Questions target Hartgen

Legislative, Twin Falls County candidates talk at Chamber meeting

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, got as many questions directed at him specifically as three Twin Falls County Commission candidates received in total at a forum hosted by the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Hartgen and his Democratic opponent, Bill Chisholm, answered questions about the budget, the 17th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and illegal immigration. Their first question, directed specifically at Hartgen, was fairly pointed.

"The claim that the governor and the Legislature has about no new taxes and a balanced budget is relatively weak in a couple of areas," Brad Siegel, who wore an "Allred for Governor" badge, began. Most school districts were forced to ask for supplemental levies, essentially deferring a state tax increase in favor of a local one, Siegel continued — and delays to state Medicaid payments didn't feel like balancing the budget either.

So what would Hartgen do differently this year?

To begin, he said, not all school districts passed supplemental levies — some used furlough days and other cost-cutting measures instead of asking locals for more cash.

He also painted a bleak picture moving forward.

"I've been advising school superintendents that if I were a school superintendent, I'd do a level budget for where I am now and one that's 2 percent less," Hartgen said. "Hopefully I wouldn't have to get to that, but I might. That's just good, careful, prudent planning."

Amendment, which puts U.S. Senate elections to the direct vote of the people and authorizes the state's executive to fill vacancies. Repealing the amendment is now part of the state Republican party plank.

While it's a good question to examine, "to (repeal the amendment) would remove the direct election power that we do have, and that comes up every six years," Hartgen said, adding that many appointed and continuously elected senators have recently lost their seats across the nation.

Chisholm, who's run in every election in 1978, said people should be empowered to run for office, perhaps by making it part of high school government classes.

"It's really the fault of the people for not challenging (incumbents)," Chisholm said.

Questions to the county commission candidates bookended those for the state representatives. But the first the former fielded, what makes them different and why they should be voted for, left questioner Jim Kern dissatisfied. He said Democrat Gary Eller was the only one to even head toward answering the question, though Kern said he needs to research the

Medicaid dental cuts reversed

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Many Idaho dentists and patients have something to smile about after a state Medicaid contractor agreed to allow recently denied dentists back into the program.

Representatives of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, the Idaho State Dental Association, Blue Cross of Idaho and the state's Medicaid subcontractor, DentaQuest, met Tuesday to negotiate changes DentaQuest made to dental coverage. The meeting ended with an agreement that, for the time being, all dentists formerly enrolled in the Medicaid-funded Idaho Smiles program will continue in it. DentaQuest will try again to modify the program, this time with the input of an advisory panel.

In September, DentaQuest announced it would cut some of the state's biggest dental providers — about 150 dentists — out of Idaho Smiles, which treats low-income children and working-age adults. DentaQuest has run Idaho Smiles for Blue Cross of Idaho for three years, but recently took over as the provider contractor and reduced the number of providers to save money.

Health and Welfare spokesman Tom Shanahan said parties agreed to come to the table after Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter received complaints from dentists statewide. Shanahan said Otter recognized there was a lack of communication and encouraged the face-to-face meeting.

Dr. Quinn Dufurrena, Idaho State Dental Association executive director, said DentaQuest had promised to create an advisory panel of dentists back in February but didn't. Now it's finally going to happen, and Dufurrena said he expects the committee will have more-acceptable recommendations by mid-November. The panel's composition is yet to be determined.

Three M.V. schools exceed goals

BURLEY — Three south-central Idaho elementary schools were honored by state officials on Tuesday for exceeding their Adequate Yearly Progress goals.

Mountain View Elementary School Principal Delia Valdez said she was surprised to learn that her Burley school made progress beyond the state's AYP goals under the federally mandated No Child Left Behind program.

Mountain View's kindergarten through third-grade students and teachers won the Idaho State Board of Education's 2010 Additional Yearly Growth Award for exceeding progress goals in the subgroup of reading for Hispanic students.

"This is the validation for the hard work that you guys do every day," Valdez told staff during the presentation of the award.

Otter visits IEN classroom

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter stepped to a teacher's podium and faced the television screens in the classroom at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls.

Images appeared of students in two distant classrooms, at Sugar-Salem High School in Sugar City and Clark Fork High School in Clark Fork. Otter waved and greeted the students before settling into a front-row seat to hear the English lesson from Kimberly Madsen, the instructor.

"Hello Clark Fork," Otter said. "Hello Sugar-Salem."

The Tuesday class the governor visited is offered through the Idaho Education Network, a statewide plan to connect schools with expanded bandwidth and help students get instruction from far-flung locations. Eighty-seven high schools are currently connected to the network, with a goal of connecting all high schools in the state by July 2012.

Otter watched the entire class, listening to Madsen talk about how to pare down flabby prose and avoid cliches.

"I'm going to test you," Madsen joked with the governor.

Budget, tax issues feature in Dist. 25 debate

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

GOODING — Voters in Legislative District 25 heard directly from candidates for House and Senate seats Tuesday evening, two weeks before the Nov. 2 election.

Speakers at a forum at Gooding High School covered two races, including that for the seat of the late Sen. Clint Stennett, a Democrat who served in that office for eight terms. On the ballot are: Democrat Michelle Stennett of Ketchum, Stennett's widow who filled in for him last session; Republican Jim Donoval of Sun Valley; and Randall Patterson of Carey, with the Constitution Party.

When asked if state budget shortfalls should be addressed through increasing revenue or decreasing spending, Donoval said that it's necessary to look for efficiencies in government. Noting that education makes up a majority of the budget, he said that school-district consolidation should be looked at, adding that schools need to find reductions that don't impact teacher salaries.

Stennett said that revenue sources to look at could include the sales-tax exemptions system and the Idaho Millennium Fund.

She said that there's "no political will" to consolidate schools, but that schools can save money by consolidating services and buying in bulk to save money.

Patterson said that reduced spending is crucial, and that entitlement programs like food stamps and welfare should be capped and gradually phased out.

When asked if they believe in more or less government, Patterson said he believes in less.

"I'm all for limited government," he said.

Donoval said the state's providing the right services, but that it's crucial to be more economic and live efficiently within the state's means.

Stennett said the Legislature has already cut much from programs across the state.

"To say that we have more or less government, they're pretty lean right now," she said.

Stennett and Donoval did agree that the state needs to look at how to tax online sales, which it doesn't have a system for. Stennett said a lack of an online sales tax makes it difficult for local businesses that are collecting sales taxes to be competitive.

Donoval said he saw a similar problem when he lived in Illinois, where companies completed mail-order beer and wine sales without collecting taxes on them.

"The concept of a sales tax is that any product purchased from within your state should be taxed at the same rate," he said.

Patterson differed from the two, saying he believed that it would be too difficult to track online sales.

The issue also came up in the second part of the forum, when Democratic Rep. Donna Pence of Gooding faced Alex Sutter of Richfield, her Republican challenger.

"It really makes the playing field more equal," Pence said about online sales taxes.

Sutter said he believes the issue is federal because online sales cross state lines. He also noted Idaho has an honor system for people to report on their state income tax return any purchases that didn't have sales tax collected on them.

"We need to be honest enough to do that," Sutter said.

Pence distanced herself from Democrats in Washington, D.C., when asked to defend her party's actions involving federal stimulus spending, the overhaul of health care, and carbon cap and trade. She reminded the audience that as a state legislator, she deals with state issues, not federal issues.

"That's not part of my job description," she said.

Open house on hospital to be held today

Times-News

The Twin Falls County commissioners want to hear any and all ideas for the Addison Avenue hospital building at a public comment session today at the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

Plans between the county and St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center have the hospital going vacant next summer.

The open house — which will be at 5 p.m. at the county courthouse, 425 Shoshone St. N., Twin Falls — aims to solicit ideas from the general public and, if interest is high enough, may lead to a citizen advisory committee, Commissioner Terry Kramer said last month.

Kramer said commissioners want to get two lists of suggestions: one for all possible uses of the building, from maximum-security prison to nursing home, and another for what people's ideal use for the building would be. He called it a community brainstorming session.

"We're going to set the flavor for this part of town, let's face it," Kramer said.

candidates more before any of them get his vote.

Eller, who just stopped ranching and is a retired Army officer, cited his "breadth of experience."

"I've dealt with large budgets in the past, I've dealt with large bureaucracies in the past," he said, adding in the forum's only direct jab at an opponent, Mills. "It's not a for-profit enterprise. Words like 'bonuses' should never be spoken of when you are dealing with taxpayer money and government department heads."

Mills told the Times-News he would encourage budget trimming in the various county departments by letting the departments keep a percentage of year-end savings in their general funds or for bonuses.

Carpenter's response was the focus of his campaign: raising expectations and setting the scene for new technology and energy programs. He also mentioned his plan to donate half of his $67,000 commission salary toward efficiency investments if elected.

"My own building, I was able to bring down costs with efficiency 75 percent," Carpenter said. "And this is just one of many, many old structures in every community through the state where if we did basic, basic renovations that the cost could come down."

Mills touted his Republican credentials and also warned of a possible county budget shortfall from reduced property values. He said he supports overall how county commissioners are working now.

"I uphold to the Republican values that we have: less taxes, less government in our lives," he said. "If there is this shortfall, there's going to need to be some budget constraints made, and I'm willing to step into that."

In order to qualify for the award, schools had to meet AYP goals for two consecutive years and show a 10 percent improvement in at least one of 41 measured subcategories.

SBOE spokesman Mark Browning said Mountain View exceeded its goals by nearly 18 percent, which ranked it among the state's top three schools.

Of more than 700 elementary, middle and high schools in the state, only 13 awards were given to nine schools.

Horizon Elementary School in Jerome was honored for exceeding its math goals for students receiving free or reduced-price lunches, while Hailey Elementary School received two awards for additional growth in reading for Hispanic students and reading for students receiving free or reduced-price lunches.

Horizon Principal Teresa Jones said it was really nice for the state to give out the awards without the schools having to apply for them.

Because the students at the K-3 school who earned the award-winning scores have moved on to Summit Elementary School now, Jones will visit Summit on Friday to share the news with those students.

"Idaho is a national leader," said Tom Luna, superintendent of Idaho public schools, in a press release announcing the awards. "Our success is not a coincidence. It takes teamwork and focus. The schools awarded today are examples of dedicated teachers, hard-working students and involved parents."

Hailey Elementary Principal Tom Bailey said that his school was one of only two in the state to take home awards in two subcategories.

"During the last couple of years we have really focused on the students with deficits to pinpoint those gaps," Bailey said.

The school relies on several programs like a reading clinic, phonics decoding and a Web-based computer program called Study Island.

"It's been very successful in raising those deficits but it also raises the scores for students who are proficient and advanced," Bailey said.

The school's staff has also motivated students to take the tests seriously and set individual goals for each student.

"The losers were going to be the tens of thousands of patients who no longer had access to dental care," Dufurrena said. "What DentaQuest did was a mistake and now it's being corrected."

It wasn't just the Medicaid providers who would be affected. Dr. Adam Hodges, dental director of Family Health Services of Twin Falls, said reducing the number of providers would have a ripple effect, affecting children most of all.

"It would create a big access-to-care issue," Hodges said. "We already have a full patient load and Medicaid patients who could no longer see their provider would be told, 'Go see Family Health.'"

Dr. Don Wyatt, president of the Southern Idaho Dental Association, said the change would have affected a significant number of pediatric dentists in the Magic Valley. Among those would have been two Twin Falls clinics whose patient loads are about 60 percent children on Medicaid, Hodges said.

"In all reality, there's no chance that what they were proposing would have been sufficient," Wyatt said.

Steve Pollock, president of DentaQuest, said the company didn't create an advisory committee before because it was working on a constraining timeline.

Pollock said he'll exchange names of potential committee members with the dental association, fleshing the list out by the end of the month.

"We are committed to working with the panel," Pollock said. "The most important thing is that the members have the right care."

Otter

Otter also visited with college officials and asked questions about the college's dual-credit courses, which are advanced classes that allow students to gain credits toward their high school diploma and for college at the same time.

After the class, Otter said he was impressed with the level of feedback and interaction that's possible between the teacher and students.

He also noted that the IEN can be used for other educational purposes, such as emergency medical technician classes or homeland security training for law enforcement.

"For us, it's one more tool in our toolbox," said John Miller, an instructional dean at CSI who oversees dual-credit courses.

CSI is currently connected to 11 schools throughout the state, with about 140 students currently enrolled in eight CSI dual-credit courses through the IEN.

That's a number that's growing. Last fall, it was just five schools, three classes and 42 students.

Overall, CSI has nearly 1,500 students enrolled in dual-credit courses, with about 220 students taking them through the IEN or Idaho Digital Learning Academy.

Charge dropped against T.F. man

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Jesus Vasquez-Vargas is in the clear.

The Twin Falls County Prosecutor's Office recently dropped a rape charge against the 38-year-old Twin Falls man, who was initially arrested in late August after a Twin Falls woman reported him to police.

The motion to dismiss the charge was filed by Deputy Prosecutor Leah Fredback on Oct. 13 and signed by 5th District Magistrate Judge Roger Harris the same day. According to the motion filed, "after interviewing the victim and considering her wishes, in addition to the lack of evidence to prove this case beyond a reasonable doubt, the State dismisses at this time."

Vasquez-Vargas, whose bond was set at $100,000, was released from the Twin Falls County Jail on Thursday.

T.F. man faces 5th DUI charge in 15 years

Martin Arizmendi-Sanchez, 47, was arrested on a felony driving under the influence charge early Tuesday morning, his fifth DUI charge since 1996.

According to police records, Arizmendi-Sanchez blew a .301, more than three times the legal limit to drive. He was also charged with driving without privileges and an open container violation. His bonds were set at $50,000 for the DUI and $10,000 for the other charges.

This isn't the first time Arizmendi-Sanchez has been caught driving while intoxicated. He was convicted of DUI three times in Twin Falls County — once in 1996 and twice in 2006 — and once in Jerome County. In each Twin Falls County case, he was sentenced to less than a year of jail time with the bulk suspended. He was also convicted on an open-container charge in 2005.

In Jerome County, he received a sentence of two to six years in state prison for his latest DUI conviction in 2008. However, he was granted probation for eight years after completing a 180-day retained jurisdiction program. Arizmendi-Sanchez pleaded guilty to a probation violation in June 2010, but the prison sentence was again suspended.

After failing to appear at a status hearing in Jerome County 5th District Court in September, a $75,000 warrant was issued.

Arizmendi-Sanchez faces a pair of hearings in Twin Falls County: a preliminary hearing on Oct. 29 for the DUI charge and a Nov. 19 pretrial for driving without privileges and transporting an open container.

Switchbacks: A love story

When I was a lad, there were really only three winding Idaho mountain roads worthy of the name.

Going over White Bird Hill, Lily Grade or Teton Pass, there was always a fair chance you'd go off White Bird Hill, Lily Grade or Teton Pass. These were winding roads without "sideboards," as the politicians like to say nowadays.

White Bird Hill, which connects Riggins and Grangeville via U.S. Highway 95, and Teton Pass, which links Jackson Hole and Driggs, have long since been tamed by highway engineers. Lily Grade, in one of the more remote precincts of Twin Falls County, retains its considerable capacity to terrorize — especially along about February. But it ain't what it used to be in the Model-A-with-overheated-brakes era.

So you can imagine how thrilled I was this past weekend to find there's still a truly white-knuckle mountain road in the Gem State.

It's the 23-mile-long, narrow goat trail between the Owyhee County seat of Murphy and Silver City, the legendary ghost town. No, it doesn't have the massive logging trucks that once gave White Bird Hill its widow-making rep, but it doesn't have roadsides either.

By that I mean that through a series of dizzying switchbacks covered with loose gravel, there are no berms — much less guardrails. And there's a really big ditch just beyond.

It runs about 350 feet deep in spots, and you're on it before you know it.

If everybody drove 4 mph, that might not be an issue. But very large pickup trucks with Canyon County plates take the corners on two wheels.

I asked the lady at the Idaho Hotel what the attrition rate is for Silver City-bound motorists on that road. She shrugged her shoulders.

"Nobody really knows," she said. "But after the snow melts, the deputies always check the bottom of the canyon."

The same road once accommodated the 2,500 miners who lived in Silver City; they went back and forth to Boise by wagon. Life expectancy among Western miners in the 1860s and '70s — when the Idaho silver boom was at its peak — was 34 years, I read someplace.

Wonder how they lasted that long?

I never went in for roller-coasters and I came along too soon for video games. But with an acute sense of vertigo — I'm afraid of heights — I always got an adrenaline rush on switchbacks.

See, mountain highways are reality without the virtual reality. You really can die; the only question is how much.

When he was a young man, my grandpa signed up for a mail route between Driggs and Jackson. Teton Summit is 8,431 feet high and the grade tops out at 10 percent. Nowadays, it's a standard-width highway, but back in the day it had many stretches where two vehicles couldn't pass in the wintertime without one backing down.

It was my grandfather's job to wait at the summit and hook up with another driver bringing the mail up from Jackson Hole — the steeper side of the pass. One bitter morning, as he waited for the relay driver, Grandpa watched him slide off the side of the road and into the abyss.

Remarkably, the fellow survived the plunge.

"What happened to all those letters and packages?" I wanted to know.

Granddad smiled. "Ever heard of airmail?"

Quorum issue delays dairy expansion

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome County commissioners heard public comment Monday on a proposed dairy expansion complicated by a disputed Planning and Zoning Commission vote.

The county commissioners held off on approving any changes to the permit for C Bar M Dairy — a 30-year-old operation just a few miles southwest of Jerome — until they sort out whether the P&Z had a quorum when it voted to support the expansion.

The much-debated confined-animal feeding operation would add about 1,120 animal units to its permit, for a total 4,080 units on 563 acres. One animal unit equals 1,000 pounds.

