Developer courts public support for wind power

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Timing may be everything in the case of the proposed China Mountain Wind Farm, but it also creates complications.

While little new information was presented Wednesday, Colorado-based Renewable Energy Systems Americas — the project developer — finished a public meeting at the College of Southern Idaho Herrett Center for Arts and Science with a plea for the 100 or so attendees to get involved.

Spokeswoman Suzanne Leta Liou's concern resulted from the overlapped timing of the wind farm's environmental study and the Jarbidge Draft Resource Management Plan, both of which were compiled by the staff of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's Jarbidge Field Office.

If the latter plan doesn't lay groundwork for the wind project, RES officials worry they may later be turned down for right-of-way grants vital to their work.

The Jarbidge plan was published Sept. 3 and public comment is open until Dec. 2. Leta Liou asked that people not only comment in favor of large wind projects but also that they request a 90-day extension of the comment period. That's because the draft study for the wind farm is not expected until December, after the comment period for the Jarbidge draft has closed.

"We need members of the public to speak up if they want wind energy," Leta Liou said while the listeners tucked into a free lunch. "Many of the options listed in the Jarbidge plan exclude large-scale wind development."

Contacted later, Jarbidge Field Manager Rick Vander Voet said the timing of the two reports makes things complicated. He said the Jarbidge plan, begun in 2005, was delayed because of large wildfires and court cases. If the plan was now in place, Vander Voet said, it would have guided the wind farm review and application.

Because Vander Voet is in charge of both processes, he said whichever is finalized first will influence the other in order to be consistent.

FINDING NEW USES FOR AN OLD HOSPITAL

DREW NASH/Times-News

Twin Falls resident Tom Neiwrith, an architect, looks over a map during an open house at the Twin Falls County courthouse, Wednesday evening in Twin Falls. County officials are trying to decide what to do with the soon-to-be-empty Addison Avenue hospital building.

County open house gathers wide range of ideas from residents

Imagine a drug and alcohol clinic in one hospital wing and a Veterans Affairs hospital in another. In the current lunch room: an archery range.

That's how varied the ideas proposed by members of the public were at a Twin Falls County open house on possible uses for the soon-to-be vacant hospital on Addison Avenue and its surrounding properties.

Almost two dozen people milled about at Wednesday evening's event, which featured aerial shots highlighting the county properties and information about the buildings, currently leased by St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. Below were papers for visitors to write their ideas on.

GOP Bus Tour wraps up swing through Valley

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

WENDELL — By the time the story of Idaho's 2010 elections is put in the history books, the state's rural voters will have seen much of it.

Town by town and stop by stop, the Idaho GOP Bus Tour made its way through south-central Idaho on Wednesday, bringing prominent Republican candidates to the less-populated corners of the state where audiences tend to number in the dozens rather than the hundreds. "It's a great feeling to be part of it," said Dick Elliott, a Bliss farmer who stopped at Wendell City Hall to greet the candidates. "Even though it's a little part, it's a part."

Poll: Likely voters ready to elect GOP

Election could have huge consequences for Obama's agenda

By Liz Sidoti
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — All signs point to huge Republican victories in two weeks, with the GOP now leading Democrats on virtually every measure in an Associated Press-GfK poll of people likely to vote in the first major elections of Barack Obama's presidency.

In the final survey before Election Day, likely voters say the GOP would do a better job than Democrats on handling the economy, creating jobs and running the government.

Most also think the country's headed in the wrong direction. More than half disapprove of Obama's job performance. And even more don't like the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Neither party is popular. But likely voters view the GOP a bit more positively than they do the Democrats. Slightly more say they will vote for the Republican congressional candidate in their district over the Democrat. And most think the GOP will win control of Congress from the Democrats.

"If we get some new blood in there who will do what the people want, maybe this can get turned around," said Sharon Klawender, 70, who lives in rural Kingston in Michigan, one of the most economically troubled states. She hopes Republicans will "get things back under control."

Like many others, Klawender bemoans outrageous spending in Washington and dismisses "stupid projects" paid for by Obama's economic stimulus plan. "Jobs are important," she says. "Houses left and right are being foreclosed."

Time is running out for the White House and Obama's Democrats to change the collective mind of a woefully pessimistic electorate trying to weather joblessness stuck near 10 percent. Many states already are voting.

Republicans are on the cusp of gains at all levels of government, benefiting from being in the minority during a campaign shaped by economic turmoil.

T.F. County seeks extension on Jarbidge plan

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls County Commission joined Wednesday the chorus of requests for an extension to the draft stage of the Jarbidge Resource Management Plan.

The Twin Falls District Resource Advisory Council approached the commissioners about asking for the extension early this month, saying members needed more time to digest the 1,988-page report. The report details possible long-term objectives and plans for the 1.4 million acres under the Bureau of Land Management's Jarbidge Field Office. The council is a BLM advisory group.

If the state director of the BLM approves the extension — which numerous counties and most of Idaho's congressional delegation support — it will push the deadline for this portion of the project from Dec. 2 to early March. After this initial public input session is over, the BLM will redraft the document and move it to another level of public input.

Jarbidge Field Office Manager Rick Vander Voet said he expects the state director to decide on the extension proposals within the next two weeks.

Before the stop in Wendell, the bus was in Gooding. It rolled in front of North Valley Academy as the school orchestra played a tune. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, Lt. Gov. Brad Little, State Controller Donna Jones, Secretary of State Ben Yursa, Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna and Attorney General Lawrence Wasden exited the bus, shaking hands and chatting with supporters.

Otter introduced himself to the schoolchildren, pointing out the constitutional officers.

Questions from the youngsters were pretty easy.

"What does the government pay for?" one schoolchild asked Otter.

Otter at first explained that the government paid for general operational expenses, but pared that down to schools and education when he got a curious look.

Tom Faulkner, a Republican Gooding County commissioner, said he supports Otter's efforts to balance the budget.

"We need to make sure we balance our budget and keep our spending intact," he said.

Candidates also took the time to answer questions about policy when making the rounds. When asked if he would support tax incentives to help parents pay for their children's private schooling, Otter said he'd be willing to consider it.

Asked in Wendell about immigration, Otter said he suspects some legislation will be proposed about the issue. He noted that in 2005, he voted in Congress on an immigration bill, which passed the U.S. House but died in the Senate.

Besides Gooding and Wendell, the tour also made stops in Hailey, Picabo, Bellevue, Carey, Jerome, Shoshone and Twin Falls.

"Doing this at the same time is perhaps not the most logical, but you can't stop things from happening," he said.

RES is also developing a sage-grouse conservation plan to compensate for the effects of the wind project, a draft of which Leta Liou presented to southern Idaho sage-grouse working groups at the end of August. The final plan should be published by the end of this month.

Katie Fite, biodiversity director for Western Watersheds Project, said no conservation plan will be sufficient because after all the fires, China Mountain — southwest of Rogerson — is one of the few places left for sage grouse in the Jarbidge area.

"All the construction and roads will affect the few grouse that remain," Fite said. "We need responsible siting. They could have built a wind farm anywhere else.

It's just a Las Vegas power grab."

The first of two phases would supply up to 200 megawatts to Nevada, Leta Liou said. The remaining planned 200 MW is unclaimed and has no transmission approval.

Most of the 30,000-acre project area belongs to the BLM, the rest being state and private land. So, RES needs to acquire BLM right-of-way approval to build or improve about 60 miles of roads, lay 47 miles of cable and install footings for up to 200 massive turbines.

If approved, the farm is planned to last 30 years, driven mainly by the 25-year limit of BLM right-of-way grants. Leta Liou said that at that point, the project will likely be decommissioned, although projects have been repowered in rare cases.

Laura Lundquist may be reached at llundquist@magicvalley.com or 735-3376.

Hospital

Commissioner Terry Kramer said he was surprised at the event turnout. He hoped to follow up later with people who made suggestions for use of the buildings.

Among the visitors were half a dozen members of the Magic Valley Bowhunters Club, on the hunt for a new range to further hone their championship skills. Club member Greg Misbach said they were looking for a long, ground-level room they could lease for the long term and build into a range.

"The reason (the county should let us rent it) is we keep 15 or 20 kids off the streets a couple of nights a week," Misbach said.

His wife, Gloria, added that the club is almost out of room now and is a good tenant, paying its rents months ahead of time.

Jim Berkley, the adjutant for the Marine Corps League in Twin Falls and a member of other veterans groups, was there pushing for veterans facilities — any veterans facilities — to be put in the county property. Eyeballing some office space that will be vacant when St. Luke's leaves in the summer, Berkley said it would make great recreation space or a meeting hall for one of his groups. He also wants a veterans care facility in the main building.

"Right now, if we have any tests or anything that needs to be done, we need to go to Boise or Spokane," he said. "That's a lot of travel expense."

Dr. David McClusky, who is active in the Mustard Tree free health clinic, was there to push for a medical campus oriented toward community-service medicine.

"There are so many organizations that do a little of this in the community," he said. "Some of us are doing the same things."

He said making it one campus, with each organization focusing on one specialty, could ease issues of navigating the services offered to those who can't afford health insurance.

"Every patient we see at the Mustard Tree is saving the county and the community at least $500," he said. "If we can get everyone in the medical community to volunteer a little bit of their time, we'll all be better off because we'll pay for (the uninsured) one way or another."

