T.F. council unanimously approves no-sort recycling program

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

After city staff more than halved the original cost of a proposed recycling program, the Twin Falls City Council made the incentive-based program even more palatable: It voted unanimously to eat the entire increase.

Twin Falls house- and duplex-dwellers will see no increase to their city sanitation bill as a result of the no-sort recycling program, which adds plastics to acceptable materials and allows participants to earn coupons and gift cards. The proposal going into Monday's meeting had the program's cost at 61 cents per household.

The city will face a cost increase as a result, however: an estimated $98,000 will need to come from the sanitation department's reserve fund. City staff said the department's $800,000 reserve is more than it needs, leading the councilmen to not fret over absorbing the cost.

Idaho won't manage wolves

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — After talks with the federal government over a public wolf hunt collapsed, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter ordered Idaho wildlife managers Monday to relinquish their duty to arrest poachers or to even investigate when wolves are killed illegally.

Otter rejected the wolf management Idaho has conducted for years as the federal government's "designated agent" after a federal judge in Montana returned wolves to Endangered Species Act protections earlier this year.

This means Idaho Department of Fish and Game managers will no longer perform statewide monitoring for wolves, conduct investigations into illegal killings, provide law enforcement when wolves are poached or participate in a program that responds to livestock depredations.

With U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy's ruling in August, Idaho and Montana have had to cancel public hunts. That's especially irked Otter, who contends the first legal harvest that started in 2009 and ended earlier this year demonstrated that states could manage wolves responsibly.

In an angry letter to U.S. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar, the Republican governor said withdrawing from wolf management will keep Idaho hunters and their money from subsidizing the federal program. Without the possibility of a hunt, there's no incentive for Idaho to manage wolves now, Otter aides said.

"Frustration, mostly," Otter told reporters late Monday, on what led to his decision. "We're no longer going to spend any sportsmen's dollars in Idaho to enforce the Endangered Species Act as it relates to the experimental project of wolves."

Otter also accused the federal government of foisting wolves upon Idaho — he calls them "your wolves" — and promised to quickly submit plans asking for special permission to kill dozens of wolves to protect big game herds.

A spokeswoman for Salazar said the Interior Department would continue to work with states but the court ruling in August restoring protections left its options limited.

"We cannot currently authorize the resumption of sport hunting of wolves," said Kendra Barkoff.

It's unclear just how Idaho wolves will be managed now. Between 1995 and 2005, the Nez Perce Tribe in north-central Idaho managed the predators, before the state stepped in. But the tribe said Otter didn't approach them before pulling out.

"We just hope the state will come back to the table," said Brooklyn Baptiste, vice chairman for the Nez Perce Tribe. "Ultimatums are really hard to take back, especially in an atmosphere of re-election."

Keith Allred, Otter's Democratic rival in the Nov. 2 gubernatorial race, said the governor was handing over an issue to the federal government that rightfully belongs in Idaho's hands. "Butch Otter just gave away more state power to the federal government," said Allred. "We need to be asserting our sovereignty, not giving it away."

Buhl firefighters Andrew Stevens, left, and Paul Madalena work together Monday morning to clean hoses that were used to fight a haystack fire over the weekend. firefighters work full-time jobs and give hours of their time on a weekly basis, usually for a small stipend.

Recruiting and retaining volunteers can be a challenge in Idaho's rural areas, something the federal government hopes a grant of $1.18 million to the Idaho Volunteer Fire & Emergency Services Association will help with. The federal assistance is provided through the Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response (SAFER) grant program administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the U.S. Fire Administration.

IVFESA President Kevin Courtney said the grant will help recruitment efforts through new advertising and training for fire service leaders. IVFESA represents about 5,500 volunteer firefighters and emergency medical technicians across Idaho and offers its members education and training workshops.

"First response to emergencies is a necessary and proper role of government, and our volunteer firefighters do outstanding work," Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter said in a

Idaho's top man in education challenged for second term

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

A longtime educator is challenging Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's bid for a second term of office.

Stan Olson, who retired earlier this year as superintendent of Boise School District, is running for a four-year term on the Democratic ticket against Luna, a Republican. The superintendent of public instruction oversees the State Department of Education, which among other things handles the statewide testing system for public schools, technical assistance to schools and finance, including distributing the state's public schools appropriation to local districts. The superintendent also sits on the five-member state land board.

It's Olson's first run for public office. But he has a nearly 40-year career in public education on his resume, and has worked as a teacher, adjunct professor and superintendent in a career spanning Michigan, Wyoming and Idaho.

The candidates are running at a time when Idaho's public schools budget is hurting. Schools sustained a 75 percent state funding cut this year, which amounted to $128.5 million statewide.

"We really need to say: What is it going to take to stabilize school districts for the coming year and get the focus not on day-to-day survival but on developing a plan that will define what the state constitution calls a thorough and uniform system of public education," Olson, 61, said in an interview with the Times-News.

Luna has a plan that outlines goals for education, one that led to the formation of a group called the Education Alliance of Idaho aimed at representing stakeholders in the education community.

Woman cited in crash that blocked highway

Times-News

A Jerome woman was cited Monday for failing to yield to oncoming traffic after she struck another vehicle on U.S. Highway 93, according to police.

An Idaho State Police press release states that officers came across the scene of the injury crash at 4:52 p.m. at milepost 51, near Golf Course Road. Louis Lopez-Ceja, 19, of Orem, Utah, was headed south in a 1999 Volkswagen Jetta when Melanie Roberts, 48, tried to turn left onto Golf Course Road in a 2003 Chevrolet S10 pickup truck.

Lopez-Ceja's lane was ending as he neared a construction zone on the highway, and he struck Robert's pickup on the passenger side, according to ISP. The pickup overturned into the southbound lanes, and Roberts was trapped inside for about 30 minutes until emergency crews got her out. She was taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with non-life-threatening injuries.

The crash blocked southbound traffic for about 15 minutes, and traffic was restricted to one lane for about 1 hour and 20 minutes. Alcohol was not believed to be a factor, ISP states. Roberts was cited, but the crash is still under investigation.

Paul ordinance not passed

A story about a recent Paul City Council meeting that ran in Saturday's Times-News included incorrect information about council action on an ordinance to change the city's newspaper of record.

The ordinance was introduced and went through a first public reading, said Kent Fletcher, city attorney.

The Times-News regrets the error.

Judge likely to deny gov't on gay troops order

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A federal judge said on Monday that she is learning toward denying a government request to delay her order halting the military from enforcing its ban on openly gay troops.

U.S. District Judge Virginia Phillips said she would review the arguments from Justice Department lawyers and issue a ruling as early as Monday, or by Tuesday.

"My tentative ruling is to deny the application for a stay," Phillips said at the start of the hearing.

Phillips said the government has not proven that her order would harm troops or in any way impede efforts to implement new regulations for the military to deal with openly gay service members.

If she rejects the request, Justice Department officials say the Obama administration would appeal. Experts say they will likely find friendlier venues in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit in San Francisco and, ultimately, the U.S. Supreme Court.

"The farther the decision gets from the presentation of evidence in the trial court, the more likely it is that courts will assume the military must have some critically important interest at stake," said Diane Mazur, a law professor who opposes the policy.

The military has promised to abide by the injunction against the "don't ask, don't tell" policy as long as her order remained in place.

Government attorneys had asked Phillips to suspend her order while they appealed, saying that forcing an abrupt change of policy could damage troop morale as they fought two wars.

The judge declared the policy unconstitutional on Sept. 9, saying it violated due process rights, freedom of speech and the right to petition the government for redress of grievances guaranteed by the First Amendment.

Phillips said the policy doesn't help military readiness and instead has a "direct and deleterious effect" on the armed services by hurting recruiting and requiring the discharge of service members with critical skills and training.

2 workers killed in Tennessee post office shooting

HENNING, Tenn. (AP) — Two gunmen opened fire Monday at a post office in a rural West Tennessee town that was home to "Roots" author Alex Haley, killing two workers perhaps as part of an attempted robbery.

The shooting happened at the one-story, brick building in Henning, that is a hub of activity in the small town. Authorities were looking for a vehicle but Lauderdale County District Attorney Mike Dunavant would not elaborate except to say the case involved "disturbing violence."

No arrests were made, and postal officials pleaded with the public to come forward with information about the crime.

The victims were identified as Judy Spray, 58, a rural carrier associate, and Paula Robinson, 33, a retail clerk.

The post office, which sits between a self-service car wash and a coin-operated laundry called "Mom's" in this western Tennessee town of about 1,200 people, often has residents coming in to pick up their mail. Home delivery isn't provided in Henning, some 45 miles northeast of Memphis.

over a number of years," Councilman David E. Johnson said. "You paid it, I paid it, let's get it back."

Several of the councilmen said they think the program will grow into its cost, and if the community recycles more than 60 pounds per household a month — the basis of the 61-cent increase — the cost to the city goes down.

Before the vote, most of the councilmen said they didn't plan to approve the plan if it raised costs too high, but having enough reserves to eat the cost earned their vote.

The public hearing portion took a remarkably different tone compared to last week's — when all four peo-

THE NEW PROGRAM

- New cost to residents: $0; $98,000 cost to the city for 1 year.
- A 95-gallon, no-sort recycling bin will be available to all single-family homes and duplexes in the city.
- Plastic will be added to metals, paper and cardboard as recyclable materials.
- Participants can earn an estimated $7.50 to $10 a month in coupons and gift cards through RecycleBank. For more information on the incentives, go to recyclebank.com ple who testified opposed any fee increase, even if it increased the materials allowed and the amount of recycling in Twin Falls.

At Monday's hearing, almost all of the dozen-plus residents who testified supported the measure even if it meant a fee increase. Some said they'd save the 61 cents just by not needing to drive to the recycling plant to drop off their recyclables.

Flo Ostrander, dressed in medical scrubs, said the program would be worth it because it makes it easier for working people to recycle. Marty Hoffman, another speaker from the public, said it presented an opportunity to set an example for the rest of the state.

"I'd like to challenge the people of this great city, of this great state to set an example of being one of the leaders in recycling here in our great nation," Hoffman said.

No official date has been set when the program will start.

In an unrelated change, residents will still see their utility bill rise by 3.5 percent — an expected average of $1.40 per residential customer — as the city moves to cover an estimated shortfall in its sewer fund. The shortfall is due to a major industrial user shutting down a production line, according to city documents.

written release announcing the grant. "Fire departments have been hit hard by tough economic times and budget cuts and we need to ensure they are adequately staffed and equipped to respond to emergencies. This funding will help local fire departments recruit more volunteer firefighters and improve their emergency response capabilities so they can continue to protect Idaho's citizens 24/7."

Rupert City Fire Chief Roger Davis said the grant is a step in the right direction. Volunteer firefighters get as much education as career firefighters, he said, adding that he tells his team that they are very needed to get the job done.

"There is a lot of will behind volunteer firefighters," said Davis, who works with 24 volunteers. "If you get them what they want as far as training, it inspires them to come back."

Korsen said his department couldn't operate without volunteers. And while a little more advertising for new volunteers would be nice, he said, current volunteers continue to return because of their commitment and due to flexibility granted by their employers.

"They come back because of their love for the community and it's fun," Korsen said. "You have to have love of community because it's not for love of a paycheck."

Education

Olson says the plan has nice goals but falls short of charting a path that shows educators how those goals will be accomplished.

"It's the absence of a known and practiced plan where the work is identified and people know their roles and responsibilities," Olson said. "It's just not there."

In contrast, Olson pointed to a strategic plan that Boise School District developed under his watch, which involved a 100-plus member steering committee, public meetings and a thorough look at all areas of operation.

Creating transparency is key, Olson said, along with establishing priorities and clearly identifying who is responsible for reaching them.

Luna, 51, spent much of his career running a weights and measures business. But he also had a background in education before his 2006 election. He was a school board member for Nampa School District and has led state commissions that have worked on test and achievement standards.

He was also a senior adviser to the U.S. secretary of education under the Bush administration from 2003 to 2005.

Luna said his record shows that he's willing to look for ways to aid the public schools budget, noting that he helped secure $22 million of additional funding through the land board.

"If we want to keep per-pupil spending equal to what it is today, we'll need an extra $60 million," Luna said, adding that preserving student-teacher contact time is crucial.

He said his business background is suitable for tasks like looking at funding formulas in the department and analyzing them for efficiency.

"I'm going to continue to do what I've done in the past, which is turn over every rock and shake every tree to find those necessary funds," Luna said.

Luna said he's made efforts to get stakeholders involved in discussions about the public schools budget. In the long term, he said he'd like to see school districts continue to have more flexibility with the state dollars they receive, even when times get better.

When the schools budget was slashed, legislators allowed districts more leeway in how they spent the remaining dollars.

"A silver lining that hopefully comes from this is added flexibility," Luna said.

Olson has several degrees, including a doctorate in educational leadership from Western Michigan University, a master's in education and a specialist in arts in public school administration both from Eastern Michigan University, and a bachelor's in education from Central Michigan University.

Luna has a bachelor's with a concentration in measurement science from Thomas Edison State College in New Jersey. He also took courses at Boise State University and Ricks College in Rexburg, now Brigham Young University-Idaho.

Idaho's last laureate

In the 1920s, an Oregon schoolteacher named Studie Stuart met an Idahoan named Everett Hager, married him and moved to Kimberly.

But she'd already started writing poetry.

Studie Hager had a slim volume of her work, "Earthbound," published by a Texas bookseller in 1947. Two years later, the Idaho governor — C.A. Robins — named her the second poet laureate of Idaho.

Didn't know we had one, did you?

Idaho doesn't anymore. Studie Hager broke the mold.

After Hager died in 1982, Gov. John Evans convened an advisory committee to choose her successor. Instead, it recommended that Idaho establish a Writer in Residence Program, paying an author $10,000 for a three-year term and requiring him or her to read works in 12 Idaho communities.

Hager wasn't paid to be poet laureate, but she had a remarkable, 33-year run — far longer than any other laureate/writer in residence.

Born in rural Grant County, Okla., Hager grew up in Binger (population 800), 45 miles west of Oklahoma City, and earned a scholarship to Oregon Normal College (now Western Oregon University.) She later transferred to the University of Oregon, where she earned a teaching certificate and went to work for five years in the Oregon public schools.

After marrying Hager, Studie taught for another decade at Kimberly School.