The P&Z recommended on Aug. 30 that county commissioners approve the change, though only two of the six members participated in the vote. County ordinance states that a quorum consists of a majority of the P&Z's voting members, and the county commissioners are now reviewing the vote.

At the time, Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Mike Seib advised the P&Z that it had a voting quorum because a member who abstained from the vote remained in the room. Asked again about the issue on Tuesday, Seib said he couldn't comment because the county commission was investigating the issue.

Twelve people attended Tuesday's hearing, including dairy owner Jane Ledbetter. Matt Thompson with AgTec outlined the application to the commissioners, noting proposed animal housing, some small lagoon expansion and new lagoon construction to handle the extra waste. The application, he said, meets the requirements of the county's CAFO ordinance.

Neighbors of the site and representatives of Idaho Concerned Area Residents for the Environment (ICARE) disputed the proposal. While many complaints were directed at past violations committed by C Bar M, most focused on the saturation of the dairy industry and an alleged lack of good stewardship in the area.

Former county commissioner Diana Obenauer argued that the county's unfinished comprehensive plan allows expanding CAFOs without a way to control or govern them.

Shavone Hasse, program director of ICARE, said the area is overwhelmed with cattle and citizens living near the dairies are suffering. She also pointed to various C Bar M violations in the past 10 years.

Thompson in turn said all dairies have issues of compliance and C Bar M has taken the steps necessary to rectify its problems.

"All this dairy can do is manage this dairy," Thompson said, adding that managers have taken steps to reduce dust, odors and other impacts on neighbors. "The testimonies were not for this application but against the saturation of dairies."

Issues of higher nitrates in the water, well depth and loss of property value were all also discussed. The commissioners decided to hold another meeting to discuss the P&Z quorum and read through the documents again before making a decision at 1:30 p.m. Nov. 9.

Nevada Senate race turns uglier with Hispanic ad

By Cristina Silva
Associated Press writer

LAS VEGAS — A Republican campaign urging Latinos not to vote was yanked from the airwaves Tuesday amid an outcry from Democrats that it was a dirty trick against Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid in his hotly contested race against Republican Sharron Angle.

Reid sought to link the ad to Angle as the ad drew a harsh rebuke from President Barack Obama, Hispanic leaders and candidates from both parties in Nevada. Angle's opponents also pounced on the tea party favorite for her comments to Hispanic high school students that "some of you look a little more Asian to me."

"Listen to her latest, running ads on Hispanic television telling people not to vote," Reid said. "She is trying to keep people from voting."

Reid has fiercely courted the Hispanic vote in the contest against Angle, who supports strict immigration policies.

With the race in a dead heat, a dip in turnout among Hispanics would likely land Angle in the U.S. Senate.

The Republican group Latinos for Reform had planned to eventually run the commercials in Nevada, Florida, California, Texas and Colorado through the Nov. 2 election.

"Don't vote this November. This is the only way to send them a clear message," the ad's narrator announces in Spanish. "You can no longer take us for granted."

Univision told The Associated Press on Tuesday that the spot was pulled from one of its Spanish-language radio stations in Las Vegas shortly after the commercial hit the air.

Univision said it will also not run a companion ad on its Spanish-language TV broadcasting network and will continue to encourage Hispanics to vote.

Telemundo, the nation's other major Spanish-language network, also said it would not broadcast the TV spots if approached.

Obama slammed the campaign during a round-table with reporters from Spanish-language outlets.

"I think it is terrible," he said. "It is a cynical political ploy to try to drive Latino votes to benefit a Republican candidate in Nevada who would never vote for immigration reform."

Robert de Posada, the founder of Latinos for Reform, said he is trying to determine whether he can legally challenge Univision, which approved the commercials Friday.

"It is a very sad moment where you cannot have discourse in the Spanish market," he said. "Obviously, my First Amendment rights have been violated."

De Posada said Democrats were elected on empty promises of immigration reform in 2008. He also attacked Republican efforts to criminalize illegal immigrants or deny children of illegal immigrant's citizenship rights, policies supported by Angle, whom he called "irresponsible."

"I would rather not vote for anyone than be forced to vote for the lesser of two evils," he said.

Labrador, Minnick clash over stimulus projects

BOISE (AP) — Republican Raul Labrador and Democratic U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick are at odds over a series of letters sent by Minnick and other Idaho lawmakers seeking support of projects using federal stimulus money.

Labrador has attacked Minnick for campaigning against government spending when he supported using stimulus funds to expand broadband Internet service in rural Idaho.

But all four members of Idaho's congressional delegation voted against President Barack Obama's $787 billion plan to resuscitate the economy in February 2009, and all four later sought stimulus money for Idaho projects.

Republican Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch, along with Rep. Mike Simpson and Minnick, signed letters to the U.S. Department of Transportation last year in support of stimulus-funded grant money for Idaho projects.

Minnick's campaign counters that Labrador is the "hypocrite" and voted for several bills in the Idaho Legislature that used stimulus funds.

Construction to start on power line

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Construction is scheduled to start soon on a major transmission line that could give a big boost to Nevada's growing green energy sector.

The planned 500-kilovolt line will extend from Idaho to Nevada, creating an energy channel that officials say will support renewable energy projects in rural areas by providing a way to ship it elsewhere.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid and Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar are among many officials expected to mark the groundbreaking of the Southwest Intertie Project in a brief ceremony Tuesday.

Reid has touted his support of green energy jobs on the campaign trail, where he faces a tough contest against Republican Sharron Angle.

More complete health coverage.

It's simple math.
Together, both plans could protect you from out-of-pocket costs.

Having more complete health insurance coverage is vital. Medicare alone may not be enough. Medicare Parts A and B don't cover all of your medical expenses or the cost of most prescription drugs. - AARP Medicare Supplement Insurance is offered in a variety of plans to help fit your needs. Medicare supplement plans help pay for some of the remaining out-of-pocket medical costs not paid for by Medicare.
- AARP MedicareRx Plans are prescription drug plans that provide coverage for the high cost of most prescription drugs (not paid for by Medicare Parts A and B).

Together, both plans help provide more complete health coverage.

Hart says logging state endowment land was ‘mistake’

BOISE (AP) — A northern Idaho lawmaker accused of stealing timber from state endowment land years ago has said he would pay for the wood.

Republican state Rep. Phil Hart, of Athol, said Monday that he was mistaken and would pay $2,450, the market value of the logs when he took them. He previously said he didn't owe Idaho anything.

Hart had cut the wood from land whose proceeds benefit public schools, saying a loophole allowed him to build his home with the state timber without informing the state.

He said he learned more about state laws that govern timber on school endowment land this week and now agrees that he took the wood improperly.

The Idaho Department of Land said the trees were worth $2,443 in 1996, an amount that equaled a third of the state penalty that Hart was initially ordered to pay. The state ultimately filed a lien against Hart for $22,827 after winning in court three times.

The lien was never lifted, but is unenforceable because a five-year statute of limitations has passed.

“My logging experience back in 1996 was an expensive lesson in the school of hard knocks,” Hart said. “I was mistaken to have done what I did and will never make that mistake again.”

Hart said the amount he would pay for the wood was based on the value from 1996 because “today's fair market value is only one half of what it was back in 1996.”

Hart is in the crosshairs of state government over more than just stolen lumber. The state and federal government say he owes more than $500,000 in back income taxes, penalties and interest.

He has been in a long fight with the state Tax Commission and the IRS over the debt, on grounds that federal and state income taxes are unconstitutional.

Arizona lawmakers preparing legislation to deny citizenship to children of illegals

Associated Press writers

PHOENIX — The Arizona state senator who wrote the nation's toughest law against illegal immigrants said Tuesday he and 13 other state lawmakers are collecting support from legislators to challenge automatic U.S. citizenship to the children of illegal immigrants.

Sen. Russell Pearce's target is the U.S. Constitution's 14th Amendment.

Pearce declined to say how the legislation will differ from similar measures that have been introduced in each two-year congressional session since 2005. None of them made it out of committee.

He and another Arizona lawmaker did argue that wording in the amendment that guarantees citizenship to people born in the U.S. who are “subject to the jurisdiction” of this country does not apply to the children of illegal immigrants because such families don't owe sole allegiance to the U.S.

The efforts by Pearce and the other lawmakers come amid calls to change the 14th Amendment. Supporters cite costs to taxpayers for services provided to illegal immigrants and their children.

There are two ways to change the Constitution and both are difficult.

One requires approval by two-thirds majorities in both chambers of Congress. The other, which has never been used, is for two-thirds of state legislatures to call for a constitutional convention. Either requires ratification by three-fourths of state legislatures.

Paul Bender, a constitutional law professor at Arizona State University, said if the lawmakers focus their argument on the “subject to jurisdiction” wording, they won't get very far because the founders only meant it to apply to the children of foreign diplomats born in the U.S.

“If the British ambassador and his wife have a child in the U.S., that child is not a citizen because he is not subject to the jurisdiction of the U.S. We cannot put him in jail, we cannot even give him a parking ticket,” Bender said.

The 14th Amendment “could have easily have said you're a citizen if you owe your allegiance, but our Constitution doesn't say that,” he said. “It says if you're born here, and you're not a diplomat's child, then you become a citizen, and that's the way its been for 100 years.”

Carlos Galindo-Elvira, vice president of Valle del Sol, a Phoenix group that provides social services to community members and advocates for immigrants, said Pearce's interpretation of the amendment is an effort to “legitimize bullying babies.”

Galindo-Elvira also questioned why lawmakers would focus on this issue rather than the country's economic woes and high unemployment rate. “All it does is split the country,” he said.

Pennsylvania state Rep. Daryl Metcalfe, the founder of a national group of legislators critical of illegal immigration, said the 14th Amendment “greatly incentives foreign invaders to violate our border and our laws.” He had a news conference Tuesday in Harrisburg, Pa., on the multistate endeavor.

Providing birthright citizenship to children of illegal immigrants is an “ongoing distortion and twisting” of the amendment, Metcalfe said.

Fish & Game chief owns up to trespass

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's fish and game chief said he made a mistake when he crossed on to private property with three hunting companions earlier this month without first getting permission.

Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director Cal Groen said he has also learned a valuable lesson from the Oct. 10 episode.

Groen told the Lewiston Tribune he assumed his companions had permission to access the property in north-central Idaho near Elk City.

“Obviously I was wrong,” Groen told the Associated Press Tuesday. “You have a personal responsibility to make sure you've got permission. I was on that land and did not have permission.”

Groen, 63, has been charged with trespass to hunt in violation of warning signs, a misdemeanor. Groen maintains he was not hunting, and instead crossed on to the land to help his companions butcher a pair of elk. He is scheduled to appear in court on Nov. 10.

Groen said his hunting partners had permission to access the property in previous years and the group was unaware that the land had changed ownership. Despite acknowledging his mistake, Groen said he is unsure how he will plead in court.

On Tuesday, the Idaho County Sheriff Department cited three others in the case.

Ronald D. Halsey, 65, and Thomas L. Hill, 50, both of Lewiston, were each cited for possession of a game animal taken on private property. Randy J. Thornton, of Clarkston, Wash., was cited for criminal trespass.

Investigators said Groen's party was cooperative and that several items, including four- and five-point antlers, were taken into evidence.

Woman survives near fatal bee sting in northern Idaho

By Nick Rotunno
The Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Bees were everywhere that day.

They buzzed, they swarmed. The campground at Beauty Bay, normally so peaceful and serene, was infested.

“The bees were so bad,” said Linda Paullas, now 47. “They were crazy bad. I'd never seen them like that.”

She and her family decided to leave early. With camp broken, with only the tent to pack up, a bee stung Paullas on the arm. Almost instantly, her throat began to close. Her tongue swelled, and adrenaline started coursing through her body. She couldn't breathe.

Paullas was allergic to bees, and she was dying.

Her two nephews called 911. The wait was agonizing, but firefighters arrived just in time.

“To the best of my recollection, she was lying on the ground, gasping for breath,” recalled Coeur d'Alene firefighter Eric Paul. “It was probably the most severe reaction I'd seen.”

The date was Aug. 27, 2004. Several years later, after more than 300 shots at Asthma and Allergy of North Idaho, Paullas received her final allergy injection on Monday afternoon. She's now fully desensitized, she said. If a bee stings her, it'll hurt. She might swell up, turn red, but she will not die.

And that's cause for celebration.

“I get to do all these things, and I don't have to dodge bullets anymore,” Paullas said. “It's like dodging bullets when you're allergic to bees. Bees are everywhere, you know?”

To commemorate the occasion, the Coeur d'Alene firefighters who once saved her life at Beauty Bay — Paul, his colleagues Craig Etherton and Matt Sowa — were at the clinic Monday. Paullas handed out bee-shaped trophies, thanking the men for all they had done.

“I wanted them to know that I did (finish my treatment),” she said. “And I told them they'd never have to save my life again — not from being stung by a bee.”

She talked about that fateful day, about the frantic moments after the bee landed on her arm. Travis, 15, and Dakota Nelson, 12, her nephews (two young men she had helped raise from birth — she calls them her “nephew-sons”) remained by her side throughout the ordeal, she said.

“I just tried to stay as calm as I could,” Paullas said. “I thought I was going to die. That's how I felt.”

With their aunt struggling to breathe, the two boys ran to the camp hosts and asked for a phone. Dakota remembered. At first the hosts were uncooperative — they told the boys to go down to the KOA campsite.

“We need your phone now,” said the 15 year-old Travis, raising his voice. “She's going to die if you don't give us your phone.”

The hosts relented, and the boys reached the fire department. Travis held his aunt's hand while the trucks were en route, yelling at her, imploring her to breathe, to survive.

“We just waited, and waited, and waited. It seemed like forever,” Dakota said.

At last the firefighters reached Beauty Bay. The Coeur d'Alene firemen, aided by personnel from Kootenai County Fire and Rescue, threaded a breathing tube down Paullas's restricted airway and gave her sedatives. Firefighter Cory Anderson, who has since relocated to Seattle, took the lead.

“We were taking care of Linda for 15 minutes, probably,” Paul said.

Paullas was loaded into an ambulance, driven to an open, marshy area, and airlifted to the hospital by helicopter. The firefighters made sure the boys got home safe.

But Paullas' struggles were not over. Five years of treatment lay ahead, painful shots that would eventually immunize her against the deadly allergic reactions. In order to simulate a bee sting, clinicians basically injected her with venom, Paullas said.

There were four shots per week, year after year.

“You can't miss (a shot),” Paullas said. “You can't just start over. The doses have to be regular. This is a tortuous thing. I would not wish this on my enemy to have to go through five years of these shots.”

Her best friend, Christina Chase, accompanied her to every appointment. The pair would grab coffee, go to Jamba Juice, watch a movie the night before — anything to keep Paullas's mind off the shots.

“She whines a little bit, but I haven't had to wrestle her,” Chase said with a grin.

We need 4 more years of Ysursa's rock-solid honor

If you want to know about the professional integrity of Idaho Secretary of Ben Ysursa, consider this:

Last Wednesday — 20 days before he was scheduled to stand for election to a third term as a Republican — Ysursa was in federal court trying to prevent the Idaho Republican Party from closing its primary elections to independents and Democrats.

Like his longtime predecessor Pete Cenarrusa — also a Republican — Ysursa doesn't back down when it comes to keeping the electoral process honest.

But he does more. Ysursa believes it's part of his job — and those of the 44 Idaho county clerks — to increase voter turnout by making it as easy as legally possible to vote. Along with the clerks, Ysursa has supported expanding mail-in voting and backed an unsuccessful attempt in 2008 to get a bill through the Legislature that would make absentee voting permanent for individual voters.

Ysursa believes his job is central to the integrity of the whole Idaho governing process, and he's right. If elections aren't honest — or are perceived as being dishonest — then no aspect of state government is trustworthy.

We know of no Idahoan — Democrat, Republican or independent — who doesn't believe Ysursa is scrupulously fair. And that's the biggest reason we're endorsing him for reelection.

Trustworthiness is Ysursa's pedigree. Before he was elected secretary of state in 2002, Ysursa served 28 years as a deputy to Cenarrusa, who was — and still is — the most respected person in Idaho politics.

Ysursa also sits on the state Land Board, the five-member committee of statewide elected officials that manages state endowment trust land. Money generated from these lands is deposited into the earnings reserve fund from which the costs of management and payments to the beneficiaries are made.

Those beneficiaries include the public schools, agriculture education at the University of Idaho, Idaho State University, State Hospitals North and South, the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind, Lewis-Clark State College, the Department of Correction and Capitol Commission, among others.

Last winter, the Land Board voted 3-2 to transfer $22 million from the earnings reserve fund to the support public schools in the midst of the Great Recession. Ysursa voted yes, but says he won't do so again.

“It's not a rainy-day fund. It's a shock absorber,” Ysursa said. “I told (Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom) Luna and the others, ‘It's a one-time distribution, as far as I'm concerned.’”

That's excessive caution, in our opinion. The Idaho Public Schools Permanent Endowment Fund was worth $1.1 billion in September, according to managers who oversee it. The state distributes about $31 million in earnings to schools every year.

Idaho has built up an earnings reserve fund since 1998, money it uses to help maintain the annual distribution at steady levels, should endowment returns lag.

The Land Board aims for the earnings reserves to be adequate cover for five years of annual distributions. By the end of 2012, however, the fund's managers forecast it will hold only about $60 million, or enough to cover 1.9 years if there's a crisis.

In a time of crisis — and many members of the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee are predicting there will be less tax revenue available for public schools next year than there was this year — that's enough of a cushion.

The mortgage morass gets stickier

American officials used to lecture other countries about their economic failings and tell them that they needed to emulate the U.S. model. The Asian financial crisis of the late 1990s, in particular, led to a lot of self-satisfied moralizing. Thus, in 2000, Lawrence Summers, then the Treasury secretary, declared that the keys to avoiding financial crisis were “well-capitalized and supervised banks, effective corporate governance and bankruptcy codes, and credible means of contract enforcement.” By implication, these were things the Asians lacked but we had.

