Lazy J dwellers argue against development plan

Plan 10 years down the road; P&Z recommends limited zoning change

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Mostly elderly people filled the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission meeting Tuesday, and most shared the same worry: They would lose their retirement homes to development on Pole Line Road.

A request to change the zoning of 70 acres at the southeast corner of Pole Line Road and Washington Street to allow commercial development spurred their concern. The eastern half of the request included the Lazy J Ranch, a mobile home park described by those at the meeting as largely home to retirees. It has 159 lots for mobile homes.

The commission voted against recommending the zoning change for the entire 70 acres, though it did recommend the change for the land west of the mobile home park.

Gerald Martens, a developer, said at the meeting that development would begin at the west of the 70 acres and move toward the Lazy J. But it would take probably a decade before development encroached into the park, he said, except for some lots that would be impacted from a road built at the park's edge.

Still, the mere notion of it worried those who spoke at the meeting.

"What provision has been made for these senior citizens to move?" asked Scott Baument, who said his 91-year-old mother-in-law lives in the park. "If this move is going to throw these senior citizens into the cold, then I must thoroughly disagree with this proposed zoning change."

Applause met the statement, as it did for several others denouncing the potential move.

Margrette Cook said she has been trying to sell her mobile home in the lot for two years, and said some of its value has been lopped off because of the plans.

"You have no idea how many widows planned to move to Bridgeview (Estates) or into assisted living when (a letter from management about the zoning change) came out, because they didn't understand it," she said.

Martens said these issues should be addressed before the park is impacted, but also noted the years between then and now.

Martens said his group will appeal the decision to the Twin Falls City Council, which has ultimate authority on the change. The zoning change is part of the city's comprehensive development plan.

THIS IS SEPTEMBER?

Warm temps to continue through end of week

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Not to be outdone by spring, summer is trying to go out like a lion.

Near-record-breaking temperatures are the name of the game this week due to an area of continued stable low pressure in southern Idaho and southeastern Oregon, held in place by an upper ridge of high pressure extending west from Utah.

Twin Falls hit a high of 89 degrees on Tuesday, 2 degrees short of the record set in 1969, while Burley's high of 86 didn't reach a record of 94 degrees for the day, according to the National Weather Service. Mountain Home's high of 91 also fell below its record of 93 set in 1963.

Joel Tannenholtz with NWS' Boise office said such short-term weather systems are not unexpected for September.

Daytime temperatures will remain high through the end of the week as the high-pressure ridge slowly moves east over Colorado, allowing an approaching upper-level low to possibly draw some Pacific moisture in from the southwest toward the end of the weekend.

The long-term NWS outlook is for near-average temperatures until February through May, when climate models predict an increased chance for below-normal temperatures followed by increased chances for above-normal temperatures in July through September.

Candidates stump on education

Olson, Allred visit Twin Falls

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Keith Allred and Stan Olson made a campaign stop in Twin Falls on Tuesday, where they made their case for why education would be better off if they become Idaho's governor and state superintendent of public instruction.

Though running for two separate offices, Allred and Olson have a good deal in common. Both are running on the Democratic ticket challenging GOP incumbents — Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna.

Neither one has made a career in elected office. Olson was an educator, retiring earlier this year as superintendent of Boise School District. Allred has been a professor and founded The Common Interest, a nonpartisan group that has worked with the Legislature to seek solutions on various issues.

The two candidates cast themselves as the ideal team for Idaho education: a governor who would make public education a high priority, and a superintendent who would keep a watchful eye in making sure that dollars are spent on effective programs.

"Folks, we need someone in the governor's office who understands what a fundamental priority education is," Allred told an audience of about 40 supporters gathered at City Park in Twin Falls.

Tuesday's event, billed as an "Education Matters" tour, was part of campaign stops that Allred and Olson are making this week throughout the state that focus on education.

Pence challenged for fourth term by newcomer

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

For three consecutive terms, Donna Pence has run unopposed for the two-year Idaho House of Representatives District 25 seat. This year she's challenged by political newcomer Alex Sutter of Richfield.

Sutter, the 36-year-old vice

Pence

Sutter

chairman for the District 25 Republican Party, said he is running against Pence in the hopes that he can help bring less government and more state and individual rights to Idaho.

"Most of what is going on nationally is an attack on state government and individual rights," Sutter said. "The government oversteps its bounds too often and I want to fight back."

Pence, a 68-year-old Democrat from Gooding is a retired schoolteacher and previously ran a 60-acre farm with her husband. The couple currently runs a tree farm, and Pence said her experience with agriculture and in the Gooding community will help her continue her work on the House Agricultural Affairs, Education and Resources & Conservation committees. Pence was raised in Richfield and graduated from the University of Idaho.

"Living in these communities gives me a good idea of what makes them tick," Pence said.

While Sutter is originally from New York, he has lived in Idaho for nine years and served on the Richfield School District's board of trustees. He owns Intermountain Financial

It's no bull, except when it is

Actor Lee Marvin had a great war story.

As a Marine in World War II, he was wounded by Japanese machine-gun fire during the American invasion of the Pacific Ocean island of Saipan. Marvin spent 13 months in Navy hospitals before getting a medical discharge.

He parlayed his Purple Heart and that war story into a 45-year Hollywood career and eventually an Oscar. But Marvin's Tinseltown iconographers left out one little detail:

The actor had been shot in the butt.

Still, I'd trade Marvin's war story for my own any day.

You see, I blew out my knee while I was asleep and on vacation.

Woke up last Thursday morning in a hotel on the Oregon Coast with my knee the size of a cantaloupe. I have no idea how it got that way. The most strenuous thing I'd done the day before was order a second mojito.

So now I'm hobbling, and I don't have a good answer whenever someone asks, “What happened to you?”

Surfing? Wrestling a shark? BASE jumping off Astoria-Megler Bridge at the mouth of the Columbia River? None would pass the laugh test.

Maybe I should resort to bull.

When he was a teenager, my older brother Pete would sneak off to the rodeo and ride bulls. Our dad didn't approve.

“Why is there a hoofprint on your forehead?” he'd ask.

“Bumped my head on a heifer,” Pete would reply.

But the thing is, the longer you're a bullrider, the more visible the damage. And it's pretty hard to pass off a fish story when you're in traction.

YOU DON'T SAY

Steve Crump

“Did a brahma do that to you?” my father would ask.

“Nah,” Pete would reply. “I tangled with Freckles.”

Freckles, of course, weighed 1,800 pounds and had a bit of a temper.

Still, as alibis go, bucking bulls work pretty slick if you can't think of a better story. Busted arm? Blame Durango. Cauliflower ear? It was Nastyface's doing. On crutches? Gotta be Hot Diggity Damn.

Besides, I'm unlikely to mention my first and only real experience with a real Brahma.

I was 10 years old and my uncle let me help out one weekend when he was moving cattle. My job was opening gates, standing there until all the cows filed past, closing the gates and making sure they were locked.

It all was pretty boring, so after a while I kinda lost track of which side of the gate I was supposed to be on. That's how I found myself sharing a corral with Pearl.

Name notwithstanding, Pearl was no lady. With that rack, he could have tossed me clean over Caribou County.

I reached the fence about two steps ahead of Pearl, but my hat didn't. Last I saw it, the Stetson was skewered on one of Pearl's horns.

It was a pretty good story, but I couldn't exactly go running to my uncle to tell it. That's because in making my narrow escape, I'd split my pants.

Dams may return to reservoir storage

Public comment period continues through Oct. 13

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Idaho Power wants to manipulate more Snake River water to get more bang for its buck, and you can share your opinion on the idea.

The dominant hydro-power company in southern Idaho wants two of its mid-Snake River dams, the Bliss and Lower Salmon Falls projects, to be able to adjust water flow to follow energy demand, a process known as load-following. For the past six years, the rate at which the dams' turbines turned depended mainly on the flow of the river.

The two dams were required to use run-of-the-river flows after their licenses came up for renewal with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in 1995. The renewal was opposed by conservation groups and an environmental study was conducted because load-following was believed to negatively affect a handful of animals on the endangered species list.

In 2004, FERC limited load-following operation to that which would aid in a six-year study to determine its effect on those species. In the meantime, one of the species, the Utah valvata snail, was removed from the list.

Now the study is complete and Idaho Power has implemented conservation plans for the white sturgeon and various snails, including the Bliss Rapids snail. So the company is requesting that FERC amend its license to allow load-following operations.

Roger Fuhrman, manager of Idaho Power's Water Management Division, said load-following would be used mainly during high-demand times of the year, such as winter when people are heating homes. Run-of-the-river would still be used when demand is low.

Fuhrman said load-following is becoming more necessary with the addition of wind power.

“Since wind power isn't dependable, we have to be able to bring power on if the wind drops,” Fuhrman said.

A public comment period is open until Oct. 13.

The Bliss Project in Gooding, Twin Falls and Elmore counties would spill a minimum of 4,500 cubic feet per second, and the Lower Salmon Falls Project in Gooding and Twin Falls counties would spill a minimum of 3,500 cubic feet per second.

Idaho Rivers United was one of the groups that opposed renewing Idaho Power's license in 2004. Conservation Policy Director Kevin Lewis said he was reviewing the new application but doesn't know how his group will comment yet.

Charlie Vincent, regional representative for American Whitewater, said his group will comment but still hadn't consolidated its response. The proposed allowable change in flow of 5 feet per day below Lower Salmon Falls may eliminate a wave that is popular with boaters.

All comment documents (originals and eight copies) should be sent to: Secretary, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 888 First Street, N.E., Washington, DC 20426. Include the project numbers P-1975-102 and P-2061-086.

Education

Allred pointed to the Idaho Constitution's requirement for a “thorough” system of public schools, saying it's a “fundamental priority of everyday citizens.”

He contends that this year's state budget cuts for public education, which reduced funding by 7.5 percent — $128.5 million — could have been avoided. Examples he gave include hiring more employees to fill vacant positions in the Idaho State Tax Commission and tapping into a public lands endowment fund.

Olson said the state's own statistics show that Idaho has plenty of room for improvement. For example, a state study shows that 14 percent of Idaho high-school graduates received a bachelor's degree from an Idaho college or university within five years of finishing high school, he said.

Idaho needs a plan in place that sets priorities for education, Olson said.

Luna has contended that he and Otter have worked for the past two years on a plan through the Education Alliance of Idaho. The eight-page plan lists different education goals for the state in areas like performance and postsecondary participation and completion.

But Olson has called the plan more of a “template” that's inadequate.

Group, a Shoshone insurance company, and has been self-employed for 15 years. Sutter said responsible economic growth does not come by raising taxes, but by decreasing unemployment issues and looking for long-term solutions rather than short-term fixes.

Both candidates want to focus on education in the coming years — providing a way for the children of Idaho and their teachers to receive quality in both education and salary. Pence said she was a part of the negotiations to form a plan that allowed schools some alternatives to laying off teachers in fiscal emergencies, and she carried legislation to keep the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind in its current Gooding campus.

Sutter said that he'd like to see more technology used in schools and would also like the Legislature to free up money for school districts to use where it is most needed. He said if there is a large quantity of money in the maintenance budget, any surplus should be able to be moved over to other areas lacking in funds.

“For me being a Republican, I know that could be controversial,” Sutter said. “I understand the rules but I think we need to get over it.”

Times-News publisher announces retirement

Times-News

Brad Hurd, publisher/editor of the Times-News and a longtime executive in Lee Enterprises, announced plans Tuesday to retire at the end of the year.

"I'm very grateful to our wonderful employees, our readers and advertisers, and to my employer of the past 31 years, Lee Enterprises," Hurd said. "I've enjoyed and appreciated my career immensely. Working for a newspaper is an honor and a privilege that relatively few people get to experience. Every day has been a new adventure for me."

He added: "The Times-News has thrived through a tough economy and we are well-poised for the long haul. With tremendous growth of our online media products and our newspaper circulation holding steady, our audience is bigger than ever and growing. The future is bright for our customers and our employees."

Mike Gullledge, Lee vice president for publishing, praised Hurd as both an outstanding publisher and skilled editor.

"Brad is an exceptional leader. He has a history of success across our corporation, and I will miss working with him. Brad's ability to develop effective teams is outstanding." Gullledge said a successor will be selected as soon as possible to assure a smooth transition.

Hurd began his newspaper career in 1975 as a sports writer for his hometown newspaper, The Longmont Times-Call in Longmont, Colo. He joined Lee in 1979 as an assistant city editor for the Missoulian in Missoula, Mont., and served as editor there from 1982 to 1994.

In 1994 he became manager of a book and magazine company, a new Lee venture based in Helena, Mont. In 2001 he was appointed publisher of the Independent-Record in Helena and continued managing the book and magazine business.

He was appointed publisher of the Times-News in November 2004 and additionally assumed the editor's role a year ago. He also oversees the Elko Daily Free Press in Elko, Nev.

Hurd said he and his wife, Jody, "don't have any exotic retirement plans but intend to spend more time with each other, our children and grandchildren and our many fine friends in Twin Falls."

Jody plans to continue her science teaching job at Vera C. O'Leary Middle School.

T.F. County to finalize land buys

One purchase $10,000 less than county's assessed value

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

A county-owned parcel is worth two that aren't for sale, or so the Twin Falls County commissioners could argue — it's why they're buying a house next to the county courthouse in Twin Falls.

Missed opportunities in the past have taught the commissioners to jump on available properties when it's clear the county will need to expand there, Commission Chairman George Urie said. It saves the headaches that come with deal-making and trying to buy property that's not for sale.

The county is buying the house at 235 Sixth Ave. N., though the commissioners have no clear plan for it. Commissioner Terry Kramer said he sees it as an expansion for the county maintenance programs, but nothing is set in stone.

"We'll have it when the time comes," to make a decision on expansion, Urie said.

The county is slated to spend $69,000 for the property, with the final agreement up for a vote at this morning's meeting. That's almost $10,000 less than the county assessor's appraised value for it, though it is within the effective 20 percent margin of error allowed by state law. The commissioners said the property was assessed independently by the seller. The county is not allowed by law to pay more than a property's independently assessed value.

"I'm surprised by that, to be honest with you," Urie said of the county's higher assessed value. "Normally the assessor's value is lower than actual value."

The home hadn't been appraised in-person by the county since 2008. Such appraisals are done once every five years, and the assessor's office routinely adjusts assessed values for property tax purposes based on market fluctuations during the remaining four.

"It's really hard to gauge an individual property," Assessor Gerry Bowden said. "There's just so many variables out there," mostly depending on what's important to individual buyers.

The county also is nearing completion of a year-plus effort to buy 3.29 acres near Murtaugh Lake. The county has leased the land for 12 years and spent more than $200,000 improving it, including installing a boat launch.

That land costs $49,350, but a $39,480 grant from the Waterways Improvement Fund and cash from the Waterways Vessel Account will limit the county's expense to about $7,000.

Urie and Kramer said in June, when ushering the purchase along, that owning the land will protect the county's investment in it.

Main Ave. to close for Friday parade

Times-News

Twin Falls police are asking those both participating and attending Twin Falls High School's homecoming parade on Friday to take care along the parade route.

The parade will start at 4 p.m., staging in the 500 block of Main Avenue North. It will proceed east from there on Main, ending at the intersection of Main and Murtaugh Street East.

The route will be closed from 3:30 to 5 p.m., with numerous police officials and volunteers helping with traffic control. Motorists will be able to cross Main Avenue by using Washington Street or Blue Lakes Boulevard.

Drivers are asked to park two to four blocks away from the parade route to avoid parking congestion. Please do not block driveways to nearby homes and businesses.

