Longtime legislator Clint Stennett dies at 54

Ketchum Democrat remembered as gentleman, leader

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Sen. Clint Stennett died on Thursday afternoon, leaving a legacy as a longtime Idaho legislator who got results with a gentlemanly approach.

Stennett, a Democratic lawmaker from Ketchum, first entered Idaho's political arena in 1990, when he was elected to a House seat. After two terms in the House, he continued to represent District 25 in the Senate for eight terms. He was 54.

"... He could relate to anybody, and I think that was one of his outstanding features."

— Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding

In recent years, his health had faltered during his battle with brain cancer. He missed part of the 2008 legislative session, and also sat out the session in 2009 and this year. His wife, Michelle Stennett, served in his place this year.

Stennett was born in Winona, Minn., in 1956, and later moved to southern Idaho, growing up in the Declo area. A businessman, he owned television and newspaper media outlets.

"When I think of him, I'll always remember the smile," Bruce Newcomb, a friend and former Idaho House speaker, said in an interview with the Times-News.

When Stennett moved from the House to the Senate in 1994, Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, ran for his open seat.

"He was a wonderful mentor," Jaquet said. "... He cared a lot about people who were not as fortunate as he was and he wanted to be sure to help them."

Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, said Stennett epitomized the legislator who could talk to anyone.

Police see problems enforcing 'spice' ban

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

"Spice" is now a controlled substance, but enforcing the state's ban on synthetic marijuana may prove tricky.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter on Friday signed a rule to classify the seven known chemicals used to make spice — synthetic marijuana sold in smoke shops and convenience stores — as a Schedule I controlled substance, following a recommendation by the State Board of Pharmacy. It is now a misdemeanor in Idaho to possess, distribute, sell or manufacture a substance that contains one of the seven banned chemicals.

However, law enforcement agencies could face some hiccups in enforcing the ban.

"Currently, there is no test officers can do in the field," said Lt. Craig Stotts of the Twin Falls Police Department. "This is obviously one of the issues that will need to be addressed once spice becomes illegal."

Officers use a field kit test to identify controlled substances, and a "presumptive positive" result can lead to a possession charge. The remainder of the suspected substance is confiscated and sent for further testing at a state narcotics lab. While the field test isn't enough to lead to a conviction, it does help show that officers have probable cause to pursue search warrants and can help move court proceedings along, according to Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb.

"We need the final lab test, not the presumptive test" to gain a conviction, he said.

According to David Sincerbeaux, the Idaho State Police's technical leader for controlled substances, the state lab can take up to 30 days to return test results to prosecutors.

For police, procuring a field test kit for immediate identification of the newly banned substances is ideal, though getting the kits isn't as easy as calling ISP to place an order. The field kits are bought from a third-party company, and a brand used prevalently in southern Idaho is NIK (Narcotics Identification Kit), manufactured by Jacksonville, Fla.-based NIK Public Safety Inc.

Magic Valley banks notice increase in bad check scams

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Erica Akridge's online advertisement as a babysitter was answered by a woman named Linda who offered to pay Erica $800 for her services.

An exchange of e-mails led Akridge to believe that Linda was a single mother from the United Kingdom who was coming to work in the U.S. She sent Akridge a check for $3,265 and asked her to wire $2,800 of it to her travel agent in Nigeria.

"If you send the money by Western union today, the traveling agent (Michael Peters) will get it today and we should arrive to the states on Tuesday," the woman wrote in an e-mail. "Please Erica, go and send the money to my travelling agent (Michael Peters) unfaillingly today and get back to me..."

that what she thought was her new job was too good to be true. But the dollar amount blinded her.

"I know, it sounds ridiculous now but at the time it sounded so legit," said Akridge, a 19-year-old student at the College of Southern Idaho. "I looked at the money and thought, I could pay all my bills — I could get out of debt."

Instead, cashing the bogus check only dug a deeper hole for Akridge, as she now must repay the funds "Linda" the con artist scammed her out of. It's not a new story but it's one that's become more prevalent in the Magic Valley, as First Federal Savings Bank Security Director Sara Rose said the scams change with the seasons.

"We see an increase in October through December during the Christmas time," Rose said.

Public intoxication that "presents a danger to others" or creates a disturbance of the peace may soon be a misdemeanor in Twin Falls, if the city's Traffic Safety Commission's recommendation gains traction in the City Council.

Staff Sgt. Dennis Pullin said public intoxication is an issue that Twin Falls police deal with on a day-to-day basis, and passage of the ordinance would give them another tool for handling it. He said current ordinances and state laws don't

New signals working on Burley's Overland Avenue

A new type of traffic signal has been installed at the intersections of Overland Avenue and Fifth and Seventh streets in Burley.

According to an Idaho Transportation Department release, the signals include a flashing yellow arrow that guides left-hand turns at the intersections. The signals direct drivers to proceed with caution and yield to pedestrians and oncoming traffic. The signal will also detect if traffic is not moving in left-turn lanes and change to a green arrow, stopping oncoming traffic to provide protected turning.

The signals have four phases: solid green represents a protected turn; a flashing yellow arrow indicates to proceed with caution; solid yellow indicates to prepare to stop; and solid red indicates stop.

Studded tires legal again until April 30

Motorists in Idaho can use studded snow tires until April 30 to deal with winter weather when it comes, the ITD recently announced.

Use of studded tires is advised only when conditions warrant it, according to the ITD, as driving with studded tires on clear roadways may cause excess wear.

Studded tire laws also vary in neighboring states. They are also allowed until April 30 in Nevada, while they are legal until March 31 in Utah and May 31 in Montana. In Oregon and Washington, snow tires are legal from Nov. 1 to March 31, while they are allowable year-round in Wyoming.

Perrine Bridge traffic to be restricted to one lane

Traffic along the Perrine Bridge in Twin Falls will be reduced to one lane in each direction from Monday to Wednesday, according to an ITD release.

Crews will repair the crash attenuator, or cushion, on the south end of the bridge. Drivers should expect traffic congestion and minor delays from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. each day, and a 14-foot width restriction will be in effect for all wide loads.

The repairs are a result of an Aug. 4 vehicle crash that damaged the cushion. MarCon Inc., of Meridian is performing the $39,250 repair.

Stennett

"If they were a cowboy he could go in and talk with them easily," Pence said. "If it was a state official, he could get along with them. ... He could relate to anybody, and I think that was one of his outstanding features."

Stennett became the Senate minority leader in 1999. Senate Majority Leader Bart Davis of Idaho Falls said he admired Stennett's professionalism.

"Clint was a very effective leader of the minority party," Davis said. "He and I disagreed. That was our responsibility — to lead our collective caucuses. Clint always did so in a bright and articulate and gentlemanly way. Clint is one of the more genuine people I know. I respect Clint. He is what is right with Idaho."

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, echoed that, saying that he and Stennett agreed more than they disagreed.

"He was a good man that was an honor to serve with and an honor to be his friend," Cameron said. "It's certainly a sad day, but at the same time, it's a relief for, I'm sure, Clint's family and a relief to know he's no longer suffering. I think he has been such a great example of someone with courage and someone who has managed to maintain a positive outlook and approach in spite of everything he's been faced with."

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter has ordered flags in front of state buildings to fly at half-mast on the day Stennett is laid to rest. A private family service will take place in Twin Falls later this month, and there are plans for a public celebration of life at a later date.

"I was proud to call Clint a close friend throughout his years in the Idaho Senate," Otter said in a statement. "He was a man of great integrity, civic virtue and common sense in the best tradition of citizen legislators. More than that, he was a family man and community leader who was trusted and respected by everyone who knew him. Clint was a model of civility and bipartisan cooperation who led by example."

Senate Minority Leader Kate Kelly of Boise said that Stennett was the first one she called in 2004 when she was deciding whether she should run for office.

"He had a wonderful sense of humor and I think to be a minority leader in the Senate, you have to have a sense of humor," she said.

Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, said: "He was the Democratic leader in the Senate, but he was a reasonable person and a reasonable person to work with. He was not a radical in any way but he represented his party well. Even when we disagreed, he was an extremely amiable person and he didn't hold hard or bitter feelings on any outcomes. He was a true gentleman."

Michelle Stennett is running for his former Senate seat in the Nov. 2 election, facing Republican Jim Donoval and Constitution Party candidate Randall Patterson.

Spice

According to the company's website, current kits don't include a test for the chemical compounds on the spice ban list. So agencies must wait for NIK to develop a new product, unsure of how long it will take to become available and how much it will cost once it does.

Meanwhile, the Twin Falls County Magistrate Probation Office has the ability to test for the spice chemical compounds after they are consumed, according to Senior Probation Officer Jennifer Homborg.

The Twin Falls County Treatment and Recovery

Clinic, which analyzes drug tests for the probation office, can use the same urine test for marijuana, meth and cocaine to detect spice — and a positive test would result in a charge of violation of probation now that spice is a controlled substance.

Otter's ban will last through the end of the 2011 legislative session, during which lawmakers could amend state code to permanently add the banned chemicals to the list of controlled substances.

Stennett’s legacy of public service will endure

In the year of the cowboy politician in this state, south-central Idaho lost one of the most authentic of them all on Thursday. State Sen. Clint Stennett, D-Ketchum, died after a 2 1/2-year battle with brain cancer. He was 54. Stennett was part of a dwindling breed: the rural Idaho Democrat. Though he lived most of his adult life in the upscale Wood River Valley, he was a cattleman and his roots were distinctly Magic Valley down-home: Stennett grew up on a farm in Jerome County, graduated from Valley High School, attended the College of Southern Idaho for a year and a half and earned a degree from Idaho State University.

The Democratic leader in the Senate for a decade, Stennett was populist by conviction but conservative by temperament, which is why he got along so well with two generations of Republican legislators from the Magic Valley.

“He always fought for what he thought was best for the Magic Valley and we have been together more often than we have been apart,” state Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, said upon hearing of Stennett’s retirement in March.

It didn’t hurt that he owned a ranch near Shoshone and knew the most rural counties in his legislative district — Gooding, Lincoln and Camas — better than any Republican who ever ran against him. And there weren’t many of them over the years. Stennett won 10 elections to the Idaho House of Representatives and to the Senate and ran unopposed in six of them.

His two finest moments in public life:

- In 2006, Stennett led the unsuccessful opposition to then-Gov. Jim Risch’s campaign to cut property taxes, transfer public school funding to the state and raise the sales tax. The senator argued — correctly, it turns out — that Risch’s tax cut was really just a tax shift, and that less well-off Idahoans would pick up much of the tax burden.

- When the U.S. Forest Service was slow off the mark in deploying crews to battle the Castle Rock Fire on Ketchum’s outskirts in the summer of 2007, Stennett picked up the phone, worked his Rolodex of influential politicians, called in some favors and swiftly got action. Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter, a Republican, traveled to Ketchum to apologize for the delay. “But Clint doesn’t call (me) very often,” he quipped.

But there were other, lesser-known grace notes in Stennett’s 20-year political career:

- In 1997, he pushed a bill through the Legislature to reduce property taxes for elderly homeowners; it was vetoed by Gov. Phil Batt.
- Stennett was an early and vocal proponent of standards for the regulation of dairies and feedlots.
- In 2002, he strongly opposed the Legislature’s action of repealing voter-imposed term limits.
- In 2004, Stennett was a catalyst for the investigation of the University of Idaho’s ill-fated University Place project in Boise, a probe that eventually led to criminal charges.
- Throughout his legislative career, Stennett insisted on doing the public’s business in public, opposing closed-door meetings of legislative committees and caucuses.

Stennett was heir to what’s now a 45-year legacy of thoughtful, progressive-minded folks who make their living off the land representing Blaine County in the state Senate. It started with the election of Republican Mary Brooks in 1964 and continued with her son, Republican-turned-Democrat John Peavey, who served from 1971-76 and from 1981-94.

Their constituents were well served, but never more so than by Clint Stennett.

Who’s afraid of big, bad Ahmadinejad?

I had breakfast last month in New York with the Iranian president, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. Other journalists had lunch or dinner. Ahmadinejad’s passion for the hidden Imam, whose imminent return he expects, is matched only by his passion for Western media.

At the time I chose not to write about the meeting. I was too disgusted by more incendiary provocations from Ahmadinejad and by the sterility of an Iran debate that turns in the tight circle formed by fear-mongering, ignorance and the ghastly stew of Western carrots and sticks.

