Otter backs down on wolf ultimatum

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

The clock reached zero and then kept ticking on the Oct. 7 ultimatum Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter gave the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, insisting on state control of wolf management.

But rather than end his state’s cooperation regarding the federally protected predator as he had warned, Otter just pushed his deadline into the unforeseeable future.

Otter met Thursday afternoon with Steve Doherty, senior Northwest advisor for the U.S. Interior Department, and representatives from the Governor’s Office of Species Conservation and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to push for a new wolf management agreement.

Otter spokesman Jon Hanian said everything was on the table and the governor considered the meeting a good exchange of concerns. Idaho was not given control of wolf management, Hanian said, but Otter’s deadline was set just to emphasize the urgency.

“We’ve conveyed that

urgency,” Hanian said. “At this point, we’ll continue to work with our federal counterparts as long as we’re moving the ball.”

When asked if Otter pushed back the deadline because he was content with Interior Secretary Ken Salazar joining Idaho and Montana in appealing the court ruling that put wolves back under federal protection, Hanian said it was welcome but Otter expected more.

“We’re dealing with a government that likes to drag these issues out,” Hanian said.

Hanian said Otter will announce in the next few days a response based upon Thursday’s meeting.

On Sept. 8, Otter met with Salazar and set the Oct. 7 deadline for Fish and Wildlife to either return wolf management to Idaho, or Idaho would no longer shoulder its responsibility to monitor wolves.

This came in response to an Aug. 4 federal district court ruling that returned wolves in Idaho and Montana to the endangered species list because Wyoming did not have an approved wolf management plan in place.

Diesel spill snarls early morning Blue Lakes traffic

By Bradley Guire

The crash was a wake-up call for a sleepy truck driver and early morning commuters in Twin Falls.

At around 6 a.m. Thursday, a southbound 2000 Freightliner semitrailer veered left and straddled the median of Blue Lakes Boulevard at the intersection of Bridgeview Boulevard, dragging several large landscaping boulders that punctured the driver-side fuel tank, according to an Idaho State Police report. From there to the intersection of Blue Lakes and Pole Line Road, the tank lost nearly 150 gallons of diesel fuel, most of which spilled at Blue Lakes’ intersection with Pole Line.

ISP determined that driver Kenneth Denning, 54, of Wendell, fell asleep at the wheel. Denning was cited, but the release did not specify the criminal charge. He could not be reached for comment.

Aside from the inevitable cleanup job, officials avoided a much more costly disaster. According to Twin Falls Fire Department Battalion Chief Brian Cunningham, a witness to the crash told one of the first engine crews on the scene that the truck was on fire at one point.

“(The witness) saw the tank dragging, throwing sparks and catching fire,” Cunningham said. “The witness alerted the driver. He exited and got an extinguisher out. It sounded like it was a small fire around the tank area. I don’t know if it was fuel burning. I can’t say for sure.”

Twin Falls County, city float idea of City Hall move

Early talks show a potentially viable option, city manager says

By Nick Coltraine
Times-News writer

Twin Falls city and county officials are floating the idea of moving City Hall into a county-owned downtown clinic building, an idea at odds with county plans of moving offices there and former city plans of building a new city hall.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Terry Kramer and city officials both stressed that the talks are very early on and informal.

“I think potentially it is a very viable option but I think the county needs to figure out what it’s going to do,” said Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney. “But it is all really premature to say anything is going to happen.”

Since at least 2006, the county has been planning to move into the downtown Twin Falls clinic; the county and St. Luke’s have a contract where St. Luke’s will pay $4.6 million to remodel the building when it leaves.

In 2008, the city and its Urban Renewal Agency paid $350,000 for a consultant that recommended building a new city hall to anchor a four-block revitalization project in downtown. The city later balked at that idea.

Kramer said the idea of the city moving into the clinic — which, in addition to St. Luke’s staff, also houses county sheriff’s detectives and the county assessor — is on the table because all options need to be while the main hospital building faces vacancy.

He said the county is kicking around the idea of moving its offices into at least part of the hospital building itself, though it’s not something they would be eager to do. The bottom line is making the best use of all the county’s buildings, he said.

“We still have plans and intentions of moving the county into the clinic,” Kramer said. “Our goal is to use these facilities to the best of their potential ... We do a lot of ‘what-if’ scenarios.”

Courtney said the Twin Falls Police Department has a particular need for space and if the city were to move into the clinic, it would Denning doused the flames — whatever their origin — before the diesel fuel could catch and turn the truck and street into an inferno.

“It could’ve been a bigger problem,” Cunningham added.

Once the truck was removed from the area, a crew from Magic Valley Towing arrived to clean up the mess, layering an absorbing material to soak up the diesel so it could be shoveled into dump truck beds for disposal. The crew finished around 1:10 p.m.

“All things considered, they did a good job containing the (fuel) release,” said Pat O’Rorke of the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality, who was on the scene to oversee cleanup efforts.

Magic Valley Towing owner Gene Graham said the job required eight crew members, two dump trucks, two loaders, a Bobcat with a sweeper and a lot of brooms. The waste was taken to Milner Butte Landfill.

Twin Falls Fire Department dispatched two engines to the scene, while Twin Falls police directed traffic around the closed lanes of Blue Lakes.

The crash remains under investigation by ISP.

U of I touts range station

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

MALTA — University of Idaho President Duane Nellis commended a cooperative effort at a Malta range station that has dedicated 57 years of research to promoting better range management practices.

Nellis met Wednesday with other U of I officials and former students, U.S. Bureau of Land Management officials, ranchers, and present heads of the program at the Point Springs Lee A. Sharp Experimental Area.

“I come from a land-grant tradition since I walked on as an undergraduate student at the University of Montana,” Nellis said. “Land-grant institutions are fundamental as far as our natural resources and agriculture go. It is part of our heritage and part of our foundation. Being here is a great example of that and how important that is.”

One of the first graduate students to work on a master’s thesis at the site, Kendall Johnson, said returning to it was a little like coming home.

“I’ve got mixed feelings,” said Johnson, who graduated in 1957. “I can’t believe that much time has passed and what’s been accomplished. But there is one thing about Point Springs that never changed — the wind always blows.”

Johnson’s thesis was based on an investigation of the competitive relationships of halogeton glomeratus in native shrub and reseeded communities in southern Idaho.

In the 1940s the region saw an outbreak of the noxious weed, which is poisonous to grazing animals. Thousands of sheep were lost, which prompted Congress to pass the Halogeton Control Act in 1948. The Lee A. Sharp Experimental Area was established in 1953 through a cooperative effort with the BLM, U of I and the Point Springs Grazing Association.

Lee Sharp, who was a professor of rangeland resources at the university, launched grazing studies on the site using crested wheatgrass to combat the weed, along with other studies that continue today.

“It is beneficial to BLM, range management and to the ranchers,” said Ken Sanders, a retired U of I professor of range management who headed the program for years.

“We’re not only interested in doing research, but what the value to society and what the implications are,” Nellis said.

Bud Purdy, who worked with Sharp on the rangeland committee for a number of years, said Sharp was a great sponsor of coordinated resource management.

“He believed that if there is a piece of range with different owners and uses, you should coordinate your management,” Purdy said.

Idaho’s all-time, top 10 scoundrels

Bad characters are never in short supply in a frontier state like Idaho, but ours have been especially memorable. Here’s the best of the worst:

10. Weldon Heyburn (1852–1912), Wallace. Bribed Republican members of the Legislature $750 apiece in 1903 to elect him to the U.S. Senate.

9. James Jesus Angleton (1917–1987), Boise. This chief of counterintelligence at the Central Intelligence Agency spied on anti-war protesters and civil rights activists, thought Henry Kissinger was a Soviet spy and privately called Gerald Ford a traitor. And his paranoia — he was convinced there was a KGB mole in the agency — tied the CIA in knots during the height of the Cold War.

8. D.W. Scott, New York City. Real estate scam artist who in 1921 collected $3,000 each from 128 New York City families for 5,120 acres of godforsaken, waterless land at Roseworth in Twin Falls County.

7. Tie, David Renton, Christopher Lower and James Romain. Killed four men — three of them in their sleep — with axes in the course of a robbery in the Bitterroot Mountains in 1863.

6. Diamondfield Jack Davis (1879–1949), Albion. No, he probably didn’t murder the two South Hills sheepherders whom he was convicted of shooting, but he almost certainly killed other people. Points for style: Davis talked himself out of the Idaho State Penitentiary a little early by telling guards he’d whipped up some homemade dynamite.

5. Raymond Snowden, Boise. Idaho’s “Jack the Ripper,” convicted in 1956 of stabbing a Garden City woman 30 times and severing her spinal cord. Hanged the following year.

4. David Updyke (1830–1866), Boise. Ada County’s first sheriff — and a world-class thug whose exploits included a stagecoach robbery during which four passengers were gunned down. Lynched by vigilantes near Rocky Bar.

3. Caleb Lyon (1822–1875), Lewiston. Idaho’s second territorial governor stole the state blind, taking — among many other things — $50,000 in federal money intended for Indian tribes. According to historian Randy Stapilus, Lyon claimed someone filched the loot from beneath his pillow in a railroad sleeper car while he was fleeing the state just ahead of the law — and angry constituents.

2. Harry Orchard (1867–1943), Wallace. He was a hired gun who blew up a former Idaho governor by attaching a bomb to Frank Steunenberg’s front gate, and the prosecution’s star witness in a sensational — if unsuccessful — effort to convict labor union leader Bill Haywood for ordering the hit.

1. Lyda Southard (1892–1958), Twin Falls. Who’s badder than Lady Bluebeard? Idaho’s most famous serial killer, Southard did in four husbands, a brother-in-law and a daughter by boiling flypaper to extract arsenic and then slipping the poison into her victims’ food. Southard did it for the insurance money, eventually pocketing $7,000 before being sent to prison for killing her fourth husband.

Man arrested after hiding in vet’s office

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

Filer police and Twin Falls County sheriff’s deputies arrested a Kimberly man Tuesday after a chase that ended with the suspect locked in a business’ restroom.

Kelly Lynn Smith, 32, of Kimberly, was taken into custody on felony warrants for burglary and violating parole.

Smith was allegedly refueling the 1990 Cadillac Deville he is accused of stealing when Filer Police Chief Tim Reeves pulled into line behind him at the Filer Super Service on U.S. Highway 30.

went inside,” said Reeves, who was also there to refuel his car. “When he didn’t return, I ran the plates and found out the vehicle had been stolen the day before in Twin Falls.”

According to the police report filed by Filer Police Cpl. John Darnall, a search of the car revealed a photo album, prison identification number and a loaded .22 caliber handgun with 500 extra rounds.

When Smith couldn’t be located, Reeves, assisted by Darnall and other officers, began searching the area.

“People said they thought they saw someone matching the description — white male with dark clothing and neck tattoos — at the fairgrounds or out south of town,” Reeves said. “But it was one of our reserve officers (James Benson) who spotted him at Logan’s Market next door.”

Smith allegedly fled the market, followed by Darnall, and ran south across the highway to Larue Veterinary Clinic, next to Filer Middle School where students were outside for their lunch recess.

Reeves said conditions left little time to warn school administrators about what was going on. But he feels that police and deputies did the best they could.

“We didn’t know what he (Smith) was going to do and my job is to apprehend the suspect, so I didn’t have time to turn my back on the situation,” he said. “One of the officers did yell at a grounds teacher to get the kids inside and lock down the school.”

Entering the clinic, Smith reportedly proceeded toward the rear, locked himself in the restroom and remained there until a K-9 unit search verified his location. At around 1 p.m., Smith was arrested and transported to the Twin Falls County Jail — on the way, allegedly telling Darnell “to tell that fat stupid cop to not pull up behind a ‘hot’ car next time when trying to get it,” according to the police report.

Arraigned Wednesday, Smith was given a $75,000 bond. He faces an Oct. 15 preliminary hearing.

Twin Falls leaf compost site to open

Times-News

The city of Twin Falls will open its leaf compost site to the public on Monday.

Citizens can take their collected, loose leaves to the site at 170 Maxwell Ave. through Dec. 6.

Leaves must be loose, and the city asks residents not to leave garbage or other yard waste at the site.

The drop-off site is east of the city’s parks and recreation building, immediately east of the north side of the Old Towne Bridge on Shoshone Street South.

free up the current building for the police department to move into. The clinic building also would potentially allow more city departments to move into the same facility. Several departments are currently separate from the main City Hall.

Mayor Don Hall, who was part of the early conversations, said no studies on space needs for a new city hall, or analysis of useable space in the clinic, have been done by the city. But the city “would be derelict in our duty if we weren’t looking at the future.”

“We’d be open to looking at anything that would be advantageous to the city, the county and the citizens we serve, of course,” he said.

Kramer said the county won’t make any moves until St. Luke’s moves out completely. The hospital’s lease with the county is up July 1, but the county also won’t put any pressure on St. Luke’s to move out.

“We are not going to jeopardize health care in this valley,” Kramer said.

Shoshone revamps fire district

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Tuesday, the Shoshone City Council worked to redraw fire district lines, as the area jumps from three to five subdistricts.
Five years ago, the city's fire department was annexed into the fire district around it. The new partnership became the Shoshone City and Rural Fire Department. The city donated its fire equipment to the new department and the firemen, many of whom worked for both departments, "now only had one boss instead of two," City Clerk Mary Kay Bennett said.
After some debate, the department is now in the process of adding two board members, bumping the total number from three to five. The added representatives will give the city a more visible presence on the board.
"It will give the board more equality, more parity," Fire Chief Steve Stock said.
Neither the response times of the department's two firehouses nor residents' taxes will be affected, but district lines will be.

The fire districts will be redrawn to reflect the new board members. Stock and Mayor J.R. Churchman presented a map of the area and discussed potential divisions, including using local highways as a divider.
The redistricting is required to consider three things: population, area and mileage.
For a community like Shoshone and the rural areas around it, the challenge becomes balancing a densely populated area (like the city) with a larger, but less densely populated area (like the surrounding area).
After the new divisions are finalized, the two new board members will be appointed.
The council also voted to continue building the handicapped-accessible sidewalks in Mary L. Gooding square inch to 3,200 psi.

"For $20 more a yard, if you can double the strength of concrete, do it," Councilman Dan Pierson said.
The council also officially approved a memorandum of understanding between Shoshone and Jerome County that was discussed at the last council meeting. The memo allows Shoshone to contract Jerome's building inspector, and a translator, when needed, to work in Shoshone.

alternative to Mike Simpson," he said. "I like Mike Simpson. I think he's done a very good job for the state."

But Crawford also has concerns about one political party dominating the state's affairs, adding that there are good people on both sides of the aisle.

"My primary goal in doing this is to call attention that we need to have a balanced, working two-party system working in this state," he said. "You have people who are elected who don't accomplish anything. They're elected because of the 'R' after their name, not because they're good candidates or because they're going to accomplish anything of worth."

Schad, 45, describes himself as a constitutional conservative who believes the federal government has grown far beyond what the nation's founding fathers intended.

He served in the military for 12 years, 10 as a Navy SEAL. Now a commodity futures professional, he said his military background has prepared him well for leadership and strategy.

"They taught me to be, and I am now hardwired for, success and accomplishment in any task that is before me," he said.

Schad's interested in giving individuals a one- to two-year "tax holiday" from federal taxes, saying that a break from paying taxes would give the economy a boost.

He points out that the U.S. Constitution doesn't say anything about education or providing health care for every individual.

"Our federal government has grown to a size that just has an insatiable appetite for our tax dollars," he said. "What has happened is they have created a hardship for the middle class."

Simpson, 60, has been in Congress since 1998. He also served as an Idaho state representative from 1984 to 1998. Until 1998, he was a dentist.

Simpson said Congress needs to cut spending and find ways to balance the budget quickly.

"The debt our nation has accumulated over the past few years is now undermining our long-term economic health and causing great concern among the American people and some of the world's most prominent economists," he said in a statement to the Times-News.

He added that in his next term, he'd like to work on a "robust" U.S. energy strategy, amend the Constitution to require a balanced federal budget, create a new farm bill, rein in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency — "the most dangerous agency in the federal government" — and reform entitlement programs.

Among his accomplishments, Simpson notes his work in helping create the 2002 Farm Bill, stabilizing and strengthening the Idaho National Laboratory, protecting hunting rights in expanded parts of Craters of the Moon National Monument, and the collaboration he's led to solve disputes over managing public lands.

He said he's also proud of helping transfer federal land to the city of Twin Falls for its Auger Falls Park.

Members of Congress are paid a salary of $174,000 a year.

Details emerge from accident at Jerome Cheese Company

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Three individuals working as independent contractors at Jerome Cheese Co. were injured Saturday night during an industrial accident.

Jerome Police Officer Ken Rushing arrived on the scene shortly before midnight and was informed than a construction elevator had fallen approximately 15 feet. At least one person reportedly lost consciousness. Emergency personnel from Jerome Fire Department and emergency medical technicians also responded.

Rushing requested help from a search and rescue team, as the victim and the platform were approximately 40 to 50 feet above ground level. Several paramedics and firefighters climbed a small ladder to a lower level beneath the platform, then crawled into the platform with a victim, only to discover two more people. All three were eventually lowered down in a stretcher and hand-carried over the side, using the structure as a brace.

Plant manager Bill Riebesell said that the individuals were not employees of Jerome Cheese Co. The names of the accident victims were not taken by Jerome police, who have no other information on the case. The extent of their injuries remains unclear.

Alleged shooter pleads not guilty

A Shoshone man pleaded not guilty Tuesday in Lincoln County 5th District Court to aggravated assault.

Charles E. Cooke, 60, is accused of peppering his son-in-law's vehicle with a 12-gauge shotgun on Aug. 22. Cooke and Adam Thomas said they had argued earlier in the day, according to a police report. Thomas drove to Cooke's property in Shoshone, only to find Cooke allegedly hiding in a ditch with a shotgun. Thomas claimed that Cooke jumped up and shot at him.

Cooke's trial is set for Jan. 5 in front of Judge John Butler. An enhancement for use of a deadly weapon was added to the assault charge.

Sturgeon poacher violates probation

A convicted sturgeon poacher is in prison after violating his probation.

Thomas B. Withers, 32, of Buhl, pleaded guilty to felony burglary on Sept. 13, violating a probationary period set back in 2009 when he was found guilty of unlawfully killing, possessing or wasting wildlife.

Withers was sentenced to restitution of $2,050 and one to three years in state prison on Sept. 19, 2009. The sentence was suspended with a four-year probationary period. According to a report from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, Withers caught three sturgeon in June 2009, kept them in his bathtub, then disposed of them in a ditch after he couldn't figure out how to filet and eat the fish.