Also, parents are asked to keep their children from running onto the road to collect candy thrown by passing floats. Such situations have led to injuries in the past, and parade participants have been warned their floats will be taken out of the parade if they throw candy.

Gooding County crash claims 1 life

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A 33-year-old Gooding woman died Tuesday at the scene of a two-vehicle crash on Idaho Highway 46.

Laura Seamons was driving south on Idaho 46 when Teresa Garcia-Llamas, 26, of Gooding, ran a stop sign at the intersection with 2100 South Road, hitting Seamons' blue Chevrolet truck on the passenger side with her maroon Chevrolet Malibu sedan.

Idaho State Police were dispatched to the scene at about 8:30 a.m.

Both vehicles left the road during the collision and tumbled toward the east shoulder of the northbound lane. The truck rolled and landed on its top while the Malibu remained upright.

Seamons' 13-year-old son and 5-year-old daughter were in the truck. The children and Garcia-Llamas were transported via ambulance to North Canyon Medical Center, treated and released. All wore seat belts.

Idaho 46 was blocked for several hours while emergency crews from ISP, the Gooding County Sheriff's Office, Gooding County Fire District and Gooding County Paramedics responded to the crash. It remains under investigation by ISP troopers.

Alleged trafficker skips court date

Fifth District Magistrate Judge Roger Harris issued a bench warrant for Jeremy Todd Hill, 33, of Twin Falls, after Hill skipped his preliminary hearing Monday.

Hill was arrested and arraigned on the criminal complaint of trafficking in methamphetamine on Aug. 2. He was allegedly recently found sleeping in a car, parked in a residential driveway in Filer. Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies responded to a homeowner complaint and according to their report had to wake up Hill, who was reportedly slurring his speech and acting confused.

Hill was arrested for being under the influence of a controlled substance in public and detained. A K-9 unit then searched the car, in which more than 80 grams of meth were found.

Hill's bond was set at $50,000 for the trafficking charge, and he bonded out less than a week later.

Researchers find life on Yellowstone Lake's floor

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — What was believed to be a simple Yellowstone Lake ecosystem limited by the frigid snowmelt that feeds the lake actually contains thousands of species living off nutrients provided by geothermal features below the surface, researchers have found.

Montana State University researchers using a remotely operated vehicle recently discovered a thriving colony of moss, shrimp and aquatic worms centered around a geothermal vent about 100 feet below the surface.

John Varley, head of MSU's Big Sky Institute, said Tuesday the discovery reveals a greater diversity of life than what was previously thought to exist in the lake at the center of Yellowstone National Park.

Trout, plankton and other species live in the lake, but the diversity of the ecosystem was always believed to be limited because the water that flows into the lake is like distilled water, devoid of the minerals that are the building blocks of life.

"It was always thought of as a very simple ecosystem, and that made sense because its entire drainage is made up of snowmelt that travels over relatively insoluble volcanic rocks," Varley said. "But it's not a simple ecosystem. There are thousands of species in there, some of which are associated with the cold water, some of which are associated with the hot water."

The water around the recently discovered colony is about 90 degrees Fahrenheit, whereas the surface of the lake rarely gets above 64 degrees. The colony lives in near-total darkness, and the vent apparently emits minerals and nutrients that allow the moss to live in low-light conditions. The shrimp and worms, in turn, feed off the moss.

Such colonies are unable to expand very far because of the rapid drop in water temperature outside the radius of warmth provided by the geothermal features, Varley said. Plus, the type of life depends on the water temperature: Many vents have temperatures near or exceeding boiling, providing conditions suitable for microbes, whereas the cooler temperatures can support the higher forms such as shrimp and worms.

About 600 vents and other geothermal features are on the floor of the massive lake, few of which have been explored, Varley said. That means there is the possibility for all kinds of diverse life in such oases scattered across the lake's floor, previously thought to have very limited or no life at all.

NEVADA Motorcyclist from Filer killed in Nevada crash

LAS VEGAS — The Clark County coroner has identified a motorcyclist killed in a crash on a southern Nevada highway as 41-year-old David Jerry Short of Filer, Idaho.

Nevada Highway Patrol Trooper Joseph Fackrell said Tuesday that Short died on U.S. 93 about a little after 9 p.m. Thursday when he crashed into a Dodge Ram pickup truck pulling a trailer.

Short was pronounced dead at the scene about 15 miles north of Las Vegas.

Fackrell said initial reports that Short was trying to pass another car were incorrect.

The trooper says no one in the pickup was hurt.

MONTANA Senators want wolves to lose endangered status

BILLINGS — Montana's senators have introduced a bill to remove gray wolves in Idaho and Montana from protection under the federal Endangered Species Act.

The measure was introduced Tuesday by Democrats Max Baucus and Jon Tester.

It comes in response to a court order last month that restored endangered status to approximately 1,400 wolves in the two states.

Tester and Baucus say the animals' recovery in Montana and Idaho should not be tied to events in Wyoming, as U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy ruled. In Wyoming, wolves are still considered at risk because of a law that allows them to be shot on sight across most of the state.

A similar measure was introduced last week by Idaho Republican Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch.

IDAHO EPA fines E. Idaho company for water violations

BOISE — Federal environmental regulators say an Idaho Falls oil company has agreed to pay $15,000 in fines for alleged violations of the Clean Water Act.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced the penalty Monday for John C. Berry & Sons Inc. The company operates a storage and distribution facility that is located about 800 feet from the Snake River.

The alleged violations emerged during a 2009 inspection.

EPA inspectors say they identified several violations, including the company's failure to prepare an adequate spill prevention plan and inadequate secondary containment structures.

EPA official Kimberly Ogle says the Clean Water Act requires companies to show they have a solid plan in place to deal with spills.

Man injured in shooting at coffee house

POCATELLO — The man injured in a shooting outside a Pocatello coffee house has been identified as 25-year-old Ryan Mitchell.

Boise attorney Nels Mitchell tells the Idaho State Journal that his nephew had just moved to Pocatello from Idaho Falls last weekend and was at the coffee shop using the Internet Monday night when he was shot.

Relatives say Ryan Mitchell is the son of Rob and Nancy Mitchell of Boise.

Nels Mitchell says Ryan Mitchell was hospitalized in stable condition at the Portneuf Medical Center Tuesday. Relatives say Ryan Mitchell had taken a few steps outside when he was shot in the back.

Meanwhile, police continue to investigate the shooting. Investigators say the shot was reported about 10 p.m. when about eight customers were inside the coffee house.

Workers exposed to low levels of radiation

IDAHO FALLS — About 20 workers at a federal cleanup project in eastern Idaho were exposed to radioactive waste last February after a plywood box broke open, but site managers say the doses were below acceptable levels.

Bechtel BWXT Idaho, which is overseeing the multibillion dollar cleanup at the Idaho National Laboratory of waste stored here for decades, confirmed the incident this week.

The Idaho Falls Post-Register reports the highest dose received by a worker was 130 millirem, less than half the average yearly dose that Americans receive from background radiation.

In a statement from Bechtel, the company said the dose was only slightly more than a quarter of the project's acceptable annual dose.

"When these doses were added to the employees' accumulated dose for the year, they were still well below the (treatment project) limit," the statement read.

Still, since the incident, Bechtel has halted efforts to retrieve stored waste, on concern about the structural integrity of the containers.

It's working on alternatives to handling them safely.

Former IHOP manager pleads guilty to theft

IDAHO FALLS — The 31-year-old former manager of the International House of Pancakes in Ammon has pleaded guilty to faking a robbery to steal the restaurant's bank deposit.

Michael R. Baldwin pleaded guilty to burglary on Monday. Bonneville County prosecutors dismissed a grand theft charge as part of a plea agreement. Sentencing was set for Oct. 29.

Prosecutors say Baldwin originally told officers an unknown man robbed him at gunpoint outside the restaurant Jan. 25. Baldwin told officers the man took the bank deposit, struck him on the head with a gun and locked him in an enclosure around some garbage bins.

During Monday's hearing, Baldwin said he had gone into work that day with the intention of stealing the money.

Kids with lighter start apartment fire

BOISE — Boise Police and fire officials say two 4-year-olds playing with a lighter started a fire that destroyed four apartments and caused heavy smoke damage to two others.

The fire was reported at about 1 p.m. Monday. As firefighters began fighting the blaze, police evacuated apartments in the building and some nearby.

An investigation found the children used a lighter to set a box on fire and they then placed the box in a garbage can on a patio of one of the lower-level apartments. The fire apparently spread to other items on the patio and into the apartments.

A Boise police officer was taken to the hospital to be treated for smoke inhalation while a firefighter was treated for dehydration. Boise police say a resident told firefighters that a family dog died in the fire.

Idaho Falls man pleads guilty to killing mother

IDAHO FALLS — A 34-year-old Idaho Falls man has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, saying he stabbed his mother 17 times during an altercation.

Nathan N. Helburn entered his plea Monday in the March 5 death of 61-year-old Mary Helburn. Bonneville County Prosecutor Dane H. Watkins says sentencing is set for Nov. 1.

Prosecutors say Helburn and his mother had a history of violence, including a 2006 incident when she reported he knocked her down and placed his foot on her throat. The Post Register reports on the day Mary Helburn died, she told Idaho Falls police that her son grabbed her during an argument. She didn't press charges and was killed hours later.

Idaho needs to recession-proof its workforce

Idahoans’ paychecks were 5 percent smaller last year than in 2008 – one of the steepest declines in the nation. That says something about the quality of jobs in this state.

The Census Bureau reports that median income in Idaho fell by 4.9 percent from 2008 to 2009. It slid 2.9 percent nationally.

Based on the agency American Community Surveys, the median household income was $44,926 in Idaho. Nationwide, it was $50,221.

Another report from the Census Bureau shows that women in Idaho are among the nation’s lowest wage earners. Median earnings for Idaho women were $29,122 last year – 72 percent of the $40,440 median earnings for men. Women are paid less in just five states.,

Perhaps as a consequence, the number of Idahoans living below the poverty threshold in 2009 rose to 216,115, or 14.3 percent of the state’s population. That’s up from 191,704 people, or 12.9 percent, in 2008.

All of which suggests the state isn’t creating enough good-paying jobs and the kinds of jobs – in tech, health care and information technology – more likely to withstand an economic downturn.

Of the 614,520 Idahoans with a job, only 12,900 – 2.1 percent – work in computer and mathematical occupations, according to the Idaho Department of Labor. The average wage is $27.38 an hour. As a whole, Idahoans earn an average of $18.22 an hour.

A little more than 30,000 Idahoans – 4.9 percent of the labor force – work as health care practitioners and in health tech occupations. They make an average of $31.41 an hour.

There are plenty of factors that explain why there aren’t more jobs in occupations critical to Idaho’s future, but the biggest reason is education. From kindergarten through graduate school, it just isn’t the priority it should be in this state.

It isn’t enough that our colleges and universities produce quality graduates with the skill-sets employers need. There must also be a continuing commitment to excellence – including education funding – from the governor on down to school board members in communities such as Bliss or Three Creek.

Because when it comes right down to it, the most important thing Idaho has to sell potential employers is the quality of our workforce.

How the Dems lost the working class

At a forum last week on jobs and the economy, a 30-year-old recent law school graduate who said he had been inspired by President Obama posed a straightforward question. It seemed to stump the president. “Is the American dream dead for me?” he asked.

Joan C. Williams

Obama’s reply was strangely bloodless. He talked about people who were “treading water,” but then he got bogged down in details about student loans. He didn’t seem to connect with the frustration and pain he was hearing.

With even the president’s fans talking to him this way, it’s no surprise that the Democrats are in trouble as the midterm elections approach. The party seems incapable of getting its message across to a key group of voters: those who feel that the American dream is out of their reach.

Where the Democrats are failing to connect, the Tea Party is succeeding. That rising conservative movement has been extraordinarily good at tapping into the fury of American families who are neither rich nor poor, whose median income is $64,000 and who make up more than half of the nation’s households.

For two generations, the Democrats have failed to relate to white working-class voters. Black working-class voters never abandoned the party, but the percentage of working-class whites who identified as Democrats fell from 60 percent in the mid-1970s to 40 percent in the mid-1990s. George W. Bush won his two presidential elections with landslides among white working-class men, while Obama lost among white working-class voters by 18 percentage points in 2008, roughly the same margin by which Al Gore lost them in 2000.

Democrats need to understand why Republicans have been so successful at court-ing working-class whites – and why Democrats have been consistently unable to do so. Let’s start with the Tea Party’s battle cry to “restore America.”

Restore what, exactly? For two generations after World War II, a blue-collar man could support his family; buy a house, car and washing machine; and send his kids to good public schools. The typical blue-collar household in 1973 was more than twice as well off as the equivalent household 25 years earlier. With the economy booming, the Democrats focused on universal social programs and provided Social Security, unemployment insurance, VA and FHA mortgages, educational benefits for veterans, good public schools and universities, and Medicare.

Then the economy shifted. The wages of high-school-educated men fell by nearly a fourth in the 1980s and 1990s. Family income fell less, but only because families sent wives into the labor force. While this was happening, the Democrats’ social justice concerns moved away from universal economic entitlements and toward race, gender, the environment and gay rights.

When Democrats did address economic hardship, they focused on the poor through programs such as welfare, housing subsidies, Head Start and Medicaid. These programs mean that “the have-a-littles fight the have-nots” – a description that a Brooklyn lawyer in the 1970s gave Jonathan Rieder in his book “Canarsie.” A working-class housewife added: “The taxes go to the poor, not to us. ... The middle-income people are carrying the cost of liberal social programs on their backs.” That captures the enduring divide between working class voters and the Democratic Party.

In a country where it is so difficult to pass any social program, it may seem sensible to focus on the neediest. But politically, that has proved shortsighted – a program for the poor alone is a poor program. Everyone likes universal initiatives; that’s why trimming Social Security is the third rail of American politics. But means-tested programs, aimed at the poorest, fuel class conflict.

Democratic leaders can’t seem to speak to working-class concerns in a way that doesn’t alienate the very people they’re trying to reach. Having ceded this cultural ground, they need to win it back.

Workers value directness as an expression of personal integrity. Obama’s silver tongue highlights his elite education, while Sarah Palin’s inarticulateness confirms her working-class bona fides. Remember when she wrote notes on her hand? She was just waiting for the elite to make fun of her – a trap the president’s press secretary obligingly fell into.

Republicans destroyed the New Deal coalition by appealing explicitly to white working-class culture in many instances, from Richard Nixon’s talk about urban crime to George W. Bush’s talk about family values. Democrats need to find ways to express their genuine respect for working-class morality, something they can do without abandoning key commitments on issues such as same-sex marriage and the environment.

Democrats must show that they understand the pain and angst of the working class. They need to remind people that health-care reform wasn’t about the poorest of the poor – they were already covered. Rather, the effort was aimed at working families who couldn’t afford care.

Joan Williams is a professor at the University of California’s Hastings College of the Law. She wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

Academic freedom: The Obama edition

Raise your hand if you believe government has too little involvement in our lives. Put down your hands, members of the Obama administration.

During a previous political uprising in the 1980s, academic institutions managed to fend off conservative attacks on some of the subjects taught on their campuses – from “peace studies” to kinky sexual practices, to bad history – with cries of “academic freedom.” Where are those cries now that the federal government is on the verge of regulating the content of subject matter on college campuses and changing the way these institutions are accredited?