Ahmadinejad is a one-trick pony. His thing is double standards. Ask about the Iranian nuclear program, he’ll retort with Israel’s undeclared nuclear arsenal. Ask about Iran’s economic difficulties, he’ll see you with September 2008. Ask about rampant capital punishment, he’ll raise you a Texas. Ask about Iranian lying, he’ll counter with human rights and Abu Ghraib.

Not surprisingly, in Fareed Zakaria’s “post-American world,” he has an audience. He’s adept enough, with a touch of Tony Curtis in The Boston Strangler, switching personalities with eerie ease.

Throw in some headline-grabbing lunacy — 9/11 as self-inflicted, or the Holocaust as invention, or “Iran is the freest country in the world” — and you have a post-modern media star and villain.

And what do all his words amount to? I’d say not a whole lot beyond unnecessary misery for 71 million isolated Iranians. This guy is all hat and no cattle.

Ahmadinejad is odious, but I don’t think he’s dangerous. Some people do of course find him dangerous, especially in the Israel he gratuitously insults and threatens, and yet others find it convenient to find him dangerous.

Roger Cohen

The Iranian president is into his sixth year in office, the Islamic Republic is more divided than ever, Iranian youth have been brutalized, and there’s a nuclear program that, a bit like the Middle East “peace process,” goes on and on and on, defying definition even as it defies termination.

I read with interest in a recent piece by my colleagues John Markoff and David Sanger that “in the past year Israeli estimates of when Iran will have a nuclear weapon had been extended to 2014.” Given that various Israeli leaders have predicted that Iran would have a bomb in 1999 or 2004 or just about every year since 2005, that’s a decade and a half of the non-appearing wolf at the door.

Sure, such predictions are necessarily haphazard, the Natanz centrifuges may now be Stuxnetted by computer worms, and Iranian scientists have resembled Iranian pistachios: up for sale. Still there is a dangerous pattern here of Israeli and U.S. alarmism.

Cool heads are needed. Untenable Nazi allusions, rampant in the case of Iran, demean victims of the Holocaust and lead to disastrous wars. A bloody war has been fought in Iran’s western neighbor. So let’s recall that Saddam Hussein told his captors he had cultivated nuclear ambiguity as a deterrent even though his program was precisely zilch.

And what of Iran’s program? Iran remains a signatory of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty; International Atomic Energy Agency inspectors are at Natanz; the number of centrifuges being used to make low-enriched uranium has dropped 23 percent since May 2009 and production has stagnated; U.S. intelligence agencies hold that Iran has not made the decision to build a bomb; any “breakout” decision would be advertised because the IAEA would be thrown out; the time from “breakout” to deliverable weapon is significant.

I’m with Mark Fitzpatrick of the International Institute for Strategic Studies, who this year told the Washington Post: “Iran will muddle along building its stockpile but never making a nuclear bomb because it knows that crossing that line would provoke an immediate military attack.” The Islamic Republic is a study in muddle but lucid over a single goal: self-preservation.

Yes, Ahmadinejad is the bogeyman from Central Casting. One of the things there’s time for, if you’re not playing games with the Iran specter, is a serious push for an Israeli-Palestinian breakthrough that would further undermine the Iranian president.

I don’t expect that, however. And here are two more predictions: Obama won’t attack Iran and nor will Israel, not by next July or ever. Iran is a paper tiger, a postmodern threat: It has many uses but a third Western war against a Muslim country is a bridge too far.

Things fall apart: Why the center cannot hold

WASHINGTON — Dipping back into conversation in the capital on a brief break from the campaign trail, I heard members of Congress, lobbyists and political operatives stewing about one topic above all others: What happens if this election blows up the center of American politics?

On both sides, they seem to accept the inevitability of significant Democratic losses, although one former party chairman, enjoying a holiday on the Nile, told me by phone that he thinks the Democrats might still retain their majority in the House and Senate.

But he was no less worried about the prospects for President Obama’s government than any of the others I interviewed. The common fear is that the swing to the right that everyone expects on Nov. 2 will include such wild gyrations and produce such untried novices that the partisan warfare of the past two years will seem mild by comparison.

Bill Galston, the Brookings Institution’s resident political philosopher, was the first of the day to point out that, statistically speaking, the center had already disappeared. He was referring to the congressional voting studies, which I have previously cited, showing that, apparently for the first time, there is no overlap between the most liberal Republican in the House and the most conservative Democrat when it comes to roll-call votes. Historically, there have always been a few Republicans who voted often with the Democrats and a few more Democrats who lined up regularly with the Republicans. But now the ideological lines are more sharply drawn and the distance between the parties is greater.

What I found here on my return from a reporting trip to the Midwest was a widespread expectation that the gulf will be expanded by the election results. Obviously, we don’t know who will emerge as winners. But there has been so much focus on some of the Republican primaries, where solid conservatives have been upset by men and women even further to the right, that the stereotype of a Party of Sarah Palins is understandable.

The notion may be misguided. Surely some of the challengers whose credentials look most questionable will be stopped short of victory. And others whose opening comments seemed inflammatory may be doused with practicality along the way.

Nonetheless, what has dawned on official Washington is that one of our great political parties — Republican — has undergone much more than the normal between-elections transition. And the other — Democrat — is having a heluva struggle adjusting to the change.

The Democrats oscillate between depicting their Republican opponents as know-nothing radicals, with barely a fragmentary libertarian view of government, or as pawns of a sophisticated Wall Street financial combine. They are happiest when the opponent permits them to dress him in Nazi garb.

The Republican leaders have to take the question of who these people are much more seriously, because these freshmen will soon be sitting in and calling signals for their caucuses. The fact that so many of them are being financed in their races by new non-party, interest-group political operations makes the options for wild political swings even greater.

I don’t foresee a challenge to Mitch McConnell or John Boehner for the GOP leadership in the Senate or House when the new classes gather in Washington. But I see a clear test ahead for those leaders.

This is not ultimately a radical nation, and those Republicans who are in love with radical notions of remaking the society to fit their own philosophy will have to be brought back in touch with reality. When a party fails to do that, it can find the seeds of its own destruction in the victory banquet. Republicans, and the country, deserve better.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

By Bruce Tinsley

Undocumented workers: essential but unwanted

If Meg Whitman loses the California gubernatorial race because her actions didn't jive with her words on illegal immigration, she could become a sacrificial lamb for the rest of us. Her sin is our sin. Because where illegal immigration is concerned, we are all hypocrites.

At the second gubernatorial debate held in Fresno two weekends ago, Democratic nominee Jerry Brown had a field day with Whitman's less-than-elegant response to the revelation that she had employed a maid, Nicandra Diaz Santillan, who was an illegal immigrant. When Diaz Santillan confessed that she was undocumented, Whitman fired her but stopped short of reporting her to immigration authorities. Brown's point was that Whitman's position — crack down on employers of illegal immigrants — didn't allow for any wiggle room. In one scathing exchange, Brown told

Gregory Rodriguez

Whitman, "You have blamed her, blamed me, blamed the left, blamed the unions, but you don't take accountability!"

But is Whitman all that different from the rest of us? When it comes to illegal immigration, nobody seems to take responsibility, and we are all, through action or inaction, complicit.

It should be no surprise that illegal immigration is one of the primary means by which the U.S. economy gains access to low-skilled, low-cost labor. As the share of low-skilled native-born Americans falls — in 1960 half of U.S.-born working-age adults had not completed high school, compared with 8 percent today — employers have become ever more dependent on illegal immigration as a steady source of cheap labor.

Some sectors are more dependent than others. According to a 2009 study by the Pew Hispanic Center, 40 percent of the nation's brickmasons, 37 percent of drywall installers, 28 percent of dishwashers, 27 percent of maids and housekeepers, and 21 percent of parking-lot attendants are undocumented. In California, those percentages are likely to be higher. A 2006 survey by the U.S. Department of Labor estimates that a majority of California's farmworkers have no papers.

So whatever your feelings about illegal immigration, if you eat vegetables, enjoy restaurants, reside in a house built in the last 30 years or ever let a valet park your car, the chances are you're implicated in the hypocritical politics that allow 7 million to 8 million people to work illegally in the country.

Why don't these immigrants come here legally? Because the U.S. grants only about 150,000 visas annually for temporary low-skilled laborers, a paltry percentage of the number of such workers that the economy easily absorbs yearly.

This charade — closing our eyes to illegal labor (or even scapegoating illegal immigrants, a la Arizona) while refusing to make our immigration system responsive to our economic needs — is nothing new. In the post-World War II years, even as one arm of the government (the U.S. Department of Labor) was actively recruiting Mexican guest laborers, another (the Immigration and Naturalization Service) was throwing them out. By 1976, the comptroller general of the U.S. explained in a report that "the border is a revolving door... We repatriate undocumented workers on a massive scale ... and significant numbers promptly re-enter."

That duplicitous exchange got even more dishonest in the 1980s after President Reagan recast illegal immigration as a national security issue even as he signed a major amnesty for those already in the country. That heralded in the current era of hysterical rhetoric, border walls and beefed-up enforcement. Fifteen years later, a heightened fear of unsecured borders after 9/11 made it even more difficult to reconcile the need for labor with political rhetoric. Once illegal immigrants had been cast as enemies and threats to the state, how could one effectively argue for the nation's need for their labor?

And the more we blamed those awful illegals for coming to this country, the less willing we became to claim any responsibility for their being here, or for treating them decently. As illegal immigrants were increasingly cast as a threat, Americans cast themselves as victims.

We all participate in illegal immigration, not least by refusing to face the paradox. And it has terrible costs, including "stateless" young people who can't go to college and get ahead and a shadow population that is easily and often exploited. Illegal immigration is morally corrosive to all those who participate in it. The enormous power imbalance between immigrants without papers and everyone else poisons our sense of fairness and responsibility.

Brown and Whitman will continue their bickering, and voters will side with one or the other. But the larger truth is that contemporary illegal immigration has turned us all into a nation of hypocrites.

Thanks go to all who helped with Auger Falls

The Twin Falls Community Foundation would like to thank those involved in the recent rehabilitation of Auger Falls. The fire that occurred in July left the canyon in a barren state. Shortly thereafter, we invited members of the community to make a donation to help cover the cost to reseed the devastated area. Many residents stepped up, with donations in excess of $2,200, which was given to the city of Twin Falls. On Sept. 11, volunteers organized together to provide the labor, along with seed provided by Midstate Resource Conservation Development and Conservation Seeding and Restoration. BLM provided its planting expertise.

We would especially like to thank Dennis Bowyer of the city of Twin Falls for organizing the project, the LDS church for providing the labor, CH2MHill for providing lunch, and all those who contributed money, time and labor.

Twin Falls is our community and we deeply appreciate the citizens who step forward when the need arises. The Auger Falls area can now begin to return to the pristine state it was.

This is the beginning of perhaps a three-year project to complete. Funds continue to be accepted by The Twin Falls Community Foundation, P.O. Box 5632, Twin Falls, ID 83303-5632.

Again, thank you, Twin Falls!

We would like to thank the very nice, considerate people of Hansen.

On Oct. 2, we had a very disheartening accident. We stopped at the Hansen Quick Stop parking lot, halfway in front of Wendy's Café. Thankfully, the café was closed.

Everyone came to help. Water, towels and medicine for our horse and water for us.

Special thanks to Stace and Angi Campbell of Hansen Quick Stop, Wendy of Wendy's Café, Jim and Beth Campbell, John Bingham, Berry Prescott, Shena King, Joan Loveland and Melinda Roche DVM.

To all others I did not get names from: Thank you! Thank God for caring people.

Tea Party House candidates locked in competitive races

LOS ANGELES — Weeks from the elections, the tea party has proven it's no flash in the pan. More than 70 of its candidates are on ballots from coast to coast, and nearly three dozen are locked in competitive House races, according to a state-by-state analysis by The Associated Press.

From the hundreds of conservative activists who took up the cause in races this year, these candidates — mostly Republicans — emerged to capture nominations and are running with the support of loosely organized tea party groups that are furious at the government.

Some of the candidates are political newcomers who have struggled to organize and raise money and have little chance of winning on Nov. 2. In some states, tea party groups are divided over whether to even back candidates or become active in campaigns.

But about 35 candidates appear to be waging viable campaigns that have put them ahead or within striking distance of their opponents, according to the AP analysis.

Candidates with tea party ties are favored to win in Republican-leaning districts in Indiana and South Carolina. Several are running strong in a number of rural districts in the West and the suburbs of several major cities. Three candidates aligned with the tea party are in tight races in Michigan, which has the second highest unemployment rate in the nation at 13.1 percent.