In April, Withers was charged with burglary and grand theft, the latter of which was dismissed, for stealing a car while intoxicated. He pleaded guilty to burglary and was sentenced to three to six years in state prison with a one-year retained jurisdiction program at the Correctional Alternative Placement Program in Ada County. His original sentence was reimposed, but he again received a one-year retained jurisdiction program at CAPP. Both sentences will run concurrently.

Nevada's Angle says Muslim law taking hold in some U.S. cities

By Martin Griffith
Associated Press writer

LAS VEGAS — U.S. Senate candidate Sharron Angle told a crowd of supporters that the country needs to address a “militant terrorist situation” that has allowed Islamic religious law to take hold in some American cities.

Her comments came at a rally of tea party supporters in the Nevada resort town of Mesquite last week after the candidate was asked about Muslims angling to take over the country, and marked the latest of several controversial remarks by the Nevada Republican.

In a recording of the rally provided to The Associated Press by the Mesquite Local News, a man is heard asking Angle: “I keep hearing about Muslims wanting to take over the United States ... on a TV program just last night, I saw that they are taking over a city in Michigan and the residents of the city, they want them out. They want them out. So, I want to hear your thoughts about that.”

Angle responds that “we’re talking about a militant terrorist situation, which I believe it isn’t a widespread thing, but it is enough that we need to address, and we have been addressing it.”

“My thoughts are these, first of all, Dearborn, Michigan, and Frankford, Texas are on American soil, and under constitutional law. Not Sharia law. And I don’t know how that happened in the United States,” she said. “It seems to me there is something fundamentally wrong with allowing a foreign system of law to even take hold in any municipality or government situation in our United States.”

TOP REPUBLICAN LAWMAKER BACKS REID

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Veteran state Sen. Bill Raggio, one of Nevada's most influential Republicans over the last four decades, says he's reluctantly endorsing Democratic U.S. Sen. Harry Reid's re-election campaign.

Raggio issued a statement Thursday sharply criticizing GOP candidate Sharron Angle, branding her as a “totally ineffective” four-term state lawmaker.

Raggio also cited what he called Angle's inability and unwillingness to work with others even within her own party, and her extreme positions on Social Security and other issues.

Raggio also criticized Angle for badmouthing GOP leaders in a recent secretly taped conversation.

The Angle campaign did not immediately respond to Raggio's comments.

Raggio defeated Angle two years ago in a bitter GOP primary.

clear why Angle singled out Frankford, Texas, a former town that was annexed into Dallas around 1975.

Responding to the same question, she also drew comparisons between the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks and the Nazi Holocaust. She said the property owners behind the proposed Islamic community center near ground zero should move it in deference to the people who died there.

“There was, in Auschwitz, I think it was Auschwitz, it was at least a prisoner of war camp, where the Catholic Church owned some property and they were going to build a church there. They had every right to do it but they stepped aside and said, no, we are going to allow the Jewish people to make a monument because they lost lives,” she said. “They had a responsibility to be sensitive to what had happened there and it is exactly the same thing as 9/11. Ground zero, we have a responsibility to be sensitive to the loss of a nation, to the loss of families, to the loss of life that happened there.”

Angle seemed to be referring to a Roman Catholic convent at the Auschwitz death camp that Pope John Paul II ordered moved in 1993 in response to Jewish protests.

Others, including the Anti-Defamation League, the nation's leading Jewish civil rights group, have evoked the relocated convent while voicing opposition to the mosque.

Board supports mercury rules

BOISE — The Idaho Board of Environmental Quality unanimously backed new rules that would toughen state controls for mercury emissions.

Wednesday's 5-0 vote was hailed by environmentalists, who have been pushing the issue for more than a year.

The ruling requires companies that emit mercury to install controls, if they exceed a certain limit.

Groups including the Idaho Conservation League secured the support of Monsanto Corp., the state's biggest industrial source of mercury.

They've argued for years the state needed tougher regulations on mercury, on grounds it can accumulate in fish and poses health risks to babies and pregnant mothers.

Labrador, Minnick earn 'B' grades on immigration

BOISE — A national group that supports curbs on immigration has weighed in on Idaho's 1st Congressional District race, calling both Democratic U.S. Rep Walt Minnick and his Republican challenger a “true reformer.”

NumbersUSA president Roy Beck says Minnick earned a B grade based on his voting record in the U.S. House. The group did not give state lawmaker Raul Labrador, an immigration attorney, a grade because he doesn't have a record in federal office.

New, consensus mercury rules will protect Idahoans

A little-noticed action Wednesday by one of Idaho’s lesser-known state government entities could eventually save your children or grandchildren from serious health problems.

The Board of Environmental Quality unanimously backed new regulations to toughen state controls for mercury emissions.

The action was hailed by environmentalists, who have been pushing the issue for more than a year.

The ruling requires companies that emit mercury to install controls, if they exceed a certain limit.

Groups including the Idaho Conservation League secured the support of Monsanto Corp., the state’s biggest industrial source of mercury.

They’ve argued for years the state needed tougher standards on mercury, because it can accumulate in fish and poses health risks to babies and pregnant mothers.

Idaho lakes from Canada to the Nevada border have mercury advisories.

The new rules are subject to legislative approval, but they go into effect unless both chambers vote them down.

Our view: Eighteen months ago, environmental groups and Monsanto bitterly disagreed on regulation of airborne mercury emissions. But they managed to forge a compromise that is a landmark in Idaho environmental protection.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

It’s remarkable that the new regulations came about at all. Monsanto, the St. Louis-based agrichemical giant which owns a phosphorus production plant in Soda Springs, strongly opposed them originally, but in the summer of 2009 cut a with the ICL to file a joint petition with the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality to require large mercury use and technology available to curb mercury emissions.

Mercury is a potent neurotoxin that can lead to learning disabilities and motor skill problems in developing fetuses. Airborne mercury eventually settles in water, where it can change into methylmercury, which builds up in freshwater fish and can be highly toxic to humans who eat the fish.

Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir continues to have high mercury levels, and the long-suspected source is northern Nevada gold mines. At the urging of the ICL’s Justin Hayes, Nevada implemented a mercury monitoring program and required all mines that emitted mercury above a certain level to use the maximum available technology for cutting mercury emissions.

In April, the federal Environmental Protection Agency proposed cutting mercury emissions from gold ore processing and production facilities. EPA’s proposal would reduce annual mercury emissions to about 1,390 pounds a year — a 73 percent reduction from 2007 levels.

There are other mercury sources from outside Idaho that are potential threats, but the tougher state controls are a major step toward protecting Idahoans’ health.

Getting legislators to legislate

WASHINGTON — The Democrats were lying in wait for John Boehner when the Republican leader of the House announced that he would address the subject of congressional reform in a speech last week at the American Enterprise Institute.

Before Boehner opened his mouth, Speaker Nancy Pelosi blasted him in a statement charging that “Congressional Republicans and Mr. Boehner have stood in the way of Democratic reform efforts in Congress for the last four years, and now they want to take America back to the exact same failed policies of the past that put the corporate special interests ahead of the middle class.”

That is par for the course in this campaign season, and it represents the sort of reflexive partisanship that voters are understandably sick of. Unless the forecasts for next month’s House elections are wildly off course, the House will operate in 2011-12 with a small majority under nominal control of Pelosi or Boehner, but probably at the mercy of shifting coalitions.

In such a setting, it might well behoove people to assume that Boehner should be taken seriously when he acknowledges that the reputation of this Congress is so bad that it cries out for reform.

Many of the Republican leader’s proposals are standard, and some that are not are questionable. But few who serve in the House, or observe it closely, would challenge Boehner’s analysis of the dynamic that has made Congress a dysfunctional legislative body and Capitol Hill a hostile workplace.

“One of the reasons why we do not have a functioning civil society in the House,” he said, “is that our efforts are geared toward catering to the individual member instead of focusing on our collective responsibility to govern.”

David Broder

“ ... we should open things up and let the battle of ideas help break down the scar tissue between the parties.”

Boehner argued that on the House side, “the rules are too often manipulated to shut down debate and protect individual members from tough votes.” He was too polite to say so, but the Senate is even worse when it comes to accommodating or indulging its members, at the cost of collective responsibility.

What Boehner called “a cycle of gridlock” afflicts both sides of the Capitol, and has been enabled by both parties, depending on who had the majority. As he was honest enough to admit, the abuses did not start when Pelosi took the gavel, and both sides have been guilty of twisting the rules.

If the margins of control shrink next January, as I think they will, it might well be time to negotiate a truce.

I’d like to see Pelosi and the rest of the Democratic leaders take Boehner up on the challenge he has raised, not try to demean it. He said, for example, that rather than stifling debate through the manipulation of rules, “we should open things up and let the battle of ideas help break down the scar tissue between the parties. ... Let’s let legislators legislate again.”

It would be great if the leaders could engage each other seriously at the start of the next Congress on rules and procedures for doing the nation’s business.

There’s no excuse for the House failing to pass a budget resolution, as happened for the first time this year. As Boehner said, it boggles the mind that spending bills for major government departments are lumped together in an indigestible mass.

When large majorities of the nation’s voters voice disdain and distrust for a Congress that is supposed to represent them in writing the laws, it is not just a problem for one party or the other. It is a threat to our system of government.

Boehner was a serious legislator for five years at the start of this decade as chairman of the House Committee on Education and the Workforce, before he became a floor leader for his party. His diagnosis of the problems in Congress offers a starting point for a cure. Let’s hope the Democrats respond.

Twin Falls is behind on public transportation

Needs of the people should drive city government. I chuckled when I read that swing sets should be protected from tobacco burners. Hardly a carbon footprint. The same folks roar away in vehicles that, according to statistics, belch out monoxides, dioxides and hydro carbons in the pounds per mile. Pedestrians, bicyclers, young and old are subjected to daily abuse. Every pound of petroleum we have ever drilled is still here with us!

Checking the Twin Falls City comprehensive plan, public transportation nets only a half-page starting on Page 53. Buried as it is, the key words are might, maybe and when. When the city reaches 50,000 people, something might happen.

Now that the unemployed number 9.6 percent and rising, it is clear more people cannot utilize automobiles. Have you ever got out and walked in this town? Everything is spread out and there is no bus.

I propose first, a shuttle continuously from downtown and Blue Lakes to the mall and back. Trans IV should put bike racks on their regional buses. Our cities to the north already have complete bus service. Where is our leadership?

This vote won't go to a cowboy; Kemp gets it

She may not know how to ride a horse or rope a steer but is quite capable to govern the great Gem State — Idaho. Yes, that would be Jana Kemp, Independent candidate for governor 2010.

Back in the farmland of Illinois at the age of 14, I played a guitar and sang, “I want to be a cowboy’s sweetheart. I want to learn to rope and to ride.” I liked the cowboys then and now, at the golden age of 84, I still like cowboys.

But I’m not going to vote for a cowboy, Mr. Crump. Jana Kemp has my vote.

When asked what she would do differently, she answered, “everything.” Her leadership style would be to listen, explore, analyze, synthesize and draw on people who have the know-how to solve problems. Check her out at www.janet.kemp.com.

Many ills spring from messages to youth

My father didn’t think he needed to tell me not to smoke, drink, take drugs or have unprotected sex. Well, except for cigarettes, the others weren’t readily available or else I was too dumb to seek them out. I passed on that same faulty education to my kids.

A naked female breast was then only seen in National Geographic. Today, drugs are everywhere and movies and TV show them as cool. Casual sex is at your elbow. Porn is no longer hidden; it’s just a click away and girls are now sexting their nude and explicit photos on the Internet. Schools teach aural sex and application of condoms.

A&M Partnership started abstinence training seminars to re-establish nearly extinct marriage values. Premarital and multi-partner sex, couples living together are widespread and accepted. Sexually transmitted diseases, unwanted pregnancies, abandoned family trust, ruined reputations have resulted. But finally, some teenagers are learning that unthinking actions bring lifelong consequences.

Children produced by unwed couples suffer from low esteem and social separation. Still, the option given (in privacy) to pregnant teenagers is that of abortion. Maybe you think it doesn’t happen here. Then you’re unaware of the media’s targeting our youth with 15- and 16-year-olds being presented as the new “sexy” teen idols or TV programs that show sexually aggressive girls of 14 to 16. And what teenaged girls want, they often get. Your daughters and granddaughters see those programs.

Homicide here is double the rest of the state. Divorce in Idaho is now the lowest on record only because fewer young people are marrying. Teen pregnancies in the Magic and Wood River valleys, low birth weight and death rate of babies are the state’s highest. Abstinence training is information school kids need and are not getting, can’t get from public education.

Community colleges: America’s gateway to the future

For decades, community colleges have been one of our nation’s best kept secrets. But the word is out. As a result, community colleges across the country are bursting at the seams. The American dream is within reach for millions of individuals from diverse backgrounds whose perseverance and commitment was celebrated Tuesday when President Obama and I hosted the first-ever White House Summit on Community Colleges.

I’ve been an educator for the last 29 years — and I continue to teach full-time at a community college not far from the White House. So the challenge to elevate education is personal to me: Every single day in my classroom, I see the power of education to break down barriers and instill confidence in the diverse individuals that I teach. I also see just how critical the college experience is to putting my students on the path to success.

Getting Americans back to work is the great challenge facing our nation right now — and community colleges are critically important to preparing graduates for those jobs.

I have seen job-training partnerships in community colleges across the country in some of our fastest-growing sectors like green technologies and health-care professions. These partnerships are good for the schools, the businesses, and most important, the students and future workers.

In order to restore America’s economic competitiveness and prosperity, the Obama administration has set a goal of once again having the highest proportion of college graduates in the world by the year 2020. Community colleges are central to this effort, and the president has specifically called on community colleges to help an additional 5 million Americans earn degrees and certificates in that time. Our challenge is to help these institutions meet the pressing education and job training needs of millions of students working to achieve the American dream. Students just like the ones in my classroom, whose lives are changed by the confidence and opportunity they gain from a quality education.

We are not just talking about the great impact of community colleges. The Obama-Biden administration has directed significant resources and energy to help community colleges and their students reach their full potential.

In the coming months, we will announce the first $500 million of a $2 billion, four-year investment in community colleges authorized by Congress and signed into law on March 30. This federal investment will support new state-of-the-art education, training and skills development programs to help out-of-work Americans re-enter the job market with increased knowledge and more marketable skills. The funds will enable community colleges to work with universities, business, government and unions to develop career pathways leading to more college graduates ready for the workforce as our economy recovers. In addition, through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, the Obama administration has invested billions of dollars specifically in community colleges.

But we can’t do it alone. Private sector companies also need to play a pivotal role in this partnership. The Gates Foundation, The Aspen Institute, The Joyce Foundation and Lumina have recently committed new resources and innovative ideas to help prepare our students for a 21st century workforce.

In my own teaching and in my travels, I’ve met countless students who have overcome significant life challenges to get a community college education. Many of them work full-time, have aging parents in need of care and attention, or are parents themselves. Often they contend with difficult economic realities. Yet, they are willing to work as hard as it takes to make life better for themselves and their families. They are students like Janet Ekis, from Monroe Community College in Rochester, N.Y., who wrote to me through www.WhiteHouse.gov/CommunityCollege: “Community college didn’t just change my life — it gave me my life.”

Community colleges are uniquely positioned to help millions more people meet their dreams for a better life and to help our nation build a strong economic future. These institutions and the students they serve deserve a chance to succeed and we all have a role to play.

Jill Biden is the wife of Vice President Joe Biden and a teacher at Northern Virginia Community College. She wrote this commentary for McClatchy-Tribune Newspapers.

Kleinkopf has long experience at CSI

As a resident of Twin Falls, I am grateful to have the College of Southern Idaho in the Magic Valley. CSI is the heart of the community, supporting education, careers and the economic viability of the entire area.

In a few weeks, each of us will have the opportunity to vote for two trustees who will guide the course of the college. I am proud to support Karl Kleinkopf. Karl is a third-generation Idahoan. He has 33 years of experience at CSI, having served as a department chairman, track and cross-country coach, athletic director and professor.

Those of us in the Magic Valley face a challenging time for education. With budgets stretched to the limits and enrollments increasing, I am confident Karl can provide new ideas and direction for the College of Southern Idaho.

I encourage you to vote on Nov. 2 and vote for the new voice in Karl Kleinkopf.

Hartgen has earned voters’ support

Stephen Hartgen, candidate for District 23B, Idaho House of Representatives, is more than just a good Republican. He is a leader with a vision. His outstanding performance as an Idaho representative has been marked by his demonstrated work ethic, willingness to listen to all sides of an argument, solid common-sense approach to problems and an understanding of the core values of his constituents.

While California, Oregon and Washington continue to raise taxes and sink deeper into debt, Rep. Hartgen has been a force urging strong fiscal policies for Idaho. Realizing that increasing taxes in the current economic environment is a formula for failure, he has made the tough choices and supported bills calling for all in-state government to make the cuts necessary for Idaho to balance the Fiscal Year 2009-2010 budget.

Steve is a skilled communicator who has distinguished himself as a man of integrity with an unequaled understanding of his district’s future opportunities. This command of the key issues such as our agricultural economy, economic development and educational problems clearly mark him as the man who will best represent District 23B in the next two years.

Please take the time to review Rep. Hartgen’s record of accomplishments. He has earned your support in the coming November election.

Scandalize, repent, get a TV show

Laura Kipnis

What’s the appropriate waiting period after a massive public disgrace before the scandalizer in question appears on Dancing With the Stars or hints at a presidential run?

The process seems to have been fast-tracked lately. South Carolina Gov. Mark Sanford is back from the Appalachian Trail and enjoying a 50 percent approval rating; Sen. David Vitter, R-La., of D.C. Madam fame, seems poised for reelection.

Even flagrant hypocrisy isn’t a disqualifier for a second act. Family-values politicians exposed as adulterers (Newt Gingrich) or House leaders brought down by multiple ethics charges (Tom DeLay) are back in our living rooms, tangoing, pontificating, polishing their talk show quips. Who wasn’t perversely enthralled to watch the Hammer samba away on Dancing last year? Following DeLay’s lead, teen mom turned abstinence queen Bristol Palin, who never had much of a first act, is nonetheless enjoying the fruits of a second.

When did we, as a moral community, become such doormats?

Scandals have always performed a necessary social function. The community brands and expels transgressors in humiliating, sometimes grisly ways, purifying itself in the process. Once there were public stockades and scarlet letters; these days, the media shoulders most of the burden. Late-night talk show sadism and the savagery of the blogosphere are our tools of ignominy. The technology may have changed, but scandal’s role remains the same: If communities are enclaves of shared norms, then shaming and shunning norm-violators is part of what makes a community.

