.

FALL AERATION LAWN CARE

AERATE

Best done in September and October, aerating loosens up the compacted soils. This allows your lawn to more easily absorb nutrients, air and water into the roots of the grass.

There are 2 types of aerators to choose from. One simply pokes holes in the lawn, while the other pulls out small plugs and deposits them on the grass. The plug aerator is more efficient because it creates a clear funnel to reach roots. The plugs may look unsightly, but they will dissolve into your lawn over time.

If you prefer not to spend money on an aerator, you can simply stab a pitchfork into the ground and wiggle it.

Aerating should be scheduled 2 weeks before applying the last season's fertilizer. Alternatively, you can do this step 5 to 6 weeks before the first predicted frost.

Farmers struggle as dry weather blankets East >>> Agribusiness 2

Times—News

MOSCOW — When it comes to Kentucky bluegrass, like the song goes, farmers have to know when to hold 'em, know when to fold 'em. University of Idaho agricultural economist Kate Painter has an instrument to help farmers decide when to toss in the cards.

Painter produced an enterprise budget worksheet in Microsoft Excel that summarizes net returns for different residue treatment strategies and calculates net present value for long-lived bluegrass stands.

Painter, a farm and ranch management specialist in the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences, will present a seminar about her bluegrass analysis Friday, Oct. 1, at 3 p.m. in the Agricultural Sciences Building, Room 62, 606 Rayburn St., in Moscow.

“The biggest question for me was: When do you quit?” Painter said. With the right conditions and the right management tools, growers can keep the same bluegrass planting for seven years or more.

With limited management tools, a bluegrass planting might yield acceptable cash returns for only a year or two — or never.

Kentucky bluegrass can provide growers with a profitable crop that also presents extensive environmental benefits, primarily by minimizing erosion. Field burning, which studies show lengthens the economic life of plantings, raises controversy because critics say it poses unacceptable health risks.

Using the Excel tool, bluegrass growers can enter sales prices for the Kentucky bluegrass seed, their anticipated yields, bluegrass straw prices if they bale it and other variables.

This program offers a look at the complex world of bluegrass production strategies. Painter developed the program with bluegrass growers in mind who farm along the border of Idaho and Washington, who must consider bluegrass contract terms, different regulations in each state and tribal reservations on two Indian reseruations. In her role as farm and ranch management specialist, Painter prepares enterprise budgets that can help growers track the costs and potential profits of their crops.

CINDY SNYDER/For the Times-News

Laura Sluder began raising sheep nearly a decade ago to mow down the weeds but began marketing lambs through local farmers' markets. Within the last two years, she has begun milking the sheep at her Shoshone farm to make artisan cheese.

Shoshone shepherd expands sheep market with milk

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Careful planning and a little luck are often the keys to entrepreneurial success. That's true for Blue Sage Farm near Shoshone.

Careful planning netted Laura Sluder a value-added grant to put in a milking parlor, but that was only possible thanks to the bit of luck. When she and her husband moved to their 80-acre farm in 2001, the fields and pastures were overgrown with weeds. They decided to get six sheep to eat the weeds. An old sheep farmer told them to buy dairy cross sheep because “they produce a lot of milk and raise a lot of lambs.”

Sluder found his admonition to be true. Her dairy cross ewes almost always raise a set of twins for a 200-plus percent lamb crop. With that kind of production, Sluder began selling whole lambs. She took one to a chef in Sun Valley for his personal use and he immediately wanted to put her lamb on the menu.

With restaurants taking the racks and quite a bit of ground lamb, Sluder began taking the remaining cuts to area farmers markets. But she was still looking for ways to expand her product “Customers tell me my lamb is so tender. I think it's because they have no stress. They are used to being handled daily.”

— Laura Sluder

line for the farmers markets. “When you go to the farmers markets, it's better to have more products,” Sluder said. Some days she sells completely out of ground lamb, the next time she won't sell a single package. “Every week is different.”

Sluder decided to diversify by capitalizing on the ewes' proven milking ability by using sheep milk to make artisan cheeses.

She received a value-added grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture which allowed her to build a New Zealand style swing-milking parlor. She can milk 20 ewes on a side early in the season when the animals still have their wool on, and 27 after they've been sheared.

“The size difference is so different from one end of the season to the other,” Sluder said. “Imagine starting the season milking Holsteins and switching to Jerseys half way through.”

Her business plan called for milking 250 ewes a day, but after milking 200 last winter Sluder has decided to cut back to just 100. “I was spending five hours a day in the milking parlor. I'd rather concentrate more on the retail and local farmers markets,” she explained.

The first year she milked, she left the lambs on the ewes for 45 days, then weaned them and milked the ewes twice a day. But the lambs were about 20 pounds lighter than they had been and since Sluder already markets her lambs at 80 to 100 pounds (restaurants demand smaller carcasses), losing 20 pounds was a large hit.

There are only about 100 sheep dairies in the U.S. so there is not a lot of data available, but Sluder researched options over the winter and when the ewes lambled in January, she went to once a day milking immediately. The lambs are left with the ewes all day, then separated at night. Sluder milks in the morning, then turns the lambs back in with ewes for the rest of the day.

That strategy paid off. Lambs weights came back up to normal and the ewes produced 2 pounds of milk per day while raising two lambs.

“Customers tell me my lamb is so tender,” she explained. “I think it's because they have no stress. They are used to being handled daily.”

She begins marketing lambs in May when they are about 5 months old. By mid-July, the ewes are dried up.