Even Democrats acknowledge that the GOP is within reach of winning control of the House, picking up several Senate seats and taking over governor's posts across the ailing Midwest and elsewhere.

The results could have enormous consequences for Obama's agenda and will shape his likely re-election campaign in 2012.

Today, it's an understatement to say the electorate's mood is simply grim.

Likely voters almost universally say they are frustrated and disappointed with politics. Most say they are disgusted; more than half call themselves angry. Republicans stand to benefit; the GOP comfortably leads among likely voters who feel this way.

"We went on a spending spree that took the debt of this country to levels that are just mind-boggling," says Ray Esposito, a 70-year-old military veteran from Alpine, Texas, who is wary of Republicans but even more down on Democrats. "All they've done is spend, spend, spend!"

He adds: "What I see scares me."

Incumbents are a big target of voters' ire, and that means Democrats who control the House and Senate are more likely to be punished than out-of-power Republicans.

"They seem to have a better format. They seem to be getting more to the point. There's not as much trash talk," Terri Thebeau, a 54-year-old medical manager from St. Louis, says of the Republicans. She doubts

Obama's ability to pull the nation out of recession, saying: "I don't see him as a strong enough candidate to get us out of this mess."

In another worrisome sign for Democrats, women now split pretty evenly between the two parties, 49 percent favoring Democrats, 45 percent Republicans. In 2006, Democrats took over Capitol Hill in part by winning 55 percent of the female vote to 43 percent for Republicans.

Thus, women are a key constituency as Democrats look to try to minimize expected losses. Obama is holding events aimed at courting them in the final homestretch, and Democratic candidates are making overtures to them across the country.

Men, who typically break for Republicans, broadly favor the GOP this year, too.

The survey's key findings among likely voters show: • 50 percent say they will back the GOP candidate in their House district; 43 percent say they'll support the Democrat. The edge has slightly narrowed over the past month as Democrats presumably have grown more energized.

• 61 percent expect the GOP to win control of Congress; 33 percent think Democrats will maintain control.

• 49 percent want to see their House representatives re-elected; 44 percent want to fire them.

• 54 percent disapprove of Obama's job performance; 45 percent approve.

• Just 20 percent approve of how Congress is doing its job.

• 59 percent think the country is headed in the wrong direction; 39 percent say it's going the right way.

• 52 percent have a favorable impression of the GOP; 44 percent view the Democratic Party positively. Republicans get higher marks with likely voters than Democrats on handling the economy, taxes, the deficit, job creation, immigration and national security, and on managing the federal government. Likely voters are evenly split on which party would best handle health care and Social Security.

Pumpkin carvers to take plunge in Burley contest

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Carving pumpkins has become an art these days, but local divers are taking it to a new height — or in this case, depth.

They'll be carving their pumpkins underwater.

The Drown A Pumpkin contest will start at 1 p.m. Saturday at the marina at Freedom Park in Burley.

Hosted by the Cassia County Sheriff's Office and Mini-Cassia Search and Rescue, it's a fundraiser for Meals on Wheels in Cassia County.

All certified divers are invited to try their luck at carving a pumpkin under the surface of the Snake River. The entry fee is $25 for each two-person team. Pumpkins will be provided, but carvers must bring their own carving tools and dive equipment. They'll have the time it takes to use up one scuba tank to complete their carvings, which will then be judged.

The idea of underwater pumpkin carving was hatched by Mark Welsh, commander of Mini-Cassia Search and Rescue, and is being coordinated by Welsh and Cpl. Kevin Horak. Welsh is also dive master for Cassia County's dive team.

"It'll be interesting to see what comes out of that water and see how many can actually stay under the water and not float to the top," said Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd. "We'll see how many of them come up with all of their fingers left."

Kidd said the cold water shouldn't really affect the divers, as they will wear wet suits. Forty pumpkins have been donated for the event and organizers hope to get enough entries to carve them all.

The public is invited to come by and watch the divers on a donated television. "We're going to have an underwater camera hooked up and have connected a small receiver on a pole so we can see what's going on down there," Welsh said.

The carved pumpkins will be donated to the Golden Heritage Senior Center to be auctioned off at its annual Pumpkin Caper on Oct. 28. Information: Horak, 878-9313.

Blaine board OKs school expansion

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Work will begin next week on a $1.65-million expansion of Bellevue Elementary School.

The Blaine County School Board gave the go-ahead to the architectural firm of Ruscitto/Latham/Blanton and Sawtooth Construction despite a couple of objections from the public at Tuesday's school board meeting.

The board voted 3-0 to approve the project, with new trustee Kathryn Graves abstaining because, she said, she didn't agree with the process that had gotten members to that point.

Builder Tony Richmond questioned the timing of building while students are in school. And he said the school district could incur a 30 percent increase in expense associated with working in winter.

But Architect Nick Latham said the project's occupancy date would be delayed by a year if construction doesn't start until mid-April, because workers would have to wait until 2012 to build the cafeteria to minimize disruption to the students.

Currently, builders hope to finish construction by early August 2011.

Latham said that he doubts subcontractors will figure an extra week of building costs due to winter into their bids because they're more interested in bidding low enough to get work. But waiting could push up costs on both labor and construction materials.

"I don't think it's going to get more competitive than it is now," he said.

Construction costs are already up from the $1.4 million that had been budgeted in a plant facilities levy passed in October 2009. School Finance Manager Mike Chatterton said part of that increase was due to the addition of 1,000 square feet to accommodate special-education classes that the school district moved from Woodside Elementary.

Latham added that costs could drop as jobs are put out to bid.

In other news, Footlight Dance Centre Director Hilarie Neely told trustees that she and others are beginning to assess what needs to be done to renovate the Community Campus auditorium.

Neely said much needs to be done as the auditorium was designed for lectures, rather than the theater and concerts it hosts. The various groups using it even have to bring their own sound and lighting equipment in, she said.

The board also voted to support a bid by the district's alternative school to seek state accreditation.

Liz Schwerdtle of Hailey questioned why the alternative program had been "dismantled," referring to its move last year into a building near the high school and its subsequent name change from Silver Creek Alternative School to Silver Creek High School.

But Superintendent Lonnie Barber assured the board that the name change didn't change the purpose of the school, and actually increased the resources available to the students.

Accreditation would allow the students to have their own entity with their own identity, which is important to them, added Assistant Superintendent John Blackman. "Right now, they're a branch of the high school!"

Jerome seeks help from landlords on unpaid utility bills

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

JEROME — They come every month, either on paper or electronically, demanding money.

City utility bills are expected to be paid on time, but what happens when they aren't?

In the past year, the city of Jerome has seen its number of delinquent utility accounts increase from 40 to 160 — a figure that city officials are working to decrease. In 2008, the city turned over $6,776 in delinquent accounts to state collection services. Last year that amount increased to $13,443.

In a tight economy, that amount of money harms the city's operations. City Finance Director Ross Hyatt said the economy is the likely culprit for the increase in unpaid bills.

A proposed ordinance to make landlords responsible for their tenants' unpaid utility bills was put in front of the City Council on Tuesday after a town hall meeting held on Oct. 13.

On Tuesday, the council was still unsure of the best action to take and sent the proposed ordinances back to city staff and attorney Rob Williams.

The system currently requires tenants to pay the city a $70 deposit for utility purposes and all bills are sent to the tenants, who are responsible for the full payment.

A second proposed ordinance would establish a new penalty of 20 percent of outstanding bill balances to be put on all late payments, and would also charge a $100 re-connect fee.

New ideas discussed at the meeting included a heavier deposit and a re-connect fee of $75.

Hyatt said that about 40 citizens attended the town hall meeting and many landlords were hesitant to take on the additional burden of collecting utility money from tenants.

The council will look at the new proposals at its next meeting on Nov. 2.

Gooding considers raising hook-up fees for water and sewer

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — It's been years since the city of Gooding raised hook-up fees for new water and sewer service. But an ordinance to increase those fees is closer to passing after Monday's City Council meeting.

The ordinance, which had an Oct. 4 public hearing, received its second reading during Monday's meeting and is expected to pass next month. The ordinance calls for the city's fees to rise from $450 for water hookups to $1,500 for a one-inch meter, and $750 to upgrade a current connection to a one-inch meter line.

Other sized water hookups and upgrades would carry a charge equal to "actual time and materials" provided by the city, the ordinance states.

Sewer hook-ups would increase from $200 to $1,500.

The increase is needed so the city doesn't lose money on providing the service, which is what we are doing every time we get one of these," Councilman Mel Magnelli said.

With that ordinance nearly in effect, the council's attention was brought to other city codes that are in place, but not followed.

"There are things that we're not doing," City Clerk Carmen Korsen said, like assessing certain fines when residents fall behind on their city bills.

Korsen suggested, and the council concurred with, holding a work session so members could consider changing ordinances or implementing procedures to follow them. The session is scheduled for 6 p.m. Nov. 1, an hour before the council's first November regular meeting.

In other city news, the council approved a $7,633 bid from Leonard Petroleum Equipment, of Twin Falls, for needed airport fuel tank parts. Another bid, for $9,155, was also submitted to the city for consideration.

Public Works Director Todd Bunn told the council the tank purchase, testing and monitoring equipment was needed for U.S. Environmental Protection Agency requirements.