Paul Krugman

The accounting scandals at Enron and WorldCom dispelled the myth of effective corporate governance. These days, the idea that our banks were well capitalized and supervised sounds like a sick joke. And now the mortgage mess is making nonsense of claims that we have effective contract enforcement — in fact, the question is whether our economy is governed by any kind of rule of law.

The story so far: An epic housing bust and sustained high unemployment have led to an epidemic of default, with millions of homeowners falling behind on mortgage payments. So servicers have been foreclosing on many mortgages, seizing many homes.

But do they actually have the right to seize these homes? Horror stories have been proliferating, like the case of the Florida man whose home was taken even though he had no mortgage. More significantly, certain players have been ignoring the law. Courts have been approving foreclosures without requiring that mortgage servicers produce appropriate documentation; instead, they have relied on affidavits asserting that the papers are in order. And these affidavits were often produced by “robo-signers,” or low-level employees who had no idea whether their assertions were true.

Now an awful truth is becoming apparent: In many cases, the documentation doesn't exist. In the frenzy of the bubble, much home lending was undertaken by fly-by-night companies trying to generate as much volume as possible. These loans were sold off to mortgage “trusts,” which, in turn, sliced and diced them into mortgage-backed securities. The trusts were legally required to obtain and hold the mortgage notes that specified the borrowers' obligations. But it's now apparent that such niceties were frequently neglected. And this means that many of the foreclosures now taking place are, in fact, illegal.

This is very, very bad. For one thing, it's a near certainty that significant numbers of borrowers are being defrauded — charged fees they don't actually owe, declared in default when, by the terms of their loan agreements, they aren't.

Beyond that, if trusts can't produce proof that they actually own the mortgages against which they have been selling claims, the sponsors of these trusts will face lawsuits from investors who bought these claims — claims that are now, in many cases, worth only a small fraction of their face value.

And who are these sponsors? Major financial institutions — the same institutions supposedly rescued by government programs last year. So the mortgage mess threatens to produce another financial crisis.

What can be done? True to form, the Obama administration's response has been to oppose any action that might upset the banks, like a temporary moratorium on foreclosures while some of the issues are resolved. Instead, it is asking the banks, very nicely, to behave better and clean up their act. I mean, that's worked so well in the past, right?

The response from the right is, however, even worse. Republicans in Congress are lying low, but conservative commentators like those at The Wall Street Journal's editorial page have come out dismissing the lack of proper documents as a triviality. In effect, they're saying that if a bank says it owns your house, we should just take its word. To me, this evokes the days when noblemen felt free to take whatever they wanted, knowing that peasants had no standing in the courts. But then, I suspect that some people regard those as the good old days.

What should be happening? The excesses of the bubble years have created a legal morass, in which property rights are ill defined because nobody has proper documentation. And where no clear property rights exist, it's the government's job to create them.

That won't be easy, but there are good ideas out there. For example, the Center for American Progress has proposed giving mortgage counselors and other public entities the power to modify troubled loans directly, with their judgment standing unless appealed by the mortgage servicer. This would do a lot to clarify matters and help extract us from the morass.

One thing is for sure: What we're doing now isn't working. And pretending that things are OK won't convince anyone.

District 25 would be best served by Stennett

I am writing to encourage voters of District 25 to vote for Michelle Stennett for Senate Seat District 25.

I am sure that some might wonder why a Republican is endorsing a Democrat. In our family, we live by three Fs — Faith, Family and Friends. Clint and Michelle are such close friends of ours that we consider them family.

Michelle and Clint have always been a team, very supportive of one another. Politically they have always been in tune with Idaho. They own farms in the Magic Valley and have a real understanding of water rights, ranching and farming.

I observed Michelle represent District 25 in the last session of the Legislature during Clint's illness. Everyone I know that observed her serve, including me, thought she did so with distinction and class.

Michelle has a very strong work ethic. She is very intelligent and personable. Michelle is a very good listener. She always gathers all the information she can and makes decisions based on that information in the best interest of District 25 and the state of Idaho. She works well with all the members of the Senate and has gained the respect of her colleagues of both parties.

It is my opinion that the voters of District 25 would be best served by voting for Michelle Stennett for State Senate District 25.

Pay tribute to all who serve in armed forces

I was very saddened yet proud to hear the story of Staff Sgt. Robert Miller in Forbes: “First Lady is world's most powerful woman.”

I am an author who served four years in the Air Force. Staff Sgt. Robert Miller, myself and all of us who have served or who are serving in our nation's military are prepared to give our lives for our country. I express my condolences to Robert's family.

In the image and article, Michelle Obama hugs Phil Miller, Robert's father. Robert was killed in Afghanistan over two years ago, and he was recently awarded the Medal of Honor by President Obama.

I spent four months in Saudi Arabia helping to support Operation Southern Watch, and I learned that I am very grateful to live in the United States.

I want us to always pay tribute to Staff Sgt. Robert Miller and to all of us who serve our great nation in the United States armed forces.

Thank you.

Kleinkopf is best suited for CSI trustee position

Karl Kleinkopf is an experienced educator who brings unique leadership skills and problem-solving capabilities to the CSI trustee office. Karl is a third-generation Idahoan born and raised in the Magic Valley. His formal education includes a bachelor of science degree in ag, economics from the University of Hawaii and a master of physical education from the University of Idaho. He is an avid outdoorsman with a love of hunting, fishing and whitewater rafting.

Karl's 42-year educational career began in the Jerome public school system in 1969 and included a variety of administrative, teaching and coaching positions at the junior high, senior high and college levels. Karl retired from public education in 2010, and he and his wife, Sally, reside in Kimberly.

This is a very challenging time for Idaho educators. Budgets are stretched to the limits, yet enrollments continue to increase as students realize the value of a quality education. Distance learning is a must. Technology expands the delivery methods every semester. Finding new sources of revenue is a must as tax dollars shrink.

With Karl Kleinkopf's background and experience, we believe that he is the best candidate for this CSI trustee position.

Stem cell researchers are on slippery slope of destruction

Researchers announced last week they had injected embryonic stem cells into a patient suffering from a spinal cord injury. It marked the world's first human clinical trial of a procedure developed from such a source. The procedure took place at Shepherd Center, a spinal cord injury facility in Atlanta. The use of embryonic stem cells for such purposes had been banned under the Bush administration, but allowed under the Obama administration.

The question is why? In June 2009, Chinese scientists were the first in the world to induce cells from pigs to transform into pluripotent stem cells. Last April, the Scripps Research Institute in San Diego announced the discovery of a new technique that makes artificial stem cells safer for human transplantation.

The artificial cells, called induced pluripotent stem cells, are made from fully differentiated adult cells, regressed back into an embryonic-like state. These act-alike embryonic stem cells don't carry the ethical difficulties of real embryonic stem cells, taken from days-old embryos. President Obama, like President Clinton before him, claims to want to make abortion "safe, legal and rare." It is reasonable to say that curbing the use of embryonic stem cells might help make abortion if not less common, then at least less acceptable and restore a small scintilla of respect for human life as something more valuable than, say, a cabbage, or other species in the animal kingdom that enjoy the protection of law. The answer to the "why?" question has something to do with how we view ourselves. If you are an evolutionist who does not believe in a Creator who endowed us with the right to life, you might be more liberal in your approach to manipulating human tissue for the "benefit" of others. But that still doesn't justify using embryonic stem cells when artificial ones appear to function just as well. If, on the other hand, you think "playing God" is not good for the human race and that other ways to relieve suffering can, should and, in fact, are being discovered, you are more likely to want to control human urges to do whatever can be done in a laboratory. Appeals to the uniqueness of human life are likely to fall on deaf ears if you are an evolutionist. Reminders of the horrors unrestrained scientists have created in the past are likely to be viewed as an aberration. In retrospect, great horrors are usually seen as springing up full-formed. Many people didn't notice the small steps that led to the Nazi Holocaust or to the selling of African slaves in the public square. Senses must first be dulled; religion trivialized; and self enthroned before tolerance for the horrific is accepted. After the fact, even those who turned a blind eye to such things wonder aloud how it could have happened. Awards are bestowed on those who see evil before it conquers us and try to stop its advance, but not on historians who might have sounded a warning and live only to write about it later. Threats from foreign powers are not the only challenge to our existence. Threats from inner powers can also destroy, though more slowly and imperceptibly than an atom bomb or terrorist attack.

Small-business owners should support Pence

On Nov. 2, Donna Pence is asking for our support as our House representative for District 25. As small-business owners, we are happy to once again give her our vote. Donna understands the importance of small businesses in rural communities and how they are the backbone of our local economy. With her experience running her own family's small tree-raising and landscaping company, she knows that giving special breaks to large corporations and individuals in top earnings brackets do nothing to keep our local small businesses operating. Donna also witnesses the negative impact to the community when small businesses close, removing the opportunity for economic growth because people have to go to larger cities to acquire what they need. Donna has past experience working on the board of directors for the Gooding Chamber of Commerce, and a current position on the Idaho Rural Partnership's board of directors, working to bring public and private resources to our rural communities to stimulate economic growth. As our legislative representative, she has been a member of the Agricultural Affairs Committee, the Education Committee and the Resources and Conservation Committee. These opportunities have provided the knowledge of the type of support small businesses need in rural agricultural areas. Donna Pence has the commitment and experience to continue to represent the needs of our small business, rural communities. She is the best choice to continue the work she started to expand our communities on important issues like fair taxes for small businesses and agricultural families, job stimulus projects and our rural way of life. Please join us and vote for Donna Pence for House of Representatives in Gooding, Lincoln and Blaine counties. PETER M. ORTH

Pence enjoys special relationship with nature

On Nov. 2, we have the opportunity to vote for our representative for District 25. I am endorsing Donna Pence to be re-elected as our representative. Donna and her family have cherished special times spent enjoying the natural resources found in Idaho. They participate in a number of outdoor activities, including hiking, hunting, rafting, fishing, cross country and downhill skiing, mountain biking, horseback riding, canoeing and camping. They enjoy a special relationship with natural resources both professionally and personally. This relationship recognizes that while these resources are economically valuable to our state, it is equally important to ensure these resources will be available for use by future generations. Sustainability should always be in the equation when making decisions concerning natural resources. Donna also recognizes that tourism in Blaine County is also dependent on the resources provided by our public lands for their enjoyment of fishing, hiking, hunting and sightseeing. Please use your right to vote on Nov. 2 and help us re-elect Donna Pence. GILBERT L. TOM FARR

Olson supports first-rate education for Idahoans

This is my 20th year as a math teacher, and I have been following the race for superintendent of public instruction closely. I am supporting Stan Olson for the following reasons: I am concerned Idaho is next to last place in funding per pupil. If this trend continues, students in Idaho will not be able to compete in a global economy. Stan Olson supports improving student funding to help Idaho students attain a first-rate education. Second, we are losing good teachers to other states that pay a professional salary. In Idaho, some legislators give the impression that a veteran teacher with a master's degree is overpaid if he/she makes $50,000 a year. This attitude is detrimental and will keep good people out of Idaho classrooms. Stan Olson supports improving teacher salaries to retain and attract the best teachers. Third, Tom Luna wants to implement a merit pay system that has many flaws. Merit pay based solely on one test score is not the answer to improving student success, yet Mr. Luna doesn't want to discuss this with educators. Stan Olson supports having an open discussion to find the best way to pay educators both taxpayers and public school employees will support. If Idahoans want to improve public education, there needs to be a change in attitude at the leadership level. A well-educated population will bring new businesses to Idaho that are currently staying away because we don't have the qualified employees. Stan Olson wants to take Idaho public schools to the next level and create a 21st century system. The biggest issue will be how to pay for any increase in public school funding. I believe Internet sales should be taxed to increase revenue for schools. I know any talk of a new tax is unpopular, but staying the course is going to cost Idaho much more in the long run. DARIN GONZALES

Who is behind Allred, what are his motives?

I am suspicious of any individual who moves from Idaho, finds fame in an institution that we normally would consider a bastion of liberalism, then returns and eventually runs for a political position. Especially a person who really did not come back to an employment opportunity but came home to take surveys of people's moods and desires while promoting himself as much as the issues. I think these types of people were once called carpetbaggers. Who is behind Keith Allred and what are the true motives? Keith has recently made an allegation that he stopped tax increases which Gov. Otter wanted. I am confident that the governor did not want any tax increases, but sometimes things must be done that require them. I was involved in a campaign he worked on to raise the tax on beer and wine. While I have no dog in the fight on that issue, I think it less than honest to promote oneself as a tax hawk on issues that are politically popular. Allred chose to work to increase taxes on items that he probably thinks should not be allowed to be sold to the general public anyway. Perhaps because of religious beliefs, Mr. Allred, his citizen organization, former Sen. Bunderson and other statewide groups led the charge on trying to raise the alcohol tax. I supported that effort and I am not religiously motivated to do so. Until Reps. Denney, Moyle and Bedke issue an OK, virtually nothing is going to pass the Legislature that has any tint of tax increase. The governor, whether Republican or Democrat, will not be able to get anything passed. Thank God the Senate under President Pro Tempore Robert Geddes is reasonable, or there would be virtually no reason to send anyone to Boise in the foreseeable future. Please investigate the former legislators backing Mr. Allred who may have a "common interest" with the candidate but not Democratic political leanings, and note the things they have in common. Vote for Otter; we know him! JON ANDERSON

Idaho Common Sense for the Common Good

"My father, a Depression Era, conservative Republican businessman didn't like too much government or wasting money and by example showed me that meant not wasting resources. The Cheddar Gets Better at Swensen's

It may not be as holy as Swiss, as fancy as Camembert, or as aromatic (a.k.a. stinky) as Limburger, but nothing tastes better on a baked potato, cheeseburger, or Ritz cracker than a good old-fashioned slab of cheddar cheese. To make America's favorite cheesy comestible even more irresistible, this week Swensen's is selling big 2-pound blocks of Western Family medium cheddar cheese for only $4.99. So stop by and stock up on as much cheese as you can eat (the Metamucil, by the way, is on aisle 4). And find out exactly why Swensen's cheddar really is better.

Judge rejects $2 million Tamarack loan

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A federal bankruptcy judge on Tuesday rejected a $2 million loan to prop up Tamarack Resort while it finds a buyer, a blow to hopes of reopening the failed Idaho vacation getaway for skiing later this year.

U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Terry Myers said the Credit Suisse Group-led proposal didn't meet federal law, was likely to default and had the potential to further hurt those already owed millions by Tamarack after its 2008 collapse.

Bankers from Zurich-based Credit Suisse were leading investors who offered the money to hire a chief restructuring officer, pay a tardy $250,000 state land lease to Idaho and complete Tamarack's sale.

Meanwhile, homeowners at Tamarack were counting on the loan coming through to ease their separate efforts to open the resort for skiing

Dec. 20.

But Myers wrote his decision was based on whether Tamarack provided adequate assurances that the interests of other creditors were protected even if Tamarack's sale fell through — not on speculation about how the loan might help the resort open or how the cash infusion might ease its sale.

“This is not about the desirability of a ski season at Tamarack in 2010. Nor is it about what ultimate result (reorganization, sale, or other) would best serve the area or its residents,” Myers wrote in his order. “At bottom, it is a question of whether this specific financial and management proposal, made by Tamarack and supported by Credit Suisse, meets the standards that federal law imposes. It does not.”

Tim Flaherty, the director of the Tamarack Municipal Association, and Jean-Pierre Boespflug, the resort's French-born majority owner, didn't immediately return phone calls seeking comment.

Under terms demanded by Credit Suisse and Cleveland-based Candlewood Partners, another investor offering the loan, Boespflug and co-owner Alfredo Miguel were required to step down from management once the money came through.

That's because they'd lost the confidence of some investors, who wanted a new, chief restructuring officer to step in and oversee a potential sale.

Boespflug insisted he had three letters of intent from potential buyers for the real-estate project located 90 miles north of Boise. It became mired in more than $300 million in debt as it went on a building spree just as the market for its properties collapsed starting in 2007.

In court last week, Boespflug and other loan supporters — including a real-estate agent who has

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

Work began recently on remodeling the old Williams Market in Ketchum into a new specialty market called Roxy's that is expected to open by Jan. 1. Some question whether Ketchum can support three markets, if Valmark's proposal to build a store in the light industrial zone is approved. But others believe Valmark's store will be sufficiently different from Roxy's to attract different consumers.

Businessmen speak out against grocery proposal

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Ketchum retailers crowded into City Hall Monday night to shoot down a zoning change that would open the door for a supermarket to be built in Ketchum's light industrial zone.

Comments given over a two-hour period were overwhelmingly in favor of nixing the change. Mayor Randy Hall continued the discussion to Nov. 1 after the council turned down his proposal to acknowledge Monday's meeting as a first reading.

Monday's nay-saying was the opposite of public sentiment at an earlier Planning and Zoning meeting noted Mary Jane Conger, whose father ran one of Ketchum's first grocery stores. Three times as many people spoke in favor of the zoning amendment at that meeting, which ended with the P&Z recommending the change by a vote of 3-1.

Valmark, a Washington grocer with ties to Sun Valley, has asked the council to pass a proposed amendment to the existing LI-2 zoning that would allow a grocery store to be permitted in the light industrial area as a conditional use. The request has spawned “absolutely the most divisive issue I've seen before the council,” noted Councilman Larry Helzel.

“My client is anxious to make an investment in a community but only if the community wants him.”

— Valmark attorney Jim Laski

The site in question — the former Stock Building Supply site at 10th Street and Warm Springs Road — is next to the Community Core zone where a supermarket is allowed, noted Jim Laski, Valmark's attorney. There already are a lot of non-typical uses there, such as offices, a laundromat and residential.