Originally, Sluder expected to ship sheep's milk daily to Ballard Farms in Gooding, to make a feta style cheese. But they need 2,500 pounds of milk to make a batch of cheese and she quickly switched to freezing the milk in five-gallon bags until she has the required amount of milk.

She also ships frozen milk to a cheese maker in Wyoming who makes roquefort and an aged petite Basque cheese for her. Next year, Sluder plans to make fresh cheese and yogurt on her Shoshone farm.

Neither lamb nor sheep cheese are common products at local farmers markets, and Sluder says education is one of her primary jobs. “I give out a lot of samples,” she said. However, once customers have a taste they want more. “Demand has been amazing. I could double my flock and still have to ration cheese.”

Despite economy, Americans don't want farm work

By Grance Burke
Associated Press writer

VISALIA, Calif. — As the economy tanked during the past two years, a debate has raged over whether immigrants are taking jobs that Americans want. Here, amid the sweltering vineyards of the largest farm state, the answer is no.

Most Americans simply don't apply for jobs harvesting fruits and vegetables in California, where one of every eight people is out of work, according to government data for a federal seasonal farmworker program analyzed by The Associated Press.

And the few unemployed Americans who apply through official channels usually don't stay on in the fields, a point comedian Stephen Colbert — dressed as a field hand — has alluded to in recent broadcasts on Comedy Central.

“It's just not something that most Americans are going to pack up their bags and move here to do,” said farmer Steve Fortin, who pays $10.25 an hour to foreign workers to trim strawberry plants for six weeks each summer at his nursery near the Nevada border. He has spent $3,000 this year

AGRIBUSINESS ROUNDUP

Idaho milk production continues to rise

BOISE — The latest national farm figures show milk production in Idaho continues to increase.

For the month of August, Gem State dairies produced a total of 1.15 billion pounds, up slightly from 1.12 reported in July and 7.8 percent more than August 2009.

The National Agricultural Statistics Service also reports growth in the number of milk cows around the state. Last month, Idaho dairy farmers reported an average of 573,000 cows, up 4,000 from July and 25,000 during the same period a year ago.

Milk prices are also creeping up. In August, Idaho producers fetched $15.50 per hundredweight, compared to $14.60 in July and $11.60 a year ago.

The nation's 23 major dairy states reported increases in total production compared to August 2009.

EPA may fine Idaho fish farm up to $177,500

BOISE — An Idaho fish farm faces penalties of up to $177,500 for allegedly violating the federal Clean Water Act.

The Environmental Protection Agency filed a complaint against Lynn Babington and ARK Fisheries Inc. of Buhl.

The agency said Monday the complaint covers violations dating back to 2005.

They include discharging pollutants without a permit, failing to submit monitoring reports and exceeding permit limits for phosphorus in October 2008 and January 2010.

Kim Ogle, an EPA manager in Seattle, says his agency has tried to work with ARK fisheries to resolve the problems but that they continue.

The $177,500 fine would be the maximum administrative civil penalty allowed under federal law.

ARK fisheries has projected it could raise up to 275,000 pounds of trout and 80,000 pounds of sturgeon at the facility.

Schools celebrate tastes of Washington during lunch

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Parents, school officials, farmers and even kids would like to see more fresh vegetables on the lunchroom table, but the logistics of getting produce from farm to schools are complicated.

One challenge is fresh vegetables are expensive, even if they come from local farms. With tight school lunch budgets, spending a few extra pennies on an apple can be out of reach.

Some schools are featuring Washington-grown items on their menus this week as they participate in Taste Washington Day this Wednesday.

Tricia Kovacs is in charge of the state's Farm-to-School Program, which was created in 2008 by legislation intended to make it easier to get more local food into school cafeterias.

Supporters of getting more fresh produce in school lunches concede it can be difficult.

Vegetables are cleaned at a school kitchen in Auburn, Wash. When schools buy their vegetables from big distributors, they come in practically ready-to-eat. When they come from local farmers, or from school gardens like these carrots from Auburn's, they often come with farm-fresh dirt.

"The things that are stopping people are real challenges," Kovacs said. "But we also are learning every day ways school districts and farms have found to overcome some of them." Some districts have made more progress than others. Olympia spends 30 percent of its produce budget buying directly from local farms. La Conner students drink smoothies made from local strawberries and eaten apples from the Skagit Valley. Food-services manager Georgia Johnson said the district is hoping to buy its own cows next year, raise them on a Samish Island farm and used them for meat.

The Auburn School District spent about $100,000 of its produce budget last year with Terra Organics, a Tacoma-area farm known for its home-delivered produce boxes.

The district got all of its potatoes from local farms, and served other produce, including local radishes, carrots and baby cucumbers grown specially. They also get produce fresh from their own school garden.

Another challenge of serving local produce is that school is out of session when local farm produce is at its height.

Even during prime growing times, Mother Nature doesn't always cooperate, schools can't wing it when they have thousands of kids to feed. Big distributors, like Food Services of America (FSA), are the safe bet because they can always get product from somewhere.

In most schools, the food budget for each lunch is about $1 per student. That means about 15 to 25 cents for salad, fruits and vegetables.

On Taste Washington Day, La Conner, for example, will spend about 15 percent more than usual on its lunch for a potato bar with spuds, green onions, broccoli, gourmet cheese, apples, raspberries and ham, all from the Skagit Valley.

Districts use the big distributors because they help keep costs down, school-lunch managers said.

"The pre-cut items offered by the main purveyors simply cannot be beat on price," noted Eric Boutin, who recently started running the Seattle School District's meal program.