Her poetry — published both in "Earthbound" and in "Beauty Will Abide," released in 1970 — mostly

*Poets say that love in April bloom,
And petal-showered lovers feel the same;
I thought so, too, in spring but now I know
Love is the autumn leaf's breathtaking flame.*

October Finale

*Autumn still retains her charm
As she walks the stage;
But blood-red paint cannot, for long,

The Prodigal

*October, reckless heir to autumn wealth,
Spends lavishly. Our dazzled eyes behold
His palace roof of sap-phire, gold-leaf floors.
Rich draperies of bronze and flame. He pours
A mellowed heady wine and drinks to madness;
He showers coins with riotous autumn gladness.
Then, one bleak day, we wake to find October
Sans raiment, gold, sans everything — and sober;
His gay mood changed to deepest melancholy,
But, oh, the world is richer for his folly.*

SIRCOMM gets $512K grant

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

JEROME — The valley's largest dispatch center just got a chunk of money from the state and the feds.

The Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center received a $512,000 Public Safety Interoperable Communications grant to use toward upgrading its equipment to meet a federal narrowbanding mandate for radio frequencies. Members of the center's Joint Powers Board announced the news at their monthly meeting Monday in Jerome.

"We've worked three years to get that grant," said board Chairman and Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell.

The Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security awarded the funds. With the additional money,

"We've worked three years to get that grant."

— board Chairman and Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell

SIRCOMM can obtain 90 percent of the equipment needed to meet the 2013 mandate.

In other SIRCOMM business:
• Officials announced that money to build a new dispatch terminal to act as a backup for the city of Twin Falls will be released on Nov. 1. Earlier this month, SIRCOMM received a $36,000 grant from the Idaho Emergency Communications Commission to help fund this project.

• Gerlyn "Sam" Walker, chief deputy of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, has resigned her position on a SIRCOMM strategic planning committee — formed from representatives from law enforcement, medical responders and firefighters to represent their needs as members of the dispatch center. Walker chaired the committee. The board will replace the position, and Mikesell asked board members to gauge interest in emergency agencies in their counties.

• More equipment is slated to arrive next week as SIRCOMM continues to replace components of its Hagerman tower, damaged by the Long Butte Fire in August. It was announced earlier this month that the agency's insurance carrier would award $87,000 for repairs.

The next board meeting is set for Nov. 22.

Planning for CSI fine arts addition moves forward

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho Board of Trustees on Monday unanimously approved changes to the design of the planned addition to the Fine Arts Building.

The change shifts the new addition's south entry to the west, making it shorter to travel to the lobby or large theater, according to a memo that Mike Mason, vice president of administration, wrote to trustees.

It also allows the college to use the percussion room and band lab for dressing rooms for performances in the main theater.

The addition is a roughly $2.6 million, 7,500-square-foot project. It will provide more space for band and percussion ensembles and improve the separation of the practice and performance venues. Of the cost, $2 million is coming from an anonymous donor who gave to the CSI Foundation.

CSI officials in August hired Starr Corp. to build the project.

Another change is to the access to the back stage by trucks. Instead of a 26-foot-wide concrete driveway, the plan now calls for a 12- to 14-foot-wide driveway so it's less disruptive for the landscaping.

Mason said the plan is for construction to start in the spring.

In other business, the board:

• Unanimously approved a request to build planned student housing at a spot on six acres east of campus between Fillmore and Lincoln streets. The college initially planned to build at the North View Apartments location along Washington Street North, but college officials later determined the land along that road wasn't best for the project.

• Unanimously approved its fiscal year 2010 audit. The audit was mailed to trustees, who voted on it without any discussion or presentation.

Jackson were honored for the aerial support provided to the department's search and rescue efforts and other missions. Sheriff Doug McFall presented Callen with a plaque as part of the Jerome County Commission meeting. Jackson was unable to attend.

Lt. Robert Hass was presented the Life Saving Acts award for administering CPR to a man who had suffered a heart attack while exercising at the Twin Falls YMCA.

On May 11, Hass, off-duty at the time, kept a 67-year-old man alive with a combination of CPR and use of an automatic external defibrillator until emergency personnel could arrive. The heart-attack victim survived due to Hass' swift action. Capt. Jack Johnson presented the award.

Wolves

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks spokesman Ron Aasheim said his state's approach has not changed, despite Idaho's move.

"We continue to look for ways to get management responsibilities returned to the state of Montana," Aasheim said.

Idaho has about 850 wolves and insists the species is recovered in the northern Rocky Mountains after its reintroduction to the region in the mid-1990s.

Molloy in Missoula restored Endangered Species Act protections following a lawsuit from environmentalists who argued Idaho and Montana wolves could not be under state control while Wyoming wolves remained under federal control.

Douglas Honnold, lead

attorney with Earthjustice who represented the environmental groups, said Otter's decision goes in the wrong direction.

"Instead of throwing up their hands and walking away from the wolf issue, Idaho should be getting to work on a wolf management plan that complies with the law," Honnold said from his offices in Bozeman, Mont.

Otter's advisers had been negotiating with Salazar and other federal officials since September on a plan for Idaho to continue to manage wolves within its borders.

Among other things, Otter wanted to hold a public hunt and insisted on provisions giving state managers more power to kill wolves that prey on elk, moose or deer in areas where the state says big game herds are suffering.

"Today I join many Idahoans in questioning whether there is any benefit to being a designated agent without the flexibility of a public hunt," Otter said, adding he's doubtful continuing as designated agent would speed up the delisting process.

Republican U.S. Sens. Jim Risch and Mike Crapo separately have introduced a bill that aims to exempt wolves in Idaho from federal protections that were restored by Molloy's order.

We can make no predictions about their future. But one thing is certain:

We'll be there.

Poll shows wide enthusiasm gap between GOP, Democrats

By Liz Sidoti
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The enthusiasm gap between Democrats and Republicans in the first midterm elections of President Barack Obama's presidency is no myth — and his party may suffer hugely in two weeks because of it.

Just half of those who voted for Obama in 2008 say they will definitely show up Nov. 2 while two-thirds of those who voted for Republican presidential nominee John McCain in the last election say they're certain to vote next month, according to an Associated Press-Knowledge Networks poll.

The difference in the excitement level between the two parties is buoying Republicans, who are poised for big electoral gains, and worrying Democrats, who are seeking to hang onto majorities in Congress as well among governors. Obama's party hopes its superior get-out-the-vote operation, updated from his groundbreaking campaign, can overcome Republicans' energized supporters to mitigate expected losses across the board.

Nearly two years after putting Obama in the White House, the survey also found that one-quarter of those who voted for the Democrat are defecting to the GOP or considering voting against the party in power in November. Yet in a reflection of broad dissatisfaction with politics, just as many people who backed McCain are either supporting Democrats now or still considering how to vote.

To find out how the electorate's political views have changed since the 2008 election, the AP and Knowledge Networks re-interviewed the same 1,254 people who were part of a random sample of Americans surveyed up to 11 times throughout the 2008 campaign by the two organizations and Yahoo News.

While no president can be expected to fully rally his supporters when he's not on the ballot, the survey illustrates the wide scope of Obama voters' disappointment with the president and his policies almost halfway through his first term — and two years before he's likely to seek their backing again.

"He's not listening to the majority of the people who elected him. It's like he's ignoring his base," said SaraSue Crawford of Jacksonville, Fla., who points to Obama's health care overhaul law. She's deciding whether to support Republicans in the hopes of "shaking up the status quo" and restoring a balance of power in Washington. She says she may back Obama in 2012 — if he changes course by listening more.

Disillusionment with Obama was evident in the survey.

In a reversal from 2008, it found that Obama backers who expected change in Washington — 63 percent — now think nothing ever will happen. Just 36 percent still think Obama can do it, while a majority of McCain supporters now say things can change if the right person is elected.

"I was hoping we'd get some more civility up in government. That was implicit in his promise, along with some change. It turns out that he was driving more toward the changes rather than civility," said Gerry D. Kramer, 70, of Georgetown, Texas. He's among the Obama voters who are likely to vote Republican. Still, he's not hot on the GOP either, or politics.

Sarah Palin greets supporters after a tea party rally in Reno, Nev., Monday. The rally was the first of a 15-day tour put on by the Tea Party Express.

Palin teases Reno crowd about presidential run

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Sarah Palin launched a two-week run of tea party rallies Monday leading up to the election and teased supporters about a possible presidential run for herself, saying "we can see 2012 from our house."

The remark came as the 2008 GOP vice presidential nominee — who has not publicly committed to seeking higher office — kicked off the 15-day Tea Party Express coast-to-coast campaign tour, hoping to capitalize on government discontent and unify conservatives before the Nov. 2 election.

Headlining a rally outside county GOP headquarters, Palin told more than 500 people that common sense is an "endangered species" in Washington, D.C., and they should "keep the faith" as they go to the polls Nov. 2.

The former Alaska governor earlier endorsed Republican Sharron Angle, a tea party-backed candidate locked in a tight race in Nevada against Democratic Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid.

"Tea party Americans, you are winning, you are turning this country's political landscape upside down ... and the left just doesn't know what to do with you," Palin said to cheers.

Angle couldn't attend because the national tea party committee based in California has made independent expenditures on her behalf, and federal laws prohibit coordination between campaigns and independent groups.

Helen resided at West Magic for the last 10 years, where she enjoyed the good life of fishing and retirement, and a great love of reading. Helen was born Aug. 30, 1935, in Neelyville, Mo., to William Lee Berry of Elsinore, Mo., and Elnora Mercedes Queen of Toledo, Ill. Helen was employed with Circle K as a zone manager for a number of years; upon retirement from this position, she went back to work as a store manager for Oasis Stop and Go, her last position.

Geraldine I. Blair

Geraldine I. Blair, 89, passed away Tuesday, Oct. 12, 2010, at Bridgeview Estates in Twin Falls following a short illness.

Foods. Geri possessed a deep love of nature and also enjoyed ceramics, painting and sewing, making many of her own clothes. Just prior to their deaths, Geri and her husband, Jack, had been attending the Hollister Presbyterian church.

Geri is survived by her son, Stanley of Denver, Colo.; daughter, Pamela Dyer of Twin Falls; two step-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews. Proceeding Geri in death were her parents, Henry and Mary; her stepfather, Lester; and her husband of 62 years, Jack.

While growing up in Oklahoma, Geri walked five miles each school day to the local country schoolhouse and worked on her stepfather, Lester's, farm. Like many women of her generation, Geri worked in a defense plant during the Second World War, helping to assemble B-17s. She was a real "Rosie the riveter." While working on B-17s, Geri met her future husband at a USO dance. On Sept. 4, 1947, Geri married Jack L. Blair. Their home was blessed with the arrival of two children, Stanley and Pamela.

Mostly Geri was a homemaker but when times were tough, she worked outside the home doing gift wrapping at Macy's and working on the processing line at Stokely VanKamp Frozen

Idaho tourism creeps back up after two-year slump

BOISE (AP) — Idaho tourism officials say revenue generated during the summer of 2010 shows the industry is rebounding after a two-year slump blamed on the economic downturn.

Tourism related revenue increased nearly nine percent during the 2010 summer months of June, July and August compared to the same three-month period a year ago, according to the Idaho Division of Tourism.

"We are definitely rebounding," Karen Ballard, administrator of the Idaho Division of Tourism, told the Idaho Business Review.

"We're going to be the first industry out of the recession that shows signs of life."

Like many industries, tourism activity and revenue declined the last two years as people cut back spending on vacation travel, hotels and amusement activities.

The agency reports revenue and tourism taxes dropped 12 percent from 2008 to 2009.

In Idaho's economy, tourism accounts for an estimated 5 percent of the state's gross state product, according to the Idaho Tax Commission. The state saw record-high tourism receipts of $406.7 million in 2008, but those totals fell to $358 million in 2009.

For business owners who rely on tourism dollars, the decline meant fewer hotel reservations, a drop in apparel sales and fewer people and families dining out.

"We saw a decrease in people buying logo wear, in clothing, things like that," said Tom Chasse, the president and chief executive officer at Schweitzer Mountain Resort in northern Idaho. "People opted out of things."

But Chasse said sales increased this summer, and the resort had its busiest weekend ever at its annual fall festival in September.

Ballard says the rebound is probably tied to Idaho residents and those in neighboring states who are still dealing with the recession opting for smaller scale vacations.

"Vacation is still important and they're just taking a more reasonable one," she said. "Instead of going to Europe, they're going to Yellowstone, and instead of Disneyland they're going to Silverwood," a theme park 15 miles north of Coeur d'Alene.

Candidate offers reward for info on 'hoax' mailers

MOSCOW (AP) — State senate candidate Gresham Bouma denies sending out religious-leaning mailers in Latah County that appeared to carry his endorsement and urged voters to become true believers or be "struck down."

Bouma's campaign is offering a $1,000 reward for information on the fliers, which told voters: "You are not a true Christian and you are on the path to hell!"

The postcard-sized mailers included a picture of Bouma and his wife.

"Those who oppose my candidacy are desperately trying to drown out my message with innuendo, lies and personal attacks," Bouma, a Republican who beat nine-term GOP senator Gary Schroeder in the primary and faces Democrat Dan Schmidt in November, said in a written statement.

Bouma's campaign office fielded about 40 calls over the weekend about the mailers. Campaign staffers went door-to-door in Moscow to ensure voters Bouma did not send the literature.

The Latah County prosecutor's office is also investigating the mailer, which said a vote for Bouma was not enough and urged voters to join Freeze Community Church, which Bouma's family attends.

Pastor Lloyd Knerr says his church has never prayed to "strike down" anyone.

"It would be laughable if it wasn't so ugly," Knerr told the Moscow-Pullman Daily News.

Bouma's wife, Wendy, apologized to the congregation for any trouble the mailer may have caused at a Sunday service.

The mailer includes a return address of a group called "Friends of Bouma" with his campaign address in Troy. The group doesn't exist, campaign manager Paula Bauer said.

The campaign contacted the Latah County sheriff's office, which forwarded the complaint to the county prosecutor's office. Prosecutor Bill Thompson said he anticipates contacting the Idaho secretary of state's office over the matter.

AROUND THE STATE

Deputies find hospital CEO dead after crash

MOSCOW — The Latah County Sheriff's office says Gritman Medical Center CEO Jeffrey Martin died in a pickup crash near State Highway 8 in northern Idaho.

The sheriff's office says Martin, who is 47, was expected to return from Elk River to his home in Moscow at about 11 p.m. on Sunday. His family called police when he did not arrive.