But how can we shun them when they won’t go away? Case in point: former New York Gov. Eliot Spitzer, with his world-class talent for flamboyant self-immolation. After a mortifying prostitution scandal, and following a swift, shrewd rehabilitation campaign featuring op-eds and TV appearances, he has begun a second career as co-host of the new talk show Parker Spitzer, alongside Washington Post columnist Kathleen Parker. CNN hopes the show will revive its sagging ratings, and maybe it will. Spitzer is a brilliant guy and a canny political observer — though perhaps not so brilliant and canny in every respect.

Which brings us to one of the main problems with second acts: New selves don’t just spring fully fledged from the wreckage of old lives. The old, bad selves stick around to have a cackle or two.

The central rite of scandal redemption is the public introspection session, and Spitzer has played along in multiple forums. He’s been interrogated on NBC’s Today by Matt Lauer and in Alex Gibney’s upcoming documentary Client 9. But he still hasn’t proved to be a world-class practitioner of self-examination.

With Lauer, he emphasized — three times — that there was no excuse for his behavior, repeating the phrase “egregious violation.” A cynic might suspect excess media coaching.

Things only get worse when he goes for high-culture references, as in his interviews with Gibney, in which he compares himself to Icarus.

Then he casually drops a small bombshell into the conversation. While governor, he sensed that he was under surveillance. He was: The FBI was tracking his dates with prostitutes and his clunky financial ruses to pay the tab. Why did that intuition fail to trigger an internal alarm?

Sex may be losing its ability to scandalize, but the capacity for self-destruction

— how incoherent and clueless otherwise rational people can be — still has the power to shock. What makes Spitzer’s strange smiles so disquieting is the realization that they’re glimpses of Irwin taking fiendish pleasure in having chopped down another case of hubris. We’re brought face to face with that strange impulse that occasionally moves people to bulldoze their lives.

If we’re more forgiving lately, it’s because we’re so divided as a moral community. Each new scandal winds up being a referendum on our shifting social norms, norms so in flux that even animal-torturers (Michael Vick) can win their way back into sports fans’ hearts with nothing more than a brief, state-imposed exile and a better passing game.

The old sexual morality is dead, the public-private divide is up for grabs, political civility is a joke, and economic panic is breeding cynicism about the social contract. How can there be any moral consensus on such shaky ground?

Laura Kipnis is a professor in the radio-television-film department at Northwestern University. She wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

Why would you want to pray for me?

WASHINGTON — Even the nicest and most caring religious people are often unaware of quite how rude they are being.

For example, it’s extremely impolite to ask me how, if I don’t believe in your personal god, I can possibly have any sense of morality. And it’s also rather presumptuous, as well as illogical, to suggest that, now that I know of a nasty change in my physical condition, it’s surely time for me to be thinking of an alteration in my mental and intellectual state as well.

Leaving aside those who have thanked god for giving me cancer and a future in the eternal inferno, the offer of prayer can only have two implications: either a wish for my recovery or a wish for a reconsideration of my atheism (or both). In the first instance, a get-well card — accompanied by a good book or a fine bottle — would be just as bracing if not indeed more so. In the second one, a clear suggestion is present: surely now, at last, Hitchens, your fears will begin to vanish your reason.

What a thing to hope for! Yet without this parody of concern, religion would instantly lose a vast portion of its power. If I was to be wrong about this, then the faithful would have been praying for me to see the light when I was not dying. But this they mostly did not choose to do.

The deity whose intercession is being implored is claimed to be omniscient, omnipotent and omnipresent. It is fully aware of the situation. It can make me a believer if it chooses, or wave away my carcinoma. Why should it be swayed by the entreaties of other sinners? My provisional conclusion is that those who practice incantations are doing so as much for their sake as mine: no harm in that to be sure and likely to produce just as much of a result.

Writer Christopher Hitchens, an atheist, wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

Idaho second quarter exports continue to rise

Exports up more than 54 percent from the same period of 2009

Times-News

Idaho export sales continue to trend positive with the most current quarter's results up more than 54 percent when compared with the same period in 2009. One year ago, Idaho exports were down more than $1.1 billion compared to their record high in 2008. Now, in the second quarter of 2010, exports have rebounded to $2.566 billion, only $17.3 million less than their record high two years ago.

The top Idaho export category continues to be semiconductors, but exports of light aircraft, semiconductor equipment, dehydrated dairy products, precious and semi-precious metals, paper products, and transportation equipment have remained strong. Technology products (up 60 percent) and transportation equipment (up 489 percent) took a substantial jump as compared to the same period in 2009.

Damien Bard, administrator of the International Business Division at the Department of Commerce said, "We are encouraged by the improved performance across a broad range of export sectors. The improving export economy and diversity of Idaho companies who are shipping products internationally is a positive indicator for job creation."

The top export destinations for Idaho goods during the second quarter of 2010 were: Canada, Singapore, Taiwan, China and South Korea. Idaho companies export products to more than 115 countries.

Products ranging from integrated circuits to agricultural machinery to wood and forest products are exported from Idaho. The state of Idaho maintains offices in Taiwan, Mexico and China to support companies export assistance needs.

Apple to make iPhones for CDMA networks

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — A new report says Apple Inc. is getting ready to manufacture an iPhone model that works on the cellular network operated by Verizon Wireless, though it doesn't necessarily mean it's coming to that carrier any time soon.

It has long been rumored that Verizon Wireless will eventually start selling the iPhone. But Lowell McAdam, the head of Verizon Wireless, on Wednesday downplayed the possibility of an iPhone on Verizon's current 3G network. Verizon

Retailers report September back-to-school boost

By Mae Anderson
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Americans proved in September they are willing to spend, as long as the price and the product are right.

Stores including Abercrombie & Fitch Co., Limited Brands Inc. and Macys Inc. posted strong September sales figures, helped by customers lured to malls by back-to-school discounting. That strength was partly offset by erratic weather in the last week of the month, including a heat wave on the West Coast and tropical storms on the East Coast.

The results are a positive sign that shoppers will be willing to spend during the upcoming holiday season.

"I think the doom and gloom that many of us anticipated for the quarter appears unfounded," said Stifel Nicolaus analyst Richard Jaffe. "Credit goes to the U.S. consumer and the U.S. retailer for sleuthing out what she wants and giving it to her."

The International Council of Shopping Centers' index of September retail sales rose 2.6 percent, near the low end of its forecast that ranged from 2.5 to 3 percent growth.

But the number is stronger than it appears, since retailers were up against year-ago results that were the first positive numbers in a year, making comparisons more difficult.

Mike Niemira, ICSC director of research and chief economist, said he expects holiday sales to rise 3 percent to 3.5 percent, slightly better than results in September, which is the third largest sales month in terms of volume.

Still, results remain moderate compared to pre-recession performance. Analysts do not expect any major sales surge until unemployment, housing and consumer confidence sectors markedly improve. Currently, employers aren't hiring enough to bring down the 9.6 percent unemployment rate.

"Our holiday projections are not for a gangbuster season," Niemira said. "I suspect we'll see

Wealthy lock in low gift levy as time runs out on estate tax exemption

By Ryan J. Donmoyer
Bloomberg News writer

WASHINGTON — The 84-year-old widow gathered her children at the Chicago offices of the law firm McDermott Will & Emery and told them they were going to get a special Christmas gift this year: half of her $20 million fortune.

The decision to pass on her money while still alive was prompted by the deadlock in Congress over renewing Bush-era tax cuts that could make providing for her heirs much more costly if she dies after Dec. 31.

"She said, 'I don't want anyone wishing I was dead,'" said her lawyer, Domingo Such, who declined to identify the client.

Estates are exempt from all taxes for 2010, and the rate shoots up to 55 percent next year unless lawmakers act in a post-election session. That means the best tax-reduction strategy, short of dying in 2010, may be to transfer assets to family members this year and lock in a historically low gift-tax rate of 35 percent.

At first, the 84-year-old woman's heirs thought she was joking about her fear of a death wish, Such said. The repeal of the estate tax this year — which the economist Paul Krugman has called the "Throw Momma from the Train" law in his New York Times column — has generated much black humor about unfortunate accidents befalling wealthy parents as Dec. 31 approaches.

Such says his client made a bet that she would reduce her tax bill by as much as 40 percent by rewarding her heirs immediately, compared with what she would pay if she dies in 2011 or beyond. The gift tax also is scheduled to rise to 55 percent Jan. 1 without congressional intervention.

"This is the lowest rate that the gift tax has ever been at; it's only going to get higher," Such says.

Gift taxes have long been matched with estate taxes to prevent the wealthiest from ducking the Internal Revenue Service after death. Americans can give away a total of $13,000 this year without any tax consequence, up to a $1 million lifetime maximum. When the allowance is spent, gifts are taxed at the same rate as estates. The exception: the 0 percent estate-tax rate prevailing in 2010, which is accompanied by a 35 percent gift tax, equal to the top marginal rate on ordinary income.

All of those rates were set in 2001 as part of an effort by then-President George W. Bush and his Republican allies to abolish the estate tax permanently. After encountering opposition from congressional Democrats, they had to settle for a gradual reduction over a decade culminating in a one-year repeal for 2010.

Now, Congress is sparring over what to do with the estate tax as part of a larger debate over Bush's tax cuts, which all expire at the end of the year. Democrats last month postponed any discussion on extending the cuts until at least mid-

November, after the congressional elections and before most of the newly elected lawmakers are seated.

President Barack Obama and House Democrats still want to restore 2009 rules that exempted the first $7 million of a couple's estate from any tax and applied a top 45 percent rate to the remainder. Most Republicans still back extending the repeal. In the Senate, Arizona Republican Jon Kyl and Arkansas Democrat Blanche Lincoln have attracted support from both parties with a 35 percent rate and a $10 million exemption.

Health law foes lose key court ruling

By Ed White
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — A federal judge on Thursday upheld the authority of the federal government to require everyone to have health insurance, dealing a setback to groups seeking to block the new national health care plan.

The ruling came in a lawsuit filed in Michigan by a Christian legal group and four people who claimed lawmakers exceeded their power under the Constitution’s commerce clause, which authorizes Congress to regulate trade.

But Judge George Caram Steeh in Detroit said the mandate to get insurance by 2014 and the financial penalty for skipping coverage are legal. He said Congress was trying to lower the overall cost of insurance by requiring participation.

“Without the minimum coverage provision, there would be an incentive for some individuals to wait to purchase health insurance until they needed care, knowing that insurance would be available at all times,” the judge said.

“As a result, the most costly individuals would be in the insurance system and the least costly would be outside it,” Steeh said. “In turn, this would aggravate current problems with cost-shifting and lead to even higher premiums.”

Julian Davis Mortenson, a University of Michigan law professor and former U.S. Supreme Court law clerk, said the decision affects only the parties in the lawsuit and is not binding on any other federal judges hearing challenges to the law.

Nonetheless, the Justice Department hailed Steeh’s opinion as the first time a “court has considered the merits of any challenge to this law.”

“The court found that the minimum coverage provision of the statute was a reasonable means for Congress to take in reforming our health care system,” spokeswoman Tracy Schmalzer said. “The department will continue to vigorously defend this law in ongoing litigation.”

Robert Muise of the Thomas More Law Center in Ann Arbor, Mich., which filed the case, said he would take it to a federal appeals court in Cincinnati.

The four individual plaintiffs said they do not have private insurance and object to being forced to buy it. They also fear that any financial penalty paid to the government would be used to pay for abortions.

In Florida, a federal judge is overseeing a lawsuit filed by 20 states. They, too, say the law is unconstitutional and claim it would force states to absorb higher Medicaid costs.

A decision on whether to dismiss the case is expected by Oct. 14, though the judge said last month that he would probably dismiss only parts of the complaint while letting others go to trial.

Report: Some contractors linked to murder, kidnapping, bribery

By Karen DeYoung
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. military has only minimal knowledge of — and exercises virtually no control over — the thousands of Afghans it indirectly pays to guard its installations, including “warlords and strongmen linked to murder, kidnapping, bribery” and to the Taliban, Senate investigators said in a blistering report released Thursday.

The bipartisan report, compiled after a year-long investigation, notes that the military has recently launched its own investigations of the situation and has taken some steps to address it. In one of the most significant steps, Gen. David H. Petraeus, the top U.S. and NATO commander in Afghanistan, has issued new contractor guidelines.

Still, the Senate investigation documents a failure to properly vet, train and supervise Afghan security subcontractors, hired by U.S. and other international firms under multimillion-dollar military contracts.

That failure has cost American lives, undermined the U.S. mission and the Afghan government, and “helped play into the hands of the enemy,” said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Some of the Afghan security subcontractors, Levin told reporters Thursday, are “creating the very threat they are hired to combat.”

Committee staff reviewed more than 125 Defense Department security contracts dated between 2007 and 2009 and provided a detailed account of two in which subcontractors had direct and well-known ties to the Taliban. The report recounts an instance in which the military raided a Taliban meeting being held at the house of a subcontractor. It also notes instances in which security subcontractors were believed by U.S. military intelligence to be Iranian agents.

According to the U.S. Central Command, the report said, there were more than 112,000 Defense Department contractor personnel in Afghanistan as of April 30. As of May, more than 26,000 armed private security personnel — nearly all of them Afghans — worked for the Pentagon and other U.S. agencies.

Subcontracted Afghans provide perimeter security for U.S. forward operating bases, civilian installations and development projects, as well as for the truck convoys that carry most of the food, fuel, weapons and other supplies for the U.S.-led coalition.

In congressional testimony in December, Defense Secretary Robert Gates and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton acknowledged concern that the United States was indirectly funding warlords and the Taliban. In June, a House subcommittee investigation found that Afghan private security contractors ran a “protection racket” in which militias, some tied to the Taliban, received money to protect supply convoys.

Early this year, Afghan President Hamid Karzai pledged to disband private security contracting firms. This week, Afghanistan’s Interior Ministry announced that it had begun disarming those companies that are unlicensed.

In a letter Tuesday to Levin, Gates said the report had helped the Defense Department “understand the nature of the problems associated with contracting in Afghanistan.” He said oversight has already been expanded in an effort to “benefit our forces on the ground while not providing aid to our enemies.”

The military has been reluctant to remove U.S. troops from combat and other duties to protect the supply convoys. But in the wake of the earlier subcommittee report, it has looked for alternatives, including using Afghan national security forces to guard the trucks. The next step of Karzai’s phase-out of the private security firms, U.S. military officials said, will target those providing convoy escorts. Replacement of the “static” security discussed in the Senate committee’s report will come at a later date, officials said.

Karzai has said he plans to incorporate the private guards into the armed forces. But that is seen as a monumental task, given the power of the warlords to whom many of the guards owe their loyalty, and the government’s inability to match their pay scale.

The report and its conclusions were adopted without objection in a voice vote by the Armed Services Committee last week, and the 86-page document was declassified with few redactions.

Man who faked death in plane crash gets 10 years

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A judge Thursday ignored pleas for leniency from an Indiana money manager who conned friends into investing in a fund that didn’t exist and tried to fake his death by parachuting out of a plane and crashing it when the scheme started to unravel.

Hamilton Superior Court Judge Steven Nation sentenced Marcus Schrenker to 10 years in prison, ignore Schrenker’s claims that a lighter sentence would give him enough time to make things right.

Schrenker will serve the sentence consecutively with a four-year federal prison term he received for ditching his plane in January 2009 and crashing it in Florida.

Schrenker, 39, told Nation he wanted to repay investors and rebuild his relationship with the three children he’s seen only once since his arrest.

He said he has bipolar disorder and had got caught in a downward spiral of stress after becoming addicted to painkillers.

“I had it all and I threw it away,” he said as his estranged wife, Michelle, watch the proceedings quietly from the audience.

Schrenker pleaded guilty last month to five securities fraud charges and agreed to serve up to 10 years in prison and pay more than $600,000 in restitution.

White Pine gets year's biggest award from Smith's program

By Judy Albertson
Times News writer

White Pine Intermediate School in Burley recently got a big pay-off from the Smith's Food & Drug Earn & Learn Program.

The school received $10,934.51 from the program, which has been available to schools for more than five years, said Mark Hymas, manager at Smith's.

"Smith's set aside $1 million each year to donate to the schools. What they usually do is just mail the check, but White Pine received the largest donation given out in Idaho this year," Hymas said.

Schools receive the funds through parents signing up to donate 1 percent of anything they buy at Smith's stores.

"They have a little scan bar and their Fresh Values Card and it automatically credits the school," Hymas said. "Suzie Macias really pushed and got everybody going at White Pine. They had 579 people registered."

The Smith's Earn & Learn program is not new to Macias, a fourth-grade teacher.

"I have been doing it for years. They didn't have anyone here at White Pine doing it before, so when (Principal Matt Seely) hired me here I told him I would take it on," she said.

Macias has been in the teaching profession for 28 years. Before coming to White Pine two years ago, she taught English as a second language at the Newcomer Center.

She wasted no time getting the Smith's program going at White Pine.

"What we do is send the registration forms out to parents on parent's nights, or any time we have parents meeting together," she said. "Also, we have friends and family and it continually grows — like a stone gathering moss on the way down, you know. It's a really easy, convenient way to support a school."

And no one is safe when Macias is out shopping. She carries the forms with her everywhere she goes and is always looking for new participants.

"Every time I go to Smith's and I see someone I know, I hit them up to register," she said, adding she hopes to sign up more parents over the coming holiday season.

Macias said the donation goes into the school's general fund. It's up to the principal how to spend it.

"I know he said some of it will be set aside for the purchase of LCG projector bulbs. They cost about $300 a bulb when they go out," Macias said. "It will probably be used for school supplies — things we need that we haven't been able to get because of budget."

Hymas said anyone can support a school by registering, and it doesn't have to be just White Pine. All schools are eligible to receive the funds in the Earn & Learn program.

Cat-scratch disease causes numb feet, other problems

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am always interested in peripheral neuropathy because it was one of the many later symptoms I developed when I acquired bartonella henselae. However, I apparently acquired the bartonella approximately 16 years ago. I recall a cat scratch from a feral kitten that did not heal for several months. I wasn't diagnosed until a little more than two years ago when I failed to respond to Lyme-disease treatment.

In addition to alpha-lipoic acid, my doctor put me on Levaquin. Amazingly, the shoulder pain, chronic gallbladder infection, swallowing problems, ankle swelling and chronic stomach ulcer went away. The numbness in my feet and fibromyalgia did not disappear but got better.