The notion that Valmark would have an unfair advantage over Atkinsons Market because the light industrial land is cheaper is offset by the community housing requirement that would be required, he added.

“My client is anxious to make an investment in a community but only if the community wants him,” Laski added. “We're not here to put anyone out of business.”

But more than two dozen of the 70-plus people crowded into the council chambers said amending the zoning would rob downtown Ketchum of its foot traffic and vitality just as the town is enjoying new energy from its new Town Plaza and it would fly in the face of Ketchum's comprehensive plan.

Bob Rosso, owner of The Elephant's Perch said he has watched cities like Twin Falls and Boise lose their downtowns to strip malls and then struggle to revive their downtowns.

Let's not lose ours to begin with, but let's improve it with pedestrian-friendly changes such as better lighting, he suggested.

“You'd have to twist yourself like a pretzel to find support for this in the comprehensive plan,” said former Ketchum council man Charles Conn. “If you want to attract the kind of businesses that attract good jobs-like Idaho Bioscience—we need that land.”

Proponents of the zoning change argued that comprehensive plans need to change over time to accommodate changing needs of the community. And they expressed hope that a new supermarket would cut down on the number of people going to Twin Falls or Boise to shop, while providing jobs to builders and others who have been devastated by the recession.

“Show me any place that hasn't changed. Change is a part of life,” said Mary Jane Conger. “I know many people here who don't shop at Atkinsons' in Ketchum because they're not comfortable there—it's too crowded. So they go down to Hailey. Williams Market couldn't make a go of it because there wasn't enough parking and there was nothing he could do about it.”

“The economic reality is that dollars are being spent in Twin Falls and Boise and I would rather see them spent here,” said Clare Swanger. “This is someone willing to put money into

Survey: Holiday spending may rise

By Andrea Chang
Los Angeles Times

Good news for the nation's retailers: U.S. consumers plan to put a little more jingle into this holiday season.

Shoppers plan to spend an average of $688.87 on gifts, decorations, food and other holiday-related purchases in 2010, according to a survey to be released Tuesday by the National Retail Federation. Although that's a slight rise from the $681.83 they spent in 2009, it's still below the $755.13 tallied in 2007, just before the retail industry was slammed by the economic downturn.

As in years past, most holiday shoppers will spend the largest portion of their budget on gifts for family ($393.55) and friends ($71.45). Total spending on gifts is expected to rise 2.1 percent this year, to $518.08.

Americans will also spend an average of $41.51 on decorations, $26.10 on greeting cards and postage, $86.32 on candy and food, and $16.86 on flowers, the survey found.

“Consumers will still shop with the economy in the back of their minds, but we're starting to see shoppers take baby steps toward a new normal,” said Matthew Shay, president of the trade group.

According to the survey, 61.7 percent of shoppers said concerns about the economy would affect their spending. Although that's down from 65.3 percent last year, shoppers remain hungry for bargains. Of shoppers who said the economy would affect their holiday plans, a majority (54.1 percent) said they would look for sales more often. Many also plan to use coupons (40.6 percent) and comparison shop online (30.9 percent) or with newspapers and circulars (28.1 percent).

Still, fewer people said they would make a holiday purchase from a discount; 65.1 percent will do so this year, down from 70.1 percent in 2009.

Although traditional categories such as clothing and books will be at the top of many wish lists this year, 23 percent of people will ask for jewelry this year, up from 20.8 percent last year. Gift cards will remain the most requested holiday gift this year, with 57 percent of people asking for plastic.

And don't be surprised to see Santa checking his smart phone. Shoppers plan to use their mobile devices this holiday season to look for gift ideas, compare prices and find items in nearby stores.

Credit eases as bank lending helps buoy small business

By Steve Matthews
Bloomberg News

ATLANTA — The freeze in bank credit is beginning to thaw after two years, signaling more support for the recovery. American banks increased credit in July, August and September, the first consecutive gains since October 2008, according to Federal Reserve data released Friday. Commercial and industrial loans rose in July and August after dropping 25 percent, the data showed. Banks eased lending standards in the second quarter for the first time since the Military recruiters told to accept gays

By Anne Flaherty and Julie Watson
Associated Press writers

SAN DIEGO — The military is accepting openly gay recruits for the first time in the nation’s history, even as it tries in the courts to slow the movement to abolish its “don’t ask, don’t tell” policy.

At least two service members discharged for being gay began the process to re-enlist after the Pentagon’s Tuesday announcement.

A federal judge in California who overturned the 17-year policy last week rejected the government’s latest effort on Tuesday to halt her order telling the military to stop enforcing the law. Before her ruling, government lawyers told Phillips they would appeal if she rejected their request.

With the recruiting announcement, the barriers built by an institution long resistant and sometimes hostile to gays had come down.

The movement to overturn the 1993 Clinton-era law gained speed when President Barack Obama campaigned on its repeal. The effort stalled in Congress this fall, and found new life last month when U.S. District Judge Virginia Phillips declared it unconstitutional.

“Gay people have been fighting for equality in the military since the 1960s,” said Aaron Belkin, executive director of the Palm Center, a think tank on gays and the military at the University of California Santa Barbara. “It took a lot to get to this day.”

The Defense Department has said it would comply with Phillips’ order and had frozen any discharge cases. Pentagon spokeswoman Cynthia Smith said recruiters had been given top-level guidance to accept applicants who say they are gay.

AP interviews found some recruiters following the order and others saying they had not heard of the announcement.

Recruiters also have been told to inform potential recruits that the moratorium on enforcement of the policy could be reversed at any time, if the ruling is appealed or the court grants a stay, she said.

Gay rights groups were continuing to tell service members to avoid revealing that they are gay, fearing they could find themselves in trouble should the law be reinstated.

“What people aren’t really getting is that the discretion and caution that gay troops are showing now is exactly the same standard of conduct that they will adhere to when the ban is lifted permanently,” Belkin said. “Yes, a few will try to become celebrities.”

An Air Force officer and co-founder of a gay service member support group called OutServe said financial considerations are playing a big role in gay service members staying quiet.

“The military has financially trapped us,” he said, noting that he could owe the military about $200,000 if he were to be dismissed.

The officer, who asked not to be identified for fear of being discharged, said he’s hearing increasingly about heterosexual service members approaching gay colleagues and telling them they can come out now.

He also said more gay service members are coming out to their peers who are friends, while keeping it secret from leadership. He said he has come out to two peers in the last few days.

An opponent of the judge’s ruling said confusion that has come up is exactly what Pentagon officials feared and shows the need for her to immediately freeze her order while the government appeals.

“It’s only logical that a stay should be granted to avoid the confusion that is already occurring with reports that the Pentagon is telling recruiters to begin accepting homosexual applicants,” said Tony Perkins, the president of the Family Research Council, a conservative advocacy group based in Washington that supports the policy.

Dallas bomb plot suspect gets 24 years

By Melody McDonald
McClatchy Newspapers

DALLAS — Hosam “Sam” Smadi, 20, was sentenced to 24 years in prison Tuesday, after apologizing in federal court for plotting to blow up a Dallas skyscraper last year.

“Your honor, I’m ashamed of what I did,” the Jordanian told U.S. District Judge Barbara M.G. Lynn. “I’m very sorry for my actions. ... I could not have lived with myself if I had hurt anyone.”

Smadi was arrested on Sept. 24, 2009, by federal agents who said he had parked what he thought was a car bomb in a garage under the 60-story Fountain Place skyscraper in downtown Dallas.

Once a safe distance away, Smadi dialed a cell phone that he thought would detonate the explosive device, federal officials said. The bomb — which had been provided to him by undercover FBI agents posing as an al-Qaida sleeper cell — was inert.

Addressing the court Tuesday, Smadi said he now hates al-Qaida and believes that its leader Osama bin Laden is a “bad man.” He said he has no desire now to be a jihadist.

Lynn, who spoke for several minutes before pronouncing sentence, said she sympathized with Smadi’s troubled childhood, including physical abuse by his father and the untimely death of his mother.

“There is no question there were horrific things in your life,” she told Smadi. “But you’re not the only person who has been dealt that hand, and you won’t be the last.”

She said that when Smadi arrived in the United States, he was given opportunities. “You made a turn that was absolutely horrible,” she told him.

The judge said that she still doesn’t understand why he did what he did but that she does believe he is remorseful and was vulnerable to influence.

Finally she said: “Everyday from this day forward, I want you to think about the people in that building. ... They are completely innocent people whose lives you were prepared to end. Thank goodness it didn’t happen.”

After the judged pronounced sentence, Smadi’s younger sister, Rama, burst into tears and sobbed loudly. The family and supporters were quickly escorted from the courtroom and out of the building, and reporters were prevented from speaking with them.

Shots hit Pentagon

No one hurt; police label it ‘random event’

By Pauline Jelinek
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Someone fired shots at the Pentagon early Tuesday in what security officials described as “a random event.”

No one was injured in the pre-dawn incident in which shots were fired into two windows at the sprawling Defense Department just across the Potomac River in suburban Virginia.

Steven Calvery, director of the civilian Pentagon Force Protection Agency, told reporters that a number of his officers reported hearing five to seven shots fired at about 2:55 a.m. MDT near the south parking lot of the Pentagon. The Pentagon building and the roads leading it were briefly shut down as officers did an initial sweep of the area.

An internal search of the iconic structure found fragments of two bullets still embedded in two windows — one on the third floor and one on the fourth. The bullets had shattered but did not penetrate the windows, Calvery said. The windows were part of offices that are being renovated and they were unoccupied at the time.

Calvery said he didn’t know what kind of weapon was used but that it was probably a high-velocity rifle. No suspects were arrested, he said.

“Right now we consider this a random event,” he said.

But he also said authorities were looking at whether the shooting was related to Sunday’s discovery of bullet holes in windows at the National Museum of the Marine Corps in Triangle, Va. The museum is associated with the Quantico Marine Base, some 30 miles south of the Pentagon.

A rifle is also believed to have been used in that shooting, which may have occurred during early morning hours.

Pentagon investigators worked with the FBI as well as Arlington, Va. police, who helped sweep of the area, and Virginia State Police, who closed part of nearby Interstate 395 to search for evidence.

A dozen officers at around 9 a.m. walked side-by-side in a line as they combed through a grassy area on the south side of the building.

Calvery said investigators were talking to some construction workers who also heard the shots. He said it was possible the shooter had stood on the roof of a nearby building.

A spokesman for Prince William County Police, which is investigating the museum incident in Quantico, said his officers were working with the Pentagon force protection agency and were trying to determine if the two shootings were related.

No mandatory cadmium limits; Shrek glasses were OK

By Justin Pritchard
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — The 12 million “Shrek” glasses pulled by McDonald’s last spring amid federal concerns about cadmium did not have unsafe levels of the toxic metal, judging by revised intake limits regulators unveiled Tuesday.

Staff at the Consumer Product Safety Commission, which has been scrambling to deal with risks posed by cadmium since high levels were found in some children’s jewelry, also said they won’t insist on mandatory limits for an element that can damage kidneys and bones. Instead, the agency will defer to an independent, private-sector group that has been drafting voluntary limits for several months.

Tuesday’s guidance represents a shift for an agency that reacted aggressively to a January investigation in which The Associated Press revealed that some Chinese jewelry manufacturers were substituting high levels of cadmium for lead, which recent federal law effectively banned.

Agency Chairman Inez Tenenbaum went so far as to advise parents to get rid of all cheap metal trinkets. Within weeks, the CPSC announced its first-ever recall of jewelry due to cadmium, this one involving Disney-branded items sold at Walmarts. Four more recalls followed, implicating nearly 300,000 pieces of jewelry; the agency also leaned on McDonald’s to pull the “Shrek” movie-themed drinking glasses.

A selection of recalled jewelry, including butterfly and cupcake earrings, ‘BFF’ bracelets and necklaces, and a cupcake necklace by Tween Brands are seen in July.

Tuesday’s long-awaited guidance from commission staff suggests an “acceptable daily intake” of cadmium that is more than triple what it had previously considered the maximum safe level. Based on further research, it raised the level from 0.03 micrograms per day for every kilogram of a kid’s body weight to 0.1 micrograms per kilogram per day. While a microgram is just 1/1000th of a milligram, cadmium is toxic enough that even small amounts matter.

Agency staff recommended that level in hopes that the private-sector group — which includes representatives of the jewelry industry and consumer advocates — will adopt it. The level is in line with recommendations from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention for the threshold below which no health effects are expected, provided the exposure lasts less than one year.

“The scientific guidance provided by CPSC staff is highly protective of children,” Tenenbaum told reporters. She said that the agency was obligated to let a legitimate voluntary standard process unfold, but that if the levels weren’t satisfactory, mandatory rules could come.

Later, agency spokesman Scott Wolfson emphasized that the commission has not abandoned the possibility of mandatory standards.

The guidance is aimed at children’s jewelry rather than glassware, but under it, the CPSC would not have considered any of the four “Shrek” designs on the McDonald’s glasses sold this year to be unsafe, according to Jay Howell, director of the agency’s office of hazard identification and reduction. Using its earlier standard, the agency found cadmium levels in one of the designs posed an unacceptable risk; McDonald’s ended up recalling all four.

A McDonald’s spokeswoman, Danya Proud, said the fast food giant had no new comment and stood by the recall as the right thing to do at the time.

Cadmium accumulates in the body, stays for years, and at high enough levels can cause kidneys to leak vital protein and bones to soften so much they snap. People absorb trace amounts just by eating leafy greens or smoking cigarettes; the most likely scenario with jewelry is that children would increase the burden on their bodies if they bite or suck on pendants or bracelets which easily shed the toxic metal.

Cadmium exposure is of particular concern for children. Growing bodies readily absorb what they ingest, and several studies have concluded that as cadmium exposure increases, kids are more likely to have learning disabilities or lower IQs.

No Scout leadership post in NC for Mormon parents

By Tom Breen
Associated Press writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — A Presbyterian church was happy to have Jeremy and Jodi Stokes as Cub Scout leaders, at least until officials there found out they are Mormons and told them they would have to step down because the church does not consider them real Christians.

The Stokeses enrolled their sons as Scouts at Christ Covenant Church, a Presbyterian congregation about 10 miles from Charlotte, then expressed interest in volunteering as leaders. Church officials were initially thrilled earlier this month, the Stokeses said, until they saw on the couple's application forms that they belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

After two Scout meetings, the Stokeses were told their sons, 6 and 8 years old, could remain in their packs, but the parents couldn't serve as leaders.

"I can't believe they had the audacity to say, 'You can't be leaders but we want your boys,'" Jodi Stokes said. "Are you kidding me? Do you really think I'd let my boys go there now?"

The family's story was first reported in the Charlotte Observer.

Christ Covenant spokeswoman Stelle Snyder said in an e-mail Tuesday the church was taking action to "assure that our parameters for leaders are clearly defined and well-communicated to volunteers and those interested in leadership roles for church sponsored programs such as the Boy Scouts."

The e-mail included a link to a site explaining the differences between Mormon and historical Christian doctrine. Snyder declined to comment further, but said the church wishes the Stokes family well.

"We had bought the uniforms, we had gone to two meetings, they had played with the other kids," Jodi Stokes said. "And then my sons are saying, 'Mommy, why can't we go back there?'"

Members of the Salt Lake City-based LDS church strongly identify as Christians, believing that salvation is possible because of the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. But significant theological differences separate Mormons from most Catholic, Orthodox and Protestant churches.

The LDS church treats as holy scripture writings, like the Book of Mormon, which aren't recognized by other churches, but which it believes were divinely revealed to Joseph Smith in the 1820s. Mormons also disavow belief in the core Christian doctrine of the Trinity — that the Father, Jesus and the Holy Spirit are one — instead believing the three to be individuals united in a single purpose.

Major doctrinal differences exist between many Christian churches, said Kathleen Flake, a professor of American religious history at Vanderbilt University, yet few other denominations endure the kind of scrutiny that Mormons are subjected to.

Flake suspects Mormons have endured more criticism because of a general lack of understanding about what they believe, and also because of their willingness to proselytize to Christians and non-Christians alike.

"They proselytize anyone, whether you're a Baptist or a Buddhist," she said. "If you're interested, they want to tell you about it."

Christ Covenant in Matthews, which has about 2,350 members according to its website, belongs to the Presbyterian Church in America, a conservative Evangelical denomination. Evangelicals have consistently criticized the LDS church.

During the Republican presidential primary in 2008, former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, a Southern Baptist, criticized his Mormon rival Mitt Romney over some of the LDS church's beliefs.

Regardless of doctrinal questions, Christ Covenant's Cub Scout program is within its rights to deny the Stokeses leadership positions, according to Mark Turner, executive director of the Mecklenburg County Council of the Boy Scouts of America, which also includes the Cub Scouts.

As an example, he offers a unit operated by a home-school association.

"That unit will only serve youth that are home-schooled. Period," he said. "If you're in the unit for three or four years and your family sends you back to school, you're out of the troop. That's their niche."

Delaware Senate candidate O'Donnell questions separation of church, state

By Ben Evans
Associated Press writer

WILMINGTON, Del. — Republican Christine O'Donnell challenged her Democratic rival Tuesday to show where the Constitution requires separation of church and state, drawing swift criticism from her opponent, laughter from her law school audience and a quick defense from prominent conservatives.

"Where in the Constitution is separation of church and state?" O'Donnell asked while Democrat Chris Coons, an attorney, sat a few feet away.

Coons responded that O'Donnell's question "reveals her fundamental misunderstanding of what our Constitution is. ... The First Amendment establishes a separation."

She interrupted to say, "The First Amendment does? ... So you're telling me that the separation of church and state, the phrase 'separation of church and state,' is in the First Amendment?"

Her campaign issued a statement later saying O'Donnell "was not questioning the concept of separation of church and state as subsequently established by the courts. She simply made the point that the phrase appears nowhere in the Constitution."