According to the Centennial Institute, <http://www.ccu.edu/centennial/>, a proposed new rule by the U.S. Department of Education “would place private colleges and universities under the ultimate control of state governments, rather than independent accrediting agencies. The notice of proposed rule-making was posted in the Federal Register on June 18 for a public comment period ending Aug. 2. It could take effect as soon as November.”

Former U.S. Sen. Bill Armstrong, now president of Colorado Christian University, wrote a letter to Education Secretary Arne Duncan on July 30. In it, he warned of an “all-out politicization of American higher education, endangering academic freedom, due process and First Amendment rights.”

The American Council on Education, in a letter of its own, warned of “heavy compliance burdens” and “regulations that appear to overrule state law.”

Armstrong says the attempt by the government to regulate curricula

“is part of an unprecedented power grab in which government has already moved to dominate such industries as automobiles, energy, health care, banking, home loans and student loans – and now seeks dominance over the colleges and universities themselves.”

Two Colorado Republican congressmen, Doug Lamborn and Mike Coffman, have also sent letters to DOE in which they noted the proposed ruling would undermine “long-established independent accrediting agencies” (Lamborn) and potentially involve the government “in setting course requirements, quality measures, faculty qualifications and various mandates about how and what to teach.” (Coffman).

Imagine the outcry if someone identified with the tea party movement had made similar demands of a Republican administration concerning what is taught at Harvard or UC Berkeley. There would be protests in the quads and a lawsuit by the ACLU.

Conservatives have long believed that most universities are part of an “iron triangle” (along with big media and government) that keeps liberals and secularists in power. Controlling what is taught in schools, rather than encouraging true academic freedom, has been a successful strategy for shaping – some would say twisting – young minds and directing them in accordance with what statisticians and “living constitution” advocates believe.

If imposing outside agendas – from textbook content to course selection – is supposedly bad when conservatives do it (mostly in reaction to the liberal assault on any ideas that conflict with theirs), why is it not equally onerous when liberals push for state control and the dictation of course content at private colleges and universities?

California used to work like America should

Sometimes it's hard to remember what good government looks like: government that disciplines itself but looks to the long term; government that inspires trust; government that promotes social mobility without busting the budget.

That kind of government existed for decades right here in California. Between 1911 and the '60s, California had a series of governors — like Hiram Johnson, Earl Warren, Goodwin Knight and Pat Brown — who were pro-market and pro-business, but also progressive reformers.

They rode a great wave of prosperity, and people flocked to the Golden State, but they used the fruits of that prosperity in a disciplined way to lay the groundwork for even more growth. They built an outstanding school and university system. They started a series of gigantic public works projects that today are seen as engineering miracles. These included monumental water projects, harbors and ports, the sprawling highway system and even mental health facilities.

They disdained partisanship. They continually reorganized government to make it more businesslike and cost effective. "Thus," the historian Kevin Starr has written, "California progressivism contained within itself both liberal and conservative impulses, as judged by the standards of today."

Most important, California progressives focused on the middle class. By the end of these years, California enjoyed the highest living standards in the country. The core of the state's strength was in the suburbs. Between 1945 and 1950 alone, the San Fernando Valley doubled in population. In one 12-month period, between 1959 and 1960, Valley residents applied for 6,000 swimming pool permits.

In fits and starts, California's progressive model has been abandoned. The state's current economic decline and political stagnation is a result of that abandonment. Now California government has all the dysfunction that mark national government, but at a more advanced stage.

Both parties helped kill off California's pro-market progressivism. Some assaults came from the left. First, there was the growing power of the public sector employee unions. These unions began lobbying for richer salaries and pensions. That, of course, is their job. But in the 1970s, governors started caving in. Money that could have gone into development went into prison guard benefits. Infrastructure spending, for example, has dropped from 20 percent of the state budget to 3 percent.

Then there was the growing power of the environmental movement. In the 1960s, environmental groups protested against the excesses of the infrastructure boom. Many of their complaints were absolutely legitimate. But over the years, environmental concern transmogrified into a "small is beautiful" ideology. A new cadre of activists arose — hostile to suburbia, skeptical of capitalism and eager to impose greater regulations and costs on small businesses.

As Joel Kotkin of Chapman University has pointed out, the interests of the affluent class along the coasts began to crowd out the interests of the middle-class suburbanites and agricultural workers further inland. "The result," he writes, "is two separate California realities: a lucrative one for the wealthy and for government workers, who are largely insulated from economic decline; and a grim one for the private-sector middle and working classes, who are fleeing the state."

Another assault on California progressivism came from the right. Conservatives refused to acknowledge the public sector's role in creating the state's prosperity. With Proposition 13 and other measures that cut taxes, they cut off revenue and pushed through structural reforms, making it hard for future administrations to raise funds. Many on the right became unwilling to think creatively about using government to promote prosperity.

The result is a state in crisis. Eighty-two percent of Californians say they believe their state is heading in the wrong direction, according to this week's University of Southern California/Los Angeles Times survey. State growth has lagged behind national growth. Unemployment is at 12.4 percent statewide and at catastrophic levels in the Central Valley. More people are leaving California for Oklahoma and Texas than came here during the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s. Tom Joad is giving up.

Meanwhile, the political set is an embarrassment. As jobs disappear, legislators are fixated on transgender rights and deals for lobbyists. Legislators are polarized and gridlocked. The pension system is $300 billion in the red, and the state hops from one fiscal crisis to the next.

The answer is to return to the tradition of pro-market progressivism that built modern California in the first place. Except this time, it can't be about building up the '50s-style suburbs. It needs to focus on supporting the immigrant entrepreneurs, averting state bankruptcy and unleashing the industrial and agricultural base.

The antigovernment conservatives and the unions have built institutions and bases of support. The heirs to the pro-market progressive tradition have not. What's needed is not a revolution, but a restoration and a modernization of what California once had.

Your friendly, federal banker

The banks were saved by the American people. Now who will save the people from the banks?

Last week, in a rare and possibly fleeting victory for the little guy, Ally Financial Inc.'s mortgage-servicing unit temporarily halted evictions tied to foreclosures in 23 states. This came after some attorneys for homeowners caught the company saying things that weren't true in its court filings.

There's no sense complaining to the federal government about Ally's conduct, though. That's because the Treasury Department is the company's majority shareholder, after spending $17.2 billion of bailout money on Ally under the Troubled Asset Relief Program.

While the Treasury's policy is to stay out of the company's day-to-day affairs, the mess at Ally offers a fine example of why TARP is so politically unpopular.

In Florida and many other states, the law requires lenders and mortgage-servicing companies to jump through numerous hoops before they're allowed to foreclose on a person's home. These include having employees provide local courts with sworn, notarized statements about customers' loans that they personally know to be true. These pesky requirements proved too much for Ally to follow.

So acknowledged a 41-

year-old middle manager at Ally's GMAC Mortgage unit, Jeffrey Stephan, during a December 2009 deposition, in which he estimated that he signed "a round number of 10,000" affidavits and other foreclosure documents a month. Stephan, a team leader overseeing 13 people in the company's foreclosure department, said he relied on outside law firms to verify the records' accuracy, rather than checking the facts himself. Nor was a notary present when he signed the affidavits, which were used in the process of repossessing homes and evicting residents.

Ally, the former General Motors unit that used to be called GMAC Inc., says such problems were merely technical defects, albeit unfortunate and regrettable ones. There will be "no interruption in new foreclosures," the company said in a Sept. 20 press release, as if this were supposed to provide reassurance. Meanwhile, some Florida law firms representing the company have withdrawn affidavits signed by Stephan. The Florida attorney general's office says it's investigating.

Back in December 2009, the head of the TARP program, Herbert Allison, told Congress the government had no intention of getting involved in the daily management of the companies it bailed out. But the government's policy is clearer now: We have to let these bailed-out banks keep screwing the American people, in order to keep the American people from getting screwed on their investments in these bailed-out banks.

If this helps preserve the value of Cerberus Capital Management's 14.9 percent stake in Ally, oh well. Hold your nose, we're told, because it's for the greater good. And never mind that this private-equity firm's chairman happens to be a former Treasury secretary, John Snow. Just optics, you know.

It's not as though the government is asserting its full rights as a 56.3 percent shareholder of Ally, either. Under the terms of Ally's bailout, the Treasury received the right to name four directors to Ally's nine-member board. So far, Treasury has appointed only one. Then again, if Treasury had four seats on the board, its hands might seem even dirtier.

It makes no difference how many loan-modification programs the government creates, or what new consumer-protection agency Elizabeth Warren gets hired to lead. As long as the Treasury is supporting a company such as Ally, Americans will be right to conclude the government is two-faced and working against their own best interests.

The problem of mortgage companies filing false court documents stretches beyond Ally. In August, for instance, a Florida circuit court judge blocked a Jacksonville foreclosure by Washington Mutual and JPMorgan Chase, which had purchased the failed lender's assets. The judge, Jean Johnson, wrote that WaMu and its law firm "committed fraud on this court." As Bloomberg News reported on Sept. 21, JPMorgan had presented a document that showed WaMu had bought the mortgage, when actually it was still owned by Fannie Mae.

While JPMorgan has repaid its TARP money, Ally hasn't. Given the government's investments, it would be hard to fault anyone for thinking the Treasury condones this sort of behavior.

This is what infuriates so many Americans about the bailout culture. When banks break the rules, consumers are supposed to be able to turn to the government for help. When Ally breaks the rules, though, it's the Treasury's own company that's doing it.

Our government isn't supposed to prey on its own people in the name of protecting our investments. It never should have gotten in this business in the first place.

Otter balanced budget, did not raise taxes

I wasn't surprised when I read Ben Botkin's article of Sept. 15 about candidate Allred's camp "putting down GOP roots."

We are beginning to see the Obama Republicans out of the woodwork and showing their true colors; most of them are actually Democrats who know they can't be elected as such in Twin Falls County. I think the voters will see these "Republicrats'" backing of Allred as nothing new.

As for me and my family, we will vote for Butch Otter, the candidate that balanced the Idaho State budget and did not raise our taxes to do it, like the Democrats (including Republicrat Schwarzenegger) have done in California and New York!

Notice of Request for Public Comment on Workplan to Remediate Land at Howard Preserve, Bellevue

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (Department) has scheduled a 30-day period of availability wherein the public may request to review and submit comments on the Draft Remedial Action Workplan for the Howard Preserve, Bellevue, Idaho.

Howard Preserve is located west of and adjacent to the downtown core of Bellevue and is bounded by the Wood River and an irrigation canal. A 1.25-acre portion of Howard Preserve was used as a municipal landfill in the early 1900s. Waste materials and subsequent use of Howard Preserve for limited agriculture after the landfill was closed caused a portion of the property to be contaminated with lead. About 2,000 square feet of Howard Preserve adjacent to a walking trail is proposed for remediation.

The purpose of the workplan is to describe the cleanup alternatives considered, the proposed cleanup method selected, and its implementation. Following cleanup, the site will be revegetated and maintained as a nature preserve.

The draft workplan is available for review on DEQ's Web site at www.deq.idaho.gov/public/comment.cfm and at:

Tax changes ahead for homeowners

2011 exemption will change tax bills, depending on value of home

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

BOISE — Depending on the value of your home, your tax bill may decrease with the 2011 homeowner’s exemption.

Then again, it may rise. The maximum homeowner’s exemption for 2011 will decrease to $92,040, according to calculations released

Tuesday by the Idaho State Tax Commission. The maximum exemption for 2010 is $101,153.

It is the second homeowner’s exemption decrease in two years and the largest.

“The decrease reflects the recent state of the housing market,” said Alan Dornfest, property tax policy supervisor for the Tax Commission. That state is one of falling values and an ailing housing market.

Idaho law exempts 50 percent of assessed value from taxation for qualified homeowners for their primary dwelling and up to one acre of land. However, the exemption can’t exceed a maximum value that changes each year based on the Idaho Housing Price Index, which is published by the Federal Housing Finance Agency.

What does this all mean for Idaho homeowners?

“There will be no change in the amount of the homeowner’s exemption for anyone whose home has a 2010 market value under $184,000,” Dornfest said.

The end result is that owners of the lower-valued homes could pay less, while those with higher-valued homes could pay more, he said. “It is shifting taxes around and it doesn’t increase or decrease the total levy.”

For example, if you own a home assessed at $200,000, your tax bill could go up.

That’s because with the exemption maximum set at $92,040, you won’t get the full 50 percent off, or $100,000, which means you might face a bigger tax bill for your property compared to years past, said Gerald Bowden, Twin Falls County assessor.

If your home is assessed at $100,000, however, you would get the full 50 percent off, so your bill may not change.

“...the majority of properties are probably under that. So they shouldn’t have that much change,” he said.

Bowden said the calculations include an overall state average of last year’s sales, driven by Ada County because of its population stronghold.

“So basically what it is saying that across the state of Idaho, the values were going down last year,” he said.

Southern Idaho, however, didn’t suffer as large a downturn, so property owners received the full exemption benefits.

“I’m kind of surprised it (the maximum) came down as much as it did,” Bowden said.

Cassia County Assessor Marty Holland said the

Weddings in 2009 at record low

By Hope Yen
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — As the recession shook Americans’ confidence last year, new figures show that weddings for people 18 and older dropped to the lowest point in over a hundred years.

A broad array of new Census Bureau data released Tuesday documents the far-reaching impact of a business slump that experts say technically ended in June 2009: a surging demand for food stamps, considerably fewer homeowners and people doubling up in housing to save money.

The new figures show, among other things, that the number of people getting married fell to a record low level in 2009, with just 52 percent of adults 18 and over saying they were joined in wedlock, compared to 57 percent in 2000.

Marriage rates have been declining for years due to rising divorce and an increase in unmarried couples living together. Demographers say the current downturn may now be causing more younger adults

“Given the scope of the recent recession, many more couples are likely to choose cohabitation over marriage in the coming years.”

— Mark Mather, associate vice president of the Population Reference Bureau to postpone marriage as many struggle to find work and resist making long-term commitments.

“Given the scope of the recent recession, many more couples are likely to choose cohabitation over marriage in the coming years,” said Mark Mather, associate vice president of the Population Reference Bureau.

On the positive side: Americans spent about 36 minutes fewer minutes in the office per week and were stuck in less traffic, although the reason was largely because millions of them had lost jobs or were scraping by with part-time work.

The government revealed that the income gap between the richest and poorest Americans grew last year by the largest margin ever, stark evidence of the impact the long recession starting in 2007 has had in upending lives and putting the young at greater risk.

The top-earning 20 percent of Americans — those making more than $100,000 each year — received 49.4 percent of all income generated in the U.S., compared with the 3.4 percent earned by the bottom 20 percent of wage-earners who fell below the poverty line, according to the newly released Census figures. That ratio of 14.5-to-1 was an increase from 13.6 in 2008 and nearly double a low of 7.69 in 1968.

A different measure, the international Gini index, found U.S. income inequality at its highest level since the Census Bureau began tracking household income in 1967. The U.S. also has the greatest disparity among Western industrialized nations.

At the top, the wealthiest 5 percent of Americans, who earn more than $180,000, added slightly to their annual incomes last year, government data show. Families at the $50,000 median level slipped lower.

Three states — New York, Connecticut and Texas — and the District of Columbia had the largest gaps in rich and poor, disparities that exceeded the national average. Similar income gaps were evident in large cities such as New York, Miami, Los Angeles, Boston and Atlanta, home to both highly paid financial and high-tech jobs as well as clusters of poorer immigrant and minority residents.

On the other end of the scale, Alaska, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho and Hawaii had the smallest income gaps.