My point is that one of the symptoms of bartonella is numbness of the feet. It is rarely looked at as the cause of peripheral neuropathy. I had none of the diabetic or circulatory problems that normally cause it. I am still scratching my head as to why my now-retired doctor did not diagnose it earlier. It would have made my recovery from Lyme disease so much easier.

DEAR READER: Bartonella henselae, also known as cat-scratch disease, is a bacterium that enters the body at the site of the scratch. Adult cats can spread the disease, but it more commonly comes from kittens. Lymph nodes, primarily those around the arms, head and neck, become swollen.

Lack of normal appetite, fever, headache, fatigue and transient peripheral neuropathy may result. Those commonly infected are people with a compromised immune system.

Lyme disease presents with the same symptoms, so it is no wonder your physician would have

Minidoka Co. launches City Watch alert program

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

Minidoka County officials have launched a City Watch program, making it easier to notify residents en mass of an emergency.

“It’s used if we need to notify a large number of people for the safety of an area,” said Sheriff’s Capt. Dan Kindig, who oversees the program.

The program is a county-funded project — a part of the dispatch station.

“It is something we planned on doing when we set up our enhanced 911 system,” Kindig said.

Anyone can sign up to receive alerts by going to www.minidoka.id.us and entering their home or cell phone numbers, or both.

Benefits include being able to put out an alert for a lost child, which authorities have already done, Kindig said.

“It’s for anything we need to get out to the public fast —

maybe some kind of winter storm situation ... any disaster, a chemical spill, evacuation,” he said. “Or we can relay from our dispatch and pinpoint the area we want and send to just (the) people it involves.

“If you are in Twin Falls, it notifies you on your cell phone what the situation is back home,” he continued. “If you’re a farmer you may want to know if your power is going to be off because of a power outage, or maybe road closures due to severe storm conditions.”

Once the alarm is given, it can be put on the alert system within minutes, Kindig said.

Maintenance for the City Watch Program is done by City Watch Corp. on a monthly fee basis. The posting of the events is handled out of the dispatch center, which Kindig oversees.

“It will definitely prove to be a viable tool for public notification,” Kindig said.

M-C Crop Walk was a success

The Mini-Cassia Crop Hunger Walk was Sept. 25, starting at the Heyburn Riverside Park.

Mother Nature cooperated with sunny weather and 288 walkers turned out to represent their churches and raise money to alleviate hunger locally and around the world.

The Declo Stake had the most walkers with 41 participating.

A free T-shirt was given to walkers who raised more than $250. The winners were John Clayville, Jack Zarybnisky, Rosa Klink, Marge Roe, Viola Block and Anne Lloyd. The youngest walker, 2-year-old Xander McCaskel, and the most seasoned walker, June Waters, also received T-shirts. Ken Seesee won a T-shirt just because he was lucky.

Many volunteers helped to make the walk a success. Lunch was provided by the LDS stakes, and cookies were provided by Trinity Lutheran Church, First Presbyterian Church and Rupert United Methodist Church.

Jack, Mary and Mike Zarybnisky patrolled the walking route to keep walkers safe. Zack Maier and his band, “Death By Dinosaur,” entertained walkers and their families during the entire walk.

OfficeMax recognizes hard work at Filer Elementary

By John E. Swayze

FILER — The world needs heroes and mentors. Students at Filer Elementary School don’t have to look beyond their classroom teachers for that inspiration.

Elementary students and employees of the Twin Falls OfficeMax store came together Tuesday in the Filer Intermediate School auditorium to participate in the company’s “A Day Made Better.” Developed about six years ago, the program celebrates dedicated teachers — those who, despite budget cuts and salary holdbacks, want to provide a quality education.

According to the “A Day Made Better” website, teachers nationwide spend an average of $1,000 individually and $4 billion collectively out of their own pockets each year for school supplies. So, OfficeMax donated boxes of paper, markers, folders and other items to the school, as well as a bag of supplies for each teacher and staff member.

“Every teacher is a school hero,” Twin Falls OfficeMax Manager Doug Burch told his audience. “They work very hard preparing a bright future for students, and we are here to make their job a little easier.”

The school was one of 956 selected across the U.S. this year to receive more than $1,000 in OfficeMax supplies. Working with the nonprofit Adopt-A-Classroom organization, OfficeMax also recognizes one teacher in each school who, despite personal or professional obstacles, creates a learning environment where students thrive.

Honored this year was Filer Elementary second-grade teacher Cindy Oneida. In the fall of 2009, Oneida was diagnosed with cancer. While undergoing six months of chemotherapy and three months of radiation treatments, she continued to be in the classroom with her students as much as possible.

“I’m surprised and honored but I feel a little strange, because I never expected any of this,” Oneida said. “We’ve got a wonderful staff and they all deserve to be honored.”

Oneida was presented with a certificate of appreciation, her own box of classroom supplies and a new desk chair.

“No matter what was going on privately, she never lost her smile and always focused on the kids,” said Filer Elementary Principal Matt Mahannah.

Teachers who receive the award are selected from nominations made online by principals, Burch said.

“We’ve visited schools all over the area and last year we were at Perrine Elementary, but I’ve never seen so much excitement as there was in this room,” he said.

zeroed in on that possibility. You can perhaps understand why some diseases and disorders are discovered following a process of exclusion. The symptoms are the same, and, at times, the treatment is the same.

The Levaquin you were prescribed is a broad-spectrum antibiotic used to treat bronchitis, pneumonia, skin infections, the sinuses, UTIs, ears, chlamydia and more.

You are correct that peripheral neuropathy is not commonly linked to cat-scratch disease. It is not one of the more common symptoms, but there is a definite link that should not be overlooked when making a diagnosis. Thank you for writing and sharing your interesting case.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I read your column daily but have never seen anything on puddendal nerve entrapment. Any information would be appreciated.

DEAR READER: Pudendal nerve entrapment occurs when a nerve in the pelvic area becomes compressed or trapped. It can be the result of post-surgical scarring, pregnancy or trauma. Activities such as riding a bicycle are known to trigger the condition.

Symptoms include pain when sitting that is reduced or eliminated by standing, lying down or when on a toilet seat; paresthesias in the buttock and genital areas; urinary hesitancy and/or urgency; constipation; impotence; sexual dysfunction; and a great deal more.

Treatment varies depending on the underlying cause and how long symptoms have been present. If you are a cyclist, that prolonged activity should be reduced. There are a number of medications — nerve stabilizers, antidepressants or anti-convulsants — that might reduce or alleviate the pain. When all else fails, treatments such as corticosteroid injections or nerve blocks may be appropriate.

Speak with your physician who knows your history and can recommend appropriate advice or medication. Then, if and when conservative measures fail, request referral to a top-notch surgeon for the problem.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report “Managing Chronic Pain.” Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title or print an order form off my website at www.AskDrGottMD.com.

Hazel M. Lattimer

Hazel Marjorie (Wilbourn) Lattimer passed away in her sleep Monday, Oct. 4, 2010, at Char-donnay Assisted Living Center in Twin Falls at the age of 98.

A visitation will be held from 7:30 until 9 Friday evening, Oct. 8, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. A graveside service will be held Saturday, Oct. 9, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at Sunset Memorial Park.

Hazel was born June 5, 1912, in Callaway, Neb., to Samuel Ferguson Baker and Amanda Zemora Overturf Baker. She had 10 siblings, most of whom were gone from home before she was born. She married Guy Brian Wilbourn on Aug. 9, 1927, at Gandy, Neb. They had three children, Nadine (Scott) McMaster, David (Mary) Wilbourn and Kay (Bob) Piva. She was widowed in 1962 after 33 years of marriage. She met and married Guy Lattimer on Sept. 14, 1964.

Mom always loved to golf, bowl, hike and tour through old houses. She and Guy loved to travel. They often took trips traveling across the United States and spent a few winters in Arizona. She and Guy also loved to take daily walks collecting fallen change that was then spent on numerous trips to Jackpot, Nev. Hazel enjoyed playing pinochle or bridge with her friends and was always up for anything that sounded exciting. Hazel's grandkids were especially blessed with a grandma like Hazel. They will never forget the countless walks to the park or her fantastic collection of jewelry she let them borrow at every visit. She loved spending time in her garden with her roses and peonies. Hazel was a determined and motivated woman even into her older age. She never wanted to miss a family picnic or family gathering even after she became a great-great-grandmother. After the death of her husband, Guy, Hazel informed the family that she thought it was time to finish her teaching certificate (at the age of 97). Hazel will always be remembered for her adventurous spirit, her love of exploration and fun, fabulous home-cooked meals, pies and cinnamon rolls, her dry sense of humor and, most of all, the love she had for her family. We loved her dearly.

Hazel is preceded in death by her mother and father; her husband, Guy Brian Wilbourn; and second husband, Guy M. Lattimer; and all of her siblings. She is survived by her children; grandchildren, Lynn (Kathy) McMaster, Cheri (Rich) Schneider, Jamie (Tom) Martiny, Jenna (Josh) Laramie, Dale (Angela) Wilbourn and Dani Wilbourn; and numerous great-grandchildren.

They lived and farmed in Jerome for five years and, in 1943, moved on to a farm and ranch west of Darlington, Idaho. In 1974, they moved up Antelope Creek and ranched here until ill health forced Harold to retire in 1999. At that time, they moved to Wendell to be near their daughter, Naoma. Harold preceded Hilda in death in 2003.

Survivors include her children, Sheila (Lyle) Roberts of Idaho Falls, Naoma Bitton of Wendell, Paula (Gene) Davies of Arco, Trilby McCaffee of Moore, Janet (James) Rowe of

Report: Lou Dobbs hired illegal labor

NEW YORK (AP) — The Nation magazine is reporting that former CNN anchor Lou Dobbs relied on illegal immigrants to help maintain his homes even as he spoke out on the air against them.

The Nation said the article, published online Thursday, is based on a yearlong investigation including interviews with five immigrants who worked without papers on Dobbs' properties in New Jersey and Florida.

Dobbs said in an interview Thursday the article is "a political assault" based on what he called "the lie" that he has hired illegal immigrants.

He says: "I have never, do not now, and never will"

Dobbs was host of a weeknight news and commentary hour on CNN until abruptly resigning last November after 29 years with the network. He continues to host a syndicated radio show.

LONDON — She heard a terrible rumbling noise, then anguished cries for help as her rowboat pulled away from the sinking ocean liner Titanic that dreadful night in 1912.

Now Laura Francatelli's first person account of the disaster, in the form of a signed affidavit that was given to a British board of inquiry, is set to be auctioned.

It is a gripping firsthand account of how she and her two prominent employers — Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon and his socialite wife, Lady Lucy Duff-Gordon — managed to survive, fleeing in a rowboat with a capacity for 40 people even though they only had 12 people on board.

"You see a lot of documents that talk briefly about the incident, but this affidavit goes into strong details, it talks about Lady Duff being sick the whole time, about the lifeboat bobbing up and down, about the screams," said Andrew Aldridge, an auctioneer at Henry Aldridge & Son, which plans to sell the affidavit and other Titanic memorabilia on Oct. 16.

He said the letter will likely fetch between 10,000 pounds ($16,000) and 15,000 pounds in part because of the notoriety of Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff.

"They were two of the most controversial survivors," he said. "Sir Cosmo gave the crewmen who were in the lifeboat with him 5 pounds each, which was a tremendous amount of money at the time, and it was misconstrued at the time that he was paying blood money."

The implication is that the wealthy Sir Cosmo paid the crewmen to get him safely away from the sinking vessel without returning to help those who were drowning. But Aldridge said it is also possible that Sir Cosmo made the payments simply to express his gratitude.

He said it is not surprising that Francatelli's account is sympathetic to her employers and makes it sound as if Sir Cosmo paid the men "out of the goodness of his heart."

In her written statement, Francatelli, Lady Duff's personal secretary, described a scene of utter terror as they tried to get as far as possible from the Titanic.

"We kept on rowing and stopping and rowing again,"

"We were a long way off when we saw the Titanic go right up at the back and plunge down. There was an awful rumbling when she went. Then came the screams and cries."

she wrote. "I heard some talk going on all about the suction if the ship went down. I do not know who joined in the conversation. We were a long way off when we saw the Titanic go right up at the back and plunge down. There was an awful rumbling when she went. Then came the screams and cries. I do not know how long they lasted. We had hardly any talk. The men spoke about God and prayers and wives. We were all in the darkness."

Francatelli was 31 when the Titanic struck an iceberg on April 14, 1912. Her signed account was given as evidence to the first official British board of inquiry into the disaster.

She died in 1967. The affidavit has been in private collections since shortly after her death.

White House Press Secretary Robert Gibbs briefs reporters at the White House in Washington, Monday.

White House defends waivers for new health law

By Erica Werner
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The White House on Thursday defended granting waivers to some employers from a key provision of the new health care law, saying it was the best way to keep people insured until the law fully takes effect.

At issue is a new requirement banning annual caps on benefits, which began phasing in last month. Many employers and insurers that offer low-cost, low-benefit insurance plans known as "mini-med" plans would not have been able to comply with the new requirement without raising monthly premiums to virtually unaffordable levels.

So the administration has granted 30 waivers to date exempting companies from the requirement for a year.

Waivers went to companies including Jack in the Box, Cigna and the company that insures some McDonald's workers, and another 114 applications for waivers are under review by the Health and Human Services Department. One waiver request has been denied, but HHS declined to identify which company was involved.

"The waivers are about ensuring and protecting the coverage that people have until there are better options available to them in 2014," when the health law is fully implemented, White House Press Secretary Robert Gibbs told reporters. "We want to ensure that in the time that it takes to implement the law and to give people better options, that they don't find themselves at the mercy of an insurance company jacking up their rates. And that's why those waivers were granted."

Another issue is a different provision in the law that will require that a specified percentage of health plan expenditures — 80 percent to 85 percent — be spent on medical as opposed to administrative costs. That provision doesn't take effect until next year, but it got attention last week when the Wall Street Journal reported that McDonald's had alerted the administration it would not be able to comply. The administration subsequently indicated it would be flexible in applying the regulation.

Obama sends foreclosure docs bill back to Congress

By Alan Zibel and Ben Feller
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama has rejected a bill that the White House fears could worsen the mounting problems caused by flawed or misleading documents used by banks in home foreclosures.

White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said Thursday that Obama is sending a newly passed bill back to Congress to be fixed because the current version has "unintended consequences on consumer protections." The bill would loosen the process for providing a notary's seal to documents and allow them to be done electronically.

Obama will not sign a bill that would allow foreclosure and other documents to be accepted among multiple states. Consumer advocates and state officials had argued the legislation would make it difficult for homeowners to challenge foreclosure documents prepared in other states.

The White House said Thursday it is sending the bill back to Congress for revisions, and that the administration would work with lawmakers on it.

O. Max Gardner, a consumer lawyer in Shelby, N.C., said the bill would have made the problems with foreclosure documents worse. That's because mortgage companies would have been able to mass-produce documents and affix a digital version of a notary's seal rather than one on paper.

"They could process more foreclosure cases with improper and invalid documents and make it more difficult for consumers to try to fight," he said.

Obama used a rare "pocket veto" — a tactic for killing a bill that can be used only when Congress is not in session. It essentially takes effect when the president fails to sign a bill within 10 days. Obama has yet to issue a traditional veto during his presidency; he has used a pocket veto once before, in December 2009, to address what amounted to a technicality on a defense spending bill.

A furor has been growing as mounting evidence has surfaced that mortgage lenders have been evicting homeowners using flawed court papers. State and federal officials have been ramping up pressure on the mortgage industry over concerns about potential legal violations.

Teen soloists emote with Magic Valley Symphony

Times-News writer

It's all about emotion for the three musicians who won the year's Youth Soloist Competition with the Magic Valley Symphony — not the pleasure of winning, but the feelings evoked by the pieces they chose to compete with.

The three — Ken Marshall, 15, of Buhl, who plays flute; violinist Emily Dixon, 16, of Twin Falls; and pianist Truman Whitney, 15, of Kimberly — will perform with the symphony Sunday afternoon at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium.

They were selected from 17 youth performers earlier this summer by a committee of judges including Randy Earles, associate dean for fine arts and humanities at Idaho State University.

"I'm quite impressed with the young performers the Twin Falls area is able to produce. For such a small area, it's an amazing amount of ability and accomplishment," Earles said. "These three stood out with superb musicianship, amazing technique and ability to perform under pressure."

The symphony will also perform the Mars and Venus sections of "The Planets," a seven-part orchestral work by Gustav Holst, and "Symphony No. 41" by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, also known as the "Jupiter" symphony.

"Mars' the audience will recognize from it being used in movies and commercials; it's a thrilling and exciting piece with a warlike quality to it. 'Venus' is a lovely, beautiful piece," Earles said. "The Mozart symphony is the last symphony he wrote, I think his finest symphony, that shows a mastery of both orchestration and form. Considering how young he was, it's really an example of his genius."

Marshall: 'Concerto for Flute and String Orchestra' by Gordon Jacob

When Marshall's fifth-grade band didn't have a flute player, the saxophonist stepped up to try a new instrument.

"I don't know what I found attracting about it, maybe the sound," he said, describing his first experiences with flute. "Over the three years I've studied, we started off with pieces that got better and better, harder and more complex; it's kind of a challenge, actually."

Marshall chose the Jacob piece because it would be something

Fiddle masters are rising figures in Celtic, folk music scenes

Times-News

Celebrated Canadian fiddlers Natalie MacMaster and Donnell Leahy are a whirlwind of fiddle-driven Celtic music and dance.

The married couple's foot-tapping rave-ups and world-class step dancing will come to the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium as the second performance of Arts on Tour's 2010-11 season. Tickets for their "Masters of the Fiddle" show, set for 7:30 p.m. Oct. 18, are $29 for adults and $19 for students in high school and younger.

The fiddlers' fiery energy brakes occasionally for a delicate air or a heart-wrenching ballad.

MacMaster and Leahy are equally at home on the concert stage or at a folk festival. MacMaster has performed with Yo-Yo Ma, Alison Krauss, the Chieftains, Paul Simon and Pavarotti. Donnell's band, Leahy, composed of his brothers and sisters, is known throughout North America, promoters say.

Joined by pianists Mac Morin and Erin Leahy, the fiddling fireworks on traditional and contemporary Celtic melodies generate a kind of traditional fusion delivered with energy and good humor. Learn more about the performers online at nataliemacmaster.com and leahymusic.com.

Buy tickets at the CSI Fine Arts Box Office from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, online at csi.edu/artsontour or at 732-6288.

Schoolchildren bring literary characters to life

Times-News

Here's an offbeat bit of performance art:

On Thursday, students and faculty of Jerome's Canyonside Christian School will stage a production they dub Wax Museum.