"They have quit functioning. We can no longer have them serviced or get parts for them," Bunn said. "We have to replace them!"

Feds consider limiting potatoes offered to kids

By Shannon Dininny
Associated Press writer

GLEED, Wash. — Potato growers are fighting back against efforts to ban or limit potatoes in federal child nutrition programs, arguing the tuber is loaded with potassium and vitamin C and shouldn't be considered junk food.

One Washington man is so exasperated by the proposals that he's in the midst of a 60-day, all potato diet to demonstrate that potatoes are nutritious.

"We're just really concerned that this is a misconception to the public that potatoes aren't healthy," said Chris Voigt, head of the Washington Potato Commission. "The potato isn't the scourge of the earth. It's nutritious."

Healthy food advocates said they're not anti-potato, but they think children need a greater variety of fruits, vegetables and whole grains to fight a tripling of child obesity rates in the past 30 years.

"The potato is the most common vegetable," said Diane Pratt-Heavner, spokeswoman for the School Nutrition Association. "My impression is that the goal is to increase the amounts of fruits, vegetables and whole grains. I don't believe anyone is specifically attacking the potato."

With that in mind, the Institute of Medicine, the health arm of the National Academy of Sciences, recommended that the U.S. Department of Agriculture stop participants of the federal Women, Infants and Children program, known as WIC, from buying potatoes with federal dollars. The institute also called for the USDA-backed school lunch program to limit use of potatoes.

Under an interim rule, the USDA agreed to bar WIC participants from buying potatoes with their federal dollars. Potatoes are the only vegetable not allowed. Next year, the agency will roll out a final rule on the WIC program, which last year served 9.3 million children and pregnant and breast-feeding women considered at risk for malnutrition.

The WIC program is a supplemental food program, and the determination was made that consumption of white potatoes was already adequate, said Christine Stencel, spokeswoman for the Institute of Medicine.

"That would be bad," chimed in schoolmate Leah Marko. "That would be so not cool. I love tater tots."

The Institute of Medicine made its school lunch rec-

Nutrition Service, said the WIC program was updated for the first time in 30 years after a study showed more consumption of leafy greens and other veggies was needed.

The USDA is expected to release changes to the federal school lunch program by the end of the year. The program subsidizes lunch and breakfast for nearly 32 million needy kids in most public schools and many private ones, and those schools must follow guidelines on what they serve.

Whatever the USDA decides, potatoes won't disappear from school lunches, although they might become less common, Daniel said.

"It's an opportunity to make healthy eating choices as varied as possible, and it's a learning lesson for children about how to put a plate together that's healthy and balanced," she said.

At Naches Valley Primary School, which sits in the agricultural hub of central Washington, some 7-year-old students weren't so sure.

"No potatoes?" second-grader Madison Nunley asked incredulously.

"That would be bad," chimed in schoolmate Leah Marko. "That would be so not cool. I love tater tots."

The Institute of Medicine made its school lunch recommendation late last year after determining that standards for the federal lunch program don't match up with the government's own dietary guidelines, calling for lots of fresh fruits and veggies and more whole grains.

This hardly marks the first time that potato growers have felt targeted. Low-carb diets, such as Atkins and South Beach, prompted the U.S. Potato Board to allocate $4.4 million for an 18-month public relations campaign in 2004 to stress the nutrition factor in potatoes.

Growers note that potatoes have more potassium than bananas, and that one serving provides roughly 45 percent of the daily recommended value for vitamin C. They also offer some fiber and other minerals and vitamins.

However, they also are high in carbohydrates — and calories, depending on how they are cooked — which can be a losing combination for couch potatoes.

Voight said he'll add spices and a bit of cooking oil to his 20-potatoes-per-day diet, but he won't heap on any butter, sour cream, cheese or any other tasty tidbits.

He acknowledged his all-potato diet was a publicity stunt, but he said only wants

Low priority doesn't mean no priority in Hailey pot bust

HAILEY (AP) — Enforcing marijuana laws is officially a low priority in the central Idaho city of Hailey, but police say two men driving down Main Street while smoking pot and drinking beer got their attention.

Matthew E. Slane, of Hailey, and Henry C. Jones, of Eden, were arrested Saturday and have been charged with misdemeanor counts of possession of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia, and minor consumption of alcohol.

Police Chief Jeff Gunter said the two 19-year-olds were pulled over for not having a front license plate, and the arresting officer detected "burnt marijuana" when confronting the men.

"You can't drive down the road smoking pot and drinking beer," Gunter told the Idaho Mountain Express.

Both men were taken to the Blaine County Jail and released after posting $600 bond apiece.

The city enacted its lowest-priority ordinance concerning marijuana in June following the recommendation of the city's Marijuana Oversight Committee.

The ordinance was the result of legal skirmishes involving three marijuana reform initiatives Hailey voters approved in 2007 and 2008, but which were rejected by a 5th District Court judge in 2009.

The low-priority ordinance applies only to misdemeanor marijuana offenses committed by adults on private property, meaning the arrest of the two men on Main Street was part of normal police procedure, Gunter said.

"This does not fall under the priority act because it didn't happen at a private residence," the chief said.

6 months after oil spill, much remains unknown

By Brian Skoloff and Harry R. Weber
Associated Press writers

NEW ORLEANS — The crude has stopped gushing and coastlines are largely clear of the thick goo that washed ashore for months, but the impact of the worst offshore oil spill in U.S. history will no doubt linger for years.

Six months after the April 20 Deepwater Horizon explosion, the environment and economy of the entire northern Gulf of Mexico region remain in a state of uncertainty, with overturned livelihoods, out-of-work fishermen, reluctant tourists, widespread emotional anguish and untold damage to the sea and its shores.

It could be years before the spill's true effects are understood. The science is largely scattered about what the roughly 200 million gallons of oil that spewed from BP PLC's blown-out well — some 170 million gallons of which actually spilled into the Gulf — will ultimately mean for the animals and plant life that inhabit one of the world's most diverse bodies of water.

"There are some things that are starting to reveal themselves already," said Steve Murawski, chief fisheries scientist for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. "But it's going to take a while for us to gain some perspective."

Murawski predicted scientists will be studying the region for years, as they have been doing since 1989's much smaller Exxon Valdez spill in Alaska.

Plaquemines Parish coastal zone director P.J. Hahn walks through oiled marsh grass in Bay Jimmy near the Louisiana coast, on Oct. 14.

"This will be with us for decades for sure," he said.

The doomsday scenarios feared during the worst period of the gushing well did not play themselves out, as much of the oil is believed to have evaporated or been dispersed, marshes have sprung back to life and fewer dead animals than feared have been found.

But that good news does not mask concerns that the country might be turning its attention away prematurely, considering the very real damage that has been done.

"I can honestly say, I guess, I'm very pessimistic about it," said Byron Encalade, president of the Louisiana Oystermen Association, whose oyster beds are all dead or dying. "We don't know where we're at. We don't even have a complete assessment of the damage or how long it's going to take to correct it. This is our life, though. We have nowhere else to go."

The government has reopened about 90 percent of Gulf federal waters to fishing, and says all seafood caught in the newly opened areas is safe to eat. Yet the commercial fishing industry remains in turmoil, suffering from an acute image problem.

Loads of shrimp and fish are hauled in, but processors are finding little demand from a wary public.

The federal government maintains much of the oil is now gone from the Gulf of Mexico. But independent researchers say they are discovering significant amounts of crude below the sea's surface, including on the ocean floor. They fear the oil that remains could harm species lower down the food chain and affect reproduction rates of fish such as bluefin tuna, which were spawning in the area at the time of the spill.

Oil is still buried in the sand on beaches across the coast, and crude continues to plague some of Louisiana's shores. Some marshes of Barataria Bay — home to productive shrimp nurseries and oyster beds, and thousands of sea birds and migratory species — are still being soiled.

A $20 billion BP compensation fund has so far paid out nearly $1.5 billion to business owners and fishermen along the coast suffering from a summer of lost revenues. But many are still waiting for checks and struggling to pay bills.

Father found guilty in incest case

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — A New Jersey man whose allegedly led him to rape his five daughters and terrorize his family for years was found guilty Wednesday of sexually assaulting a daughter who testified that she bore him a child.

The jury deliberated for less than three hours over two days before finding the man guilty on all of the eight counts in the first of five separate trials — one for each daughter he is accused of victimizing.

The man showed no reaction to the verdict, other than keeping his eyes closed for extended periods while several of the counts were read.

Jurors endured more than three weeks of sexually explicit and often extremely graphic testimony from the man's former wife and one of his daughters.

New oil siphon shows promise, official says

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The senior manager of a project to build a more efficient system to contain oil in deep water said Wednesday that once built and tested, the cap-and-siphon contraption could be deployed and in use within weeks of a future well blowout.

Exxon Mobil's Lloyd Guillory said he is confident the never-before-attempted effort will be successful. He said the $1 billion system, which isn't expected to be ready for use until early 2012, will be adaptable to different blowout scenarios.

Guillory told The Associated Press during a break in a major oil spill conference in Florida that prevention is the real answer for the industry. He said if prevention is done right, the system would never have to be used.

"The system will work," Guillory said. "It will be purpose built and tested."

