Trial begins in GOP closed primary lawsuit

Outcome could reduce voting
options, ripple

By Ben Botkin

BOISE — The bench trial began Wednesday for a federal civil case that's pushing to close primary elections to independent voters. Idaho has had an open primary system for 37 years, meaning that voters can choose to vote on any one party's ballot. The trial's outcome could change that, potentially setting a precedent that could force the state to close its primaries to voters who don't identify themselves as a member of a political party.

The case also has implications beyond Idaho in about 20 states with similar open primary systems in place. That because the court's future ruling can be cited elsewhere in other legal attempts to close primaries.

"It would have national ramifications," said Harry Kresky, an attorney for IndependentVoting.org, an intervening party in the case that represents 11 independent voters in Idaho.

The case was filed in 2008 by the Idaho Republican Party against

Kemp makes trio out of Allred-Otter duel

Idaho's first two gubernatorial debates were one-on-one matches between Keith Allred and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

In round three, the Democratic challenger and Republican incumbent were joined by Jana Kemp, an independent candidate who had a rare opportunity to get the same level of public exposure that Republican and Democratic candidates routinely receive.

And she took advantage of it. Kemp reminded voters on Wednesday that the choice is theirs and presented herself as a desirable alternative with elected experience as a state legislator and business owner without any baggage associated with political parties or ties to special interests.

"I owe my allegiance to no one," she told the audience at the College of Idaho in Caldwell, in a debate that was broadcast live on television stations across the state.

Kemp's presence added another voice to the sparring between Allred and Otter about the budget, public education and tax exemptions.

The candidates gave widely differing answers when asked about funding for K-12 public education.

Allred said that there were good options that Otter could have used, like fully staffing the State

Gene Baxter of Twin Falls pauses Wednesday next to a trailer that he uses to carry vegetables from his garden back to his home on the next block. Baxter says he likes to 'see stuff grow and see people's reaction when they get to eat different things.'

Longtime T.F. gardener freely shares the joys of his bounty

Frost covers Gene Baxter's garden in a bejeweled blanket, signaling the end of the warm season. Rows of corn glow in the early morning light, casting long shadows over the cantaloupes and beans as the sun rises over the one-acre plot.

Baxter, 70, looks around his Twin Falls garden filled with corn, peas, cucumbers, tomatoes and zucchini — and shrugs.

"Looks like the frost got the squash," Baxter says, adding an R to the final word so it sounds like "squarsh."

The carrots will still be OK, he said, and the pumpkins are turning a pleasant hue of orange, just in time for Halloween.

A friend who was trying to get in touch with Baxter once asked him if he was going to be in church the next day. His response as he weeded his crops was, "I'm in church now."

The large garden is Baxter's therapy and passion. Every day he spends hours tending to it, weeding it and harvesting the vegetables. He loads them up in a cart, which he hooks onto a pink scooter that he bought five years ago for his wife to drive to work. Her first test drive in the back yard led to a slight mishap. Now the bike is used by the tall, broad-shouldered man to take his labor of love around Twin Falls.

Baxter delivers his produce to three retirement homes, neighbors, friends and lucky strangers. He gives generously, even going so far as to take cucumbers to road-construction workers so they have something cool to eat during hot summer afternoons.

"I start picking plumb down here and I get around 24 to 30 zucchini off of this one plant," Baxter said. "And when you have 40 plants, that's just ridiculous. It's amazing that people want it"

Local elected officials explore the partially-completed Rock Creek Bridge, which is part of the Twin Falls Alternate Route, on Wednesday west of Twin Falls. The contractors hope to open the road by Christmas.

T.F. Alternate Route nears completion

Christmas may come early — but not too early — for Twin Falls drivers tired of traffic from U.S. Highway 30 adding to the congestion of Blue Lakes Boulevard: the current clip of the alternate route project puts it on pace to open between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

If W.W. Clyde construction pulls it off, the Twin Falls

Alternate Route will open about three months ahead of the contracted schedule, Idaho Transportation Department officials said. When open, it will improve motorists' ease of access to the north side of Twin Falls from the west and south sides of the county without the need to cut through the city.

But it was the $27 million project's current status that on Wednesday drew the attention of elected officials ranging from highway district commissioners to state Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls.

"If you look at how the west end of the valley will develop over the next 20 or 30 years, this project will prove key," Hartgen said at a tour hosted by ITD.

Hartgen said he had questions about the visibility at an intersection when the route turns into Pole Line Road at 2400 East Road.

Secretary of State Ben Ysursa. GOP stalwarts contend that crossover Democrat or independent voters diminish the party’s role in selecting its candidates for the Nov. 2 elections.

In an interview, Kresky said that voting is a constitutional right and that there’s no democracy if the candidates are chosen by small groups in closed primaries prior to the general election.

Wednesday’s testimony began with Robert Moore, a pollster from Portland, Ore., who completed a survey of Idaho primary voters that’s part of an exhibit that the Idaho Republican Party filed in its court exhibits.

“Our methodology is proven to get us reliable results and that’s the reason we use it,” he said in his court testimony.

According to his survey, conducted on 400 voters in January, 39 percent of non-GOP voters said they had voted in a Republican primary for a state legislative candidate. Twelve percent of non-GOP voters said that they typically vote for Republicans in primary elections, according to court documents.

The testimony is needed because U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill turned down a motion for summary judgment and required the Idaho Republican Party to produce evidence that there is significant crossover voting in Idaho that has a negative impact on the party’s primary process.

The trial continues with more expert testimony today.

Nuisance property battle continues

Owner calls items ‘instruments of worship’

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — One city’s junk may be another man’s place of worship, as Burley officials will head back to court next week in a long-running effort to force the cleanup of a Burley property. Thirteen misdemeanor charges of failure to abate a nuisance hang over Paul resident James Pedersen’s head for his failure to remove old cars and household goods from property he doesn’t own.

Mostly hidden from public view by sheets of metal, the property is behind Goode Motor on East Main Street and south of the Eastern Idaho Railroad tracks.

On Wednesday, Pedersen said that Cassia County forced him to clean up property west of Burley where he operated J&P Trucking & Salvage and many of the items were relocated to the Burley property in question. According to the Cassia County Assessor’s Office, the property is owned by David Bailey.

Pedersen claims that all of the items “went” with the property when previous owner Gerald Wright sold it to Bailey.

“They know it’s not mine,” Pedersen said. “But as long as I’m hauling stuff off they leave me alone.”

Pedersen, who spent 18 days in jail for missing a court date stemming from the case, says the old cars are being crushed and hauled off and he is required to present the court with receipts for three loads of junk per week. Pedersen maintains the only items on the property that he owns are the wreckers and service trucks.

A hearing to review Pedersen’s progress will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday in 5th District Magistrate Court in Burley.

According to court records, Wright, Bailey and Pedersen were named as defendants in a separate civil case filed by the city of Burley, which resulted in a default judgment when Pedersen did not attend a court hearing. A hearing regarding that case is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Friday in 5th District Magistrate Court in Burley.

Bailey said in court records that Burley officials violated his constitutional rights because it’s the government’s duty to protect and maintain citizen’s rights and the city didn’t have valid cause to bring the civil suit.

“Government officials are public servants, not public masters,” he wrote in an answer to the city’s complaint.

In court documents Bailey maintains that Burley’s airport and sewage treatment plant violate his enjoyment of his real property, which he claims is also his church.

“My real property is my church and my personal property is instruments of my worship,” Bailey said in court documents.

Bailey said the city harassed Pedersen with threats of jail until Pedersen entered Bailey’s property and “began disposing of everything in sight.”

Burley city code states that it is unlawful to store dismantled or abandoned household goods, motor vehicles or miscellaneous property on public or private property within city limits and outlines a process in which the city can receive a court order allowing officials to clean up the property at the owner’s expense. Refusal to abate the nuisance constitutes a misdemeanor crime punishable by up to six months in county jail and a $1,000 fine.

“My (personal) property is located on my real property, and it’s not junk,” Bailey said in court documents.

ISP releases I-84 crash details

Two Gooding residents were injured Tuesday in a single-vehicle crash that temporarily shut down one lane of Interstate 84 near Jerome.

William Estep, 84, and Mary Estep, 82, were injured at approximately 1:10 p.m. when their vehicle left the roadway. According to an Idaho State Police release, William Estep was driving westbound on the mile-post 168 off-ramp when he accidentally stepped on the accelerator while attempting to brake. He lost control of his vehicle, which went into the off-ramp’s shoulder, sideways through a fence and into a light pole, and crossed the interstate before coming to rest on the shoulder of the eastbound lanes.

William Estep was transported by ground ambulance to St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, while Mary Estep was transported by air ambulance to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise, where she remains in critical condition, according to ISP.

Both Esteps were wearing seat belts at the time of the crash, in which alcohol is not believed to have been a factor. ISP was aided at the scene by sheriff’s deputies and paramedics from Jerome County and the Jerome Police Department. The crash remains under investigation.

Devin Rigby, ITD district engineer, said the road has more than 1,000 feet of visibility, though with the expected 50- and 60-mile-per-hour speeds in the area, ITD is looking at other alternatives for keeping the road safe for merging traffic.

The amount of traffic diverted by the alternate route is also at question, though city and ITD officials expect traffic on Pole Line Road to increase when the route opens. A traffic study done in 2000 and updated in 2004 puts the alternate route’s use at between 13,000 and 33,000 vehicles per day, ITD spokesman Nathan Jerke said. But those numbers don’t indicate traffic diverted from Twin Falls, he said.

“It’s tough to tell right now how much traffic will be diverted from U.S. 93 through Twin Falls,” ITD spokesman Nathan Jerke said. “We do expect this road will get a lot of that traffic.”

That may also have a broader impact of sucking traffic, and its financial benefits from the city,

Tax Commission.

Otter reminded voters about the extra funding that was invested into education earlier in his term of office when the it was available and said improved test scores show the state’s on the right track.

“We’re doing a good job and that job is being reflected in the scores we have,” he said.

Kemp pointed out the state’s annual cost to hold an inmate is often more than the salary of a teacher, using it to show that a broad, system-wide look at state operations is needed to find money for education.

“I will be a very hands-on governor,” she said.

Allred said that the state’s revenue is $10 million ahead of its gloomy budget assumption for this fiscal year, and that the money could have been used to help keep education whole.

But Otter defended the decisions, casting himself as a fiscal conservative who is looking for ways to boost economic development through his Project 60 initiative.

Allred said that the state’s tax exemption system needs to be reviewed with citizen input so that exemptions that don’t make sense can be removed, reducing the overall tax rate for all.

When asked if they could promise no further cuts to public education, candidates disagreed.

Only Allred said “yes,” adding that fully staffing the tax commission and using $30 million from the land endowment fund are a couple available options.

“We have to understand education is the fundamental priority,” Allred said.

Kemp said that guarantee cannot be made, but that uncollected sales taxes and an end to deal-making in the tax commission need to be looked at for raising revenue.

And Otter reminded the audience that budget decisions involve deep input from the Legislature.

His wife, Deanna, said the garden has been a godsend. After Baxter broke his hip in 2008, his doctors recommended therapy.

“He told them, ‘I’m not going to pay for therapy. I’ll just do my own,’” Deanna said. “He is always doing stuff for other people, always give, give, give.”

Although he’s been gardening since 1956, this was the first year he planted the entire acre. Toiling around the plants has been his best therapy.

“A garden will keep you in shape, that’s for sure.”

Family friend Sharon Walker describes Baxter as the “Johnny Appleseed of zucchini and squash.” An amused laugh escaped her as she described the large man motoring around to the different retirement centers on his pink scooter.

Baxter trades vegetables for peaches with local produce vendors, and while Deanna doesn’t help in the garden anymore, she bakes and cans all summer long in preparation for winter. The couple, who have been married for 51 years and met on the Blue Lakes Boulevard “drag” in high school, make a good team.

When Baxter walked into his garage after his early-morning garden ritual, he picked up a squash and turned to his wife.

“I think the frost got it, Ma. Now I can go elk hunting,” Baxter said with a laugh.

Senior project not expected to halt in face of Hailey housing change

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Hailey City Council’s recent decision to repeal its affordable housing requirement isn’t expected to stop construction of a senior housing project on River Street, despite a current delay.

The City Council on Monday voted unanimously to repeal its five-year-old ordinance that stipulated that 20 percent of housing units built in subdivisions of five or more units be sold as deed-restricted community housing. City Attorney Ned Williamson advised the council to repeal the ordinance after several Idaho courts ruled that similar requirements were illegal.

But Michelle Griffith, director of Advocates for Real Community Housing, said her group doesn’t expect the decision to stump its senior housing project because the developer who owned the River Street property gave the property to the city under an optional agreement in lieu of building on-site affordable housing at his 421-unit Sweetwater development in south Hailey.

Sweetwater developer J. Kevin Adams had questioned the legality of affordable housing requirements locally, suing the city to get back the River Street property. The city has postponed leasing the property to ARCH for $1 per year for 99 years until the lawsuit is resolved.

“But once that is cleared, we can move forward,” Griffith said, adding that ARCH hopes to start building the project next spring.

Blaine County Housing Authority Executive Administrator Kathy Grotto said the court rulings against affordable housing requirements are unfortunate because such requirements are not only legal but widely used throughout the U.S.

“It’s a very good tool if the ordinances are written correctly,” she said.

But the city of Sun Valley and Blaine County had already rescinded similar requirements to ward off litigation.

Grotto said municipalities still have the opportunity to attain affordable housing through annexations or planned unit developments, in which developers may ask for increased density or other modifications. In exchange for those modifications, developers have to provide benefits for the community, of which community housing may be an option.

That was the case with the River Street property, Griffith said.

ARCH plans to hold a ribbon-cutting ceremony

Tuesday for one of two affordable homes it’s building next to the bike path in Hailey, as the repeal of the requirement doesn’t affect projects currently online.

ARCH is also waiting for the county to resolve an issue with the developer of Quail Creek south of St. Luke’s Wood River Medical Center so the organization can start building affordable housing there.