“Income inequality is rising, and if we took into account tax data, it would be even more,” said Timothy Smeeding, a University of Wisconsin-Madison professor who specializes in poverty. “More than other countries, we have a very unequal income distribution where compensation goes to the top in a winner-takes-all economy.”

FedEx, Delta shipments signal holiday sales pickup

By Shobhana Chandra and Anthony Feld

A pickup in shipments to stores by FedEx Corp. and Delta Air Lines Inc. signals a brighter holiday sales season for retailers.

Delta, which handles more air freight than any other U.S. airline, will have a “perfectly decent” holiday season, said Neel Shah, cargo unit vice president. Shipments are “solid” at FedEx, the world’s second-largest package-shipping company, Chief Executive Officer Fred Smith said on a Sept. 16 conference call.

“It’s a lot better than last year, our orders are way ahead,” Bruce Rockowitz, president of Hong Kong-based Li & Fung, said in an interview on Sept. 17 in New York. The company is the biggest supplier of clothes and toys to U.S. retailers such as Walmart Stores Inc. and Target Corp.

Shipments are being fueled by retail inventories that are close to record lows at the current sales pace, meaning stores must

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Hewlett-Packard sees 2011 earnings topping analyst projections

SAN FRANCISCO — Hewlett-Packard Co. expects its earnings in the upcoming year to exceed analyst projections.

The world’s largest technology company offered the rosy outlook Tuesday during a meeting with securities analysts. HP didn’t give any guidance on when it will appoint a new CEO.

HP says it expects earnings for the year through October 2011 to be $5.05 to $5.15 per share, excluding certain items. That’s up by as much as 14 percent from this year.

Analysts were forecasting $4.99 per share, according to Thomson Reuters.

Next year’s revenue is expected to total $131.5 billion to $133.5 billion, an increase of 5 percent to 7 percent.

HP is expected to announce a new CEO soon to replace Mark Hurd, who was ousted after a scandal that erupted in early August.

47 House Democrats side with Republicans on investment taxes

WASHINGTON — Forty-seven House Democrats — enough to give Republicans a victory on taxes if the issue came to a vote — are breaking ranks with President Barack Obama by calling on party leaders to continue Bush-era tax cuts on investment income.

The lawmakers, led by Rep. John Adler, D-N.J., have sent a letter to House Speaker Nancy Pelosi saying they strongly support extending the current tax rates on capital gains and dividends.

Tax cuts enacted in 2003 set the top tax rate on capital gains and dividends at 15 percent. Those tax cuts expire at the end of the year, and Obama wants to let the top tax rate on capital gains and dividends increase to 20 percent for individuals making more than $200,000 and married couples making more than $250,000.

The letter shows that many Democrats, some of them vulnerable in the upcoming elections, are unwilling to follow Obama on taxes.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 46.10, or 0.4 percent, to 10,858.14. It's up 8.4 percent so far in September, and extraordinary showing for a month that is historically a weak one for the market. If the Dow can climb above 11,000 it would be a strong indication the market is ready to break out of the broad trading range it's been stuck in since hitting its 2010 high in late April, Heider said. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 5.54, or 0.5 percent, to 1,147.70, while the Nasdaq composite index rose 9.82, or 0.4 percent, to 2,379.59. Treasury prices rose after the weak report on consumer confidence, driving interest rates lower. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note, which is often used to set interest rates on loans, fell to 2.47 percent from 2.53 percent late Monday. Rising stocks outpaced falling ones two to one on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 4.1 billion shares.

Hundreds feared dead in landslide

Mexican officials: No deaths confirmed in landslide, 11 missing

By Iztli Martinez
Associated Press writer

OAXACA, Mexico — A huge mudslide first thought to have buried hundreds of people has left only 11 missing and there are no confirmed dead, authorities said Tuesday night, backing off earlier predictions of a catastrophe in Mexico's rain-soaked southern state of Oaxaca.

Federal Interior Minister Francisco Blake and Oaxaca Gov. Ulises Ruiz both confirmed the drastically reduced toll from the slide that hit the town of Santa Maria de Tlahuitoltepec early Tuesday.

"So far no one is confirmed dead. Eleven are missing," Ruiz told The Associated Press. "We hope that this type of information will continue and they (the missing) will be found."

Initial reports from Santa Maria de Tlahuitoltepec, a rural mountain town 373 miles southeast of Mexico City, said a hillside collapsed on hundreds of sleeping residents after several days of heavy rains in the aftermath of a hurricane and tropical storm that hit Mexico and Central America.

Civil protection authorities first reported seven people killed and at least 100 missing, but Ruiz later reported casualties as four dead and 12 missing.

Communications with the town were difficult after the pre-dawn slide. Soldiers and civil protection and Red Cross workers couldn't reach the area for nearly 10 hours because mud and rocks blocked roads and a bridge was damaged, while bad weather prevented helicopters from being used.

President Felipe Calderon reported on his Twitter account Tuesday afternoon that an army commander and 30 soldiers had reached the town by foot and that there was a lot of damage, but "perhaps not of the magnitude initially reported."

Donato Vargas, an official in Santa Maria de Tlahuitoltepec reached by a satellite telephone, had said as many as 300 homes were believed to be buried, and residents who made it out early in the morning said they had no success digging out neighbors.

"We have been using a backhoe but there is a lot of mud. We can't even see the homes, we can't hear shouts, we can't hear anything," Vargas said.

N. Korean leader's youngest son promoted, seen as heir

By Jean H. Lee
Associated Press writer

SEOUL, South Korea — The youngest son of North Korean leader Kim Jong Il was elected to his first prominent posts in the ruling Workers' Party, state media said early Wednesday, putting him well on the path to succeed his father as leader of the nuclear-armed nation.

The announcement of Kim Jong Un's ascension to the party's Central Committee and military commission came a day after news that Kim Jong Il had made him a four-star general — a major promotion that appeared to set into motion a plan to eventually put the little-known, Swiss-schooled 20-something at the helm of the communist country.

Kim Jong Il has led the nation with absolute authority since taking over in 1994 upon the death of his father, North Korea founder Kim Il Sung, in the communist world's first father-to-son transfer of power.

Speculation has been brewing about another dynastic succession since the 68-year-old reportedly suffered a stroke in August 2008. There are concerns that his sudden death without a leadership plan in place could spark chaos in the nation of 24 million that he rules under a "military-first" policy.

Noticeably thinner and grayer, Kim Jong Il has resumed touring factories and farms but is said to be suffering from diabetes and kidney trouble.

However, none of his sons appears ready to step into the limelight. The eldest, Jong Nam, spends much of his time outside the country and may have thwarted his chances by getting caught trying to sneak into Japan on a fake passport in the 1990s. The father thinks the middle son, Jong Chol, is too girl-ish, according to a 2003 memoir by a former sushi chef who worked for the leader.

Kim Jong Un is believed to be only 27 and until this week held no known political or military positions. However, he was always his father's favorite, and the most like him in looks and ambition, the chef wrote in "I Was Kim Jong Il's Cook" under the pen name Kenji Fujimoto.

The son has been kept well under wraps since childhood, and the mere mention of Kim Jong Un's name in state media caused ripples among North Korea watchers looking for confirmation that Kim Jong Il had anointed the young man as his successor.

Taste Germany at Kiwanis Club's annual OctoberFeast

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Lederhosen aren't required attire for the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club's OctoberFeast. But don't be surprised if the live band's musicians are wearing them.

The annual OctoberFeast, set for Oct. 6 at the Turf Club in Twin Falls, features the same quintessential German meal — smoked German-style sausage, sauerkraut, Rotkohl and boiled potatoes with pearl onions — that has been served since the fundraising dinner's inception many years ago.

"This is probably one of the most authentic German meals available in Twin Falls," said club member Ray Parrish. "All of it is very, very traditional."

Parrish lived in Germany in the early 1970s, and he brought back a fondness for the country's food and a few recipes as well. His recipe for Rotkohl has been an OctoberFeast staple.

"I was introduced to Rotkohl in a family home," Parrish said. "I fell in love with the color, texture and flavor of the dish, and it has become a favorite in my own home. We eat it throughout the year."

Rotkohl features cooked, shredded red cabbage simmered in a rich sauce; the clove and apple flavors play well with the cabbage, and its dark red presentation contrasts nicely with sauerkraut.

While the Rotkohl is prepared from scratch, the Kiwanis Club simply upgrades storebought sauerkraut for the event, again using Parrish's insight.

"While the sauerkraut is cooking on the stove we'll add caraway to it, to taste," Parrish said. "This year we're going to add crushed pineapple into the dish as well, because that is a very traditional German presentation and it tastes good, too."

A dinner roll and boiled yellow new potatoes with pearl onions round out the meal's side dishes.

Don Olson, general manager of Soran Restaurants, said the potato dish is basic, consisting of a ratio of about 8-to-1, potatoes to pearl onions.

"We just boil the potatoes in water with a little bit of salt and butter," Olson said. "When they are done you just drain and serve; people can season with salt and pepper to taste."

Anchoring the meal are two varieties of Falls Brand sausages: regular Smoked Sausage, an old-fashioned German favorite, and the Hot Smoked Sausage, with red pepper flakes and ground red pepper that give a kick of lively flavor.

Many club members help grill the pre-cooked sausages just hours before the meal is served.

"We use the big, long grill set out behind the Turf Club, filled with charcoal," said member Tony Kevan. "The sausages are just grilled over the charcoal until they are heated through."

You still might have to go to Germany to enjoy one of the country's popular beers, but domestic beers are available for purchase at the dinner. Soft drinks come with the purchase of a meal.

"Personally, it's not quite Oktoberfest to me if you don't have a pint to go with your meal, so that's probably the way I'll go," said Ed Ditlefsen, club member.

The flavors create a unique aroma that greets the hundreds of dinner guests typically served, and most of the club's 85 or so members chip

TWIN FALLS KIWANIS OCTOBERFEAST ROTKOH

- 1 head red cabbage, shredded
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vinegar
- For sauce:
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/3 cup vinegar
- 1/3 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/8 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/3 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 medium onion, sliced
- 1/4 cup applesauce
- 1 pinch ground cloves

Bring 2 inches of water, with 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon vinegar, to boil. Add cabbage and cook for 10 minutes until tender. Drain.

For sauce, combine water, vinegar, sugar, flour, salt, pepper, onion, applesauce and cloves in pan over medium-high heat and cook, stirring frequently until mixture thickens (about five minutes).

Pour sauce mixture over hot cabbage, stir together gently and heat thoroughly. Simmer one hour to allow flavors to blend before serving.

in to prepare and serve the meal.

"It's a lot of work but a lot of fun," said publicity chairwoman Norma Blass. "The dinner tastes great, and the proceeds go to a good cause. Our club supports many youth activities in Twin Falls."

Chef John Besh holds the French Crawfish Boil, which includes Spanish tarragon and Tennessee truffles, in his New Orleans restaurant. Southern cooking, once thought of as a cuisine in which everything was fried, or overcooked, or soaked in gravy or full of fat, has taken on a new luster and sparked a growing interest.

NEW ORLEANS — Contemporary southern cooking is getting a taste of something fresh — respect.

Even above the Mason-Dixon Line, the food of the South no longer is about fried chicken and barbecue cliches. It's a celebration of local, vibrant produce and carefully raised meats; of exotic ingredients like collards, okra, pork bellies and grits; and of traditions and cultures as deep, varied and flavorful as the foods.

"The South has always been cyclically hip," says John T. Edge, director of Southern Foodways Alliance. "But now it's become a permanent condition. America is coming to appreciate the range of culture and tradition in the South."

That appreciation has made it possible to dine on great down-home food in places as varied as Oregon, Illinois and New York.

At Hungry Mother in Cambridge, Mass., for example, chef Barry Maiden serves up what he and his partners call "contemporary American" food. The menu sports cornmeal-dredged catfish and other southern classics that draw on Maiden's childhood in rural southern Virginia.

"For a few years now I think southern cooking has become known as a serious type of cooking," Maiden said.

That interest also has produced a flood of award-winning cookbooks and chefs that can do better than just hold their own against the rest of the country.

This year's James Beard Foundation cookbook awards, for example. All three of the finalists for top American book were southern — "My New Orleans," by John Besh; "Real Cajun," by Donald Link; and "The Lee Bros. Simple Fresh Southern," by Matt Lee and Ted Lee.

Food & Wine magazine even devoted its September issue to the region and its food.

"We've seen a huge rise in interest in the food of the South outside the South," says Dana Cowin, the magazine's editor-in-chief. "We're seeing an expansion of ideas for southern food being adopted by cooks in other areas. There are people doing wonderful southern cooking in New York, in Boston, in Chicago."

In many ways, the South has benefited from a growing national interest in local and crafted foods.

"A few years ago you used to go to the farmer's market and everything was from Florida or California," says Kathleen Purvis, food editor at the Charlotte Observer and chairwoman of the James Beard Book Awards Committee. "Now it's locally

Molasses layer cake with apples is rich and sweet

The Associated Press

This dense, rich cake from Joan Aller's cookbook "Cider Beans, Wild Greens and Dandelion Jelly" (a collection of recipes from southern Appalachia), is remarkably easy to make, but incredibly flavorful.

She says it is based on cakes assembled at family reunions and other celebrations in the region. She says each family would bring a single layer. The collection of layers then would be assembled into a single cake at the event.

For most of us, the two layers in this recipe probably will be plenty.

MOUNTAIN MOLASSES STACK CAKE

Start to finish: 1 hour 40 minutes (40 minutes active). Servings: 8.

For the cake:

- 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter, room temperature
- 1 large egg
- 1/2 cup molasses
- 1/2 cup buttermilk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- For the filling:
- 2 cups finely chopped apples
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon

To make the cake, heat the oven to 350 degrees. Lightly oil and flour the bottoms of two 8-inch round cake pans.

In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to cream the brown sugar and butter until light.

Based on cakes assembled at family reunions in southern Appalachia, this cake is dense, rich and memorable.

Slowly add the egg and molasses, then blend well. Beat in the buttermilk, vanilla and nutmeg.

In a second bowl, sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Slowly add the flour mixture to the molasses mixture and mix until thoroughly incorporated. Pour half of the batter into each of the prepared cake pans. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the center of each cake comes out clean. Let the cakes cool in their pans on a wire rack.

While the cakes cool, make the filling. In a medium saucepan over medium, combine the apples and water. Cook, stirring occasionally, until the apples are tender. Stir in the brown sugar and cinnamon. Bring to a boil and cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens and is syrupy.

Place one of the cooled cake layers on a serving plate. Spread half of the filling on top. Place the second cake layer on top, then spread the remaining filling over it.

Lightly battered and fried tomatoes on the vine

The Associated Press

Fried whole cherry tomatoes may sound unusual, but they are beautiful and delicious. John Besh, author of the cookbook "My New Orleans," gives them a simple tempura-like batter and an easy aioli sauce for dipping.

Any small, cluster (on the vine) tomatoes work in this recipe.

FRIED TOMATOES WITH AIOLI

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 6 to 8.

For the aioli:

- 6 cloves garlic
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon ice water
- 2 egg yolks
- Salt
- 2 cups extra-virgin olive oil
- For the tomatoes:
- 1 quart olive or vegetable oil
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- Pinch salt
- 1 1/2 cups club soda
- 24 to 36 small cluster (on the vine) tomatoes

To make the aioli, in a food processor combine the garlic, lemon juice, water and egg yolks. Process until thick and evenly pureed. With the processor running, add a pinch of salt, then slowly drizzle in the olive oil. If the aioli looks oily, add a touch more ice water. The color should be pale yellow and the texture should be matte, not glossy. Set aside.