The Idaho State Police say Martin was westbound when his pickup went off the road for an unknown reason, climbed an embankment and landed in the trees. The vehicle landed on its side and Martin was ejected.

Police: Driver hit speeds of 110 mph

BOISE — State police say a driver speeding at 110 mph on Interstate 84 in southwestern Idaho has been arrested and faces a charge of driving under the influence.

Police says 44-year-old Thomas Lott, of Spokane, Wash., was pulled over in the 75 mph speed zone at about 1:30 a.m. Monday and taken into custody.

Lott also faces charges of obstructing an officer and driving with a suspended license.

Police search for man wanted on warrant

BOISE — State police say a 23-year-old eastern Idaho man eluded officers during an arrest on a felony warrant and escaped wearing pajama bottoms.

Police say Lukas Mika Ockerman is wanted on a criminal threat charge in Weaverville, Calif. He was last seen running from his Pocatello home after police tried to arrest him Friday.

Police say Ockerman was dressed in a green T-shirt and blue pajama bottoms.

Toddler kicked to death by horse

BOISE — Ada County officials say a 19-month-old girl from Grand View has died of injuries suffered when she was kicked by a horse over the weekend.

Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg says Danielle L. Hall died at St. Luke's Boise Medical Center Saturday night. She was kicked by the horse earlier that day in Bruneau.

The coroner's report says the girl's death was an accident.

Idaho to collect $1.65M in settlement

BOISE — The Idaho attorney general's office has announced a $1.65 million settlement with a generic drug maker over pricing, but nearly 70 percent of the money goes to the federal government.

Idaho Medicaid primarily uses the "average wholesale prices" of drugs as reported by drug manufacturers to set reimbursement rates for pharmacies.

Attorney General Lawrence Wasden says in 2003, Sandoz reported its generic version of Prozac sold for an average wholesale price of nearly $2.60 a pill. Wasden found the price was actually less than 22 cents a pill.

Sandoz admits no wrongdoing in reaching the settlement, which must be approved by the Fourth District Court in Ada County. Sandoz is the generics pharmaceutical division of Novartis.

Attorney General spokesman Bob Cooper tells the Idaho Statesman that Idaho will keep about $500,000 of the settlement.

Boise man denies HIV charge

BOISE — A 31-year-old Boise man who has the virus that causes AIDS has pleaded not guilty to a charge of knowingly attempting to transfer bodily fluids infected with Human Immunodeficiency Virus.

The Idaho Statesman reports Michael Everhart entered his plea Friday. His trial is set for Jan. 10 before 4th District Judge Pat Owen.

Ada County Sheriff's investigators say Everhart told them in September he had unprotected sex with as many as 20 men and one woman he met online since he was diagnosed in October 2009. He did not tell them he had HIV.

Detectives have identified four men and one woman with whom Everhart had unprotected sex. All have been advised to get tested for HIV. Investigators are still trying to identify other victims.

Crystal Cathedral church files for bankruptcy

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — Crystal Cathedral, the megachurch birthplace of the televangelist show "Hour of Power," filed for bankruptcy Monday in Southern California after struggling to emerge from debt that exceeds $43 million.

In addition to a $36 million mortgage, the Orange County-based church owes $7.5 million to several hundred vendors for services ranging from advertising to the use of live animals in Easter and Christmas services.

The church had been negotiating a repayment plan with vendors, but several filed lawsuits seeking quicker payment, which prompted a coalition formed by creditors to fall apart, church officials said.

"Tough times never last, every storm comes to an end. Right now, people need to hear that message more than ever," Sheila Schuller Coleman, the Cathedral's senior pastor and daughter of the founder, told reporters outside the worship hall.

"Everybody is hurting today. We are no exception," she said.

The church, founded in the mid-1950s by the Rev. Robert H. Schuller Sr., has already ordered major layoffs, cut the number of stations airing the "Hour of Power" and sold property to stay afloat. In addition, the 10,000-member church canceled this year's "Glory of Easter" pageant, which attracts thousands of visitors and is a regional holiday staple.

Will Little be Idaho's next governor?

If Brad Little is elected to his first full term as lieutenant governor on Nov. 2, you're probably looking at the next Republican governor of Idaho.

For whatever happens in this year's gubernatorial matchup between Republican Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, Democrat Keith Allred and three other candidates, Otter will be 72 years old on Election Day 2014. Unless GOP Sen. Mike Crapo or Congressman Mike Simpson change their minds about wanting to become governor — which seems unlikely — Little would have the inside track over a half dozen Republican legislators with aspirations to higher office.

That's just fine with us, and one reason why we're endorsing him for election as lieutenant governor.

Little, who spent eight years in the state Senate, was appointed by Otter in 2009 to succeed Jim Risch, who was elected to the U.S. Senate. He's fiscally conservative, but a social moderate — and a courageous one. In 2004, Little teamed with fellow Republican Sens. Sheila Sorensen and Joe Stegner to block a proposed gay-bashing amendment to the state Constitution.

In his 20 months as lieutenant governor, he's been Otter's go-to guy on a number of issues — notably highways. Little chairs the Governor's Task Force on Modernizing Transportation Funding, the committee assigned to figure out how to fill Idaho's backlog of road repairs.

The lieutenant governor is loyal to Otter's agenda, but he's not the same politician. Little is more analytical and more likely to give a serious hearing to opinions with which he doesn't agree. In that respect, he reminds us of former Gov. Phil Batt.

The 50-cent term for that is consensus-building, and it harkens back to the era when Little's father, David, served in the Senate in the 1970s. That was the golden age of coalitions, with Republican legislators and Democratic governors working together to reform and adequately fund education, institute land-use planning and open up the governing process to the public.

Had Little been governor in 2009, it's hard to imagine the impasse with the Legislature over highway funding dragging out for 115 days. Nor would he have been likely — as Otter did last winter — to propose zeroing-out appropriations for eight state agencies without having a plan for what would happen to their services.

Brad Little is one of the solid citizens of Idaho politics, respected across the political spectrum for his honesty and his willingness to concede that he doesn't have all the answers.

That's refreshing to see in a politician, don't you think?

Five myths about Sarah Palin

Sarah Palin is a complex woman who has risen in no time from obscurity to the stratosphere of American politics, fusing celebrity and populism in novel ways. Now that she's laying the foundation for a possible presidential run in 2012, it's worth taking a moment to separate the fact about Palin from the fable.

Matthew Continetti

1. Palin cost McCain the 2008 election.

She didn't. CNN's 2008 national exit poll, for example, asked voters whether Palin was a factor when they stepped into the voting booth. Those who said yes broke for McCain 56 percent to 43 percent.

Yes, it's possible that Palin's conservatism and uneven performance on the campaign trail shifted some voters to Obama's column. But even if Obama picked up some anti-Palin votes, he surely didn't need them: The economy was in recession, Wall Street was in meltdown, and the incumbent Republican president was incredibly unpopular.

2. Resigning as governor was rash.

No one expected Palin's resignation on July 3, 2009, just 2 1/2 years into her term. Her hastily composed and clumsily delivered farewell address left many observers confused about her motives. Some of her critics were only too eager to fill in the gaps with conjecture and hearsay. If there was one thing everybody knew for sure, it was that Palin's career in politics was over. But none of the rumored scandals ever broke. The Palins remain married. And as for Sarah Palin's career, it's taken off.

When Palin returned to Alaska after the 2008 campaign, she confronted three problems. The political coalition on which she had based her governorship — a combination of Democrats and renegade Republicans — had collapsed. Her critics were using Alaska's tough ethics laws to launch investigations into her behavior, sapping her finances and her energy. Finally, every time she traveled to the Lower 48, Alaskans criticized her for putting her political interests above the state's.

"The reality, right now, is that Palin and the Tea Party are saving the GOP by dragging it back to its roots and mobilizing conservative voters."

Palin's solution was to resign. Her agenda stood a better chance of passing if then-Lt. Gov. Sean Parnell, who shared Palin's goals, succeeded her as governor. As a private citizen, meanwhile, Palin could make enough money to pay her legal bills. And she would no longer be accused of neglecting her official duties.

3. Palin and the Tea Party are destroying the GOP.

You've heard the spiel: The Republican Party is in the midst of a civil war between moderate incumbents and far-right challengers backed by Palin and the tea party. Driving Charlie Crist from the GOP and defeating establishment figures such as Robert Bennett, Lisa Murkowski and Mike Castle spells electoral doom for the party. The only chance Republicans have for long-term success is to move to the center in a bid to win over millennials and Latinos.

But demographics aren't destiny, and no one knows what the future holds. The reality, right now, is that Palin and the Tea Party are saving the GOP by dragging it back to its roots and mobilizing conservative voters.

In the wake of Obama's historic victory, she and countless other grass-roots activists could have abandoned the GOP and turned the Tea Party into a conservative third party. They didn't. They decided instead to refashion the Republican Party from the ground up, pressuring it to live up to its limited-government ideals. Now, two years after Obama's win, Republicans are poised to reap major gains in the midterm elections.

4. Palin is extreme.

On many of the most important issues of the day, Palin holds positions that are squarely in the center-right of American political discourse. And many of those positions, not incidentally, are held by a large segment or even a majority of the public. For instance, neither the public nor Palin believes the stimulus worked. And while most Americans may not share Palin's views regarding "death panels," many join her in opposing Obama's health care overhaul.

Over the past two years, Pew and Gallup surveys have tracked the public as it has moved to the right — not on just one or two issues but on a whole constellation of them.

5. Palin is unelectable.

Without question, a Palin 2012 campaign would be an uphill battle. Palin is unpopular — massively so among Democrats, decisively so among independents. Even many Republicans don't believe she's ready to be president.

At the moment, Palin still expresses her agenda mainly in negative terms, focusing on her opposition to Obama and the Washington establishment. She hasn't defined her "common-sense conservatism" in positive language. And she hasn't found a unifying, exhilarating theme.

Then again, she just might get along without one. After all, a presidential contest is a choice. By 2012, Americans might absolutely despise Obama.

Vote for education and jobs Nov. 2

On Nov. 2, Idaho voters will have the chance to approve four constitutional amendments which prove to have an important positive impact on education and job creation in the state. On behalf of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce board of directors and our nearly 880 member businesses in the region, I encourage a "yes" vote on all four of these amendments.

SJR101, the University of Idaho amendment, would allow tuition to be charged by the University of Idaho just as it is at all other state higher education institutions in Idaho. Currently, student fees are charged, but those fees cannot be used for classroom instruction. Approval of this amendment would allow the University of Idaho to fund critical classroom instruction with tuition as they educate our future workforce in Idaho.

HJR4, the public hospitals amendment, would allow public hospitals to make investments in facilities, equipment, technology and real property to support healthcare services in Idaho. The acquisition of these items must be paid for solely from charges, rents or payments derived from the existing or financed facilities. This will give a financing tool back to public hospitals to meet community needs and to invest in local economies, without increasing taxes or obligating hospital districts, counties or public entities.

HJR5, the airports amendment, would allow public airports to use airport-generated funds to pay debt for investment in land acquisition and facility construction such as terminals, cargo facilities or other projects that would create jobs and grow the local and regional economy. As with the Public Hospitals amendment, public tax dollars would not be allowed to be used to pay these bonds.

HJR7, the power cities amendment, would allow a city that owns a municipal power system to enter into longterm supply and transmission agreements and also to issue revenue bonds for electrical generation, transmission and distribution by majority vote in an election. These bonds would need to be paid only from the electrical system rates and charges, or revenues derived from the municipal electric system, and not with tax dollars. Allowing this investment is vital to the continued growth of our energy system to meet the future needs of residents and industry in Idaho.

These constitutional amendments have been approved with a combined 94 percent yes vote by the Idaho state Senate and Idaho House of Representatives. They must now be approved by a simple majority of those voting in the November 2010 general election. You'll see them at the end of your ballot when you head to the polls. Again, I encourage you to vote yes on all four of these constitutional amendments to support the economic vitality of Idaho.

Shawn Barigar is the president and chief executive officer for the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Voters should care about school leader's qualification

In a recent article in the Times-News, "Area educators rally behind Olson," the reporter seemed to indicate that the general public didn't seem to care whether or not Tom Luna had the qualifications to be the superintendent of public instruction. Maybe four years ago, no one cared. Today they better!

Over the last four years, Mr. Luna has had the opportunity to use his "qualifications and experiences" to effectively run Idaho's Department of Education. He likes to take credit for successes in Idaho's classrooms. The people who are responsible for successes in Idaho's classrooms are the teachers in the trenches with the children, not Tom Luna. He may have worked as an adviser on the national level, but his leadership in Idaho, which is what we in Idaho should care about, has been far from expert.

Today, education in Idaho is struggling and falling behind even further, rather than keeping up. Look at our per-pupil expenditures. Look at our higher education retention rate.

Stan Olson is an educator. He was the well-respected superintendent of one of the largest school districts in this state. He has "in the trenches" experience in several states, at several levels of the system. He knows education and he has a plan. He has the know-how and the respect of the education stakeholders to get that plan implemented, not just talk about what a great plan he has. The educational system in Idaho has not improved; it hasn't even held the status quo under Tom Luna's leadership.

The education of our children is a non-partisan activity. Political party should not make a difference. Stan Olson can and will work to get education in Idaho back on track.

Revenue increase doesn't justify alcohol sales at the fair

Please allow me to offer my simple views on allowing alcohol (beer) sales at the Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo.

I do understand that the fair board desires to raise revenues, but at what cost to individuals and their families? Does one driving under the influence arrest and conviction justify the revenue stream? Or a single alcohol-related mishap? The slogan "Drink Responsibly" ranks as one of the greatest moral frauds perpetrated on society. A single alcoholic drink affects the brain and, thus, tosses "responsibility" out the window. In most criminal cases, charges of petit theft, larceny, burglary or assault carry lesser penalties than DUI. Just ask any magistrate. Could you support your family, and ferry children to activities, without a driver's license for one year?

I am no crusader against alcohol. But communities must make reasonable decisions; criminalizing drunken behaviors while reaping the cash benefits from beer sales strikes me as a bit disingenuous. Selling an addictive and destructive drug to friends and neighbors undermines a healthy community.

Mini-Cassia rallied to support cancer victim

As the chairman of the Mini-Cassia Chapter of Idaho for Wildlife, I was recently contacted by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game and told about a heart-wrenching situation. According to Fish and Game, Howard Peck, a dedicated sportsman, high school teacher, father and husband from the Pocatello area was recently diagnosed with terminal cancer.