The developer has proposed to satisfy his community housing obligation by deeding three acres to ARCH so it can build homes.

“That’s substantial and it would allow us to do several different-sized homes based on whether the demand is mostly for two- or three-bedroom homes,” Griffith said.

Water project progresses despite ‘long, slow process’

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly City Council on Tuesday heard updates on the city’s water project and voted on a grant administrator for future projects.

Public Works Superintendent Rob Wright updated the council on the water project’s progress. The redwood tank was completely down and the 1 million-gallon tank was partially filled Tuesday, then drained and cleaned. All the new meters for monitoring water usage are installed and slowly being programmed.

The council also heard from Kimberly resident Steve Nelson and Irminger Construction foreman Dan Williams about a dispute between Nelson and some of the company’s employees. The council did not vote to take any action, but Overacre said the city would look into the matter.

“We have a lot of programming to do. It’s a long, slow process,” Wright said. “We only have one programmer.”

Each site usually averaged 15 to 20 minutes to program, but could take up to 30 minutes with difficulties, if the global positioning system used doesn’t link up immediately.

“It’s got some quirks in it,” he said. Wright said he is looking into hiring another programmer to help speed up the process.

Wright also updated the city on a problem with dirt. On Taylor Street, a large dirt pile from nearby city construction has caused complaints from neighbors.

“I know the wind and the dirt and the neighbors have not gotten along,” Mayor David Overacre said.

Wright said a water truck is kept near the pile, but construction vehicles moving nearby still kick up dust. Wright said he also hoped to be able to sell two-thirds of the dirt as construction winds down. The last sale of dirt netted the city almost $8,000, which paid the city’s portion for a new tractor.

The council also viewed a presentation by Larry Hall, the new director of Southern Idaho Rural Development. SIRD has handled the administrative portion of Kimberly’s water project. The council voted to award the position of grant administrator for Kimberly’s future projects to SIRD.

Throw-the-bums-out mindset may be toxic for some Republicans

Even in blood-red Idaho this election year, being an incumbent might just be more toxic than being a Democrat. Idaho Statesman political reporter Dan Popkey did an analysis this week of political contributions to candidates in some key legislative contests across the state. He found that Democrats are holding their own in campaign fundraising, which is a key indicator of how competitive political races will be.

- Some examples:
- Democrat Brenda Lovell has raised $32,400, about $1,400 more than Republican Rep. Lynn Luker in west Boise's District 15 — which has, up until now, been the last Republican bastion in the capital city.
 - In north Idaho's District 4, Democrat Mike Bullard has $12,000 and a $2,600 jump in his challenge to GOP incumbent Rep. Marge Chadderdon.
 - In the same district, where Democrats are defending an open House seat, Paula Marano had $17,000, a $1,200 edge over Republican Kathleen Sims.
 - In Latah County's District 6, GOP incumbent Tom Trail trails Democrat Judy Brown, with $12,000 to Brown's $16,000.
 - In District 31, which runs from Bonneville to Bear Lake counties, Democrat Ralph Mossman is making a strong challenge to GOP Rep. Tom Loertscher, with $34,500 banked compared with Loertscher's $14,400.
 - In Idaho Falls, District 33, two Democrats have edges: Jerry Shively with $22,200 over GOP Rep. Jeff Thompson's $21,600; and John McGimpsey, with $19,300 to Linden Bateman's $11,900.

The iron law of politics — in Idaho as elsewhere — is that money flows toward winners. Mossman, for example, wouldn't have a 2 1/2-to-1 fundraising edge over Loertscher unless he had a chance of getting elected.

By any standard, this ought to be a year when Republicans run the table in Idaho elections. Anti-federal, anti-government feeling is running high.

But the fact that the governor's race is still in play in the most Republican state in America speaks volumes about the tenor of the times. Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter should have closed the deal months ago. He hasn't yet.

But then again Otter is an incumbent and a long-time politician. Those are two things you don't want to be in 2010.

Across the state, six incumbent legislators were voted out of office in the May primary election, and in south-central Idaho five county commissioners lost their jobs. That's extraordinary by Idaho standards.

Is it a conservative's year in Idaho and across the nation? Sure. But even more so, it's a challenger's year.

So you think you know religion?

The New York Times reported recently on a Pew Research Center poll in which religious people turned out to be remarkably uninformed about religion. Almost half of Catholics didn't understand Communion. Most Protestants didn't know that Martin Luther started the Reformation. Almost half of Jews didn't realize Maimonides was Jewish. And atheists were among the best informed about religion.

Schools can't afford another 4 years of Otter

I have been a Republican all my life. I served 16 years as Idaho's elected state superintendent of Public Instruction. Reluctantly, I find I cannot support the Republican candidate for governor this time around.

Butch Otter is a likeable guy and has been a political friend for a long time. He believes in limited government. So do I.

Yet, limited government should not mean limiting the potential of our children and their future. Now more than ever, Idaho's public schools and higher education institutions need a governor who will advocate for good education — and not one who approves budget cuts and calls that “flexibility” (Idaho Statesman, Sunday, Oct. 3, 2010).

Our governor likes to say that Idaho's Constitution “compels” a balanced budget — and he is absolutely correct. We can't spend money we don't have. Our national deficit should be of concern to all, and the framers of Idaho's constitution were wise to prohibit spending beyond our means.

READER COMMENT

However, another section of the constitution is equally important and compelling... Article IX, Section 2, makes it the state's duty to “establish and maintain a general, uniform, and thorough system of public, free common schools.” Even in the depths of the Great Depression, Idaho's public schools were protected from loss.

So it came as a disappointing surprise this year when Gov. Otter recommended a large cut in public school support.

The terms “uniform” and “thorough” are somewhat nebulous, although when I was a local superintendent I helped bring a lawsuit (“Thompson v. Engelking”) that helped clarify their meaning. Even without judicial clarity most of us can sense when the public education system is awry.

Look at what we have today: districts going to four day school weeks; reduced instruction time; larger classes; out-of-date or too few textbooks; and so on.

All of this comes at a time when our schools should be improving. If we want a bright future for Idaho, we should focus on investing in the only resource that will ensure that future: our children.

To do that takes commitment and leadership which begins with a governor who truly believes in education at all levels and who will be a strong and effective advocate for our schools and colleges. We cannot afford another four years like the past four.

Electing Keith Allred as governor gives Idaho a chance to change direction. We can take advantage of a fresh start by developing a strong consensus about the quality of education our young people deserve and by examining every alternative that will help us address the state's pressing problems.

I will be voting for Keith Allred for governor. I encourage all those who care about education, and who understand education's role in securing a bright and prosperous future for Idaho, to do the same.

Jerry Evans, a Boise Republican, served as state superintendent of public instruction from 1979-95.

Special-needs services needed most in schools

Thank you for your article, “Proposed Medicaid rule change could impact special-needs children.” Soon after it appeared, I received an email from the Idaho Council on Developmental Disabilities stating it shares my concern about an Idaho Department of Health and Welfare’s proposed rule change to stop school-based funding of children with developmental disabilities.

ICDD thinks that these new rules may be in conflict with federal education law and is concerned about the potential loss of services to special-needs kids. It is worried that, in your article, DHW inferred that it supports this proposal. It does not. ICDD has recommended the removal of this specific proposal until further research provides more clarification. This is the moral and responsible thing to do!

As stated in your article, I am a mother of a child with special needs. I find it interesting that DHW spokesman Tom Shanahan said children could still get developmental therapy and intensive behavioral intervention, just not in a school setting.

As a social worker, psychotherapist and intensive behavioral intervention specialist, I can say without reservation that the school setting is where these services are needed the most! Navigating the complex and demanding school environment can be an enormous daily challenge for these students, especially without support. And to expect the already overextended and understaffed public school system to assume full funding responsibility of these vital services is unconscionable.

We have come a long way since the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990. This move on the part of DHW is a huge step backward. I urge it to continue school-based Medicaid funding of children with disabilities. These services have helped my son immensely, along with hundreds of thousands of Idaho children. School is where they need us the most!

Vote for the person with the best qualifications

America’s multi-party system of government was designed to encourage open and fair competition among political factions in part because competition breeds meritocracies while monopolies, or single-party politics, breed mediocrity. Perhaps the greatest pitfall of factional politics is the willingness of the dominant party to portray the attributes and characteristics of a worthy opponent as stereotypical sound bites designed to inhibit further voter inquiry.

This is what a certain local Republican is attempting to do with my candidacy by labeling me as just another tax-and-spend liberal without being asked to provide supporting evidence. I welcome this opportunity to remind voters that stereotyping does not work any better in politics than it does in life; that

ELECTION LETTERS DEADLINE

The deadline for letters to the editor about candidates and issues in the Nov. 2 election will be Tuesday, Oct. 25, at 5 p.m. No letters will be accepted after that time.

generalizations are wrong more often than they are right.

I would also like to remind voters that I am the same person you trusted as a 19-year-old Marine Corps squad leader to lead your sons on combat patrols in Vietnam. A time during which this same Republican was attending an Ivy League school back east. I am the same person you later trusted to train and lead your sons and daughters on military missions during Desert Storm, Somalia and Bosnia. And when I finally removed my combat boots, I am the same person you trusted to teach your children and grandchildren as a public school teacher. In short, I am what your hard earned tax dollars have been paying for all these years. I am you.

Voters, you are hiring your county commissioner. The only question you should be asking yourself is what qualifications do I want that commissioner to have and which candidate comes closest to meeting them. Everything else is irrelevant — especially party — unless, of course, you are satisfied with mediocrity.

Kids are too precious to cut corners on future

District 25 voters: Please support the reelection of Donna Pence as our District 25 representative for Blaine, Camas, Gooding and Lincoln counties.

Donna is not just a one-dimensional representative. She relates to the farmer, the businessman, the educational community, parents and, of course, all of them as taxpayers. She recognizes the importance of a strong educational system. As a longtime resident of southern Idaho, she understands the different situations that exist in our small rural communities and works tirelessly with commissioners, school trustees and constituents to find ways to solve our unique needs.

The Food Producers of Idaho is a coalition of farm-related organizations that keep track of the progress of bills related to agriculture.

Donna has earned their “Ag All Star” status for the last five years.

In recent years, there was an attempt to eliminate the residential component of the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind located in Gooding. Donna worked diligently to find a solution to resolve this misguided effort. Fortunately, for hearing and visually impaired children and for southern Idaho’s economy, her efforts paid off.

Donna Pence has the right background to help Idaho’s schools prepare for the future. She will fight for common sense solutions to make sure our kids get the quality education they deserve.

She has been a strong advocate in the promotion of online and virtual class offerings. This is especially important to rural school districts. As a retired teacher, Donna understands that a good education is more important than ever before in Idaho’s history. Today’s world has little room for educational shortcomings or failures. A less-than-adequate education may doom many of our future generation to a life of poverty.

Donna has the experience and training as an educator to continue to fight for the right combination of opportunities for our kids. Our kids are too precious to cut corners on their futures. Please support Donna Pence this November.

Take the high road: Vote for Stennett

Our family supports Sen. Stennett for the 25th District of the Idaho Legislature.

Sen. Stennett represents our district with competence and skill, knows our local Idaho needs, understands the complex Idaho Senate process, works well with and is respected by senators of both parties, and Sen. Stennett is our thoughtful voice in Idaho government for all the life issues most important to our communities, our local economies and our children’s future.

In the current troubled economic times, with high unemployment and diminished job opportunities, we need Idaho State Sen. Stennett’s experience in working with the private sector and with the Idaho Senate to provide us with quality education, good jobs and career opportunities.

Southern Idaho’s voters are too smart to replace their high-quality senator with a “Jimmy-come-lately” who uses low-road, expensive, negative ads to promote his private agenda. As thoughtful voters, let’s all take the high road instead and vote for Sen. Stennett who really cares about southern Idaho.

Please join us in voting for Idaho Sen. Stennett on Nov. 2.

Officials in 50 states launch foreclosure probe

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Officials in 50 states, including Idaho, and the District of Columbia have launched a joint investigation into allegations that mortgage companies mishandled documents and broke laws in foreclosing on hundreds of thousands of homeowners.

The states' attorneys general and bank regulators will examine whether mortgage company employees made false statements or prepared documents improperly.

Attorneys general have taken the lead in responding to a nationwide scandal that's called into question the accuracy and legitimacy of documents that lenders relied on to evict people from the homes. Employees of four large lenders have acknowledged in depositions that they signed off on foreclosure documents without reading them.

The allegations raise the possibility that foreclosure proceedings nationwide could be subject to legal challenge. Some foreclosures could be overturned. More than 2.5 million homes have been lost to foreclosure since the recession started in December 2007, according to RealtyTrac Inc.

The state officials said they intend to use their investigation to fix the problems that surfaced in the mortgage industry.

"This is not simply about a glitch in paperwork," said Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller, who is leading the probe. "It's also about some companies violating the law and many people losing their homes."

Ally Financial Inc.'s GMAC Mortgage Unit, Bank of America and JPMorgan Chase & Co. already have halted some questionable foreclosures. Other banks, including Citigroup Inc. and Wells Fargo & Co. have not stopped processing foreclosures, saying they did nothing wrong.

Candy manufacturers are rolling out gums for all occasions, to entice chewers to chew more frequently. Some of the vast varieties are displayed at this Dominick's supermarket in Chicago, Ill.

Manufacturers tempt chewers with new tricks, benefits

By Emily Bryson York
Chicago Tribune writer

CHICAGO — Want to manage your weight, strengthen and whiten your teeth, increase your vitamin intake? Just bored out of your mind? Have some gum.

Call it a stretch of the imagination, or just really good marketing.

Candy manufacturers are rolling out gums for all occasions, to entice chewers to chew more frequently. Some of the gums seem to have been pulled from science fiction, or at least Willy Wonka's factory.

Kraft Foods' Stride Shift, for instance, changes flavor while you're chewing. Trident Vitality, launching early next year, contains vitamin C for those who can't be bothered to eat fruit. Wrigley's Extra Dessert Delights, meanwhile, give dieters a reason to pass on cake, with flavors like chocolate mint chip and Key lime pie.