Exxon Mobil Corp. is leading a coalition of oil companies building the one-of-a-kind system designed to contain an oil leak in up to 10,000 feet of water — twice the depth of the BP blowout.

State controller Jones quietly gets the job done

Four years ago, Donna Jones’ Democratic opponent for state controller — Jackie Groves Twilegar — had a stronger resume for the position than Jones did.

The same can be said about Jones’ current Democratic challenger, Hewlett Packard finance manager Bruce Robinett.

Robinett holds two bachelor’s degrees — one from Idaho State University and the other from Boise State University — and a master’s degree in business administration from BSU, and has worked at both St. Luke’s and Saint Alphonsus regional medical centers in various accounting and finance roles. He also worked for Micron and teaches both financial and managerial accounting courses at BSU.

Jones doesn’t have a college degree, but we’re endorsing her for a second term as the state’s financial manager because she’s more than risen to the demands of the job.

A Realtor by profession who served 12 years in the Idaho House of Representatives and chaired its powerful Revenue and Taxation Committee for two, Jones had the sense when she was elected four years ago to surround herself with good people in the controller’s office.

That’s critical, because if the state controller office isn’t up to the job, there’s a trainwreck all across state government.

Hers isn’t a policymaking job; the controller pays the state’s bills — and its 25,000 employees. She also keeps the state’s checkbook.

To her credit, Jones is determined to make sure any citizen can review that financial ledger at any time online — a project she would have accomplished already if funding had been available.

She also wants to complete a hotline that would allow citizens and state employees to confidentially report cases of possible waste or fraud in state government.

Jones stresses other efforts by her office to get information to citizens. For example, her office publishes annual reports with salary data, and she also travels the state to give presentations about the state’s endowment lands.

She’s every inch a Republican, but like her three predecessors — Republican Keith Johnson and Democrats J.D. Williams and Joe Williams — Jones has run this essential agency with professionalism and scrupulous non-partisanship.

Like Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, there were questions when Jones first ran for statewide office whether she was up to the task.

But nobody’s asking those questions about Donna Jones anymore.

ABOUT THIS RACE

First-term incumbent Republican State Controller Donna Jones, 71, of Payette, is being challenged in the Nov. 2 election by Democrat Bruce Robinett, 46, of Boise, a finance manager Hewlett-Packard.

Companies, investors pour money into this year’s races

The emergence of the neo-populist Tea Party has been the big story of this election cycle. After the votes are cast in November, we may realize that the political resurgence of big business and great wealth was far more significant in determining election outcomes.

To an extent not seen in generations, companies and wealthy investors with a naked economic interest in influencing election results are pouring money into races.

Tim Rutten

Big money’s reassertion of its interests is the result of two recent game-changing events. One was the Supreme Court’s 5-4 decision in Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, which overturned provisions of the bipartisan McCain-Feingold campaign finance act that prohibited corporations and unions from making supposedly independent, third-party expenditures to influence the outcome of electoral contests.

The other was emendation of the tax code to allow creation of so-called 501(c)(4) political action committees to which donors can contribute anonymously. Such organizations are supposed to make less than half of their expenditures for political purposes. But the definition of “educational” activity is extremely squishy, and organizations are able to lump a lot of things that look like blatant politicking under that umbrella.

As The New York Times reported last week, the opportunity to spend limitlessly and secretly has created “dozens of groups awash in money from hidden sources.” They are “spending it at an unprecedented rate, largely on behalf of Republicans.” In fact, one of the most active of these new groups is Crossroads GPS, a political action committee operated by GOP strategist Karl Rove and funded mainly from secret sources. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which does not have to disclose its corporate donors, plans to spend $75 million on political advertising in this election, nearly all of it on behalf of Republican candidates. That’s twice what it spent two years ago. In the last week alone, the chamber has spent $10 million on political advertising, nearly all of which seeks to unseat Democratic lawmakers.

The New York Times reported extensively on an Iowa-based group called the American Future Fund, which is spending millions of dollars from anonymous donors to buy ads bitterly attacking incumbent Democratic lawmakers in 13 states, ostensibly for their “liberal voting records.” In fact, 10 of the 13 targeted members of the House sit on committees or subcommittees with jurisdiction over agricultural and energy policies. Why should that attract attention in this election cycle? While the rest of the American Future Fund’s donors remain anonymous, the paper did establish that the seed money to establish the group came from financier Bruce Rastetter, co-founder of Hawkeye Energy Holdings, one of the country’s largest producers of ethanol.

Ethanol is one of the most heavily subsidized of America’s energy sources. With new agricultural and energy bills waiting to be drafted in the next Congress and billions in federal largess at stake, the American Future Fund’s real agenda probably isn’t all that mysterious.

The law of unintended consequences operates as surely in politics as it does everywhere else, and the drafters of legislation establishing 501(c)(4) organizations may have thought they were promoting philanthropy as surely as the five conservative justices on the Roberts court who struck down that crucial provision of McCain-Feingold believed they were upholding the First Amendment. It’s useful to recall, though, that the last great era of big money’s dominance over our politics also began with what many believed was a desperately needed reform.

The Civil Service Reform Act of 1883 was supposed to put an end to the spoils system that had prevailed since Andrew Jackson’s presidency. For much of the 19th century, both parties supported their candidates and campaigns by distributing patronage and government contracts. When reform ended that, there was nowhere for the parties to turn but to big business and to the all but unregulated industrialists and financiers who captained it through the Gilded Age.

The real architect of all this was the brilliant Ohio financier Mark Hanna, who pulled together big money’s contributions to create the first truly modern national campaign on behalf of William McKinley’s successful run for the presidency in 1896. Hanna once remarked: “There are two things that are important in politics. The first is money and I can’t remember what the second one is.”

It will be a tragedy if we can’t remember either.

ELECTION LETTERS DEADLINE

Tuesday at 5 p.m. is the deadline for letters to the editor regarding candidates and issues in the Nov. 2 election. No letters will be accepted after that time.

there is a new building for the health sciences programs and more buildings are being built in the near future. The college is growing with the community.

The articles in the newspaper make me believe that CSI is meeting the needs of the businesses in our area. The college has been instrumental in attracting new businesses to our town. In this time of economic downturn, I noticed that CSI is meeting its budget without cutting positions and admitting even more students. The leadership is innovative and thinks in a progressive way. I thoroughly enjoyed my time at CSI.

The college seems to be thriving under the leadership of the present board of trustees. Now is not the time to make changes. The newspaper appears to have taken a position on the age of the present board members to be detrimental; have you ever thought that with age comes wisdom.

The “younger challengers” to the board seats all agree that the college is run well, but they say that we need change. Why? Who knows the college and it challenges better than the present board members, Dr. Lehrman and Mr. Craig? Let’s keep the present members and support them in continuing the good job that they are doing.

I am voting for wisdom and stability in this election. I am voting for Dr. Charles Lehrman and Mr. Leroy Craig. I am a proud graduate of CSI, and a proud supporter of the current board members.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HJ 7 will ensure stable electric rates

The Idaho Constitution was adopted 120 years ago. It did not anticipate cities owning and operating power systems for the benefit of their citizens.

Today, 11 cities in Idaho own and operate power systems. They are all preference customers of the Bonneville Power Administration, which supplies some of the lowest-cost power in the nation. BPA sells power through long-term power sales contracts that cover up to 20-year periods.

In addition to these long-term contracts, the power cities now have added contractual opportunities. Beginning October 2011, each city will pay a different wholesale rate for power that we call "load growth" power. In simple terms, this is power that exceeds BPA's output capabilities and is power that is more market based. Over time, some of the power cities will no doubt buy power from sources other than Bonneville. Many of these contracts will be shorter in duration, possibly two to 10 years. At time, cities may have to respond quickly to needs and market conditions for the benefit of their rate-paying citizens and growing businesses. Under present conditions, each time a contract is needed a vote would need to be taken, adding cost and risk. This makes power marketers nervous and may help drive costs up due to the risk of doing business with Idaho power cities. If a power city was unsuccessful in obtaining a favorable vote, they would be limited to buying power with contracts under one-year in duration which have historically been the most expensive way to buy power.

This is why I support HJR7, which clarifies that a city owning a municipal electric system may enter into contracts or agreements with BPA and other suppliers for the purchase of wholesale electricity, helping to ensure that its citizens have low cost and stable electric utility rates as we have done for more than 50 years.

Vote yes on HJ 7 this November so that power cities can continue to provide low-cost, stable electric rates, which keeps power affordable — growing the economy by attracting businesses to our state.

BLM employees show dedication to students

On behalf of the Twin Falls County Historic Preservation Commission, I would like to thank Suzann Henrikson, archaeologist, and her staff at the Burley Office of the Bureau of Land Management for their support as primary partners in a Take It Outside program Sept. 23 and 24 at Caldron Linn in the Snake River Canyon. About 270 local elementary students participated in an outdoor classroom that included learning stations manned by BLM specialists on local wildlife, plants, geology and archaeology. A major highlight of the activity was the re-enactment of a fur trapper's camp, staged by the BLM's Salmon Office re-enactors Elias Williams and Chris Tambe.