In a deep heavy-bottomed pot over medium-high, heat the oil to 350 degrees. Meanwhile, in a large bowl whisk together the flour and salt. Add the club soda, whisking gently to keep the batter fluffy. The batter will be thin.

Use scissors to cut the tomato vines to divide them into small clusters. Rinse the tomatoes and pat them dry.

Working in batches, dip each cluster into the batter, coating them all over, then carefully slip them into the hot oil. Fry the tomatoes until the batter is lacy, crisp and golden brown, about 1 minute. Using metal tongs or a slotted spoon, carefully transfer the tomatoes to paper towels to drain. Serve with aioli.

Watermelon and strawberry together in a simple sorbet

The Associated Press

Whether you're in the South, from the South, or never even been to the South, it's easy to appreciate this simple sorbet of pureed watermelon and strawberries from John Besh's cookbook "My New Orleans."

The secret to knowing whether you've added enough sugar to your sorbet? According to Besh, you just need to float an egg in the puree before you freeze it.

He says that if you float a clean egg (in the shell) in the mixture, you can tell whether you need to add more sugar (if the egg sinks) or more juice or water (if the egg floats high on the mixture). Ideally, the egg will float just at the surface, showing about a nickel-size spot of shell.

WATERMELON-STRAWBERRY SORBET

Start to finish: 10 minutes (plus freez- ing time). Servings: 6.

- 1 pint strawberries, hulled
- 1 cup diced, seeded watermelon
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1/2 cup sugar

In a blender, puree the strawberries, watermelon, lemon juice and sugar until smooth. Check that the puree has the correct amount of sugar. Add more sugar or juice if necessary.

Transfer the puree to the canister of an ice cream maker and process according to the manufacturer's instructions. Keep the sorbet in the freezer until ready to use.

grown for the most part, and that is certainly a reflection of southern cooking, which is closely tied to the land?"

She also thinks the interest isn't all that new, pointing out that Craig Claiborne was writing about the South during the '70s, and Joe Dabney won a Beard award in 1999 for his cookbook "Smokehouse Ham, Spoon Bread, & Scuppernong Wine."

In explaining the appeal, Edge points to the variety of southern cooking, which includes Cajun, Creole, soul and seafood.

"It's an area comparable in size to Western Europe," he says. "And it has the same range of cultures."

Television also has played a role, giving voice to advocates such as Paula Deen and her sons, Jamie and Bobby Deen, who have launched their own shows and cookbooks.

The scattering of southerners across the country that has taken place in recent years — some forced by Hurricane Katrina — may also account for some of the spread of down-home fare.

"I used to take the pimento cheese sandwiches my mother made for my lunch, the red velvet cakes for my birthday, the grits for Sunday breakfast for granted," says Bon Appetit magazine restaurant editor Andrew Knowlton.

Moving north made him appreciate the rich culinary traditions of the South, says Knowlton, who grew up in Atlanta.

"When chefs started focusing on local food, the South was a natural place for them to focus," he says. "Both in terms of flavor and tradition."

Because of that, Knowlton says he now can get such southern delights as boiled peanuts, deviled eggs and his beloved pimento cheese in cities from Portland, Ore., to Portland, Maine.

"And you practically can't find a restaurant now that isn't serving Anson Mills grits," he joked, referring to the Charleston, S.C., company that specializes in heirloom grains.

Besh says he sees the interest as a sign that the country's culinary appreciation is maturing, that Americans all over are taking pride in the nation's various cultures.

"We're finally comfortable with where we are as a country," he says. "We are more open to the traditions in this country now, and the South has remained true to those traditions, especially its food traditions."

MICHAEL TEMCHINE/For The Washington Post

A pork dish for fall

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

Pork tenderloin is so easy to cook that I find myself relying on it for dinner quite often. Consequently, I'm always trying to reinvent it.

Here, a rub is made from the same spices you might use to flavor an apple pie. Maple syrup is used as a glaze, and root vegetables are roasted in the pan alongside the pork. I serve the vegetables over the sliced pork, as I would a sauce. It's quick, cooked in one pan and rich with spices.

You can choose your own favorite root vegetables; parsnips are particularly good with the spices and maple syrup.

The pork can be seasoned, wrapped in plastic wrap and refrigerated for up to 12 hours in advance. The vegetables can be cut, covered and refrigerated for up to 24 hours.

CINNAMON-SPICE PORK TENDERLOIN WITH ROASTED ROOT VEGETABLES

6 to 8 servings

- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 pounds pork tenderloin, trimmed of silver skin and excess fat (2 tenderloins)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 3 pounds assorted root vegetables, such as carrots, parsnips, turnips and/or rutabaga, peeled and cut into 3/4-inch chunks
- 2 tablespoons maple syrup

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. You'll need a large roasting pan that can also go on the stove top.

Combine the cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg, pepper and half (1/8 teaspoon) of the salt in a small bowl. Rub the mixture over the pork tenderloins.

Heat the oil in the roasting pan set over medium-high heat. When the oil is hot, add the pork tenderloins; cook for 5 to 6 minutes, turning every 1 to 2 minutes to evenly brown the tenderloins on all sides. Turn off the heat.

Add the root vegetables to the pork in the roasting pan; sprinkle the vegetables with the remaining 1/8 teaspoon salt. Use a spatula to turn the vegetables around in whatever oil and spice mixture is in the bottom of the pan. Baste the pork with the maple syrup, drizzling some of it over the vegetables. Transfer the pan to the oven and roast for 20 to 25 minutes or until the internal temperature of the pork registers 165 degrees on an instant-read thermometer.

Remove from the oven; transfer the pork to a platter to rest and cover loosely with aluminum foil. Stir the vegetables around in the pan, turning them over; return to the oven and roast for 10 to 15 minutes, until the vegetables are tender and have browned on at least one side.

Use a sharp knife to slice the pork on the diagonal. Serve topped with the warm roasted vegetables.

Sunflower seeds bring crunch to roasted fish

By Cynthia A. Brown
Special to The Washington Post

Fried fish is delicious, but not an excellent choice for low-fat diets. Sunflower seeds give roasted fish a satisfying crunch and great flavor. Serving the fillets on a bed of greens lends fullness to the meal. The roasted grapes lend an unexpected punch of color.

Make extra roasted grapes to serve on top of butter pecan ice cream for dessert. One can only be good for so long!

CRUNCHY SUNFLOWER SEED FISH FILLETS WITH ARUGULA AND ROASTED GRAPES

4 servings

- Freshly squeezed juice from 1 lemon (about 3 tablespoons)
- 1 teaspoon honey
  - 1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
  - 1/2 cup olive oil
  - 2 cups seedless purple grapes, stemmed and rinsed
  - 1 teaspoon fresh thyme
  - 1 teaspoon grapeseed oil
  - 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
  - 2 large egg whites
  - 1/2 cup panko (Japanese-style) bread crumbs
  - 3 tablespoons sunflower seeds, toasted, plus more for optional garnish (see note)
  - 1 teaspoon dried thyme
  - 4 firm-fleshed fish fillets, such as mahi-mahi, 1/2- to 3/4-inch thick; 1 to 1 1/4 pounds total)
  - 4 cups arugula, washed, drained and dried

Freshly ground black pepper

Whisk together the lemon juice, honey, mustard and olive oil in a mixing bowl to form an emulsified vinaigrette.

Place a heavy baking sheet on the middle oven rack; preheat to 450 degrees.

Toss together the grapes, fresh thyme, grapeseed oil and salt and place on a cool baking sheet. (Put the grape mixture in the oven 2 minutes before the fish, if desired, to conserve energy.) Roast the grapes for 10 minutes or until the skin begins to blister. Pay close attention toward the end of the cooking time or you will end up with grape jam.

Use a fork to whisk the egg whites in a small bowl until slightly frothy.

Combine the panko bread crumbs, sunflower seeds and dried thyme in a shallow bowl or plate.

Working with one at a time, dip the fish fillets into the egg whites, then into the sunflower seed mixture. Place the fillets on a wire rack to dry for 10 minutes.

Remove the baking sheet from the oven once the temperature has reached 450 degrees; spray it with nonstick cooking oil spray. Carefully put the fillets on the hot baking sheet. Spray the tops of the fillets lightly with nonstick cooking oil spray. Roast for 8 minutes, or until the fish is just flaky.

Add the arugula to the vinaigrette and toss to coat evenly, then divide among individual plates. Top the greens with the roasted grape mixture, then place a roasted fillet on each portion. Season the fish lightly with salt and pepper to taste. Serve immediately.

Note: Toast the sunflower seeds in a small dry skillet over medium heat for 5 to 8 minutes until fragrant and lightly browned, stirring or shaking the skillet often to prevent burning. Cool completely.

A do-ahead chicken potpie for easy fall dinners

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

As summer ends and life gets back to its normal, hectic pace, it's good to have a couple tricks for getting dinner on the table without too much trouble.

This Mediterranean chicken and artichoke potpie has a golden filo pastry crust that envelopes a lemony filling of chicken, feta cheese, convenient canned artichoke hearts and rice. For the chicken you can use leftovers, the meat from a store-bought rotisserie bird or simply poach three or four chicken breasts.

Best of all, you can assemble the potpie when you have time, say on a Sunday, and have an effortless meal ready when you need it.

You can cover the unbaked pie and refrigerate for a day or two. Just add 10 minutes to the baking time when you're ready to cook it. You also can wrap the pie tightly in foil and freeze for up to three months. When ready, unwrap the still-frozen pie and prepare as indicated in the recipe, adding 15 to 20 minutes to the baking time.

MEDITERRANEAN CHICKEN AND ARTICHOKE POTPIE

Start to finish: 1 hour 10 minutes (30 minutes active). Servings: 8.

2 teaspoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 small yellow onion, chopped (1/2 cup)
3/4 cup uncooked converted white rice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt, or to taste

1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper, or to taste
1 1/2 cups water
14-ounce can artichoke hearts, drained
3 cups diced, cooked chicken
1 cup crumbled feta cheese
2 tablespoons chopped fresh oregano
2 teaspoons grated lemon zest
6 large (14-by-18-inch) sheets thawed filo dough
6 tablespoons butter, melted

In a medium saucepan over medium, heat the oil. Add the onion and cooked, stirring often, until softened and lightly browned, 3 to 5 minutes.

Add the rice, lemon juice, salt, pepper and water. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat to maintain a gentle simmer.

Cover and simmer the rice until tender and it has absorbed all the liquid, about 15 minutes. Transfer to a large bowl to cool slightly.

Heat the oven to 375 degrees.

Gently squeeze any excess liquid from the artichoke hearts, slice thinly and add to the rice. Add the chicken, feta, oregano and lemon zest. Stir to combine thoroughly.

Keeping the sheets of filo dough in a single stack, cut them in half crosswise to make 12 pieces. Cover the pieces with plastic wrap to prevent them from drying as you work.

Brush the bottom of a 9-by-13-inch baking dish with butter. Brush the top of a piece of filo with butter and set it in the prepared baking dish. Repeat with 5 more pieces of filo. Spread the chicken and rice filling in an even layer over the filo. Top with 6 more pieces of buttered filo.

Bake the pie for 35 to 40 minutes, or until the filo is crisp and golden. Let stand for 5 minutes to cool, then cut into squares to serve.

A hearty chowder without the fat

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

The term chowder usually brings to mind a steaming bowl of thick and chunky soup, often enriched with a generous amount of whole milk, or even cream.

It's that last part that can dishearten the diet-conscious diner. Soups and some stews can be a great way to fill up on low-calorie vegetables, proteins and liquid, leaving you satisfied without feeling stuffed. But too much cream, milk or sour cream can take the virtue right out of the meal.

Yet there are ways to have a creamy and healthful soup. For instance, consider starting with a base of pureed vegetables. Winter vegetables — such as butternut or butternut squash, pumpkin or even sweet potatoes — can be roasted to intensify the flavors, then run through a food mill, blender or food processor to make a velvety, creamy base.

Beans, pureed with a bit of broth or water, also make a thick, flavorful soup base. Use convenient canned beans, but be sure to rinse them under cold water to wash away some of the salt that is in the canning liquid.

Even tofu (the soft or silken variety) can be pureed to create a smooth and protein-rich foundation on which you can build a creamy soup with little fat and no dairy.

For this butternut squash and scallop chowder the secret to low-fat thickening comes from a snack food. Crumbled tortilla chips dissolve in the soup while it's cooking, adding plenty of body along with a layer of toasty corn flavor.

Jarred salsa is another secret to this satisfying chowder, bringing with it pre-diced vegetables and spicy seasoning, which helps make it possible to get this meal on the table in under 30 minutes on a busy weeknight.

Plump bay scallops are called for here, but you can substitute chunks of almost any white fish and if you like, make the soup vegetarian by omitting the seafood altogether and upping the amount of diced squash.

Kebab dinner in 35 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

One of eastern Africa's legacies from the period of British colonialism is a large population of people from India. They have, in many cases, brought their culinary traditions with them, and the streets of cities such as Mombasa in Kenya are pungent with the aroma of curries cooking and the smoky perfume of kebabs being grilled over wood braziers. The kebabs in this recipe are prepared with ground lamb and have some of the tastes of the Middle East and of Mughal India. Even a small habanero chili pepper has a big impact.

For this recipe, it's best to use metal skewers, preferably the flat kind, which will hold the kebabs in place more firmly.

Serve with (instant) brown rice and sliced cucumbers. Adapted from "The Africa Cookbook," by Jessica B. Harris (Simon & Schuster Trade Paperbacks, 2010).

KOFTA KEBABS

4 servings

- 1 large onion
- 2 medium cloves garlic
- 1 small habanero chili pepper
- 1 pound ground lamb
- 2 teaspoons hot Madras-style curry powder
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/8 teaspoon ground cloves
- Leaves from 3 sprigs cilantro
- Kosher salt (optional)

Position an oven rack 4 to 6 inches beneath the broiler element; preheat the broiler. Have 4 metal skewers, preferably flat, at hand. Line a rimmed baking sheet or broiler pan with aluminum foil (for easier cleanup).

Cut the onion into chunks, and coarsely chop the garlic. Carefully stem and seed the habanero chili pepper, then coarsely chop the flesh; transfer the 3 ingredients to the bowl of a food processor and pulse until minced. Drain as much of the liquid from the vegetable mixture as possible, then transfer the mixture to a mixing bowl. Add the lamb, curry powder, cinnamon and cloves. Use a fork or flexible spatula to incorporate the spices and onion mixture into the meat.

Mince the cilantro leaves and add to the mixing bowl; use a fork or flexible spatula to incorporate. Taste, and add salt if needed.

Divide the mixture into 8 equal portions, then, working with one at a time, use your hands to form a football-shaped kebab about 3 inches long. Thread 2 on each metal skewer, spaced at least 1/2 inch apart. (Be sure to wash your hands afterward to avoid any habanero-related mishaps.) The meat kebabs should be smooth and molded tight to the skewer.

Place the skewers on the lined baking sheet or broiler pan. Broil for 8 to 10 minutes, until browned on top, then carefully turn them over to broil for 10 to 12 minutes on the second side; when done, they should be browned and sizzling. The lamb should be just cooked through, with no trace of pink (check with the tip of a sharp knife).

Place one skewer on each plate. Serve hot, with white rice.

Ask a cook: Icing vs. frosting

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Q: Is there a difference between icing and frosting?

A: How sweet of you to ask. Technically, there doesn't appear to be a difference. It's a matter of habit and preference, like the difference between stuffing and dressing. Some sources claim it's regional, with New England, the Upper Midwest and the West using frosting, while New Jersey, Pennsylvania, the lower Midwest and the South use icing.