The prospects for the tea party candidates have stirred anxious debate in both political parties. And their legions of backers have Democrats fearing that 2010 could be the reverse of 2008, when Democrats attracted 15 million first-time voters who helped the party win control of the White House and Congress.

CHILE
Chile miners stingy with ordeal details

COPIAPO — The first three rescued Chilean miners out of the hospital celebrated their new lives as national heroes Friday, as word emerged that the 33 want to closely guard their story so they can fairly divide the spoils of their overnight media stardom.

That could explain why none of them have spoken publicly at any length or provided any dramatic details of their 69 days trapped a half mile beneath the Atacama desert.

A daughter of Omar Reygadas, a 56-year-old electrician, said in an interview early Friday that he told her just hours earlier that the miners have agreed to divide all their earnings from interviews, media appearances, movies or books.

"He also said we can't say things to the media without their permission," said Ximena Alejandra Reygadas, 37. "He said they need to decide what we can tell the media."

Hundreds of reporters abandoned the mine and descended on this gritty provincial capital on Thursday after the world watched in awe the men's nearly flawless rescue through a narrow hole it took a month to drill.

A shift foreman at the San Jose mine who is close to many of the men told The Associated Press they have hired an accountant to track their income from public appearances and equitably distribute it.

WYOMING
Breast cancer 'boobies' bracelets spark heated debate

LARAMIE — A $4 rubber bracelet meant to raise breast cancer awareness has done that and more: Students nationwide are wearing the "I (heart) boobies" wristbands, and running afoul of school administrators.

Schools from California to Florida have banned the bracelets because they believe the "boobies" language is inappropriate.

The bracelets are marketed by a California-based nonprofit created to raise breast cancer awareness among youth. The Keep A Breast Foundation has sold 2 million of the bracelets so far, with the money going to breast cancer research and education programs.

The group believes a bracelet with a catchy, envelope-pushing slogan such as "I (heart) boobies" is a better way to teach kids about breast cancer than more traditional methods like pink ribbons.

Kollin West, a 14-year-old student at Laramie Junior High School, is one student who got in trouble over the bracelets.

The ninth-grader began wearing his bracelet after noticing the number of women being treated for breast cancer at a hospital where his father was undergoing chemotherapy for testicular cancer.

School officials objected, ordering West to wear his "boobies" bracelet inside-out because they considered the bracelet's wording inappropriate. West pointed out that girls at his school, the local high school and even an elementary school were wearing them without a problem.

The dispute drew the attention of the Wyoming chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, which argued West had a free speech right to wear the bracelet. School officials ultimately agreed to allow him to wear it except in the presence of two teachers — one a victim of breast cancer and another who lost a relative to the disease — who found the "boobies" reference objectionable.

NORTH CAROLINA
States to begin sharing prescription drug abuse data

RALEIGH — Starting next year, dozens of states will begin knitting together databases to watch prescription drug abuse, from powerful painkillers to diet pills.

With federal money and prodding, states are being asked to sign onto an agreement allowing police, pharmacies and physicians to check suspicious prescription pill patterns from Nevada to North Carolina.

Civil liberties and privacy advocates have objected to the state databases, which would be linked with technology and standards developed by the Justice and Homeland Security departments.

Thirty-four states operate databases to fight a drug problem authorities say is growing more deadly than heroin.

North Carolina had 826 unintentional deaths due to controlled substances last year, said Bill Bronson, the state health official in charge of the database. In comparison, there were 482 homicides statewide.

Nationally, there were 27,658 overdose deaths from prescription medication in 2007 — more than heroin and cocaine combined, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported in July. The threat is increasing as the most addictive pain relievers including OxyContin, which can produce a euphoric feeling, become more common, the Drug Enforcement Administration said.

PENNSYLVANIA
Quirk Books is the BRAAAAINS! behind zombie mashups

PHILADELPHIA — The undead have created a whole new life for Quirk Books, the brains — or rather the BRAAAAINS! — behind the monster best-seller "Pride and Prejudice and Zombies."

Quirk, an independent publisher that started with a series of tongue-in-cheek guides for surviving highly unlikely misfortunes, has established the hybrid "mashup" genre bending of out-of-copyright classics and horror-fied kitsch.

"It has in a way become kind of a modern, or a postmodern, classic," said Quirk president and founder David Borjenicht, whose 15-person staff works in an inconspicuous building on a cobblestone-paved side street in Philadelphia's Old City neighborhood. "That wasn't at all our intent. It was simply too crazy not to publish."

It was creative director Jason Rekulak's idea to add lumbering hordes of discourteous flesh-eaters to Jane Austen's 19th-century comedy of manners, "Pride and Prejudice," spawning a monstrous hit.

"Pride and Prejudice and Zombies," Quirk's first foray into fiction, debuted in April 2009 at No. 3 on The New York Times best-seller list. It since has sold more than a million copies, been translated into nearly two dozen languages, been made into a graphic novel and an iPhone game, and been optioned for the big screen.

Government reports $1.3 trillion deficit

“The FY 2010 deficit remained elevated as a result of the severe economic recession, high unemployment, and the financial crisis inherited by the current administration.”

— Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and acting White House budget director Jeffrey Zients

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration said Friday that the federal deficit hit a near-record $1.3 trillion for the just-completed budget year.

That means the federal government had to borrow 37 cents out of every dollar it spent as tax revenues continued to lag while spending on food stamps and unemployment benefits went up as joblessness neared double-digit levels in a struggling economy.

While expected, the eye-popping deficit numbers provide Republican critics of President Barack Obama's fiscal stewardship with fresh ammunition less than three weeks ahead of the midterm congressional elections. The deficit was $122 billion less than last year, a modest improvement.

Voter anger over deficits and spending are a big problem for Democrats this election year. Republicans are slamming Democrats — who face big losses in November — for votes on Obama's $814 billion economic stimulus last year and on former President George W. Bush's $700 billion bailout of Wall Street.

Democrats say the recession would have been worse if the government hadn't stepped in with those programs to prop up the economy. They also note that most of the bailout, which began during the previous administration and was supported by many Republicans in Congress, has been repaid.

“The FY 2010 deficit remained elevated as a result of the severe economic recession, high unemployment, and the financial crisis inherited by the current administration,” Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and acting White House budget director Jeffrey Zients said in a statement announcing the results.

Rising deficits will present headaches for policymakers regardless of which party controls Congress after November.

The administration is projecting that the deficit for the 2011 budget year, which began on Oct. 1, will climb to $1.4 trillion. Over the next decade, it will total $8.47 trillion. Deficits of that size will constrain the administration's agenda over the next two years and will certainly be an issue in the 2012 presidential race.

“Since the Democrat majority has taken control of the nation's checkbook, deficits have risen to staggering levels and will average $1 trillion annually for the next decade under the president's policies,” said Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H. “These abrupt and shocking changes in our fiscal situation cannot be dismissed as ‘inherited’ problems when the tally of the majority's spending spree has climbed into the trillions.”

NO RAISE

Following jump in 2009, Social Security benefits will not increase next year

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Another year without an increase in Social Security retirement and disability benefits is creating a political backlash that has President Barack Obama and Democrats pushing to give a $250 bonus to each of the program's 58 million recipients.

The Social Security Administration said Friday that inflation has been too low since the last increase in 2009 to warrant a raise for 2011. The announcement marks only the second year without an increase since automatic adjustments for inflation were adopted in 1975. This year was the first.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi promised to schedule a vote after the Nov. 2 election on a bill to provide one-time $250 payments to Social Security recipients. Obama endorsed the payment, which would be similar to one included in his economic recovery package last year.

Obama had pushed for a second payment last fall, but the proposal failed in the Senate when a dozen Democrats joined Republicans on a procedural vote to block it.

Michael Steel, a spokesman for House Republican leader John Boehner of Ohio, said that if Democrats were serious about a bonus, they would have voted on it before lawmakers went home to campaign for re-election.

Barbara Kennelly, a former Democratic congresswoman from Connecticut, applauded Pelosi's promise to vote on the payments. But, she said, she doesn't understand why Congress didn't vote on the bill before recessing for an election in which Democrats are in danger of losing their majorities in both the House and Senate.

“I just don't understand it,” said Kennelly, now president and CEO of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare. “I don't care, Republican or Democrat, they say they care about the senior vote. They could've done it.”

Annual cost-of-living adjustments, or COLAs, are automatically set each year by an inflation measure that was adopted by Congress in the 1970s. Friday's announcement was triggered by the Labor Department's release of inflation numbers for September. The report showed that consumer prices are still lower than they were two years ago, when the last COLA was awarded.

The increase for 2009 was 5.8 percent, the largest in 27 years. It was triggered by a sharp but short-lived spike in energy prices to above $4 a gallon in the summer of 2008. When the price of gasoline later fell — to below $2 a gallon — so did the overall inflation rate. Seniors, however, kept their increase in benefits.

“They received a nearly 6 percent COLA for inflation that no longer really existed,” said Andrew Biggs, a former deputy commissioner at the Social Security Administration and now a resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute. “It looks bad, but they're actually not being treated unfairly.”

By law, the next increase in benefits won't come until consumer prices as a whole rise above what they were in the summer of 2008.

A Costco butcher puts out beef at Costco in Mountain View, Calif. Food prices across the nation rose 0.3 percent last month, the most in almost two years.

Most prices consumers pay remain flat, but cost of food expected to rise

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices, excluding energy, were flat in September for the second straight month, a sign that cost-conscious consumers are making it difficult for businesses to charge more.

The Labor Department said Friday that the Consumer Price Index edged up 0.1 percent in September, after a 0.3 percent rise in August. But outside food and energy, core consumer prices were unchanged. And in the past 12 months, core prices rose by only 0.8 percent, the smallest yearly gain in more than 49 years.

Overall consumer prices rose by 1.1 percent in the past year, the department said.

That's below the Federal Reserve's preferred range of 1.5 to 2 percent, and heightened expectations among economists that the central bank will take additional steps next month to spur economic growth.

In a Friday speech, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke said the central bank is prepared to buy Treasury bonds but is still wrestling with how big the program should be. The goal of the bond purchases would be to lower interest rates and encourage more borrowing and spending.

“Businesses' pricing power remains nonexistent across the broader economy.”

— Neil Dutta, an economist at Bank of America Merrill Lynch

Bernanke also said that with the economy still weak, “the risk of deflation is higher than desirable.” Deflation is a widespread drop in prices, wages and the values of stocks and homes.

The consumer price index figures show that deflation isn't far off. But most economists don't expect deflation to take hold. Food prices are likely to keep rising as U.S. crop harvests have come in below expectations. Food prices rose by 0.3 percent last month, the most in almost two years. And modest economic growth should prevent outright price declines, some economists said.

Retail sales, for example, increased by 0.6 percent in September, the Commerce Department said Friday, the third straight increase.

“With the dollar falling and commodities surging, we do not expect disinflation to continue for much longer,” John Ryding, an economist at RDQ Economics, wrote in a note to clients.

Overall housing costs, which make up more than 40 percent of the index, fell by 0.1 percent last month. That includes hotel prices, which declined 0.2 percent.

Clothing prices fell by 0.6 percent in September, the second straight drop, while used car prices fell 0.7 percent and recreation dipped 0.3 percent.

“Businesses' pricing power remains nonexistent across the broader economy,” said Neil Dutta, an economist at Bank of America Merrill Lynch.

Consumers are holding back on spending, with unemployment high and wages stagnant. That makes it difficult for retailers to pass on any price increases.

The modest price increases mean that 58 million Social Security recipients won't receive any cost-of-living increases in their benefits next year, for the second straight year. It will be only the second year without an increase since automatic adjustments for inflation were adopted in 1975.

Food and energy prices rose. Gas prices increased by 0.7 percent, while the cost of meat, cereals and baked goods, and dairy products also moved up.

Sen. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, speaks in Portland, Maine. The government said this week that more than 58 million Social Security recipients will go through another year without an increase in their monthly benefits.

Snowe was the only Republican to support a second Social Security bonus payment, like the one-time $250 in 2009, when it became clear that seniors wouldn't get an increase in monthly benefit payments in 2010; the bill died from lack of support.

Worldwide sales of the Prius, a hybrid by Toyota Motor Corp., since the vehicle's launch in 1997 passed 2 million units at the end of September, the automaker said.

Battle of the bottom line tilts in hybrids' direction

By Steven Cole Smith
The Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO, Fla. – Richard Lamute, sales manager for Classic Honda in Orlando, is used to having customers sit down, pull out a calculator, and figure up the difference between the cost of buying a hybrid vehicle and a regular gasoline-powered car.