The true beneficiaries of the program were the local fourth- and fifth-grade students from schools in Hollister, Kimberly, Murtaugh and Twin Falls. The generosity of the BLM's Take It Outside Program allowed the teachers and students to take this field trip that neither the preservation commission or the schools could have supported this year because of the tight economy. This valuable experience gave students opportunities to not only learn about the many duties of the BLM but to also learn about the history in their "own backyard" and the upcoming bicentennial of the Astorian Expedition in southern Idaho. Students will share these lessons with their schools and the public through the follow-up activities, displays and projects that may be on exhibit in the Twin Falls County Museum, the Magic Valley Arts Center Building or other public locations around the county.

I truly appreciate the dedication of Suzann Henrikson and the BLM employees in supporting our local schools and history groups. They are to be commended for their willingness to share their resources and expertise in providing field opportunities for teachers and students. What valuable community partners they are!

Thanks for supporting education in Wendell

Thanks, Wendell patrons, for passing the bond for the new Wendell Elementary School. I am proud to have served on the bond committees for all three schools. When the new school is built, Wendell will have three functional and safe facilities.

I have taught in Wendell for 21 years, and my grandchildren will attend the Wendell schools. Wendell Elementary School wasn't up to the standard our children deserve. The buildings had safety and structural issues that needed addressed. There were several meetings where the committee was interested in showing needs and answering questions. Thanks to patrons who came, toured the deteriorating buildings, listened to financial concerns and made informed decisions. I appreciate people's willingness to support our educational needs. (Please remember, someone paid for your education!)

Wendell has many on fixed incomes and any raise in taxes is difficult. I wish taxes never had to go up, especially when the economy is struggling. Times must have been tough when the current grade and old high school were constructed too.

It wasn't financially easy back then either. People who came to the meetings and learned of interest-free money were convinced this bond was the right thing to do.

Due to the time of the year, I thought it was a great idea to have the election the same day as the Wendell Elementary School registration. My adult children who were registering their kids loved the one-stop for both matters. There were lots of cars, but the voting lines seemed to go quickly. I had to run home to get my photo ID because of the new law, and I finished voting in 15 minutes.

Thanks to the committee and chairman Dr. Mark Spencer. It takes time, energy and persistence to have accomplished this. I'm proud to have been a part of this community for nearly 58 years. Thanks voters!

Coaches teach players true sportsmanship

I would like to express my thanks and appreciation to the coaches and team members of the Kimberly Maroon Pee Wee football team for the show of sportsmanship and respect they showed for my grandson's football team Saturday (Oct. 16).

Kimberly had beaten our team by a number of touchdowns. Near the very end of the game, they were in a position to easily score again but the coaches and team chose to "take a knee" instead of scoring and rubbing it into our kids' faces. It is not very often today that you witness a display of sportsmanship like that. I really appreciate their willingness to consider the feelings of the other team.

The coaching staff needs to be commended for teaching their team the true meaning of what sports are all about. Thank you, Kimberly Maroon Team players and coaches.

Circuit court reinstates ban on gays in military

By Ed O'Keefe
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration won a temporary stay against the moratorium on “don’t ask, don’t tell” Wednesday, granting the Pentagon the right to once again enforce the 17-year ban on gays in the military.

A three-judge panel on the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals issued the decision, giving itself more time to consider the Justice Department’s appeal of an injunction issued last week by U.S. District Judge Virginia Phillips.

Wednesday’s stay was the latest volley in an issue ping-ponging its way through the courts.

The Log Cabin Republicans, a gay-rights group that brought the suit challenging the constitutionality of “don’t ask, don’t tell,” have until Monday to appeal the 9th Circuit Court’s decision.

“While we are disappointed with the court’s ruling granting a temporary administrative stay, we view the decision as nothing more than a minor setback,” said Dan Woods, the attorney representing LCR. “We didn’t come this far to quit now, and we expect that once the 9th Circuit has received and considered full briefing on the government’s application for a stay, it will deny that application.”

This “is not a decision on the merits; it’s an even more temporary decision,” said Richard Socarides, a former gay-rights adviser to President Bill Clinton who is tracking the issue closely.

“For the reasons stated in the government’s submission, we believe a stay is appropriate,” Pentagon spokeswoman Cynthia Smith said. The Defense Department will be issuing additional guidance regard-

Stepmom of missing N.C. girl deemed flight risk

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — A judge deemed the stepmother of a missing 10-year-old girl a flight risk and raised her bond Wednesday after the woman’s grown daughter testified that she’s carrying on an online relationship with a man in England who was sending her thousands of dollars.

While the bond hearing unfolded, dozens of investigators searched a nearby North Carolina landfill for key evidence in the disappearance of Zahra Clare Baker, but police said they don’t expect to find the girl’s body there.

Catawba County District Judge Robert Mullinax Jr. said there were “disturbing and unsettling allegations” in the case as he increased Elisa Baker’s bond from $40,000 to $65,000.

ing the decision, she said. The Justice Department had no immediate comment, according to spokeswoman Tracy Schmalzer.

The military is back to where it was before Phillips caught it by surprise last Tuesday with her injunction. Since then, the Pentagon has instructed military recruiters to accept openly gay and lesbian applicants, though few have been known to apply, according to gay rights groups.

As for any gay or lesbian people who enlisted with the military this week, “They may be told they cannot join” if the Pentagon decides to enforce the law, said Aubrey Sarvis, executive director of the Servicemembers Legal Defense Network, a group representing service members affected by the law.

But the military’s decision to follow Phillips’s order proves it is ready to accept gay and lesbian service members, said Aaron Belkin, executive director of the Palm Center at the University of California Santa Barbara. The think tank studies gays in the military and supports lifting the “don’t ask, don’t tell” ban.

Obama official says banks can restart foreclosures

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama’s top housing official said Wednesday that lenders are within their rights to resume foreclosures this month despite allegations that they erred in processing documents. But he said the banks could face fines if found to have broken the law.

“They’ve made a business decision,” Shaun Donovan, the secretary of housing and urban development, said in an interview at the White House.

Two big lenders — Bank of America Corp. and Ally Financial Inc.’s GMAC Mortgage unit — are restarting foreclosures after halting them temporarily. They had frozen those cases amid allegations that employees signed but didn’t read foreclosure documents that may have contained errors. The companies say they’re fixing the problems in the documents.

Donovan noted that several federal agencies, including his department and the Federal Trade Commission, have authority to penalize mortgage companies if they’re found to have violated the law.

“We are going to hold them accountable,” he said.

The housing secretary discussed the foreclosure document mess earlier in the day with officials from 11 federal agencies that are reviewing the issue. He said the government is also in contact with 50 state attorneys general who have launched their own inquiry.

Sun Valley marketing alliance to face fire

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A new group formed to market Sun Valley to the world has gotten a thumbs up from the Ketchum City Council in its bid to hire a San Francisco firm to develop and implement the board's marketing plan.

But Sun Valley City Council President Dewayne Briscoe warned that the alliance should be prepared for a fight when it makes its pitch to the Sun Valley Council today.

"I doubt very much if the Sun Valley Council will adopt what was presented tonight," he said. Briscoe added that he tries his best to promote compromise but that councilmen Nils Ribí and Bob Youngman had turned "adamantly against" the marketing board's efforts after it merged with the Sun Valley Chamber.

"I don't see how we can forge a compromise with them feeling as strongly as they do," he said.

Jake Peters, an investment banker with Credit Suisse and a member of Sun Valley Marketing Alliance, told the council Monday night that the board had picked Eleven Inc. to develop the board's marketing plan.

Sun Valley Resort hired the firm in May to launch its new marketing campaign, which will start before the end of the year.

The firm worked with Tahoe at Northstar, the resort Tim Silva ran before becoming Sun Valley's general manager a year ago. It also works with such firms as Apple, Virgin Airlines and VISA.

The firm is one of the best in the mountain resort business, said Silva.

"Getting your brand right is probably the most important thing you can do," Silva added. "If you're in leadership and you can't communicate your brand to your public and staff, you don't have a chance of succeeding."

Sun Valley has already paid Eleven Inc. "a huge amount of money" to understand and help brand Sun Valley. So the marketing board wouldn't have to duplicate that effort if it hired the firm, Peters said. Peters added that it would take the firm 45 days to develop the alliance's marketing plan at a cost of $24,000. That would expedite the process by four months.