"Gum is the new delivery system for benefits, whether it's breath-freshening or teeth-cleaning, relaxation or just excitement because of new, unusual or interesting flavors," said Lynn Dornblaser, director of CPG insight at Mintel International, a global consumer, product and market research firm.

With gums like Extra Dessert Delights launching now, and Trident Vitality queued for early 2011, Kraft and Wrigley appear to be stepping up their game: in effect, declaring a gum war. After all, the mergers of Mars and Wrigley and then Kraft and Cadbury have created global gum and confectionary giants. Together, the two big players account for nearly 65 percent of the world's gum sales, according to Euromonitor.

Gum as a whole has been growing at a rapid clip over the past decade, with global sales up 37 percent since 2001, according to Euromonitor. Total sales are expected to top $24 billion this year.

FCC to probe cellphone billing practices

By Cecilia Kang
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission says it is conducting an industry-wide investigation into cell phone billing practices amid complaints by customers of Verizon Wireless and other carriers of unwanted data charges.

The agency's 10-month-long investigation, which it previously said was focused on Verizon, could subject other carriers to penalties if the FCC finds those firms charged "mystery fees" that violate its "truth and billing" guidelines. The agency didn't disclose the names of other carriers that are being probed. It also didn't say how many providers the FCC is looking at and at what stages those investigations are at. An AT&T spokeswoman wrote in an e-mail that the company is unaware of an investigation into its practices. A Sprint Nextel spokesman said the company doesn't generally comment on investigative matters at the FCC.

"It's routine for the FCC to look into consumer complaints including those involving billing practices," said FCC spokeswoman Jen Howard.

The investigation comes amid an effort by the FCC to step up its protection of consumers who are increasingly complaining of baffling charges on their cell phone and broadband Internet bills. FCC Chairman Julius Genachowski plans to announce a proposal on Wednesday aimed at preventing "bill shock," or surprises on cell phone bills from overcharges and roaming fees.

"Companies should compete on value, price and service, not customers confusion," Genachowski said in prepared remarks to be delivered at in a speech Wednesday at the Center for American Progress.

Verizon admitted last week that it had charged 15 million subscribers more than $50 million for data services those customers didn't sign up for. They were erroneously charged because of a software glitch and accidentally launching the Web browser on their phones. Verizon said it would provide refunds to those customers but the FCC said it would continue its investigation. In its fact sheet, the FCC said its investigation into mystery fees by Verizon and "other mobile providers" is part of a broader ambition to update truth and billing guidelines.

Court grapples with verbal vs. written complaints

By Jesse J. Holland
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — If an employee tells a supervisor of a potentially illegal act, can that be considered filing a complaint?

The Supreme Court grappled with that question Wednesday as it tried to determine whether Kevin Kasten should get retaliation protection after he was fired from a Saint-Gobain Performance Plastics facility in Portage, Wis.

Kasten had complained to Saint-Gobain that the time clocks were placed in a location where employees would lose overtime. The company moved the clocks the same day he was fired, and settled with other employees for nearly $1.5 million.

Kasten sued, saying he was fired because he spoke up. He claimed retaliation protection under the Fair Labor Standards Act, but the company said, and the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed, that to get protection workers who have "filed any complaint" about workplace conditions must have written it down.

Groups who represent workers say that 95 percent of the workers in low-wage industries make wage and hour complaints orally to their employers or supervisors. Kasten's lawyer, James Kaster, said not allowing complaints to be made verbally will disproportionately affect those working manual or low-wage jobs, or those who are illiterate or don't speak English.

"Coal miners, factory workers, line workers, they don't write memos," Kaster said. "With all due respect, your honor, lawyers write memos. People who this act was intended to cover (are) the poorest and the least-educated people in the country."

Kaster argued that one can file verbally, something a couple of justices challenged while listening to his arguments.

"Are you filing your comments right now?" Justice Samuel Alito asked.

"I think I am, your honor," Kaster replied.

"You are? Really?" Alito said.

"I am directing them to the court," Kaster said.

Justice Antonin Scalia called that absurd.

"So you are filing your argument right now," Scalia asked Kaster. "Now, come on, people don't talk like that. That is absurd. You are not filing an argument right now. Nobody uses the language that way"

Kaster insisted that file could mean "submit" or "lodge," and that he was submitting his argument to the court, so "file" could be appropriate.

Dozens charged with huge Medicare scam

By Tom Hays
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A vast network of Armenian gangsters and their associates used phantom health care clinics and other means to try to cheat Medicare out of $163 million, the largest fraud by one criminal enterprise in the program's history, U.S. authorities said Wednesday.

Federal prosecutors in New York and elsewhere charged 73 people. Most of the defendants were captured during raids Wednesday morning in New York City and Los Angeles, but there also were arrests in New Mexico, Georgia and Ohio.

The scheme's scope and sophistication "puts the traditional Mafia to shame," U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara said at a Manhattan news conference. "They ran a veritable fraud franchise."

Unlike other cases involving crooked medical clinics

brining people to sign up for unneeded treatments, the operation was "completely notional," Janice Fedarczyk, head of the FBI's New York office, said in a statement. "The whole doctor-patient interaction was a mirage."

The operation was under the protection of an Armenian crime boss, known in the former Soviet Union as a "vor," prosecutors said. The reputed boss, Armen Kazarian, was in custody in Los Angeles.

Obama may appeal gays-military order

Defense Secretary Robert Gates warned Wednesday of “enormous consequences” for men and women in uniform if a judge’s order abruptly allowing gays to serve openly in the military is allowed to stand.

The Obama administration may well ask for a stay of the ruling while it appeals. Justice Department officials worked behind the scenes on their response into Wednesday night with no word on when there would be an announcement. The uncertainty of the next step left gay-rights activists as well as the military in limbo over the status of the “don’t ask, don’t tell” law.

A day after a federal judge in California ordered the Pentagon to cease enforcing the law, Gates told reporters traveling with him in Europe that repeal should be a question for Congress — and only after the Pentagon completes a study of the impact of lifting the ban, which is due Dec. 1.

Poll: College student Obamamania wanes

The Obamamania that gripped college campuses two years ago is gone.

An Associated Press-mtvU poll found college students cooling in their support for President Obama, a fresh sign of trouble for Democrats struggling to rekindle enthusiasm among many of these newest voters for the crucial midterm elections in three weeks.

Forty-four percent of students approve of the job Obama is doing as president, while 27 percent are unhappy with his stewardship, according to the survey conducted late last month. That’s a significant drop from the 60 percent who gave the president high marks in a May 2009 poll. Only 15 percent had a negative opinion back then.

Police: Rapper helps talk down jumper

ATLANTA — Police got unexpected help talking a suicidal man down from an Atlanta skyscraper on Wednesday when rapper T.I. showed up.

Officer James Polite says the hip-hop star joined the crowd outside the 22-story office building in midtown Wednesday and told officers he wanted to help. Police said the man agreed to come down in exchange for a few minutes face-to-face with T.I., whose real name is Clifford Harris.

“I told him it ain’t that bad. It’ll get better, to put the time and effort into making it better,” T.I. said in a phone interview with The Associated Press. “I just reminded him know that I know. It looks bad right now, but it can turn around.”

Police search lot for girl presumed dead

HICKORY — Investigators used a police dog to search among tree-trimming equipment and piles of mulch for a missing 10-year-old North Carolina girl on Wednesday, a day after authorities said they believed the girl had been killed.

Hours earlier, Zahra Clare Baker’s stepmother showed no emotion in court as a judge explained she could be sentenced to up to 30 months in prison if convicted of obstruction of justice. Elisa Baker is accused of trying to throw off investigators with a fake ransom note.

The girl, who used hearing aids and a prosthetic leg because of bone cancer, was reported missing over the weekend, but police have indicated they don’t believe her father and stepmother’s story.

Baker’s court-appointed attorney, Scott Reilly, said she was “scared to death” and very emotional about everything.

Lawyer compares Hart to Mandela, Rosa Parks

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — State Rep. Phil Hart’s attorney has likened the lawmaker’s legal fights over unpaid income taxes to the struggles of civil rights legend Rosa Parks and former South African President Nelson Mandela.

Attorney Starr Kelso defended Hart in an opinion published Saturday in The Coeur d’Alene Press under the headline “Kindred spirits: Phil Hart, Rosa Parks, Mandela.”

Kelso begins his editorial by pointing out that Parks was arrested because she refused to give up her bus seat to a white man; that Mandela was jailed after campaigning against the apartheid; and then concludes that Hart has been treated unfairly in his battles over unpaid taxes with the state and federal governments.

Hart has long argued that income taxes are unconstitutional, waging legal fights with the state and federal government. Tea party activists rallied behind the Republican as he underwent a House ethics panel investigation this year and more than one supporter referred to Hart’s book about his belief that the income tax is illegal.

Parks’ arrest in 1955 inspired the Montgomery Improvement Association, then led by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., to launch the historic, yearlong Montgomery bus boycott.

Mandela was jailed for 27 years for his fight against the apartheid system and became South Africa’s first black president in 1994, stepping down after one term in 1999.

In his editorial, Kelso used the analogy of a well-kept hedge around a yard to intro-

Dems swoop in to help Reid as ad spending spikes

By Liz Sidoti and Jim Kuhn
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Eager to protect their politically vulnerable Senate leader, Democrats plan to sink more than $2 million into Harry Reid’s home state of Nevada in the final weeks of the campaign, but have begun scaling back in Missouri where polls show their candidate trailing.

The adjustments, described by officials from both parties, come as Republican-leaning outside groups maintain a drumbeat of advertising in both states as well as in other key battlegrounds.

In the contest for control of the House, Republican-allied groups are planning a $50 million advertising drive, an extraordinary surge of spending aimed at keeping Democrats on the defensive.

Reid is trying to overcome a strong re-election challenge from tea party-backed Republican Sharron Angle, who reported raising $14 million in the last three months. And the committee charged with electing Senate Democrats has reserved airtime to help Reid withstand a barrage of negative advertising from GOP-aligned groups, according to the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they do not discuss strategy publicly.

Democrats also are spending considerably less than they had planned in Missouri this week, where Democrat Robin Carnahan is struggling in her race against Republican Rep. Roy Blunt. Democrats have cut airtime reservations for the state in the next two weeks, too, but they still could decide to run ads during that period.

The shifts in strategy illustrate the volatile nature of the political landscape in the closing days of the election. Candidates and outside groups are setting records for spending. In House contests, Republican-allied organizations are broadening the field by injecting money against House Democrats that the party had not counted as their most vulnerable.

Florida, Ohio and New Hampshire have dwindled. Polls show GOP candidates in the lead. Democrat Jack Conway in Kentucky also is lagging. Republican Rand Paul, but Senate Democrats still are spending money in the state. They say Conway still has a strong chance of winning.

That House effort by some of the GOP’s top strategists comes amid a wave of new fundraising. American Crossroads and Crossroads Grassroots Policy Strategies, two affiliated groups formed this year with the help of operatives Karl Rove and Ed Gillespie, said Wednesday they raised more than $13.3 million in one week.

With candidates and outside groups seeking to command airspace, political advertising is setting new records this year. A new analysis by the Wesleyan Media Project at Wesleyan University in Connecticut shows that since Labor Day, ad spending on House and Senate races has reached nearly $200 million, up from $113 million for the same period in 2008.

Candidates account for most of the spending, but outside groups are second, devoting $37 million to House and Senate races. Republican leaning groups have outspent Democratic groups during that period by a margin of 9-1 in House and Senate contests, according to Michael Franz, a professor at Bowdoin College in Maine and co-director of the media project. House and Senate candidates have spent about $130 million, with Democrats outspending Republicans by a margin of 1½ to one.

duce the three cases.

“When the owner notices one or two branches sticking up above the rest what does he do? He cuts them off. All must conform,” said Kelso, who returned to the analogy in his conclusion. “They tried to trim Hart from the hedge. Their clippers broke,” he said.

The IRS has filed liens totaling nearly $500,000 against Hart over unpaid income taxes. Idaho officials contend the Republican owes another $53,000 in state income taxes.

Hart insists he has paid $120,000 in state and federal taxes since 2005 and had the IRS not disallowed his business expenses from 1997 to 2004, his problems would have long ago been resolved.

The House ethics panel recommended Hart’s removal from the House Revenue and Taxation Committee last month. Hart has declined to resign, and said there’s no conflict of interest with his position on the committee and his tax problems.

Kelso called the panel’s move “a malicious vendetta against Phil Hart by his political opponents.”

“They don’t like the fact that Phil Hart stands up for what he believes is right,” Kelso said in his opinion piece.

In US, Hispanics outlive whites, blacks by years

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — U.S. Hispanics can expect to outlive whites by more than two years and blacks by more than seven, government researchers say in a startling report that is the first to calculate Hispanic life expectancy in this country.

The report released Wednesday is the strongest evidence yet of what some experts call the “Hispanic paradox” — longevity for a population with a large share of poor, undereducated members. A leading theory is that Hispanics who manage to immigrate to the U.S. are among the healthiest from their countries.

A Hispanic born in 2006 could expect to live about 80 years and seven months, the government estimates. Life expectancy for a white is about 78, and for a black, just shy of 73 years.

Researchers have seen signs of Hispanic longevity for years. But until recently, the government didn’t calculate life expectancy for Hispanics as a separate group; they were included among the black and white populations. The new report projecting future life spans is based on death certificates from 2006.

By breaking out the longer-living Hispanics, the life expectancies for non-Hispanic whites and blacks both declined slightly, said the report’s author, Elizabeth Arias of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Hispanics are the largest, fastest growing minority in the United States, accounting for 15 percent of the population.

An estimated 40 percent of them are immigrants, who in some cases arrived after arduous journeys to do taxing manual labor. It takes a fit person to accomplish that, suggesting that the United States is gaining some of the healthiest people born in Mexico and other countries, said Dr. Peter Muennig of Columbia University’s school of public health who has studied life expectancy in different countries.