Students and teachers in preschool through fifth grade choose age-appropriate literary characters, then bring in props and backgrounds to stage scenes from the books. Costumed students "freeze" in poses with their props for about five minutes while other classes and spectators view the scene. Then students thaw to answer questions as if they were the characters.

It's like a living book report.

At the school's fourth annual Wax Museum, expect to see characters from "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," "101 Dalmatians," "Cinderella," "Does a Kangaroo have a Mother, Too?" "Lion King," "Diary of a Worm," "The Cat in the Hat" and "The Balloon Farm," among others.

Here's Thursday's schedule:

- 9:15-11 a.m.: Wax Museum open.
- 9:15-10 a.m.: preschool and kindergarten host visitors.
- 10-10:30 a.m.: first, second and third grades host visitors.
- 10:30-11 a.m.: fourth and fifth grades host visitors.

unusual that the judges would rarely have heard, and because it posed a technical and stylistic opportunity.

"(Jacob) felt himself different from other composers; he didn't like their style of music. It doesn't follow the same patterns as other music from the same day," Marshall said, noting that Jacob had a cleft palate and couldn't play flute, but managed to compose an interesting piece for the instrument. "Once I heard it, I liked the sound, and definitely the style."

After practicing and performing the concerto so many times, he still considers it one of his favorites, though "Airs de ballet d'Ascanio" by Camille Saint-Saens is also in the running.

Earles said judges were impressed by Marshall's playing of the concerto. "That piece has a lot of technical challenges to it, but it is also very appealing to the audience. It's a more modern-day work, shows off the flute to very good effect," he said.

Marshall, who attends Buhl High School, said he may pursue music as a career, perhaps with a military band. "I've been casual, but have done quite a few competitions, so I wouldn't be surprised if I kept it with me throughout my life," he said. He is dedicating Sunday's performance to his mother.

Dixon: 'Concerto No. 2 in E, Movement I' by Johann Sebastian Bach

Stringed instruments have long been an interest of Dixon, who began watching the violins at the Oregon Symphony when she was younger than 6. A friend who played viola with the symphony suggested to her parents that a music school in Iowa, where they were moving, might be a good fit for her, and she has been playing violin for the past decade.

"I really like the sound of strings; they can be aggressive sounding, but also soothing and gentle," she said. "There's a large range of emotions you can pull out of (the violin)."

Dixon chose the concerto for its happy, bouncy tone, she said, and because she likes the key it is written in. "It's a little faster, it definitely keeps moving, and I tend to like things that are fast," she said.

"Intonation was definitely something I practiced a lot, because there are four sharps in the key, so getting everything in tune and trying to play all the right notes, that really helped me on other stuff that I'm playing," she said, describing how the piece improved her skills. And because there are parts that repeat or are similar, she was able to develop her memorization.

"Playing a Bach concerto is very demanding, the technical skill involved is a lot, yet it's not obvious to the audience the amount of skill it takes," Earles said. "It doesn't have the same flashiness that, say, a romantic concerto would have. She played very musically, very expressively."

And Dixon didn't tire of it, she said: "Usually when I'm playing a song, I get sick of it after so many months of practicing it, but I still really like this piece."

Dixon, who also plays the organ, is home-schooled. She will graduate from high school this spring and plans to study music, and eventually conducting, in college.

Whitney: 'Concerto in D, Vivace' by Franz Joseph Haydn

For nine years, Whitney has enjoyed playing the piano, especially classical pieces.

"(Piano) allows a lot of expression with dynamic range as well as polyphony," he said. "I think classical music allows a greater level of depth, because of its complexity."

Although he generally prefers dynamic composers like Sergei Rachmaninoff or Franz Liszt, and said a powerful, booming style comes naturally, he opted for the Haydn piece for its challenge.

"Haydn was very organized and methodical, but very restrained," he said. "There's a lot of technique I've had to work on ... but I've also learned about Haydn himself and how he would want it to be played."

In addition to improving his memorization and learning how to work as a soloist with a large group, Whitney said he focused on interpretation as he practiced.

"There are many parts that are humorous; Haydn had a great sense of humor," he said. "The degree to which you show that, whether it's totally blatant or more subtle, is an interesting choice; you have to weigh that carefully."

Earles lauded Whitney for standing out among the other pianists, as the instrument is usually the most popular among young musicians.

"There are many performers on piano that are very accomplished, and he was the best of the best," he said. "(The concerto is) a lively piece that is easy to understand; the audience will really enjoy hearing it. It doesn't have the intricacy of the Bach or the flashiness of the Jacob, but musically it's a very substantial piece."

Whitney, who is home-schooled, intends to pursue a career in law but may minor in music in college. "I certainly enjoy my music and will continue to develop it, but I consider it strictly avocational," he said.

Colossal ceramics are centerpiece of tonight's free Gallery Walk

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Jun Kaneko's vases stand up to 13 feet tall and weigh hundreds of pounds. They can take up to three years to complete, requiring as much as a year of drying before they're even fired.

Yet this Japanese artist who came to the United States to study art nearly half a century ago and who now makes his home in Omaha, Neb., calls them "Dangos" — the Japanese word for a diminutive rice dumpling that's found everywhere in Japan.

"They speak of paradox," said Laura Bunting of Gail Severn Gallery, where Kaneko's Dangos are being exhibited. "Dango is the Japanese word for a tiny sweet dumpling, yet Kaneko depicts them as colossal objects. These sumptuous delicacies beg to be picked up yet remain firmly grounded by sheer mass."

Kaneko's colossal ceramic sculptures, bathed in colorful swirls and abstract brushstrokes, will be among the art on display during tonight's Trailing of the Sheep Gallery Walk at Ketchum's art galleries. The free walk, accompanied by wine and refreshments, takes place from 5 to 8 p.m.

Here are some of the other works on display:

Friesen Gallery, Sun Valley Road and First Avenue, is showcasing the spirit of autumn in the valley. That includes the work of painter Jill Lear, who captures the beauty and power of trees. Sculptor David Kimball Anderson pays tribute to Morris Graves, while James Shay's paintings pay homage to landscapes. Lawrence Fodor offers up evocative color field paintings, while Danae Fallier provides serene landscape photography. Rocky Lewycky shares wabi-sabi inspired ceramic vessels. Dara Mark offers ethereal abstract watercolors.

Gail Severn Gallery, 400 First Ave. N., also is featuring autumnal works by several artists, including James Cook who captured September light on nearby Silver Creek with his oils. Cole Morgan's "WannaBes" challenge viewers to tell the real feathers from the pretenders in trompe l'oeil mixed media. Christopher Reilly uses decaying leaves and blooming flowers in his "Mating Song." Linda Lowe creates beautiful color with layers of watercolor, oil, etching and wax. Ed Musante's popular cigar box paintings depict golden finches and other colorful birds. And Theodore Waddell's ranch scene is steeped in clumps, chunks and drips of paint recalling abstract expressionist painters of the 1940s and '50s.

Kneeland Gallery, 271 First Ave. N., will present an exhibition of Utah artists titled "State of the Art-Utah" that includes several stunning autumnal images, including Douglas Aagard's "Backlit Aspens." The exhibition also features the work of Steven Lee Adams, Cary Henrie, David Koch, Shanna Kunz, Andrzej Skorut and Seth Wingar, whose paintings depict the dramatic landscapes of their native state as well as those found in travels farther afield.

"We have a lot of great artists out of Utah, and I'd never met them in a show together, but they seemed to flow nicely together," said gallery director Carey Molter.

Gallery DeNovo, Sun Valley Road and First Avenue, is continuing its exhibition of Michel Beaucage's exhibition "Perfect Pairings." Beaucage, who journeyed to the Beijing International Art Biennial after appearing in Sun Valley last month, creates richly textured abstract paintings. Joining his work this month will be bronze sculptures from Spanish artist Marta Moreu.

Gallery Denovo is also continuing "The Annex Show — $1,000 and Under" through November. It features 20-plus works that are $1,000 and under; 30-plus works that are $500 and under; and more than 10 works under $250 by such international artists as Andrew Lui, James Rosenquist, Sjer Jacobs and Quim Bove.

Gallery owner Robin Reiners said she started the "Annex" show in response ing R.C. Hink's new dressers and desks with legs in cowboy boots. Also, metal giraffes and cool mutts playing saxes, and Lynn Toneri's vintage watercolors of Sun Valley.

Sun Valley Center for the Arts, 191 Fifth St. E., is showcasing its exhibition "Water." It features Ketchum artist Jan Aronson's rhythmic watercolors; Kate Bright's paintings of water; Anne Neely's paintings which speak to the water that moves unseen underground; and Dawn De Deaux's watermark and mold sculptures made in response to destruction wrought by Hurricane Katrina. Megan Murphy's drawings are printed with a photograph of Silver Creek and embossed with text that reflects on the chemicals, household water usage and other stories Silver Creek's water can tell.

Frederic Boloix Fine Arts, 300 First Ave., is featuring the works of such masters as Picasso and Matisse.

DICKENS' BELOVED LONDON ORPHAN COMES TO KETCHUM STAGE

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Perhaps it was fitting that set designer Jamey Reynolds was asked to build the coffin first.

“Oliver!” has its basis in the dark grime of London, the squalor of workhouses and the hopelessness of street urchins who must pick pockets to get a morsel to eat.

But amidst this dark, sometimes violent world are a light and a hope and a promise. And that’s why the musical based on Charles Dickens’ novel has become one of the most beloved musicals in theater history.

St. Thomas Playhouse will stage the musical “Oliver!” Thursday through Oct. 17 at nexStage Theatre in Ketchum.

“I remember seeing Oliver on the stage in New York with my grandmother (actress Ann Sothorn),” said Heidi Hogan, who plays the tenderhearted Nancy. “I love all musicals, but this was one of my all-time favorites because of the songs and the story. It can be dark and raw, but it has a happy ending.”

Lexi Black, right, will share the role of Oliver with Beck Vontver over six Ketchum performances, Thursday through Oct. 17.

“Oliver!” revolves around a young orphan who is thrust from a workhouse onto the London streets after he summons the courage to make the famous plea, “Please sir, I want some more.”

He ends up with a band of pickpockets but is nabbed by a gentlewoman he tries to rob. Fearful that the young boy will tell police about the pickpockets’ den, evil thief Bill Sykes persuades Nancy to snatch the boy back from what would have been a dream home for the lad.

Accompanying the endearing 1963 Broadway musical are plenty of memorable songs by Lionel Bart, including “Consider Yourself,” “Oliver!” “Where Is Love?” “You’ve Got to Pick a Pocket or Two,” “I’m Reviewing the Situation” and “Who will Buy?”

“It’s such an endearing story because no matter what young Oliver faces he still has a promise and hope.

Emmitt Fortuin’s Artful Dodger, center in the top hat, will join a stage full of ruffians and pickpockets in the St. Thomas Playhouse production of the musical ‘Oliver!’

EVERYONE’S FAVORITE URCHIN

- What: St. Thomas Playhouse production of “Oliver!”
- When: 7 p.m. Thursday through Oct. 17; plus 2 p.m. matinees on Oct. 16-17
- Where: nexStage Theatre in Ketchum
- Tickets: $20 for adults and $10 for children up to 18, with the exception of the Oct. 15 Gala Benefit performance.

At the Gala Benefit, the nexStage lobby will be turned into an English pub, with a variety of foods including mini-Yorkshire puddings with roast beef, smoked salmon, sausage rolls, mincemeat and apple pie, as well as wine, champagne, beer and non-alcoholic beverages. Proceeds from that night will benefit the H. Edward Bilkey Memorial Scholarship Fund to provide scholarships for St. Thomas Playhouse camps and programs. Reserved seating in the center that night will be $50, and seating in side sections will be $30.

Tickets are available at Iconoclast Books in Ketchum, at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Sun Valley and at 726-5349, ext. 15.

He seems to be a light in the midst of darkness,” said director Sara Gorby. “Even with his famous line, ‘Please, sir, I want some more,’ he seems to be asking for more than food. He wants more of life than what he has.”

Even Sykes, with his animal-like brutality, has a fragility, said Keith Joe Dick, who will play Sykes.

“I believe that when Oliver shows up he’s jealous of the young man because he sees Nancy looking to take care of someone else,” he said.

Lexi Black and Beck Vontver will play the title role in alternate shows. Professional actor Steve d’Smyth will play Fagin, crafty king of the pickpockets. Sherry Horton is the choreographer and Dick Brown will direct the music, assisted by Dorinda Rendahl.

'Willing to go where Albee wants to take them'

Today's audiences may get more out of 'Virginia Woolf' than in '62, Fools actors say

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — When Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" took the stage in 1962, it shocked Americans whose weekly cultural diet consisted of "Leave It to Beaver" and "Father Knows Best."

But Albee's attempt to expose the truth of human relationships behind phony exteriors and false pretenses made its mark. And today — nearly half a century later — the play continues to be one of the masterpieces of American theater.

"It shocked audiences with its realness, its willingness to tread where no others had gone. It depicts humanity at its rawest. There's something in this play for everybody," said actress Jana Arnold.

Arnold, a longtime TV and stage actress, will play Martha in the Company of Fools production of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" The play opens Wednesday at The Liberty Theatre in Hailey and continues through Oct. 30.

"Who's Afraid" starts off with a verbal spat at a cocktail party and devolves into a sometimes biting battle of wits and wills between George, a history professor at a small college, and Martha, his wife, who happens to be the college president's daughter.

A new professor and his naive new bride, played by Paul L. Coffey and Beth Hilles, go along for the ride — at first fascinated by the banter they hear, but eventually sucked into it themselves.

"George and Martha are two of the archetypal roles in American theater," said Scott Creighton, who plays George. "George is a little beaten down by life. He and his wife of 23 years are coping with life's ups and downs and they do it with an amazing intellectual wit that makes for a very witty dialogue. And though the banter is somewhat caustic, you get to see the love they have for each other. In fact, Edward Albee calls it a love story and a comedy."

Arnold said she has been waiting for years to come of age when she could play the Martha role.

"Every actor wants to play one of these roles at some time in their career, and most are not lucky enough to do that. This is part of what made me get into theater to begin with," she said. "Rosalind Russell once said that acting is standing up naked and turning around very slowly. That's what I have to do with this play. I have to be willing to show the audience what's serious, what's emotional for all of us."

Albee, known for going against the grain, foretold the collapse of the American dream with this play even as the Camelot of the Kennedy years reigned around him, said director K.O. Ogilvie.

"It's a rich piece. Rich in that it's oozing with subtext, Beth Hilles and Paul L. Coffey, both of whom recently received master of fine arts degrees in acting from the Brown/Trinity Rep Graduate Program, will round out the conversation in the Company of Fools production of Edward Albee's 'Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?' They play Honey and Nick.

'OOZING WITH SUBTEXT'

- What: Company of Fools production of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"
- When: Wednesdays through Saturdays, Oct. 13-30. The show starts at 7 p.m. Wednesdays and Thursdays, and at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. There's also one 3 p.m. Sunday matinee, on Oct. 24.
- Where: Liberty Theatre in Hailey
- Tickets: $28 for adults, $20 for seniors 62 and older and $10 for students 18 and younger.

Educators and school administrators are eligible for two $10 tickets on Oct. 14 and 15. Oct. 16 and 21 are the popular Girls Night Out with $18 tickets, $4 wine and beer, post-show champagne and chocolate, a chat with the cast, and a chance to win a goodie bag. Ten front-seat tickets are available for $10 each on the night of each performance.

• Information: 578-9122 or www.companyoffools.org

references to the Cold War, stories within stories," she said. "It's a brilliant piece of writing, and the characters are so rich. It broaches the idea of living an illusion not just in marriage but in one's whole life."

The play, which won the 1963 Tony Award for Best Play and the 1962-63 New York Drama Critics' Circle Award for Best Play, was also selected for a 1963 Pulitzer Prize for Drama. But the advisory board objected to the play's then-controversial use of profanity and sexual themes and overruled the jurors. As a result, no Pulitzer Prize was given for drama that year.

Today the play would probably be rated PG 13 verging on R, Ogilvie said.

Still, the play is just as relative today as then, Arnold said.

"By the time you reach a certain age, you've been hurt, you've experienced pain, you've been bitter and disillusioned. People look back and say, 'Where did life go?' maybe now more than ever because so many more choices are available to us than there were then," she said. "I think today audiences may get even more out of the play than they did in 1962 because they are more willing to go where Albee wants to take them. Earlier, they were so shocked I imagine many missed much of when was in it."

Far-flung musicians congregate for Sun Valley's Jazz Jamboree

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — She sports a body of tattoos, thanks to a former gig at a tattoo parlor. And she claims she ran away with a circus to escape a boring job, eating light bulbs as a clown until she fell in love with the city and music of New Orleans.

Her band is more accustomed to playing on New Orleans street corners than in concert halls.

But Meschiya Lake and dem Little Big Horns will try to bowl over several thousand fans at Sun Valley's Swing 'n' Dixie Jazz Jamboree next week with their danceable, melodious "punk jazz."

"We saw them performing their kind of funky jazz blues on the streets of New Orleans and we decided we had to bring them here," said festival co-director Carol Loehr. "They're young and talented and she has a haunting voice. They've never been on the jazz festival circuit so this is their debut."

Lake and dem Little Big Horns will headline Tuesday night's free community concert sponsored by Atkinsons Market. The concert, which starts at 7 p.m. in Sun Valley's Indoor Ice Rink, will also feature the Wood River High School jazz band.

Then dem Little Big Horns will settle into five days of merrymaking that will feature dozens of bands playing in a dozen different venues from 9:30 in the morning until midnight.

"The schedule is absolutely packed. It amazes me how much is going on," said Jazz Jamboree volunteer Kathy Schuh. "We've got people coming from as far away as Florida, Hawaii and Canada. And quite a few students, too."

The 21st annual Jazz Jamboree will get under way in earnest at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday when the irrepressible Tom Rigney and Flambeau strike up the

The Whiffenpoofs, clad in tuxes and white gloves, consistently attracted turn-away audiences last year. They also put on free concerts outside Ketchum and Hailey businesses during the jazz festival.

- What: Sun Valley Swing 'n' Dixie Jazz Jamboree
- When: Wednesday through Oct. 17

Cajun fiddle and do some boot-scooting around the Indoor Ice Rink.