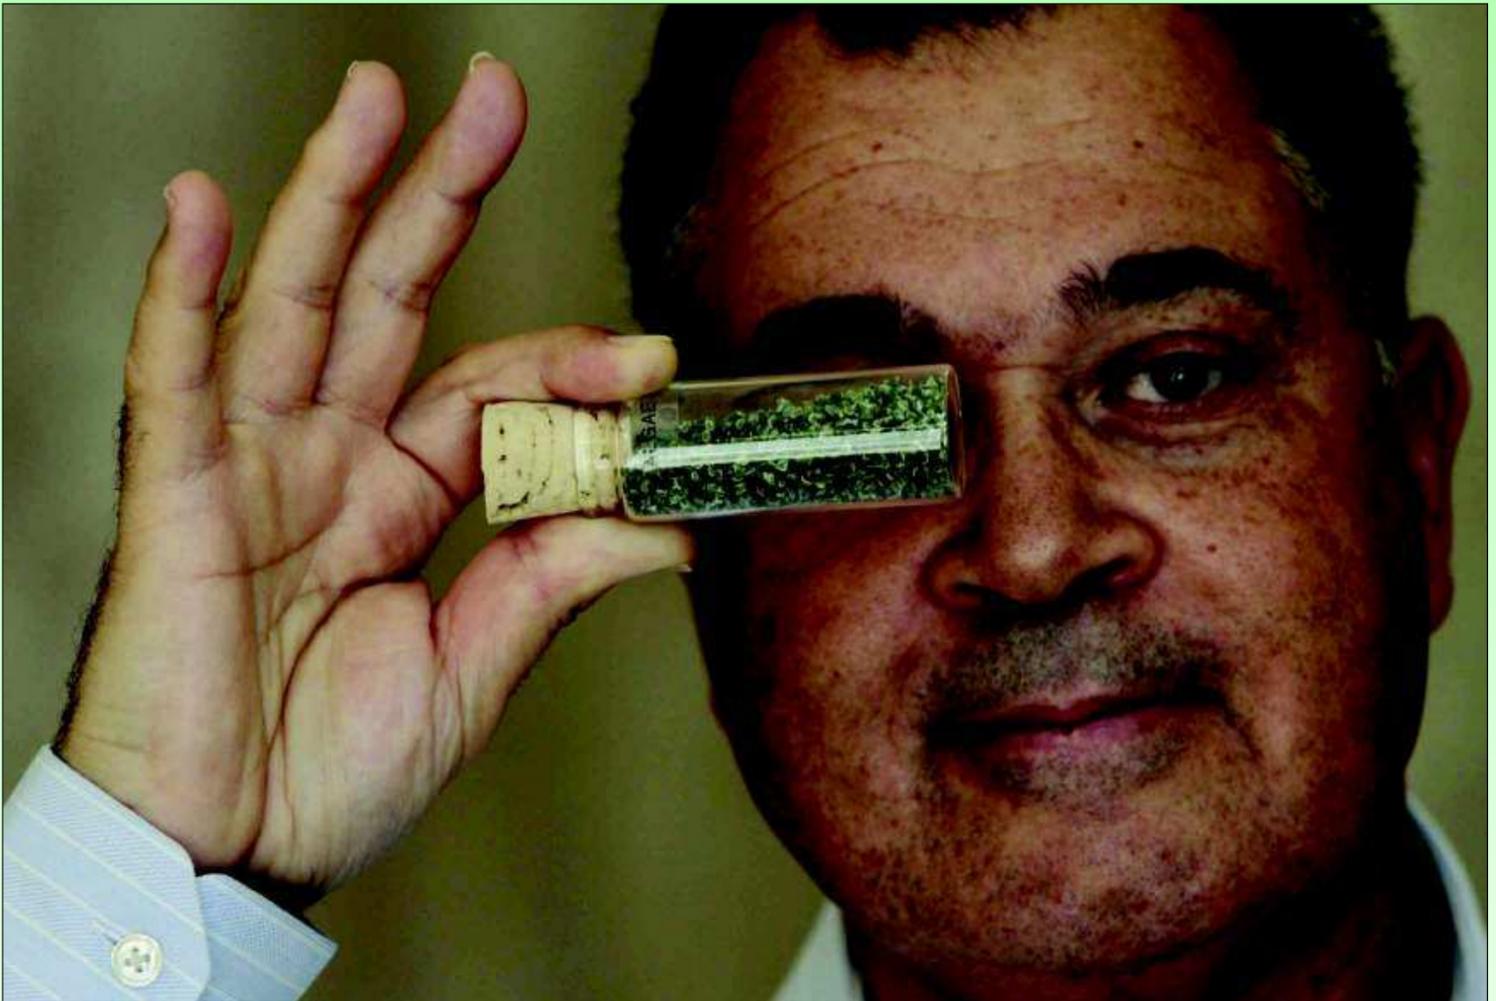

"I suggest we (hire them) before they decide they made a typo," quipped Ketchum Mayor Randy Hall. "Twenty-four thousand dollars seems almost too good to be true."

Peters also said the board recommends hiring a marketing director immediately. The person could be part-time, possibly a local. And they need not command the $200,000-plus salary that a CMO requires, which would be a quarter of the $900,000 budget the board expects it'll have to work with its first year.

Peters cautioned people not to expect results within five months when Sun Valley's marketing efforts have been subpar for decades.

"Messages need to be repeated over and over," he said.

Wild ideas take flight on cutting edge of clean tech

By Tiffany Hsu
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Spray-on solar panels, power beaming down from outer space and gasoline-like fuel made from bacteria.

Sound far-fetched? Maybe, but these and other futuristic concepts for producing power are being taken seriously in scientific, business and academic circles. Some have even raised millions in funding.

This is the dream era for green technology, when even concepts that sound wildly innovative or insane — depending on who's describing them — are getting attention.

"People who aren't afraid to take chances in completely uncharted waters sometimes succeed beyond their wildest dreams and turn the world on its head," said industrial designer and entrepreneur Richard Alan Hales.

Investment firm Khosla Ventures of Menlo Park, Calif., considers fringe ideas to be a virtue. The outfit, which lists former British Prime Minister Tony Blair as a consultant, provides seed money to those with "a crazy idea that may have a significantly non-zero chance of working," according to its website.

Among the companies in which Khosla has invested is AltaRock Energy Inc., which has a geothermal plan to inject water into the Earth as far down as three miles, and then use the steam that rises up to produce energy.

"In the areas where there's very little risk, the upside is also a lot smaller," said David Mann, who holds the chief of staff title at Khosla.

Khosla, founded in 2004 by former

Sun Microsystems Inc. Chief Executive Vinod Khosla, doesn't mind if 90 percent of its ventures fail, as long as 10 percent hit the jackpot, Mann said.

U.S. Energy Department Secretary Stephen Chu had just about the same ratio in mind when he announced last year that the agency was giving $151 million to clean-tech ventures — including one that proposed bacteria be used to produce gasoline-like fuels — in the form of 37 grants.

Fed survey points to uneven growth across U.S.

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

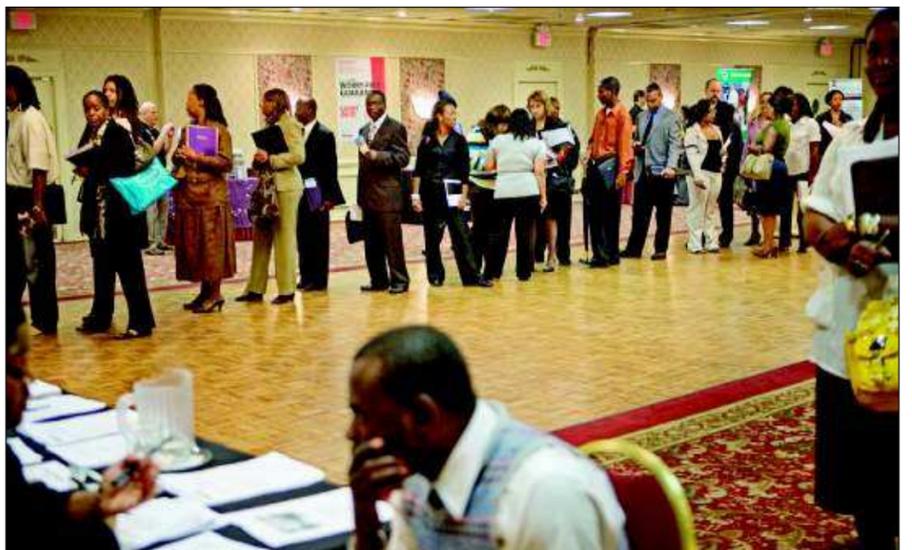

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy grew unevenly in early fall, with more than half the regions of the country expanding modestly while others are struggling to grow.

A survey by the Federal Reserve released Wednesday found that seven of the Fed's 12 regions reported moderate improvements in business activity.

Three regions — Philadelphia, Richmond and Cleveland — described economic activity as mixed or steady. Only two regions — Atlanta and Dallas — suggested economic growth was slow.

The survey indicated that the economy isn't weakening but is growing too sluggishly to drive down high unemployment, now at 9.6 percent.

State of the Mac

Apple CEO Steve Jobs talks about the new Apple Macbook Air laptop at Apple headquarters in Cupertino, Calif., Wednesday.

Apple looks to iPhone, iPad for Mac inspiration

By Jessica Mintz and Jordan Robertson
 Associated Press writer

CUPERTINO, Calif. — Apple's iPhone and iPads have been such hits that the company is now looking for ways to bring some of their cachet to its laptops and desktops.

Apple Inc. offered glimpses on Wednesday of an updated Mac operating system, called Mac OS X Lion. The company highlighted features that borrow from the lighter-weight iOS that runs on its mobile gadgets.

The company also unveiled two new versions of its MacBook Air ultralight laptops.

Apple CEO Steve Jobs drew laughs when he introduced the new models by saying, "We asked ourselves: What would happen if a MacBook and an iPad hooked up?"

Lion – Apple uses names of big cats to differentiate between versions – is expected to arrive next summer. Lion will include a built-in store selling Mac software, similar to the iTunes store that sells apps for the iPhone, iPad and iPod Touch.