Whale of a trip: Humpback whale makes 6,200-mile migration

By Raphael G. Satter
Associated Press writer

LONDON — It wasn't love. It could have been adventure. Or maybe she just got lost. It remains a mystery why a female humpback whale swam thousands of miles from the reefs of Brazil to the African island of Madagascar, which researchers believe is the longest single trip ever undertaken by a mammal — humans excluded. While humpbacks normally migrate along a north-to-south axis to feed and mate, this one — affectionately called AHWC No. 1363 — made the unusual decision to check out a new continent thousands of miles to the east. Marine ecologist Peter Stevick says it probably wasn't love that motivated her — whales meet their partners at breeding sites, so it's unlikely that this one was following a potential mate. "It may be that this is an extreme example of exploration," he said. "Or it could be that the animal got very lost." Stevick laid out the details of the whale's trip on Wednesday in the Royal Society's Biology Letters, calculating that, at a minimum, the whale must have traveled about 6,200 miles to get from Brazil to Madagascar, off the coast of east Africa.

"No other mammal has been seen to move between two places that are further apart," said Stevick, who works at the Maine-based

College of the Atlantic. And while he said "the distance alone would make it exceptional no matter where it had gone," there was an added element of interest: Swapping a breeding ground in Brazil for one in Madagascar was previously unheard of.

Sun Valley seeks Olympic training designation

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Sun Valley’s head Nordic Coach Rick Kapala likes to repeat a favorite phrase: “If the Norwegians train here, why don’t you?”
That’s one of the driving forces behind a new push to pursue official Olympic designation for the Sun Valley area as a training site for Olympic and Paralympic cross-country skiing.
Olympic designation would take advantage of the area’s 200 kilometers of Nordic trails already in place – many of which are contiguous to the valley’s towns.
And it would benefit the valley by bringing teams into the area and helping to brand the area as one of the premiere Nordic destinations in the world. In addition, it might bring sponsorship dollars into the area to allow for more events and amenities to attract Nordic aficionados, said Jim Keating, whose Blaine County Recreation District maintains Nordic trails from Bellevue north to Galena Lodge.

“We already have Olympic teams training here during the winter. And the USA Nordic team just finished doing dryland training here during September, followed by a cross-country ski team from Burke Mountain Academy (a Vermont school that develops Olympians). So it makes sense that we would pursue this,” said Bob Rosso, who helped create the world-renown Boulder Mountain Tour 30-plus years ago.

“The skiing here is one of the better kept secrets on the planet. And it’s the perfect place to train in the off-season, too, because of the good weather and our bike path, which is safer than the roads they use back East,” he added.
The push was instigated by Don Wiseman, whose Sun Valley Ski Education Foundation started an Olympic Development program a few years ago, and Marc Mast, whose Wood River Ability Program has been bringing Paralympians to Sun Valley to train.
The Economic Development Corp. and Sustain Blaine formed a steering committee this week to submit an application to the U.S. Olympic Committee by April 2011.
“This will not require creating another new 501c3 entity, nor will it require new funding or facilities,” said Harry Griffith, project manager for Sustain Blaine. “We just need to leverage what we already have.”

Steering committee members include Gary Black, trustee of the U.S. Ski Team/U.S. Ski and Snowboard Association; Jon Engen, a member of the 1988, 1992 and 1994 U.S. Olympic Team and a USSA board member and chair of the USSA Cross-Country Committee; Chuck Ferries, a member of the 1960 and 1964 U.S. Olympic Team, former coach of the U.S. Women’s Olympic Ski Team and former USSA chairman.
Other members are Dick Fosbury, member of the 1968 U.S. Olympic team and president of the World Olympians Association; Chris Grover, head coach of the U.S. Cross-Country Ski Team; Joan Scheingraber, coach of the U.S. Adaptive program during the 1998 and 2002 Paralympics; Keating, Mast and Wiseman.

They will be joined by Sustain Blaine members Harry Griffith, Vanessa Crossgrove Fry and Bob Crosby. All are residents of the Sun Valley area.
Valley resident Mike Wolter, who has skied in Master races all over the world, applauded the move.
“I’ve skied all over the country, all over the world, and it’s hard to find a better place to ski,” he said. “The grooming is fabulous, we have consistent snow and blue skies. And we have a great community that supports skiing.”

KETCHUM — Sagebrush often gets a short shrift. But Darcy Williamson begs to differ.
She rolls sagebrush in her hand when she wants a hand sanitizer. She shows others how the Shoshoni Indians made a salve out of the silvery green lobed leaves for chafing and diaper rash. And she even makes a sagebrush deodorant.
Never mind that the very scent may be worse than body odor to those who have a sneezing frenzy whenever they get a whiff of Idaho’s ubiquitous plant.

A sky full of birds

“That’s a lot of ducks,” I said, not quite believing my own eyes.

DENNIS ANDERSON/Minneapolis Star Tribune/MCT

Duck hunters across Minnesota began setting their decoys in anticipation of legal shooting.

Hunters bag plenty of ducks during memorable morning

By Dennis Anderson
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

MORRIS, Minn. — On the wings of a cold front and a brisk northwest wind one Friday evening, the good old days of duck hunting returned to parts of west-central Minnesota last Saturday when the state’s waterfowl season opened.

Over a public hunting area about 15 miles from here at dawn on the season’s first day, mallards joined with teal and wood ducks and just about every other species to tease hunters as they waited for shooting to begin at 9 a.m.

Even a few black ducks joined in the fun, along with gadwalls, wigeons, redheads and pintails. A real feast for the eyes, especially considering the empty skies that have prevailed over Minnesota on so many recent duck openers.

In fact, the Department of Natural Resources had alerted hunters that the season’s first day this year likely would be no better than that of a year ago, or the years immediately before that.

And some reports from elsewhere in the state after shooting ended Saturday bore that out, with relatively few ducks showing up around Brainerd, as well as in some areas just north of the Twin Cities, and in parts of the state’s southern farmlands, in and near Renville County.

In fact, it’s in Renville County, in the bottomlands of the Minnesota River, that my sons and I typically open the season with friends. But ducks thereabouts have been so scarce in recent years that our waterfowling excursions often have seemed more like family reunions than hunting holidays.

Which is why Trevor, the oldest boy, Cole, the younger, and I loaded up our camouflaged canoe on Blue-winged and green-winged teal ducks were fairly abundant in the Morris, Minn., area during a recent hunt.

Friday and headed to the west-central part of the state, intent on casting our lot with the thousands of other Minnesotans who on opening day depend on public lands and waters for their wingshooting fortunes.

Arriving at our proposed hunting area just as the sun set Friday, we saw flock after flock of teal and mallards banking against a western sky bruised orange, goldenrod and scarlet.

“That’s a lot of ducks,” I said, not quite believing my own eyes.

Back in Morris, at our motel, the parking lot was filled with all manner of heavy-duty pickups, duck boats and Labrador retrievers. A good omen, we figured, this enthusiastic gathering, unless the countervailing view — in this struggling economy, so many people are unemployed that for lack of options they idle away their days hunting.

“Tomorrow might be a good day,” Trevor said.

Saturday morning came early. The alarm rang at 4:15. Shooting couldn’t legally begin until 9, but competition for public waters is always intense in Minnesota on the first day of duck hunting. So the earlier we began, the better our chances to secure a spot to our liking.

But finding the shallow water marsh in the middle of the federal waterfowl production area we had chosen proved a challenge in the dark. Grasses on the lands surrounding the water varied from waist high to chest high, through which we toted a lot of gear: three guns, as many blind bags holding calls and shells, and a couple dozen decoys — ducks mostly, with a few honker floaters tossed in for good measure.

Also there was the canoe. Finally, after an hour of zigging when we should have zagged, there it was: a real duck marsh. By now, many of the area’s morning cruisers were already in the air. And those that weren’t yet flying could be heard in the distance, quacking. Also, untold numbers of Canada geese lumbered in the shadowy beyond, honking their morning greetings.

“Let’s get somewhere and get set up,” I said. And with that, the boys, along with Ben, our black Lab, disappeared onto the marsh in the canoe, foraging for a good place to deploy our decoys.

Nine a.m.
Set up in a small pothole

just off the main body of water, we were, soon, reminded firsthand why duck hunting registers so high on the passion scale among wingshooters.

The teal appeared first, and soon one — a green-winged teal — was in hand. Then another. Overhead, mallards flared, not quite certain our decoys were the real thing. Appearing now also were flocks of gadwalls, some wigeons, then squadrons of redheads and shovelers, even ringnecks.

Ben the retrieving dog was a busy boy for the first 40 minutes or so. The marsh stunk richly, which was to his liking. And each time a duck was sent cartwheeling along a broad arc of descent, he was dispatched into the muck, emerging moments or minutes later with his mouth full of duck.

The shooting was good. And fun. But the delight here was seeing so many birds, the real driver of a waterfowler’s satisfaction. Fast and darting, the teal blew in as if on afterburners, while the mallards, ever paranoid, wheeled and pitched in circles, necks craning, eyes alert for danger below.

We called it quits when we had an even dozen birds, two limits. This was forenoon, and the ducks weren’t flying like they were earlier. But no matter. The sky was blue, the day warming. Everything was good.

On the way out, the decoys, guns and blind bags seemed not so heavy as when we had walked in. Even the canoe seemed lighter. We had a game carrier filled with teal, gadwalls, mallards and shovelers that bore some heft. But not so much that anyone complained.

It had been a good morning; great, even. One to remember.

Prosecutor: F&G director could face trespassing charge

BOISE (AP) — reviewing the matter. Authorities say state Fish and Game Director Cal Groen is expected to face a trespassing charge in connection to a hunting trip near Elk City over the weekend.

County prosecutor Kirk MacGregor confirmed Wednesday that he expects the charge to be filed soon.

The state Department of Fish and Game confirmed that Groen and his hunting companions had been questioned in a reported trespassing incident and county officials were Groen told The Lewiston Tribune he was helping members of his hunting party butcher elk at the site in question.

Groen says members of the hunting party had previously received permission to hunt on the property, and they were unaware that the status of the land had since changed.

Fish and Game Deputy Director Virgil Moore told the Times-News that his department is “not involved in the investigation in any way, shape or form.”

Searching for twins of our galaxy, star and planet

T.S. Eliot wrote: “(T)he end of all our exploring; Will be to arrive where we started; And know the place for the first time.” A guiding principle, perhaps, for astronomers seeking places that mimic our cosmic home ground.

The Milky Way is a large spiral galaxy of more than 200 billion stars, spanning 100,000 light years (600 quadrillion miles) across its disk.

Our knowledge of its structure is limited by our location — even the fastest space probes would take many millions of years to reach an outside vantage point. For a hint of what the Milky Way looks like from a distance, we must search for its twin. While not perfect matches, two galaxies (NGC 3949 and NGC 7331) are thought to be good approximations (pictures of both, from Hubble, are at hubble-site.org).

A solar twin must be a middle-aged, yellow dwarf containing a fair amount of heavier elements (including most of the stuff that comprises Earth and its inhabitants). HIP 56948, a star 200 light years away, appears to be the best match, although about a billion years (20 percent) older. To see it requires a telescope — it’s at the tip of Draco’s tail, just above the end of the Big Dipper’s cup opposite its handle.

The media lately has been all abuzz over Gliese 581g, a planet orbiting a red dwarf star, 20 light years away in Libra. But while its distance from its star may be right for liquid water to exist, it’s at least three times heavier than Earth (and likely more), ancient remedies for modern ailments, such as ear infections, to clients throughout the world.

“As an herbalist, I don’t purport to be a healer. The plants do the healing. I just bring the plants and people together,” she said. “It gives me peace of mind to know the plants are there. I remember realizing I was getting strep throat as I came off a river trip. I found some gum weed along a fence in Salmon and I was fine the next day.”

On occasion, Williamson conducts a class on identifying useful plants and making herbal salves and ointments at Ketchum’s Sawtooth Botanical Garden.

“From what I can tell, she’s pretty much the expert in Idaho,” said Allison Kennedy, education director for the Sawtooth Botanical Garden.

Williamson has also taken students as far afield as the Amazon and the Soviet Union in her 30 years of teaching. But she’s become increasingly convinced that everything we need is in our backyard.

“We don’t need herbs from China or the Amazon. Every ecosystem has the plants we need in it,” she said. “Echinacea, for instance, doesn’t grow on our side of the Rockies. But we have arrowleaf balsamroot, which offers the same properties.”

Williamson is quick to caution those who want to doctor themselves with plants to know what they’re doing — some plants can be toxic in large amounts. Plants that are pampered in backyard gardens can lose some of their essential properties. And even nature can sometimes throw a curve. This year, for instance, was not a good year for yellow dock because it’s been so wet-you’d need to double the dosage to get what you need.

“If you learn only one plant, make it yarrow,” she said. “You can use it in a tea for hot flashes, rub its leaves in a wound to sterilize the wound. You can even sanitize the water in a stream with yarrow by rolling a leaf and dropping its essential oil into water. It will be bitter but it will kill the microbes.”

Williamson can’t move through Idaho’s pine forests and sagebrush plateaus without sniffing and munching the plants around her.

The red osier dogwood is the Tylenol of the forest, she says. Indians would strip its red bark, even though it often tastes like the backside of a skunk.

A tea made of scarlet gilia can treat toenail fungus. Elderberries can help ward off the flu. Goldenrod can be used for allergies. Sweet clover can alleviate varicose veins, eye swelling, pink eye and bags under the eyes.

A tea made from hounds tongue can aid the healing of cracked ribs and a tincture from it is wonderful for scrapes and abrasions. And one can sustain themselves on lodgepole pine needles given its Vitamin C and D.

“It’s the most nutritious tree in the woods,” Williamson said.

There’s often a trick to using plants, she said. St. John’s Wort, which some have used to treat depression, for instance, is not water-soluble so it must be dissolved in vinegar or vodka. Mullein leaves can be made into a tea to treat incontinence or colds. But it must be filtered through an unbleached coffee filter if you don’t want to hack up hairs.

“It’s not good toilet paper because of those hairs. But if you’re having an asthma attack and you don’t have inhalant, roll up a leaf, tie it with grass, let it dry, light the end, take a hit and your bronchial tubes will open right up,” she said.