Conservative commentator Rush Limbaugh made the same point in his radio program soon after the debate, saying, "There's nothing in the Constitution about separation of church and state."

The controversy was the latest to befall O'Donnell in a race where she trails badly in the polls against Coons.

Coons is a county executive nominated by the Democrats for the seat held for years by Vice President Joe Biden. O'Donnell, with strong tea party support, burst into the national spotlight by winning the Republican primary over a longtime GOP congressman.

The subject of religion and the law came up during their debate at Widener University Law School as O'Donnell criticized Coons for saying that teaching creationism in public school would violate the Constitution.

Coons said private and parochial schools are free to teach creationism — O'Donnell used the term "intelligent design" — but that under the "indispensable principle" of separation of church and state "religious doctrine doesn't belong in our public schools."

He said the separation of church and state was one of a number of "settled pieces of constitutional law" worked out through years of legal development including Supreme Court decisions. He said a woman's right to abortion was another.

He noted again the First Amendment's ban on establishment of religion.

"That's in the First Amendment?" she said, smiling.

Both candidates suggested that the exchange showed the other didn't understand the Constitution.

The First Amendment states: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

The phrase "separation of church and state" is usually traced to President Thomas Jefferson. In a letter in 1802, he referred to the First Amendment and said that it built "a wall of separation between Church & State."

The relationship of government and religion continues to be debated in American law. Many argue that the First Amendment's reference to religion involves the establishment of any particular religion, an important concern to the American colonists, not a ban on all involvement between religion and government.

O'Donnell's comments, in a debate aired on radio station WDEL, created a stir in the audience.

"You actually audibly heard the crowd gasp," Widener University political scientist Wesley Leckrone said after the debate.

Erin Daly, a Widener professor who specializes in constitutional law, said, "She seemed genuinely surprised that the principle of separation of church and state derives from the First Amendment, and I think to many of us in the law school that was a surprise."

Mark Twain memoir hits top five on best-seller lists

NEW YORK (AP) — It's never too late: Mark Twain is back on the best-seller lists.

Pre-orders for the first of three planned volumes of his autobiography, released in full upon the centennial of Twain's death, have for the past few days placed the book in the top five of Barnes & Noble.com and Amazon.com. It is outpacing new works by Ken Follett, John Grisham and Jon Stewart.

"The Autobiography of Mark Twain, Volume 1" comes out Nov. 15 from the University of California Press, which already has increased the first printing from 50,000 copies to 75,000, the publisher said Tuesday.

Comfy Casserole Contest

When it's chilly outside, and you want to take advantage of every moment of sunlight, what could be better for dinner than a casserole?

But who makes the best casseroles in south-central Idaho? The Times-News wants to find out. To enter, submit the recipe for your family's favorite casserole by Oct. 29. From the entrants, we will select the recipes that best fit the following criteria:

- Easy to make (not a lot of special equipment or techniques required)
- Uses commonly found ingredients (a few specialty ingredients OK)
- Versatile (substitutions can be made easily if an ingredient is unavailable)

Extra points will be given for casseroles that are unexpected in flavor or construction and those that have a good story (perhaps they were great-grandma's recipe from the old country, or you found the recipe in a cookbook you bought on your honeymoon).

Finalists will be selected based on recipes, and those chosen cooks will need to be available the week of Nov. 8 to demonstrate how to make the casserole for a reporter and photographer (and have a completed casserole available for them to sample). The winner — chosen based on the taste of the casserole as well as the recipe criteria — will be announced on Nov. 17.

Submit your recipes to reporter Ariel Hansen at ahansen@magicvalley.com (deadline 5 p.m. Oct. 29), or drop them off in person at the Times-News offices, 132 Main Ave. N., Twin Falls (deadline noon Oct. 29). Include a phone number where you can be reached during the day.

Make the most of squash with savory fillings

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Squash come in shapes, tastes and sizes a-plenty.

But you haven't seen a squash's full potential until you have filled it with rice, meat, cheese or roasted veggies.

With hollow insides and sturdy bodies, these versatile fruits are perfect for stuffing. We asked two Magic Valley cooks, Taylor Dougherty and Isaac Hooley, for stuffed squash recipes to share.

The results: amazingly delicious.

Both of these recipes use delicata squash, which is a great choice because you can eat the nutrient-dense skin, said Dougherty, who helps her husband Michael develop recipes for Twin Falls restaurant The Local Dish. Other squashes have a thicker rind, but that doesn't preclude them from stuffing. Just don't try to eat those thick skins.

Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or mdavlin@magicvalley.com.

Taylor Dougherty made this delicata squash dish with winter pear, dried cranberries, truffle cheese and an almond herb topping. Dougherty moved from San Francisco with her husband, Mike, a year ago and the two have been cooking together for more than 38 years.

Dougherty

This recipe can easily be customized for special diets, Dougherty said. Have a dairy intolerance? Leave out the cheese and butter. Can't do wheat? Sub in gluten-free bread crumbs, or omit those, too.

If you don't have truffle cheese, Dougherty recommends using white cheddar.

For the stuffing:

- 2 delicata squash, cut in half lengthwise, seeds removed
- 1 winter pear, unpeeled, cored and diced
- 2 teaspoons unsalted butter, at room temperature
- 1 tablespoon dried, unsweetened cranberries, minced
- 1 teaspoon fresh sage, minced
- 1 teaspoon fresh rosemary, minced
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1/8 teaspoon salt, freshly ground or good-quality sea salt
- 1/4 cup fresh whole wheat bread crumbs
- 1/4 cup Ballard Farms Truffle Cheese, finely grated
- Pinch of allspice

For the topping:

- 2 teaspoons unsalted butter
- 1 teaspoon fresh sage, minced
- 1 teaspoon fresh rosemary, minced
- 2 tablespoons fresh whole wheat bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons slivered almonds
- Pinch of salt, freshly ground or good-quality sea salt

Preheat oven to 375. Score and butter the inside of the squash and put it in the oven while making the stuffing. In a medium bowl, mix diced pear, minced cranberries, sage, rosemary, pepper, sea salt, bread crumbs, allspice and truffle cheese. Mix to combine well. Take squash out of the oven and divide stuffing mix, gently pushing it down into the squash. Return to the oven while making topping.

For the topping: Toast the almonds on a flat tray in the oven for 6 to 10 minutes or until fragrant and golden brown. Cool and mince, then add to the sage, rosemary and bread crumbs. Sauté the mixture in the butter until lightly toasted. Take squash out of the oven and divide topping between squash halves. Return to the oven and bake until done, about 10 to 15 additional minutes.

Spicy Stuffed Squash

Courtesy of Isaac Hooley

Hooley whips up this twice-baked squash recipe with whatever he has on hand. Don't have delicata? Don't worry — you can use acorn, butternut or whatever other squash is sitting in your pantry.

Need a seasonal side dish to go with it? Hooley recommends a side salad and baked apples. Just put the apples in the oven at 350 degrees for 20 minutes while the squash is baking, he said.

- 2 delicata squash
- 1 small onion
- 1/4 pound sausage or hamburger
- 1/2 cut grated pepperjack or monterey jack cheese

Cut squash in half, lengthwise. Remove seeds and strings with a spoon. Fill a baking pan with 1/4 inch of water, and lay the squash face-down in the water. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes to one hour, until a fork or paring knife slides easily into the meat of the squash.

When the squash has 15 minutes left to bake, sauté the onions and sausage in a skillet. Leave on medium heat, stirring occasionally, until the sausage is cooked and the onions are translucent. Drain grease from sausage and remove from heat.

Scoop the squash flesh out of the skin, being careful to leave the skin intact. In a bowl, mash the squash into a smooth mixture. Mix in the sausage and onions. Spoon the mixture back into the squash skins. Sprinkle grated cheese over the top of the stuffed squash. Return to the oven for just long enough for the cheese to melt.

Tips for stuffed squash

- Be careful when slicing a squash in half. The round fruit can roll, said Taylor Dougherty, "especially on the big hard squashes."
- To help your squash survive storage, keep at least an inch of vine attached to the fruit.
- Squash has a higher sugar content — and is therefore tastier — when it's picked ripe. Avoid squash that has a green tint when it shouldn't, Isaac Hooley said. You don't want pumpkins or butternuts to have any green tint.
- When it comes to shape, delicatas are great for their perfect depth. "Usually, long, skinny ones are the best to stuff," said farmers market vendor Carol Vawser. But feel free to try these stuffings in other varieties, too. Smaller squash like sweet dumplings or tiny pumpkins are good bets. Larger squash, like acorns, are OK, too, but require slicing for serving and, in the end, don't look as pretty as the single-serving delicatas.
- Feel free to experiment with your own stuffings. There is no one formula for a perfect stuffed squash, but most recipes call for parbaking the fruit before adding the stuffing and cooking the rest of the way. And remember, always use fully cooked meat for the stuffing.
- Dougherty recommends organic squash, which is available at The Local Dish in Twin Falls. Not concerned about organics? Most grocery stores carry at least some varieties of squash throughout the fall.

PACK A SACK OF SANDWICHES; MAKE THEM AHEAD OR ON THE SPOT

By Susan M. Selasky
Detroit Free Press

Burgers, brats and hot dogs are fine tailgating fare. But sandwiches can score big points, too.

You can get them ready in advance or make them up on game day and they are easy to transport.

For Jim Mathes, 48, of Woodhaven, Mich., his University of Michigan tailgate fare can include breakfast sandwiches, appetizers, snacks and sandwich wraps, depending on game time.

But it's Mathes' specialty Hawaiian Chicken with Ham and Pineapple sandwich that he says is "always a crowd pleaser."

The sandwich has a marinated and grilled chicken breast topped with a thick slice of grilled Black Forest ham basted with brown sugar and honey and grilled sliced pineapple. All the ingredients are nestled in an Asiago cheese roll.

Here are some sandwich tips from "The Best of Fine Cooking Tailgating 2010" (Fine Cooking magazine, $9.99) and the Free Press Test Kitchen:

Use sturdy bread with a hearty texture and thick crust that will stand up to spreads and fillings.

Add ingredients that tend to be wet, such as tomatoes and cucumbers, at the end or serve on the side because they will make the bread soggy.

Choose condiments that hold up well and won't spoil in warm weather.

Use spreads that are thick enough to prevent soaking through the bread, but add flavor. Fine Cooking suggests chicken with mozzarella and pesto or roast beef with cheddar and horseradish.

Wrap sandwiches well — even consider double wrapping — to avoid ingredients and condiments or dressing from leaking out. Wrapping sandwiches tight also compresses all the ingredients and holds them in place.

VEGGIE SANDWICH WITH PESTO MAYO

*Makes: 1 large sandwich
Preparation time: 25 minutes*

Total time: 40 minutes

You can grill or roast the vegetables a day ahead, but don't assemble the sandwich until before serving or it will get soggy. Use any combination of vegetables.

1 large (16 ounce) French baguette (or other favorite bread)

1/4 cup olive oil, divided

1 eggplant, about 1 to 1 1/4 pounds

6 small (3 1/2 inches in diameter) portabella mushrooms

Salt and pepper to taste

1/3 cup reduced-fat mayonnaise

2 tablespoons prepared pesto

6 roasted red pepper pieces

1 small red onion, peeled, thinly sliced

1 cup marinated artichokes, drained, coarsely

Flat iron steak with chipotle mayo.

1 cup crumbled feta cheese, or cheese of choice

2 cups baby spinach or field greens

Preheat the grill. Cut the baguette in half lengthwise, being careful not to cut all the way through. Brush the inside with 1 tablespoon olive oil.

Cut the eggplant into 1/4-inch-thick slices. Brush the eggplant slices and the mushrooms with the remaining olive oil. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Grill the eggplant and mushrooms until just tender. Place the bread on the grill, with the inside flat and lightly grill. Remove all from the grill.

To assemble the sandwich: Mix together the mayonnaise and pesto. Brush this mixture on both insides of the bread. Place a layer of grilled eggplant slices. Top with mushrooms, red pepper and red onion. Scatter the chopped artichokes over the red onion. Sprinkle the feta cheese on top (or lay slices of cheese on top) and top with spinach leaves. Close the sandwich, pressing it together. Cut the sandwich into 6 pieces and serve immediately. Or cut the sandwich in half. Wrap each half tight with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 1 hour before serving.

HAWAIIAN CHICKEN WITH HAM AND PINEAPPLE

Makes: 4

*Preparation time: 15 minutes (plus marinating time)
Total time: 45 minutes*

This recipe is from Michigan fan Jim Mathes, 48, Woodhaven. You can easily double it.

4 small (4 ounces each) boneless, skinless chicken breasts

1/4 cup olive oil

2 tablespoons lemon juice

2 cloves (or more if you like) fresh garlic, crushed

Seasoning salt mixed with sea salt to taste

1 stick unsalted butter

1/4 cup light brown sugar

2 tablespoons honey or to taste

4 thick slices (about 1/4-inch) Black Forest ham

4 slices pineapple, about 1/4-inch thick

4 rolls of choice, such as Asiago cheese

Place the chicken in a plastic bag or a bowl. In a measuring cup, whisk together the olive oil, lemon juice, garlic, seasoning salt and sea salt. Pour over the chicken and allow to marinate at least an hour and up to 4 hours.

Preheat the grill to medium and lightly oil the grates.

Remove the chicken from the marinade and discard the marinade. Grill the chicken on one side, about 5 minutes, depending on the thickness or until you get nice grill marks. Turn and continue grilling until the chicken is cooked through. While the chicken is grilling, melt the butter with the brown sugar and honey. Place the ham and pineapple slices on the grill. Brush the ham and pineapple slices with the butter mixture (you may not use it all). Grill until the pineapple is just tender.

Layer the grilled chicken, ham and pineapple slices on the rolls and serve.

From Jim Mathes, Woodhaven, Mich.

FLAT IRON STEAK SANDWICH WITH CHIPOTLE MAYO

Serves: 6

*Preparation time: 10 minutes (plus marinating time)
Total time: 35 minutes*

This is a terrific sandwich to make in advance and serve cold. Or you can make it right at your tailgate.

Witches brew Halloween punch is seen in this photo. If the juice flavors called for in this recipe aren't your favorite, substitute at will.

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

Nothing says child-friendly Halloween punch like fish eyes.

So we've brewed up a party-size kettle of fruity, bubbly punch studded with slippery, slimy, gooey fish eyes (often sold under the name "tapioca pearls").

When shopping for this recipe, be certain to purchase pearls of tapioca, which resemble small white beads. The more common instant tapioca is too small, won't resemble balls once cooked and will be too mushy to be used in the punch.

If the juice flavors called for in this recipe aren't your favorite, substitute at will.

WITCHES BREW HALLOWEEN PUNCH

Start to finish: 30 minutes (plus cooling)
Servings: 20

- 4 cups water
- 1 cup tapioca pearls
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 64-ounce bottle cranberry juice blend, chilled
- 2-liter bottle lime seltzer water, chilled
- 12-ounce can frozen peach blend juice concentrate, thawed but cold
- Gummy candies, such as worms, to garnish

In a medium saucepan over high heat, bring the water to a boil. Add the tapioca pearls and sugar, then return to a boil. Lower the heat to medium and simmer for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Transfer the tapioca mixture to a bowl, cover and refrigerate until chilled.

Once the tapioca has chilled, in a large, clear punch bowl, combine the cranberry juice blend, seltzer water, peach juice concentrate and tapioca mixture. Stir gently to combine. Garnish the bowl with gummy candies.

Molasses and spice make for great autumnal flavors. In this cookie sandwich we've taken a chewy gingerbread pumpkin cut-out cookie and added fun jack-o-lantern faces and a lightly sweetened cream cheese filling.

For another fall theme, the cookies also could be made with leaf-shaped cutters.

If your dough gets too warm, put it in the freezer for 5 minutes for easier cutting. A thin metal spatula works well for transferring the unbaked cookies to the prepared baking sheet.

JACK-O-LANTERN COOKIES

Start to finish: 3 hours (1 hour active)
Makes 20 cookie sandwiches

- For the cookies:
- 3 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
 - 2 teaspoons cinnamon
 - 2 teaspoons ground ginger
 - 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
 - 1/2 teaspoon allspice
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon baking soda
 - 12 tablespoons (1 1/2 sticks) butter, room temperature
 - 2 cups packed brown sugar
 - 1/2 cup molasses
 - 1/4 cup milk

For the filling:

- Two 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
- 1 cup powdered sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

To make the cookies, in a medium bowl, whisk together the flour, cinnamon, ginger, cloves, allspice, salt and baking soda.

In another bowl, use an electric mixer beat together the butter and brown sugar. Mix in the molasses and milk, then the dry ingredients. Refrigerate until firm, about 2 hours.

When ready to bake, heat the oven to 350 F. Lightly coat 2 baking sheets with cooking spray or line with parchment paper.

On a lightly floured surface, and working with half the dough at a time, roll out the dough to 1/8 inch thick. Use a 4-inch pumpkin-shaped cookie cutter (and rerolling scraps as needed) cut out a total of 40 cookies.

Use a paring knife or very small cutters to cut out a jack-o-lantern face on 20 of the cookies. Transfer the cookies to the prepared baking sheets, leaving 1 inch between each cookie. Bake for 12 to 15 minutes, or until golden around the edges. Transfer the cookies to a rack and allow to cool.

To make the filling, in a medium bowl use an electric mixer to beat together the cream cheese, sugar and vanilla until smooth and creamy.

Add a tablespoon of filling to the bottom cookies (without faces) and spread to within a 1/4 inch of the edges. Place a top cookie on each to create a sandwich. Store in an air-tight container in the refrigerator between layers of waxed paper or parchment.

Safe to eat? Or not? Site aims to help consumers

By Renee Enna
Chicago Tribune

Somewhere along the path toward food safety, we often make a detour toward obsession. An obsession that compels us to throw out food before we really have to. And that, in turn, costs us money.