"We can't just go spend an extra 10 cents on an apple because we want to," he said.

Conn. report highlights importance of agriculture

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Agriculture is more important to the state's economy than even its supporters had believed, according to a report released Monday.

The report by the University of Connecticut said agricultural sales in the state were more than $3 billion in 2007, higher than the $2 billion that policymakers had thought.

"We were very careful and very conservative about our estimates," said Rigoberto Lopez, head of the university's Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics and one of the report's authors. "Connecticut agriculture is alive and well."

The value of agricultural output was measured as statewide sales of agricultural products generated directly from the industry and through spillover effects on other industries. It totaled up to $3.5 billion, less than 2 percent of Connecticut's $212 billion gross state product in 2007.

Farmland in the third smallest state accounts for about 406,000 acres, or 13 percent of total land in Connecticut.

The study also found that agriculture in Connecticut has created more than 20,000 jobs.

It defined the agricultural industry as including crop and livestock production, forest products and agricultural processing such as the production of yogurt or ice cream tied to milk production in Connecticut.

Excluded were secondary sectors such as landscaping and groundskeeping and food processing such as bakeries and distilling that do not use Connecticut agriculture products.

Researchers used 2007 data because the information was the most complete, Lopez said.

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

A-Frame Cabin

The whole family can enjoy a vacation hideaway, and an A-frame cabin offers the features most often desired in a second home: economy, strength, openness, ample sleeping space, out-of-the-way storage and spacious decks. The simplicity of the A-frame also makes it fairly easy and inexpensive to build.

This do-it-yourself A-frame cabin has 700 square feet of living space, including a compact kitchen, bathroom, living room, bedroom and deck on the first floor and two bedrooms and a balcony on the second. A central fireplace warms both floors.

PUBLIC COMMENTS SOUGHT ON LOW-INCOME WEATHERIZATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

The State of Idaho will accept public comment on its American Recovery and Reinvestment Act funding plan for the U.S. Department of Energy's Low-Income Weatherization Assistance Program. The ARRA State Plan is available for review at Community Action Partnership Association of Idaho, located at 5400 W. Franklin Rd., Suite G in Boise, Idaho. A public hearing on the plan will be held from 9:00 10:30 am on Thursday, October 7, 2010 at Community Action Partnership Association of Idaho, located at 5400 W. Franklin Rd., Suite G in Boise, Idaho. The Weatherization Assistance Program assists low-income families through the installation of weatherization measures in their homes. The measures include insulation, air sealing, and heating systems improvements that improve the energy efficiency of the homes. Program services help eligible families reduce their heating costs, promoting the health and safety of the family and conserving energy resources. Summary of changes to the 2009 ARRA State Plan:

- Inclusion of Sustainable Energy Resources for Consumers (SERC) funding in ARRA budget
- Description of measures to be provided with SERC funding
- Amendment of agency allocations and production estimates

Public comments for written testimony on the State Plan will be accepted from September 27, 2010 October 7, 2010. Send or deliver comments to:

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 28, the 271st day of 2010. There are 94 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 28, 1920, eight members of the Chicago White Sox were indicted for allegedly throwing the 1919 World Series against the Cincinnati Reds in what became known as the "Black Sox" scandal. (Despite initial confessions by several of the players, all were acquitted at trial; still, all eight were banned from baseball for life.)

On this date:

In 1066, William the Conqueror invaded England to claim the English throne.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1542, Portuguese navigator Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo arrived at present-day San Diego.

In 1787, the Congress of the Confederation voted to send the just-completed Constitution of the United States to state legislatures for their approval.

In 1850, flogging was abolished as a form of punishment in the U.S. Navy.

In 1924, two U.S. Army planes landed in Seattle, having completed the first round-the-world flight in 175 days.

In 1939, during World War II, Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union signed a treaty calling for the partitioning of Poland, which the two countries had invaded.

In 1960, Ted Williams hit a home run in his last career at-bat as his team, the Boston Red Sox, defeated the Baltimore Orioles 5-4 at Fenway Park.

In 1970, Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser died at age 52. Author John Dos Passos died in Baltimore at age 74.

In 1974, first lady Betty Ford underwent a mastectomy at Bethesda Naval Medical Center in Maryland, following discovery of a cancerous lump in her breast.

In 1989, deposed Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos died in exile in Hawaii at age 72.

Ten years ago: Capping a 12-year battle, the government approved use of the abortion pill RU-486. Former Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau died in Montreal at age 80. Ariel Sharon, leader of Israel's hard-line opposition, sparked new Israeli-Palestinian clashes by touring the Temple Mount. In Sydney, Australia, Venus Williams earned her second Olympic gold medal, teaming with sister Serena in the final of women's doubles to beat Miriam Oremans and Kristie Boogert of the Netherlands, 6-1, 6-1. Choreographer and dancer Peter Gennaro died at age 80.

Five years ago: House Majority Leader Tom DeLay was indicted by a Texas grand jury on a charge of conspiring to violate political fundraising laws. (DeLay has yet to stand trial.) A woman disguised as a man slipped into a line of Iraqi army recruits and detonated explosives strapped to her body, killing six recruits in the first known suicide attack by a woman in Iraq's insurgency. The U.S. Treasury unveiled the new $10 bill, featuring splashes of red, yellow and orange.

One year ago: Iran tested its longest-range missiles and warned they could reach any place that threatens the country, including Israel, parts of Europe and U.S. military bases in the Mideast. Former Panamanian president Guillermo Endara, 73, who led his country to democracy after the U.S. invasion that toppled Gen. Manuel Noriega, died in Panama City.