Williamson has written more than two dozen books on everything from wild foods and healing plants to North American Indians and mountain men of Idaho. Her research has taught her about the Chinese who brought burdock here to remove heavy metals from their blood when working the mines. And how dandelions were imported to cure a hepatitis out-

break in New York

Today the much maligned spotted knapweed is being researched for the way it seems to stop the spread of cancer cells in the colon, she said.

Williamson and her apprentices gather their wild medicines year round. Even in winter they don snowshoes and gather the bark from chokecherry when it has a bitter almond flavor. When the willows start smelling like a skunk in March, they know the sap is rising and the willow is ready to harvest.

They harvest sustainably, picking only the top part of a flowering plant or little snippets of bark.

Among those who took Williamson’s most recent class at the Sawtooth Botanical Garden was Carrie Norton, who works for Power Engineers in Hailey.

“I’m overwhelmed. There’s so much to think about,” she said. “But you’ve got to start somewhere. I think I’ll try to learn one or two plants a year and go from there.”

Hunters falsifying records to get Iowa licenses

DES MOINES, Iowa — Authorities say there’s been an increase in hunters falsifying records so they can obtain illegal resident hunting licenses and deer tags in Iowa.

Iowa Department of Natural Resources said Monday the state’s reputation as a choice place to hunt trophy-sized whitetail deer has made it tempting for nonresidents to try to hunt in illegally.

Iowa offers 6,000 non-resident deer licenses a year and the department says there’s up to a three-year wait.

Conservation officer Joe Fourdyce says there is a trend of nonresidents buying land or a home and getting an Iowa driver’s license and trying to claim their residence is in Iowa. Fourdyce warns that this is a felony.

Authorities say charges have been filed against three

Louisiana men since August.

Audubon Society hopes feeders draw birds — and bird watchers

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa — More than 100 bird species frequent the Prairie Lakes and the area around the Cedar Falls Tourism and Visitors Bureau offices.

But most of them are hard to find if you don’t have an eye for bird watching, said Mike Tompkins, president of the Prairie Rapids Audubon Society. The non-profit organization hopes to bring more youths and adults into the hobby by installing four feeders around the tourism bureau property.

“They will all be viewable from inside the center or, if people are quiet, they can sit on the picnic tables out on the deck,” Tompkins said. “These birds usually get used to having people around.”

The society received a donation from Cedar River Milling in Gilbertville and used funds raised during its annual bird-a-thon to purchase the feeders, feed, binoculars and informational pamphlets that will help make the office a bird-watching destination. It will also provide the labor and supplies needed to keep the feeders stocked.

Kim Burger, the tourism bureau director, said people are known to travel across the state and even farther to “check a bird off their list.”

“We’ve wanted to get a periscope or something out here for a long time,” she said. “This is an exciting addition for our visitors. It’s a nice break for people who are traveling.”

State sets trap to catch bear that attacked hunter

BEAR CREEK TOWNSHIP, Mich. — Officials seeking to euthanize a mother black bear that mauled a bow hunter in a tree stand along with her three cubs in the northern Lower Peninsula have set up trail cameras and collected hair samples aimed at catching the animal.

Michigan Department of Natural Resources and Environment spokesman Bob Gwizdz told the Petoskey News-Review a culvert trap was set Tuesday evening.

The bears attacked 21-year-old Chad Fortune Saturday in Emmett County’s Bear Creek Township, near Petoskey.

The Walloon Lake resident said he punched, kicked and screamed at the bears as they tried to reach the tree stand, about 15 feet off the ground. Fortune was rescued two hours later and received 40 stitches in his leg. Officials said the mother bear is dangerous because she’s lost her fear of humans.

BLM releases outdoors journal

Times-News

The Bureau of Land Management recently released an outdoors journal called “Treasured Landscapes: Idaho’s Public Lands.”

The small journal can be thrown into a backpack or purse, making it a handy tool to capture thoughts and drawings on paper during exploration of public lands or while sitting in your backyard.

The journal, which sells for $7 and features a mix of blank pages for writing or drawing, includes colorful photos of the scenic public lands and wildlife of Idaho.

Hikers may be interested in identifying flowers using another Idaho BLM publication. Copies of the “Common Wildflowers of Southern Idaho” are available for $10. The book features color photos and practical information including scientific and common names, physical description, habitat and other interesting facts about the flowers commonly found in southern Idaho. Flowers are catalogued by color, which assists children or those less familiar with wildflowers in readily finding information.

Proceeds from the sale of these books are used by BLM as a means to create new interpretive and educational products. The books are available at BLM Field Offices throughout Idaho.

Kayaks open up quiet, peaceful fishing areas

By Kathy Van Mullekom

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. — Messick Point in Poquoson, Va., is as picturesque as any waterfront postcard can be. Watermen with small boats haul in crates of croaker while seagulls hang around the piers, looking for discards.

Saltwater grasses growing on nearby islets sway in the Back River breezes. The air is cool and salty, refreshing in its own way.

It’s a little slice of heaven near the Chesapeake Bay in southeastern Virginia.

It’s also a perfect place to fish from the quietness of a kayak.

Just ask Ruth and Mac McCormick who kayak fish there as often as life allows.

“Accessibility and sheltered waters make Back River a wonderful place for kayakers to fish,” says Ruth.

“The river is a breeding ground for many fish and blue crab. Factory Point is a nice beach to get out and stretch your legs. And there’s the air show in the evenings when the planes return to Langley and then hearing the colors played at five o’clock.”

For years, the McCormicks owned power boats that guzzled gas and always required maintenance. Listening to Saturday morning fishing shows on radio, Mac began to hear about people talk about “yak fishing” in the Virginia Beach area. Soon, he and Ruth were hooked, ditching their 19-foot center console for kayaks outfitted with rod holders, anchoring systems, sonar units and GPS. He has three different sized kayaks, she has two.

“The same boat used chumming for cobia in the Chesapeake Bay can be used with a box of crickets on a farm pond,” says Mac.

Hunters, anglers must stop at check stations

Times-News

With the opening of general deer season, Idaho Fish and Game enforcement officers have set up check stations across the state.

They are located at major access points to hunting units with open seasons.

All hunters and anglers are required to stop at check stations, whether they have any game animals or fish in the vehicle or not.

They must stop at any check station in their lane of travel whether going to or returning from hunting or fishing.

All hunters and anglers must stop even if they were unsuccessful.

Some check stations are biological, some are enforcement, and some are both.

Biological check stations gather weight, length, species, sex, and the number of antler points if game animals. Some biological check stations are designated specifically for either hunters or anglers. Hunters don’t need to stop at angler only check stations, and vice versa.

Enforcement check station look for compliance with fishing and game rules, including proper licenses and tags, validation of tags, evidence of sex, waste of game, size and bag limits.

Hunters should keep predators in mind

Times-News

As big game hunters take to the woods, they are reminded that they are not alone at the top of the food chain.

Each year, Idaho Fish and Game receives reports of wolves being attracted to hunters as they call elk, wolves visiting hunting camps and large predators eating carcasses that were not properly hung.

Hunting increases the chance of running into or attracting wolves and other carnivores.

Carcasses and gut piles attract bears, mountain lions and wolves and should be treated carefully to avoid losing game meat. The rule of thumb is to try to get the carcass out of the woods the same day it is killed. If the carcass remains overnight, it helps to place the gut pile on a tarp and drag it away from the carcass. Hunters should leave clothes, human scent, tarps or other items to deter carnivores from scavenging meat.

If possible, hang it between two trees, about 10 feet off the ground and four feet from the nearest tree to keep bears and other animals from getting it.

When returning to the kill, hunters should approach the carcass carefully and view it from a safe distance. Carnivores, especially bears, may be close by and might attempt to defend the carcass.

Some bears, wolves, coyotes and other scavengers may venture into campsites if they smell meat or other foods. Place game poles downwind and away from camp and stock so that if a large carnivore comes to investigate, it does not scare your stock. Make sure the meat is secured 10 feet off the ground and four feet from a tree. Bears and wolves may eat carcasses hung within reach.

Hunters with dogs should be aware that wolves may attack and injure their pets. When fresh wolf signs are found, owners should place dogs on restraints and keep them supervised.

Hounds hunters should look for recent wolf sign before turning dogs out on a bear or mountain lion track. To prevent conflict between hounds and wolves, some experts recommend that dogs be kept on a leash while tracking until the track gets fresh.

Hounds by themselves should not be allowed to keep an animal treed for very long, as the sound of the hounds may attract wolves.

Wolves are protected under the endangered species act and killing one illegally is a federal offense.

NAPPING IN THE WILD

By Brent French
The Billings Gazette

My bowhunting trip into the Beartooths on Sunday for deer and elk started out cool but turned into a warm afternoon. It really stresses the fact that it’s important to dress in layers, and to have a backpack along to shed those layers into as the day warms up.

I paused for a brief snooze on one sunny hillside, my hat over my face to prevent sunburn. There’s something about napping in the outdoors that is so refreshing.

One of the views I had early in the morning was of the recent snowfall capping the peaks of the Beartooths, set against a deep, clear blue sky. A view like that really emphasizes that fall is finally here.

Start of S.D. pheasant hunting season is slow

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Hunters seeking pheasants in South Dakota are dealing with conditions that are anything but ideal, but one state official says there is reason for hope.

Crops are still in the field because of widespread flooding that hampered the fall harvest, providing plenty of hiding places for the birds during the residents-only season over the weekend. Some fields are wetter than normal as well.

“It makes it tough to hunt when you have a lot of corn in the field,” Game, Fish and Parks conservation officer Jared Hill told

KELO-TV. “It takes big groups of hunters and you’re walking through tall corn, which is hard to see and hard to get pheasants out of it. They’ll kind of run circles around the hunters.”

Hill said hunters should stay positive as the traditional season opens to all hunters Saturday, because the pheasants are there.

Officials estimate the population is up 3 percent from last year. Hill said hunters killed about 1.6 million birds last year, and he expects the same or even more this year.

Boy Scout leader sees growth in new troop

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Burley's recently formed "Sefulu Ma Le Lua" Boy Scout troop is doing well, thanks to the community's help with funding and with encouraging its members, troop leader Gary Robins said.

Robins, a retired farmer, organized the troop six months ago. The name means "12" — "a reference in the Samoa language to the age of our scouts," he said.

With the help of his two assistants, Gerald Baliola and Tim Bennett, Robins has been able to provide a sense of accomplishment and worthiness to the 20 scouts in his group.

Among his proudest moments so far was watching 18 scouts tackle the Malad Gorge near Bliss.

"Although the chasm is very deep, it's not too dangerous for agile-bodied boys if an easy way down is available," Robins said.

"I watched from above and knew these boys were learning life lessons, confidence in themselves and trust in others."

The group caught 50 fish on that same camping trip. Robins said that for some of the boys, it was the first fishing trip of their lives.

"To them a four-inch rainbow was as if they had harpooned Moby Dick," Robins said.

A few weeks later, troop members and their families went to Robins' backyard for a fish fry and overnight camp.

The troop begins its activities each time with a prayer of thanksgiving, as well as to seek God's influence on their day, Robins said. He was particularly impressed by one scout who offered to say the prayer one day.

"I have heard a lot of prayers in my life from the greatest of Christian leaders, but none ever communicated with the Father in Heaven any more effectively than did my non-descript scout on that warm summer morning in early July," Robins said.

Other scouting adventures included riding in covered wagons from west Burley to a ranch east of Declo while learning ways of the Old West, and playing explorer on a Snake River island that had been loaned to the troop for use as its own personal haunt.

"The summer has been a learning experience — tears and giggles," Robins said. "We've had unbelievable acts of kindness and love. Bonds of enduring friendship have been forged."

As with most troops, a big part of Sefulu Ma Le Lua's activities is service benefiting the community. Next week the scouts will lay sod at White Pine Intermediate School in Burley.

Most troop members come from families of modest means and have not been able to belong to a troop before, Robins said.

"So that money is not an issue for the kids, we trade our muscle through service projects for money donations," he said. "Because this method of funding proved successful this year, we'll do the same again in January."

The donations are carefully spent, Robins said, though they aren't the only way the troop raises money. Members plan to sell popcorn in a Boy Scouts of America-sponsored program, for example.

The troop's rechartering is planned for 6:30 p.m. Oct. 28 at White Pine's library. Current Scouts and their parents will attend, and any boys not currently in a scouting program who are interested in one are also asked to attend. They need to be at least 11 years old and in the sixth grade.

Robins said he hopes to add another 20 scouts to his group each year.

"My time spent with these boys and leaders is of immeasurable satisfaction. I only wish I were 20 years younger," he said.

The shops will check batteries and electrical systems and inspect tires, wipers, belts, fluids and lights. Some of these shops are also offering discounted services to AAA members.

Each facility must meet AAA's requirements regarding competency, reliability, cleanliness, overall experience, timely repairs, convenient hours, fair pricing, customer respect and trained, certified technicians.

Repairs, including parts and labor, are covered by a warranty of 12 months or 12,000 miles, whichever comes first, unless otherwise noted on the repair order.

Dictionaries were also distributed by Blue Lakes Rotary to third-graders in Murtaugh, Hansen, Filer, Hollister and Three Creek.

Is there anything else reader can do for plantar warts?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am seeing a dermatologist for plantar warts on the tops and bottoms of my feet. He is using a combination of acid and freezing. This is painful, and I have difficulties walking, even two weeks after treatments that are every three weeks. Is there anything else I can do?

DEAR READER: Plantar

ASK
DR. GOTT
Peter Gott

warts are benign growths caused by the human papillomavirus (of which there are more than 100 types), which enters the body through cuts or breaks in the skin. These lesions present as small, hard bumps and are most commonly found on pressure points on the heels or balls of the feet.

The virus can spread from person to person simply through touching or scratching. Because each person's immune system responds differently, some people may not be troubled by warts, while others, such as you, are extremely hampered by them.