Howard was given two to six months to live. Jerome Hansen, Fish and Game regional supervisor, stated that the Fish and Game had located a landowner who was willing to give some of the landowner tags to the Peck family so that Howard would be able to see his boys shoot their first elk.

Jerome Hansen stated that Fish and Game did not have funding to pay for any of the additional costs such as fuel, food, hunting supplies, etc. Jerome asked me if the Mini-Cassia Chapter of Idaho for Wildlife would be able to help in anyway with this expense. I sent out an email to members and some non-members, asking for suggestions on how we could raise the money to send Howard Peck and his boys on this hunting trip.

Within four hours of putting out this email, I had my answer. This community, not one of them having ever met Howard Peck or his family, stepped up and raised enough money to pay for the entire amount. The next day when I called Jerome Hansen and told him that we had raised the entire amount, he told me that he was shocked but delighted. I told Jerome that the Mini-Cassia area is a great bunch of people with big hearts. I know that none of the people that contributed really care about getting recognition for their donations, but I think it's important to let these people know just how much we truly appreciate them and their willingness to step up and help a fellow man and his family fulfill a dream of a lifetime. I hope that I don't forget anyone!

Jeff and Carey Leach, Chuck and Leslie Ranstrom, Rep. Fred Wood, Sen. Dean Cameron, Rep. Scott Bedki, Chase Murdock, Kelly Adams, Lynch Oil, and Fred and Joyce Preston.

Again, I hope that I didn't leave anyone out. The Mini-Cassia area is truly a great community!

Don't punish farmers, especially if your stomach is full

I'm writing this letter in response to the ads and announcements that I have seen on our TV station by our sheriff's department pertaining to our farmers (row crop, dry land, dairy, beef, etc.).

It seems to me that we have laws, ordinances, rules, etc., on our lists or books of many don't do's that makes it illegal to let your water get on the roadway or the mud out of your field that is on truck and tractor tires or manure out of the feedlot or any such thing on our precious roads.

The first think I would like to point out to whomever is that the farmer or landowner owns the property "to the center of all roads" and pays taxes on it. Our sheriff's department has hired an enforcement officer to enforce all these laws and ordinances. What our enforcement officer should be enforcing is the law that says that you are to drive according to the road conditions so that if there is manure, water, mud on the roadway, slow down or get a ticket for unsafe driving practices.

What I'm really saying is that as long as we have an abundance of food in the grocery store, "don't get after the farmer for anything whatsoever" with a full mouth.

Cap and trade is another effort to destroy U.S. economy

Obamacare, the so-called Senate bill was 2,409 pages long, about 477,920 words. The Reconciliation Package added 153 pages and 34,000 words. There are about 99 new boards and commissions and agencies established under the Obamacare system. A congressional research service reports that it is impossible to estimate how many more boards, commissions and agencies will be created in the future by Obamacare — all at taxpayers expense.

No wonder Madam Pelosi stated, "We have to pass the bill to know what's in it." Brilliant statement. Many signed that never read it.

Obama told the nation that the average family of four would save $2,500 a year with Obamacare. An outrageous lie since he never read the 2,452-page bill. If he had read the bill, as a father, why would he approve a bill that gives convicted sex offenders free Viagra? One wonders who was the idiot that thought of that.

In California, the Pelosi has hit the fan because Obamacare insurance companies have raised rates 20 percent to 25 percent; in some cases, co-payments have gone from $100 to $1,000 and many medical services have been cut back. Obamacare passed behind closed doors; bribes were offered and taken; threats were made. Chicago land corrupt politics at its worst in our White House. Al Capone would be proud of this administration.

Next, they will try to ram cap and trade down our throats. The Heritage Foundation estimates by 2035 electricity costs will increase by 90 percent, gasoline by 58 percent, natural gas by 55 percent. The commutative cost for a family of four will be $20,000 per year and cost 1.4 million jobs. The hardest hit sector will be farming, whose profits are expected to drop by 57 percent. Cap and trade, the planned total destruction of the United States economy — Obamacare.

When it's not over when it's over

It is Wednesday, Nov. 3, in the wee hours of the morning after election night 2010.

From Chicago to Las Vegas, from West Virginia to Colorado, exhausted campaign managers are on their BlackBerrys and iPhones, talking, e-mailing and texting with election lawyers and party operatives in Democratic and Republican bunkers.

The word on everyone's lips? "Recount?"

As the sun rises, final returns will begin to trickle in from the most remote precincts and the most disorganized counties. Problems with provisional ballots will emerge in some states. Issues with absentee ballots will develop in others. Disputes will crop up; battle lines will be drawn. And a recount — or two or three — will arise somewhere, throwing the results of the 2010 midterms into doubt and leaving the fate of the House or, more likely, the Senate up in the air.

Could it come to that? It did in 2008, when the recount in Minnesota's Senate race between Democratic challenger Al Franken and Republican incumbent Norm Coleman helped nail down the 60th and filibuster-busting seat for the Democrats. The process took eight months and showed that Franken won by 312 votes out of nearly 3 million cast. Six months after he was sworn in, Franken voted for national health care reform; the recount affected policy and changed history.

Now, with less than three weeks until Election Day, polls show that at least a half-dozen Senate races are too close to call, and perhaps four or five times as many House contests are undecided. Of course, not all of these races will end in uncertainty, but on Nov. 3, the country could wake up and find it has several recounts on its hands.

If a candidate really wants to "pull an Al Franken" there is much to be learned from those 2000 and 2008 recount battles:

• If you're a candidate who hasn't hired a recount lawyer yet, you're probably too late. In 2008, Franken's campaign had a local lawyer working on detailed recount plans a month before the election, way before Coleman's side. You also need to prepare early for a potential trial, or at least a series of recount-related legal hearings. In 2008, Franken's lead trial lawyer was on site in November prepping for any courtroom action; Coleman didn't hire his lead trial lawyer until days before proceedings began in January. Guess who won the trial.

• Set some campaign funds aside to cover costs. Few recounts are likely to cost the $20 million that, according to my calculations, Coleman and Franken combined to spend during their saga, but generally they cost a bundle. In 2000, the Gore and Bush camps spent a total of $17 million during their 36-day recount.

• If you're behind after election night, your new favorite sentence is: "Let's make every vote count." That is your new mantra. Your job is to inform the public so it understands that a recount is part of the process, not a ploy. Praise the local election officials but aggressively suggest that there are votes somewhere that may not have been counted.

• If you're the candidate who winds up ahead by a narrow margin on Nov. 3, you should also have a sound bite ready: "It's time to come together" is always a good one. That said, don't assume a win. Election night results always shift as votes from far-away precincts arrive, absentee ballots are opened and provisional ballots are examined. If you are ahead, finding a way to shut down the recount is a nifty idea.

• Remember that a recount is really an extension of the campaign. In this overtime period stay behind the scenes. Don't look pushy. Don't act desperate. Let your campaign and lawyers do the dirty work. When in doubt, or when ambushed by a reporter or a video camera-toting campaign staffer for your opponent, declare faith in the system.

• If, after the process has played out, you find yourself the losing candidate, concede gracefully. Being on the short end of a recount is painful, but there's nothing worse than a sore loser. Set up a think tank, file your lobbyist papers. Move on. And who knows? There might be a Nobel Prize or an Academy Award in your future. Or at the very least, a book tour.

• If you win the recount, claim victory with humility. Take your seat, put your head down, and get to work. You may not have a strong mandate but your political party can still take control of a chamber, no matter how tiny the winning margin of its weakest member.

And that's why any 2010 recounts are going to be knock-down, drag-out doozies. The Democrats learned from their 2000 Florida defeat that they needed to be more aggressive. They brought that attitude to the 2008 Minnesota recount, which is where the GOP discovered it needed to be more prepared, more data-focused and more exacting in its legal work the next time.

That next time begins in the wee hours of Nov. 3.

THE DIY CHAMPIONSHIPS

Competition to be south-central Idaho's champion do-it-yourselfer was tough, but six winners emerged. Last week in the Home & Garden section, you read about the three honorable mentions. Today, we present the third- and second-place winners. And next Tuesday, watch for a story on the 2010 champion.

Linda and Chuck Breault and their Saint Bernard, Bella, pose next to the new fountain at their Twin Falls home Wednesday afternoon.

Second place: repaired, repurposed waterfall

Linda and Chuck Breault

The motivation: When a local nursery closed its doors a couple of years ago, Linda and Chuck Breault bought the waterfall that sat outside the store. When Chuck took it apart for transport, a lot of the fall's fake rock fell apart and disintegrated. From what was left, the Twin Falls couple rebuilt the waterfall as the focal point of their backyard – but quickly discovered a leak that kept the water from flowing full-speed.

They knew fixing the problem would take a lot of sweat and tears, so they put it off until this summer.

The bill: The entire project, including the original waterfall, cost less than $1,000. Chuck used a lot of repurposed materials, like the grate under the concrete tub and all of the faux rocks from the original waterfall. He supplemented the fake rocks with real ones that he collected, with permission, from the excavation site of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' Twin Falls temple a few years ago.

Linda Breault pulls up a rock to show the grating underneath her fountain.

Timeline: About a month in summer 2010.

Bang for the buck: The leaky water feature is now a bubbling waterfall and creek. The two replaced the originally leaky plastic liner with a thick rubber one and added a watertight cement tub to ensure water can't escape. The water tumbles down large rocks at the head of the installation, then flows down a mini-creek and disappears into the rocks and falls through a disguised grate and into the concrete tub, where it's pumped back through the system.

Chuck and Linda also added solar lights, bought

Third place: built front porch

The Davis family

The motivation: When the Davis family moved into their century-old house outside Twin Falls seven years ago, they knew they were in for a long-term overhaul. They had tackled the exterior, windows, kitchen, basement, mud room and nearly every other part of the house when Michael and Anna decided to add a porch.

The bill: About $2,000.

The timeline: Two weeks in September, not including planning and designing. Anna and Michael's three children – Taylor, 19, Jessica, 16, and Randy, 9 – got involved in one way or another.

Bang for the buck: The treated wood for the porch was more expensive than untreated redwood, but it requires little or no maintenance, Anna said. Another plus: It looks less like an addition, and more like it is part of the original structure.

"It looks like it's such a part of the house now," she said.

Biggest challenge: The screws. Although the boards were pre-drilled, the family struggled to get the screws in place.

Skills learned: Michael had never built a porch before, so designing the feature was new to him.

What's next: Landscaping around the porch, of course.

Gilding the Halloween pumpkin: creepy chic decor

By Kim Cook
For The Associated Press

If you prefer a contemporary decor style, you aren't interested in rustic jack-o-lanterns or homespun stuffed witches when Halloween comes around. But fear not: This season you'll find lots of ghoulish yet glamorous pieces to fete the occasion.

Modern Alchemy's Memento Mori collection includes a set of beautiful black porcelain plates etched with silver skulls. There also are sleek, ebony skull candles to provide drama on a beverage bar.

Send invites using their elegant skull-printed stationery, or check out websites like Graphics Fairy (vintage clip art) and Living Locurto (bold, colorful designs) to make your own.

Z Gallerie's got skull goods, too — glitter-dusted in black or silver for display, plus glossy black mini-candles and little metallic spiders to scatter on a buffet. There's also a wonderful wood-finish, hinged skull made of resin that holds a wee clock; it's got an antique look, but would be a great counterpoint to more modern decor.

Each Halloween, Pottery Barn presents a new wall mural, screen printed with a suitably ghoulish image. This year's version is a cool black-and-white photograph of an iron gate opening into a mist-filled graveyard. Resembling a horror movie still, it would really turn a party space into something unique.

You're well on the way to creating a super spooky room with a few of the retailer's black feathered crows; add a set of life-size black cat wall decals from Domestic and 5.5 Designers, and get out the fog machine.

Grandin Road's thick, velvety, tasseled theater cords evoke the opera.

Grandin Road has a fun Halloween collection that includes dancing brooms and life-size green or silver glittery skeletons. Thick, velvety, tasseled cords evoke the opera, and phantoms seem to fill the eye sockets of shiny chrome skulls.

The early 20th century was really the golden age for Halloween in the United States. Wealthy families returned from their summer mansions to the city, and lavish Halloween parties were one of the ways they launched the winter society season. While balls and galas may not be your speed, there's lots of inspiration online for chic and sophisticated Halloween festivities.

Check out Pier 1's website for party ideas like Nightcap on Elm Street and Vampire Dinner Party. Celebrations.com suggests a Victorian-themed party, or an all-white Ghosts and Ghouls bash, among other ideas.

Get the festivities going with a set of vampire- or poison-themed old-style beverage labels, dramatic black candlesticks and black flocked trees from Grandin Road, and some mini lights or ornaments. A blood red or inky black feathered wreath adds surprise as a centerpiece.

Set the table with Pier 1's purple spider-webbed table runner and fiercely fashionable animal-print serveware. Boris Karloff's Frankenstein visage is emblazoned on a set of beverage napkins from Z Gallerie — perfect for a scary movie party theme.

Halloween has a split personality. The kids-and-candy crowd revels in a rambunctious night of trick or treating, but for grownups a little too old to knock on doors, there are lots of fun ways to mark the macabre evening with style.

Biggest challenge: Moving the rocks. Although they're artificial, they're not light, Chuck said.

"Pry bars and two-by-fours, you can move the world," he said.

Skills learned: The project marked the first time Chuck worked with artificial rock, an endeavor that required plenty of research. Chuck had to figure out how to secure the rock and make it look natural.

What's next: Linda plans to add some moss and other plants around the waterfall, but the two have no other big projects in mind.

Should chairs sit halfway on a rug? It depends

The Washington Post

Jason Claire, a designer and co-owner of Vastu in D.C., joined staff writer Terri Sapienza for an online chat. Below is an edited excerpt.

Q: Should furniture be always on a rug, or is it a mortal sin to place, say, a chair halfway on a rug in a small space?

Sapienza: Having the front of a chair or sofa on the rug in a living space would be just fine. But, if we're talking about a dining room, you always want to have a rug large enough that the back legs of your chairs still remain on the rug when someone is sitting on them.

Q: We are planning to replace the yellowing, cracked stone that surrounds our fireplace. Our walls are a taupe color; we were thinking of using a black granite with very little pattern or slate. Any other ideas?