In practice, though, it may be clearer to use icing to describe a sugar-based topping that is thinner, while frosting is thicker and fluffier. Also, frosting holds its shape for piping decorations, while icing generally dries to a smoother, shinier finish.

In searching online for a definitive decision, I found a great comment that claimed it depends on what you're doing: "You ice with frosting, and you frost with icing." That's certainly semantically convenient.

Once we get past that debate, we should consider glaze. I think it's a glaze if you can pour it or brush it.

Hash in 30 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

When was the last time you reached for the bottle of horseradish in the fridge? It's a condiment that comes out at holiday time or when a big steak is around. In this recipe, it teams up with a little white wine vinegar to brighten quick-cooking pork tenderloin and rainbow-bright Swiss chard.

Adapted from "Time for Dinner," by Pilar Guzman, Jenny Rosenstrach and Alanna Stang (Chronicle, September 2010).

PORK AND CHARD HASH

4 servings

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 pound pork tenderloin

- Kosher salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1 medium onion
- 1 bunch (3/4 pound) Swiss chard
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- 1/2 to 1 teaspoon prepared horseradish

Heat the oil in a large skillet, preferably nonstick, over medium heat.

Meanwhile, trim any silver skin and excess fat from the pork tenderloin. Cut the meat into 1-inch cubes. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Transfer to the skillet and cook for about 8 minutes, until browned on all sides and almost cooked through. Transfer to a plate; cover loosely to keep warm.

While the pork is cooking, cut the onion into small dice. Once the skillet is empty, add the onion. Cook over medium heat for about 10 minutes, stirring to dislodge any browned bits from the bottom of the skillet, until the onion has softened.

While the onion is cooking, wash the chard in cool water. Trim the leaves from the stems, then coarsely chop the leaves and use paper towels to pat them dry.

Add the vinegar and horseradish to taste; cook, stirring, for 1 minute, then add the chard and increase the heat to medium-high. Cook for 3 to 5 minutes, until the chard has wilted, using tongs to incorporate the chard into the onion mixture.

Return the pork to the skillet along with any accumulated juices; reduce the heat to medium. Cook for a few minutes to warm through and make sure the pork is cooked. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Divide the hash and any pan juices among individual plates. Serve immediately.

A New England-style chowder with a taste of India

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

Being from New England, I hold to the idea that chowders — whether seafood or corn — must be thick. Very thick.

But that's where my marriage to tradition ends. I love both seafood and corn chowders, and I see no reason why they can't be combined. I also think that coconut milk and other flavors often associated with Indian cuisines work well with both.

And so I decided to bring them all together in one pot. Rather than the more traditional cream, I used a can of lite coconut milk to add the creamy richness chowders need, as well as starchy russet potatoes for body.

Once the base is made, it's easy to add the seafood (I favored shrimp for their firm texture, strong flavor and easy prep, but use whatever seafood you prefer) and corn. While frozen kernels can be substituted, the flavor of fresh, barely cooked corn is wonderful (and worth the minor trouble). Finally, a splash of hot sauce at the end brings it all together. What most people don't know about hot sauce is that in very small amounts it will heighten the other flavors of the dish without adding any real heat.

CURRIED CORN AND SHRIMP CHOWDER

Start to finish: 40 minutes. Servings: 4 to 6.

- 4 ears of corn
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 large yellow onion, diced
- 2 teaspoons curry powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons smoked paprika
- 15-ounce can lite coconut milk
- 1 quart chicken broth
- 2 large russet potatoes, peeled and diced
- 1 pound large raw shrimp, shells and tails removed
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
- Hot sauce, to taste

Cut the kernels from the ears of corn. To do this, stand each ear on its wide end and use a serrated knife to saw down the length of the cob. Discard the cobs.

In a large saucepan over medium-high, heat the olive oil. Add the onion and saute until just starting to brown, about 5 minutes.

Add the curry powder and smoked paprika, then cook, stirring constantly, for another minute. Add the coconut milk, chicken broth and potatoes. Bring to a simmer and cook until the potatoes are tender and begin to crumble, about 15 minutes.

Transfer the mixture to a blender, in batches if necessary, and blend until mostly smooth. Return the mixture to the pot over medium heat.

When the chowder has returned to a simmer, add the shrimp. Cook until the shrimp just turn pink and firm, about 10 minutes. Add the corn kernels and cook until the chowder is just heated through. Season with salt, pepper and a splash of hot sauce.

Gunman opens fire on Texas campus, kills himself

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN, Texas — A student wearing a dark suit and a ski mask opened fire Tuesday with an assault rifle on the University of Texas campus before fleeing into a library and fatally shooting himself. No one else was hurt.

The shooting began near a fountain in front of the UT Tower — the site of one of the nation’s deadliest shooting rampages more than four decades ago, when a gunman ascended the clock tower and fired down on dozens of people.

Within hours of Tuesday’s gunfire, the school issued an all-clear notice, but the university remained closed, and the area around the library still was considered a crime scene.

“Our campus is safe,” school

President Bill Powers said.

Austin Police Chief Art Acevedo expected the school to be “completely open and back to normal” by Wednesday morning.

Authorities identified the gunman as 19-year-old Colton Tooley, a sophomore math major. Police declined to speculate on his motive.

Tooley’s parents did not immediately respond to a message left by The Associated Press. A man who said he was a relative of the family and would identify himself only as Marcus came out of their home late Tuesday and said Tooley’s parents were distraught over losing their child.

“I want you to understand how he lived. He was a very smart guy, very intelligent, excellent student. He wouldn’t or couldn’t hurt a fly,” he said, reading from a prepared statement. “This is a great shock to me and my family. There was nothing prior to this day, nothing that would lead any of us to believe this could take place.”

Tooley’s high school principal in Austin described him as an excellent student who excelled in every subject.

“All of us in the Crockett High School community are shocked and saddened by today’s tragedy at the University of Texas,” said principal Craig Shapiro. Shapiro’s prepared statement said Tooley, a 2009 graduate, was remembered by teachers as being “brilliant,” “meticulous,” and “respectful.”

Police investigators went in and out of his family’s home in a middle-class Austin neighborhood Tuesday afternoon carrying bags and boxes. There was no immediate word on what was in the containers. A neighbor said police arrived at the home about three hours after the campus shooting.

The 50,000-student university had been on lockdown while officers with bomb-sniffing dogs carried out a building-by-building manhunt.

After the gunfire, authorities searched the campus for a possible second shooter, but eventually concluded Tooley acted alone. Confusion about the number of suspects arose because shots were fired in multiple locations, and officers received varying descriptions from witnesses, campus police Chief Robert Dahlstrom said.

Before reaching the library, Tooley apparently walked for several blocks wearing a mask and dark clothing and carrying an automatic weapon, witnesses said.

Construction worker Ruben Cordoba said he was installing a fence on the roof of a three-story building near the library when he looked down and made eye contact with the suspect.

“I saw in his eyes he didn’t care,”

Cordoba said.

The gunman continued down the street, firing three shots toward a campus church, then changed direction and fired three more times into the air, Cordoba said.

A garbage truck driver leaped out of his vehicle and ran away, as did a woman carrying two babies, Cordoba.

“I’m not scared, but I was scared for the people around me,” he said.

Randall Wilhite, an adjunct law professor, said he was driving to class when he saw “students start scrambling behind wastebaskets, trees and monuments,” and then a young man carrying an assault rifle sprinting along the street.

“He was running right in front of me ... and he shot what I thought were three more shots ... not at me. In my direction, but not at me,” Wilhite said.

The professor said the gunman had the opportunity to shoot several people, but did not.

Reconstruction delayed

Nine months after quake, Haiti still waiting for pledged U.S. aid

By Jonathan M. Katz and Martha Mendoza
Associated Press writers

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Nearly nine months after the earthquake, more than a million Haitians still live on the streets between piles of rubble. One reason: Not a cent of the $1.15 billion the U.S. promised for rebuilding has arrived.

The money was pledged by Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in March for use this year in rebuilding. The U.S. has already spent more than $1.1 billion on post-quake relief, but without long-term funds, the reconstruction of the wrecked capital cannot begin.

With just a week to go before fiscal 2010 ends, the money is still tied up in Washington. At fault: bureaucracy, disorganization and a lack of urgency, The Associated Press learned in interviews with officials in the State Department, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the White House and the U.N. Office of the Special Envoy. One senator has held up a key authorization bill because of a $5 million provision he says will be wasteful.

Meanwhile, deaths in Port-au-Prince are mounting, as quake survivors scramble to live without shelter or food.

“There are truly lives at stake, and the idea that folks are spending more time finger-pointing than getting this solved is almost unbelievable,” said John Simon, a former U.S. ambassador to the African Union who is now with the Center for Global Development, a Washington think tank.

Nor is Haiti getting much from other donors. Some 50 other nations and organizations pledged a total of $8.75 billion for reconstruction, but just $686 million of that has reached Haiti so far — less than 15 percent of the total promised for 2010-11.

A youth uses a hammer to demolish his home near the ruins of the National Palace, background, in the Fort Nationale neighborhood of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, on Sept. 20.

The lack of funds has all but halted reconstruction work by CHF International, the primary U.S.-funded group assigned to remove rubble and build temporary shelters. Just 2 percent of rubble has been cleared and 13,000 temporary shelters have been built — less than 10 percent of the number planned.

The Maryland-based agency is asking the U.S. government for $16.5 million to remove more than 21 million cubic feet of additional rubble and build 4,000 more temporary houses out of wood and metal.

out again. We have contractors ready to continue removing rubble. ... We have local suppliers and international suppliers ready to ship the amount of wood and construction materials we need,” said CHF country director Alberto Wilde. “It’s just a matter of money.”

Last week the inaction bore tragic results. On Friday an isolated storm destroyed an estimated 8,000 tarps, tents and shacks in the capital and killed at least six people, including two children. And the threat of violence looms as landowners threaten entire camps with forced eviction.

In Washington there is confusion about the money. At a July hearing, Ravij Shah, director of the U.S.

Agency for International Development, thanked members of Congress for approving the funds, saying, “The resources are flowing and are being spent in country.”

It wasn’t true then, and still hasn’t happened.

When the earthquake hit, U.S. agencies sent troops, rescuers, aid workers and supplies to the devastated capital, Port-au-Prince. On March 24, President Barack Obama asked Congress for $2.8 billion in emergency aid to Haiti — about half to pay back money already spent by USAID, the Defense Department and others. An additional $212 million was to write off debt.

The heart of the request was $1.15 billion in new reconstruction funds.

A week later, Clinton touted that figure in front of representatives of 50 nations at the U.N. secretariat, the president of Haiti at her side.

“If the effort to rebuild is slow or insufficient, if it is marked by conflict, lack of coordination or lack of transparency, then the challenges that have plagued Haiti for years could erupt with regional and global consequences,” Clinton said.

That was nearly six months ago. It took until May for the Senate to pass a supplemental request for the Haiti funds and until July for the House to do the same. The votes made $917 million available but did not dictate how or when to spend it. Without that final step, the money remains in the U.S. Treasury.

On campaign trip, Obama both rallies, scolds Dems

The Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Buck up. Stop whining. And get to work.

Clearly frustrated by Republicans’ energy — and his own party’s lack of enthusiasm — President Barack Obama scolded fellow Democrats even as he rallied them Tuesday in an effort to save the party from big GOP gains in the crucial midterm elections. In the final month of campaigning, he’s trying to re-energize young voters, despondent liberals and other Democrats whose excitement over his election has dissipated.

“It is inexcusable for any Democrat or progressive right now to stand on the sidelines,” the president declared in a Rolling Stone magazine interview. He said that supposed supporters who are “sitting on their hands complaining” are irresponsible because the consequences of Republican congressional victories could be dashed Democratic plans.

He gave an example during a backyard conversation with New Mexico voters, arguing that Republicans would reverse the progress he’s made on education reform and student aid. “That’s the choice that we’ve got in this election,” Obama said, underscoring the stakes of Nov. 2.

Later, at an outdoor rally at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, the president urged thousands of students to stay as inspired and involved in this election as they were two years ago.

“We can’t let this country fall backwards because the rest of us didn’t care enough to fight,” he said to loud applause.

It was the first of four large rallies planned for the campaign homestretch as the president tries to rekindle some of his 2008 campaign magic and fire up young supporters and others who helped elect Obama but who Democrats fear may stay home this fall. Top lieutenants Vice President Joe Biden, Democratic Party Chairman Tim Kaine and Cabinet members also fanned out on other college campuses to call party foot soldiers to action.

At Penn State University in State College, Pa., Biden noted he was criticized a day earlier in New Hampshire for urging Democrats to “remind our base constituency to stop whining and get out there and look at the alternatives.”

“All I heard when I got here in Happy Valley was the roar of lions. Folks, it’s time for us to roar,” Biden said, pressing his audience to knock on doors, make phone calls and commit to vote.

Terror plot uncovered in Europe, raising fears at Eiffel Tower

By Paisley Dodds
Associated Press writer

LONDON — Intelligence officials have intercepted a credible terror plot against Britain and France, raising security fears at the Eiffel Tower on Tuesday, but failing to raise the overall threat level in either country.

The Eiffel Tower was briefly evacuated Tuesday evening after officials received a bomb threat called in from a telephone booth. It was the second such alert at the monument in two weeks.

The warning came as

French officials were put on alert for possible terror attacks. British officials, too, have been aware of a possible attack but the terror threat warning has not changed from “severe.”

“There have been a succession of terror operations we’ve been dealing with over recent weeks but one to two that have preoccupied us,” said one British government official who spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of his work. “Still, it hasn’t been to the degree that we have raised the threat level.”

Another British official, who spoke on the same terms, would not confirm the plot was “al-Qaida inspired” but said there was an “Islamist connection” and that the plots were in an early stage. No other details were given.

Since the Sept. 11 terror attacks in the United States nine years ago, the terror group has moved outside of Afghanistan and Pakistan to other countries such as Somalia and Yemen.

German officials denied Tuesday they had intercepted threats, saying there had been no change to their threat level.

In Washington, a Western counterterrorism official said some missile strikes in a recent surge of attacks by unmanned U.S. drones in Pakistan were aimed at disrupting suspected terrorist plots aimed at Europe.

It wasn’t known whether the drone attacks were related specifically to the plot that European authorities said they had intercepted.

The counterterrorism official said the targeted strikes were aimed at al-Qaida and other militant groups arrayed in Pakistan’s tribal region near the Afghanistan border. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because the details of the terror plot remain sensitive.

The Obama administration has intensified the use of drone-fired missiles in Pakistan’s border area but this month there have been at least 21 attacks, more than double the highest number fired in any other single month.

A suspected U.S. missile strike on Tuesday killed four militants in northwest Pakistan’s South Waziristan region, just across the border from Afghanistan, intelligence officials said.

Shirley Winifred Robson Guthrie

Shirley Winifred Robson Guthrie, loving mother, grandmother, teacher and friend, passed away peacefully surrounded by family and friends in Twin Falls, Idaho, on Saturday, Sept. 25, 2010, at the age of 77.

Shirley was born in Rexburg, Idaho, on Feb. 5, 1933, to Horace Glidden Robson and Winifred Neindorf Robson. Shirley had an adventurous childhood living on the family farm nestled at the foot of the Grand Teton Mountains in Felt, Idaho. She loved spending time with her two older brothers, Merle and Dale Robson. Shirley's elementary and middle school years were spent in a cozy one-room schoolhouse until high school, when she then attended Idaho Falls High School.