Treatment is not necessary in all cases. When intervention is appropriate because of pain or lesions, a physician may choose cryotherapy (freezing). With this treatment, liquid nitrogen is applied directly to the warts, sometimes a blister forms, and the dead tissue sloughs off in a week or more. This therapy can cause pain, so for this reason it isn't commonly used for young children. Other options include prescription cream, laser surgery, immunotherapy and cutting away of the warts.

On the home front, over-the-counter salicylic-acid solution or patches, duct tape and cryotherapy products are available. There are a number of brands available, but if the medication or patch is used, it should be a 40 percent salicylic-acid solution. Duct-tape therapy involves covering the wart for about a week, then soaking the area in warm water. This is followed by gently rubbing the lesion with a pumice stone or emery board. The process may require repeating once or twice before it is entirely gone. Cryotherapy products are also available without prescription; however, they don’t appear to be as effective as the freezing process done in a physician’s office.

There are preventive steps people can take to reduce their risk of getting plantar warts. Initially, keep your feet clean and dry, since warts thrive in a damp, warm environment. Wear flip-flops or another form of foot coverage when around public swimming pools or in locker rooms. Wash your hands thoroughly after touching any warts. Avoid direct contact with another person’s feet or hands if they have warts. If you use an emery board or pumice stone to file off lesions, do not use that same equipment on your fingernails.

Angie was so very proud of Christian and it was easy to see the pride in her countenance when ever she talked about his accomplishments. Makenna N. Lins, 7, was very special to Angie and was her beautiful little princess. Makenna is like her mom in so many ways. She has Angie’s tenacity and her heart of gold. Makenna also has her mother’s strong will, which will be a great asset in her journey in life. Last but certainly not least, the apple of Angie’s eyes, her baby boy, Peyton Parks, 2. Always laughing and playing together was a treat like no other. It would light up your soul to witness the affection they shared. She is also survived by a few who were closer than friends. Ryan Packham (boy-friend); it was love at first sight and both of them felt it. They shared a love deeper than most. Angie had sisters who loved and cared for her throughout her young life, Jenny Patterson, Debbie Taylor and Carla Crawford.

Angie accomplished so much in her life. She fulfilled her dream of becoming a nurse and loved helping people. Angie was special and had a way of leaving an impression on anyone she met. In the course of her life, Angie had to travel down many rough roads; the battles she fought inside very few can fathom, but she never lost hope or gave up on her dreams. So many people were instrumental in her life, and we are the lucky few who came to know a woman like no other.

We hold her close to our hearts blessed by our memories of her. She will be greatly missed. Angie, your family and friends love you, your kids love you and, sweetheart, I love you forever and always.

The last miner to be rescued, Luis Urzua, gestures as Chile’s President Sebastian Pinera, right, looks on and rescue workers sing Chile’s national anthem Wednesday at the San Jose Mine.

They’re all out

33 miners raised safely in Chile

By Michael Warren
Associated Press writer

SAN JOSE MINE, Chile — The longest underground nightmare in history ended safely — and faster than anyone expected.

In a flawless operation that unfolded before a hopeful, transfixed world, 33 miners who were trapped for more than two months deep beneath the Chilean earth were raised one by one Wednesday through a smooth-walled shaft of rock.

The last man out was the one who held the group together when they were feared lost, a shift foreman named Luis Urzua who enforced tight rations of their limited food and supplies before help could arrive.

“We have done what the entire world was waiting for,” he said immediately after his rescue. “We had strength, we had spirit, we wanted to fight, we wanted to fight for our families, and that was the greatest thing.”

Not even a full 24 hours after the rescue began, Urzua made the 2,041-foot ascent in a rescue capsule called Phoenix and emerged from a manhole-sized opening in the ground to a joyous celebration of confetti, balloons and champagne.

President Sebastian Pinera told him: “You are not the same, and the country is not the same after this. You were an inspiration. Go hug your wife and your daughter.” With hardhats held to their hearts, the pair led a joyous crowd in singing the national anthem.

The first rescue worker down was last up — Manuel Gonzalez, a mine rescue expert with Chile’s state-owned Codelco copper company, talked the men through the final hours inside the mine. Then, he spent 26 minutes alone down below before he strapped himself into the capsule for the ride up. He reached the surface at 12:32 a.m. Thursday local time to hugs from his comrades and Pinera.

The rescue exceeded expectations every step of the way. Officials first said it might be four months before they could get the men out; it turned out to be 69 days and about 8 hours.

Once the escape tunnel was finished, they estimated it would take 36 to 48 hours to get all the miners to the surface. That got faster as the operation went along, and all the miners were safely above ground in 22 hours, 37 minutes.

The crowd in “Camp Hope,” down a hill from the escape shaft, set off confetti, released balloons and sprayed champagne as Urzua’s capsule surfaced, joining in a rousing miners’ cheer. In the capital of Santiago, hundreds gathered in Plaza Italia, waving flags and chanting victory slogans in the miners’ honor.

In nearby Copiapo, about 3,000 people gathered in the town square, where a huge screen broadcast live footage of the rescue. The exuberant crowd waved Chilean flags of all sizes and blew on red vuvuzelas as cars drove around the plaza honking their horns, their drivers yelling, “Long live Chile!”

“The miners are our heroes,” said teary-eyed Copiapo resident Maria Guzman, 45.

One by one throughout the day, the men had emerged to the cheers of exuberant Chileans and before the eyes of a trans-fixed globe. While the operation picked up speed as the day went on, each miner was greeted with the same boisterous applause from rescuers.

“Welcome to life,” Pinera told Victor Segovia, the 15th miner out. On a day of superlatives, it seemed no overstatement.

They rejoined a world intensely curious about their ordeal, and certain to offer fame and jobs. Previously unimaginable riches awaited men who had risked their lives going into the unstable gold and copper mine for about $1,600 a month.

The miners made the smooth ascent inside the Phoenix capsule — 13 feet tall, barely wider than their shoulders and painted in the white, blue and red of the Chilean flag. It had a door that stuck occasionally, and some wheels had to be replaced, but it worked exactly as planned.

Beginning at midnight Tuesday, and sometimes as quickly as every 25 minutes, the pod was lowered the nearly half-mile to where 700,000 tons of rock collapsed Aug. 5 and entombed the men.

Then, after a quick pep talk from rescue workers who had descended into the mine, a miner would climb in, make the journey upward and emerge from a manhole into blinding light.

The rescue was planned with extreme care. The miners were monitored by video on the way up for any sign of panic. They had oxygen masks, dark glasses to protect their eyes and sweaters for the jarring transition from subterranean swelter to chilly desert air.

As they neared the surface, a camera attached to the top of the capsule showed a brilliant white piercing the darkness not unlike what accident survivors describe when they have near-death experiences.

The miners emerged looking healthier than many had expected and even clean-shaven. Several thrust their fists upward like prizefighters, and Mario Sepulveda, the second to taste freedom, bounded out and led his rescuers in a rousing cheer.

Joan Sutherland, opera’s ‘La Stupenda’, dies

By Mike Boehm
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Joan Sutherland, the Australian tailor’s daughter acclaimed as “La Stupenda” during a nearly 40-year operatic career and rated by many critics as the most powerful and technically perfect diva of the 20th century, has died. She was 83.

Sutherland died Sunday at her home near Geneva following a long illness, her family announced.

Sutherland achieved stardom in 1959 with a celebrated turn in the title role of Gaetano Donizetti’s “Lucia di Lammermoor” at London’s Royal Opera House. By then she was 32 and had been with the company for seven years, making a name for herself in a wide assortment of roles until the perfect one came along. She’d been performing professionally since she was 18, and from the age of 16 she had steadily devoted herself to broadening her vocal scope and perfecting her technique.

Her most important teacher was Richard Bonyng, a pianist she met when they were teenagers in Australia — and who would become her husband and regular conductor.

Sutherland’s triumph as Lucia spurred a return to prominence for the “bel canto” style for which she became famous. Building on the achievements of Maria Callas, Sutherland went on to re-establish the long-neglected bel canto (Italian for “beautiful singing”) repertoire of the 18th and 19th century composers Donizetti, Rossini and Bellini.

Beverly Sills and Sutherland’s close friend, Marilyn Horne, were among those who subsequently took advantage of opera companies’ renewed interest in the style, in which composers lavished their music with trills, extreme high notes and other musical ornamentation intended to showcase the singer’s brilliance.

Sutherland’s “magnificent voice,” interpretive strength and revival of “bel canto” works that had nearly been forgotten” together “ensure a permanent place for her in the history of our art,” opera star Placido Domingo said in a statement Monday.

Wendell beats Gooding for district soccer crown

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

WENDELL — In the big games, it's the big mistakes that make the difference. Gooding made two, while Wendell made just one.

Not coincidentally, Wendell claimed its second boys soccer district championship in three seasons by beating Gooding 2-1 on Wednesday on two goals from Jose "Lupe" Ruelas.

Ruelas netted for the 20th time this season in the fourth minute, beating Gooding's goal-keeper to a ball in the penalty area before swiveling and looping a shot into the top-right corner to put the Trojans (15-1-0) in front. He added his team-best 21st goal on an indirect free kick from 10 yards to ice the match with five minutes left.

"It was huge for everyone to get that early goal," said Ruelas. "It was nice to score against them because I never scored on them in the regular season. To get two was really cool!"

Gooding (12-3-0) was the only team that Ruelas didn't score against during the regular season. The Senators controlled most of the play between Ruelas' goals but couldn't find the incisive pass needed to unlock Wendell's defense — and ultimately Gooding let down as the Trojans pressed for the knockout blow.

"We just couldn't find that killer ball," said Gooding coach Roger Johnson. "We would have liked to finish it today but that's the way it goes sometimes. Wendell's a darn good team ... we still like where we're at and we'll try to get it done Friday."

When Matteo Londano was kicked in the head in the Gooding penalty area, it set up an indirect free kick from two yards inside the penalty spot. Knowing it had to be touched

Cutthroats cruise to district title

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The Community School is headed to state again.

Seven players scored goals to lead the Cutthroats to a 7-0 win over Buhl to claim the High Desert Soccer Conference district championship and punch a ticket to next week's Class 3A state tournament.

"It's always a relief to just get that bid," said Community School coach Kelly Feldman.

It was senior night in Ketchum for the Cutthroats and senior Bria Gillespie netted her first career goal to give Community School a 1-0 lead.

Then the underclassmen took over.

Freshmen Hannah Dies, Jordan Fitzgerald and Whitney Engelman each scored, joined by sophomore Ellie Swanson and junior Gabi Perenchio to give the Cutthroats a 6-0 lead at halftime.

Feldman then mixed it up in the second half.

The coach moved forwards to midfield, brought defenders up and constantly rotated players into the lineup.

"After the first half, I just decided to mess everything up," Feldman said. "It was a good opportunity to move some players around to different positions and try some things that we may have to use at state."

Swanson moved from left forward to left midfielder.

CSI volleyball's biggest adversary is itself

The whispers are growing louder. "What's wrong with the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team?"

Might be quicker to list what's not wrong, on the surface, but if you look deeper there's absolutely nothing wrong that can't — and won't — be rectified in time. And three and a half weeks gives CSI plenty of time to get it right.

It's easy to look at this team and pick apart its current shortcomings. The Golden Eagles haven't been consistent. They didn't work hard at first. They've already lost as many matches this season as they did in each of the previous two. Sometimes there's no fire. Most of the time they struggle to block. On Monday they looked like they didn't even know how to pass.

But a year ago, after the preseason intrasquad scrimmage, I thought to myself, "My goodness, they look awful!" We all know where that "awful" team ended up — hoisting the NJCAA championship trophy.

This season, the Golden Eagles' biggest adversaries are themselves. Sometimes they play great. Sometimes they play poorly. Always they put it on themselves and nothing the opponent does, win or lose.

Despite all the inconsistency CSI has offered so far, things appear to be lining up for a great opportunity to defend its championship.

Region 18 gets two automatic qualifiers to nationals this season, as opposed to the usual 1.5 seeds.

North Idaho, which looked to be struggling through the pre-conference season, is on fire and leads the league. Salt Lake, however, was a

Potter does it all for the Broncos

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Chris Potter wonders what all the fuss is about.

Doesn't everybody like to look straight up into the sky and wait defenselessly for a football to fall into his arms with just a half second to take off running into a sea of sprinting players — or be leveled instantly by a charging linebacker?

The Boise State sophomore wide receiver and now return specialist never met a challenge he didn't like.

"Growing up in southern California, I was hitting the waves on the weekends — and I wasn't afraid to go tackle a big one," Potter said. "When I got to high school, people didn't like that I was going to skate parks and dropping down on a half pike after football practice."

But that's what you do when you've never met a challenge you didn't like.

Take Potter's desire to return punts, a position that usually attracts the team psychopath or daredevil.

"A lot of people don't understand why you would ever want to do return punts," Potter said. "Most guys would rather return kickoffs where they have plenty of time to run down the field before anyone gets there.

"I'll do anything to get on the field, but a little bit of the reason I like to do it is because nobody else wants to do it. At the same time, it's an open spot and I want to get on the field, so I went for it."

While Potter's thirst for playing time is insatiable, the Boise State coaching staff is also finding there's not much he can't do.

Last week against Toledo, Potter heaved a 26-yard pass to Kyle Efav. That also went along with five yards rushing and his 15-yard punt return.

Two weeks ago against New Mexico State, he caught a 78-yard touchdown pass.

"We probably don't get him involved enough," Boise

Healthy again, Idaho's Jackson reflects on family and football

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Back in Las Vegas, the father and son still cross paths. Their meetings are infrequent, unexpected — and usually awkward.

Deonte' Jackson has stumbled across his biological dad a few times when he's out with friends or running errands. During each encounter they catch up for a few minutes, like old classmates, and then scatter in different directions.

"It will be like, 'Hey, you. How are you?'" Jackson said. "It's a little weird. But I still love my father. I know he has a tremendous love for me, but he was very young and it was just a choice and he made it."

That choice was to not be around for Jackson's childhood, a decision that the fifth-year senior running back at the University of Idaho relates matter-of-factly and without bitterness or anger.