Claire: I have had a few clients have their fireplace surrounds cast out of concrete. They are simple and beautiful — perhaps a little more modern than granite. ... A charcoal gray is beautiful. A current client is doing a hearth out of a thick piece of glass so that you can see the hardwood floor beneath it.

Q: Jason, what do you think of annual Color of the Year declarations?

Claire: I know this year's color is turquoise ... certainly not for everyone. I am a believer in choosing warm, neutral colors for large pieces of furniture while adding pops of color in art and accessories. Perhaps if you want to be a little trendy, you could add some turquoise throw pillows. I would certainly not advocate for painting your whole place turquoise!

Q: I'm currently working on redecorating my dining room. What are your thoughts on mixing wood and metal finishes in one room?

Claire: This is perfectly okay. In fact, it's even okay to mix a variety of woods (ones that are contrasting, like maple and wenge) and a variety of metals. It's okay to have a table with a chrome base and still use an oil-rubbed or anodized metal on a lamp. If the scale of the room is small, I would choose only two woods and one or two metals.

Q: I have a really big, old farm table that I can put eight chairs at. I would like to do a long bench on one side and chairs the rest of the way around. Do you think a bench with a back would be a big pain?

Claire: It depends a little on the setup of the table. If it's three chairs on each long side and two on the heads, then I think a bench on one side is okay. If the table is four chairs on each side and no one at the heads, then a long bench for four people is cumbersome to move in and out. But you could do two smaller benches with backs. Perhaps the chairs are upholstered and the bench(es) are wood?

Q: I rent a very small, window-less bedroom that is painted boring builder's white. I'm not allowed to paint the walls, so I've tried to bring color in through the bedding, picture frames, mirrored wardrobe, etc. Can you recommend any other ideas to bring life into the space?

Claire: In a model apartment that we did ..., we framed very bold wallpaper. We did a series of something like 40 individual frames. Not permanent and still gives you the look of a wallpapered wall. I would do something bold in pattern and color!

Inventors solve home and garden problems

By Debbie Arrington
McClatchy Newspapers

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — To anyone who's ever sat in the backyard and brainstormed, Jill Plumb and Rob Lenney offer inspiration, even hope. The two inventors struck pay dirt with their ideas for common gardening problems.

Their simple solutions with catchy names have garnered national attention and made their products hot properties.

"It's been the most incredible year," said Plumb. She once studied plant science at the University of California-Davis, and "to come back to plants at age 56 is an absolute joy. I never would have guessed this could happen to me at this time in my life."

Plumb, a longtime high school and adult education teacher, wanted to put raised vegetable beds in her Woodland backyard, replacing much of the lawn. Her two grown daughters — one a teacher, the other a budding opera singer — no longer needed a play area.

But how to construct those wooden beds? The corners created problems; they never seemed to fit together quite right. When she went back into her kitchen, the light went on.

"I put some napkins in the napkin holder, and it hit me," Plumb said. "I literally started doodling on a napkin, working out

Rob Lenney created the Gutterglove, which blocks out debris and never needs cleaning. Stainless-steel mesh covers aluminum channels that let rain flow through the gutters while keeping everything else out.

the details."

The MBrace was born. After making that napkin drawing in January 2009, Plumb perfected and patented her invention — a set of metal brackets — before it debuted this year with the slogan "Simply embrace your garden."

In her own yard, she tested MBraces with the help of Yolo, Calif.-based DeVoda Gardens, a community-supported agriculture network that uses backyard gardens to raise produce.

"The irony is, I don't like to cook, but I love having a garden," Plumb said. "You can't imagine the satisfaction I get from spending time in my garden. I just love to sit out here. A garden makes you slow down."

Thanks to sales on her website and 30 Northern California garden centers, the MBrace is being used by thousands of gardeners after just one season on the market. Sunset magazine made it an editor's pick.

Made of recycled sheet metal, the MBrace makes an instant perfect corner for attractive 16-inch-tall raised beds. Wood planks — such as two-by-fours or two-by-eights up to 12 feet long — slide into the brackets and are held solidly in place.

Peak Performance of Lodi, Calif., makes the MBraces, which are sold on Plumb's website, www.art-ofthegarden.net. A set of four costs $165. Plumb is working out the details that will take the MBrace into major home improvement stores and garden centers nationwide.

***
To get to his breakthrough, Lenney started in the gutter — the rain gutter. He and partner John Lewis owned a gutter-cleaning business. They continually ran into the same problem: gutters full of leaves and gutter guards that didn't work.

In 2003, Lenney created the Gutterglove, which blocks out leaves, debris, even sand, and never needs cleaning. Stainless-steel mesh covers aluminum channels that let rain flow through the gutters while keeping everything else out.

Consumer Reports rated the Gutterglove Pro as the No. 1 professionally installed gutter guard it tested. Popular Mechanics also featured the product.

Gutterglove has several versions, starting with LeafBlaster at $5 to $6 a foot installed, to Gutterglove Pro, $15 to $20 a foot. The company also introduced a warmed Gutterglove IceBreaker that prevents ice and snow buildup. (Learn more and find installers at www.gutterglove.com.)

Now, Lenney is looking for an investor to help his Rocklin, Calif.-based company meet its new demands. "We hit the million-foot milestone last year," Lenney said. "This year, we'll sell close to 1 million feet. It's been phenomenal."

USG Corp.'s lighter weight gypsum wallboard is easier to carry and install.

What's new: Lighter wallboard on the market

By Mary Beth Breckenridge
Akron Beacon Journal

Here's a weight off your shoulders. USG Corp. recently introduced a lighter weight gypsum wallboard that's easier for do-it-yourselfers to carry and install. Sheetrock UltraLight has been engineered to be up to 30 percent lighter than regular types of drywall.

The half-inch-thick panels are for use in non-fire-rated applications, such as residential construction, remodeling and repair projects. They come in standard lengths and can be installed on steel or wood framing.

Sheetrock UltraLight is available at Home Depot. A manufacturer's suggested retail price was not available because gypsum board prices change with market conditions, a company spokesman said, but a 4-by-8-foot sheet costs about 50 cents more than regular Sheetrock.

Using baking soda to clean the oven

By Mary Beth Breckenridge
Akron Beacon Journal

Q: The self-cleaning function on my oven is broken. Can you suggest an oven cleaner that's not too toxic?

A: Some advocates of nontoxic cleaning recommend applying a thick paste of baking soda and water to the oven surfaces. Let it sit overnight, and then scrape out the gunk with a nonscratching spatula. (You can spritz the paste with water a couple of times during the waiting period to keep it damp, if you wish.)

Removing the white residue requires a thorough rinsing.

Some people use equal parts salt and baking soda; some use white vinegar instead of water. Some heat the oven to 200 degrees before applying the cleaner and then turn the oven off.

If you need something stronger, try the following method outlined by cleaning expert Linda Cobb in her book "Talking Dirty With the Queen of Clean." It does involve ammonia, however, so it is somewhat caustic.

Preheat the oven to 200 degrees, and then leave it on at that temperature for 15 minutes. Turn off the oven and place a shallow glass dish filled with ammonia on the oven's top rack and a pan containing 2 cups of boiling water on the bottom rack. Close the oven door and leave it for at least two hours or overnight.

Remove the containers and make a paste of ammonia (she doesn't specify how much), one-half cup of baking soda and 1 cup of white vinegar. Spread the paste over the oven surfaces, leave it for 15 minutes, and then scrub with a sponge or steel wool pad, if necessary. Rinse.

Before you try any method, check the owner's manual for your oven. Some cleaners can damage your oven.

Made of recycled sheet metal, the MBrace makes an instant perfect corner for attractive 16-inch-tall raised beds. Wood planks, such as two-by-fours or two-by-eights up to 12 feet long, slide into the brackets and are held solidly in place.

Used building materials a hit among home improvers

By Melissa Kossler Dutton
For The Associated Press

It took Brian Koehl about a year to buy the materials to build a backyard greenhouse.

Koehl, a master gardener from Waller, Texas, bought secondhand windows and doors to construct the building that houses his roses and vegetables. Using old materials saved him money, and added interest to the structure.

"I really liked the look of using old windows," he said. "It met all of my needs."

Many homeowners these days are considering using secondhand items for home-improvement projects.

"The interest keeps growing," said Justin Green, program director for Build It Green NYC, in New York City. "The No. 1 driver is you can save a lot of money. The No. 2 is people are interested in being green."

Used building supplies can cost 50 percent to 90 percent less than new, said Shane Endicott, executive director of the Rebuilding Center in Portland, Ore.

"It's a huge motivator for people to reuse," he said.

Lots of large cities, including Seattle, Los Angeles and Austin, Texas, now have stores that sell used building materials, such as lumber, kitchen cabinets, lighting fixtures and sinks. Like one in Twin Falls, many of the stores are operated by Habitat for Humanity, which sells donated goods to raise money to build houses (using new materials) for low-income families.

Some of the resale shops also operate deconstruction businesses that tear down old buildings to salvage as much material as possible.

"Our goal is to be competitive with the wrecking ball," said Tom Longstreth, executive director of ReSOURCE, a nonprofit that offers deconstruction services and sells used building materials in Burlington, Vt. "It really is a win-win. There's a huge volume we are able to keep out of landfills."

Karen and Bradford "Skip" Hardy routinely find quality materials they could not normally afford at ReSOURCE. Past purchases have included bathroom faucets and windows.

"We seem to get lucky. We get there at the right time," Bradford Hardy said. "On a bad year, we probably spend 2,000 bucks there. In a good year, we spend eight to $10,000."

It took Brian Koehl about a year to buy the materials to build his backyard greenhouse in Waller, Texas.

The store also allows the couple to indulge their creative sides. He recently found large wooden pipes from an old organ, and intends to use them for giant garden wind chimes. She has turned old tile pieces into coasters.

Pam Kueber of Retrorenovation.com hears from lots of secondhand-goods shoppers who have found creative uses for old building materials and household products.

"This is something you do out of joy and creativity as much as utility and frugality," said Kueber, who lives in a 1951 Colonial-ranch house in Lenox, Mass.

The growth in the number of stores around the country has made it possible for more people to consider used materials, she said. In the past, she added, it was mostly people restoring old homes and looking for items from a specific era who were drawn to used items.

Bart Niswonger turned pieces of old bowling lanes into kitchen countertops.

"It was interesting material," he said. "We liked the history of it."

Knowing something about the materials you use makes a difference, agreed Koehl. He was excited to learn that some of the windows he used in his greenhouse came from the Peach Tree Bed and Breakfast in Fredericksburg, Texas.

"That sold me more than anything else," he recalled. "I love to have a story."

FALL YARD CARE TIPS PREVENTING EROSION

There are several methods to employ to prevent erosion in your yard. Soil erosion can be caused by factors such as rainfall, ice melting and wind blowing severely. By establishing one or several prevention methods, you will keep your lawn healthy while offering plants and trees and place to grow and flourish.

Matting - This is one method for preventing soil erosion that can be applied on residential lawns. Matting is placed in the affected area, helping to soak up the elements preventing erosion.

Mulching - Adding a layer of mulch can be beneficial for both soil and plants when applied. Consider a layer of fertilizer as well. Both will help the soil absorb water - lessening any impact rainfall may have on the area.

Idaho dairies brace for higher prices

USDA forecasters cut corn estimate

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

Idaho's dairy producers are bracing for higher feed prices after a government forecast shaved a half billion bushels off the 2010 corn estimate.

USDA forecasters cut nearly 7 bushels per acre off the projected U.S. corn crop, for a national average of 155.8 bushels per acre. That's the largest yield reduction cut ever made, surpassing the 4.5 bushel cut made in 1995. While that adjustment was enough to catch the market's attention, what it did to the rest of the corn balance sheet is gut-wrenching for livestock producers.

Ending stocks are forecast at 902 million bushels, down 214 million from the September estimate. If the estimate holds, this will be the lowest carryout level since 1996-97.

And that's what's got livestock producers scared. Grain prices are expected to remain strong all winter as the battle for acres unfolds. At least one analyst says another 6 million acres of corn may be needed next year just to repair the corn balance sheet.

Kelly Olson, administrator for the Idaho Barley Commission, points out another troubling number in the report. USDA forecasters put demand for ethanol (4.7 million bushels) at about the same level as feed usage (5.4 million bushels).

"With ethanol, we've created demand for almost a second livestock sector in this country," Olson said. "And ethanol demand is not going to get any smaller."

The federal Environmental Protection Agency released its new Renewable Fuels Standard last week which calls for use of 15 percent ethanol blends in cars by 2015.

"Ethanol has been the game changer for corn," Olson said. "Ethanol demand is almost price inelastic."

That price can still ration demand was evidenced when several ethanol plants filed for bankruptcy after corn prices spiked in 2007-08, but Olson points out that the industry had undergone rapid expansion just before corn prices skyrocketed. The industry is sized to match its demand more closely this time.

Industry weakens

The rally comes at a difficult time for Idaho's dairies. The milk industry was just starting to repair its balance sheets after 18 months of low milk prices. Feed prices surged in 2008, just before the world recession began and dried up world demand for dairy products. As demand fell off, milk prices sank below the costs of production.

Milk prices are up about 30 percent from a year ago, and dairies were beginning to repay debts incurred during the prolonged period of low milk prices. But a return to higher feed prices threatens that recovery.

PREFERRING PETS

Dr. Stuart Hall of Lone Oak Large Animal Veterinary Services gets his supplies while checking for pregnant cows at Homestead Dairy in Visalia, Calif.

Trouble ahead for farms as young vets opt to treat pets

By Robert Rodriguez
McClatchy Newspapers

FRESNO, Calif. — Stuart Hall doesn't mind the triple-digit temperatures, or the occasional temperamental cow.

"This is a physical job," said Hall, a Visalia, Calif.-based farm veterinarian. "But this is what I love to do."

Agricultural leaders wish there were more like him.

The vast majority of veterinarians choose to take care of dogs and cats, not cows, pigs and chickens.

The trend has raised concerns among animal-health experts who worry that there won't be

"As vets, the small-animal practice looks pretty attractive from a quality-of-life point of view."

— Stuart Hall, farm veterinarian enough farm veterinarians to fill the expected vacancies at key federal agencies responsible for protecting the nation's food supply.

Nearly 30 percent of the veterinarians at the federal level, including at the Food Safety and Inspection Agency, are eligible to retire in the next three years.

Rural communities are also feeling the squeeze.