Before we blame ourselves, let's not forget that the habit is enabled by all those "Use By" and "Sell By" and "God Forbid You Eat This AFTER" package label dates, not to mention recent headlines of good food gone bad.

The challenge: How to be a food-savvy cheapskate versus a food-sickened cheapskate. A new Website wants to help.

ShelfLifeAdvice.com delivers bushels of articles on the topic: how to store food, save food, clean food, freeze food and, yes, clarification of those dates on packaged and fresh foods.

The brainchild of retired professor Ethel Tiersky and her son, Howard, the site also features links to lots of Web sites, and it has a board of advisers of food-safety pros from across the U.S. A recent lead article was titled, "Soft Cheese: A Delicious Delicacy or a Menace?"

And, as you might imagine, there's plenty here about eggs. We love the quiz testing your knowledge of food safety.

Much of the advice is offered in tones of gray, not black and white. That's as it should be. When experts differ on a topic, both sides are given their say.

Now, I would be remiss not to add my final two cents — because no amount of money can be worth getting food poisoning. Food writers routinely receive calls from home cooks who have, say, left meat on the counter overnight and want us to tell them it is OK to eat.

It's not OK. Craving more? Go to shelflifeadvice.com.

In autumn, an easy meat pie to leave you satisfied

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Whether it's for a Halloween party or Sunday in front of the widescreen for a football game, good food for a fall gathering should be hearty, flavorful and easy to prepare.

With this rustic pork and veal pie, you can put a checkmark next to all three.

For the savory filling of this freeform meat pie, you start with pre-shredded cabbage, which is sold near the pre-washed salad mixes at your grocer. Then you add convenient, ground pork and veal along with canned tomatoes and spices.

After it is simmered to let the flavors meld, the filling gets wrapped up in store-bought, refrigerated pie crusts and baked until golden brown.

For added convenience, the pie can be baked a day ahead and reheated in a 350 F oven for 30 minutes, or until heated through.

RUSTIC PORK AND VEAL PIE

Start to finish: 1 hour 10 minutes (40 minutes active) Servings: 6

- 2 teaspoons extra-virgin oil
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 6 cups shredded green cabbage (1/2 small head)
- 1/2 pound ground pork
- 1/2 pound ground veal

A rustic pork and veal pie is a handy, easy to eat meal that is great for a Halloween party or any gathering.

AP photo

- 1 cup canned diced tomatoes, with juice
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
- 1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
- 2/3 cup shredded extra-sharp cheddar cheese
- 1 package refrigerated piecrusts (two 9-inch crusts), at room temperature

Heat the oven to 450 F. Coat a large baking sheet or pizza pan with cooking spray. Set aside.

In a large nonstick skillet over medium, heat the oil. Add the garlic and saute for 30 seconds. Stir in the cabbage and saute until softened and translucent, about 5 minutes.

Add the ground pork and veal and cook, breaking it up as finely as possible with a wooden spoon, until no longer pink, 8 to 10 minutes. Stir in the tomatoes, tomato paste, thyme, allspice and cinnamon. Cover and let simmer for 7 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Uncover, stir in the cheese until melted, then set aside to cool slightly.

Meanwhile, on a lightly floured surface, place one piecrust on top of the other. Dust the top crust with flour and roll the crusts out together into an 18-inch circle. Fold the circle in half, transfer it to the prepared baking sheet or pizza pan and unfold.

Place the pork and veal mixture in the center of the piecrust circle, spreading it out in an even layer and leaving a 4-inch uncovered border. Fold the edges of the crust up over the filling, forming pleats and leaving a roughly 2- to 3-inch opening at the center.

Bake the pie for 25 to 30 minutes, or until the crust is golden-brown on the top and bottom and completely cooked at the folds.

Ask a cook: Making your own stock? Cool it

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Q I have just made my first-ever beef stock. How long will it keep in the refrigerator? Or is it best to freeze it all and take it out as I need it?

A Congratulations on entering the wonderful world of stock-making. Satisfying, isn't it?

Stock will keep about four days in the refrigerator if you chill it properly. To do that, let it cool first. It's not a good idea to put a large container of hot liquid straight into your refrigerator. The container won't cool all the way through quickly enough. And it will raise the temperature in the refrigerator, which is hard on the other food around it.

You can divide the warm stock into smaller containers to chill it quickly. Or you can put the whole container in a large bowl of ice and stir it occasionally until it's no longer piping hot.

Even if you're going to freeze the stock, refrigerating it overnight is a good idea. The fat will rise to the top and harden, making it easy to remove.

Freezing is your best long-term option. Make sure you measure the stock, to make it easier to use later. I usually make up freezer bags with 1-cup and 2-cup portions so I can pull out what I need. Use freezer bags or freezer containers, and make sure you label them.

It takes a few minutes of effort, but it pays off. Having stock you made yourself waiting in the freezer is like having a jump start on hundreds of recipes.

Banana bread and coffee cake: Together at last!

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

If I'm going to bother to bake something, it had better be good.

And it needs to be easy and create as little mess as possible. If it also could combine the toasty, warm, cinnamon flavors of my favorite baked goods — banana bread, coffee cake and streusel toppings — the chances of me actually cranking up the oven increase dramatically.

Thus was the inspiration for these muffins, which are made entirely in the food processor, call for no unusual ingredients, come together in about 10 minutes, bake in just about 20 minutes, and have a flavor that will make you want to eat until your stomach hurts.

To take these even more over the top, you could drizzle them with caramel sauce just before serving or add white chocolate chips to the batter before baking. If for some reason you wanted to make these healthier, you could use white whole-wheat flour instead of all-purpose.

QUICK BANANA COFFEE CAKE STREUSEL MUFFINS

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

For the streusel topping:
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) butter, cut into small pieces and softened
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

For the muffins:
3/4 cup sour cream
2 bananas
1 teaspoon cinnamon

1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 large egg
3/4 cup brown sugar
2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) butter, cut into small pieces and softened

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Coat a 12-cup muffin pan with baking spray, or line it with paper muffin cups.

To prepare the streusel, in a food processor, combine the flour, butter, brown sugar and cinnamon. Process for 15 seconds, or until well blended and resembles slightly clumpy wet sand. Transfer to a bowl and set aside.

To prepare the muffins, in the food processor combine the sour cream and bananas. Process until smooth. Add the cinnamon, ginger, salt, vanilla, egg and brown sugar. Process again until smooth. Add the flour, baking powder, baking soda and butter. Pulse only until combined. Add 1/4 of the streusel mixture, pulse the processor 2 to 3 times.

Scoop a generous 1/4 cup of batter into each muffin cup. Top each with a heaping spoonful of streusel topping, pressing it lightly into the top of the batter. Bake for 18 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the center of a muffin comes out clean. Cool in the pan for 5 minutes.

Serve a green salad of substance

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

The goal here was a flavor-jammed salad that was simple, speedy and so good you don't even need a dressing.

So I started out by marinating thinly sliced beef in a power-packed marinade of teriyaki sauce, hoisin, cider vinegar, sugar and hot sauce. I liked eye round roast for the beef, but feel free to use any steak or other cut that will handle being thinly sliced and briefly grilled.

The beef can sit in the marinade for as little or as long as you like. Once you pull it out, it goes on and off the grill in about 2 minutes. Throw it over some chopped romaine and sprinkle with crumbled blue cheese and you pretty much need nothing else.

The thinly sliced beef in this recipe grills quickly and is packed with flavor from a simple but powerful marinade.

1/2 cup prepared teriyaki sauce or marinade
1/2 cup hoisin sauce
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons hot sauce
1 1/2 pounds eye round roast, trimmed of fat and cut into 1/4-inch slices
2 large hearts of romaine, roughly chopped
1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese
1 cup halved cherry or grape tomatoes

In a medium bowl, whisk together the teriyaki, hoisin, vinegar, sugar and hot sauce. Add the steak, turning to coat well, then cover and refrigerate for 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, arrange the lettuce on 4 serving plates. Heat the grill to high. Coat the grates with cooking spray.

Use tongs to transfer the steak, leaving as much of the marinade clinging to it as possible, to the grill. Cook for 1 to 2 minutes per side.

Chai and brandy lend oomph to seasonal apple cake

By The Associated Press

Chai is a rich, spiced drink from India that lends deep flavors and aromas to this easy apple cake from Krystina Castella and Terry Lee Stone's cookbook, "Booze Cakes."

Most grocers carry chai concentrates that can be diluted with milk and heated for a comforting beverage. If you can't find the chai cream liqueur called for in this recipe, substitute an equal amount of the concentrate.

BRANDY APPLE CHAI CAKE

2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1/8 teaspoon ground cloves
1 1/4 teaspoons cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg

3/4 teaspoon salt
1 1/4 cups walnuts, coarsely chopped
3 1/4 cups apples, peeled, cored, and chopped
1/4 cup brandy
For the chai glaze:

Heat the oven to 325 F. Coat a 10-inch Bundt cake pan with cooking spray and flour (or baking spray).

In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to beat the oil and sugar until thick and smooth. Beat in the eggs one at a time. Mix in the flour, cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg, baking soda and salt. Stir in the walnuts, apples and brandy. Pour into the prepared pan. Bake for 1 hour and 15 minutes, or until a knife inserted at the center comes out clean.

Meanwhile, prepare the glaze. In a small bowl, whisk together all ingredients.

French retirement protests take violent turn

By Jenny Barchfield
Associated Press writer

PARIS — Masked youths clad in black torched cars, smashed storefronts and threw up roadblocks Tuesday, clashing with riot police across France as protests over raising the retirement age to 62 took a radical turn.

Hundreds of flights were canceled and desperate drivers searched for gas as oil refinery strikes and blockages emptied the pumps at nearly a third of the nation's gas stations.

A series of nationwide protests against the bill since early September have been largely peaceful. But Tuesday's clashes, notably just outside Paris and in the southeastern city of Lyon, revived memories of student unrest in 2006 that forced the government to abandon another highly unpopular labor bill.

Still, President Nicolas Sarkozy was unbending Tuesday, vowing to guarantee public order in the face of "troublemakers." The government announced a plan to pool gasoline stocks so that dry stations can be filled.

"There are people who want to work, the immense majority, and they cannot be deprived of gasoline," Sarkozy said.

A new test could come as early as Thursday, when students plan a day of mobilization with a demonstration in Paris hours before the Senate is to vote on the retirement measure.

"The government will continue to dislodge protesters blocking the fuel depots. ... No one has the right to take hostage an entire country, its economy and its jobs," Prime Minister Francois Fillon said after meeting with oil industry executives.

Some 4,000 gas stations — out of 12,700 nationwide — were empty of gas Tuesday afternoon, the Environment Ministry said.

French unions have a long tradition of street protests, but the current strife is particularly worrisome because it has touched the vital energy sector and is drawing often volatile youth into the mix.

Islamic militants attack Chechen legislature; 6 dead

By Musa Sadulayev
and Simon Sshuster
Associated Press writers

GROZNY, Russia — Islamic insurgents attacked Chechnya's parliament Tuesday in a brazen suicide raid that left six people dead and 17 wounded, defying Kremlin claims of stability in the volatile southern region.

In a clear challenge to Moscow, the raid occurred just as Russia's interior minister was visiting the provincial capital of Grozny.

The three attackers drove to the tightly guarded parliament complex and got inside. One militant blew himself up at the doors and another two ran into the building shouting "Allahu akbar!" — "God is great!" in Arabic — as they opened fire on the people inside, said Chechen police spokesman Ramzan Bekkhoyev.

The regional chief prosecutor's office said the remaining two attackers also blew themselves up after exchanging fire with police, while other officials said they were killed in a gunbattle. Two police officers and a civilian government employee were killed in the raid and 17 others were wounded, prosecutors said.

Bloodstains, body parts and a decapitated corpse were still scattered outside the building hours after the attack as police and special forces backed by armored vehicles patrolled the area.

An Associated Press reporter at the parliament saw ambulances take away two bodies, along with the severed head of a militant.

Chechnya's Moscow-backed regional president, Ramzan Kadyrov, sought to play down the attack, saying the assailants were killed quickly. His office said Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin and President Dmitry Medvedev called him to offer assistance. Medvedev, on a visit to France, was briefed about the attack by Russian security officials.

In Washington, the U.S. offered condolences to the families of the dead and wounded.

"We also express our solidarity with Russia in the struggle against terrorism. We're concerned about continued violence in Russia's North Caucasus, which contributes to instability and personal insecurity in the region," said State Department spokesman Mark Toner.

"Several independent non-governmental reports confirm that the level of violence has increased in 2010 in several North Caucasus regions, and we've been following these events closely."

Kadyrov and Russia's Interior Minister Rashid Nurgaliyev attended a parliament session shortly after the raid. Nurgaliyev said the insurgents had tried to get into the main parliamentary chamber.

"As always, they failed. Unfortunately, we were not able to avoid loss of life," Nurgaliyev said. "The situation we saw today is extremely rare. Here, there is stability and security."

Kadyrov, a former rebel, has recruited many ex-militants into his feared security forces. The bullnecked 34-year-old former militia chief also sought to blunt the rebels' appeal with a massive construction boom in Chechnya and a campaign to impose strict Islamic values.

The ITAR-Tass news agency cited Chechnya's Interior Ministry branch as saying that the attack had been planned by warlord Khusein Gakayev who had broken loose from the main rebel commander, Doku Umarov. It said Gakayev launched the attack to try to raise his profile.

Human rights activists have accused security forces and paramilitary units under Kadyrov's command of extra-judicial killings, kidnappings and torture of rebel suspects and their relatives.

Scrolls to get Googled

Technology giant to bring Dead Sea Scrolls online

By Tia Goldenberg
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — The Dead Sea Scrolls, among the world's most important, mysterious and tightly restricted archaeological treasures, are about to get Googled.

The technology giant and Israel announced Tuesday that they are teaming up to give researchers and the public the first comprehensive and searchable database of the scrolls — a 2,000-year-old collection of Hebrew, Aramaic and Greek documents that shed light on Judaism during biblical times and the origins of Christianity. For years, experts have complained that access to the scrolls has been too limited.

Once the images are up, anyone will be able to peruse exact copies of the original scrolls as well as an English translation of the text on their computer — for free. Officials said the collection, expected to be available within months, will feature sections that have been made more legible thanks to high-tech infrared technology.

"We are putting together the past and the future in order to enable all of us to share it," said Pnina Shor, an official with Israel's Antiquities Authority.

The Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered in the late 1940s in caves in the Judean Desert and are considered one of the greatest finds of the last century.

After the initial discovery, tens of thousands of fragments were found in 11 caves nearby. Some 30,000 of these have been photographed by the antiquities authority, along with the earlier finds. Together, they make up more than 900 manuscripts.

For decades, access to 500 scrolls was limited to a small group of scholar-editors with exclusive authorization from Israel to assemble the jigsaw puzzle of fragments, and to translate and publish them. That changed in the early 1990s when much of the previously unpublished text was brought out in book form.

Jerusalem, where the originals are preserved in a dark, temperature-controlled room.

Shor said scholars must receive permission to view the scrolls from the authority, which receives about one request a month. Most are given access, but because no more than two people are allowed into the viewing room at once, scheduling conflicts arise. Researchers are permitted three hours with only the section they have requested to view placed behind glass.

Putting the scroll online will give scholars unlimited time with the pieces of parchment and may lead to new hypotheses, Shor said.

"This is the ultimate puzzle that people can now rearrange and come up with new interpretations," she said.

Scholars already can access the text of the scrolls in 39 volumes along with photographs of the originals, but critics say the books are expensive and cumbersome. Shor said the new pictures — photographed using cutting-edge technology — are clearer than the originals.

The refined images were shot with a high-tech infrared camera NASA uses for space imaging. It helped uncover sections of the scrolls that have faded over the centuries and became indecipherable.

If the images uploaded prove to be of better quality than the original, scholars may rely on these instead of traveling to Jerusalem to see the scrolls themselves, said Rachel Eilior, a professor of Jewish thought at Jerusalem's Hebrew University.

"The more accessible the fragments are the better. Any new line, any new letter, any better reading is a great happiness for scholars in this field," she said.

The new partnership is part of a drive by Google to have historical artifacts catalogued online, along with any other information.

"There are artifacts in boxes, in museum basements. We ask ourselves how much this stuff is available on the Internet. The answer is not a lot, and not enough," said Yossi Matias, an official from Google-Israel.

Sculpture of Israeli leader stirs emotion

JERUSALEM (AP) — A lifelike sculpture of former Prime Minister Ariel Sharon is stirring high emotions among Israelis.

Sharon, the tough army general turned politician who led Israel during the trying years of the second Palestinian uprising and uprooted Israeli settlers from Gaza in 2005, suffered a devastating stroke on Jan. 4, 2006, that has left him comatose for nearly five years.

An art exhibit opening this week in Tel Aviv, which features a wax figure-like sculpture of Sharon in his hospital bed, has enraged his political supporters.

"There's no art here, only sickening voyeurism," said Yoel Hasson, a parliament member from Sharon's Kadima party.

"This is not the way I would like to remember Sharon," said Raanan Gissin, Sharon's former adviser and confidant, after visiting the Tel Aviv art gallery where the sculpture is exhibited. "I think Sharon would say, 'I would rather not be remembered, than be remembered that way.'"

Gissin, who serves as a family spokesman, said Sharon's two sons had no comment.

Gissin said he frequently visits the Tel Aviv hospital ward where Sharon is treated, but cannot bring himself to look at the former premier in his current state.

"He's neither alive nor dead. It's very tragic," Gissin said.

Sharon's family plans to move the former prime minister to his private ranch in southern Israel, where he will continue to be closely supervised by medical staff, Gissin said.

Israeli artist Noam Braslavsky said he created the sculpture because Sharon has been absent from the public eye for so long.