For others, it might not be that simple. But Jackson, himself a father of two children with separate women, looks back at his childhood and sums it up in just a few words: "I had a great life growing up."

In his dad's absence, he leaned on two other prominent male figures — his grandfather, a former Marine and Caesar's Palace pit boss, and his uncle, St. Louis Rams star running back Steven Jackson.

by one other player before going into the net, Johnny Macias laid it off for Ruelas, who blasted it into the net off the foot of a defender on the goal line.

"Sometimes those can be complicated but that one was so close you just rip it as hard as you can," Ruelas said. "You know it's going to hit someone either way."

Fredrico Mendes scored the lone goal for the Senators deep into second-half injury time, converting a 20-yard free kick to spoil what would have been Wendell's 10th shutout of the season.

The Trojans have conceded just 17 goals in 16 matches, a record they'll try to keep up at next week-end's state tournament in Twin Falls.

"We just try and stay deep and cover each other's backs. It's tough, but someone has to defend," said central defender Luis Valadez. "We're really excited to get to state. It should be like home games for us."

the Indians (7-8-2) seized control in the second half.

"(Community School) came out fast and we got caught on our heels, but once the defense settled we stayed pretty offensive the rest of the game," said Buhl coach Bill Fields. "Hopefully this was a good warmup for Gooding again. We've got to get in the game mentally to be able to play with those guys and so far it hasn't happened. Hopefully this gets the kids fired up."

Gustavo Magana netted six minutes after the restart, and Juan Hernandez and Ricardo Medina added late Buhl goals as the Community School threw players forward in search of the equalizer.

"We tried to change things up and push people forward and we got caught a couple of times," said Community School coach Richard Whitelaw. "We had a good season, considering we only scored 19 goals all year it was amazing."

longer appears on the Bruins' official roster.

In only one of CSI's six losses — all coming against teams currently ranked 11th or higher, and three of them against Nos. 1 and 2 — has it looked remotely overmatched. That match was against No. 9 Frank Phillips (Texas), and no one on the planet was going to stop Viktorija Jablonska that night.

CSI has played 13 ranked opponents in its 25 matches this season. Should they hold their form and make the national tournament, they will enter as arguably the most battle-tested team in the field.

The 2010 CSI volleyball team has shown us how poorly it can play. But it's also offered glimpses of how dominant it can be. What's clear is that, at 19-6 and No. 10 in the nation, this team hasn't played its best volleyball yet.

And as we found out last year, timing is everything when it comes to winning championships.

cousin and Idaho teammate. "If you watch him on the field, he kind of runs like Steven. He really looks up to him and critiques himself off of Steven."

Maybe that's because Deonte' views Steven as more than an uncle. Five years apart in age, the two became close while growing up in Las Vegas, where Deonte's mother and Steven's older sister, Rhonda Jackson-Pullens, worked for the city's housing authority.

While she was away, Deonte' and his three siblings stayed at their grandparents' house after school. Steve and Brenda Jackson brought stability and structure, and up until middle school, they also gave Deonte' a chance to be around his uncle all the time.

Before Steven left for Oregon State, he would drag Deonte' along to pick-up games — even though Deonte' was much smaller and younger. Now in the off-season, they work out together in St. Louis.

"I would say they're more like big brother/little brother than uncle and nephew," said Steve Jackson, Deonte's grandfather and Steven's dad.

Deonte' is far from a 236-pound bruiser like his uncle, who's in his seventh year with the Rams, but he's proven to be just as stubborn in gritting through injuries. The 5-foot-9, 199-pound back is "a tough son of a gun," Idaho coach Robb Akey said.

He earned that reputation through two years of playing through unrelenting pain.

In his redshirt freshman season, Deonte' rushed for 1,175 yards and offered a ray of hope for Vandal fans during an otherwise miserable 1-11 season. But his 240 carries took a toll.

He injured his ankle during that first season, and then hurt his back the following spring. The two bulging disks and balky ankle lingered for two years and were a major reason for his drop in production.

Yet his health started to improve when he began seeing Clayton Skaggs at the Central Institute for Human Performance in St. Louis. The chiropractor had worked on Steven, 27, and many other professional athletes, and he made a major difference with Deonte's back.

Most of the pain is gone now, and Deonte' has again become a threat in the Vandals' running game.

"It's finally the truth. I've been saying it over and over," he said. "I can honestly say that this year I felt as good as I did coming into college."

Idaho running backs coach Jeremy Thielbahr has noticed the difference. Refreshed from two years of carrying a lighter load, Deonte' his burst back. And he's able to make most of the cuts and jukes that were his trademark during his freshman year.

"The first couple of practices (of fall camp), we were very excited about what he was doing," Thielbahr said. "And he's got his explosiveness back. He's able to plant on that ankle better than he was before."

Deonte' also claims he's regained the 4.4 speed that he had coming out high school in Warren, Ark. He had moved to the South to live with relatives before his sophomore season of high school, a year after his coaches in Vegas wanted him to move up to varsity as a freshman.

His grandfather disagreed with the decision, which created friction between the coaching staff and the Jackson family.

By 2006, Deonte' had caught the eye of coach Dennis Erickson, who had returned to Idaho after guiding Steven at Oregon State. Erickson left for Arizona State after just one year — and nearly took Deonte' with him.

Erickson made it clear, Deonte' said, that he would have a scholarship at ASU if he transferred. The running back was tempted.

"But I just knew that wasn't the right (place) for me," he said. "I needed a place like this, a smaller town, a place where I can enjoy college but stay focused because that's one thing my family definitely instills in all of us — education is first and the No. 1 thing."

Deonte's approach comes in large part from his grandfather. With Deonte's father out of the picture, Steve Kelly Hennessy scored the final goal for the Cutthroats (15-2-0) on a penalty kick.

Buhl's best scoring chance came in the second half as goalkeeper Chelsea Cress booted the ball downfield to forward Kim Juker on the fast-break.

The senior captain advanced the ball into the box, but Community School goalkeeper Ella Marks gobbled up the ball before Juker could get a clean shot.

The Indians didn't get another opportunity the rest of the game.

"We came out and played very aggressive and the girls handled the ball well and played with a lot of heart," said Buhl coach Araceli Huicochea.

Buhl hosts Filer on Friday in the second-place match for the district's second bid to state.

The Cutthroats now await their opponent in the 3A state tournament where they won the consolation game last season.

"We haven't really been tested this season, so it will be interesting to see how the team responds to a tough opponent," Feldman said.

Tough opponent or not, freshman Katie Feldman is excited for her first experience of state tournament play.

"I'm really excited. I imagine it will be kind of different and harder than the regular season, but we are playing really well and it's going to be a lot of fun," she said.

Katie Williams kept the clean sheet for the Wildcats (11-7-1).

State head coach Chris Petersen admitted regarding the Broncos' game planning with Potter. "There are probably other plays out there for him."

As Boise State has moved to various wildcat formations this season that include direct snaps with quarterback Kellen Moore on the sidelines, Potter — who also played quarterback in high school — has become the de facto signal caller.

"Chris has that quarterback presence and great command in the huddle," Petersen said.

Potter has quickly developed so much trust with the coaching staff that he called an audible out of the wildcat formation — and Petersen didn't flinch.

"I thought, 'That's different, but it worked,'" Petersen said. "But if he can read defenses and audible already, we're way ahead of schedule with him."

Potter's nose for football has a lot to do with the company he kept in high school.

Growing up, his family was close with the Clausens — as in former Notre Dame quarterback Jimmy Clausen. Just a year behind Clausen in school, Potter accompanied his high school teammate on recruiting visits all across the country.

Potter admits that having all the college coaches around his school while Clausen was being recruited was beneficial to him getting seen.

"I think that definitely helped my name get put out there with Boise State," said Potter, who chose BSU over a handful of other schools because it seemed like the right fit.

Potter is fitting in just fine — all over the field. And now he's embracing the next challenge that has come his way since arriving at Boise State: public speaking.

Potter is helping lead a campus ministry where he has to speak in front of a crowd of roughly 50 attendees, which in some ways is more unnerving for him than playing in front of 50,000 people.

"I haven't had to speak in front of 50 people before, so I'm hoping it goes well," Potter said.

With Potter's wide arsenal of skills, he'll likely be just fine.

Giants tweaking rotation for NLCS against Phillies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Giants manager Bruce Bochy is planning to tweak his rotation for the NL championship series, moving up left-hander Jonathan Sanchez to go Game 2 against the Philadelphia Phillies following ace Tim Lincecum.

Bochy said he would do so to break up the two right-handers — Lincecum and Matt Cain, who now is set to pitch Game 3 back in San Francisco on Tuesday.

“It gives Matt the home opener here,” Bochy said Wednesday before his team’s workout at AT&T Park on an unseasonably hot 90-degree fall day in the Bay Area. “That’s the way we’re leaning right now. We have confidence in both of them but we really think to break up the righties and lefties there is a better way to go.”

Game 1 is Saturday night at Citizens Bank Park with the highly anticipated matchup between Lincecum and Roy Halladay, who pitched a no-hitter in the division series.

“It’s going to be fun,” Giants third baseman Pablo Sandoval said. “They have one of the best pitchers in the National League and we have one of the best pitchers on our team.”

Lincecum is coming off a two-hit gem with 14 strikeouts in his playoff debut in Game 1 of the division series against the Atlanta Braves. Sanchez is penciled in to pitch Sunday’s Game 2 against the two-time defending NL champions.

“We’ll see what happens these first two games. It’s going to be a hyped-up crowd,” said Lincecum, who faced the Phillies in his major league debut on May 30, 2007. “They’re the team to beat. They’ve been there before and they’re there again.”

Bochy said rookie Madison Bumgarner, who beat the Braves in the division series clincher Monday at Atlanta, is a candidate to pitch Game 4 depending on where the series stands.

If anybody can help the Giants get ready, it’s Pat Burrell. The left fielder, who signed a minor league deal in late May and joined San Francisco after a short stint with Triple-A Fresno, spent his first nine major league seasons with the Phillies — and won a World Series ring in Philly two years ago.

The Rangers have never won the World Series, losing to the Yankees in the first round of the playoffs in 1996, 1998 and 1999. They went bankrupt under Hicks, who bought the team from former President George W. Bush’s group in 1998 for $250 million. In a court-ordered auction, Hicks sold the franchise in August for $590 million to new owners headed by team president and former Rangers star Nolan Ryan.

Teixeira made it to the major leagues with the Rangers in 2003 and became an All-Star before he was dealt to Atlanta in July 2007.

He moved on to the Los Angeles Angels the following year before striking a deal with the Yankees.

Rodriguez signed a record $252 million, 10-year contract with Texas before the 2001 season. But the Rangers struggled on the field even as A-Rod put up big numbers at the plate.

“We had high hopes, just like they have now,” Rodriguez said “It’s just things didn’t work out as far as us winning games.”

Almost dealt to the Boston Red Sox after the 2003 season, he wound up on the Yankees a few months later. He got caught up in the Rangers’ bankruptcy case because the team still owes $24.9 million in deferred compensation.

“I’m just happy they got funded,” Rodriguez said.

BILL NO. 562
ORDINANCE NO. 1078

AN ORDINANCE OF THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF JEROME, IDAHO, AMENDING THE JEROME MUNICIPAL CODE BY REPEALING SECTION 13.24.020.D; AMENDING THE TITLE TO SECTION 13.24.020; AND PROVIDING FOR AN EFFECTIVE DATE.

WHEREAS, Section 13.24.020 of the Jerome Municipal Code ("JMC") is now entitled "SUMMER SPRINKLING SERVICE"; and WHEREAS, it has been determined that the title to that section is misleading and has caused confusion on the part of consumers; and

WHEREAS, the need for individual consumers to file an application to obtain the reduced rates for water and wastewater treatment services described in Section 13.24.020 of the JMC is burdensome for both the City and consumers; and

WHEREAS, the City has been able to implement the reduced rates for water and wastewater treatment services described in Section 13.24.020 by averaging water consumption for specified months as now provided therein; and

WHEREAS, to eliminate unnecessary confusion, and to promote the best interests of the City and its citizens, the JMC should be amended accordingly;

BE IT THEREFORE ORDAINED by the Mayor and Council of the City of Jerome, Idaho, as follows:

Section 1: Section 13.24.020 of the Jerome Municipal Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

13.24.020: SUMMER-SPRINKLING-SERVICE RATES FOR WATER AND WASTEWATER TREATMENT SERVICE WHERE DOMESTIC WATER IS NOT RETURNED TO THE WASTEWATER TREATMENT SYSTEM:

A. For the purposes of this section, the term "billing period" shall refer to the period of time between readings of the water meter of a particular consumer, or in a case where a reading of the water meter is physically or environmentally impossible, the period between which bills for water use have been sent to a consumer by the city.

B. Effective October 1, 2009, any customer using water for use primarily for the sprinkling of lawns, gardens and other vegetation, and for other uses characteristically associated with summer or any other such use wherein the water is not returned to the Jerome wastewater treatment system, beginning with water consumed after the meter reading in March of each year, and ending for water consumed after the meter reading in November of each year, shall have their wastewater user fee assessed for each period on the average of the billings made on the last day of December, January, February and March of each year, and the water charge shall be on the entire consumption at the rate of one dollar forty cents ($1.40) per one hundred (100) cubic feet.

C. Effective October 1, 2009, any customer using water in association with a place of business, beginning with water consumed after the meter reading in March of each year and ending for water consumed after the meter reading in November of each year, shall have their wastewater treatment user fee assessed for such period on the average of the billings made on the last day of December, January, February, and March of each year, and the water charge shall be on the entire consumption at the rate of one dollar forty cents ($1.40) per one hundred (100) cubic feet.

D. Any consumer desiring the benefit of the special rates herein provided shall file an initial written application, on forms provided by the city, for the reduced water rates desired. The application shall specify the dates within each year for which such rates are desired. Every applicant shall affirm that the use for which the special water rate is sought is one or more of those uses specifically set forth in subsection B of this section. No consumer shall be entitled to the reduced rates provided herein without first having filed the written application. Once filed, a consumer shall be entitled to the reduced rates provided herein in conformance with the consumer's written application, for all succeeding years, until such time as the consumer advises the city in writing that the reduced rates are no longer desired.