The American Veterinary Medical Association estimates that more than 1,300 counties in the U.S. don't have a farm veterinarian.

"The demand and need for services is critical," said Gina Luke, assistant director in the government relations division of the AVMA in Washington, D.C.

"We are talking about making sure we have enough people to treat animals, and make sure that our food supply is safe."

For years, interest in becoming a large-animal veterinarian has gradually been waning.

Veterinary schools are seeing fewer students with farm backgrounds.

At the same time, the pet industry has exploded. An estimated $3.4 billion was spent on pet services last year, including trips to the vet.

The lure of having a staff and working in an air-conditioned office has become a strong attraction for students, as does the prospect of an income that will help pay for their education — a cost that can be more than $100,000.

Election unlikely to change subsidies

By Steve Karnowski
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Republicans might take control of Congress as they ride a wave of voter anger over deficit spending and big government, but experts who follow agriculture say they don't expect deep cuts in subsidies to farmers who grow crops such as corn and soybeans.

Those payments are long-entrenched policy that have had the support of a wide range of lawmakers, from liberal to conservative. Regardless of the election results, that likely won't change much, politicians and others said.

Still, federal farm programs could be examined closely given the size of the deficit and the chance that the election could change the makeup of the agriculture committees and their leadership.

"It's going to be a bit of a roller coaster on election night from an agriculture perspective," said Tara Smith, a director of congressional relations for the American Farm Bureau Federation.

But Rep. Collin Peterson, a Minnesota Democrat who chairs the House Agriculture Committee, said he doubts anyone on the panel would push to cut overall spending in the next Farm Bill. It will be a five-year package that includes crop subsidies — primarily for corn, soybeans, cotton, wheat, peanuts and rice — and a range of other programs. The bulk of Farm Bill money goes to nutrition programs such as food stamps.

If Republicans take control of the House, Rep. Frank Lucas of Oklahoma could take over as chairman of the Agriculture Committee. Lucas declined an interview request, but Peterson said a change wouldn't make a big difference, except that Peterson is eager to start writing the 2012 Farm Bill next year while Lucas wants to wait.

"We're not going to have a bill unless Frank Lucas and I agree on it," Peterson

Hispanic winemakers still rare but finding success

By Olivia Munoz
Associated Press writer

SONOMA, Calif. — Reynaldo Robledo was 16 when he arrived from his small hometown in Mexico's mountains to work for $1.10 an hour in the vineyards of Northern California.

Now 59, Robledo is among a handful of Latinos who have built their own wineries on modest acreage and are catering in part to Hispanic wine drinkers interested in quality and a connection to their heritage.

"I would work my regular shift and then pester the vineyard manager with questions until I knew everything he knew," Robledo said in Spanish.

Robledo Family Winery near Sonoma now sells 20,000 cases per year through a wine club, its website and independent shops, bringing in about $1 million. It has a 2003 Cabernet Sauvignon that sells for $150 while wines from more recent vintages are priced starting at $20.

Esau Herrera of the Hispanic Vintners Association, a loose-knit marketing group with about a dozen members in California and Florida, said the number of Latino vintners is small but is growing. Part of that success comes from making a connection with Hispanics.

"There are people like me who are very proud of our roots and don't mind plunking down $125 for a bottle of wine," Herrera said.

Wine consumption among Hispanics has increased more than any other ethnic group, according to a 2006 survey conducted by the Wine Market Council, a nonprofit trade association.

The report also found that Hispanic wine drinkers chose imported wines in greater proportion to other ethnic groups — specifically from Chile and Argentina. Vintners in the U.S. hope they can make that connection closer to home.

"There's room at the table for wine, as long as it's good wine," said Amelia Ceja, president of Ceja Vineyards in Napa. Like Robledo, Ceja and her husband worked in the vineyards as children.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

NEW YORK (AP) — Upbeat news for banks and homebuilders pushed the stock market broadly higher Monday, extending its gains for the month.

Better-than-expected results from Citigroup Inc. drove financial stocks up by more than 2 percent, halting a recent slide brought on by questions into how banks have handled foreclosures. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 81 points.

Citigroup said fewer of its customers defaulted on loans, an encouraging sign that consumer's balance sheets may be improving. Citi's shares rose 5.6 percent, lifting shares of other banks along with it including Wells Fargo & Co. and JPMorgan Chase & Co. Bank shares fell last week as fallout spread from accusations that banks had improperly processed large amounts of foreclosures.

The National Association of Home Builders reported that its housing market index, which measures builder confidence in the sales of new, single-family homes, rose by three points in October. It was the first time that the measure had risen since June, which came shortly after the end of a federal tax rebate for first-time homebuyers.

Insurgency apparent in Afghan town, but where are insurgents?

By Todd Pittman
Associated Press writer

MARJAH, Afghanistan — The Marines have found bloody clothes and spent bullet casings and bombs meant to kill them. They've heard bullets flying overhead and seen muzzle flashes in tree lines.

In this southern Afghan town that coalition forces seized from Taliban fighters eight months ago — and are still clearing — you don't have to go far to find the insurgency. But finding insurgents is another story altogether.

"The only time we see them is when we're in contact" in a gunfight, said Cpl. Chuck Martin, 24, of Middletown, R.I.

And even catching a glimpse of them during gunbattles can be rare.

When U.S.-led coalition forces poured into Marjah in February, they ended years of Taliban control here. But the Taliban never left — they simply went underground, blending in among civilians, taking advantage of the region's terrain of agricultural fields and irrigation trenches to stage daily ambushes of American patrols.

Today, U.S. troops are knee-deep in a classic guerrilla war, in what sometimes seems to be an endless turf battle against an often-invisible enemy that fights one minute, pretends to farm the next.

"I've seen the Taliban a couple of times, but it's only for brief seconds," said Lance Cpl. Benjamin Long, 21, of Trussville, Ala., who knew they were close on one recent patrol when machine gun rounds suddenly began kicking up dust near his feet. "It's like fighting ghosts. They're in and they're out. They're quick. They've been doing this a long time ... (and) they're good at it."

When U.S. forces go out on patrol, children and farmers come out of their homes and watch them closely. Some are just curious. Others use cell phones to tell insurgents what the Americans are doing.

When gunbattles erupt, Marines must simultaneously take cover and figure out where the Taliban are so they can return fire. They first listen to the crack and pop of gunshots, then look for muzzle flashes — although sometimes gunmen are hiding in foliage so thick they can't even see those.

Firefights often last around 15 or 20 minutes because the Taliban know how long it takes for troops to call in helicopter gunships or mortar barrages, Marines say. If air support doesn't arrive, the gunmen often start shooting again.

U.S. Marine Sgt. Jeffrey Benson, left, 34, of Medina, Ohio, holds a spent bullet casing found after a gun battle while he interrogates a resident of Marjah, Afghanistan, Sept. 27.

Children watch U.S. Marine Lance Cpl. Seth Little, 22, of Bremen, Ga., as he takes cover in a ditch during a patrol in Marjah, southern Afghanistan.

After one recent firefight, one Marine squad scooped up spent bullet cartridges from a compound insurgents had just fired from. It was the first time they'd found such a trace since arriving in July, said Sgt. Jeffrey Benson, 34, of Medina, Ohio.

"Usually they take everything after a firefight," Benson said. "They're real good at getting their dead and injured out."

During another 20-minute battle two days later, guerrillas ambushed Marines from the broken windows of a small, abandoned school compound. When Marines pushed up to it, they found more spent bullet casings — but again, no dead or wounded.

Soon, they began taking fire again from two more locations; the insurgents had merely withdrawn and found somewhere else to shoot from.

"It's like a little cat-and-mouse game," Martin said. "We try and get them. They hide their weapons ... then they just come back to the same location, pick up the same rifle, shoot at us again."

During the second gunbattle, Marines radioed for a mortar bombardment to suppress their attackers. A wave of shells exploded along the outer wall of a compound, shaking the area and kicking up vast brown clouds of dust.

When Martin arrived afterward to assess the damage, he found the father of a family who claimed he'd seen no Taliban in the area at all — a common refrain.

"It's one of the most frustrating things out here," Martin said. "We know there's Taliban in the area, and they're like, 'No, they're not.'"

"I pressed him about it because I saw the guy right outside his compound shooting at me with a rifle, but he still said no," Martin said. "I'm not sure if they think we're stupid, or if they're so afraid of the Taliban they won't talk."

U.S. forces across Afghanistan say the key to turning the tide in the nine-year war rests largely on civilians turning against the Taliban. In Marjah, though, that has yet to happen on any significant level, despite the steady presence for more than eight months of two Marine battalions and their Afghan counterparts.

"They always ask us, 'why do you need our help anyway? You're the ones with the guns ... you have the planes, you have the helicopters,'" Martin said. "They don't realize that just the information that they give us is the most helpful thing."

Some residents, having heard about President Barack Obama's pledge to begin withdrawing Americans from Afghanistan next summer, believe U.S. forces are not going to be in Marjah for long, Marines say. And whenever U.S. forces leave, they people who live here think they'll be left with an ineffective and undedicated force of Afghan police and soldiers — and of course, the Taliban, who are already among them.

"They don't know who to trust," Long said.

Neither do the Marines.

On the eve of the Sept. 18 parliamentary elections, one U.S. base in Marjah hosted a delegation of 20 government poll organizers. Two of them were detained, though, after they were found to have smuggled in a pressure-plate bomb and a pair of grenades.

On election day, the base was attacked in a six-hour firefight that saw insurgents — with clear knowledge of the base's interior — angling their machine gun fire up and over the walls in an attempt to strike the vulnerable tents inside.

During a patrol one week later, Marines were astonished to find a crude drawing of what was clearly the exterior of the base, scrawled in white chalk on a wall in a man's home. Lines of fire were drawn at what appeared to be the post's guard towers.

"This looks a lot like an attack plan to me," said Lance Cpl. Patrick Cassidy, 23, of Stroudsburg, Pa. The Marines' base was only a couple dozen yards away, on the other side of a wide canal built with U.S. aid money half a century ago.

Bismullah Nazir Ali, the home's white-bearded owner, pleaded innocence. No Taliban had been there or in his fields, he said.

As he spoke, another gunbattle raged a few hundred meters away. Cobra attack helicopters were pounding targets with rockets that shook the area.

"Those are just flowers, children's drawings," Ali said, before being detained and carted away.

Leader to give rock from mine to queen

LONDON — Chilean President Sebastian Pinera is presenting Britain's Queen Elizabeth II with a rock taken from the bottom of the collapsed San Jose mine — a symbol of his effort to turn the dramatic disaster-turned-success story into an international image makeover.

The rescue of 33 men from the stricken mine — where they'd been trapped for more than two months — united Chileans and sent a wave of sympathy around the world. Pinera's European tour, which began over the weekend in London, may help brighten the image of a country many here still associate with the dictatorship of Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

"I think it has changed everybody in Chile," Pinera said in a half-hour-long interview broadcast live on the BBC. "When you have to go through such an emotional experience that started as a tragedy and ended so successfully, you change."

The 69-day saga of the miners drew attention to the progress Chile has made since Pinochet relinquished power in 1990.

Pinochet's brutality — he is blamed for hundreds of disappearances in his campaign to crush opposition to his rule — had turned him into a personification of right-wing repression in Latin America, while his arrest in London in 1998 on a Spanish arrest warrant kept Chile's troubled history in the European public's eye.

FRANCE

Oil workers, youths, truckers defy gov't

PARIS — French oil workers defied the government's demand Monday to get back to work and end fuel shortages, stepping up the fight against President Nicolas Sarkozy's retirement reforms. Youths and truckers joined in, facing off against riot police and creating chaos on the roads.

Strikers have blockaded a dozen French refineries and numerous oil depots in the last week as part of widespread protests over Sarkozy's plan to raise the retirement age to 62, a reform the French Senate is voting on Wednesday.

Workers are angry because they consider retiring at 60 a pillar of France's hard-won social contract — and fear this is just the first step in eroding their often-envied quality of life. Critics say Sarkozy wants to adopt an "American-style capitalist" system and claim the government could find pension savings elsewhere, such as by raising contributions from employers.

Sarkozy's conservative government points out that 62 is among the lowest retirement ages in Europe, the French are living much longer and the pension system is losing money already.

The strike by oil workers has been the most disruptive tactic yet — and in response, the Interior Ministry opened a crisis coordination center Monday just to focus on the conflict.

UNITED STATES

Pentagon asks media not to publish war leaks

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is asking media organizations not to publish or post on websites classified war files released by the WikiLeaks Web site.

The Defense Department has been bracing for a possible leak of as many as many as 400,000 documents from a military database on the Iraq war. In July, the self-described whistleblower organization obtained and released nearly 77,000 records on Afghanistan.

The documents are mostly field reports, summarizing actions taken by troops and intelligence gathered.

Secretary of Defense Robert Gates has told Congress that the July leak did not expose the nation's most sensitive intelligence secrets. But, he also maintained that the release still put U.S. interests at risk because it exposed the names of some Afghans who had cooperated with U.S. forces.

CANADA

Top commander pleads guilty to murders

BELLEVILLE, Ontario — A commander who was a rising star in Canada's military pleaded guilty Monday to the murders of two women, the sexual assaults of two others and dozens of breaking and entering charges in which he stole panties from the bedrooms of girls as young as 11.

Col. Russell Williams, who once flew prime ministers and served as a pilot to Queen Elizabeth II during a visit, was the commander of Canada's largest Air Force base until he was charged earlier this year.

He pleaded guilty Monday to two first-degree murder charges, two sexual assaults and 82 breaking and entering charges in a Belleville, Ontario court. The 47-year-old faces an automatic sentence of life in prison with no possibility for parole for at least 25 years.

Williams was expressionless and dressed in a somber dark suit, and he kept his head down as the charges were read. The list of charges was so long that it took nearly 40 minutes to read it into the record.

MEXICO

Authorities seize 105 tons of marijuana

TIJUANA — Mexican security forces seized 105 tons of U.S.-bound marijuana in the border city of Tijuana on Monday, by far the biggest drug bust in the country in recent years.

Soldiers and police grabbed the drugs in pre-dawn raids in three neighborhoods after police arrested 11 people following a shootout, army Gen. Alfonso Duarte Mujica said at a news conference.

The marijuana was found wrapped in 10,000 packages, which were displayed to journalists by soldiers in masks. Duarte said the drug had an estimated street value in Mexico of 4.2 billion pesos, about $340 million. The bust began when Tijuana municipal police on a routine patrol came under gunfire from a convoy of vehicles.