For years, the gasoline-powered cars, such as the economical Fit or Civic, beat out the hybrid after they figured how much gasoline they'd save, versus how much more the hybrid cost to buy – often $3

Cross a solid white line? Forget it

Q A friend of mine was entering the freeway and crossed over the white line to pass a slow-moving truck that was ahead of him.

POLICEMAN DAN Dan Bristol

He was pulled over and given a warning for crossing over the white line. We knew about not crossing over a solid yellow but were unaware of a law about crossing over the solid white line. Since this incident we have not been able to find where it states that this is against the law. If this is against the law, it might be a good idea to call this to everyone's attention, as I am sure that there are others who are unaware.

— Tom

A I have to admit that your question had me scrambling for the answer. Since I don't deal much with interstate traffic issues, I had to really dig. For the answer, I turned to my walking, talking traffic code answer device, otherwise known as Idaho State Police Cpl. Andy Hitt.

The law we're dealing with falls under Idaho Code 49-637. It states: "A vehicle shall be driven as nearly as practicable entirely within a single lane and shall not be moved from that lane until the driver has first ascertained that the movement can be made with safety."

The simplest explanation is that the white lines on both sides mark a lane where passing can't be made. When that line stops being solid, you're allowed to pass — safely of course — without fear of getting stopped.

That's the letter of the law but, just like some other laws, this one probably gets overlooked by law enforcement most times. Nevertheless, that doesn't create a valid excuse for anyone to violate the law.

In other business, I want to talk to those who are getting divorced and arguing over the stuff you own.

Any property — say, cars, houses, etc. — purchased during the marriage is considered community property. What's that mean? Well, as a couple, it means it's "ours," not "mine" or "yours."

I bring this up because of the many times that cars have been reported stolen or somebody calls to have a spouse removed from the house. We in law enforcement can't force anybody out of their home without cause, nor arrest anyone for grand theft auto for taking a vehicle they own for a drive.

I know somebody out there is saying, "Well what about the items I bought before the marriage?" The answer I give is, "What about the items you bought before the marriage?"

The reason I say this is because law enforcement doesn't know what was bought before, during or after the marriage. This is why judges get the big bucks to decide who gets to keep what. Then we can arrest someone for stealing a vehicle or remove them from a former residence.

Oh, and as a reminder: you can be charged criminally for destroying community property.

Officer down

Please put this officer, killed in the line of duty, and his family in your prayers. God bless this hero.

• Officer Merrill Bruguier, Cheyenne River Sioux Tribal Police, S.D.

He fought the good fight, may he rest in peace.

Be safe, I'll talk to you next week. E-mail your questions to police-mandan@yahoo.com.

Dan Bristol is the Heyburn Chief of Police.

Sudden onset of bedwetting needs testing

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son is 12 years old and had never wet the bed until recently. Now, all of a sudden, he has wet the bed for the past seven nights in a row. We have taken him to see a doctor, but thus far they have taken a urine sample that came back normal.

DEAR READER: Bedwetting, also known as nighttime incontinence or nocturnal enuresis, is common in children up to age 6 or 7. This is because bladder control may not be fully established, meaning the bladder may not signal that it is full, causing the child not to know that he or she needs to urinate.

Most children outgrow bedwetting on their own. By age 5, 15 percent of children wet the bed, and this is further reduced to less than 5 percent of children between ages 8 and 11. It affects boys more than girls. ADHD and a family history of bedwetting increase the child's risk.

Most cases of bedwetting are simply due to a slow development of the central nervous system. It may also be the result of a small bladder, a hormone imbalance, urinary-tract infection, diabetes, sleep apnea, chronic constipation, stress or a defect in the neurological or urinary system. It is never the result of the child being too lazy to get out of bed at night or being unclean.

Because your son is 12 and didn't previously wet the bed on a regular basis, his pediatrician or a pediatric urologist should examine him to determine whether there is an underlying reason. You said your son had a urine sample taken but don't mention what he was tested for.

There are different types of urine tests with the most basic done in office with the aid of a small testing strip to determine if there are abnormal levels of protein, white blood cells, etc. This test is insufficient at detecting an infection; therefore, he should undergo a clean-catch urine test, which will then be sent to a laboratory to check for bacteria. If present, the lab will then determine which antibiotic will be most effective in eliminating the infection.

It will also be important to notify the physician of any other symptoms he may be having, even if they seem to be unrelated. For example, snoring may be a sign of sleep apnea, which can cause difficulty waking up, resulting in possible bedwetting should the urge occur at night. You should also be prepared for the physicians to rule out sexual abuse, because sudden-onset bedwetting can be a sign in children and teens.

Treatment isn't necessary in most cases but varies depending on the cause in those instances when it is. It is most important to

ASK DR. GOTT

and frustration.

Moisture alarms are small, battery-operated devices available at most pharmacies that connect to a moisture-sensitive pad on the child's bed or pajamas and go off in the presence of moisture. This may help a child wake up in time to stop the flow of urine and get to a toilet before completely emptying the bladder in bed. If the child is a heavy sleeper, he or she may not hear the alarm, nor wake up in the presence of wetness, so a parent should listen in order to get the child awake and cleaned up before any prolonged contact that can lead to skin irritation. Over time, the brain and bladder will begin to retrain to recognize the urgency and awaken the child before an accident can occur. This can take up to 12 weeks, so it is important to be patient.

Treating any underlying cause should also be beneficial in reducing or eliminating bedwetting.

If time and retraining don't help, medication may help. Desmopressin acetate (DDAVP) can boost natural levels of antidiuretic hormone (ADH), which slows nighttime urine production.

be calm and understanding with the child, because there is no control of the occurrence that can lead to embarrassment, anxiety

It does carry the serious side effect of seizures so it's not prescribed for minor cases of bedwetting if other remedies are appropriate. Another medication is a class of drugs known as anticholinergics, which calm the bladder and are often prescribed to treat overactive bladder. A final option is imipramine, which may change the child's sleep/waking pattern and increase the amount of time that urine can be held or reduce the amount of urine produced. Because it is an antidepressant, it may adversely affect mood and overdose can be fatal, so caution must be used.

Home remedies include avoiding caffeinated foods and beverages in the evening, limiting all fluid intake at night, urinating on a schedule during the day and double voiding before bed (once at the start of the bedtime routine and again just before falling asleep).

It may also be helpful to set up a routine for times when there are bedwetting accidents. This includes using plastic covers over the mattress (under the sheets), using thick, absorbent underwear to reduce urine leakage onto the bedding, and keeping an extra set of pajamas and bedding nearby for quick change.

Kimberly beats Buhl in wild finish

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

Talk about your emotion swings.

By the time Kimberly danced down the sideline after Dally Charters kicked the game-winning field goal from 21 yards out as time expired to give Kimberly a 17-14 win over Buhl, both teams had already been through an emotional train-wreck.

The Indians tied the game at 14-14 on quarterback Markus Lively's second rushing touchdown of the game with 3:34 on the clock.

Then things got crazy.

Buhl's defense got the late stop it needed to get the ball back, sacking quarterback Seth Champlin on third down to force a punt.

With 2 minutes remaining, the Indians took over and with a potent passing attack that gained steam in the second half, a last-minute drive to break the hearts of Kimberly — which jumped out to 14-0 lead on two Cody Casperson touchdown runs — seemed destined to happen.

But the Indians fumbled at the Kimberly 45-yard line and Kimberly's Brock Hulsey scooped up the loose ball and returned it 55 yards for an apparent touchdown.

"We thought we had the game won right then," said Kimberly coach Kirby Bright. "We were getting ready to send the PAT team out there."

The touchdown was called back as Hulsey was ruled down after recovering the fumble, giving Buhl a second chance on defense to get a stop. The Indians responded, forcing an incompletion in the end zone on fourth down from the 22-yard line with 30 seconds on the clock.

Buhl drove down the field to the 50-yard line on a 17-yard run by Micah Schneiderman and ran up to the line of scrimmage to spike the ball with 12 seconds remaining. Lively, however, fumbled before spiking the ball and Kimberly recovered.

Champlin completed his first pass of the game — a 29-yard loft to Charters down to the 14-yard line.

"I just trusted him to get up there and snag it," Champlin said.

With 4 seconds remaining, Charters' kick sailed left and it looked like overtime.

But the Indians bailed out Kimberly once more, drawing a flag by running into the kicker.

Charters' wasn't going to miss this one.

"I was just trying to block everything out and forget about the kick before," Charters said.

The kick sailed through for the 17-14 win and Charters ran down the sideline with his fists clenched waiting for his teammates to lift him in the air.

"This win is a such a great feeling. It's just awesome," Charters said.

Kimberly (5-2, 1-0 Sawtooth Central Idaho) gains the upper hand in the SCIC standings heading into its season-ending matchup with Filer with a win giving the Bulldogs the SCIC championship.

Buhl (4-3, 1-1 SCIC) could only hang its head in frustration after the game.

"We just had too many mental mistakes there at the end of the game," said senior linebacker Allen Compton. "It's really disappointing. We got ourselves back into the game and in position to win."

No. 3 Broncos visit lowly San Jose St.

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Boise State head coach Chris Petersen struggled to put himself in the shoes of San Jose State's first-year coach Mike MacIntyre.

"I've been really lucky to be part of teams that have always been decent programs," Petersen said. "In terms of your development and learning things, you can learn a ton when things are not going exactly how you want them to or as fast as you would like them to go. But it's not nearly as fun."

Not much has been fun for the Spartans, who host third-ranked Boise State today (6 p.m., KTVB).

San Jose State, stumbling toward a 1-5 record at the midpoint of the season, has faced one of the toughest schedules in the nation to date. The Spartans opened on the road against defending national champion Alabama and followed that with three of their next five games against ranked teams in Wisconsin, Utah and Nevada.

MacIntyre is also beginning his rebuilding process at San Jose State with a shortage of scholarship players due to the school's repeated academic short-falls.

While Petersen may struggle to understand just how difficult MacIntyre's situation is, he still has some empathy for the San Jose State head coach.

"This job is so hard any way but when you have to build and it's going to take a little bit of time to get your philosophies implemented and get the players you want in there — everybody is so impatient," Petersen said. "Coaches are as impatient as anybody so it's a really hard process."

"But when you put the tape on and see improvements and see guys competing very hard, you have a lot of respect for what's going on."

Vandals open WAC play against La. Tech

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Last year, the Idaho football team secured a place in the bowl conversation by Halloween with seven wins in its first nine games, none more riveting than a come-from-behind 35-34 victory over Louisiana Tech.

Becoming postseason eligible so early was an impressive feat for the previously downtrodden program. But it also helped gloss over the Vandals' regular-season finish — three consecutive losses and 146 points given up to close Western Athletic Conference play.

Idaho will stage an encore to its 2009 thriller with Louisiana Tech this afternoon (2 p.m. MDT, ESPN Regional) in Ruston, La., and the 3-2 Vandals know the importance of their WAC opener. They don't just want to blot out the memories of last's season conference flameout — they are also looking to inch closer to another bowl. "We've got a lot of goals set for the season, and (getting to a bowl) is still one of them," Idaho coach Robb Akey said.

To get there, Idaho must at least equal its 4-4 WAC record from a year ago. The schedule grows more demanding as the season progresses — particularly in November with Boise State, Nevada and Fresno State lined up in a four-week span — so this month's conference games will be crucial.

Twin Falls' Josh Settlemoir runs past Jerome's Meliton Hernandez (31) and Tyler Jensen (62) Friday night at Jerome High School.

Bruins ride big plays to beat Jerome

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

JEROME — Late scoring proved to be the difference. Just not late scoring at the end of the game.

Twin Falls scored to end the first and second quarters, putting 10 points on the board that ended up providing the final margin as the Bruins remained perfect in Great Basin Conference play with a 44-34 win to spoil Jerome's senior night on Friday.

The Tigers (2-5, 2-2 Great Basin) scored with a second left in the first quarter, but Jayson Welker returned the ensuing kickoff 85 yards for a touchdown. After allowing Jerome to score with 19 seconds left before halftime, the Bruins (6-1, 4-0) went the other way to set up Ben Worst for a 40-yard field goal.

"Those plays are huge,"

Welker said. "The pendulum swung their way and we needed to step up and make sure we got it back our way, and that's what we were able to do."

In a game that featured dueling quarterbacks, the seasoned senior from Twin Falls outgunned Jerome's hotshot sophomore.