The Whiffenpoofs, an a cappella men's group from Yale, had so much fun last year they begged to come back this year. They'll be joined by the new group Midnight Serenaders, a six-piece Portland, Ore., group that boasts retro clothes and plays vintage pop, hot jazz and even a few Hawaiian ukulele numbers. And there's Brady and Cocuzzi, a pairing of singer Brady McKay with vibraphone and keyboardist John Cocuzzi, performing everything from jumpin' blues to boogie woogie, sultry ballads and burnin' jazz.

The Paul Tillotson Trio, though familiar to south-central Idaho jazz fans, will be new to the Jazz Jamboree. And so is the Bruce Innes Quartet with Sue Leonard.

Leonard, who used to sing with K.D. Lang and Bon Jovi, moved to the Sun Valley area last spring.

"We'll do some standards, some jazz and blues and some originals. We just finished writing a pretty ballad and a jazz number, 'Better Fish to Fry,'" said Innes, who has performed at the festival with other groups. "The jazz festival is a fun thing to do because the musicians come from all over North America and you get to hear all the different styles. And the audiences are very attentive, which is always nice for a musician."

This year's Jazz Jamboree will boast an expanded dance program that includes three competitions, more lindy hop instructors and more dance classes. A new dancer's package costs $250 ($200 for students) and includes an all-events badge, small-group lessons, free admission to competitions, a goody bag and access to five nights of dorm housing at Sun Valley Resort.

Documentary considers: Can anyone own water?

Times-News

The provocative documentary "FLOW: For the Love of Water" explores the implications of making water into a commodity. As part of its ongoing multidisciplinary project, "Water," the Sun Valley Center for the Arts is offering a free screening Oct. 21 in Sun Valley.

Access to water may be the most important political and environmental issue of the century. Documentary filmmaker Irena Salina builds a case against the growing privatization of the world's fresh water supply through interviews with scientists and activists, and "introduces many of the governmental and corporate culprits behind the global water grab," the Sun Valley Center's press release said.

"FLOW" also gives viewers a look at the people and institutions developing new technologies and providing practical solutions to the water crisis.

The New York Times called the film "less depressing than galvanizing, an informed and heartfelt examination of the tug of war between public health and private interests," the center's release said.

An official selection at the 2008 Sundance Film Festival, "FLOW" won Best Documentary at the Vail International Film Festival in 2008 and the International Jury Prize at the Mumbai International Film Festival that year. It was also named Best Documentary at the United Nations Association Film Festival.

The film will be shown at 6 p.m. Oct. 21 at the Community School Theater in Sun Valley. Admission is free.

Kimberly shuts out Burley

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

BURLEY — It’s been that kind of season for Burley. A game marked by untimely penalties, fumbled snaps, turnovers and ineffective offense ended in another loss for the winless Bobcats, who were shut out 14-0 by Kimberly Thursday night. But they had their chances. Antonio Ramirez picked off a Seth Champlin pass in the second quarter, returning it to the Kimberly 45-yard line to set up the Burley offense, which had moved the ball effectively in the first quarter. Two holding penalties, however, negated big runs by Branson Handy and Burley was forced to punt. An illegal procedure penalty forced the Bobcats to line up and punt again, which Kimberly muffed and Burley recovered at the Kimberly 19-yard line. The Bobcats still couldn’t capitalize. Quarterback Jake Mills and running back Handy lost the ball on the exchange, turning it over to Kimberly. “Of course we want to go in and score there. That was just a killer for us. That’s been a challenge for us all year and we gave the ball up,” said Burley coach Jeff Green. Burley’s offense lost five fumbles on the night and recorded five holding penalties in the first half, halting all momentum it had gathered. “Just too many mental mistakes,” Green said. Kimberly — led by line-backer Tyler Bringhurst, who recorded two sacks — shut down the Burley rushing attack out of the double-wing, something the Bulldogs have struggled with in the past. Burley couldn’t move the ball into the red zone until late in the fourth quarter after its scoring chance from Kimberly’s muffed punt. “We’re very proud of our defense. They put forth a great effort and came up huge for us in big situations,” said Kimberly coach Kirby Bright. “We have always struggled against that offense. We just needed to be patient and read our keys and we did that great tonight.” Held in check for much of the game, the Kimberly rushing attack finally gained some legs in the second half. Led by Champlin and running backs Jeremy Howell and James Higginbotham, the Bulldogs methodically marched down the field late in the third quarter. Champlin found the end-zone from 9 yards out to put Kimberly up 7-0 heading into the fourth quarter. Champlin finished the game with 105 yards rushing on 18 carries.

Balanced Buhl dominates Canyon Ridge

By Mike Christensen

Buhl dominated the line of scrimmage. Not surprisingly, the Indians dominated the scoreboard as well. The Class 3A Tribe hammered 4A Canyon Ridge 40-19 Thursday night in Twin Falls. Buhl’s patchwork offensive line steadily opened holes for Bill Sheets, who turned his 20 carries into 84 yards and a touchdown. The ground game beautifully set up the pass as backup quarterback Markus Lively completed 7 of 10 passes for 157 yards and two scores.

“Credit goes to the line tonight 100 percent,” said Lively, who hit Jessie Flinn for scores of 33 and 27 yards. “We had some guys banged up but our O-line stepped up and did a great job,” said Buhl coach Stacy Wilson. “They stepped up, played as a unit and owned the line of scrimmage.” For Canyon Ridge (2-4), the loss in its final home game was tough to swallow and came in spite of 325 passing yards by senior Tyler Myers. “We had a lot of distractions before the game tonight with senior night and we let that get in our heads,” said Nick Kytle, who had a 1-yard TD run and caught seven passes for 137 yards. “Stupid mental mistakes cost us.” Buhl’s starting quarterback Camden Gillins left the game in the first quarter after pulling a muscle in his neck while making a tackle on a kickoff return. Before departing, he went 3-for-4 for 35 yards and a TD. That score came on a 22-yarder in which Matt Hamilton outfought Colton Sweesy for a jump ball at the goal line. Lively was solid from there, with his 27-yarder to Flinn earning raves from Wilson after Lively looked off an outside receiver and found Flinn wide open across the middle. “He made a great read and threw some great balls,” said Wilson. Despite their big nights, both Lively and Flinn shrugged off personal credit. “I trusted my line, my running backs and my receivers and they made all the plays tonight,” said Lively. “We got good play calling against their defense,” said Flinn, who also had an interception. Declo grinds out win over Valley

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

DECLO — On Declo’s senior night, it was a pair of sophomore quarterbacks who took center stage and led their teams in a thrilling Canyon Conference battle. Declo quarterback Kai Garner made his first varsity start and calmly led his offense to 432 total yards as Declo outlasted Valley 44-34. “I absolutely love that kid,” said Declo senior captain Mark Knobbe of Garner. “For a sophomore, let alone a hundred-and-maybe-20-pound sophomore, to step up with 200-pound guys flying everywhere around him and to play as well as he does, I’m really proud of him.” Knobbe had himself a night, rushing for 225 yards on 28 carries and two TDs. His backfield mate Kyle Zollinger ran for 102 yards and a touchdown. Garner finished 4 for 9 passing for 37 yards. ran for another 40 yards and converted two 2-point conversions.

CSI Golden Eagles equestrian team gears up and goes western

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho and the CSI equestrian team will host three Intercollegiate Horse Show Association (IHSA) western shows at the CSI Eldon Evans Expo Center in the Shawn Davis Arena Saturday and Sunday. Action begins at 9 a.m. on Saturday with a second show at 1 p.m. Saturday and a 9 a.m. show on Sunday. Admission is free. Intercollegiate riding is different from most types of horse shows because competitors ride horses that are furnished by the host college. The use of personal tack is not allowed and schooling is not permitted. Riders are paired with their horses using a random drawing system and riders don’t get any warm-up time — it’s mount up and proceed directly to the show arena. The IHSA was established in 1967 with just two intercollegiate colleges competing and was founded on the principle that collegiate riders of all skills, regardless of their of riding ability, gender or financial status be provided the opportunity to compete individually or on teams in horse shows, while “leveling the playing field” with regard to the notion that the

Clark the hero of the game as Riverhawks win in shootout

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Josh Clark might be a freshman, but he proved his mettle as one of the Great Basin Conference's finest goalkeepers.

The Canyon Ridge stopper played like a senior on Thursday afternoon, turning back a pair of shootout spot-kicks as the Riverhawks beat Twin Falls 3-1 on penalties after splitting four goals during regulation.

Clark saved kicks from Ricky Sanchez and Ben

Worst, while another kick was missed.

"Best feeling of my life," Clark said after his heroics put the Riverhawks in the second round of the Great Basin Conference boys soccer tournament. "I've played against these kids for a long time, and I know their sides. They know I like to go to my right, so I changed it up on them."

Nate Goss opened the scoring for Twin Falls (6-7-3) in the 56 th minute on an impressive individual effort. The Bruin senior drove through three defenders with the ball and then cracked a sliding right-footed shot just inside the far post.

Jesse Partida leveled the match two minutes later when he ran onto a through-ball and broke clear, lashing it past Twin Falls keeper Conner Edwards. Partida gave Canyon Ridge (3-12-2) the lead four minutes later on a similar play before Goss equalized just before the end of regulation to send it to sudden-death extra time.

No one scored in the two 10-minute extra periods, however, setting the stage for Clark's moment.

Dunia Emmanuel, who didn't play all game, came on to cement Canyon Ridge's edge in the first round of the shootout after Sanchez was saved. Ricardo Lopez scored the Riverhawks' third effort and Suren Thapa clinched it with the fourth shot.

Both teams are in action Saturday at Sunway Soccer Complex when Canyon Ridge plays Wood River for a berth in the district title game and Twin Falls plays Minico in an elimination tilt.

Burley tops Minco on kicks

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — After drawing seven times in regular-season conference play — including just two days prior vs. Minico — the Burley Bobcats should have known it would come down to penalty kicks come district tournament time.

Burley and Minico played to a 1-1 draw through regulation and two 10-minute overtime periods in Thursday's opening round of the District IV Great Basin Conference boys soccer tournament at rain-drenched Skaggs Events Center.

The Bobcats then buried three penalty kicks to Minico's one to advance into Saturday's second round, where they will face top-seeded Jerome at Sunway Soccer Complex in Twin Falls.

"We practice PK's all the time," said Burley coach Wes Nyblade. "Minico played a great game, losing like that rips your heart out."

Burley would know — it lost on penalty kicks to Wood River in last year's district tourney to miss out on the state tournament. That experience perhaps prepared the Bobcats for Thursday's pressure-packed situation.

Angel Anguiano, Gustavo Castaneda and Logan Searle each buried a PK opportunity for Burley. Eduardo Lopez converted Minico's first try, but the Spartans' next two kicks went off the right post and over the crossbar, respectively.

Goalkeeper Juan DeLeon sealed the Burley victory, diving to his left to block Minico's final attempt.

"I was a little bit nervous, but I wanted the ball," said DeLeon. "I just concentrated on the ball. It gave me more confidence knowing that we were scoring, and (Minico) had missed two already. I was looking at the guy and he tried to fool me, but he looked at the same corner every time and I just went for that corner and there it was."

Minico plays Twin Falls Saturday at Sunway Soccer Complex in Twin Falls.

Canyon Ridge, Burley advance in GBC girls tourney

Times-News

Bonnie Detweiler's second-half penalty kick was the only goal in the game as Canyon Ridge outlasted Jerome 1-0 to open the Great Basin girls soccer tournament.

Jerome played tight defense and kept up with the Riverhawks but the penalty came back to haunt the Tigers and Detweiler and company celebrated the win.

"It was a really good game," said Canyon Ridge coach Christa Tackett. "It basically came down to who wanted it most."

Sixth-seeded Canyon Ridge plays Twin Falls on Saturday at Sunway

Soccer Complex.

BURLEY 2, MINICO 1

Third-seed Burley defeated sixth-seed Minico for the third time this season to advance past the opening round Thursday of the District IV Great Basin Conference girls soccer tournament.

Aubrie Vale put Burley on the board first, followed by a penalty-kick score by Bobcat senior Caitlyn Bennett.

Minico's goal came on a penalty kick by Chayo Tellez just before halftime.

Burley advances to play Wood River on Saturday at Sunway Soccer Complex in Twin Falls. Minico will face Jerome in an elimination game Saturday.

Gooding Senators run over Filer in 47-22 win

By John Derr
Times-News writer

GOODING — Nearly unstoppable.

Gooding tallied more than 400 yards in offense and forced four turnovers on its way to a dominating 47-22 victory over Filer Thursday night in nonconference football action.

Gooding's Casey Pierson set the tone on the first play from scrimmage, taking the handoff, breaking a tackle and reversing field on his way to a 65-yard gallop to the end zone.

"It was a good team effort and good blocking. We all went out and did our thing," said Pierson, who rushed for 157 yards and two touchdowns in the first half alone. "It's just another step to state."

When Pierson wasn't punishing Filer on offense, he tallied a handful of bone-jarring hits on defense.

"I just love to hit. I love everything about the game," added Pierson.

The news wasn't good for the Wildcats even before the game started. Two of the three running backs didn't play. Jacob Bogner was injured this week in practice while Ryan Orr has strep throat. The two are also the starting inside line-backers.

"We didn't have a full backfield. We don't have much depth and the JV guys had too many quarters," said Filer coach Russell Burnum.

Filer found the going tough throughout the first half thanks to a stingy Senator defense. A three-and-out was followed by a fumble as Gooding took over at the Filer 13. Two plays later Jon Jensen hooked up with Brayden Urrutia for another Senator touchdown.

Two more turnovers, a fumble and interception, led to two more scores.

Jensen tallied his second touchdown pass, hitting C.J. Beadz from 34 yards out while Pierson ran away from the Wildcat defenders for another long run, this time from 63 yards out as Gooding led 34-0 at the half.

"I was reading the defense and the receivers made big catches," said Jensen, who tallied 71 yards in the air. "The win feels really good."

The Wildcats finally got some good news as they opened the third quarter with a 9-play, 63-yard drive capped off by Jordan Brown's 1-yard plunge.

The excitement was short lived as Pierson went in from 28 yards out. Soon after his night came to an end with a total of 236 yards.

Brown added a pair of touchdowns for Filer in the final period and finished with 133 rushing yards, the lone bright spot on the Wildcat offense.

"Not having those two kids deflated the team, but we did better in the second half," said Burnum.

Filer (2-4) hosts Valley next week before finishing with a road game at Kimberly in an SCIC showdown. Gooding (3-3) travels to Wendell next week.

Carey dominates Dietrich in 42-6 victory

Times-News

Carey dominated both sides of the line of scrimmage and blasted past Dietrich 42-6 Thursday night in Sawtooth Conference North football action.

"Our defense struggled in the first half, but then we were able to shut them down in the third and fourth quarter," said Carey quarterback Caleb Cenarrusa. "We wanted to hold them scoreless, but we're happy with the outcome."

Charlie Rivera's 75-yard kick return foreshadowed the oncoming storm of offense for Carey. Rivera finished with 67 rushing yards on eight carries.

Running back Tim Hoopes finished with 105 rushing yard on 13 carries and two touchdowns and quarterback Cenarusa finished with 67 yards on 10 carries.

"Our defense did an excellent job at stopping the run," said Carey coach Lane Kirkland. "It would have been nice for our offense to put some more points on the board. We feel we missed some good opportunities to score. This was a pivotal game for our team. It was important to win this one and to win next week."

Glenn's Ferry evened its record at 1-1 in the Canyon Conference as the Pilots slipped past Wendell 26-22.

"Our defensive stand late in the fourth quarter was the key to the game," said Glenn's Ferry coach Rob Spriggs.

Trailing 22-18 midway through the fourth quarter,

Clay Anderson of Glenn's Ferry forced a Wendell fumble on the 5-yard line that was recovered by Josh Carpenter. With 6:25 remaining, Adrian Martinez hit Rory Hance with a 44-yard touchdown pass for the Pilots go-ahead score.

Wendell (2-4, 1-2) totaled 354 yards on offense and Glenn's Ferry (2-4) had 336 yards.

Glenn's Ferry quarterback Martinez threw for 238 yards and was 9-for-17 with two touchdowns and two interceptions. Terry Jacobsen carried the ball 18 times and gained 162 yards.

Wynter Holtman chipped in seven kills and Hailey Greenwood had nine assists and was 12-for-12 at the service line with three aces for the Trojans against the Vikings.

Scott once again led the Trojans in the win over the Pirates, recording 14 kills. Holtman added six kills with Taylor Whitaker passing out 10 assists.

"The girls played solid after losing to Challis," said Schumann. "After dropping the first game to Hagerman, it would have been easy to have a let down but the girls stayed with it and didn't let pressure get to them."

Challis defeated Hagerman 25-19, 25-13, 25-11. No details were available.

Raft River (14-3, 7-0 Snake River Conference) hosts Shoshone and Hagerman hosts Hansen on Tuesday.

Canyon Ridge quarterback Tyler Myers checks down as Buhl's Gage Kliegl chases him down Thursday night at Canyon Ridge.

He threw a pair of touch-down passes to junior slot receiver Jaxon Wrigley, who also added an 18-yard rushing touchdown to give him six TDs in the past two games.
“The coaches are most of it,” Wrigley said. “They told us we needed to get our (stuff) together. They told us after we lost to Filer (two weeks ago) that we needed to step it up.”
Valley’s sophomore quar-terback also had an impres-sive night. Taking advan-tage of Declo’s injury-depleted secondary, Justin Johnson completed 18 of 34 passes for 235 yards and three touchdowns with no interceptions.
“We played well, I can’t complain,” said Valley coach Brian Ayers. “Declo’s a good football team. Knobbe’s a horse. He’s a stud... We needed to run the ball well enough to keep (linebackers) pulled up, to keep them off our receivers.”

But that didn’t happen for Valley, which only man-aged 52 yards rushing.
Declo jumped out to a 16-0 lead in the first quarter on Garner-to-Wrigley touch-downs. But Valley answered as Brett Miller scored three of his four touchdowns in the second quarter.
After Declo went up 28-14 with 31 seconds remain-ing before halftime, Matt Ivey returned the ensuing kickoff 80 yards for a Valley score. Then, as time ran out in the half, Garner dropped back to pass, took a hit and fumbled. Miller picked it up and returned the ball 41 yards to tie it 28-28 at inter-mission.

“We’ve been making the same mistakes all year – we play hard and then we let up, and then we play hard and then we let up,” Knobbe said. “We need that intensi-ty every single play so that big plays don’t happen.”
Two big defensive plays made the difference in the second half. Declo stopped Valley inches from the goal line on fourth-and-goal late in the third quarter.
And then, trailing by two points with 7:49 to play, Declo snuffed out Valley’s fake punt attempt at the Vikings’ 25-yard line. Five plays later, Knobbe was in the end zone to give Declo a 10-point cushion.