Those devices have been successful in part because of the tens of thousands of games and other programs available as free or paid downloads in the app store. Apple may be looking to a Mac app store to boost interest in its computers, which make up a tiny but growing percentage of the personal computer market. In the second quarter, Macs accounted for about 4 percent of PC shipments worldwide, according to the research group IDC.

Apple plans to vet Mac programs before they'll be sold in the store. Software developers will be able to submit apps for review starting in November, and the Mac store will be open for business in the next 90 days.

Lion also mimics the iPhone and iPad user interface in a few ways. Mac users will be able to move from the main desktop to a "dashboard," or screen with a clock, weather report, calculator and other widgets, by swiping a multitouch mouse or trackpad. People will also be able to drag one program icon on top of another to create a new folder, which smartly names itself based on the type of applications that are inside.

Apple's new MacBook Air laptops have something else in common with iPhones and iPads, however: They store all their information in flash memory. Apple did away with a CD and DVD drive in its first MacBook Air, and it ditched the hard disk drive in this edition, too. That will speed up the time it takes to boot up the laptops or wake them from a sleep state.

The laptops are 0.68 inches thick at the back and taper down to 0.11 inches thick at the front edge. They come in two sizes, one with a screen that's 13.3 inches diagonally and another with a 11.6-inch screen. The larger one clocks in at 2.9 pounds and can be used for seven hours, thanks in part to a low-voltage processor from Intel Corp.

Prices range from $999 for a smaller one with 64 gigabytes of flash memory storage to $1,599 for the larger model with 256 gigabytes of

Thomas' wife seeks apology from accuser Anita Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anita Hill is refusing to apologize for accusing then-Supreme Court justice nominee Clarence Thomas of sexually harassing her, in an issue that Thomas' wife has reopened 19 years after his confirmation hearings.

"I have no intention of apologizing because I testified truthfully about my experience and I stand by that testimony," Hill, now a Brandeis University professor, said in a statement released Tuesday night.

Thomas' wife, Virginia, had left a voicemail message on Hill's phone on Oct. 9 asking her to say she was sorry for the allegations that surfaced at Thomas' confirmation hearings for a seat on the high court bench in 1991.

In her statement, Hill said, "I certainly thought the call was inappropriate." She had worked for Clarence Thomas in two federal government jobs before he was selected for the court by President George H.W. Bush for the Supreme Court.

Virginia Thomas is a longtime conservative activist and founder of a new nonprofit group, Liberty Central, which opposes what she has characterized as the leftist "tyranny" of the Obama administration and congressional Democrats. She was a keynote speaker earlier this month in Richmond, Va., at a state convention billed as the largest tea party event ever.

Mrs. Thomas said in a statement that she was "extending an olive branch" to Hill.

This still image from video provided by WCVB-TV in Boston shows Brandeis University professor Anita Hill driving from her home Wednesday in Waltham, Mass. Hill was telephoned on Oct. 9 by Virginia Thomas, wife of Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas, asking her to say she was sorry for the allegations that surfaced at Thomas' confirmation hearings for a seat on the court in 1991.

sage provided by ABC News, which said it listened to the recording, Thomas identified herself and then said, "I just wanted to reach across the airwaves and the years and ask you to consider something. I would love you to consider an apology sometime and some full explanation of why you did what you did with my husband. So give it some thought and certainly pray about this and come to understand why you did what you did. OK, have a good day," Thomas said.

When Hill heard the voicemail, she contacted Brandeis' public safety office, which in turn informed the FBI.

In her statement, Virginia Thomas said she did not intend to offend Hill.

"I did place a call to Ms. Hill at her office extending an olive branch to her after all these years, in hopes that we could ultimately get passed what happened so long ago. That offer still stands, I would be very happy to meet and talk with her if she would be willing to do the same," Thomas said.

Hill declined comment to reporters who stopped her in Waltham on her way to work Wednesday, asking them politely to move.

"I need to get off this street and I don't want anybody to get hurt," she said. "I don't have any comment right now. Please, let me go teach my class."

Andrew Gully, a spokesman for Brandeis, said the school "completely supports" Hill's decision to alert campus security about the call. He said Wednesday was "a routine day" on campus.

"We've moved beyond it," he said. "We're finished on this end."

Spain says 'adios' to smoking in bars, cafes

MADRID (AP) — Spain, famed for its smoke-filled bars, corner cafes and restaurants, set the stage Wednesday for a tough new anti-smoking law that will rid the country of its dubious status as one of Western Europe's easiest places to light up.

The bill passed by parliamentary commission calls for transforming all bars and restaurants into no-smoking zones, bringing Spain in line with the European Union's strictest anti-smoking nations and many U.S. states that bar smoking in enclosed public places. It's expected to pass the Senate and become law on Jan. 2.

The law also will make Spain a tougher place to smoke than many other European countries where bars and restaurants are still allowed to have smoking sections, and will prohibit smoking in outdoor places such as playgrounds and the grounds of schools and hospitals.

The current law put in place in 2006 prohibits smoking in the workplace, and workers puffing away just outside their office buildings are a common sight.

But that law aimed at cracking down on smoking permitted owners of most bars and cafes to decide on their own whether to allow smoking — and almost all ended up doing so, leading critics to label the earlier law as a total failure.

Those bar and cafe owners will now lose the privilege, and larger restaurants that still have smoking sections will have to get rid of them. Officials predict thousands of lives now lost to second-hand smoke will be saved.

"I think the new law is good, especially if it helps us keep healthy," said Puri De Arcos, 33, as she puffed away in a park square. "But I think it is too radical, banning smoking in discos, for example."

Rioters rampage, protesters block French airports

PARIS (AP) — Workers opposed to a higher retirement age blocked roads to airports around France on Wednesday, leaving passengers in Paris dragging suitcases on foot along an emergency breakdown lane.

Outside the capital, hooded youths smashed store windows amid clouds of tear gas.

Riot police in black body armor forced striking workers away from blocked fuel depots in western France, restoring gasoline to areas where pumps were dry after weeks of protests over the government proposal raising the age from 60 to 62.

Riot officers in the Paris suburb of Nanterre and the southeastern city of Lyon sprayed tear gas but appeared unable to stop the violence.

Finance Minister Christine Lagarde said both the strikes and the violence were taking an economic toll.

"I'm calling on people to be responsible, in particular those who are having a roaring time blocking access and breaking things," she said in an interview with TF1 television.

AP photo

Travelers make their way to Orly airport, south of Paris, past cars in a traffic jam as airport workers block the access of the airport, Wednesday.

"It's serious for our country."

After months of largely peaceful disruptions, some protests erupted into scattered violence this week over the government's push to raise the retirement age from 60 to 62. President Nicolas Sarkozy vowed that his conservative party would pass the reform in a Senate vote expected Thursday.

Many workers feel the change would be a first step in eroding France's social benefits — which include long vacations, contracts that make it hard for employers to lay off workers and a state-subsidized health care system — in favor of "American-style capitalism."

Sarkozy ordered all fuel depots forcibly reopened and vowed Wednesday that he would "carry the retirement reform through to the end." And despite France's tolerance for a long tradition of strikes and protest, official patience appeared to be waning after weeks of actions that have snarled traffic, canceled flights and dwindling gasoline supplies and, now, rising urban violence.

Karzai gov't held talks with Taliban faction

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The Afghan government has been in reconciliation talks for months with members of a Taliban faction closely tied to al-Qaida and responsible for lethal attacks on coalition forces and bombings inside the capital, Kabul, according to a member of the Afghan parliament.

The parliamentarian, who requested anonymity because of the sensitivity of the subject, said President Hamid Karzai's government had been in direct contact with Jalaludin Haqqani, the aging leader of the Pakistan-based Haqqani network, which is also believed to have close ties to Pakistan's intelligence service. The network is being run by his son, Sirajuddin.

The New York Times reported Wednesday that three members of the Taliban's leadership council, known as the Quetta Shura, also have taken part in preliminary discussions with the Afghan government, according to an Afghan official and a former diplomat in the region.

The newspaper said the White House and an Afghan who has participated in the discussions requested that the newspaper withhold the names of the three Taliban leaders plus a member of the Haqqani family who were involved in the talks — presumably to shield them from reprisal attacks.

The reports could not be independently confirmed, and experts familiar with the insurgent leadership expressed doubt that such senior Taliban figures would be involved in direct talks.

The Haqqani network is an autonomous faction of the Afghan Taliban. The elder Haqqani was a U.S. ally during the 1980s war against the Soviets but has in recent years forged close ties to al-Qaida. Haqqani fighters are among the most feared within the insurgency.

NAACP report looks at race issues in the tea party

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The NAACP released a report Wednesday accusing some tea party figures of having ties to racist groups and called on the movement to oust any activists who promote racism.

The report, released two weeks before the election, followed up on a resolution approved by the organization last summer condemning "racist elements and activities" in the tea party.

The report cited more than a dozen tea party activists with racist ties, but the authors said they would release more names each week on their website. Those cited included a tea party leader in Texas who had once been listed as a supporter a Ku Klux Klan group and a tea party radio show host who had allegedly invited anti-Semitic guests on his program. Leaders of the tea party movement have rejected charges that the movement promotes racism.

NAACP president Benjamin Todd Jealous wrote in the report that most tea party supporters are "people of good will."