T.J. Ellis was 23-for-30 for 273 yards and four touchdowns, while Jerome's Simon Espinoza was 15 of 26 for 215 yards and three scores, but he threw a costly pick that the Bruins turned into points.

With about 3 minutes left in a then-scoreless second quarter, Espinoza's pass deep in Tiger territory was batted straight up in the air and Jordan Staley came down with it to set up Josh Settlemoir's 6-yard TD run.

RUPERT — The stage is set. After Minico whipped Canyon Ridge 51-27 Friday night, the Spartans were already looking forward to next week's game at Twin Falls.

"It's up in our locker room: 'Win conference championship,'" said Minico senior Jeremy Castaneda. "Twin Falls is (in conference) so it's coming down to this."

It couldn't be scripted any better — Minico (5-2, 4-0) will face defending Great Basin Conference co-champ Twin Falls in the final week of the regular season for the GBC title.

Twin. I think everybody's had that circled on their calendar for a long time," said Minico coach Tim Perrigot.

The Spartans will try to win their fifth conference title in six years.

"It's huge. Last year they took the conference championship away from us. It's going to feel good to go over there and battle for it again," Castaneda said.

Friday's win clinched a Great 8 state playoff berth for Minico, which will make its seventh consecutive postseason appearance.

After forcing a three-and-out on the Riverhawks' first possession of the game, Minico's Eddy Espinoza returned the punt 60 yards for a touchdown, and the

Gooding 2, Buhl 0

The Gooding Senators will get the chance to defend their Class 3A state title.

Rico Mendez and Luis Patino headed in second-half goals as Gooding topped Buhl 2-0 to earn District IV's second and final berth to the 3A tourney next Thursday through Saturday in Twin Falls.

Gooding coach Roger Johnson said his team was lethargic in a scoreless first half, but "really put it together in the second half."

As for defending the crown, Johnson said, "It'll be a lot of fun to go again. I'm just proud of the kids for making it this far. If we can defend our time, it'll be even better yet."

Filer 2, Buhl 1

For the third time in four seasons, Filer is headed to the Class 3A state soccer tournament. The Wildcats edged Buhl 2-1 on Friday to earn District IV's second and final berth to the three-day tourney, which begins Thursday in Twin Falls.

Filer coach Shane Hild said returning to state after losing eight seniors from last year's squad makes this trip extra special.

Allie Hull scored in the eighth minute to put Filer up 1-0, a margin they still held at halftime. Candra Coelho scored right after intermission to make it 2-0. Buhl got within 2-1 on a goal in the 46th minute, but couldn't score the equalizer.

"Jerome came out and played hard. Coming off a bye, you never know. They got healthy and we got healthy," said Ellis. "We worked on a little bit of everything this week in hopes of having that conference championship game next week and now we're going to get that chance."

The Bruins pushed the lead to 44-21 in the fourth quarter, finally breaking the Tigers' will and moving the ball up and down the field. The one stop Jerome had was a fourth-and-goal stand from the 1 after Twin Falls had taken the opening drive 69 yard in 12 plays only to come up with nothing.

Neither team's defense could stop the other regularly after that, so the game turned on special teams and one turnover.

"That was the best we've played for four quarters all season. The kickoff return and the pick in our red zone was the difference," said Jerome coach Gary Krumm. "We would have liked to have won the game for our seniors but those kids battled and played really well. Twin's a good team."

Jerome still clinched a Great 8 playoff berth when Minico and Wood River both won their games on Friday night. That left Wood River and Canyon Ridge as the only teams that could tie Jerome for third, but the Tigers beat both earlier in the season.

Not that Jerome was exactly crowing about getting in without winning.

"We told the kids that there was good chance we were in, but we don't even want to worry about that," Krumm said. "We want to go to Burley next week and get a win to build some momentum for the playoffs."

Twin Falls was already in by beating Wood River two weeks ago. Now the Bruins host Minico, also in the playoffs, next Friday for the outright Great Basin Conference championship.

"It's going to be a big game. Minico's a great team and we're a good team too," Welker said. "We haven't played our best ball yet and that's what we'll be trying to do next week."

route was on. Minico scored six first-half touchdowns to put the game away by halftime with a 41-7 lead.

"It was a rough first half," said Canyon Ridge senior Colton Sweesy, who caught 12 passes for 100 yards and a touchdown. "I feel like we came out and did what we could in the second half and we didn't quit, and I'm proud of our team for that."

Minico's offense was diverse and efficient. Quarterback Kade Miller completed passes to six different receivers, finishing 8 of 12 for 191 yards and two touchdowns.

Running back Brady May carried 20 times for 159 yards and two TDs. Moi Rice scored two touchdowns with 111 yards rushing and 95 yards receiving. Castaneda had a touchdown reception from each team's quarterback, including his 45-yard interception return, which was tipped by May before landing in Castaneda's arms.

"(May) says I owe him dinner now, so I'll take him out and buy him a burger," Castaneda said.

Minico kicker Andres Madrigal converted 6 of 7 point-after attempts and a 40-yard field goal.

"Our offense has taken off like we thought they would," Perrigot said. "Our defense plays well, keeps us in games and gives our offense great field position."

Canyon Ridge (2-5, 1-3) was led by quarterback Tyler Myers, who completed 18 of 29 passes for 141 yards, one touchdown and two interceptions. He also ran for 33 yards and a score. After the Riverhawks blocked a Minico punt in the first half, the Spartans appeared unaware that the ball was still live, but an alert Myers fielded it and ran it back 88 yards for a score.

Next week, Canyon Ridge travels to Wood River for the final game of the Riverhawks' season.

"(Coaches) tell us to stay focused and win games, that's all we can do," Sweesy said. "We just need to take it one week at a time, we can't be thinking playoffs, we need to focus to beat Wood River."

Yankees score six unanswered runs to defeat Rangers

By Erik Boland Newsday

ARLINGTON, Texas — Like the Twins before them, the Rangers have to wonder if they'll ever beat these guys.

On a night when CC Sabathia lasted only four innings, the Yankees shrugged off a five-run deficit after six innings to beat the Rangers, 6-5, in Game 1 of the American League Championship Series in front of a dismayed crowd of 50,930 at Rangers Ballpark.

The Yankees extended their postseason winning streak over the Rangers to 10, with Texas' last win coming in Game 1 of the 1996 Division Series.

New York Yankees' Alex Rodriguez (13) is greeted by manager Joe Girardi, left, Nick Swisher, right, and Derek Jeter after scoring against the Texas Rangers on a single by Marcus Thames in the eighth inning of Game 1 of the American League Championship Series Friday in Arlington, Texas.

The Yankees, trailing 5-0 going into the seventh, finally got on the board off C.J.

Wilson on Robinson Cano's solo homer. Then they scored five times before the Rangers could record an out in a bizarre eighth inning, one featuring four pitching changes by manager Ron Washington, to take a 6-5 lead.

Kerry Wood pitched a scoreless eighth and Mariano Rivera escaped a jam in the ninth to extend his own record with his 42nd career postseason save.

Mitch Moreland led off the ninth with a single and was sacrificed to second by Elvis Andrus. But Rivera struck out Michael Young and got Josh Hamilton to ground to third to end it.

Hamilton had hit a three-run homer in the first inning, and Young's two-out, two-run double in the fourth had given Texas a 5-0 lead.

Sabathia, who took the mound having pitched only once in the previous 16 days, wasn't sharp, allowing five runs, six hits and four walks in four innings.

Brett Gardner led off the eighth against Wilson by beating out an infield single, at the time a seemingly insignificant play, and Derek Jeter followed with an RBI double down the leftfield line that made it 5-2. That brought out Washington, who brought in 40-year-old lefthander Darren Oliver. He walked Nick Swisher and Mark Teixeira to load the bases.

Up stepped Alex Rodriguez, and out came Washington to call in sidearming righthander

Darren O'Day. Rodriguez lashed the first pitch he saw off third baseman Young's glove and into leftfield for a two-run single that made it 5-4.

Washington brought in lefthander Clay Rapada to face Cano, who lined his first pitch into center to tie the score at 5. When Hamilton mishandled the ball, A-Rod moved to third.

All still with none out.

Cue Washington, who called on lefty Derek Holland to face Marcus Thames, a curious choice in that Thames routinely has assaulted left-handed pitching this season. Thames did it again, lining a single to left to bring in Rodriguez for a 6-5 lead.

Gooding loves favorite role for Canyon tourney

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

When it comes to bull's-eyes, the bigger the better as far as Gooding coach Luanne Axelson is concerned.

"I love being in the No. 1 spot," said Axelson. "We could have a target as big as a gym on us, but that's just how I want it to be."

After going 8-0 in Canyon Conference play to earn the top seed for Class 2A's District IV tournament, she's got her wish.

Gooding hosts the five-team tourney, which begins today. After missing out on state at the 3A level a year ago, the Senators are poised for a deep postseason run in the 2A ranks. But first they'll have to get past fifth-seeded Glens Ferry this afternoon.

Second-seeded Declo, which won the district title last year, should be in the title mix again.

"The girls are on top of their game," said Declo coach Keri Wilson. "They know what needs to be done and they're getting it done. I'm very happy with how my girls are playing."

Axelson feels the same about her Senators, who are led by Angela Vitek, Danielle Baker and Audrey Youren.

"I feel good about how we're playing," said Axelson. "We know it's going to come down to probably Declo, but Glens Ferry or Wendell could definitely step in there and pull an upset."

The championship game is slated for 6 p.m. Wednesday with the winning team advancing to the Oct. 29-30 state tournament at Buhl High School. The runner-up falls into a state play-in match against District VI's runner-up at 7 p.m., Oct. 23 at American Falls High School.

Gooding's Sue Erickson (14) and Audrey Youren (5) hope to help the Senators to the Canyon Conference Tournament title.

Trojans and Indians chase top seed Challis

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Can anyone beat Challis? That's the question as the Snake River Conference Tournament kicks off today at Burley High School. With a tall and talented lineup, the Vikings are the prohibitive favorite as the District IV-VI tourney gets under way.

"Challis seems to be head and shoulders above everybody else," said Shoshone coach Larry Messick, whose team is the No. 2 seed from the North division. "It's wide open from there with everybody else."

The champion and runner-up from the SRC tournament advance to the Oct. 29-30 state tournament at Declo High School, with the third-place squad earning an Oct. 23 play-in date against District III's third-place team.

While defending district champion Challis is the No. 1 seed from the SRC North, Raft River holds that honor from the South division and expects a good postseason showing.

"I feel good about this team," said Raft River coach Cami Schumann. "This is a tough tournament with a lot of good teams and it will be tough to come out on top. We are looking forward to a good tournament."

After going 6-0 in SRC South play and 16-3 on the season, the Trojans have every reason to believe they'll be state-tournament bound. Led by senior Kassie Ottley, Raft River's balanced lineup has delivered wins all season.

"I can't say that we have one most valuable player," said Schumann. "That is one thing that I can say about this team is that they really work well together. They all do a good job."

The championship match is slated for 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, with the second-place match scheduled for 7 p.m.

Shoshone, which qualified for state in 2009, opens against Hansen today, while Raft River faces fourth-seeded Oakley. Winners and losers of those matches square off at 7 p.m., while today's winner between Hagerman and Grace earns the right to turn right around and face Challis.

Mighty Musers favored in Northside volleyball tourney

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Sweep after sweep, the Camas County Musers dominated their way to an unbeaten record in Northside Conference. The scary thing for the rest of the league as the Class 1A Division II tournament opens today in Carey? The Musers appear to be getting better with time.

"This team is currently learning new plays and is honing their ability to execute a strong offensive attack," said first-year coach Shelli Schroeder. "For being such a young team, I am continuously impressed with their versatility and drive."

The defending state champion Musers haven't skipped a bit with Schroeder replacing Ben Stroud. Sophomore Katelyn Peterson is a NCAA Division I prospect and pounds home kill after kill with the aid of setter Larissa Stewart. Stephanie Moore is a nice front-line complement to Peterson.

"We are looking forward to a successful and fun postseason and are optimistic of our chances at both districts and state," said Schroeder, whose team begins postseason play against eight-seeded Dietrich at 3 p.m. today.

While Camas County hasn't lost to a Northside team that doesn't mean it can't happen. While many of the league's teams may not have the horses to keep pace with the Musers, second-seeded Dietrich, which lost the state championship match to the Musers in 2009, is aiming to defend the district title it claimed a year ago.