“Kids played hard, best we’ve played all season. I’m proud of them and I’m looking forward to the next two weeks,” Ayers said.
Next week, Declo travels to Glenns Ferry and Valley goes to Filer.

Champlin spearheaded another drive for the Bulldogs in the fourth quarter, spinning his way out of three tacklers for a 13-yard gain to put Kimberly in scoring position. Clay Matthews scored from 11 yards out with 4:40 on the clock to put the game away for the Bulldogs.
It was a collective effort on the offensive end for Kimberly as six play-ers carried the ball for a combined 186 yards.

“We had some other players step up for us tonight,” Bright said.
Burley threatened to score with less than a minute remaining in the game as replacement quarterback Drew Bailey led the Bobcats to the 11-yard line, but the drive ended as so many have this season – with a fumble. Burley’s fifth of the night – to preserve the shutout for Kimberly.
“Getting a shutout is always a great feeling. Our defense played great tonight,” Bringhurst said. “We just came out with intensity and were very emotional and pumped up.”

Kimberly (4-3) faces conference foe Buhl next week, while Burley (0-6) hosts Wood River.

Hagerman at Oakley

7 p.m.
The skinny: Hagerman (4-2, 3-0 SRC) is on a three-game winning streak and is riding high after handing Shoshone its first loss (48-28) last week. It’s homecoming at Oakley (4-1, 2-1 SRC), which suf-fered its only loss to Shoshone (18-14). A Hagerman win tonight would put the Pirates in the Snake River Conference driver’s seat. It’s speed vs. size as the teams have contrasting styles: Oakley is big and will pound the running game, while Hagerman uses several formations to spread it out and utilize its athleticism.
Hagerman coach Ron Echols: “If you’re going to get to the state playoffs, you’ve got to go through Oakley to get there. ... They cause matchup problems for us with their size and hopefully we cause some matchup problems for them with our speed and skill people. They have some strengths and we have some strengths. We’ll see who will execute the best and take care of the ball. I think turnovers will be huge in this game.”
Oakley coach Tim Behunin: “Their quarterback (Zac Reid) has a great arm and they’re able to complete long passes downfield. They like to go vertical and they use space effectively. We need to keep that contained. It will come down to execution and turnovers.”

Finishing had been an issue for CSI all season long, but a rigorous two weeks of practice that con-stantly put the players in a position to fight through adversity appear to be pay-ing off.
When the chips were down in the fourth set with Salt Lake well ahead and all signs pointing to a fifth-straight five-set match between the two JUCO giants, the Golden Eagles stayed composed and got back into the match as set-ter Barbara Alcantara served seven straight points to get it back to 22-21.
“Ba came in and did a great job putting pressure (with her serves) in the area we needed to apply the pressure,” said CSI coach Heidi Cartisser. “Salt Lake got stuck in that rotation and their go-to player (Ame’ White) had to do everything.”
White finished with 14 kills for Salt Lake (21-3, 0-2), which was led by Kellie Turner’s 15 kills. Erika Charry had 10.
For all the firepower both teams boast, CSI got it done with defense. The Golden Eagles outblocked their guests 8-6, outdug them 72-71 and committed 37 errors to the Bruins’ 53.
“It’s been about more commitment, more emo-tion ... giving it all we’ve got,” said middle blocker Alyssa Everett, who shared the team lead with Dama Cox in blocks with six. “We felt that emotion and rode the momentum to the end.”
The 11-1 run to cap the match was an impressive punctuation, but the turn-ing point came in the sec-ond set when CSI rallied from four down to take the set when Brochado ham-mered a ball into the Salt Lake block. It came straight down and landed just out to square the match at a set apiece as the teams headed into the locker room for the mid-match intermission.
“It was all about momentum,” Everett said. “That was a huge point in the game for us.”
CSI won’t get much time to celebrate the win, as Salt Lake was just the first of three straight ranked opponents to come to Twin Falls. On Saturday the Golden Eagles host No. 18 Snow College, which lost 25-17, 25-9, 27-25 to No. 11 North Idaho on Thursday.
CSI welcomes No. 4 Western Wyoming on Monday.

Martinez rushes for 4 TDs, No. 7 Nebraska breezes

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Nebraska quarterback Taylor Martinez rushed for 242 yards and four touchdowns Thursday night and the seventh-ranked Cornhuskers ended a 99-year rivalry with Kansas State in the same lopsided fashion it began, thrashing the slower, outmanned Wildcats 48-13.

Martinez, the redshirt freshman who has rushed for 737 yards in his first five games for the Huskers (5-0), also threw a 79-yard touchdown pass to Kyler Reed for a 38-6 lead in the third quarter. His rushing total broke Jammal Lord's Nebraska record for a quarterback and his four rushing TDs tied the team quarter-back mark. He was replaced by Cody Green with almost 10 minutes left in the game.

Martinez finished 5 of 7 for 128 yards as the Huskers piled up 587 yards total offense in the Big 12 opener for both teams.

Daniel Thomas, a senior running back who was averaging 157 yards a game for the Wildcats (4-1), was held to 63 yards on 22 carries.

Kansas State did not have nearly enough quickness to keep up with Martinez and the Huskers. Roy Helu broke loose for a 68-yard TD run in a 21-point third quarter that made a rout of what could be the last game these two schools ever play. In a rousing start to their farewell Big 12 tour, the Huskers' shortest touchdown play was 14 yards.

Headed next year to the Big Ten, they said goodbye to Kansas State with a six-game winning streak that raised their overall record against the Wildcats to 78-15-2, a series they began in 1911 with a 59-0 blowout and dominated almost start-to-finish.

In one four-game stretch in the 1980s, Nebraska outscored Kansas State 183-9. So getting kicked around by Nebraska was nothing new to Kansas State fans who had hoped to send them out of the Big 12 with a loss.

But the Huskers had too much speed and too much Martinez. Their scoring drives in the third quarter covered 80 yards in three plays, 68 in one and 80 in two.

Kansas State's only TD came on a 2-yard pass on fourth down from Carson Coffman to Chris Harper late in the fourth quarter. Brodrick Smith, Kansas State's sophomore wide receiver, hurt his left leg on the third-down play and was taken off the field on a cart as play was stopped for several minutes.

Martinez got the Huskers rolling with a 14-yard TD run in the first quarter. In the second, he went around right end, the linebacker bit on the fake to the running back, and Martinez went 35 yards to the end zone. He made it 24-3 58 seconds into the third quarter when he burst up the middle through a big hole and raced 80 yards untouched.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Ryder Cup vice captain Thomas Bjorn of Denmark shot a 6-under 66 at St. Andrews on Thursday for a share of the first-round lead in the Alfred Dunhill Links.

Dutchman Maarten Lafeber, Argentina's Ricardo Gonzalez and Scotland's Martin Laird also had 66s. Lafeber played at Carnoustie, Gonzalez opened on the Old Course at St. Andrews, and Laird played at Kingsbarns.

Martin Kaymer topped the European Ryder Cup players in the field with a 68 at Kingsbarns.

Ross Fisher opened with a 69, Graeme McDowell and Lee Westwood had 70s, Padraig Harrington and Rory McIlroy followed with 71s, Francesco Molinari and captain Colin Montgomerie shot 72s, Edoardo Molinari had a 73, and Peter Hanson shot a 74 — all at Kingsbarns.

ROLLINS LEADS AT MCGLADREY CLASSIC

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. — John Rollins kicked off the new McGladrey Classic with his best round of the year, a 7-under 63 at Sea Island to take a one-shot lead over David Toms and rookie Troy Merritt.

It was a fast start for Rollins, inspired by a pep talk from his wife after he was unceremoniously eliminated from the FedEx Cup playoffs. Rollins was poised to advance to the third event until shooting a 79 the final day at the TPC Boston.

Zach Johnson and Matt Kuchar moved a bit slower having just returned from a long, wet week at the Ryder Cup. Kuchar challenged the lead until taking a double bogey on the 16th and shot 67. Johnson had a 70.

Davis Love, the tournament host and a vice captain in Wales, also had a 70.

KERR LEADS AT NAVISTAR LPGA CLASSIC

PRATTVILLE, Ala. — LPGA Championship winner Cristie Kerr shot a 7-under 65 to take a one-stroke lead over Morgan Pressel, Anna Nordqvist and Dorothy Delasin in the Navistar LPGA Classic.

Kerr, also the LPGA State Farm Classic champion this year, birdied three of the last four holes in her bogey-free round on the links-style Senator course at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail's Capitol Hill complex.

Long-hitting Brittany Lincicome was two strokes back at 67 along with Christina Kim, Vicky Hurst, Giulia Sergas. Silvia Cavalleri was 5 under with a hole left when play was suspended because of darkness.

KITE LEADS CONSTELLATION ENERGY SENIOR PLAYERS CHAMPIONSHIP

POTOMAC, Md. — Tom Kite shot a 3-under 67 in calmer morning conditions to take a one-stroke lead over fellow early starters Mark O'Meara, Michael Allen and Joe Ozaki in the Constellation Energy Senior Players Championship, the Champions Tour's final major of the season.

After a bogey on No. 7, the 60-year-old Kite — winless since the 2008 Boeing Classic — birdied Nos. 9, 10, 14 and 17 at new-look TPC Potomac at Avenel Farm. Allen, coming off a second-place finish last week in the PGA Tour's Viking Classic, had five birdies and three bogeys.

New York Yankees' Lance Berkman hits a home run during the fifth inning of Game 2 of baseball's American League Division Series against the Minnesota Twins, Thursday in Minneapolis.

Pettitte puts Twins in their place, Yanks win 5-2

MINNEAPOLIS — Andy Pettitte gave the New York Yankees yet another clutch performance in the post-season, pitching seven smooth innings in a 5-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins on Thursday evening for a 2-0 lead in their AL division series.

Lance Berkman hit a home run in the fifth and a go-ahead double in the seventh — right after a disputed pitch led to the ejection of Twins manager Ron Gardenhire — and sent the Twins to their 11th straight postseason loss. Eight of those have come against the Yankees, who trailed in each of those games.

The Twins haven't won a postseason game since 2004, matching the Philadelphia Phillies (1915-1976) for the second-longest streak in history behind the Boston Red Sox (1986-1995) and their 13 in a row.

Berkman put the Yankees ahead 3-2 with his double, one pitch after it appeared Carl Pavano sneaked strike three past him. Gardenhire barked at plate umpire Hunter Wendelstedt after Berkman's hit and got tossed.

Mariano Rivera pitched the ninth for his second save of the series. Game 3 is Saturday night at Yankee Stadium.

RANGERS 6, RAYS 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Two dominating pitching performances and a long home run by playoff neophyte Michael Young have the Texas Rangers on the verge of winning a postseason series for the first time.

Young hit a three-run homer one pitch after a disputed check-swing that prompted the ejection of Tampa Bay manager Joe Maddon, helping C.J.

Wilson and the AL West champions beat the Rays for a 2-0 lead in their AL division series.

Texas is the only current major league franchise that's never won a playoff series. After taking two games on the road, that can change when the best-of-five matchup shifts to Rangers Ballpark for Game 3 on Saturday.

Ian Kinsler also homered for the Rangers, who are in the playoffs for the first time since 1999.

Wilson allowed two hits in 6 2-3 innings. Relievers Darren O'Day and Darren Oliver completed the combined two-hitter before a sellout crowd of 35,535.

Rays starter James Shields allowed four runs and four hits over 4 1-3 innings.

GIANTS 1, BRAVES 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Tim Lincecum pitched a two-hitter and struck out 14 in a dominating postseason debut, and the San Francisco Giants scored their only run after a questionable umpiring call to beat the wild-card Atlanta Braves 1-0 in Game 1 of their NL division series Thursday night.

The Freak really showed up for San Francisco in his biggest start yet, pitching his own gem a day after Philadelphia's Roy Halladay threw only the second no-hitter in postseason history in his debut. Lincecum outdueled playoff veteran Derek Lowe and caught a break, too.

Cody Ross singled in a run in the fourth after Buster Posey was called safe on a steal of second by umpire Paul Emmel. Posey appeared to be tagged out by Brooks Conrad on the play.

BYU, Utah agree to continue football rivalry

Utes drop BSU to make room for Holy War

Staff and wire reports

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah and BYU will continue their rivalry once they leave the Mountain West.

The schools said Thursday they've agreed to a home-and-home series beginning in 2011, with Utah canceling a planned three-game series with Boise State to make room for the schedule change.

Utah and BYU are both leaving the Mountain West next season just as Boise State is joining it. Utah and Colorado are fleeing their conferences to join the Pac-10, while BYU is becoming an independent in football. BYU is joining the West Coast Conference in most other sports.

BYU and Utah's athletic directors have both said they wanted to maintain the rivalry known as the "Holy War" ever since Utah announced it was leaving the conference. The two programs have played in the same conferences together since 1906. They've played each other in football every year since 1922, with the exception of seasons in 1943-1945 because of World War II.

"The BYU-Utah rivalry is once of the best in the country and is very important to the fans of both schools," BYU athletic director Tom Holmoe said in a statement.

The teams will play in Provo for the first game on Sept. 17, 2011, then the Cougars will travel to Salt Lake City for the Sept. 25, 2012, game.

The buyout for the Boise State games will cost Utah $350,000. Utah said it will mitigate some of that by recouping $250,000 from Iowa State, which canceled its return game. Utah and Iowa State play each other in Ames, Iowa, on Saturday.

BYU and Utah also said they've agreed to a four-year home-and-home series in basketball, with the schools playing each other one game a year on the second Saturday of December. The first game is scheduled for Dec. 10, 2011, in Salt Lake City.

While Boise State loses the football matchups with Utah, the two schools did announce a four-game home-and-home men's basketball series. The first game of the basketball series is scheduled for Dec. 17 in Salt Lake City. The second game will be played at Taco Bell Arena in Boise on Nov. 16, 2011. Dates for the final two games have yet to be determined.

"While we are disappointed the football series between the two schools will not continue at this time, we are very excited about our upcoming four-game series in men's basketball," said Boise State Athletics Director Gene Bleymaier.

"At this time we are not sure if or when we'll be able to announce a replacement of Utah in our upcoming football schedules," Bleymaier added. "We are waiting to find out how many league games Boise State will have in the Mountain West Conference next season."

Put 'em in or keep 'em out? The Boise State debate

By Ralph D. Russo

Associated Press writer

Under-appreciated or overrated. Slighted or skating by. Put 'em in or keep 'em out.

No matter where you go, everybody has an opinion about the Boise State Broncos.

The great debate of the 2010 college football season is whether No. 4 Boise State, if it has another undefeated regular season, should play in the BCS championship game on Jan. 10 in Glendale, Ariz.

With every week that goes by, with every victory the Broncos rack up, with every team that passes them in the polls, the argument becomes more heated.

A few years ago fans of the Southeastern Conference and the Big Ten didn't give much thought to Boise State. And those that did probably got a kick out of the BCS-busting Broncos, with their trick plays and post-game wedding proposals.

Now Boise State, which plays in the Western Athletic Conference — a league without an automatic bid to the Bowl Championship Series that clearly isn't as difficult as the SEC, Big Ten, Pac-10 or Big 12 — seems to be the most hated team in the country. Or the most beloved.

On one side there's this: "There's no question that (the Broncos) deserve a chance," said Aaron Taylor, the former Notre Dame lineman who now works as an analyst for CBS College Sports. "They have proven that once they get a chance to play against the best teams, they can handle themselves."

On the other side there's this: "Boise State can beat anybody in the country," ESPN's Lee Corso said on College Gameday earlier in the season. "But they play 10 non-BCS opponents and two BCS opponents in Virginia Tech and Oregon State. There's your answer."

Dig into the Boise State debate and what you'll find is two distinct questions:

1) How does Boise State stack up against the likes of Alabama, Ohio State, Oregon, Oklahoma and Nebraska?

Boise State's Tommy Gallarda (85) hoists Michael Coughlin (7) into the air after Coughlin scored Oct. 2 in Las Cruces, N.M.

Receivers Austin Pettis and Titus Young are legitimate NFL prospects. So are defensive end Ryan Winterswyk and defensive backs Jeron Johnson and Brandyn Thompson. And quarterback Kellen Moore, while far from an NFL prototype at 6-feet tall, fits the mold of great college quarterbacks such as Danny Wuerffel and Jason White.

Boise State has won five of its last six game against teams ranked in the AP Top 25, including a 33-30 victory against Virginia Tech at FedEx Field in Landover, Md., to start this season and a 37-24 win at home against Oregon State. Critics will point out those six games are spread across three seasons.

Oregon State has also lost to No. 5 TCU, the other team from a non-automatic qualifying conference that has a shot to become the first team from outside the six automatic qualifying conferences to play in the BCS title game.

Ask Beavers coach Mike Riley if Boise State and TCU, from the Mountain West Conference, are worthy of their high rankings and without hesitation he answers: "Yes."

"I think they are really, really good football teams. They've got all the phases going and they got talent," he said.

Then comes the respectful qualifier.

"I guess the best way to say it is they'd do well in our conference," Riley said. "I don't think their season would be the same competition-wise at all if they were in the Pac-10 or the Big 12 or whatever conference, but I think they can win any certain game at any time."

Translation: They're good, but the Broncos aren't running the table in the Pac-10 the way they have done in the WAC three of the last four seasons.

There's something else fueling the pro-Boise State faction: a passionate dislike for the BCS.

"As one that doesn't naturally root for the underdog, I'd like to see Boise State get a shot," said Brian Jones, a former Texas linebacker and CBS College Sports analyst. "That's why I am a big proponent of a playoff, because then we can find out on the field."

Ultimately, though, the anti-Boise State contingent is more likely to get its way again this season.

Boise State started the season behind Alabama and Ohio State in the AP and coaches' polls and has already been passed by Oregon. The AP poll has no bearing on the BCS. The coaches' poll does, along with the Harris poll, which makes its first appearances of the season Sunday. Rarely does the Harris poll look dramatically different from the other two.

The first BCS standings, which also includes computer ratings, arrive on Oct. 17. The computers always spit out low marks for Boise State's schedule.

It seems pretty clear that an unbeaten record again won't be enough for Boise State. The Broncos will need the teams in front of them to lose and probably a bunch of the teams behind them, too.

If the Broncos are the only unbeaten team at the end of the regular season or one of two with perfect records, they might finally get their big chance.

Or not.

The most controversial BCS question lying ahead this season is this: Does Boise State deserve a spot in the BCS title game ahead of a team with one loss from one of the traditional power conferences.

Alabama coach Nick Saban has already weighed in on this, saying teams should be rewarded for playing tough competition.