Supreme Court to decide suit against Ashcroft

Case involves former U of Idaho athlete

By David G. Savage
Tribune Washington Bureau (MCT)

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court intervened again Monday in a lawsuit against a former Bush administration official, agreeing to decide whether former Attorney General John Ashcroft is entirely shielded from claims that he misused the law to arrest terrorism suspects under false pretenses.

Obama administration lawyers appealed on Ashcroft's behalf and asserted that it would "severely damage law enforcement" if the nation's top law enforcement official could be held liable for abusing his authority.

In the last five years, civil libertarians have tried — without much success — to sue former Bush officials for overstepping the law. Last year, the Supreme Court shielded Ashcroft from being sued by Muslim immigrants in the New York area who said they were arrested and abused in jail after the 9/11 attacks, even though they had no involvement in a terrorism plot.

The current case arose when Lavoni Kidd, a former football star at the University of Idaho, was arrested and shackled at Washington's Dulles International Airport in March 2003. He was not taken into custody because he was suspected of a crime but because he was a supposed "material witness" in another case.

Federal law permits the government in special situations to hold someone as a "material witness" in a pending case.

Lawyers for the American Civil Liberties Union accused Ashcroft of a "gross abuse" of this authority. They say he misused the law to arrest innocent people, even when the government lacked the required "probable cause."

option was not available in Kidd's case because he is a U.S. citizen.

Kidd had converted to Islam in college and changed his name to Abdullah Al-Kidd. He had cooperated with the FBI after the 9/11 attacks and answered questions about another Muslim man in Idaho who was under investigation in connection with his website.

Several months had elapsed since Kidd had heard from the FBI, but when he bought a round-trip ticket to travel to Saudi Arabia, where he had a scholarship to study, the FBI moved to have him arrested.

An FBI agent wrongly told a magistrate that Kidd had bought a one-way first-class ticket. The magistrate ordered Kidd arrested and held as a witness. A few days later, FBI Director Robert S. Mueller III testified in Congress and mentioned Kidd's "arrest" as one of the bureau's successes.

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 19, the 292nd day of 2010. There are 73 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
 On Oct. 19, 1960, the United States began a limited embargo against Cuba as President Dwight D. Eisenhower banned exports to the communist-ruled nation covering all commodities except medical supplies and certain food products.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
 In 1765, the Stamp Act Congress, meeting in New York, drew up a declaration of rights and liberties.

In 1781, British troops under Gen. Lord Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown, Va., as the American Revolution neared its end.

In 1812, French forces under Napoleon Bonaparte began their retreat from Moscow.

In 1864, Confederate Gen. Jubal A. Early attacked Union forces at Cedar Creek, Va.; the Union troops were able to rally and defeat the Confederates.

In 1951, President Harry S. Truman signed an act formally ending the state of war with Germany.

In 1960, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was arrested during a sit-down protest at a lunch counter in Atlanta. (Sent to prison for a parole violation over a traffic offense, King was released after three days following an appeal by Robert F. Kennedy.)

In 1967, the U.S. space probe Mariner 5 flew past Venus.

In 1977, the supersonic Concorde made its first landing in New York City.

In 1987, the stock market crashed as the Dow Jones Industrial Average plunged 508 points, or 22.6 percent in value.

In 1994, 22 people were killed as a terrorist bomb shattered a bus in the heart of Tel Aviv's shopping district. Entertainer Martha Raye died in Los Angeles at age 78.

Ten years ago: A government advisory panel of scientists declared that PPA (phenylpropanolamine), an ingredient used in dozens of popular over-the-counter medicines, could not be classified as safe, saying it could be the cause of several hundred hemorrhagic strokes suffered annually by people under 50.

Five years ago: A defiant Saddam Hussein pleaded innocent to charges of pre-meditated murder and torture as his trial opened under heavy security in the former headquarters of his Baath Party in Baghdad. The Houston Astros clinched their first World Series berth with a 5-1 win over St. Louis in Game 6 of the National League Championship Series.

One year ago: The Justice Department issued a new policy memo, telling prosecutors that pot-smoking patients or their sanctioned suppliers should not be targeted for federal prosecution in states that allowed medical marijuana. Actor Joseph Wiseman, 91, who played the sinister Dr. No in the first James Bond feature film, died in New York City.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"No! The two kinds of people on Earth that I mean Are the people who lift and the people who lean."
— Ella Wheeler Wilcox

This was my favorite deal from the Birmingham Nationals, when New York expert Mel Colchamiro cornered me on my way to the elevator and gave me a beautiful hand. Beware: It's far harder than it looks, even though it is far from complicated.

Without going into too many details of the auction — we would not want to embarrass any guilty parties — consider the play in six spades. Best defense is obviously to lead two rounds of clubs, but your generous opponent plays a top club and shifts to diamonds. Obviously he believes you might have bid a slam off two aces. It is up to you to punish him for such an insult.

The natural thing to do is to cash the spade ace and the heart king. Then you lead the spade 10 from hand. If West discards, you need the heart queen to fall. If West follows, you must guess immediately whether trumps are splitting or hearts behaving. That looks pretty good, but it is far from best.

The winning line is to overtake the heart king with the ace at trick two and ruff a heart high. If that suit splits or if the heart queen is bare, you have no problem in drawing trumps, ending in dummy. If hearts do not behave, you need 2-2 spades — it's as simple as that. On this occasion hearts split and spades do not, so if you play spades first, you had better guess very well!

ANSWER: Today's deal encapsulates an important idea. When both members of a partnership pass at their first turn, their subsequent objective is always assumed to be to find the best partscore, not to look for game. Accordingly, a response by you here of two no-trump will NOT be natural and to play. It suggests a two-suiter (presumably the minors) and asks partner to bid his first playable spot.

IF OCTOBER 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Learning to be compassionate and caring for others could be an underlying theme of the year ahead. You could have career aspirations that will come to fruition in December or January, but the important thing is to get in touch with the spiritual side of life. Since you are more romantic at heart and concerned with spiritual ideals, your love life may blossom. Next spring is a time to work hard, learn how to be organized and efficient and take on more responsibilities. The experience you gain this year will be a valuable asset.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The more you give, the more you receive. It might not be an identical trade, but you will be satisfied by the results if you are extra generous. Buy something to enhance your appearance — like a new jacket.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Love can overcome the limits of the space-time continuum. Spirits rise like smoke when you concentrate on the spiritual and shove business matters to the back burners. Spend time with the ones you care for.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Follow your bliss. When others are merely treading water, you are buoyed up by inspiration. Your inner muse will give you a sense of direction and help you accomplish more through insightful meditation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone exciting might inject excitement into your day. Maybe it's gossip or maybe a distraction. Either way, find a way to check the facts before you pass on rumors or yield to temptation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If folks are fine, wine them and dine them. Your special someone is in the mood for love and will be delighted by sensual treats. Buy something daring or dramatic that will give you pleasure for years.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Luckily, you are likely to have the phone number that reaches the horse's mouth. Get the facts from the source as Good communication can prevent potential misunderstandings. Pass up offers and promises.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Play referee. Someone in close proximity might need you to blow the whistle or sort out an argument. You have better judgment than usual and can be counted upon to offer a wise and fair opinion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spread out the magic carpet and take a romantic ride. Make someone feel as though the sky is the limit. Love and true caring can be wordlessly communicated through numerous small gestures.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will go further by cooperating than by competing. Good manners and a friendly smile may earn you appreciation where it counts. You have a firm handle on the ups and downs of your finances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Beauty is more than skin deep. You can learn to appreciate others for their fine ideals and like to have the best of everything. Go ahead and buy a tasteful item you have been yearning to own.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The time is on hand for encounters of the blissful kind. A new hookup or an old acquaintance might demonstrate more understanding and sympathy than you thought possible. Bask in romantic bliss.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Exercise your good taste by being a maven of discrimination. Team up with an accomplished co-worker who can fill in the gaps in your knowledge or spend time with those who improve your spirits.

COWGIRLS STEP INTO THE SPOTLIGHT

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

College of Southern Idaho freshman rodeo team members Samantha Logan, left, Chuck Povey and Kiara Wanner had a great start to the season.

CSI women's rodeo team among nation's elite

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

After many years of being in the shadow of the College of Southern Idaho men's rodeo team, CSI's cowgirls stepped firmly into the spotlight this season.

Thanks in part to outstanding performances by three freshmen — Samantha Logan of Jerome, Chuck Povey of Clinton and Kiara Wanner of Preston — the Golden Eagles rank first in the Rocky Mountain Region rodeo standings at the midway point of the season.

"This team and the girls are amazing," said Logan, who leads the region in barrel racing and ranks fourth nationally. "Everyone is working for the same thing.

"This team and the girls are amazing. Everyone is working for the same thing. They all show up for practice and stay late. Tracy Bailey is so talented and very serious. Our freshmen are really awesome. Chuck has such a strong mental attitude. She won't stop until she has it right."

They all show up for practice and stay late. Tracy Bailey is so talented and very serious. Our freshmen are really awesome. Chuck has such a strong mental attitude. She won't stop until she has it right."

CSI's 2,239 points give it a huge lead over second-place Southern Utah (1,322.5 points) in the region standings. It's a cushion that began with a first-place finish in the season's opening rodeo in September.

CSI followed with team titles in the Rocky Mountain Regional and Idaho State rodeos. The Eagles made a clean sweep of the 2010 fall season with another team championship at Utah State.

Those efforts put CSI second nationally, with only Montana State (2,661.5) owning more points.

"I love the team and the girls," said Povey. "We are like a big family. All of us want to win and know not to underestimate anyone else. We all expect great things. We want our names on the wall."

That would be the large yellow wall on the south side of Shawn Davis Arena in the Eldon Evans Expo Center where CSI's national championship teams and top cowboys and cowgirls are listed. If the second half of the season mirrors the first, these Eagles could very well etch their names in history.

Povey has been the most consistent cowgirl on the team and leads the all-around standings in the Rocky Mountain Region.

She ranks third nationally in the all-around and is 16th in breakaway and 25th in goat tying.

"I had no idea what to expect in college," said Povey. "The competition in college is a lot different and it has more mature people. One of my goals was to do my best and let people know I'm here. I know I can do this. I never thought I would be where I am."

Atop 10-year old mare Bell, the same horse she rode in high school, Logan has found success in barrel racing.

"One of my goals in college rodeo was to make the top 10 at some rodeo," said Logan. "Bell knows rodeo and how to run barrels, but Kimberly's Nellie Makings (9) sets the ball Monday during Game 1 against Buhl in the SCIC volleyball tournament in Filer.

Kimberly earns two five-set victories

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

FILER — Kimberly survived two grueling five-set matches Monday night.

It's reward: Home-court advantage for the final day of the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference Tournament.

The second-seeded Bulldogs outlasted top-seeded host Filer 25-17, 17-25, 25-21, 18-25, 15-11 late Monday to earn a spot in Wednesday's championship match.

"We played so hard, we just kept it together and kept our focus and intensity up," said Kalie Wright, who had 13 kills and 32 digs for Kimberly.

Nellie Makings added 30 assists, while Katy Robinson had 19 kills and Kylie Haskell added 25 digs for the Bulldogs, who will face Wednesday's winner between Filer and Buhl.

Mackenzie Jasper had 14 kills for Filer, while Audrey Croy had 11 and Sierra Koyle nine.

Lee fans 13 as Rangers blank Yankees

By Mike Fitzpatrick
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Cliff Lee was even better than before in the postseason, and that was no small feat.

The ace of October went through the New York Yankees like a buzzsaw again, striking out 13 and pitching the Texas Rangers to an 8-0 victory Monday night for a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven AL championship series.

Josh Hamilton hit an early two-run homer off Andy Pettitte and started a six-run outburst in the ninth with a leadoff double. Lee allowed only two singles in eight innings and became the first pitcher to reach double digits in strikeouts three times in one postseason.

Mr. Automatic improved to 7-0 with a 1.26 ERA in eight postseason starts. Three of those wins have come against the power-packed Yankees, including two in last year's World Series for Philadelphia.

New York won the other four games to take home its 27th championship, but now faces a tall task if it plans to repeat. The Yankees must win three straight against the resilient Rangers to advance without facing Lee in a decisive Game 7 at Texas.

Game 4 is Tuesday night and the Yankees say they will start struggling right-hander A.J. Burnett, who hasn't pitched since Oct. 2. Tommy Hunter goes for Texas in his first career start at Yankee Stadium.

Pettitte, the ol' pro seeking his 20th postseason win, did his best to match Lee. But the longtime New York left-hander hung a first-inning breaking ball that Hamilton yanked over the short porch in right for his second homer of the series.

Texas broke it open in the ninth against an ineffective David Robertson, getting RBI singles from Nelson Cruz and Bengie Molina, plus a two-run single by Mitch Moreland.

Rangers closer Neftali Feliz flung his 100 mph fastball in the ninth and finished the two-hitter in front of a nearly empty ballpark, adding two strikeouts to

Bruins, Tigers advance at GBC tournament

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

If you're going to play your best volleyball of the season, this is the time to do it.

Third-seeded Jerome overwhelmed and outplayed Wood River to beat the second-seeded Wolverines 25-18, 25-22, 24-26, 25-19 on the first day of the Great Basin Conference Tournament at Twin Falls High School.

Outside hitter Melissa Leavitt recorded nine kills and Carrie Thibault added seven to lead the Tigers.

"We have gotten better in every practice, every match all season," said libero Melissa Marsing. "We made it a goal to improve throughout the season and absolutely we're playing the best we have all season and to do it at districts is great."

Wood River coach Tim Richards said before the tournament that the Great Basin Conference is tougher than people give it credit for and his team found that out first hand Monday night, as outside of a late rally in set three, the Wolverines were outplayed by Jerome.

"Jerome was the more aggressive team out there tonight," Richards said. "We had a hard time stopping them."

Jerome's Frankie Carey dished out 19 assists and Savannah Lott and Haylee Burnham each had solid nights at the service stripe, recording four aces each.

Wood River plays tonight against today's winner between No. 5 Minico and No. 6 Canyon Ridge, while Jerome moves on for a rematch against No. 1 Twin Falls.

The Bruins didn't need five sets this time against Minico, easily defeating the Spartans in four, 25-15, 23-25, 25-9, 25-13.

"We definitely picked up the intensity from last match against them," said senior libero Mallory Jund, who recorded 18 digs.