Dietrich coach Traci Perron said the mental aspect of the game is the only thing keeping her team from beating Camas County.

"We just have to decide we can do it," said Perron. "We're definitely good enough."

To get the chance to prove that, Dietrich needs just two tournament wins to reach Wednesday's 4 p.m. championship match where the Musers will likely be waiting on the other side of the net.

Zamberlin feels the heat as ISU hosts Weber St.

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — With his team struggling, the injuries adding up and fans losing patience, Idaho State head coach John Zamberlin is fully aware he's on the hot seat as the Bengals host Weber State today (3:30 p.m., Big Sky TV).

"Am I a block of granite?" Zamberlin said when asked if speculation about his job was bothering him. "Sure it bothers me, but my job is to get these guys ready to play. I can't do anything about the injuries. When the smoke clears we'll see." ISU's players are strongly defending Zamberlin and his staff.

A.J. Storms, the nation's leader in tackles, said that Idaho State (1-5, 0-4 Big Sky) "was the only school to offer me a scholarship. Coach Zamberlin believed in me. This is my home, my family."

"I love our coaching staff," added running back Corey White. "We're playing for a lot right now — ourselves, the coaches, the seniors."

To potentially save Zamberlin and his staff, the Weber St. at Idaho St.

Radio: 930 AM

Bengals must win some games, starting against a Weber State club that is 2-3 (1-2 Big Sky) and hasn't been the dominant force on offense it was the past few seasons.

"They've lost Trevyn Smith and Tim Toone but they still have that quarterback (Cameron Higgins) and he's a former league MVP," said Zamberlin.

Higgins ranks fourth all-time in conference passing yardage (11,152) and is tied for third in touchdown passes (94). He has owned the Bengals for three years as the Wildcats have averaged 52 point a game against ISU with Higgins under center.

Zamberlin does have reason for optimism after the Bengals showed an ability to move the football in last week's loss at Montana. ISU had touchdown drives of 10 and 11 plays, respectively, under quarterback Russel Hill.

Hill figures to get the start today and for the rest of the year as long as he remains healthy. The Bengals have a bye next week and they'd love nothing better than to go into it with a win against their biggest rival and defuse some of the talk about the coaching staff.

Notes: Weber State has won seven straight meetings and 24 of the last 25 against Idaho State. ... ISU return man Tavoy Moore was named the conference's special team player of the week after becoming the only player in Big Sky history to return both a punt and a kickoff for scores in two different games. The Big Sky record for most returns for touchdowns in a season is six shared by Eastern Washington's Bashir Livingston and Montana State's Corey Smith. Moore has four returns for touchdowns with five games remaining. ... Senior wide receiver Isaiah Burel has been suspended for the rest of the season for violating team rules.

TCU a heavy favorite vs. BYU

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — BYU was a lopsided loser in its last trip to TCU. The result was as bad at home against the Horned Frogs last season.

And those games were when the Cougars (2-4, 1-1 Mountain West) were still considered among the nation's best teams. Not the offensively challenged squad they have become this season, when they have already fired their defensive coordinator.

That is why BYU is an unprecedented underdog at fourth-ranked TCU (6-0, 2-0) today (2 p.m., Versus), even though Frogs coach Gary Patterson remains wary of the Cougars.

"BYU week has always been traditionally, and still is, a tough week," Patterson said. "You always have to be careful. You just don't want to be the next team, the team that they break out on. We have to be ready to play."

The Cougars are 29-point underdogs, the largest they have been since at least 1985, according to the odds maker RJ Bell of Pregame.com. It is only the sixth time BYU has been at least a 20-point underdog in that same span.

Two years ago, the Cougars arrived at Amon G. Carter Stadium as the nation's ninth-ranked team and with a 16-game winning streak, then lost 32-7. They were ranked 16th and at home last year when TCU beat them 38-7 for their only conference loss.

BYU has managed only 17 points a game this season (ranked 113th nationally), and its 24-21 victory over San Diego State last week marked a season-high scoring game.

"They're hungry, the way they played last week was they were flying around, they were playing with passion," Frogs quarterback Andy Dalton said. "They are kind of fighting for their lives right now. ... They have a lot at stake!"

No. 11 Utes visit Wyoming

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Halftime can't come soon enough for teams that play No. 11 Utah.

The Utes, who have the third-ranked scoring offense in the nation at 49 points per game, have outscored their opponents 101-7 in the second quarter alone this season.

Utah coach Kyle Whittingham can't explain his team's second-quarter success, though he wouldn't mind someone else clueing him in: "If we could figure that out and play every quarter like the second," he said, "then we'd have something special."

Utah (5-0, 2-0) will try to make everything work for four quarters again today (4 p.m., The Mtn.), when it visits Wyoming for what sure looks like another Mountain West mismatch.

The Utes will try to rack up some style points after falling out of the top 10 last week, despite pounding Iowa State 68-27 on the road. They've scored more than 50 points in their last three games, but the competition hasn't exactly been impressing pollsters.

"This team is very hungry, very focused and very grounded," Whittingham said. "And even though we've had some games where we've played very well, they understand there's always room for improvement, and the coaching staff as well."

BYU at TCU

2 p.m.
TV: Versus Radio: 1160 AM

TCU is 6-0 for the second year in a row, and the fourth time in 11 years.

The Frogs are coming off consecutive shutouts for the first time in 55 years and are the nation's top-ranked defense, allowing only 230 yards per game.

While opponents struggle to move the ball against them, the offense led by Dalton, their newly engaged quarterback, has recently improved its production. TCU has gone from 375 total yards against SMU three weeks ago, to 474 yards and then 578 last week.

"Again, I've been impressed with them," said BYU coach Bronco Mendenhall, who added the role of defensive coordinator when Jaime Hill was fired after four consecutive losses.

The Frogs held Colorado State to 161 yards in a 27-0 victory two weeks ago, and limited Wyoming to 191 yards in a 45-0 victory last Saturday. Third-ranked Boise State, the other highly ranked team from a conference without an automatic BCS bid, also had a 45-point victory over the Cowboys this season.

When asked if the plan was to try to stop TCU or try to keep up with the Frogs, Mendenhall said neither.

"The focus is on improving our team," the BYU coach said. "My focus still is on our team and driving them and motivating them and teaching them."

After finally becoming a BCS buster for the first time last season, and wanting to do it again, TCU's goals are much bigger.

"You get an aura about you when you get on a roll. That's what we've talked about," Patterson said. "I don't think we're on that, but I think we're getting closer to that. We'll see the next two games."

Broncos

Petersen pointed to San Jose State's tilt last week against Nevada where the Spartans lost 35-13 on the road, a closer result than most would have expected.

"If you watched their game against Nevada, you would know it was a hard-fought game," Petersen said. "Give credit to San Jose. Those guys are getting better each week."

San Jose State senior running back Lamon Muldrow has shown consistent improvement from week to week, getting more involved in the offense each game and making a bigger contribution.

Against Nevada last week, Muldrow rushed for 77 yards and has come a long way after Alabama bottled him up for 12 yards on seven carries in the season opener.

Offensively, San Jose State's problems rest squarely at quarterback where senior Jordan La Secla has struggled. Against Nevada, La Secla was a dismal 14-of-33 passing for 145 yards with two touchdowns.

Overall, San Jose State has struggled offensively, ranking 116th out of 120 Football Bowl Subdivision teams in total offense at 269.7 yards per game. And that's not good news when you're about to face a Boise State team that is second in the nation in total defense.

Boise State, which has one of the nation's leading Heisman Trophy candidates in quarterback Kellen Moore, has been fine tuning its already well-oiled machine ahead of its more difficult WAC schedule in November.

Moore has already thrown for more than 1,300 yards and 14 touchdowns with just one interception. Meanwhile, running back Doug Martin has rolled up 476 yards rushing and is averaging an impressive 7.2 yards per carry to lead the Broncos' ground attack.

With the possibility of opening this season's BCS rankings as the No. 1 team, Boise State's biggest threat Saturday night will be itself.

"We just try not to think about it," Boise State linebacker Winston Venable said. "It doesn't matter who we're playing, we approach the game the same way. And that keeps us not getting too caught up in hype or believing our own press and thinking we're better than we are."

Prediction: Boise State 59, San Jose State 7

Vandals

The first test isn't easy as Louisiana Tech was dominant defensively in a 24-6 pasting of Utah State last week. But the Bulldogs also lost four games in a row before whipping the Aggies.

"They've had their ups and downs, just like a lot of teams around the conference," Idaho quarterback Nate Enderle said. "You're not sure what you're going to get, but you have to go in there expecting a top-notch game and a good, physical game."

The Bulldogs (2-4) have been eyeing a rematch with the Vandals since last season's agonizing loss in Moscow. They led by 13 points with 6 minutes left, only to give up two touchdowns and miss a field-goal attempt as time expired.

"After that we couldn't wait to play them," La. Tech defensive end Matt Broha told The News-Star of Monroe, La. "I can't wait to play them this year."

Gordon looking to end losing streak

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Jeff Gordon earned the first of his 82 victories at Charlotte Motor Speedway. Now, 16 years later, he's stuck in the longest losing streak of his career. But his pole-winning run has him in strong position to snap that 59-race drought Saturday night at Charlotte, where he has five career wins, but only one since 1999.

NASCAR Bank of American 500. TV: 5:30 p.m., ABC. Includes the NASCAR logo.

halfway point in the Chase, and Gordon goes into the race ranked fourth in the standings. He's 85 points behind Jimmie Johnson, the four-time defending series champion and Gordon's one-time protege at Hendrick Motorsports. There was a time this season, despite his failure to get to Victory Lane, when Gordon felt he was running better than his teammate. But as the summer dragged on and it came time to prepare for the Chase, it was Johnson and his No. 48 team that took off. Gordon began to fade and hasn't contended for a victory in months. He hasn't earned a top-five since Chicago in July, and although he has three top-10s through the first four Chase races, he's not lighting the world on fire. But Gordon is impressed with how his No. 24 team has handled the dropoff. "I feel like we haven't emotionally gotten torn down. I feel like we've lost some momentum," Gordon said. "What a win does is carries you through more races on a high and with confidence. That is what I am proud of — we haven't won at all this year, we haven't won for a long time, and while we don't have the confidence that we had probably at that point in the season, we haven't self-destructed either." Still, Gordon needs a strong finish Saturday night. Johnson has surpassed Gordon as the most dominant driver at CMS, which Hendrick Motorsports has proudly claimed as its home track. The race team headquarters are just minutes away from the suburban Charlotte track, and HMS drivers are typically very good here. But nobody has been as good as Johnson, a six-time Charlotte winner who completed the only perfect weekend of his career here last October when he led every practice session, won the pole and the race. So as the Chase field is separating and Johnson is getting more and more comfortable atop the standings — he's got a 36-point lead over Denny Hamlin — the drivers chasing him know they can't let Johnson get any further ahead. Hamlin is usually pretty decent at Charlotte, but doesn't have the finishes to show for it. He led 54 laps last October before his engine failed, hasn't had a top-10 finish at CMS since 2007.

Brett Favre questionable for Sunday against Dallas

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — With an NFL-record streak of 289 regular-season starts on the line, Brett Favre is listed as questionable for Minnesota's game Sunday against Dallas. Favre had only limited practice this week for the Vikings while trying to rest his ailing right elbow, which has been bothered by tendinitis. Coach Brad Childress said Friday he would give his quarterback the 50-50 designation on the injury report and that a final decision on Favre's status would be made before the Cowboys game. "It will be right up 'til then. You never know coming back. I can't look into a crystal ball and see how he wakes up tomorrow," Childress said. KOLB WILL START AGAINST FALCONS PHILADELPHIA — Kevin Kolb will make his second straight start in place of the injured Michael Vick when the Philadelphia Eagles host Atlanta on Sunday. Eagles coach Andy Reid says Vick practiced Friday for the first time since sustaining a rib cartilage injury on Oct. 3. There's a chance Vick will be the backup quarterback. RODGERS PROBABLE FOR GAME GREEN BAY, Wis. — Green Bay Packers center Scott Wells is convinced Aaron Rodgers is over the concussion that put the quarterback's playing status in doubt earlier this week. "He seems to be back to his old self," Wells said after practice Friday. Rodgers practiced for the second straight day and appears ready to start in Sunday's game against Miami. — The Associated Press

9. What is the biggest religion in India?
10. According to the Supreme Court, can a public school teacher read from the Bible as literature?