"There is a national consensus that no one touches his image," said Braslavsky. "I'm touching an open nerve."

Braslavsky said the comatose statue, whose chest moves up and down to depict Sharon's dependence on a breathing machine, represents Israel's inertia on improving the country's political situation.

"It's an allegory about the state of Israel's state of existence, hanging between the heavens and the earth," Braslavsky said.

The artwork portrays Sharon's eyes open, "but they don't see. It's reminiscent of the state of our government," Braslavsky said.

Braslavsky said he has received a wide range of reactions. He said he understood the angry responses, but said some visitors have thanked him for depicting a legendary figure whom they miss.

A life-sized replica of former Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon in hospital bed, an installation by Israeli artist Noam Braslavsky, is exhibited Tuesday at the Kishon gallery in Tel Aviv, Israel. The exhibition presenting Braslavsky's artwork is due to open Thursday. Over four years after a devastating stroke, Ariel Sharon remains in a coma.

Michael Rex Watson

HAILEY — Michael Rex Watson, 82, passed away at his home in Hailey on Sunday, Oct. 10, 2010.

Rex was born April 14, 1929, in Lund, Idaho, to Robert Sidney and Florence Watson. Rex came to Hailey with his parents in 1935 and resided there until his death. He graduated from Hailey High School in 1947. On Jan. 15, 1948, Rex married Betty June Broadie and they had three children, Charlotte, Clistie and Michael. Rex was a painter with his father for several years and then went to work for Sun Valley Co. in the capacity of lift operator, mountain mechanic and painter. Dad’s greatest joy in life was his family. He was a great husband, father and grandfather.

“Dad” was the epitome of an athlete and sportsman. He liked to play basketball and football. He loved to fish, hunt, hike and bicycle. He was also the most beautiful skier we ever saw. Among the fondest memories of our dad was his fame as “The Phantom Skier” on Baldy. Every big snow, he would anonymously make the first tracks in the fresh powder down the bowls before the runs were open for the day. This was much to the torment of the ski patrol. Another great example of his athletic abilities was the time his son asked him to substitute on a city basketball league for an absent player. Bear in mind that dad was 30 years older than the rest of the players. In the last seconds of the game, he stole the ball and, shooting from half court, made the game-winning basket. We could go on and on.

Rex is survived by his daughter, Charlotte (Dean) Biggs; his son, Michael (Hether) Watson; his grandchildren, Sean (Tara), Angelia (Jesse), Tierney and Sidney; and great-grandchildren, Kacey, Madalyn, Alexandria, Tristan, Kirk, Ryan, Justin, Kaden and Bentley. He is also survived by his nephew, Jerry Croce; and niece, Toni Frazier. Rex was preceded in death by his parents; his sisters; his wife, Betty; his daughter, Clistie; granddaughter, Shannon; and grandson, Tyler.

A private family celebration of his life was held Saturday, Oct. 16, at his home. A private inurnment will be held at a later date. Cremation was under the care of Wood River Chapel in Hailey (www.woodriver-chapel.com).

Tom Bosley, Mr. C on ‘Happy Days,’ dies at 83

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It was a constant in American television for more than a decade: Viewers could turn on their TVs and find Howard Cunningham in his armchair, reading the newspaper and providing a fatherly voice of reason to young Richie Cunningham and his friends on “Happy Days.”

Tom Bosley made the role famous during the long-running sitcom, earning a place as one of the most memorable fathers in TV history.

Bosley died Tuesday at the age of 83 after suffering heart failure at a hospital near his Palm Springs home. Bosley’s agent, Sheryl Abrams, said he was also battling lung cancer.

His death brought fond remembrances of the nostalgic ABC show, which ran from 1974 to 1984.

On Saturday, TV viewers lost another surrogate parent, Barbara Billingsley, who portrayed June Cleaver in “Leave It To Beaver.”

After dominating the regular season Great Basin Conference schedule with a 10-0 mark, it's no surprise the Twin Falls volleyball team will play for the District IV title.

The Bruins easily swept Jerome Tuesday night in a semifinal match 25-14, 25-14, 25-22.

"Our goal all season is to go undefeated in conference, so we're really excited to be playing in the championship game," said senior middle blocker Bailey Anderson.

Outside hitter Taylor Lancaster led the team with seven kills and senior middle blocker Cheltzie Williams

Williams helped close out the first set with an emphatic kill down the line and two consecutive aces to put the Bruins up 23-14.

And unlike its previous match against Minico, there was no letdown in Set 2.

Allie Johnson deftly orchestrated the Bruins' quick motion offense, finishing with 14 assists.

"We're trying to get better and run a quicker offense for the teams we'll face at state," Johnson said.

Before they travel on to state, the Bruins will face Jerome once more Thursday in the GBC tournament title game as the third-seeded Tigers rebounded to defeat No. 2 Wood River for the second time in the tournament, winning 25-12, 25-17, 18-25, 25-17 in Tuesday's late match.

Jerome hadn't played for two and a half hours after its loss to Twin Falls, while Wood River had to turn around and play 20 minutes after it's five-set victory over Minico.

All that pent up energy paid off for the Tigers who jumped out to a 25-12 win in Set 1.

"We were just so pumped up to play and couldn't wait to get on the court," said Haylee Burnham, who finished with four assists.

Melissa Leavitt led the Tigers with 10 kills and CarrieThibault added seven. Setter Frankie Carey dished out 22 assists.

The win secures the second Class 4A state tournament berth from District IV for Jerome, which hasn't been to the tournament in five years.

"We're so excited. It's crazy," Burnham said.

Wood River finishes its season with a 7-6 mark in GBC play.

OUT OF SHAPE AND OUT OF MY LEAGUE

Times-News sports editor goes through practice with CSI men

Needless to say, there were no inquiries as to whether I had any collegiate eligibility remaining.

What I did experience after going through a practice session with the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team was sore muscles, shortness of breath, utter fatigue and confirmation that I was both out of shape and out of my league.

A week ago, Times-News reporter Amy Huddleston participated in practice with the CSI women's team. This week, it was my turn to take the floor with the men. The

Challis wins SRC tournament

Runner-up Raft River punches ticket to state

BURLEY — The Challis volleyball team spent more time on a bus than it did on the court, but the Vikings made the trip worthwhile.

Making a pair of eight-hour roundtrips to Burley High School for the District IV-V-VI Snake River Conference volleyball tournament, Challis went home with the championship trophy Tuesday after beating Raft River 25-15, 25-15, 25-17.

Challis, which will enter the Class 1A Division I state tournament with a 17-2 record, was led by Lauren Garlie's 11 kills. Nicole Helm had 10 assists and Marlae Moss had five digs.

"We're peaking at the right time," said Challis coach Debbie Sheppard. "I have a well-rounded team. You'll look at the stat board most nights and I'll have six players with over five kills. That's pretty hard to stop."

For Raft River, Wynter Holtman had seven kills and Kassie Ottley had six kills. The Trojans kept with the Vikings until midway through each set, but Challis was too mentally tough.

"Skill-wise, (Challis) is a tough team," said Raft River coach Cami Schumann. "They've got a confidence about them, that even if they're down they know they're going to win."

Raft River 3, Shoshone 0 After losing to Challis, Raft River's only senior, Kassie Ottley, said, "They're a really competitive team. We really wish we could have beat them, but maybe another day"

That day may come next week, as the Trojans punched their ticket to state by bouncing back to beat Shoshone for second place, 29-27, 25-16, 25-15.

Raft River and Challis each advanced to the state tournament, to be held Oct. 29-30 at Declo High School.

Gooding earns sweep of Declo after tough battle

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

It might be called a sweep and Gooding may have won in three sets, but the Senators' 27-25, 26-24, 27-25 over Declo was definitely not a rout Tuesday night in the Canyon Conference volleyball tournament.

The win puts the top-seeded Senators in today's 6 p.m. championship match. Declo will try to beat Glenns Ferry at 4:30 to earn a rematch.

Declo jumped out Tuesday to a 5-1 lead in the first set and later pulled away to its largest lead at 17-8. The Senators whittled away and closed the gap until they tied the score at 19-19. From that point there were six ties until Gooding won the initial set 27-25.

"We started strong and then we made some errors," said Declo coach Keri Wilson. "It takes awhile to get back in the match."

Gooding held the lead in most of the second set until Declo tied the score at 19-all. Just like in the first game, there were four ties until Gooding won.

Game 3 found neither team taking control with the score going back and forth.

"This was similar to our other matches with them," said Gooding coach Luanne

Axelson. "We were prepared to go five games with them."

Gooding was led by Angela Vitek with 10 kills and Kayleigh Erickson paced the Senators with 17 assists and also had five kills. On the defensive side, Allison Flora put up five blocks.

"Everyone did their part," said Vitek. "We got blocks when we needed them. We tried to keep them honest because they cover the floor very well."

Declo had a team total of 39 kills, 30 assists, 10 blocks, six digs and four aces.

Senior Kaylee Holmstead was the strongest hitter in the match collecting 13 kills for the Hornets, but Keva Robinson led all hitters with 16. Sydney Webb added six kills and had five blocks. Tanisha Adams and Brinlee Breshears combined for 27 of the Declo assists with Breshears dishing out 14 and Adams 13. Holmstead also had three blocks.

"It was fun volleyball," said Webb. "It's important to try to stay up in a match like this and play your own game."

Castleford, Lighthouse Christian stay alive at Northside tourney

Times-News

No one wants to lose at this point of the season. That was clearly evident in the scores of Tuesday's elimination matches at the Class 1A Division II Northside Conference volleyball tournament in Carey.

While Carey swept the Community School 25-15, 25-17, 25-12 to open the night, the next two matches went a full five sets.

Castleford eliminated

Richfield with a marathon 25-11, 29-27, 20-25, 7-25, 15-12 win. That was followed by Lighthouse Christian's 25-19, 20-25, 25-16, 8-25, 15-13 victory over Carey.

"Very good games tonight," said Carey coach Kathy Whitworth, whose team saw its season end with the loss.

Carey trailed the Lions 13-5 in the fifth set before rallying to knot the score at 13-13. But Lighthouse Christian scored two straight to end it.

"It was crazy. I almost had a heart attack," said Lighthouse Christian coach Tobie Helman, who praised the scrappy play of Carey.

Brynli Wooten had 36 digs and four aces to lead the Lions, while Becca Storm and Kyanna Jones had nine kills each. Andrea Helman chipped in six kills and five aces for Lighthouse Christian.

Jessica Welch had eight kills and 45 digs in the Wolves' five-set win, while Emily Elsner had 28 digs. Karli Bower added eight blocks.

"Lots of strong defense on both sides," Castleford coach Oscar Flores said of the match.

While Richfield's season is over, Castleford advances to face Lighthouse Christian in a 5:30 p.m. elimination match today. The winner there faces the loser of the 4 p.m. championship match between Dietrich and Camas County in a second-place match at about 7 p.m.

team, comes to town Oct. 30.

I knew I was in trouble Monday afternoon when I got winded during warm-ups. But it wasn't all bad. I "helped" my Gold team win both 3-on-3 games during practice.

Basically, I rotated in sparingly, got one rebound and otherwise tried to stay out of the way while Jon Pulsifer, Jerrold Brooks and Cameron Bowen took care of business, saving me from the sprints the rest of the team endured.

My highlight — and that is intentionally singular — was a 3-pointer I made while joining the scout team against CSI's full-court press. At the end of practice, I was put on the foul line with this situation: two consecutive made free throws will get the team to "Hutch," the NJCAA Tournament in Hutchinson, Kan.

CSI coaches and players quickly discovered that I'm a 50-percent foul shooter, but eventually, I managed two in row.

After practice, CSI coach Steve Gosar offered his critique of my performance.

"More of a catch-and-shoot guy, not a penetrate-and-kick guy," said Gosar. "Off-the-ball defense was better, on-the-ball we need to have some work on that one. We need to try to keep the ball in front of us. But a scrappy defender, a lot of hustle."

OK, so "a lot" is probably stretching it when it comes to my hustle. But I certainly gained an appreciation for the physical toll the players go through each day, let alone balancing school and other aspects of life.

"It's a full-time job where you're exhausted at the end of the day," said Gosar, who added that time management is the toughest thing for students-athletes. "Being able to sneak in a short nap here and still make study hall. Knocking out your homework, fitting dinner in there, still trying to find a little bit of time for personal time to relax at the end of the night and get to bed on time so you can do it all over again the next day."

Freshman guard Mitch Bruneel is working to achieve that balance. He returned from an LDS mission on Sept. 22 and quickly found himself trying to catch up in school and mesh with teammates who'd been playing together for more than month. There was also the challenge of regaining the basketball shape and form that helped him earn 2008 Idaho Gatorade Player of the Year honors.

"I thought I was in good shape," said Bruneel. "The first couple days were pretty hard, trying to get the lungs back, the legs. Right now I'm feeling a lot better, but those first couple practices were killers."

Pulsifer came from a quality high school program, leading Twin Falls to last season's Class 4A state championship. But the transition to CSI opened his eyes.

"It was fast-paced in high school, but when you get to college, it's way faster," said Pulsifer, who added that longer days and longer practices add to the adjustment.

Pulsifer's day begins with class at 8 a.m. When his classes end at 11, he has time for lunch and homework. Then it's up to the gym at 2 p.m. for weights and practices. Then there's dinner and study hall — a place where the players must spend at least six hours a week.

Never one to be out-worked or outthustled, Pulsifer thrives with the busy slate.

"I love it," he said. "It's a lot of fun."

But a full day isn't all CSI's student-athletes face.

"When you do things wrong it's on a bigger scale," said walk-on sophomore guard Ryan McIntosh.

"You're under a microscope, especially being in Twin Falls. If you miss class, the coaches know. If you don't go to study hall, the coaches know. You can't miss practice or if you're slacking off or partying, people know."

Not that McIntosh struggles in those areas.

"It's not really a problem for me," he said. "Being out here is such a blessing it's unreal. ... We're so spoiled." Spoiled, but hardly on a cakewalk. As Gosar put it, being a student-athlete is "harder than people understand."

And as for the second purpose of my practice visit, let's just say the Harlem Ambassadors have nothing to worry about on Oct. 30.

We're really happy to be going to state," said Ottley, who had 12 kills and 23 digs against Shoshone. "I love my team and we're going to have a lot of fun."

Wynter Holtman led Raft River with 19 kills and 21 digs. Hailey Greenwood had 17 assists and three aces, while Taylor Whitaker had 20 assists.

"Raft River hurt us with their quickness," said Shoshone coach Larry Messick. "They play good defense, it's hard to find a hole on them and they play well together."

Despite the efforts of Kelcie Hutchins, Jennica Kerner and Sheyenne Hadden, Shoshone ran out of gas against Raft River. By the end of the night the Indians had played 11 sets of emotion-filled volleyball.

"It's not so much physical (fatigue) as it is mental," Messick said. "You play volleyball for five straight hours and it starts to wear on you. I was proud of them, I thought they did a good job and played hard."

As the SRC tournament's third-place finisher, Shoshone earned a state play-in match against District III's third-place team on Saturday at Mountain Home.

SHOSHONE 3, HAGERMAN 2

In the most intense match of the night, Shoshone outlasted Hagerman in a five-set marathon, 25-23, 21-25, 25-23, 20-25, 15-11.

The Indians and Pirates have played three matches this season, and all three have gone to five sets.

In Tuesday's decisive fifth set, Shoshone earned the final six points, highlighted by two Hutchins kills and it was closed out by a pair of Kerner aces.

For Hagerman, freshman Aly Sauer had 18 kills and junior Katee Hines earned 15 kills and 42 digs. Sophomore Sheala Owsley had 11 kills and senior Cheyenne Crist dished out 40 assists.

Pirate freshmen Larissa Knight and Hayley White combined for 45 digs.

"We were young and we knew we had to peak at the end and I think we did," said Hagerman coach Carrie Chizum, who had just two seniors on her roster. "I think this experience is great for all our underclassmen. Now they know what it's like to be in a pressure situation and I think they handled it well. It was exactly how we thought our season was going to go — rough at the beginning and at the end we would be in there with anybody."

SHOSHONE 3, GRACE 0

Shoshone won its first of three matches on the night, defeating Grace 25-3, 25-12, 28-26.

WOOD RIVER 3, MINICO 2

Wood River rebounded from a tough match against Jerome on Monday to win a spirited, back-and-forth match in five sets over Minico 25-23, 20-25, 25-22, 17-25, 15-11.

Lilly Richards led the Wolverines with 11 kills and Jade Glenn added 10. Miranda Gasenica had a solid night at the service stripe, recording five aces.

"It was a great match and it's still a tough loss against Jerome, but we responded well tonight," said Wood River coach Tim Richards.

Minico ended its season with the loss, finishing with a 4-8 record in Great Basin Conference play.

Kylee Denney of Canyon Ridge recorded 11 assists and Eva Sites added five kills and three blocks. Lexi Clark recorded 15 digs.

The Riverhawks finish their season with a 3-10 record in Great Basin Conference play. "I'm really proud of our progress this season. There isn't an area of the game we haven't improved on," said Canyon Ridge coach Staci Boer. "There's more to come with Canyon Ridge volleyball."

NFL fines but doesn't suspend 3 players for hits

NEW YORK — The NFL imposed huge fines Tuesday on three players for dangerous and flagrant hits last weekend and warned that, starting with this week's games, violent conduct will be cause for suspension.

Pittsburgh Steelers line-backer James Harrison was docked $75,000 on Tuesday, while New England Patriots safety Brandon Meriweather and Atlanta Falcons corner-back Dunta Robinson will lose $50,000 each.

In the past, players were either fined or ejected for illegal hits. However, after the series of recent flagrant tackles, several of which resulted in concussions, the NFL ramped up the punishment.