IF SEPTEMBER 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: It is said that frustrations turn into ambitions. If so, during the next few weeks your ambitions may grow by leaps and bounds. Wait until late November and early December to make crucial decisions, launch plans, or make important changes in your life. Your judgment and wisdom is at a high point then and you might be able to hook up with people who have your best interests at heart. A combination of competitiveness and obsession with success could have you burning the candle at both ends between January and June. You may be focused on business or obtaining personal fame, but it is not a good time to launch a new business.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): People who anger you can control you. You must not allow negative thoughts to intrude on your happiness or shape your decisions. It is wise to be skeptical, but that means you are thinking, not emoting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Out of sheer boredom you could open up a can of worms containing something from your past that has been preserved. Old enemies or past mistakes could come back to haunt you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take a well-deserved bow or pat on the back. Well-mannered people rarely make it into the headlines or the history books, but you still might earn your 15 minutes of fame today for a job well done.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your fantasized experiences can appear real. In reality, the things that you think you want are no more valuable than last year's hornet's nest. Like that empty hornet's nest, it causes very little real danger.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Show some sense and sensibility. It is never advisable to err on the side of caution when you have nothing at stake. You might spend time agonizing over decisions that really are not relevant to your situation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): All is not lost. The keys to success have merely slipped into the crack in the couch cushions. A little cleaning and straightening up of your surroundings might reveal hidden strengths or offer time for insights.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): People can be compared to stained-glass windows. Although they glitter and shine when the sun is out, when night falls and darkness prevails the true beauty is revealed only if there is a light from within.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Karma might give you a kick in the pants. The past may send you a message, but you might not want to answer. Elbow aside cravings for the things that are not good for you such as cigarettes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Education improves what is best in a person, but stressful situations can sometimes bring out the worst. You might find that your character is tested. When in doubt, look up the answers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You might feel that your earnings don't match your credentials or experience. Sometimes you feel that a gremlin has been at work, causing problems for you. Work harder, smarter and quit blaming others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stand tall. A reputation can be made or destroyed in a moment but character is built up over a lifetime. Enhance your current status by being sincerely friendly and keeping tabs on important contacts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Real integrity is doing the right thing when nobody's going to know whether you did it or not. Just because you don't get your name in the headlines doesn't mean you don't

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Progress, therefore, is not an accident, but a necessity ... It is a part of nature."

—Herbert Spencer

In today's deal South survived the first two hurdles in his contract of three no-trump, but tripped over the third.

South's first good decision was to respond two no-trump rather than raising diamonds. His well-placed heart honors persuaded him to take the clubs on trust, a sensible gamble. When North raised his partner to three no-trump, West obediently kicked off with the heart two (to clarify the count in that suit for his partner). East played the heart king, and South ducked.

South won the heart return with the ace, but now fell from grace by playing on diamonds. When West took the ace, he still had a heart left to return, which removed declarer's last stop. Declarer had eight tricks, but needed a second club trick. When the finesse failed, so did the contract.

The danger hand is East; therefore, East's entry must be attacked before South's last heart stopper is removed. If West has the club king, there is no problem: the finesse of the club queen will win, then the diamond ace can be dislodged. If East has both the diamond ace and the club king, the contract is doomed anyway. But if, as here, West has the diamond ace and East the club king, then when West eventually comes on lead with his ace, he will have no heart to return.

Note that if the defenders shift to spades at trick two, West becomes the danger hand, and declarer must play on diamonds before clubs.

ANSWER: Having shown 10 or more points with your redouble, you can comfortably bid just one no-trump now. There is no reason to assume that you want partner to bid on, unless he has some sort of extra high-cards or shape. The more space you can save, the better the picture your partner will be able to paint.

Bitter rivals: Cutler, Bears beat Packers 20-17

Green Bay Packers defensive end Cullen Jenkins (77) misses a sack on Chicago Bears quarterback Jay Cutler during the first half of an NFL football game Monday in Chicago.

By Andrew Seligman
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Still doubting the Bears?

Jay Cutler threw for 221 yards, Brian Urlacher forced a key fumble and Chicago took advantage of a team-record-tying 17 penalties by the Packers to beat Green Bay 20-17 on Monday night.

Robbie Gould won it with a 19-yard field goal with 4 seconds left. The Packers' James Jones lost a fumble on a hit by Urlacher in the final minutes. Then Morgan Burnett was called for pass interference on Earl Bennett, setting up the winning kick.

Chicago is 3-0 and alone atop the NFC North. The Packers fell to 2-1.

"It's fun, that is all you can ask for,"

Cutler said. "The defense did a great job, we struggled the whole game, felt like we kind of were killing ourselves."

The Bears kept insisting they were contenders through a sloppy preseason and less-than-inspiring opening win over Detroit. Since then, they turned heads with a win at Dallas last week, and stamped themselves as contenders by beating Green Bay — with lots of help from the Packers.

The Bears had tied it at 17 on a 25-yard field goal by Gould when Urlacher jarred the ball out of Jones' hands after the receiver caught a pass from Aaron Rodgers near mid-field. Tim Jennings recovered, giving Chicago the ball on the Packers 46 with 2:18 remaining.

Soon after, another penalty cost the Packers in a big way.

On second down at the 33, Cutler tried to hit Bennett deep along the right sideline and Burnett basically hammered him, wiping out an interception by Nick Collins and putting the ball at the 9.