Upon graduation, Shirley attended the University of Idaho, was a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority and graduated with honors with a degree in elementary education.

She married her college sweetheart, James W. Guthrie, on June 17, 1956. Shirley and Jim were then blessed with three children, Suzanne Kaye, James Scott and Stephanie Jan. Shirley taught elementary school for a total of 40 years. She taught in California, Oregon and Idaho. The last 26 years of her teaching career were spent teaching at her beloved Morningside Elementary School in Twin Falls. Shirley was proud to be an educator and exceptionally proud that her two children became educators as well. Shirley was an avid reader, sports enthusiast and bridge player. She enjoyed camping, fishing, golfing, bowling and spending time with her family and friends.

Shirley never missed an opportunity to attend an athletic event or program in which her children and grandchildren participated. She was always an active spectator and was an awesome score keeper for hundreds of tennis and golf matches along with many basketball and football games. Shirley exemplified love and tenderness for all she encountered and taught her family to always cherish each other. She had a kind and endearing spirit that would remain with one even after their time together had passed. While she loved people of all types, she also loved her furry four-legged friends and was always accompanied by her special companion, Willie, her miniature dachshund.

She was a remarkable woman of strength and love that will be truly missed, yet never forgotten. Her strong will and competitive nature were evident in her final months with her battle with brain disease. Shirley never complained and was truly a hero in every sense of the word.

Shirley is survived by her daughter, Suzanne K. (Guthrie) Wilkin and son-in-law, Dick Wilkin of Twin Falls; and son, James Scott Guthrie and daughter-in-law, Theresa (Snodgrass) Guthrie of Spring Creek, Nev. ## Carter hospitalized; expected to resume tour

By Ann Gerhart
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — While on tour promoting his 26th book, former President Jimmy Carter was hospitalized Tuesday in Cleveland with an upset stomach, but he was expected to resume his schedule Wednesday with two events in Washington, said a spokeswoman for the Carter Center.

Carter, who will turn 86 on Friday, fell ill aboard a flight from Atlanta and was rushed by ambulance and Secret Service escort to MetroHealth Medical Center, where he was to remain overnight. By midafternoon, President Obama had called the 39th president and reported that Carter "sounded great," said White House spokesman Bill Burton.

The episode added more drama to the bits of controversy Carter has created during interviews to promote "White House Diary," an edited collection of the journals he kept during his four-year term.

He said last week that his role as a former president is probably "superior" to those of other ex-presidents because of his independent dealmaking in trouble spots around the world. A month ago, for instance, he popped up in North Korea and won the release of an American teacher who had been imprisoned for illegally crossing the border.

And during a recent "60 Minutes" interview, Carter blamed the late Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., for derailing universal health care 30 years ago. "It was his fault. Ted Kennedy killed the bill," he said.

Carter is scheduled to appear tonight at George Washington University's Lisner Auditorium for a book signing and a talk before a sold-out crowd of 1,400.

BRUINS BROOM FOES

Twin Falls volleyball sweep Buhl and Burley

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

Contributions by Twin Falls seniors Cheltzie Williams and Taylor Lancaster led the Bruins to sweeps of Great Basin Conference foe Burley and nonconference opponent Buhl Tuesday at Baun Gymnasium.

The wins lifted the Bruins' overall record to 9-1 (5-0 GBC).

In a nonconference match, Buhl defeated Burley 25-16, 25-18.

Twin Falls overcame a slow start in the opening match against Buhl, getting eight kills from Williams and four from Lancaster in a 25-20, 25-14 win. In the conference match with Burley, the Bruins cruised 25-10, 25-20, 25-13.

In both matches, Twin Falls coach B.J. Price was happy to get playing time for all his players.

"It was good to be able to play everybody," said Price. "Everybody on this team has something they can contribute and we are working on developing that. We will need that in the future and we need to be deep."

Against Burley, Twin Falls jumped out to a 10-3 lead in Game 1 and never let the Bobcats any closer than seven points. Trailing 23-15 in the second set, Burley scored five points to close to 23-20 before a pair of hitting errors ended the set. Burley grabbed a 2-0 lead to open the third game but the Bruins used a 5-0 run to take the lead and steadily pulled away, extending the margin to their largest lead of 24-13 before finishing the game at 25-13.

Junior setter Allie Johnson dished out 33 assists in the win and Williams had 10 kills, while Lancaster added nine.

Even in losing the match, Burley coach Tiffany Green was happy with her team's passing and hustle.

"Twin Falls is a very good team," said Green. "They are sound and they don't make mistakes. We were just a little too slow on defense. The athletic ability is there — we just need to be better."

In the Buhl match, Johnson finished with 18 assists and libero Mallory Judd recorded nine digs to help Twin Falls rally.

"We need to start ahead from the beginning," said Johnson.

"We weren't able to get in our system early against Buhl," added Price.

Boise St. Broncos featured on Sports Illustrated cover

The Associated Press

BOISE — The firsts keep coming for the Boise State football team.

The third-ranked Broncos are featured on the national cover of Sports Illustrated magazine this week with the headline "Boise State: The Great Debate."

The Idaho Statesman reports that SI writer Austin Murphy spent much of last week in Boise to report and write a story about whether the Broncos should be eligible to play for the BCS national championship. Two photographers shot the Boise State-Oregon State game on Saturday night.

Boise State was on a regional cover of Sports Illustrated's college football preview in August, but this is the school's first national cover. It hits news stands today.

Boise State's game against Oregon State also drew ESPN's "College GameDay" show to Boise for the first time on Saturday. And the game against Oregon State was the first regular-season Boise State game to air nationally on network television.

In other news Tuesday, Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore was named the offensive player of the week in the Western Athletic Conference.

The junior from Prosser, Wash., completed 19 of 27 passes for 288 yards and three touchdowns in third-ranked Boise State's 37-24 win over then-No. 24 Oregon State on Saturday. He had touchdown passes of 6, 17 and 49 yards.

Nevada linebacker James-Michael Johnson was named the WAC defensive player of the week while special teams honors went to Louisiana Tech linebacker Rufus Porter.

Fall golf move struck down by IHSAA vote

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

No mulligans here: Fall golf will have to wait another year.

In a surprising about-face from last month, the Idaho High School Activities Association voted Tuesday at its board meeting in Idaho Falls to deny the Class 4A and 5A golf season a move from spring to fall beginning with the 2011-12 school year.

The board passed the measure 9-3 in an initial vote at its August meeting, setting the table for a final vote Tuesday. While the measure was expected to pass, it was unanimously shot down.

"There was such a strong opposition from Boise and the east and north, and the (IHSAA) office was just so deluged with phone calls and letters that they opted not to do it," said Jerome athletic director Ty Jones, an IHSAA board representative. "But when you have literally every single region in the state — not everyone because there were some in favor of it — it was running about 10 to 1 against it (when consulting athletic directors and coaches). It was overwhelming that they didn't want it."

Twin Falls High School

golf coach Mike Hamblin, the golf pro at Twin Falls Golf Club and a leading proponent of fall golf, expressed frustration at what he felt was a lack of adequate communication between the IHSAA and golf courses.

He added that many courses would have made more money by splitting the golf seasons and opening up more public dates in the spring.

"I've called four or five courses today and they said they hadn't been contacted (by the IHSAA). That tells me you didn't really look into it," Hamblin said. "I'd really like to know where the outcry was from. You don't play golf at the high school, you play it at a county-owned facility, a city-owned facility or a private facility that are all trying to make money. And right now none of them are making money."

"There's nobody out here (at the course) right now and the weather is perfect, and that's the way it is every fall. But it is what it is. We'll move on, and we'll always have a good high school program and be able to compete with everyone else. It's just sad that they really didn't look into it further."

Riverhawks top Burley, win third straight

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — They're just small town girls, livin' in a lonely world, and now the Canyon Ridge girls soccer team can't stop believing.

Canyon Ridge's 1-0 win over Great Basin Conference foe Burley on Tuesday extended the Riverhawks' winning streak to three games. As the team made its victory lap, the Skaggs Events Center speakers blared — appropriately enough — Journey's "Don't Stop Believing" as the girls joyously sang along.

"We feel pretty good about that," Canyon Ridge senior Bonnie Detweiler said of the three straight wins. "We just really wanted it. It was our attitude."

The win comes after Canyon Ridge lost 3-1 at home to Burley earlier in the season.

"I think they just wanted it a little more today," said Riverhawks coach Christa Tackett.

In a game that offered few scoring opportunities for either team, Detweiler took advantage of her chance in the first half, providing the only goal the Riverhawks would need as they improved to 5-8-0 overall and 4-4-0 (12 pts.) in Great Basin Conference play.

"We're working harder and getting better,"

Detweiler said. "We've gotten a lot better at passing and working as a team. Instead of pretty much playing kickball, we look for passes and that's helped a lot."

Burley (4-9-0, 4-4-0 GBC, 12 pts.) came out flat as it was missing a few players due to injuries and suspensions. The Bobcats picked up their intensity the final five minutes and created three good looks, but Canyon Ridge goalkeeper Jayd Wartluff stepped up and secured the shutout.

"If we would have played the whole game like the last five minutes we would have been OK," said Burley coach Sara Edwards. "Part of it is we don't have our full team. The girls didn't have a lot of fire today. We'll probably face (Canyon Ridge) again in districts, and hopefully we'll win it back."

On Thursday, Burley travels to Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge is at Jerome.

Dodgers eliminate Rockies from NL wild card

DENVER — Casey Blake homered twice, Rafael Furcal had two triples and the Los Angeles Dodgers put the Colorado Rockies a step closer to playoff elimination with a 9-7 victory Tuesday night.

The Rockies were eliminated from the NL wild card with their loss and Atlanta's 3-2 win over Florida earlier Tuesday. Colorado's fate in the NL West hinges on first-place San Francisco's late game against Arizona. A Giants win eliminates the Rockies from contention.

James Loney and Matt Kemp homered for Los Angeles.

Todd Helton and Dexter Fowler went deep for the Rockies, who have lost eight of nine.

REDS 3, ASTROS 2

CINCINNATI — Jay Bruce homered on the first pitch of the bottom of the ninth to give Cincinnati a 3-2 victory over Houston on Tuesday night, sending the Reds to the postseason for the first time in 15 years.

The Reds, who won in their last at-bat for the 22nd time this season, won the NL Central title.

BRAVES 3, MARLINS 2

ATLANTA — Eric Hinske hit a pinch-hit, two-run homer in the seventh inning and Atlanta improved its wild card chances.

The Braves held a half-game lead over San Diego for the wild card entering Tuesday. The Chicago Cubs played at the Padres later Tuesday.

NATIONALS 2, PHILLIES 1

WASHINGTON — Adam Dunn led off the bottom of the ninth with his 38th homer, this one off Jose Contreras (6-4), to give Washington the win.

Jimmy Rollins went 1 for 3 in his first start in nearly three weeks, Roy Oswalt didn't allow an earned run in five innings, and NL East champion Philadelphia began preparing for the playoffs.

METS 4, BREWERS 3

NEW YORK — Light-hitting New York rookie Ruben Tejada laced a two-run double in the bottom of the ninth off Milwaukee closer John Axford.

David Wright had a two-run homer and the Mets opened their final home-stand of the season with their third consecutive win.

PIRATES 7, CARDINALS 2

ST. LOUIS — Garrett Jones homered on a three-hit night and drove in three runs and Brian Burres pitched effectively into the sixth inning of Pittsburgh's victory over St. Louis, which was eliminated from playoff contention earlier Tuesday.

The out-of-town scoreboard was malfunctioning throughout the game, and there was no reaction when the official knockout punch for the defending NL Central champions — Cincinnati's 3-2 win over Houston — came with one out in the sixth and Pittsburgh leading 4-2.

AMERICAN LEAGUE YANKEES 6, BLUE JAYS 1

TORONTO — The New York Yankees clinched their 15th postseason berth in the last 16 years and CC Sabathia got his 21st win of the season, beating the Toronto Blue Jays 6-1 on Tuesday night.

Derek Jeter scored three runs and drove in another for the Yankees, who have reached the postseason every year but one since 1995. New York missed the playoffs in 2008, finishing behind Tampa Bay and Boston.

RAYS 5, ORIOLES 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Tampa Bay clinched its second playoff berth in three years, beating Baltimore behind another strong pitching performance by 19-game winner David Price.

Price (19-6) scattered six hits over eight innings and allowed only one runner past second base. He struck out eight and walked none in what likely will be his final start of the regular season.

WHITE SOX 5, RED SOX 4

CHICAGO — Paul Konerko tied the game in the eighth inning with a run-scoring double and Dayan Viciedo won it with a pinch-hit RBI single in the ninth and Chicago rallied to beat Boston.

Boston's slim playoff hopes were dashed were about an hour before the game ended. The Rays beat Baltimore 5-0 and New York defeated Toronto 6-1 to secure playoff berths and eliminate the Red Sox.

MARINERS 3, RANGERS 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Felix Hernandez allowed only one run over eight innings and Justin Smoak hit the tiebreaking homer to lead last-place Seattle past AL West champion Texas.

Hernandez (13-12) became the first pitcher since Randy Johnson in 2002 and only the seventh since 1980 to have a season with 30 quality starts (three earned runs or fewer while pitching at least six innings). The right-hander lowered his AL-best ERA to 2.27 in what might have been his last start of the season.

ROYALS 10, TWINS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kila Ka'aihue hit two home runs and drove in a career-high four runs to lead Kansas City over Minnesota.

The Twins have dropped a season-high five straight since clinching the AL Central title on Sept. 21.

Bruins

Denny Moretto and the Indians (8-4, 1-2 Sawtooth Central Idaho conference) looked good against the Bruins in the first game.

"But we looked like an entirely different team in the second game," said Moretto. "We just fell apart."

Buhl senior Katherine Hunter had six of the 18 kills recorded against Burley. She also had two of the team's five aces and eight digs.

"We tried some new stuff and put different players in different situations," said Moretto.

Emri Haynie matched her four kills with four blocks to lead Burley in the loss.

"We struggled with our passing," said Green. "And we are having to make some adjustments."

Buhl travels to Wendell tonight. Twin Falls hosts Canyon Ridge on Thursday, while Burley hosts Jerome and Preston.

Hamblin plans to continue to support the idea of fall golf because "it's what's best for the golf course and what's best for the kids."

In addition to the major vote on fall golf, the IHSAA passed a last-minute agreement for Magic Valley Christian School volleyball players to play at Lighthouse Christian for the rest of the season.

When the Conquerors only had two players show up for volleyball tryouts, Magic Valley Christian and Lighthouse Christian got the proper paperwork together and the IHSAA gave the agreement verbal approval earlier in the season due to the special circumstances.

This allowed Magic Valley Christian senior Natalie Jayo to play for the Lions after their third match of the season rather than forcing her to wait for Tuesday's vote, which would have ruled her out essentially until the district tournament.

"It's a nice agreement because she won't be unable to play her senior season just because something like that happened," said Lighthouse Christian coach Tobie Helman. "It's just nice for her, because she's spent most of her life playing volleyball and club, and in that respect, it's good for small schools to have that option."

In other meeting news, the 10-day practice rule was added to the future discussion agenda. For certain sports like football and wrestling, athletes must participate in 10 practices before being allowed to play in any organized event like a jamboree or an actual competition. The rule does not apply to every IHSAA-sanctioned sport.

Jones said the board is going to discuss "anything that pops up" about the rule, and that no motions or votes are currently planned.