D. E. Any consumer who has no actual average consumption rate available for the four (4) billing periods immediately preceding the meter reading date closest to March 1 of a particular year shall be assigned an average "in home" use with respect to the following scale:

Number In Household	Cubic Foot Average
2	400
3	600
4	800
5	1,000
6	1,200
Over 6	1,400

Section 2: This Ordinance shall become effective upon its passage and publication as required by law.

PASSED BY THE COUNCIL this 5th day of October, 2010.

SIGNED BY THE MAYOR this 6th day of October, 2010.

IDAHO CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

S.J.R. 101

YES ➡

NO ➡

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL'S STATEMENT OF MEANING AND PURPOSE S.J.R. 101
Proposed Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Idaho: Section 10, Article IX.

Meaning, Purpose and Result to be Accomplished:

This proposed amendment will clarify that the Board of Regents of the University of Idaho may charge students tuition, as authorized by law. Currently, the University of Idaho charges student fees to undergraduate students, but not tuition. Student fees cannot be used to pay for classroom instruction. All of the other state-supported colleges and universities in Idaho have the authority to charge tuition, and this amendment specifies that the University of Idaho will have the same authority.

H.J.R. 4

"Shall Section 3C, Article VIII, of the Constitution of the State of Idaho be amended to authorize public hospitals, ancillary to their operations and in furtherance of health care needs in their service areas, to incur indebtedness or liability to purchase, contract, lease or construct or otherwise acquire facilities, equipment, technology and real property for health care operations, provided that no ad valorem tax revenues shall be used for such activities?"

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL'S STATEMENT OF MEANING AND PURPOSE H.J.R. 4
Proposed Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Idaho: Section 3C, Article VIII.

Meaning, Purpose and Result to be Accomplished:

This proposed amendment will allow public hospitals to acquire facilities, equipment, technology and real property through a variety of means that aid the public hospital operations, as long as the acquisitions are paid for solely from charges, rents or payments derived from the existing or financed facilities and are not funded by property taxes. Under current Idaho constitutional provisions, public hospitals, as subdivisions of the state of Idaho, have limited ability to incur debt without the approval of a two-thirds vote at an election held for that purpose. This proposed amendment will provide a limited alternative to that two-thirds vote requirement. The use of tax dollars to finance these kinds of investments is prohibited.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL'S STATEMENT OF MEANING AND PURPOSE H.J.R. 5
Proposed Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Idaho: New Section 3E, Article VIII.

Meaning, Purpose and Result to be Accomplished:

Currently, local governmental entities that operate airports and regional airport authorities cannot incur indebtedness without the approval of a two-thirds vote at an election held for that purpose. This proposed amendment will allow local governmental entities that operate airports and regional airport authorities to issue revenue and special facility bonds to acquire, construct, install and equip land, facilities, buildings, projects or other property. Voter approval will not be required to incur such indebtedness, as long as the bonds are paid for by fees, charges, rents, payments, grants or other revenues derived from the airport or its facilities. The use of tax dollars to repay such bonds is prohibited.

H.J.R. 7

"Shall Article VIII, of the Constitution of the State of Idaho be amended by the addition of a New Section 3D to provide that any city owning a municipal electric system may:

(a) acquire, construct, install and equip electric generating, transmission and distribution facilities for the purpose of supplying electricity to customers located within the service area of each system established by law and for the purpose of paying the cost thereof, may issue revenue bonds with the assent of a majority of the qualified electors voting at an election held as provided by law; and

(b) incur indebtedness or liability under agreements to purchase, share, exchange or transmit wholesale electricity for the use and benefit of customers located within such service area; provided that any revenue bonds, indebtedness or liability shall be payable solely from the rates, charges or revenues derived from the municipal electric system and shall not be secured by the full faith and credit or the taxing power of the city, the state or any political subdivision?"

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL'S STATEMENT OF MEANING AND PURPOSE H.J.R. 7

Meaning, Purpose and Result to be Accomplished:

This proposed amendment has two parts. The first part will allow any city owning a municipal electric system to acquire, construct, install and equip electrical generating, transmission and distribution facilities for the purpose of supplying electricity to customers within its service area. The city will be authorized to issue revenue bonds to pay for such facilities, with the assent of a majority of the qualified voters, provided that these bonds are paid for by the electrical system rates and charges, or revenues derived from the municipal electric system, and not with tax dollars.

The second part of this proposed amendment will allow any city owning a municipal electric system to enter into agreements to purchase, share, exchange or transmit wholesale electricity to customers within its service area, without voter approval. Any indebtedness or liability from these agreements will be paid for by the electrical system rates and charges, or revenues derived from the municipal electric system, and not with tax dollars.

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

Santa's Sleigh & Reindeer

A great way to celebrate the holiday season, this full-color outdoor display is sure to become an annual favorite in the neighborhood.

Easy and fun to make, do-it-yourselfers can put the display together over a single weekend. All you need are the posters, a few sheets of exterior plywood, waterproof glue, paint and sealer.

The whole family can help put the figures together. Just glue the posters onto plywood, smooth out the bubbles, saw around the outer edges and paint the sides and backs black. Make stakes or stands from the remaining plywood or galvanized pipe, and set the display up in the yard, on the porch or up on the roof.

Santa in his sleigh stands about 40 inches tall.

WANTED Certified Crane Operator to train to assume successful crane rental business in SE Idaho. Send resume to: PMB 951540 c/o Times News, PO Box 548 Twin Falls, ID 83303

Today is Thursday, Oct. 14, the 287th day of 2010. There are 78 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 14, 1960, the idea of a Peace Corps was suggested by Democratic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy to an audience of students at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1066, Normans under William the Conqueror defeated the English at the Battle of Hastings.
In 1890, Dwight D. Eisenhower, 34th president of the United States, was born in Denison, Texas.
In 1912, Theodore Roosevelt, campaigning for the presidency, was shot in the chest in Milwaukee. Despite the wound, he went ahead with a scheduled speech.
In 1930, Ethel Merman made her Broadway debut in the musical comedy "Girl Crazy" with songs by George and Ira Gershwin.

In 1939, a German U-boat torpedoed and sank the HMS Royal Oak, a British battleship anchored at Scapa Flow in Scotland's Orkney Islands; 833 of the more than 1,200 men aboard were killed.
In 1944, German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel committed suicide rather than face execution for allegedly conspiring against Adolf Hitler.

In 1947, Air Force test pilot Charles E. ("Chuck") Yeager broke the sound barrier as he flew the experimental Bell XS-1 (later X-1) rocket plane over Muroc Dry Lake in California.
In 1968, the first successful live telecast from a manned U.S. spacecraft was transmitted from Apollo 7.

In 1987, a 58-hour drama began in Midland, Texas, as 18-month-old Jessica McClure slid 22 feet down an abandoned well at a private day care center; she was rescued on Oct. 16.
In 1990, composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein died in New York at age 72.

Ten years ago: Two hijackers seized a London-bound Saudi Arabian Airlines jetliner carrying more than 100 people, taking it first to Syria and then to Baghdad, Iraq, where they surrendered peacefully. A mudslide caused by heavy rains swept through the Swiss Alpine village of Gondo, destroying buildings and killing 13 people.
Five years ago: The Treasury Department reported that the federal deficit hit $319 billion for the budget year just ended, down from the previous year, but still the third highest. Blond, blue-eyed British actor Daniel Craig was named the star of the next James Bond film, "Casino Royale."

One year ago: The Unification Church held the largest mass wedding in a decade, with some 40,000 people participating in dozens of cities around the world. NASCAR founder Bill France Sr. headlined the five inductees into the first Hall of Fame class. (Richard Petty, Dale Earnhardt, Bill France Jr. and Junior Johnson were the other inductees.) Actress Collin Wilcox-Paxton, who played Mayella Ewell in the movie classic "To Kill a Mockingbird," died in Highlands, N.C. at age 74.

DEAR ABBY: Do you have any data on the success of remarrying your ex-spouse? After being married to my husband for 25 years, we divorced due to his infidelity. We have been divorced for eight years and have had no contact.

A family member's funeral brought us face-to-face again, and we have been in touch ever since. Neither of us has remarried or been in a relationship. We realize that we still have feelings for each other and have discussed remarrying in the future.

I love him, but I'm wary of being hurt again. What do you think? Does remarrying your ex ever work?

— HAVING SECOND (TIME) THOUGHTS

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR SECOND THOUGHTS: It can work, provided you're both willing to deal with the issues that broke you up in the first place. By that, I mean that you must be ready to examine whether there was something missing in the marriage that caused your husband to cheat, or whether he has a character flaw and would repeat his infidelity.

I strongly recommend you do this with the assistance of a licensed marriage counselor. If you both go through the process, remarrying your ex could work. If you don't, you would be courting another dose of heartache.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Nick" for more than a year. We have both been married before — Nick's a widower, and I am divorced. He says he cares for me, but doesn't feel passionate about me, nor does "love" describe how he feels about me.

We are intimate, are great friends and spend almost every day together. He treats me great, dates no one else and I can be myself around him. But am I cheating myself by accepting the status quo? Our intimate times aren't satisfying because of the lack of emotional ties, but I'm torn because I enjoy his company. I am confused. Any words of wisdom, Abby?

— NOT QUITE FULFILLED

DEAR NOT QUITE FULFILLED: You and Nick are friends with benefits. Because you have no future with him beyond what you have now, and because intimacy with him is not satisfying because of his inability (or refusal) to emotionally commit — I'd have to say he's reaping more of the benefits. The status quo is a substitute for what you really want, and yes, you are cheating yourself.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going through photo albums recently. Oh, the joy of seeing all those familiar faces again! However, when I turned the pictures over to verify people's last names and the dates they were taken, I was disappointed to find them blank.

The vacations depicted in the photos were wonderful, and I'm sure I thought we'd never forget the year. But the years go by.... So this is a reminder to take the time to label the back of photos with pertinent information. Believe me, it will be appreciated in later years.

— SHUTTERBUG

IN CANON CITY, COLO. DEAR SHUTTERBUG: The situation you describe is one that countless people have experienced — and something folks often don't think about until it is too late. Thank you for the timely suggestion. It's one that I hope readers will make the time to follow.

IF OCTOBER 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your ambitions could be so strong that you can taste them as this fall unfolds. You may be itching to make dramatic investments, but your practical touch is lacking in the world of commerce and business. The best time to make important plans or put crucial ideas into motion is in February through April. Not only can you expect to receive helpful opportunities at that time and assistance from others with any major undertaking but your street smarts and business ideas will be extremely sound. Leadership abilities will be at their height next April and May when you can also improve your health through exercise or physical measures.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It is just gravity that holds you down, but that is not necessarily a grave problem. If you sit under a tree you can enjoy the shade, but you might be hit in the head by nuts or falling leaves. Take the good with the bad.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Knock, knock! Who's there? Take a cue from a famous humorist and if it's a panther, don't answer. Otherwise, let some new people or groups into your life. Be a joiner, not a stick in the mud.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The mind is a great tool, but can create a barrier to experience. Sometimes you must trail your hand in the water and simply feel what is happening. Take a moment and just put your brain on hold.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Fate is just another four-letter word. And it is a word that is written in the sands of time and could blow away soon. If you want your destiny to change, you must make the moves to make it happen.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The rolling stone that gathers no moss might be just a big wheel without purpose. Even the biggest wheel needs to be connected to other things to be useful. This isn't the time act like a moody loner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The best kind of humor makes you laugh for 10 seconds and think for 10 minutes. This could be a great time to join up with a new group. Sign up for a book club, or take an adult education class.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Head to head is where love begins but heart to heart is where love leads. It pays to stay in contact with a wide range of acquaintances and treat them all with respect, even if there is just one special someone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can keep up to speed by learning all the buzzwords. Pay attention to the latest gossip and set your sights on getting as close as possible to the queen bee. Be skeptical of casual promises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This isn't a good time to think of changes but it is a good time to change the way you think. Enjoy harvesting good will from friends. Financial matters may thrive if you think things through.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): When you let people know you, you run the risk that they may know exactly who and what you are. Walk the fine line between being brilliantly creative and being perceived as a colossal idiot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may be speared by a shaft of inspiration. Don't be emotional or sentimental when objectivity would serve better. Attend to the matters at hand and hold off on acting on your musings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have the freedom to succeed as well as the freedom to fail. It is up to you to choose which one. And you had better choose — because if you don't, others will choose for you.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Remorse sleeps during a prosperous period, but wakes up during adversity."

— Jean Jacques Rousseau

How should South set about playing one no-trump on a low diamond lead? The first careful play South should make is to put up dummy's 10. Who knows, it may hold the trick! Assuming East covers the 10, I'm guessing many declarers would duck the trick on general principle, win the next diamond, then go after hearts. Some might cash the four club winners early, hoping for a defensive error, but the result ought to be the same.

The point is that whether South leads a low heart to the jack or runs the queen from hand (hoping for a defensive error), the defenders are in control. They should emerge with three heart tricks, two spades, and two diamonds.

Mrs. Guggenheim, who hates to duck tricks, might do better as declarer. She would win the first diamond, thereby preserving an exit-card. She can now make one no-trump simply by cashing the four club tricks (pitching a major-suit card from hand) and the second diamond trick. Then she exits with the third diamond. The defenders can win only two diamonds plus their four aces and kings before giving declarer her seventh trick with one of her major-suit stoppers. They have to lead one of the majors, and whichever one they broach, declarer gets to establish the third round of that suit by simply preserving her queens and jacks till they are good.

Note that if diamonds are not 4-4 (and clubs 3-3), you have no realistic chance to make your contract whatever you do.

ANSWER: You suspect the opponents can make a slam, so have to decide if immediate action from you will push them there, or will generate too large a penalty against you. I assume you will make about six or seven tricks in hearts, so if the vulnerability permits it, jump to four hearts. At unfavorable vulnerability, where your partner might have a better hand, a simple raise to three hearts would suffice.