Three plays later, Chicago walked away with a wild win and the only undefeated record in the NFC.

Devin Hester delivered his first touchdown return in three years when he ran back a punt 62 yards in the fourth quarter, giving the Bears a short-lived 14-10 lead.

Rodgers threw for 316 yards and a touchdown and also scored on a 3-yard run that gave the Packers a 17-14 lead in the fourth period. Jermichael Finley had nine catches for 115 yards, but the sloppiness simply caught up with the Packers in the end.

Minico to honor service men and women Friday

Mark Catmull is at it again. The man who has brought helicopters, skydivers and other hoopla to Spartanville has outdone himself once more.

For its homecoming football game this Friday against Jerome, Minico High will honor the servicemen and women of Magic Valley in a pregame ceremony. Military personnel, policemen and firefighters in uniform receive free admission.

For the national anthem, Minico will spread out a giant American flag, stretching some 70 yards wide in the shape of the United States. It's the same flag you see on TV at big events, such as NFL and MLB games.

"We thought we'd honor our military and service people, and we hope they come and enjoy this celebration. It's the first time this flag has been in the state of Idaho," Catmull said.

Normally pro teams pay thousands of dollars to use the flag, which is provided by a company called U.S. Events out of Salt Lake City. But Scott Baker, a 1980 graduate of Minico, works for the company and pulled some strings. The flag is stopping in Rupert on its way to an event in Seattle.

Additionally, Miss Canyon Rim 2010 Erin Webster will sing "God Bless America" and Rob Newman will sing the national anthem, followed by fireworks.

And then, the real fireworks: Minico takes on J-Town.

Catmull is listed as an assistant coach on the Minico football roster, but his duties go much further than X's and O's. He's the guy sneaking candy to players (and the newspaper reporter) on the sideline

TOO MANY HAPPY RETURNS

Broncos aim to improve kick coverage

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — As third-ranked Boise State prepares for its Western Athletic Conference opener on the road against winless New Mexico State, head coach Chris Petersen will begin focusing on two glaring deficiencies in the early season: special teams and penalties.

While the Broncos may simply need more game-time experience in covering punts — the team has punted just three times in three games — BSU ranks 114th in the nation in punt return defense at a 21-yard average per return.

Skewed by the 54-yard return for a touchdown by Oregon State's James Rodgers last weekend, Petersen maintained Monday that it's an area that demands improvement.

"We saw a really good player for sure in James Rodgers," Petersen said of Oregon State's success on kick returns. "You knew that going in. Sometimes you can talk about that all you want, but Rodgers' return was good."

"There were some things we would've liked to have done better and we think we could have made that play. But I think you've got to give credit where credit is due."

Despite Rodgers' big return — the first punt return for a touchdown BSU has surrendered since 2007 — Petersen recognized the need to make some course corrections on special teams.

"I think it's a little something here and a little something there that we've got to clean up," Petersen said. "That's really the bottom line. It's not any one thing. If it was the one thing, we could get that fixed very rapidly, but it's always details and it's never one thing. That's why we practice and we'll continue to work on all phases."

Although New Mexico State isn't likely to pull a major upset, the Aggies are strong in the return game.

Nationally, the Aggies rank 10th in kickoff returns, averaging 28.15 yards per return, and 31st in punt returns with a 12-yard average.

This week, it's another flashy returner named Rogers that the Broncos will have to focus on stopping. Taveon Rogers ranks 21st in the nation in kickoff returns with a 28.83 yards per kick average.

"It will be a good challenge for us," Petersen said of New Mexico State's return teams. "We have to pick up all phases of that. It starts with our kickers. If our guys can place the ball where we need it with hang time and distance, that makes our coverage units a lot more effects.

"When that doesn't happen it puts us all in a big bind. We're all in this together."

Penalties have also put the Broncos in a bind through the first three games of the team's schedule. With an average of nine per game, Boise State ranks 111th in the country for penalties per game, a handful of which have come on special teams plays.

"I think a couple of them are not smart penalties, but it always comes back to being aggressive and trying to make a play," Petersen said. "When we spend so much time on how we need to get that done in the heat of the battle, we need to get smarter there, no question about it. We've got to do a better job of eliminating those penalties."

"I think we'll be explosive (once we get rid of them). I think we have been in the past and we've shown signs this year, but penalties can put you in the mud. They just really bog you down."

Also of note, Petersen said he is still unsure of running back D.J. Harper's status or availability for this week's game after suffering a non-contact knee injury Saturday against Oregon State.

Kirilenko still with Jazz, at least for now

By Doug Alden
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah forward Andrei Kirilenko enters training camp knowing he's still a member of the Jazz at least for now and hoping to stay.

It may not be up to him, or even the Jazz entirely.

Kirilenko was mentioned last week in a potential four-team trade centered around Denver Nuggets star Carmelo Anthony, but so far no deal had been done as Kirilenko and his Jazz teammates posed for pictures and spoke to reporters on the eve of training camp.

"I want to be here. That's the bottom line," said Kirilenko, who has been with the Jazz longer than any other player on the roster. "I want to be part of the Jazz. I'm very pleased to be in this city and playing with the Jazz."

Kirilenko is entering his 10th season in Utah and is scheduled to make almost $18 million in the final year of a contract extension he signed in 2004. His salary makes him an obvious trade candidate, but he is also the most versatile player on the team and right now the Jazz seem content to focus on the team's potential with Kirilenko rather than how much money they could save without him.