These were some of 32 questions in the Pew Forum's recent U.S. Religious Knowledge Survey that covered core teachings, history and leading figures of major world religions. The results ranged from expected to surprising. The research was conducted by the Washington-based nonpartisan Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life.

What group knew the most about religion? The answer made big news recently: Atheists/agnostics rated the highest, closely followed by Jews and Mormons, outperforming evangelical Protestants, mainline Protestants and Catholics.

Pew researchers concluded: "This survey shows that large numbers of Americans are not well-informed about the tenets, practices, history and leading figures of major faith traditions, including their own."

"Many people also think the constitutional restrictions on religion in public schools are stricter than they really are."

They said previous Pew studies have found that the United States is among the most religious of the world's developed nations. Nearly six in 10 U.S. adults say religion is "very important" in their lives, and roughly four in 10 say they attend worship services at least once a week. And in this study, most Americans correctly answered at least half of the questions about the Bible.

Among the findings: More than four in 10 Catholics (45 percent) do not know that their church teaches that the bread and wine used in Communion do not merely symbolize, but actually become the body and blood of Christ.

About half of Protestants (53 percent) cannot identify Martin Luther as the person who inspired the Protestant Reformation, which made their religion a separate branch of Christianity from Catholicism.

About four in 10 (43 percent) of Jews did not know that Maimonides was Jewish. Maimonides was one of the most venerated rabbis in history.

Fewer than half (47 percent) know that the Dalai Lama is Buddhist.

Fewer than four in 10 (38 percent) identify Vishnu and Shiva with Hinduism.

About one quarter (27 percent) know that most people in Indonesia are Muslims.

Nine in 10 (89 percent) know that U.S. Supreme Court rulings do not allow teachers to lead public school classes in prayer.

Only 36 percent know that comparative religion classes may be taught in public schools, according to Supreme Court rulings.

staff has fostered her own understanding of the principles of Catholic Social Teaching, which the non-profit's mission embraces. Catholic Social Teaching centers on the seven principals of integrity, service, compassion, dignity, option for the poor, diversity, social justice, empowerment and collaboration.

"I'm still learning about the concept of Catholic Social Teaching but I am passionate about the concept, which isn't something that is articulated well by the church but it is something that can unite most Americans," she said. "Regardless of faith or background most people's philosophies are aligned with those same principals. They give us something to come back and cling to, to believe in." Although Catholic at heart, CCI isn't ruled by Rome nor does it only serve members of the church. One of its main goals is to reduce poverty.

"We're seeing an increase in situational poverty," Rossi said, "people who have never been in poverty before that need services. And we also work to reduce familial poverty, where many generations of a family have lived in poverty."

Last year, CCI served 9,000 people in the state with a budget of $1.2 million. As executive director, Rossi will continue to explore funding opportunities and build community relationships. "We're working to create more visibility and educate communities about who we are and what we do. There is the misbelief that we are a fundraising arm for the church," she said. "We are reviewing our strategic plan and outlining tactics to create awareness throughout the state."

Regional Director Kent Thibault, who oversees operations at the Jerome office, said Rossi is a good fit for CCI. "Her values are a good alignment with the vision of what we intend to do here," Thibault said, which does not include proselytizing or trying to get people to mass. "Our focus is on helping people and we don't discriminate."

The office provides an example of the range of services provided by CCI, including support for immigrants such as citizenship classes and literacy and computer classes. It networks with a number of organizations, including the Jerome School District, to provide after-school programs, crisis services and justice support like helping victims of immigration fraud.

"We believe every person is important and strive to enhance life and dignity," Rossi said.

Religious leaders respond to the Pew study

By Helen Gray McClatchy Newspapers

The Star asked religious leaders to comment on the Pew Forum's U.S. Religious Knowledge Survey:

Cole Morgan, a leader in several area atheist/agnostic organizations, said the high score for his group did not surprise him.

"Atheists are well-informed about religion," he said. "When we get together, we talk about many topics, including religion, and we study it. It is so important in America that we feel we should be very knowledgeable so we can discuss it with people."

People in a lot of faiths just accept what they hear, he said. Rabbi Mark Levin of Congregation Beth Torah in Overland Park, Kan., said any minority has to define itself in relation to the majority.

"When you live in American society, Christianity is all around you," he said. "If you are a member of the minority, you have to make an effort to learn about your own religion. Christianity is taught in American society. But Jews have to define what it means to be a Jew."

Judaism is a religion based upon study, and study of the faith is regarded as essential to keeping Jews alive as a people, Levin said.

Bruce Priday, Lenexa Stake president for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, said "Mormons' knowledge of Christianity is based on the fact that Jesus Christ is the central focus of our faith, as evidence by the name of the church. Also, the Bible is an important foundational Scripture, used in conjunction with other scriptures, including the Book of Mormon."

Furthermore, Mormons place great emphasis on increasing their religious knowledge. He said Sunday services include two hours of religious instruction, and high school-age Mormons attend early morning weekday religious education classes. Also, Mormon missionaries expand their knowledge of other faiths.

"Mormons are also encouraged to have daily personal Scripture study, daily family Scripture study and a weekly family home evening for gospel study and family activities," Priday said.

African-American heritage holds the Bible in high esteem, said the Rev. Betty Hanna-Witherspoon, pastor of Ebenezer A M E Church.

"So my expectation would be that we would know more about the Bible than we would know about other religious traditions."

Also, she said: "Many of us express little interest in other faiths because we believe we have found the way. But in order to respect our sisters and brothers we need to know something about them."

As the country continues to become more diverse, preachers and teachers will have to teach their members more about what others believe and more about their own faith, she said.

Scott McKellar, director of the Bishop Helmsing Institute, said he was surprised that only 45 percent of Catholics knew the question about Communion. The institute does continuing education for adult Catholics.

"But did they distinguish between practicing Catholics and nonpracticing Catholics?" he asked.

Otherwise, he said the survey backed up what he already knew: There's a tremendous need for adult religious education.

"Adults are so busy that they don't take time to learn about their faith," he said. "It's the busyness of our culture; we're over-scheduled."

The church introduced a new catechism in 1994, and he said, "our goal would be to have as many Catholics as possible learn this."

"The Catholic Church is involved in ecumenism. But a lot of knowledge comes from personal contacts as we dialogue with people of other faiths."

McKellar said Hispanic Catholics probably scored low because of a language barrier. The institute has four sites that offer classes in Spanish and wants to expand.

The Rev. Paul Brooks, pastor of First Baptist Raytown, Mo., who has been involved in interfaith work, said the survey results were "disheartening to say the least."

"Clearly evangelicals have dropped the ball when it comes to teaching the Bible and related information," he said.

"It is as if we have done 'nothing in particular' to teach and train our congregations. I guess we should congratulate our Jewish and Mormon friends for doing a better job than we do. At least we did do somewhat better answering questions about Christianity itself."

Brooks said he teaches about other faiths.

"I think all churches should. It teaches respect for others and helps church members better understand Christianity."

The Rev. Gail Greenwell, rector at St. Michael & All Angels Episcopal Church in Mission, Kan., read the entire 70-plus-page study. She said she was not surprised by the relatively low ranking of white mainline Protestants.

"Many people identify themselves as Christians, and they may identify with a particular denomination, but that doesn't necessarily translate into active Christian education and discipleship as a lifelong process," she said.

"The Episcopal Church is open to studying world religions," she said. "Some denominations may feel the study of world religions denigrates the unique salvation available in Jesus Christ."

"We need to do a better job in making Christian education a lifelong journey. We have to study our church traditions, the Bible and how God is working in this world around us."

"In short, the survey shows that we have a lot of work to do."

Silverman's revivals. In an age of skepticism, Silverman says he believes in miracles. Others claim to have seen miracles performed.

"We have seen healings done," Bob Dempsay said. "He has led many to Christ. That is why we suggested his name to Pastor Travis."

"We invite different voices to speak here," Turner said. "We chose Silverman because I like the idea of having a Jewish understanding of Scripture."

Silverman uses Hebraic music and dramatization in his messages. He's a Hebrew scholar who loves to tell people why he changed and what he's found in Exodus. One example: Exodus 12:21-23. Silverman says there's a connection between the blood marks used on doors during the Jewish Passover and the cross of Jesus Christ.

Hear Silverman at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday at the church.

Survey

About seven in 10 (71 percent) know that the Bible says Jesus was born in Bethlehem.

Various factors influenced religious knowledge. For example, college graduates answered nearly eight more questions correctly than those with a high school education or less. People who had taken a religion course in college and people who read Scripture at least once a week or talk about religion with friends and family also scored higher.

On questions about Christianity, Mormons and white evangelical Protestants scored the highest.

On questions dealing with the world religions, Jews and atheists/agnostics scored the highest. They also scored the highest on questions about the role of religion in public life, including what the U.S. Constitution says about religion.

Dan Stevenson, chairman of the Department of Religious Studies at the University of Kansas, said, "The vast majority of students from regional public high schools have little or no exposure to the academic study of world religions in their school systems."

Given this country's involvement in the world, he said the study shows "troubling ignorance about religion, but also disinterest. That's the worse part of it."

"We are called upon to interact with people in a pluralistic society, and the lack of knowledge can lead to stereotypes that could really be dangerous."

CAMP HOPE

For most of the past few days, the eyes of the world have been focused on a 28-inch-wide hole in the ground in one of the driest, most desolate places on Earth.

Around the top of the hole, hundreds of engineers, technicians, mining experts, politicians, media representatives and family members have been planning, preparing and praying. At the other end of the hole, 33 men have been doing whatever it took to survive after being trapped by a Chilean mine cave-in on Aug. 5. Although separated by half a mile of solid rock, both rescuers and rescuees have been driven by the same motivational principle.

Hope is what kept rescuers searching for the first 17 days after the cave-in, when they were still unsure if anyone had survived. Hope is what kept the trapped miners going as their supplies — two mouthfuls of tuna and a half cup of milk every two days — dwindled in the dark humidity of their underground prison.

Hope is what kept families praying when reason began to whisper in their ears that perhaps the time had come to accept painful realities. And hope is what motivated experts from all around the world to drop everything and rush to an obscure Andean mine to share their ideas, their suggestions and their expertise.

Even after the extraordinary discovery on Aug. 22 that the miners were all still — incredibly — alive, hope still drove the rescue both above the ground and beneath it. Hope that a realistic course of action to bring them out of the mine could be quickly designed and implemented. Hope that the plan would work. Hope that the miners could hold out for as long as would be needed. Hope that Chile's recent propensity for earthquakes — three above 6.3 on the Richter scale in 2010 alone — would be held in abeyance for a little while, at least. Hope that all of the prayers and the ideas and the work would be enough. A makeshift village was formed near the hole by all the tents and temporary shelters used by those who joined the rescue effort. They called the village "Campamento Esperanza?"

Camp Hope. As I watched this real-life human drama playing out on my television screen, I found myself feeling energized and enriched by what I was seeing. Each time the rescue pod emerged from the blackness of the hole bearing another miner, I thought of the words of author Anne Lamott:

"True hope begins in the dark, the stubborn hope that if you just show up and try to do the right thing, the dawn will come. You wait and watch and work; you don't give up."

And that, it seems to me, is the great and lasting message of the Copiapu Mine Rescue: "You don't give up." Even if it seems like the world is crashing all around you. Even when you feel you are lost and alone in a deep, dark hole. Even if most of the people around you think that hope is lost. Or foolish. Or useless. "You wait and watch and work; you don't give up."

"True hope dwells on the possible, even when life seems to be a plot written by someone who wants to see how much adversity we can overcome," said artist Walter Anderson. "True hope responds to the real world, to real life. It is an active effort."

Or as Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. said: "Everything that is done in the world is done by hope."

Soon after he was rescued from the mine, 40-year-old Mario Sepulveda said that during the 10 weeks he was trapped in the mine he felt like he was caught "between God and the devil"

"They fought," Sepulveda said. "God won." Not to mention hope.

Fla. pastor wins car for canceling Quran burning

By Beth DeFalco Associated Press writer

SOUTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Car dealer Brad Benson made the pitch to Florida pastor Terry Jones in one of his quirky radio ads: If you don't burn a Quran, I'll give you a new car.

He was surprised, though, when a representative for Jones called to collect the 2011 Hyundai Accent, retailing for $14,200.

"They said unless I was doing false advertising, they would like to arrange to pick up the car," Benson recalled. At first he thought it was a hoax, so Benson asked Jones to send in a copy of his driver's license. He did.