The mere thought of Alabama losing one game to, say, South Carolina, then being left out of the national title game for Boise State, is enough to enrage most Tide fans.

Then again, the thought of Alabama, Ohio State or Oregon losing a game, but still reaching the national title game ahead of an unbeaten Boise State team has Broncos fans boiling.

This is certain: No matter what happens to Boise State, there's going to be some very upset college football fans.

Mexican drug gang thwarts search for missing U.S. tourist

By April Castro
Associated Press writer

ZAPATA, Texas — A search for a missing American tourist presumably shot and killed by Mexican pirates on a border lake has been thwarted by threats of an ambush from drug gangs, U.S. officials said Thursday.

U.S. Rep. Henry Cuellar told reporters that Mexican authorities are doing everything they can to find David Hartley's body while trying to keep their own crews safe.

"When darkness was falling (Wednesday evening), they got word that there might be an ambush," Cuellar said. "People that are trying to do their job on the Mexican side are facing a risk, they're right inside the hornets' nest ... they had to suspend the search."

Cuellar said the search resumed midmorning Thursday.

Tiffany Hartley said her husband, David, was shot to death by Mexican pirates chasing them on speedboats across Falcon Lake on Sept. 30 as they returned on Jet Skis from a trip to photograph a historic Mexican church. Neither his body nor the Jet Ski has been recovered. Texas officials have warned boaters and fisherman that pirates frequent the Mexican side of the lake, a 25-mile by 3-mile dammed section of the Rio Grande.

That part of Tamaulipas state is overrun by violence from a turf battle between the Gulf Cartel and the Zeta drug gang, made up of former Mexican special forces soldiers, and both are battling the Mexican military.

Texas Gov. Rick Perry, campaigning for re-election in Houston, said such threats were no excuse.

"I don't think we're doing enough. When you call off the search the way they did ... and give as the reason because the drug cartels are in control of that part of the state, something's not right," Perry said. "We do not need to let our border continue to deteriorate from the standpoint of having drug cartels telling whether or not we can go in and bring the body of an American citizen who was killed. That is irresponsible."

Later Thursday, Jesus de la Garza, deputy attorney general, said Mexican authorities have intensified the search under orders from Tamaulipas Gov. Eugenio Hernandez, whose office had been contacted by a member of Perry's staff.

He said more than 100 people were searching for the body using speedboats, helicopters and all-terrain vehicles. Divers have also been deployed, he said.

The lake appeared calm on Thursday afternoon. From the border markers in the water, the only sign of activity on the Mexican side was a single helicopter, which appeared to be a Mexican military aircraft, flying overhead.

Zapata County Sheriff Sigifredo Gonzalez said he has sent word to the Zetas that he wants the body returned and has no plans to prosecute.

"We just want a body," Gonzalez said. "We cannot arrest anybody for what happened in Mexico, we cannot prosecute on the state level anybody for what happened in Mexico. We just want a body. I did send word to the drug cartel, the Zeta cartel in Mexico, I sent word to them unofficially. I can't tell you how but I sent word to them."

Gonzalez said he has not received a response.

Cuellar, a Texas Democrat joined by two other area congressmen, said Mexico was "doing the best that they can."

Toxic sludge reaches Danube

A wall with family photos shows the height of the flood of toxic mud that broke into the home, Thursday in the village of Kolontar, Hungary.

Environmentalists warn of long-term damage to topsoil

By George Jahn
Associated Press writer

KOLONTAR, Hungary — Red sludge flowed into the Danube River on Thursday, threatening a half-dozen nations along one of Europe's key waterways. Monitors took samples every few hour to measure damage from the toxic spill and emergency officials declared one Hungarian tributary dead.

As cleanup crews gathered deer carcasses and other wildlife from the villages in southwestern Hungary flooded by the industrial waste, environmental groups warned of long-term damage to the farming region's topsoil.

Conflicting information swirled about the dangers posed by the ankle-deep muck coating the most seriously hit areas after the collapse of a waste-storage reservoir at a nearby alumina plant Monday.

The Hungarian Academy of Sciences maintained that while the material was a continued hazard, its heavy metal concentrations were not considered dangerous to the environment.

"The academy can say whatever it wants," fumed Barbara Szalai Szita, who lives in Devecser, one of the hardest-hit villages. "All I know is that if I spend 30 minutes outside I get a foul taste in my mouth and my tongue feels strange."

Hungary's environment minister, Zoltan Illes, said the henna-colored sludge covering a 16-square-mile swathe of countryside does have "a high content of heavy metals," some of which can cause cancer. He warned of possible environmental hazards, particularly if it were to enter the groundwater system.

With rain giving way to dry, warmer weather over the past two days, the caustic mud is increasingly turning to airborne dust, which can cause respiratory problems, Illes added.

"If that would dry out then ... wind can blow ... that heavy metal contamination through the respiratory system," he said.

Amid the conflicting reports, officials had one piece of encouraging news: The mighty Danube was apparently absorbing the slurry with little immediate harm beyond sporadic sightings of dead fish.

The red sludge, a waste product of aluminum production, reached the western branch of the Danube early Thursday and was flowing into its broad main stretch by noon. By evening, it was moving southward toward Serbia and Romania.

At monitoring stations in Croatia, Serbia and Romania, officials were taking river samples every few hours, though experts hoped the river's huge water volume would blunt the impact of the spill.

Hungarian rescue agency spokesman Tibor Dobson said the pH content of the sludge entering the Danube had been reduced to the point where it was unlikely to cause further environmental damage. The waste, which had tested at a highly alkaline pH level of 13 soon after the spill — similar to lye or bleach — was under 10 by Thursday.

A neutral pH level for water is 7, with normal readings ranging from 6.5 to 8.5. Each pH number is 10 times the previous level, so a pH of 13 is 1,000 times more alkaline than a pH of 10.

The tributaries feeding the Danube from the area around the spill were not so fortunate. The Marcal River, stained ochre and devoid of fish and other aquatic life, was declared a dead zone.

"Life in the Marcal River has been extinguished," Dobson said of the waterway, which is fed by streams around the accident site and carried the waste into the Raba River, which then flows into the Danube.

He said emergency crews were pouring plaster and acetic acid — vinegar — into the area where the Raba and Danube meet to lower the sludge's pH value.

"The main effort is now being concentrated on the Raba and the Danube," he said. "That's what has to be saved."

An AP television crew watching cleanup efforts at the confluence of the Raba and the Danube said neither river showed visible signs of pollution.

An environmental group that monitors threats to the Danube said the breached reservoir was on a 2006 watch list of some 100 industrial sites that were at risk for accidents that could contaminate the 1,775-mile-long river. The International Commission for the Protection of the Danube River coordinates conservation efforts in the nations bordering the waterway and its tributaries.

Prime Minister Viktor Orban, visiting the village of Kolontar, where homes and fields were coated with sludge, described the reservoir break as a disaster unprecedented in Hungary.

"If this had happened at night then everyone here would have died," he told the MTI news agency. "This is so irresponsible that it is impossible to find words!"

Controversial art won't be returned to display after attack in museum

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — A piece of artwork denounced as obscene by church members and allegedly ripped up by a Montana woman using a crowbar won't be returned to display because of safety concerns, city officials said Thursday.

"The incident yesterday was very troubling and also very impactful on the city staff, volunteers and the public at the venue," said Rod Wensing, acting city manager.

Kathleen Folden, 56, of Kalispell, Mont., was arrested Wednesday on a charge of criminal mischief. Witnesses told police that she used a crowbar to smash glass shielding the print at the Loveland Museum Gallery and then tore part of it up.

Folden, a truck driver, told police that she drove from Montana and bought a crowbar in Loveland before going to the museum to destroy the artwork, according to an arrest affidavit obtained by The Coloradoan in Fort Collins.

Police said the damaged part includes what critics say was a depiction of Jesus Christ engaged in a sex act.

Museum visitor Mark Michaels told the Loveland Reporter-Herald that Folden screamed "How can you desecrate my Lord?" during the incident.

The artist, Stanford University professor Enrique Chagoya, told The Associated Press on Thursday that the work has been mischaracterized. He said while the part in question is suggestive, it's not graphic.

The panel includes figures cut out from a comic book, a head resembling Christ and a skeleton with a pope's hat.

"This is not Christ. It's a collage," Chagoya said. "What I'm trying to express is the corruption of the spiritual by the church."

The print was taken by police as evidence.

Folden was released on a $350 cash bond during a court appearance Thursday. Another hearing is set for Oct. 15.

The work that was damaged, "The Misadventures of the Romantic Cannibals," is a 12-panel lithograph that includes comic book characters, Mexican pornography, Mayan symbols and ethnic stereotypes. It is part of an 82-print exhibit by 10 artists that have worked with Colorado printer Bud Shark that opened in mid-September.

Members of a local church have been among those peacefully protesting outside the city-owned museum for most of the week. A city councilman and some residents had demanded that Chagoya's work be removed, but the council decided Tuesday to leave it on display.

Some of the outspoken critics have condemned the attack on the artwork.

The museum has seen a significant increase in visitors since the controversy started, said Maureen Corey, the museum's art curator. Visitors include supporters and opponents of the piece.

"In my opinion, it's rather sad taking away people's freedom to see the art," Corey said.

Loveland police originally got reports of gunfire at the museum, but said it appears people mistook the banging of the crowbar against the glass for shots. No firearm was involved, police said.

Chagoya said he was sad and disappointed that the work, one of 30 limited prints, won't be on display again in Loveland.

"It will be a loss for everybody, not just for me, but for everybody that believes in the First Amendment," Chagoya said. Suppression of art and ideas is something that happens in totalitarian regimes, not this country, he added.

URBAN VERSATILITY & FUN-TO-DRIVE PERFORMANCE 2011 NISSAN JUKE SPORT CROSS

First Look!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

The all-new 2011 Nissan JUKE sport cross draws on a number of active lifestyle influences, including motorcycles and rally cars, to create a breakthrough design among traditional B-segment hatchbacks. The Nissan JUKE fuses the best qualities of a sports car, including a sporty driving position, dynamic handling and powerful engine, with the best aspects of an SUV such as a robust lower body, raised ground height, improved visibility, confident stance and available all-wheel drive.

Along with its bold design and highly distinctive, sporty styling inside and out, JUKE brings unexpected levels of performance from the standard 188-hp MR16DDT 1.6L Direct Injection Gasoline (DIG) turbo four-cylinder engine and an advanced torque vectoring all-wheel drive (AWD) system performance technology usually reserved for premium vehicles.

The engine, the first application in North America, combines the best of both worlds spirited performance and good fuel economy. Direct injection helps improve combustion, enhancing power, torque, economy and emissions. The use of the turbocharger and intercooler also help boost power, while the variable timing control for both intake and exhaust cycles improves low-end engine response. Two transmissions are offered Nissan's advanced Xtronic CVT (Continuously Variable Transmission) with S-Mode and a six-speed manual transmission (SV FWD and SL FWD models only). Built on Nissan's proven global B-platform, JUKE features a powerful front end treatment with the turn signals integrated into the front fenders, a high beltline and coupe-like falling roofline. Other exterior details include body-colored outside mirrors and front door handles, and hidden rear door handles. The JUKE also offers generous ground clearance with standard 17-inch wheels and tires. Adding to the authentic SUV look is a broad shoulder line, large wheel arches and robust lower bodywork that seems to emerge from under the vehicle.

Above the waistline, JUKE shows its sporty side with a raked windshield, upswept rear side windows and canopy-like glass. The lights also reflect JUKE's sporty agility, with the front lights split into two distinct elements, with the main lamps drawing inspiration from rally car lights. Fog lights are available, depending on trim level. In the rear, the taillights share a resemblance with the distinctive boomerang design found on the latest generation Nissan 370Z. The JUKE color palette includes a range of eight exterior offerings.

Inside the JUKE interior is equally aggressive with bolstered front seats, a wide instrument panel and a unique center console inspired by a motorcycle fuel tank and finished in a high-gloss paint. The gearshift sits on top of the console, inspired by sports car driver/shifter positioning. Despite JUKE's overall compact dimensions, the interior offers segment competitive roominess and space for five adults. In the rear, a fold-down 60/40-split bench seat and flat load floor provide passenger and cargo hauling flexibility.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend "Chucky" and I have been together for a while and things are starting to get serious. I'm 15 and he's almost 18.

I'm falling in love with him, which has never happened with any other guy. I really think he's "The One." Chucky proposed, but it isn't official yet. I still have no ring, but I'm thinking of accepting. Now he says he wants a baby.

I'm too young to be having a baby, but he says he'll take care of me if it happens. I trust him, but I don't know what to believe. A part of me says he'll stay with me, the other part says he'll get scared and leave. What if something goes wrong and I get pregnant by accident? I'm so confused. Can you please help me?

— CHUCKY'S GIRL
IN VICTORVILLE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR CHUCKY'S GIRL: At "almost 18" Chucky is not yet self-supporting, let alone in a position to support a child — and at 15, neither are you. Chucky may want a baby to prove to himself that he's a man, but a REAL man wouldn't put a woman he loves in a vulnerable position — and motherhood at 16 is exactly that.

Did you know that when young men reach the age of 18 they are considered adults? Adult males who have sex with underage girls can find themselves in jail for it. If you don't have sex with Chucky, there will be no "accidents."

It's hard to think clearly when you think you're falling in love, but I'm asking you to make a superhuman effort. I can't stress strongly enough how important it is that you finish high school, so that when you do become a mother you'll be able to support yourself and your child if you need to. Many women do. They also sometimes have to support a husband who can't find work.

Before things go any further, please find an adult woman you can confide in. She'll set you straight!

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine, "Barbie," volunteered to be the maid of honor in my wedding. She didn't attend any of the dress fittings because she doesn't have a car. She volunteered to throw a bridal shower despite having no money, and asked my fiancé to contribute. After he told Barbie he was "tapped out" (because of the wedding bills), she suggested he return some of the gifts he had bought me!

Two days before the shower, I learned she had selected a dress more suited to a stripper pole than a church wedding ceremony. At that point, my fiancé decided to remove her from the bridal party.

Barbie feels slighted and doesn't understand why we made the day about "us" and not her. She's genuinely hurt that we didn't "consider her financial position." (We didn't ask for her help in the first place.)

Would you please lend your vast wisdom and insight to this matter?

— DENIAL IS NOT A RIVER IN EGYPT

DEAR DENIAL: When Barbie volunteered to be your maid of honor, knowing her financial situation you should have politely told her no. Because you didn't, you should have made sure she understood the financial responsibilities that went with being in the wedding. And since she had no transportation, someone should have offered her a ride to the dress fitting, which would have enabled you to see her dress selection.

That said, your friend was pushy to ask to be in the wedding in the first place, gutsy to expect your fiancé to return your gifts to help her pay for the shower and clueless about wedding etiquette. Make a pact to forgive HER if she'll forgive YOU, and all of you should go on with your lives. I predict it will be in opposite directions.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"How comes it to pass, then, that we appear such towards in reasoning, and are so afraid to stand the test of ridicule?"

— Earl of Shaftesbury

All this week's deals come from last year's world championships in Brazil. Today's deal is from a Seniors' match between USA and Poland, in which Poland missed an opportunity.

Where Poland sat North-South, the contract of three no-trump was played by North (Jacek Romanski). After Mark Lair (East) led a top spade, the Polish declarer was not under pressure. Since East had not bid spades at either of his first two turns, North was confident that West held the heart ace and club king. So declarer won the first trick in his hand, led a club to dummy's ace, and played the heart 10 to his king. Declarer continued with the club jack and another club, establishing nine tricks: two spades, one heart, two diamonds and four clubs.

Against Mike Passell, West found the apparently killing lead of a diamond. Declarer took the trick with the king and led his singleton heart. When West ducked, declarer won with dummy's king, then played a club to his queen. West took the trick and led another diamond, but Passell had the same nine tricks as Romanski.

Did you notice West's error? He needed to play diamonds three times: twice to knock out declarer's ace-king and once to cash his established winners. And he had three chances: the lead at trick one and when in with his two entries — the heart ace and club king. At trick two, he should have hopped up with his heart ace to lead another diamond. That would have defeated the contract.

ANSWER: In this seat, double would simply be for takeout. It's the most flexible action since you will elicit three-card support from your partner, or find out more about your partner's minor-suit pattern. It seems premature for you to commit the hand either to clubs or to no-trump.

IF OCTOBER 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Prepare now. Like a squirrel that stores nuts for winter, you should make sure all loose ends are tied up before November. November and December are the worst possible months in which to change jobs, make crucial decisions or make major investments. Keep your nose to the grindstone and by February, you will find that people are looking at your actions with a more favorable eye. Batten down the hatches again during March, April and early May when the stars are unfavorable for any new enterprises. New friendships or group activities will help you get back up to speed late next spring.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The sky is the limit. Discuss hopes and dreams with a significant other, a co-worker or a buddy. On the surface pay homage to tradition, but don't be afraid to act like nonconformist in private.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Venus currently resides in your opposite sign, so the attributes of peace and harmony could be easy to achieve. Partners could have vast plans that require you to chip in with private resources.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Championship chess moves put the power on your side of the board. Since you are mentally thorough, this is a good time to tackle intricate studies, handle computer chores or inhale technological ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You know you are safe if the barking dog wags its tail. Pay attention to body language rather than the words. Take advantage of every indication of friendliness and open up the lines of communication.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't judge a book by its plain brown wrapper. Someone you consider to be dull or commonplace may impress you with sparkling conversation or unexpected intelligence. Pick someone's sizeable brains.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You roll on a wheel of discontent. You think you are repeatedly betrayed by others or made a victim. Quit blaming other people for your troubles. Learn to put on brakes so that the outcome is positive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mental mastery makes you magnificent. This is a good time to decipher the user manual or study guide that seemed like hieroglyphics just last week. Your ability to grasp scientific truths is emphasized.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Nature needs to nurture. You might have a green thumb or simply be skilled at taking care of things that must grow. You don't even need to own a plant to see how your ideas and desires can blossom.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Facts are never fiction, but provide a basis for speculative fiction. You might be most comfortable with familiar patterns, social customs, and procedures, but can still entertain progressive ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are a sharp cookie who never crumbles. You might be humbled or truly inspired by a great mind or piece of information. You clever enough to know that there are things you do not know.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hang your hat on the right hat rack. Pair up with significant others who have vision and determination. Someone may stir your ambitions and a relationship can develop into a rewarding experience.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take giant intellectual steps that lead upwards like stairs. Your feet may be planted firmly on the ground but mentally you can fly. Read a book, learn a new trick, or listen to a knowledgeable friend.