"There's always part of a financial picture to everything, but I don't think that we went into this season with the idea that we needed to trade Andrei," general manager Kevin O'Connor said.

O'Connor acknowledged there have been inquiries from other teams about Kirilenko, but would not comment on reports of the megadeal that surfaced late last week.

Nuggets All-Star Anthony awaits future

DENVER (AP) — Carmelo Anthony wouldn't come out and say he wants out of Denver. His inaction has indicated otherwise.

Anthony hasn't signed a $65 million extension that's been on the table since June, leading the Nuggets to engage in trade talks for their superstar forward who has led them to the play-offs in each of his seven seasons.

The All-Star fidgeted in his seat during media day Monday and talked around questions concerning his future with the team.

"I'm here, man. I'm here today. Whatever the future holds, it holds," Anthony said. "Practice starts tomorrow and we'll go from there."

Anthony arrived wearing his white, powder blue and gold uniform. But just how much longer he may be donning that jersey didn't get any clearer. He said he planned to be "committed 100 percent" when training camp began Tuesday.

"There's been a lot of speculation, a lot of rumors going on this summer about where I'm going to end up, the Nuggets want to trade me, I want to be traded," Anthony said. "That's for my team and front office to discuss. I'm here to focus on basketball and training camp."

Smoak, Pauley lead Mariners past Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas — Justin Smoak homered and had three hits, David Pauley pitched six effective innings, and the Seattle Mariners edged the AL West champion Texas Rangers 7-5 on Monday night.

Pauley (4-8) allowed two runs and eight hits, struck out three and walked two.

Entering Monday night's start, the Mariners had scored only 18 runs this season in Pauley's first 13 starts. This time, his teammates provided him with six runs.

Pauley is winless in six home decisions, but is 4-2 on the road.

RED SOX 6, WHITE SOX 1

CHICAGO — Clay Buchholz outpitched Mark Buehrle and the Boston Red Sox beat the Chicago White Sox 6-1 Monday night, postponing a pair of clinching parties for their AL East rivals.

A Red Sox loss would've locked up playoff spots for the Tampa Bay Rays and New York Yankees. Instead, Boston took an early lead, pulled away and stayed mathematically in the wild-card race while the Rays and Yankees lost.

BLUE JAYS 7, YANKEES 5

TORONTO — Vernon Wells hit a three-run homer, John Buck added a solo shot and Toronto pounded A.J. Burnett, then held on for a victory over New York.

Toronto assured itself of at least a .500 finish and temporarily denied the Yankees the chance to clinch a playoff berth.

Brian Matusz pitched seven impressive innings and Nick Markakis drove in two runs with a triple and a single, leading Baltimore over AL East-leading Tampa Bay.

Matusz (9-12) allowed three hits, two of them infield singles. The rookie walked one, hit a batter with a pitch and matched a career high with eight strikeouts before being replaced by Jim Johnson.

INDIANS 6, TIGERS 3

CLEVELAND — Andres Galarraga went from unhittable to giving up three homers in an 18-pitch span and Cleveland beat Detroit.

The Tigers lost slugger Miguel Cabrera to an apparent right ankle injury. He landed awkwardly on the bag while getting back to first base on a pickoff attempt in the seventh inning. Cabrera limped from the field and was taken for X-rays.

ROYALS 10, TWINS 8

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jarrod Dyson hit his first major league home run and caught 10 fly balls in center field, helping Kansas City beat Minnesota.

Jason Kubel homered, doubled and drove in five runs for the AL Central champion Twins.

PHILLIES 8, NATIONALS 0

WASHINGTON — The Philadelphia Phillies are the NL East champions for the fourth consecutive year and, fittingly, Roy Halladay helped seal the deal this time with a two-hitter.

Halladay earned his 21st win with his fourth shutout and ninth complete game — all highs in the majors this season — and Jayson Werth drove in four runs, leading the Phillies to a 8-0 victory over the Washington Nationals on Monday night, wrapping up the division with five games left.

DODGERS 3, ROCKIES 1

DENVER — Ted Lilly scattered four hits over eight innings and Los Angeles prevented Ubaldo Jimenez from getting his 20th win.

Casey Blake went 3 for 4 with two doubles, two RBIs and scored Los Angeles' other run as the Dodgers put the Rockies on the brink of elimination.

CARDINALS 6, PIRATES 4

ST. LOUIS — Matt Holliday homered and drove in three runs and St. Louis beat Pittsburgh, staying in the NL Central race for at least one more day.

A Cardinals loss would have clinched the division for Cincinnati. The Reds were idle, and their magic number remained at one going into Tuesday night's home game against Houston.

BRAVES 2, MARLINS 1,11 INNINGS

ATLANTA (AP) — Omar Infante singled home the winning run with two outs in the 11th inning and the Atlanta Braves kept up their push for the NL wild-card spot, beating the Florida Marlins 2-1 Monday night.

The Braves began the day a half-game behind San Diego for the wild card. The Padres later hosted the Chicago Cubs.

NEW YORK — The game between the Milwaukee Brewers and New York Mets scheduled for Monday night has been rained out.

The game will be made up as part of a two-night double-header Wednesday starting at 4:10 p.m.

Barger, Buhl steamroll Bliss 4-1

Soccer

GIRLS

BUHL 4, FILER 1

Sky Barger was a one-girl wrecking crew as she scored all four of Buhl's goals in the 4-1 victory over Filer.

The Indians backed up Barger's offensive showcase by only allowing one goal in the victory.