Football operations chief Ray Anderson indicated the suspensions could start immediately — that is, involving play from last weekend's games. However, NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league wanted to give teams fair warning and would send a memo Wednesday, outlining the changes.

Ravens tight end Todd Heap took a vicious hit from Meriweather that Heap called "one of those hits that shouldn't happen." Robinson and the Eagles' DeSean Jackson were knocked out of their game after a frightening collision in which Robinson launched himself head first to make a tackle. Both sustained concussions.

Robinson is appealing the fine.

"I am disappointed by the NFL's ruling," Robinson said in a statement. "I recognize the goal is to protect all players from the Pee Wee level on up. However, this was a bang-bang hit situation where I did not lead with my helmet, and therefore I will appeal.

"Although it was a violent hit, my hit did not violate the NFL's rules, and I was playing the game the way I always have. I am not a dirty player and have never been characterized as one."

Harrison was punished for his hit on Mohamed Massaquoi. His hit on Joshua Cribbs did not figure in the fine, although it also caused a concussion; the league said Monday it was permissible.

Harrison's agent, Bill Parise, called the fine "staggering" and said it would be appealed. He emphasized that neither play drew a penalty.

AP SOURCE: NFL, FAVRE MEET ABOUT TEXTS, PHOTOS

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Brett Favre spoke with an NFL security official Tuesday about text messages and lewd photos he allegedly sent to a New York Jets employee two years ago when he played for the team, according to a person with knowledge of the situation.

The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because details of the meeting between Favre and NFL vice president for security Milt Ahlerich were not made public.

ESPN first reported the meeting, citing unidentified sources.

Commissioner Roger Goodell said previously the Vikings quarterback would meet this week with a league official about the messages and graphic photos he allegedly sent to Jenn Sterger, now a TV personality with the Versus network.

FISHER: YOUNG DAY-TO-DAY WITH MILD SPRAINED KNEE

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vince Young is day-to-day after tests show only a mild sprained left knee and ankle, and coach Jeff Fisher says the Tennessee quarterback could play against Philadelphia on Sunday even if he misses a couple practices.

"If you look at ... what happened in the game, I could stand up here and say that he's lucky," Fisher said Tuesday. "He's got just a mild knee sprain, and he's got an ankle sprain. He's sore. As he said, he's a quick healer, and we'll just go with him day to day."

Young thought his season might have ended when hurt Monday night. He was pulled down after recovering a fumbled snap with his left leg twisting underneath him.

AP SOURCE: BROWNS LOSE DE SMITH

BEREA, Ohio — A person familiar with the situation says Browns defensive end Robaire Smith is done for the season.

The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because of sensitivity to Smith's medical privacy. The person says Smith will be placed on injured reserve on Wednesday due to a back injury.

NBA bans shoes designed to increase vertical leap

NEW YORK — The NBA is prohibiting its players from wearing a new line of sneakers that claims to increase vertical leap.

"Under league rules, players may not wear any shoe during a game that creates an undue competitive advantage," the NBA said in a statement Tuesday.

Athletic Propulsion Labs' $300 Concept 1 shoe employs a spring-based system designed to increase lift. The Los Angeles-based company was founded by twins Adam and Ryan Goldston, both former USC basketball walk-ons whose father worked in the shoe industry.

The brothers said Tuesday that many NBA players, including about 30 percent of the rookie class, expressed interest in the shoes but they wouldn't reveal names because the players had signed with other companies.

Texas builds 3-1 lead on Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — No disputing this: The Texas Rangers are routing the New York Yankees and now just one win from their first trip to the World Series.

Bengie Molina hit a go-ahead, three-run homer off A.J. Burnett in the sixth inning, Josh Hamilton added a pair of solo drives to give him four in four games and the Rangers battered the Yankees 10-3 Tuesday night for a 3-1 lead in the AL championship series.

On a night of contested homers, Texas left no doubt with its long shots. Fans started streaming out of Yankee Stadium as the Rangers pulled away in the late innings.

It was a costly loss, too, for the defending World Series champion Yankees. All-Star first baseman Mark Teixeira limped off in the fifth inning with a strained right hamstring. Yankees manager Joe Girardi said the team would likely will replace Teixeira on the roster with infielder Eduardo Nunez.

Game 5 Wednesday will have a rematch of starters from the opener, with the Yankees' CC Sabathia against C.J. Wilson. Since the LCS went to a best-of-seven format, 24 of the 30 previous teams to take 3-1 series leads have won pennants.

While the Yankees are seeking a record 41st pennant, Texas is trying to reach its first World Series since the franchise started play as the expansion Washington Senators in 1961.

Instead of trying to avoid Cliff Lee, the Yankees can only hope to force a Game 7 and face him again.

Aiming for a Series matchup against San Francisco or Philadelphia, Texas has outscored the Yankees 30-11, out-hit them 43-26 and would have swept if not for wasting a five-run lead in the opener. Nelson Cruz hit the last of Texas' four homers, a two-run drive that gave the Rangers seven homers in the series and 15 in the postseason.

In contrast, Alex Rodriguez has been a bust against his former team, going 2 for 15 (.133) with two RBIs.

Molina's two-out homer came after an intentional walk and put Texas ahead 5-3. Before he circled the bases and pounded a fist against his chest — and left Burnett clasp hands behind his head — not much was clear.

San Francisco Giants pitcher Matt Cain throws during Game 3 of the National League Championship Series against the Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday in San Francisco.

Cain outduels Hamels, Giants win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cody Ross keeps giving his best Barry Bonds imitation.

With the home run king watching and cheering from a front-row seat, Ross delivered again, Matt Cain outdueled Cole Hamels and the San Francisco Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0 Tuesday for a 2-1 lead in the NL championship series.

Picked up late in the season from Florida, Ross added to his quickly growing postseason legacy. He homered three times in the first two games at Philadelphia and hit an RBI single in Game 3 to break a scoreless tie.

"He plays with no fear," Giants manager Bruce Bochy. "That's what you like about the guy."

Bochy even tinkered with his lineup, moving Ross up into the No. 5 spot. The good-natured guy who aspired to be a rodeo clown as a kid came to the plate to chants of "Cody! Cody!"

"I'm just going up there trying to relax, stay calm, make something happen," Ross said.

San Francisco grabbed the edge in their best-of-seven series against the two-time defending NL champions — with two more games in their home ballpark.

The Giants have never won the World Series since moving to San Francisco for the 1958 season. They came close in 2002, led by Bonds' slugging.

The last time the Giants franchise won the World Series was 1954, when it played in New York. On a team that included future Hall of Famer Willie Mays and other big-name players, it was a part-time outfielder who hit .253 in his career — Dusty Rhodes — who emerged as the Series star with two homers in six at-bats.

So far this postseason, that role of unlikely hero belongs entirely to Ross, an outfielder with a career .265 mark.

Ross hit an RBI single in the fourth inning to break a scoreless tie and fellow playoff first-timer Aubrey Huff followed with a run-scoring single.

This marked the third impressive pitcher's duel in as many games of this NLCS. First, it was Roy Halladay vs. Tim Lincecum, then Roy Oswalt and Jonathan Sanchez.

Joe Blanton will start for the Phillies in Game 4 on Wednesday night. He last pitched one inning of relief on the final day of the season, an 8-7 loss at Atlanta, and has not started since Sept. 29.

Rookie Madison Bumgarner starts for the Giants. He pitched the division series clincher at Atlanta.

New M's manager takes on rebuilding project in Seattle

SEATTLE — Eric Wedge spoke with intensity and passion, pledging his role as the Seattle Mariners' newest manager will be based around accountability and respect.

Wedge was introduced on Tuesday as the seventh manager of the Mariners since the start of the 2003 season. Sporting a new mustache absent the last time he was seen on a major league bench, Wedge said everything about the Mariners felt right.

Wedge was selected from a group of five finalists interviewed by Seattle general manager Jack Zduriencik. The Mariners GM says everything about Wedge felt right, especially his previous major league experience and his success in a prior rebuilding job with Cleveland.

Wedge's are without much debate. In his seven years in Cleveland, Wedge successfully rebuilt the Indians beginning in 2003 and culminating with the 2007 season when Wedge was named AL manager of the year and took the Indians within one game of the World Series.

CUBS PULL INTERIM TAG, MAKE QUADE THEIR MANAGER

CHICAGO — Mike Quade had just been fishing in Florida when he found out he caught the big one. That, of course, was the Cubs' managing job.

"The timing of it, it's comical," he said.

The Cubs decided to keep Quade as their manager, choosing to go with the man who ran the team well for the last six weeks of last season rather than high-profile Hall of Famer and franchise icon Ryne Sandberg.

Quade (pronounced KWAH-dee), Chicago's third base coach the past four years, was given a two-year contract Tuesday along with a club option for 2013. He served as interim manager after Lou Piniella abruptly stepped down in late August, leading the team to a 24-13 record, and he envisions the Cubs contending next year.

KIRK GIBSON TO AUCTION OFF HISTORIC HR BAT

among the most famous in baseball history: the injured Kirk Gibson barely able to walk to the plate in the ninth inning of Game 1 of the 1988 World Series, then somehow mustering the strength to hit one over the fence to give the Los Angeles Dodgers the victory.

Few baseball video clips are more familiar than that of Gibson limping around the bases, pumping his fist in triumph in front of a delirious home crowd in one of the greatest moments in Los Angeles sports history.

Twenty-two years later, Gibson will sell the bat he used and related items at auction along with his World Series trophy and his NL most valuable player award from that season.

Proceeds from the sale of the World Series trophy and MVP award will go to the Kirk Gibson Foundation to support Michigan State athletics and to help fund partial scholarships at the two Michigan high schools where his parents taught.

DEAR ABBY: I lived with my best friend and her husband for a few months after moving to a new state. They recently went through a rough patch and she took a vacation to cool off. In her absence, and under the influence of a great deal of alcohol, her husband and I slept together. We decided it happened only because we were drunk and decided never to speak of it again.

The problem is — it happened again, this time with almost no alcohol involved at all!

I'm reluctant to tell my friend about our trysts. I think telling her will do more harm than good. On the other hand, the guilt eats at me every day to the point that I cry over what I've done to her. Her husband doesn't want to tell her, ever. What should I do?

— TO TELL OR NOT TO TELL

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR TT OR NOT TT: Own your guilt. You've earned it. And confess your sin to your religious adviser. But if you feel that telling your friend will do more harm than good, remain silent.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 20 years is kind, loving and well-respected. He is one of the greatest guys you would ever meet. We have a great marriage, rarely fight and have many things in common. My problem? When he speaks, he frequently says "youse guys," and it drives me insane.

I have a brother-in-law who uses "I seen" instead of "I saw," and I know it drives my sister crazy. How do we broach the subject with our huddies without hurting their feelings, making them feel inadequate or angering them? I am not going to correct my husband in public, but when he says "youse guys" around our friends, I cringe. Help!

— LANGUAGE POLICE IN WISCONSIN

DEAR LANGUAGE POLICE: I'm surprised that after 20 years of marriage you would only now be asking for advice on how to persuade your husband to use proper English. My advice is to tell him you love him and ask if he would like you to help him lose the "youse." If he agrees, start reminding him when he forgets. But if he says no, leave it alone and concentrate on his many virtues. In the scheme of things, isn't his one flaw rather insignificant?

DEAR ABBY: I recently sent an expensive flower arrangement to a dear friend in the hospital to let her know how much she means to me.

When I went to visit, the flowers were not in her room. When I asked about them, she said she had given them to her nurse to display at the nurses' station. I'm assuming the gesture was to show her appreciation for the service they have given her.

I am disappointed and hurt because they were meant to bring her some joy. I understand that when you give someone a present the person has every right to do whatever he or she wants with it, but I wish she would have waited until she was discharged to give the flowers away. Am I wrong to feel hurt?

— DISAPPOINTED IN CLEVELAND

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: The problem with nursing a hurt in silence is that it may be based on an incorrect assumption, so clear the air with your friend. If you ask her why she gave her flowers to the nurses, she may tell you she thought they were so lovely she wanted to share them with everyone who came to the floor. And that would mean your bouquet has brought joy many times over, which is what I would consider getting a big bang for your buck.

IF OCTOBER 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your kindness and generosity are rewarded as the coming year unfolds. Ride out some rough spots in November by not overreacting or making drastic changes. Make major decisions and alterations in December or January when your intuitions and wisdom are at a peak and good luck is likely. You may feel beloved and appreciated by others in the New Year so it is a good time to solidify agreements, take on a new job, change career or finalize a partnership.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The jury is still out. Making a crucial decision is not necessarily in your own hands. If you act precipitously you could regret it later. Wait until a consensus of opinion has been reached, but don't rush it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Everybody needs somebody sometime. Whether you are heading out for lunch or just shopping at the mall, you need a congenial companion to inject some vital element of fun into your daily routines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Night owls work the day shift today. You could end up on the phone for hours at a time or take a weighty problem home to roost. Remain alert for bits and pieces of information that can enrich your life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Inquiring minds want to know. Loved ones have an interest in your work or your thoughts so be ready to answer a slew of questions. Finances or business strategies might be the subject of attention.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be a live wire. This is a good time to get involved with new age hobbies or to get touch with those who share your mental interests. The itch to do something different might lead to a positive change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be gracious when a gift, favor or assistance is offered by a co-worker or an unexpected windfall fills your pockets. Be content with what you have earned and collected throughout the years.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fame, you're going to live forever. You have a thirst for publicity and adoration. You might want everyone at work to know your accomplishments and might want to be the employee of the month.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Physical activities can offset your desire to be competitive. It is much better to race across the parking lot than to try to outdo someone else at work. Delay crucial financial or business decisions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take pride in the ownership of tasteful possessions. If you want something, whisper sweet nothings in a special someone's ear. Think up delightful ways to create harmony in romantic relationships.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep your powder dry. If you intend to fight the good fight don't get all sentimental and weepy. You are a font of knowledge about expert business practices but shouldn't practice them today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Doing more is not a chore. You probably know the old saying that you are known by the company you keep. Act in ways that would impress a visiting dignitary and be an asset to a significant other.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It is what you can't see that can hurt you. There could be some troublemaking building up behind the scenes. Use your own judgment rather than bowing to the unformed opinions of the collective.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"For the race is run by one and one and never by two and two."

— Rudyard Kipling

The following deal from the 1995 finals of the New York Reisinger features two subtle points in play and defense. Alas, in both rooms these points became evident only in the post-mortem.

Four hearts was the contract in both rooms. In the first room West's heart lead worked fine, up to a point. Declarer, Mike Kamil, won in hand and passed the diamond nine. East won his 10 and might have shifted to the club nine (or even the club jack), but in fact he played the club six, to the eight and 10. I think a second diamond from West could now hardly be wrong (whether declarer has three or four diamonds, there are no discards coming), but West returned the club king and declarer was home.

The game went down in the other room on a spade lead. There, declarer rose with the dummy's ace at trick one and took an early club finesse of the queen. He now had no chance. But consider what might have happened if South had nonchalantly played low from dummy at trick one! Even if East wins the trick, he may well give up a vital entry to dummy at his next play. And as the cards lay, would he not find it very hard to refrain from playing the spade nine at trick one? If East wins with an honor at this point, declarer can always dispose of his diamond loser on the spade ace.

ANSWER: Raise your hand if you thought this was Gerber. It is not. It suggests short clubs and a slam-try in spades. Your hand is unbelievably good now. You should cue-bid four diamonds, expecting partner to use Blackwood perhaps. But if instead partner cue-bids four hearts, you have enough to go past four spades. I think a bid of five spades would be best.

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 20, the 293rd day of 2010. There are 72 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Oct. 20, 1973, in the so-called "Saturday Night Massacre," special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox was dismissed and Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and Deputy Attorney General William B. Ruckelshaus resigned.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1740, Maria Theresa became ruler of Austria, Hungary and Bohemia upon the death of her father, Holy Roman Emperor Charles VI.

In 1803, the U.S. Senate ratified the Louisiana Purchase.

In 1903, a joint commission ruled in favor of the United States in a boundary dispute between the District of Alaska and Canada.

In 1944, during World War II, Gen. Douglas MacArthur stepped ashore at Leyte (LAY'-tee) in the Philippines, 2 1/2 years after saying, "I shall return!"

In 1947, the House Un-American Activities Committee opened hearings into alleged Communist influence and infiltration in the U.S. motion picture industry.

In 1964, the 31st president of the United States, Herbert Hoover, died in New York at age 90.

In 1967, seven men were convicted in Meridian, Miss., of violating the civil rights of three slain civil rights workers.

In 1968, former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy married Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

In 1979, the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum was dedicated in Boston.

In 1990, three members of the rap group 2 Live Crew were acquitted by a jury in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. of violating obscenity laws with an adults-only concert in nearby Hollywood the previous June.

Ten years ago: An Israeli-Palestinian truce brokered by President Bill Clinton collapsed in a hail of gunfire, with Israeli troops killing nine Palestinians and wounding dozens more. Egyptian-born Ali Mohamed, a U.S. citizen who'd served in the Army, pleaded guilty in New York to helping plan the deadly U.S. Embassy bombings in Africa in 1998 that killed 224 people, including 12 Americans.

Five years ago: U.S. Rep. Tom DeLay turned himself in at the sheriff's office in Travis County, Texas, where he was fingerprinted, photographed and released on $10,000 bail on conspiracy and money-laundering charges. (DeLay has yet to stand trial.) A defense lawyer in Saddam Hussein's mass murder trial was abducted from his office and found murdered hours later. Jazz pianist and vocalist Shirley Horn died in Washington, D.C., at age 71.

One year ago: Ignoring appeals by Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and even rock star Sting, Iran sentenced an Iranian-American academic, Kian Tajbakhsh, to 12 years in prison for his alleged role in anti-government protests. Afghanistan's election commission ordered a runoff in the disputed presidential poll. (The runoff was later canceled, and President Hamid Karzai proclaimed the winner.)