Jones, of Gainesville, Fla., told The Associated Press that the free car wasn't the reason he called off the burning — and that he didn't even hear about the offer until a few weeks after Sept. 11, when he had threatened to set the Muslim holy book on fire.

He said he plans to donate the car to an organization that helps abused Muslim women.

The pastor will have to pick up the car at Brad Benson Mitsubishi Hyundai in South Brunswick — known locally for Benson's radio ads focusing more on current events than cars — so he can fill out paperwork. No date has been set for the handover.

Jones had threatened to burn the Quran over plans to build an Islamic center and mosque near where terrorists brought down the World Trade Center nine years ago. Muslims revere the book as the word of God and view its destruction as sacrilege.

His plans drew opposition across the world. President Barack Obama appealed to him on television, and Defense Secretary Robert Gates called him personally. Gen. David Petraeus, head of the U.S. mission in Afghanistan, said carrying out the plan would have endangered American troops.

Terry Jones

Benson, a former New York Giants center, said he originally offered Jones use of a car for a year if he refused to burn a Quran ever.

"I just didn't think that was a good thing for our country right now," Benson said.

He's now giving Jones the car outright because he doesn't want to be connected to whatever the Florida pastor does with it.

"I don't want to be involved in the politics of that," Benson said.

Before he made his decision, Benson asked listeners to weigh in on whether he should honor his promise.

More than 2,600 people responded by phone and e-mail, and the vast majority, Benson said, urged him to keep his word.

One caller suggested painting sayings from various religious books — the Quran, the Talmud, the King James Bible — on the car.

"What you didn't say was what the car was going to look like when you gave it to him," the caller said.

Another caller told Benson to "be a man" and keep his promise. And some encouraged Benson to pick his own charity to get a car.

In 2003, Benson offered another newsmaker — Saddam Hussein — a new car if he fled Iraq. That commercial wasn't as successful, and Benson pulled the ad after two days, replacing it with one apologizing for any offense that was taken.

The Quran commercial was part of a regular "idiot award" segment Benson has singled out others for, including Lindsey Lohan, Mel Gibson and Roger Clemens.

"We don't have your typical car commercial," Benson said.

But they are memorable — and effective. Three years ago, he was selling 60 cars a month, he said. Today, that number is between 500 and 600 — making him one of the state's most successful dealers.

Former LDS missionary continues helping poor

By Sven Berg The Post Register

IDAHO FALLS — The children who go to the new school in Sasaram, India, have no idea that the reason they're in class is the inspiration a Jefferson County farm boy drew from a mission to Albania and the bitter lessons he later learned in Brazil.

Casey Allred's two years on a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints mission to the eastern European country were enough to convince him that he needed to help people who weren't awarded first-world privilege at birth.

"That really opened up my eyes to what a Third World country is and what it has," Allred said. "When I got home, I vowed that I was going to make a difference."

On his return from his mission, Allred went to Utah State University to prepare himself for medical school. At about the same time, he began working with a nonprofit organization whose goal was to provide housing, hospitals and community centers in Brazil.

Between 2007 and 2009, Allred did his best to raise money for the group and help it achieve its lofty goals. Over time, however, he became disenchanted with the organization's direction. Ultimately, its mission failed and the group disbanded, leaving a bad taste in Allred's mouth.

"I felt like they were giving a man a fish instead of teaching him to fish," he said. "That exposed me to what nonprofits were about and what the emphasis should be."

Then Allred, 24, met fellow Utah State student Bushra Zaman.

A native of India's Bihar state, which she described as "very impoverished," Zaman actually reached out to Allred.

For years, she'd been interested in improving education opportunities and opening an orphanage in the region she calls home. Through the university's student service center, she found Allred, who wanted to get back in the nonprofit game but didn't have a specific avenue for his considerable energies.

Despite the vast difference in their backgrounds, Zaman and Allred found common ground. They also found something in the other that they lacked in themselves. Zaman had invaluable contacts in Bihar. Allred knew the world of nonprofit organizations.

"She had an idea in her mind. I had a little more experience with nonprofits, so we kind of combined our visions," Allred said. "Without her contacts, this would be impossible."

Zaman, 33, said she was impressed with Allred's ability to convince investors that contributions to Effect International was money well spent.

"Though he's younger than me, he has a lot of experience with how to talk to people," she said. "That made me confident that he has gained some experience in that South American project."

On Sept. 21, Effect International's first school opened its doors in Sasaram, an area in which Allred said "the public schools are not very effective." Within a week, Allred said, about 40 children enrolled. That number has been increasing, and Allred expects the school will soon reach its capacity of 150.

The school's curriculum reaches no higher than fifth grade, but Allred said some students are as old as 14. In the Sasaram area, he said, education for girls is especially undervalued.

"We found many 13- (and) 14-year-old girls whose families thought they were better off working," Allred said. "The men and the elders just don't see the value of women having education."

Now, Effect International is working to install a second, similar school in Nepal, Allred said. But the time demands of running a nonprofit are beginning to clash with his school schedule and the arduous process of applying for medical school. Allred said he's looking for someone to help lighten his load at Effect International.

"I have to take a back seat, or I will fail med school," he said.

Swiss celebrate digging world's longest tunnel

By Frank Jordans
Associated Press writer

SEDRUN, Switzerland — Workers hugged, cheered and set off fireworks as the huge drill broke through the last stretch of rock deep in the Swiss Alps. There was delight at the end of the tunnel — the world's longest — when it was completed Friday.

The $10 billion, 35.4-mile tube will connect Europe's high-speed rail network and is part of a larger effort to cut in half the number of trucks — now at 1.2 million — that thunder through the Alps each year.

The joy and pride felt throughout Switzerland over digging the Gotthard Base Tunnel reflected the one cause that unites the country's wealthy city dwellers with those living in traditional villages: Protecting the beauty of the mountains.

"Together we risked a lot," said Swiss Transport Minister Moritz Leuenberger. "Together we achieved a lot."

TV stations across Europe showed the event live. The embraces and cheers by the hard-hatted workers brought to mind the successful rescue of 33 trapped miners earlier this week in Chile.

Swiss voters approved the tunnel's construction in a series of referendums almost 20 years ago. Despite some criticism at the cost — almost $1,300 for every citizen — the proposal passed by a wide margin.

Leuenberger, who is also in charge of environment issues, praised Swiss voters and took a swipe at neighboring Germany, where popular opposition threatens to halt the construction of new high-speed rail links and underground train stations.

"Today proves how sustainable, strong and efficient our direct democracy is," he told miners, VIPs and reporters amid the raucous underground celebrations.

His words were echoed by one of the 2,500 workers who toiled for more than a decade. Dieter Meyer, an electrician from Germany, expressed his awe that Switzerland — a country of just under 8 million people — had chosen to pursue such an ambitious project.

Meyer said Germans should reconsider their opposition to new rail projects if they are serious about protecting the environment and halting climate change.

"This tunnel is the future," he told The Associated Press. "In Germany, the people in Stuttgart should really think about whether they want to protest against the new project."

Protesters in the southwest German city oppose plans to move Stuttgart's station underground, viewing the $5.7 billion project as a waste of money. Supporters say it will free up the city's packed center and help shorten journeys across Europe.

Peter Fueglistaler, director of the Swiss Federal Office of Transport, insisted Friday that "our neighbors in Germany and Italy will have to fulfill their promise and provide high-speed rail links" that are meant to link the Dutch port of Rotterdam to its Mediterranean counterpart Genoa in Italy.

Already Switzerland transports some 62 percent of freight by rail — far more than any of its neighbors.

Mindful that heavy goods traffic has contributed to the steady erosion harming fragile Alpine plants and animals — as well as cherished scenery — Switzerland has been tunneling through the Alps for decades.

The Gotthard Base Tunnel — first conceived in 1947 by engineer Eduard Gruner — beats Japan's Seikan Tunnel, which is 33.5 miles.

Other tunnels, including the recently completed 21.5-mile Loetschberg Base Tunnel, complete an underground network that few other countries can rival.

"I hope that this tunnel will have lots of brothers in the Alps," Leuenberger said.

His European colleagues, watching the ceremony live at a meeting in Luxembourg, will have recognized the reference to other projects in France, Italy and Austria still many years from completion.

Switzerland's dependence on its neighbors to play their part in the plan for a cross-European high-speed rail network was mirrored Friday in the many different flags waved by workers in the newly carved hole under the mountains.

Read the Classifieds Every Day

Today is Saturday, Oct. 16th, the 289th day of 2010. There are 76 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 16, 1859, radical abolitionist John Brown led a group of 21 men in a raid on Harpers Ferry in western Virginia. (Ten of Brown's men were killed and five escaped. Brown and six followers ended up being captured; all were executed.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1793, during the French Revolution, Marie Antoinette, the queen of France, was beheaded.
In 1901, Booker T. Washington dined at the White House as the guest of President Theodore Roosevelt, whose invitation to the black educator sparked controversy.
In 1916, Margaret Sanger opened the first birth control clinic, in Brooklyn, N.Y. (The clinic ended up being raided by police and Sanger was arrested.)
In 1939, the comedy "The Man Who Came to Dinner," by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, opened on Broadway.
In 1962, the Cuban missile crisis began as President John F. Kennedy was informed that reconnaissance photographs had revealed the presence of missile bases in Cuba.
In 1968, American athletes Tommie Smith and John Carlos sparked controversy at the Mexico City Olympics by giving "black power" salutes during a victory ceremony after they'd won gold and bronze medals in the 200-meter race.
In 1969, the New York Mets capped their miracle season by winning the World Series, defeating the Baltimore Orioles, 5-3, in Game 5 played at Shea Stadium.
In 1978, the College of Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church chose Cardinal Karol Wojtyla to be the new pope; he took the name John Paul II.
In 1987, a 58-1/2-hour drama in Midland, Texas, ended happily as rescuers freed Jessica McClure, an 18-month-old girl trapped in an abandoned well.
In 1995, a vast throng of black men gathered in Washington D.C. for the "Million Man March" led by Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.
Ten years ago: President Bill Clinton launched a fresh effort to try to cool Middle East tensions at an emergency summit in Egypt that included Israeli and Palestinian leaders, as well as the leaders of Egypt and Jordan and U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan. Missouri Gov. Mel Carnahan and his son were killed in a plane crash south of St. Louis while en route to a rally for Carnahan's U.S. Senate campaign. The New York Mets beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-0 to win the National League championship series, four games to one.
Five years ago: Polish television broadcast a recorded interview with Pope Benedict XVI, who said that he planned to visit Poland, the homeland of his predecessor, John Paul II (it's believed to be the first TV interview with a pope). The Chicago White Sox beat the Los Angeles Angels 6-3 to win the American League Championship Series in five games, their first pennant since 1959. Elmer "Len" Dresslar Jr., the booming voice of the Jolly Green Giant, died at age 80.
One year ago: The government reported that the federal budget deficit for the just-ended fiscal year totaled an all-time high of $1.42 trillion. Pigs in Minnesota tested positive for the H1N1 virus, the first U.S. cases in swine.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 12-year-old girl with a big problem. My class recently learned about reproduction. All of the girls accepted it in a mature manner, but it's another story with the boys. Now all the boys look at me funny when I walk through the hall. It makes me feel awkward. Should I ignore them or should I say something?

— EMBARRASSED IN MICHIGAN

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Right now, I suspect most of your classmates are feeling awkward. A frank discussion about reproduction has been known to make students older than you uncomfortable. It is, however, a part of life — and contrary to what some may think, ignorance isn't bliss.

Acting the way the boys are is normal for their age. But if it continues, rather than saying anything to them — which might encourage more of the same — talk to a teacher about it.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Shortly before I started college, a relative introduced me to "Paul," who would be attending the same school, and told us we were distant cousins. Paul and I became friends. We socialized together often and all our friends knew us as cousins.

It wasn't until after graduation that our parents told us that while we have a relative in common, it is by marriage, and we are not related to each other. Paul and I have a lot in common, and he has expressed an interest in pursuing a relationship with me.

Paul is a great guy, but I'm reluctant to date him because all our friends think we're related. It almost feels like we are doing something wrong. Can you please share your opinion on this situation?

— IT'S ALL RELATIVE

DEAR ALL RELATIVE: There is nothing to stop you and Paul from becoming romantically involved if you're both leaning in that direction. The way to deal with it would be to tell your friends, before you start being seen together, how "amusing" it is that you were led to believe the two of you were related, when it turns out that you AREN'T. It was all a big mistake. (Ha-ha.)

That should quell most of the gossip you're concerned about. And if you're asked directly, repeat what you told me.