"It was the most amazing game," said Buhl coach Araceli Perez Huicochea. "Every girl played the way that defines a Buhl Indian, with heart and hard work till the end. They deserved this win and many more to come."

DECLO 3, WENDELL 2

The seniors played hard, but freshman Jessica Cuezas had the hot foot as she scored two goals in Declo's 3-2 victory over Wendell on Monday.

"It was senior's night and the seniors picked it up," said Declo coach Amy Mallory. "You could tell that they really wanted a win and the rest of the team really stepped up and we ended up with the win."

Mariana Rodriguez scored Declo's other goal in the win.

Declo (3-8) travels to Gooding on Monday.

BLISS 5, GOODING 0

Estephanie Altamirano's hat trick in the second half was the highlight of the night as Bliss rolled to a 5-0 victory over Gooding.

Bliss jumped out early as Demsie Butler scored the first goal in the first two minutes of the game. Gooding's defense kept things close as the game was 1-0 at the half.

Lindsay James jump-started Bliss with a goal at the 11-minute mark in the second half, and Altamirano finished off Gooding for the win.

"In the second half we really decided to go on the attack," said Bliss coach Diana Butler. "It is the right time of the year to go on the offense and our defense sealed them off."

Bliss (5-3-1) travels to Filer on Wednesday.

BOYS

WENDELL 5, DECLO 0

Wendell's Johnny Diaz scored two goals as the Trojans thumped Declo 5-0.

Jorge Diaz, Eder Macias and Jose Ruelas added to the Trojans' lead with goals.

"We are really pleased with how we are attacking," said Wendell coach Matt Valadao. "We did a good job putting the ball in the back of the net."

Goalkeeper Alexis Camargo had another shutout in the win.

Wendell (11-1, 10-0) hosts Buhl for senior night on Wednesday.

BUHL 2, FILER 1

Buhl mounted a late comeback to take a 2-1 victory over Filer on Monday.

Gustavo Magana's penalty kick at the 56th minute notched things up for the Indians and freshman Andres Maya's goal at the 60th minute broke up the tie for the win.

"Filer played tough soccer," said Buhl coach Bill Fields. "Their program is getting stronger and stronger. it was tight all the way."

Buhl (4-3-2) travels to Wendell on Wednesday

GOODING 7, BLISS 1

Gooding pounded Bliss 7-1 on Monday.

Gooding's Louis Patino racked up a hat trick and teammates Fredrico Mendez and Stephan Turnbull each had two goals in the victory.

Danny Lopez scored Bliss's only goal off a pass from Ruben Juarez. Bliss played tight defense in the first half, only allowing Gooding one goal to keep things tied. But the Gooding offense went into hyper-drive in the second to secure the win.

Bliss (3-7, 1-7) travels to Filer on Wednesday.

Volley Ball

HANSEN 3, CASTLEFORD 1

Hansen won 25-13, 25-21, 21-25, 25-17 over Castleford on Monday.

Karli Bower had 10 kills and Kendra Flores had 10 assist for Castleford in the loss.

Castleford (4-9) travels to Richfield today.

Cross country

AREA HARRIERS COMPETE AT BOB FIRMAN

Jerome's McKenzie Chojnacky finished eighth in the elite division of the Bob Firman cross country meet at Eagle Island State Park in Eagle on Saturday.

Chojnacky recorded a time of 18 minutes, 47.88 seconds, while teammate Mikesell Clegg was 20th in 19:13.03. The Twin Falls girls placed 16th.

Erik Harris of Twin Falls was 10th in the boys elite division with a 16:03.22 clocking as the Bruin boys placed 10th in the team scoring. Karl Lundgren took 22nd in 16:29.21.

In the Division I competition, Wood River's boys placed ninth, led by Andrew Pfeiffer's fifth-place finish in 16:32.51. In Division II, Kimberly's boys were sixth, while Gooding was 13th and Wendell 18th. Gooding's Mike McHan finished fourth individually in 16:34.45. Brian Crane (15th in 17:46.62) and Wesley Kelly of Kimberly (21st in 17:53.34) also had good days.

Sasha Kent of Richfield was seventh in the girls Division II race in 20:23.93, while Ashley Bullers of Gooding placed 16th in 21:46.04. Kimberly placed eighth in the girls team scoring.

Team titles were won by Davis, Utah (elite boys); Ogden, Utah (elite girls); Davis (Division I boys); Utah's Mountain Crest (Division I girls); Oregon's Nyssa (Division II boys); and Firth (Division II girls).

Polian: NFL's 18-game season is "fait accompli"

INDIANAPOLIS — Colts president Bill Polian believes the debate over an 18-game NFL season is over, and an expanded schedule will soon become a reality.

The competition committee member and former league executive twice said he expects the NFL to stretch its regular season by two games. He twice called the decision a "fait accompli" during his weekly radio show Monday night.

"I think that the owners, and principally the commissioner, have decided that it's the way to go, and so the debate, such as it was, is over," Polian said. "I've heard recently, and I'm sorry that this didn't get more coverage earlier, some really, really interesting commentary on it. ... I wish some of that dialogue had taken place earlier."

Officially, nothing has changed.

League owners and NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell have expressed support for cutting the pre-season schedule from four games to two and expanding the regular-season schedule from 16 to 18. But the format change hasn't been approved by either the owners or the NFL Players Association.

Polian believes that is just a formality although the two sides are trying to work out a new collective bargaining agreement before the current deal expires in March.