Allie Johnson dished out 34 assists and Cheltzie Williams had a great all-around night with 15 kills, nine digs and 4.5 blocks.

Freshman Sierra Starley recorded a double-double with 12 kills and 14 digs and senior Taylor Lancaster added 10 kills.

Top-seeded Mushers get test in semifinals

Times-News

The top-seeded Camas County Mushers had their hands full with fourth-seeded Lighthouse Christian Monday at the Northside Conference Volleyball Tournament in Carey.

Camas County dropped the first set before grinding out a 16-25, 25-22, 25-23, 25-19 win to reach Wednesday's championship match against Dietrich.

"Lighthouse was a really great opponent," said Camas County coach Shelly Schroeder. "They came out strong for sure. Some of the best defense I've ever seen."

Lighthouse Christian coach Tobie Helman concurred, calling it one of the best defensive matches her team has had. Libero Brynli

Wooten led the way with 24 digs, some of which Helman called "just amazing."

After breezing through most matches during the regular season, Schroeder said Monday's test was good for a young Mushers squad that had to face the fear of losing and dig deep to win.

"That was very valuable and I think they'll come out flying on Wednesday," she said.

Katelyn Peterson led Camas County with 28 kills, while Carlie Strom had 26 hits. Libero Sierra Sabin dug up a whopping 55 balls, while setter Larissa Stewart had a solid night.

Andrea Helman had 10 kills and seven aces for the Lions, while Becca Storm and Kyanna Jones had seven kills apiece. Brooklyn VanderStelt tallied 28 assists. Lighthouse Christian faces either Carey or the Community School tonight.

DIETRICH 3, RICHFIELD 0

Moriah Dill had 22 kills, while Jessica Perron dished out 39 assists as Dietrich swept Richfield 25-20, 25-11, 25-13 to earn a spot in Wednesday's championship match.

Cheyenne Hubert and Yoshira McDaniel earned coach Traci Perron's praise for timely kills, while Charley Bingham was solid defensively.

Alex Berthelson had three aces and recorded 10 straight service points in the third set.

The Blue Devils now set their sets on top-seeded Camas County.

"You just do the best you can and hope for a good outcome," said Traci Perron. "We know what we've got to do it, we just have to go out there and execute."

CASTLEFORD 3, MURTAUGH 0

Karli Bower's 10 kills and seven blocks aided Castleford's 25-15, 25-20, 25-23 sweep of Murtaugh in an elimination match Monday.

Kendra Flores added 10 assists for the Wolves, who advance to face Richfield in another elimination match today.

"Looking forward to the next game," said Castleford coach Oscar Flores. "The girls played really, really good."

Collins lead Titans past Jags

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Tennessee's Vince Young watched from the sideline. Jacksonville's David Garrard was in the locker room.

Both starting quarterbacks were knocked out of Monday night's game, turning things over to veteran Kerry Collins and recently signed Trent Edwards.

The backups performed as expected, with Collins leading the Titans to a 30-3 victory and Edwards looking mostly like a guy who joined the team three weeks ago.

Collins completed 11 of 16 passes for 110 yards and a touchdown, directed five consecutive scoring drives and put the Titans (4-2) atop the AFC South. Tennessee, which also got 111 yards rushing and a late score from Chris Johnson, moved into a three-way tie with Indianapolis and Houston.

The Jaguars (3-3), meanwhile, were left in a familiar position. They finished last in the division the last two years and are again in chase mode.

Young threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to Kenny Britt on the opening drive, then left the game with a sprained left knee when he fumbled a snap on the next series. Collins replaced him and threw a short TD to Bo Scaife and led the Titans on time-consuming drives to keep control.

Jacksonville was plagued by turnovers for the second straight week. Coach Jack Del Rio's team was able to overcome three mistakes against winless Buffalo. No such luck against Tennessee, which has won six of the last eight in the series.

The Titans turned three short fields into 13 points, taking advantage of two interceptions and a short punt. Making matters worse for Jacksonville, tight end Mercedes Lewis fumbled at the Tennessee 10-yard line in the second quarter and receiver Tiquan Underwood let Vincent Fuller rip a pass out of his hands in the end zone in the fourth.

The Jaguars finished with four turnovers.

Garrard, hit several times early, completed 7 of 12 passes for 49 yards, with an interception. He was knocked out in the second quarter with a concussion after getting rocked by Will Witherspoon.

Edwards, the former Buffalo starter who was claimed off waivers three weeks ago, stepped in for his first action with the Jaguars. He was 11 of 20 for 115 yards, with two interceptions.

Jacksonville finished with 225 yards, as Tennessee's defense stuffed Maurice Jones-Drew, blanketed Mike Sims-Walker and kept steady pressure on whoever lined up at quarterback.

The Titans moved the ball with relative ease all night, with Young and Collins at the helm. They finished with 324 yards, including a 35-yard touchdown run by Chris Johnson on his final carry of the night.

Jones-Drew and Johnson set an NFL record the last time they shared a field. Jones-Drew ran for a career-high 177 yards and two touchdowns, Johnson finished with a career-high 228 yards and two scores. Together, they gave the league its first game with at least four TD runs of at least 50 yards.

Tennessee won that one 30-13 last November.

sometimes I think I may hold her back. But when it is time to run, Bell is ready. I lack some self-confidence but my coaches and friends have noticed that I have stepped up my aggressiveness."

Two other CSI cowgirls also find themselves ranked in the top 25 of the national standings, including Wanner (19th in barrels) and Bailey (sixth in goat tying). Chelsi Schvaneveldt of Jerome, Kayla Mulick of Mackay and Jacy Jo Johnson of Tremonton, Utah, round of CSI's small but talented roster.

The group says this fall's success is rooted in the team's practice sessions.

"One of the biggest adjustments to college is that we practice as a team," said Logan. "While I'm sitting in class, I'm looking forward to practice. Practicing is for me because I know Bell will do her job. At practice, the girls and coaches all help each other."

"You have to love rodeo," added Povey. "Practice is all I know. In my free time, practicing is what I love. More practice will make me be better overall and it will pay off."

increase Texas' total to 15 — one shy of a postseason record for Yankees batters.

New York's two hits matched a postseason low also set in Game 4 of the 1958 World Series and Game 3 of the 2001 division series.

Michael Young had three hits for the Rangers, who are 4-0 on the road in these playoffs. Texas won all three games at Tampa Bay in the first round, including a pair of masterful performances by Lee.

Derek Jeter, Alex Rodriguez and the Yankees fared no better. Cutters, curves, sliders — they couldn't touch Lee, who pumps in one strike after another like a robot programmed to do so.

Lee was so dominant, New York hitters were left shaking their heads in the dugout or questioning calls by plate umpire Jim Reynolds.

Robinson Cano showed bunt, Brett Gardner tried another headfirst dive into first base. None of it worked.

Gardner singled leading off the sixth and stole second, but Lee never rattled. He struck out Jeter for the second time, then induced routine grounders from Nick Swisher and Mark Teixeira, who is 0 for 11 in the series.

GBC

Minico's Chelsea Hepworth had a big night at the net, recording 15 blocks.

"She is a great middle blocker. Good thing for us is we have so many hitters and had her running around all night, which is a hard thing to do," said Twin Falls coach B.J. Price.

The Bruins face Jerome with the winner going to the District IV championship match on Thursday, playing for a berth to the Class 4A state tournament Oct. 29-30.

"It should be a great match," Price said.

CANYON RIDGE 3, BURLEY 1

Sixth-seeded Canyon Ridge is still in the GBC tournament after defeating No. 4 Burley 25-19, 24-26, 25-18, 25-12 in Monday's late elimination match.

Libero Lauren Shotwell recorded 18 digs and Anastasia Baird recorded 10 kills and four stuff blocks to lead the Riverhawks.

"We weren't going to be done tonight," said Canyon Ridge coach Stacy Boer. "We're the bottom seed in the tournament, people expect us to be out, but we'll fight to the end."

Burley's season ends with the loss, finishing 4-8 in Great Basin Conference play.

MINICO 3, BURLEY 1

Led by Hepworth and her 14 blocks, the No. 5 Minico Spartans beat No. 4 Burley 25-3, 16-25, 25-22, 25-9.

Ashley Parker and Hannah Bailey recorded six and seven blocks, respectively, to overwhelm Burley at the net.

"We came out really excited and did a great job defensively," said Hepworth, who added nine kills and nine digs.

Tiffany Joyce added nine digs and Kaylee Kostka handed out 20 assists.

Burley sophomore Brooke Bauer recorded four kills and two blocks and Melanie Gerard added four kills.

JEROME 3, CANYON RIDGE 0

Haylee Burnham smashed 10 kills to lead Jerome past No. 6 Canyon Ridge 25-12, 26-24, 25-18 in its first match of the tournament.

Savannah Lott recorded nine kills and Melissa Leavitt added eight for the Tigers. Frankie Carey had 25 assists and Jasmine Branch played solid at the net, recording five blocks.

Canyon Ridge's Eva Sites led the Riverhawks with three kills and Kylee Denney dished out six assists.

SCIC

Moriah Boone recorded 23 digs, while Tora Cobb chipped in 20.

"We made too many mistakes in a row," said Filer coach Ed Richards. "We couldn't get our serve-receive passing like we wanted."

KIMBERLY 3, BUHL 2

Everything that had worked successfully for two set for the No. 3 Buhl Indians seemed to get lost between the second and third sets.

And where ever that magic went, the No. 2 Bulldogs found it as Kimberly mounted a huge comeback and defeated the Indians 22-25, 18-25, 25-21, 25-16, 15-7.

Down 2-0, Kimberly found the consistency it had lacked for Games 1 and 2.

"We started a run and started playing consistent with no ups or downs," said Kimberly coach Lawrence Pfefferle. "Taylor (Sievers) did a great job at the net. This game can be really crazy. Buhl is a scrappy team." Wright recorded a double-double for Kimbelry with 13 kills and 22 digs. Robinson added 12 kills and Makings had eight kills and dished out 26 assists. Sievers and Megan Strayer each had five blocks.

Wright chalked the comeback up to teamwork.

Kimberly senior Hannah Lentz saw it a different way.

"The first two games we had no intensity and it was nerve-wracking," said Lentz. "We needed a slap in the face to get in the match."

Buhl coach Denny Moretto could only shake her head as she looked back at the match.

"We came out relaxed, not really up or down," said Moretto. "The girls all knew what needed to be done. Now they've chosen the hard way to get it done. I think they started playing afraid to lose and not to win."

Buhl junior Morgan Pearson had a game-high 19 kills and Katherine Hunter followed with 15 kills and three aces. Annie Lauda added six blocks and setter Cassidee Kippes had 43 assists.

"Cassidee just really has incredible feet," said Moretto. "She is everywhere."

Seau drives off cliff, hospitalized with injuries

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Former NFL star linebacker Junior Seau drove off a cliff and was hospitalized with minor injuries Monday, less than nine hours after he was arrested on suspicion of domestic violence.

The 12-time Pro Bowler's white Cadillac SUV was found on the beach about 100 feet below the roadside, said Carlsbad police Lt. Kelly Cain. Cain said it wasn't a sheer cliff, but was a significant, rough slope. Seau was taken to Scripps La Jolla Hospital in San Diego.

Seau's 25-year-old live-in girlfriend told authorities that Seau assaulted her during an argument Sunday night at his Oceanside home, according to Oceanside police. She appeared to have minor injuries and did not require medical treatment.

Seau, 41, was arrested outside his home about two hours after police arrived. He wasn't home when authorities arrived but they asked him to return when he called his girlfriend.

Seau posted bail and was released from the San Diego County jail in Vista.

"At this point we think he's fine but we really don't have any comment," said Richard Doan, who answered the cell phone of Bette Hoffman, who works for Seau's foundation. "There are no injuries but he seems to be a little shaken up."

NFL MAY START SUSPENDING PLAYERS FOR VIOLENT HITS

NEW YORK — Aiming for the head or leading with the helmet to deliver a blow could soon cost NFL players game time as well as money.

The league is considering suspending players for illegal hits in an effort to help prevent serious injuries, NFL executive vice president of football operations Ray Anderson told The Associated Press on Monday, one day after several scary collisions in games.

"There's strong testimonial for looking readily at evaluating discipline, especially in the areas of egregious and elevated dangerous hits," he said in a phone interview. "Going forward there are certain hits that occurred that will be more susceptible to suspension."

Anderson, a member of the league's competition committee and one of its loudest voices on the need for enhanced player safety, said the NFL could make the changes immediately, with Commissioner Roger Goodell's approval. League officials would consult with the players' union, but he didn't expect any opposition. "Obviously suspensions would be a much bigger deal than fining guys," said Colts center Jeff Saturday, the team's player representative. "But if guys are headhunting out there to knock a guy out of the game, that's the only way to take care of it."

On Sunday, the Eagles' DeSean Jackson and the Falcons' Dunta Robinson were knocked out of their game after a frightening collision in which Robinson launched himself head first.

Both sustained concussions.

EAGLES JACKSON LIKELY OUT VS. TITANS

PHILADELPHIA — DeSean Jackson can't remember the vicious collision that left him with a concussion. That's a typical consequence for anyone who suffers such a violent head injury. So is missing playing time.

Jackson, the dynamic Eagles wide receiver, will almost certainly sit out Sunday's game against Tennessee after he was injured in a nasty head-on collision with Atlanta cornerback Dunta Robinson. Jackson had soreness in his neck and shoulders a day after the blast, but was otherwise in good spirits and receiving treatment Monday in the training room.

"I will tell you that it would be a stretch for him, a real stretch, for him to make it this weekend," coach Andy Reid said.

HOOK 'EM HORNS DREW FLAG FOR COWBOYS, NOT LEAPFROG

IRVING, Texas — The touchdown-celebration penalty the Dallas Cowboys received Sunday wasn't for Miles Austin leapfrogging Roy Williams in the end zone,

It was against receiver Sam Hurd for flashing a University of Texas "Hook 'em Horns" hand gesture along with Williams. That's what Carl Johnson, the league's vice president of officiating, told Cowboys coach Wade Phillips on Monday.

Austin was announced as being guilty during Dallas' 24-21 loss to Minnesota. Phillips said an official on the sideline also told him it was Austin's fault.

The bigger issue for the Cowboys is that this was the second straight week they've been flagged for an excessive celebration. Phillips said players were told Monday not to do anything except head for the sideline.