AP Source: Deal sending Anthony to Nets is ‘dead’

DENVER (AP) — A four-way deal that would have sent Carmelo Anthony to New Jersey is “dead,” a person with knowledge of the discussions said Tuesday.

The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because he wasn’t authorized to speak publicly about the trade.

Anthony took the court with his Nuggets teammates on the first day of training camp Tuesday. But his days in Denver could very well be numbered even after the four-team deal that also would have included Charlotte and Utah collapsed.

The Nuggets could still listen to offers.

Anthony said after practice that the basketball court has become his “safe haven,” a place where he doesn’t have to “deal with all the other stuff.”

“Every time I get in the gym my mind just focuses on working out, getting better, not thinking about too much,” Anthony said.

Following the more than two-hour workout, Nuggets coach George Karl gave Anthony an “A” for his effort, saying he thought his star was “very professional, very mature.”

Karl remains hopeful that Anthony will stick around.

Anthony has yet to sign off on a three-year, $65 million extension that’s been on the table since June, leading the Nuggets to explore trade options. The potential deal involving the New Jersey Nets hit a road block over the weekend and then withered Tuesday.

“The perfect storm in my mind is to keep Melo, convince him that this is the best place for him, that this is where he has to win a championship,” Karl said.

Packers’ Collins confronts fan after tough loss to Bears

MILWAUKEE — The NFL is investigating a confrontation between Green Bay Packers safety Nick Collins and a fan after Monday night’s loss to the Chicago Bears at Soldier Field.

Spokesman Greg Aiello told The Associated Press the league is “in the process of reviewing all the facts” and Bears spokesman Scott Hagel said the team is doing the same thing.

“Right now, we’re monitoring it,” Hagel said.

Milwaukee’s WITI-TV aired video in which Collins is seen yelling at a fan as he left the field. Collins then appears to throw his mouthpiece into the stands. According to the station’s report, Collins said the fan spit on him and used a racial slur.

WITI said Collins apologized for “losing his cool.”

Packers coach Mike McCarthy said he hadn’t seen the video but had been briefed on the situation by the Packers’ security department.

“I understand Nick’s story, as far as what happened and what our security people that were there (said),” McCarthy told reporters in Green Bay on Tuesday. “And I support Nick 100 percent.”

SEATTLE SIGNS WR BRANDON STOKLEY, 2 OTHERS

RENTON, Wash. — The Seattle Seahawks have signed former Denver wide receiver Brandon Stokley, reuniting him with offensive coordinator Jeremy Bates.

Seattle made the move on Tuesday, along with signing offensive linemen Allen Barbre and Breno Giacomini. The Seahawks released running back/-fullback Quinton Gantner and offensive linemen Mike Gibson and Mansfield Wrotto to make room.

JAGUARS CLAIM QB EDWARDS OFF WAIVERS FROM BILLS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Showing just how frustrated they are with quarterback David Garrard, the Jacksonville Jaguars claimed former Buffalo Bills starter Trent Edwards off waivers Tuesday.

Edwards is expected to sign a contract this morning and join his new teammates at practice later in the day.

The Jaguars waived linebacker Alvin Bowen to make room for Edwards on the roster.

The move gives Edwards a fresh start after things went south in Buffalo and provides Jacksonville with a viable option behind Garrard.

Edwards started the first two games for Buffalo this season, completing 29 of 52 passes for 241 yards and a touchdown.

Woods ready for Ryder Cup challenge

NEWPORT, Wales (AP) — The Ryder Cup is getting personal for Tiger Woods.

Interrupting an otherwise dull press conference Tuesday, Woods fired back at a comment Rory McIlroy made six weeks ago that “I would love to face” the world’s No. 1 player in the Ryder Cup unless his game rapidly improved.

Asked for a reaction, Woods leaned into the microphone and said only, “Me, too.”

The quote from McIlroy — the closest thing to bulletin board material at Celtic Manor — came the week after Woods’ golf reached a low point in a dismal season. He had the highest score of his career and beat only one player in the 80-man field at Firestone.

McIlroy was not worried that he had given Woods or the U.S. team any more motivation.

“I’m fine. I’m all right,” said the 21-year-old from Northern Ireland. “You’ve got to realize, I said those things the week after he had just shot 18 over at Akron, so he wasn’t playing too well at the time.”

Woods was aware of the comment before arriving in Wales.

He mentioned the quote two weeks ago at Cog Hill while talking about Stephen Ames, whom Woods had beaten 9 and 8 in the Match Play Championship after Ames was quoted making fun of Woods’ accuracy.

“At least Rory said, ‘Unless my game improves,’” Woods said in Chicago.

There also were stories circulating at Cog Hill that Woods had said to McIlroy upon passing him, “Careful what you wish for.” McIlroy, however, denied that ever happened.

The singles matches on Sunday, which decide the Ryder Cup, are a long way off. And because it’s a blind draw, there is no guarantee Woods and McIlroy would play each other.

Singles rarely has been a problem for Woods or the other top American players. Woods, Phil Mickelson and Jim Furyk — the core of the U.S. team since 1997 — collectively have won 125 times on the PGA Tour, including 19 majors.

That hasn’t carried over into the Ryder Cup.

In singles, they are 10-6-2, with Woods and Furyk losing only once. In fourballs and foursome matches, with different partners in the 18 Ryder Cups they have played, that trio is 18-34-9.

Maybe that explains why they all have losing records, and have played on losing teams.

“It’s disappointing,” Furyk said. “But I guess we’ve got an opportunity to get closer back to square. Instead of looking at the past, I think right now you look ahead. You look ahead to Friday, Saturday, Sunday and not worry about what’s happened. The bad news is the last 20 years, we haven’t won very often. Right now ... try to figure out how we’re going to take the cup back home with us.”

Tuesday was the first day of practice on the Twenty Ten course at Celtic Manor, designed specifically for the Ryder Cup. What began under a light drizzle soon gave way to mild sunshine, only for rain to arrive toward the afternoon.

Based on the foursomes both captains sent out, there were no surprises.

Europe started on the back nine with Francesco and Edoardo Molinari playing with McIlroy and Graeme McDowell of Northern Ireland. Ian Poulter, Luke Donald, Padraig Harrington and Ross Fisher brought up the rear.

European captain Colin Montgomerie defended his selection of Harrington, a three-time major winner who has not won in two years, saying he played the best of anyone on his side during practice and made two eagles.

“There’s reasons why Padraig Harrington was picked, and judge me about that selection on Oct. 4,” Montgomerie said.

Montgomerie cited the record of Luke Donald — 5-1-1 — when he made the Englishman a captain’s pick. Donald, Ian Poulter and Lee Westwood all have winning records in the Ryder Cup. They are considered to be good Ryder Cup players.

Does that mean Woods, Mickelson and Furyk are not good Ryder Cup players because of their records?

“You can say that about a number of players,” Montgomerie said. “Tiger’s record in the Ryder Cup is not quite as bad as people think it is. It’s just because his individual record is incredible.

“Who says that won’t happen this week?”

Today is Wednesday,
Sept. 29, the 272nd day of 2010. There are 93 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 29, 1910, the National Urban League had its beginnings as The Committee on Urban Conditions Among Negroes was established in New York.

On this date:

In 1789, the U.S. War Department established a regular army with a strength of several hundred men.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1829, London's reorganized police force, which became known as Scotland Yard, went on duty.

In 1907, the foundation stone was laid for the Washington National Cathedral, which wasn't fully completed until this date in 1990.

In 1918, Allied forces began their decisive breakthrough of the Hindenburg Line during World War I.

In 1938, British, French,
German and Italian leaders concluded the Munich Agreement, which was aimed at appeasing Adolf Hitler by allowing Nazi annexation of Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland.

In 1960, the situation
comedy "My Three Sons," starring Fred MacMurray, premiered on ABC. The musical "Irma La Douce" opened on Broadway.

In 1978, Pope John Paul I was found dead in his Vatican apartment just over a month after becoming head of the Roman Catholic Church.

In 1980, The Washington
Post published "Jimmy's World," a feature article about an 8-year-old heroin addict that went on to win a Pulitzer Prize; however, the story turned out to have been totally fabricated by the reporter, Janet Cooke.

In 1982, Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules laced with cyanide claimed the first of seven victims in the Chicago area. (To date, the case remains unsolved.)

In 1990, the Washington
National Cathedral, begun in 1907, was formally completed with President George H.W. Bush overseeing the laying of the final stone atop the southwest pinnacle of the cathedral's
St. Paul Tower.

Ten years ago: Israeli riot police stormed a major Jerusalem shrine and opened fire on stone-throwing Muslim worshippers, killing four Palestinians and wounding 175.

Five years ago: John G.
Roberts Jr. was sworn in as the nation's 17th chief justice after winning Senate confirmation. New York Times reporter Judith Miller was released from 85 days of federal detention after agreeing to testify in a criminal probe into the leak of a covert CIA officer's identity.
Three suicide car bombs exploded nearly simultaneously in Balad, a mostly Shiite town north of Baghdad, killing some 60 people.

One year ago: New York
City terrorism suspect Najibullah Zazi (nah-jee-BOO'-lah ZAH'-zee) pleaded not guilty to conspiring to use weapons of mass destruction in what authorities said was a planned attack on commuter trains.
(Zazi later pleaded guilty to charges including conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction and supporting al-Qaida.) Former Democratic fundraiser Norman Hsu (shoo) was sentenced in New York to more than 24 years in prison for his guilty plea to fraud charges and another four years and four months in prison for his conviction at trial for breaking campaign finance laws. A tsunami killed nearly 200 people in Samoa, American Samoa and Tonga.

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

DEAR ABBY: After many months of dating a wonderful woman, "Amy," we have set a date for our wedding. However, there's a problem. As the date draws closer, Amy is concerned about my lack of physical intimacy with her.

While I am very attracted to her, I am having some doubts. I recently noticed a young man at my health club and experienced some unfamiliar feelings. I don't think I am gay, but I am no longer sure that Amy is what I have been looking for.

Should I push these feelings aside and continue our plans for the wedding? Or should I tell Amy the truth about these feelings?

— SEARCHING FOR ANSWERS IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR SEARCHING: You should absolutely tell your fiancée the truth about the feelings you're having — all of them. To marry a woman knowing you might be more attracted to a young man at your health club would bring everyone involved great pain. It is very important that you find out who you are and what you're looking for before coupling up with anyone. While Amy may not be thrilled to hear what you have to say, you owe it to her and to yourself to be frank before this goes any further.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I dated for eight years before we were married two years ago. He has a son from a previous relationship, and we have a 9-month-old son together.

My problem is my mother-in-law. More often than not, she calls me by my stepson's mother's name. Abby, that woman and my husband haven't been together for more than 12 years!

My husband thinks I'm making a big deal out of nothing. He says I should forget about it, but it bothers me. My relationship with his mother has suffered because of it. She lives near us and helps out with watching our baby, so I see her quite often. What are your thoughts on this?

— ALSO KNOWN AS ...

DEAR A.K.A.: If your mother-in-law's slip of the tongue happened occasionally, I would agree with your husband that it's no big deal. Because it happens often, it appears the woman is doing it deliberately. Have you confronted her about it and told her how hurtful it is? If you haven't, you should. And if it doesn't stop, then you're within your rights to limit your time with her and/or arrange for other supervision for your baby. It would be confusing for him to grow up around a grandmother who calls his mother by a stranger's name.

DEAR ABBY: When I am out with my friends, they can't keep their hands and eyes off their cell phones. They sit there and text whatever guy they're involved with, and I feel like they would rather be with anyone else but me.

I have talked to them about it, but they say I "don't understand" because I have never been in a relationship. Abby, I'm not jealous because they have guys to talk to. I am hurt that my friends think cyber communication is more important than spending time with friends. What do you think?

— TEXTED OUT IN TEXAS

DEAR TEXTED OUT: I'm glad you asked. It is rude for people to behave the way you have described. Good manners dictate that people give their undivided attention to those they are with. To do otherwise sends the signal that their present company is less important.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Speech was given to the ordinary sort of men whereby to communicate their mind; but to wise men, whereby to conceal it."
— Robert South

After North opened light, sensibly relying on the extra controls and 5-4 pattern, South found the heart fit and drove to game.

If West had led and continued spades, declarer would have had an easy time of it by playing along crossruff lines. He would have ruffed the second spade and cashed his minor-suit top winners. Then he could crossruff spades and diamonds to win a total of seven trump tricks and three plain-suit winners. If East ruffed high on the fourth spade, declarer would have been able to discard his club loser and eventually ruff a club in hand.

But West found the more challenging lead of a trump, and now declarer could see the crossruff would fail. One possibility was to duck a club. The plan would be to take a second club with dummy's ace, lead a third round to ruff in hand, and (if the suit split) go back to dummy with the third round of trumps to cash the two long clubs.

South found a better line when he won the heart in dummy, played the diamond ace, ruffed a diamond, then played dummy's second top trump and gave up a spade. He could arrange to ruff a spade, draw the last trump, then play the diamond king and concede a diamond while he still had one trump remaining with which to regain the lead and cash the last diamond. Declarer emerged with five hearts, four diamonds and a club trick.

ANSWER: If you play Michaels Cuebids, where a direct cuebid shows at least 5-5 in the other major and an unspecified minor, this hand is tailor-made for the bid. If at unfavorable vulnerability, you might be a little worried by the weak heart intermediates, but showing the hand at one go makes the risk worthwhile.

IF SEPTEMBER 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You might end up testing out a new set of rules made especially for you in the year ahead. Outside conditions should shift in your favor by mid-November, leaving you free to pick and choose a more beneficial direction. Major opportunities to set out on a materially successful path can appear in December and January, so be ready to boogie when opportunity knocks. Your ambitions quotient hits a new high, but you are too anxious to burn bridges in January and June — so don't abandon well-thought-out plans to pursue the bright lights of a temporary fling.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If your moral fiber is tested by circumstances, remember it could be an open book quiz. You can ask other people for feedback or an opinion on your situation. You do not need to tackle problems alone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are a product of your culture. Your behavior patterns might be a learned response, so you relate best to people who went to the same schools, share your beliefs or have similar backgrounds.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Gather ammunition before you shoot back. You might not have the appropriate retort on hand to fight criticism. A sudden brainstorm can earn Brownie points at work so don't be afraid to speak up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Never perpetuate a misconception; it could be like bad news and travel just as fast. An unconventional idea or technique that seems outrageous today could lay the foundation for traditions of tomorrow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you treat life like a metaphor for karate, you can be king. Concentrate on acting rather than reacting. You need to be prepared to deflect attacks before they occur and anticipate someone else's moves.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Self-discipline is the way to self-fulfillment. If you persist with continuous gluttony you are bound to gain weight, or spend more money than you earn, so make a conscious effort to cut back.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Control confrontations. If you have to have a face-to-face with someone who might be contrary, you should make the meeting happen on your own ground. Or have supporters along to cheer you on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Run away from rancor. If you leave the chip that is often perched on your shoulder at home, you will find that people are more than willing to cooperate with your plans. Help is there for the asking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): These are the best of times, not the worst of times — even if you sometimes wonder if the definition has changed over the course of the ages. Don't, however, make major financial decisions now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Birds can migrate when the weather changes. You, on the other hand, might only get a migraine if you try to escape from pressure or to deal with an atmosphere completely out of your control.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Walk the straight and narrow. The juxtaposition of reality and fantasy might place you in the middle of a slender path. Wait until you have more room to maneuver before making a major decision.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If it's a stone, don't leave it unturned. Your resourcefulness is one of your best skills this week. If someone gives you a problem to deal with, you will be able to handle it with ingenuity and diligence.