A caller asked Polian how close the league was to expanding to 18 games and how the Colts would respond to fewer preseason games, trimming the number of opportunities players would have to win roster spots. Polian said: "The short answer is that it's a fait accompli, I'm afraid, and we're going to have to find ways to get those evaluative experiences. We're not going to sit back and say, 'Oh oh, 18 games. Now we're going to become a veteran team.' That's not going to work. And it's not the way we want to play."

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league would not respond to Polian's comments.

RAIDERS HALL OF FAME QB GEORGE BLANDA DIES AT 83

ALAMEDA, Calif. — George Blanda, the seemingly ageless Hall of Fame quarterback and kicker whose 26-year career was best remembered for a remarkable run of late-game theatrics with the Oakland Raiders, has died. He was 83.

The Raiders confirmed the death Monday and issued a statement saying "we are deeply saddened by the passing of the great George Blanda. George was a brave Raider and a close personal friend of Raiders owner Al Davis."

Blanda retired a month before the 1976 season, playing longer than anyone else in pro football history. He spent 10 seasons with the Chicago Bears, part of one with the Baltimore Colts, seven with the Houston Oilers and his final nine with the Raiders.

He scored 2,002 points in his career, a pro football record at the time of his retirement, kicking 335 field goals and 943 extra points, running for nine touchdowns and throwing for 236 more.

49ERS FIRE OFFENSIVE COORDINATOR JIMMY RAYE

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Their offense in a funk, the winless San Francisco 49ers fired coordinator Jimmy Raye on Monday.

Raye was dismissed one day after San Francisco lost 31-10 at Kansas City to fall to 0-3. The 49ers have scored 38 points, second fewest in the NFL behind Carolina.

Mike Johnson will move from quarterbacks coach to offensive coordinator. Offensive assistant Jason Michael will take over as quarterbacks coach.

Coach Mike Singletary said he made the decision after spending the night looking at game film.

"One thing I want you to understand is if I make a decision, it's my decision," he said. "The thing that I have control over is the 53-man staff, the 53-man roster and the staff, who is on my coaching staff. That is my decision."

The 49ers were considered a favorite in the NFC West this year, but their offense has stalled, plagued by turnovers and a weak running game.

BILLS RELEASE QB TRENT EDWARDS

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The Buffalo Bills have released quarterback Trent Edwards in a surprise move that came a week after he lost the starting job for a second straight season.

The team announced the move in a two-paragraph release Monday, a day after Ryan Fitzpatrick provided the offense with a spark in a 38-30 loss at New England.

Coach Chan Gailey was scheduled to discuss the move later Monday.

Edwards was in his fourth season after being selected by the team in the third round of the 2007 draft out of Stanford. He went 14-18 as a starter, including 0-2 this season.

He was benched the day after a 34-7 loss at Green Bay on Sept. 19. He was 11 of 18 for 102 yards and two interceptions.

Brian Brohm is the other quarterback on the roster as the Bills (0-3) prepare to host the New York Jets on Sunday.

Edwards' release marks a sudden and decisive reversal for a player who had earned Gailey's confidence by beating out Fitzpatrick and Brohm in an offseason-long competition to reclaim the starting job. Gailey had been so impressed by Edwards that he noted how he saw "a light at the end of the tunnel" in praising the player three weeks ago.

Edwards failed to build on that trust by reverting to his familiar hesitant form which, a year ago, led Bills fans to label him as "Trent-ative" and "Captain Checkdown."

Jazz

O'Connor said the situation is a lot like the one the Jazz faced a year ago when Carlos Boozer reported for the final year of his contract after a summer of speculation he would be traded. The Jazz were unwilling to give up their leading scorer and rebounder without getting something in return just to avoid a luxury tax hit.

"We've never initiated a trade call this whole summer about AK," O'Connor said.

But the Jazz are willing to listen and if another club makes the right offer, Kirilenko could be playing elsewhere for the first time in his NBA career.

Kirilenko has averaged 12.4 points in his career with the Jazz and his 1,306 blocked shots are the second most in team history.

"I don't think there's anybody on the team that can do the things he does. He brings a different set of intangibles than anybody on this team," said point guard Deron Williams, who quickly grew tired of questions about Kirilenko's future.

"Is AK here? He's here today?" Williams said. "As of right now, he's with us tomorrow, right? When it comes across the ticker that AK has been traded, then come ask me questions. Until then I'm not going to talk about it."

and waving his towel to pump up the crowd on third downs. Catmull also spearheads festivities at home games, such as crop duster flybys, an Apache helicopter landing on the field, concerts, drawings for sponsor-supplied giveaways (last week they gave away two iPads), free hotdogs, Halloween trunk-or-treat, and much more.

"It's just a matter of making phone calls and having fun," Catmull said.

It might be all the sugar from the candy he distributes, but I've never seen Catmull without a smile on his face. It's nice to see enthusiastic folks like him take initiative and do special things like this for the community. Last year, Catmull was recognized by the IHSAA, receiving the Distinguished Service Award.

"He's taken it to a whole new level," said Minico football coach Tim Perrigot. "He used to come talk to me and say, 'I want to do this, I want to do that.' Now it's to the point where I just stay out of his way."

"It's helped our gate — people love to come out to the games. It's helped our football team become better because our kids play tough at home and I think they want to do well in front of all those people."

Perhaps it indeed has helped as Minico has only lost two regular-season home games since 2005.

This Friday, Catmull needs your help to pull off one of Minico's biggest pregame stunts yet. More than 200 people are needed to put the gigantic flag out. If interested, call him at 312-1092.

After this, who knows what he'll think of next.