"Our request to the majority in the tea party is to stand up and speak out and be clear that there is no room in the tea party for people who would espouse racism, xenophobia or advocate violence toward any group," Jealous said in a phone interview.

The tea party is a loosely organized network of local groups that promotes limited government and has no central leadership. But organizations that monitor hate groups say it has attracted some racist elements because of its mostly white membership and because some tea party groups advocate a tough stance on illegal immigration.

Persons carrying racist signs have appeared at some tea party rallies.

Astronomers say they've found oldest galaxy so far

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers believe they've found the oldest thing they've ever seen in the universe: It's a galaxy far, far away from a time long, long ago.

a time when the universe was very young, just shy of 600 million years old. That would make it the earliest and most distant galaxy seen so far.

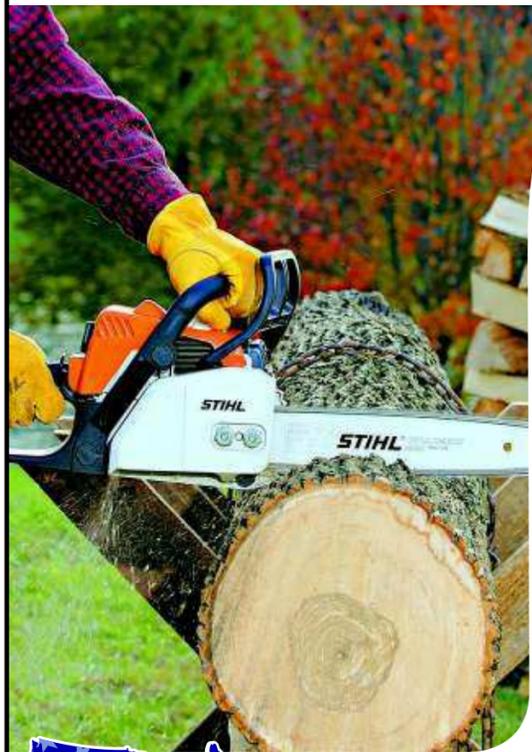

Wednesday in the journal Nature. "We're looking at the universe when it was a 20th of its current age," said California Institute of Technology astronomy professor Richard Ellis, who wasn't part of the discovery team.

for the study "pretty good," there have been other claims about the age of distant space objects that have not held up to scrutiny. And some experts have questions about this one.

Chile that looked at light signatures of cooling hydrogen gas. Earlier this year, astronomers had made a general estimate of 600 to 800 million years after the Big Bang for the most distant fuzzy points of light in the Hubble photograph, which was presented at an astronomy meeting back in January.

researchers focused on a single galaxy in their analysis of hydrogen's light signature, further pinpointing the age. Garth Illingworth of the University of California, Santa Cruz, who was the scientist behind the Hubble image, said it provides confirmation for the age using a different method, something he called amazing "for such faint objects."

A lyrical autumn

By Andrew Weeks ❖ Times-News writer

Some of the best things in life are the most simple — like a fall-colored landscape or an equally beautiful verse.

Having been caught by fall fever, I made a trip to the South Hills recently, where I found sun rays peaking between pine needles, yellow-colored aspen leaves clapping in the breeze, and autumn-painted hills that seemed to roll into infinity.

What an artist is Mother Nature! Her talent is displayed all year long, but in my opinion it pops loudest in fall.

But like all “pops” it doesn’t last long. Before we know it, the golden leaves will have fallen from their branches, leaving the trees bare as they stand dormant during the coldest months of the year.

Even the evergreens, though coated in their needles, will be slapped by Jack Frost.

Time is short, but if you hurry you just might make it to see fall’s finest hour.

In case you don’t — or haven’t yet — I thought I’d share with you some of the photos I took while on my visit to the hills

Oct. 14. Instead of the usual news-type captions, however, I’ve complemented the photos with the words of some of America’s finest writers, who, as you’ll see, gave autumn a lot of thought.

Photos, of course, don’t do Mother Nature justice.

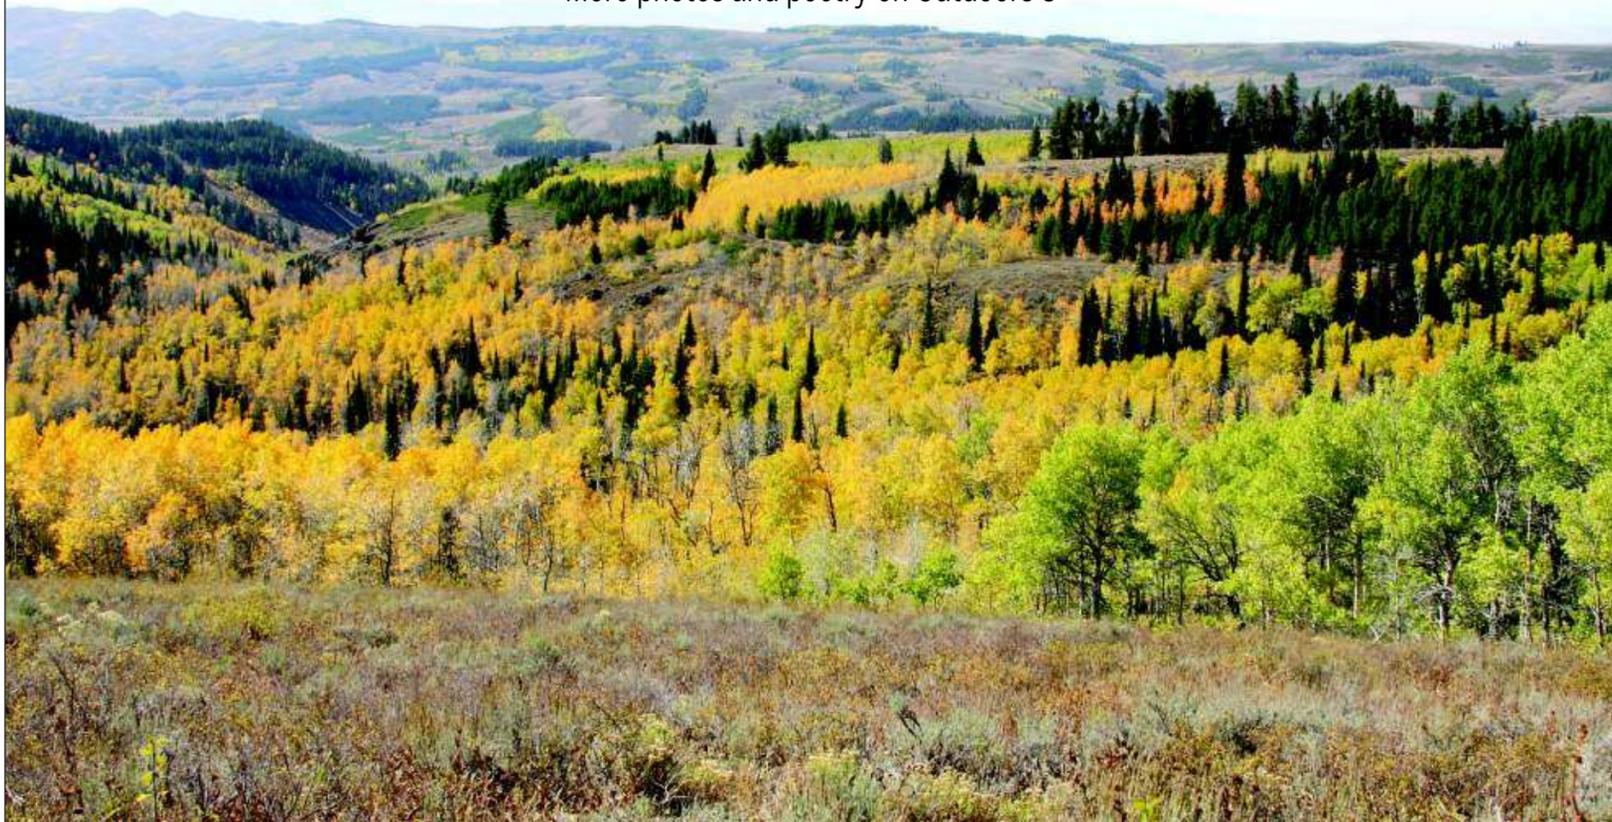

“Autumn,” as William Cullen Bryant wrote, “the year’s last, loveliest smile.”

Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness,
Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun;
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the vines that round the thatch-eves run;
To bend with apples the moss’d cottage-trees,
And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;
To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells
With a sweet kernel; to set budding more,
And still more, later flowers for the bees,
Until they think warm days will never cease,
For Summer has o’er-brimm’d their clammy cells.

BIRD MAN

Webb raises pheasants and chukars at Rupert bird farm

By Judy Albertson
Times News writer

RUPERT — If you have been handling an exotic bird, such as a parakeet, parrot or macaw, don’t visit a pheasant farm.

Those birds carry a virus of the disease Newcastle, which is devastating to pheasants, said Philip Webb, owner and operator of Magic Valley Gamebirds northeast of Rupert.

As a member of National Poultry Improvement Plan (NPIP) and Avian influenza tested, he is required to ask visitors if they have had contact with the above-mentioned birds. Ducks and geese also are not mixed with pheasants because they carry high levels of salmonella.

Webb has owned his pheasant farm for eight years and has never regretted the move. He took it over from a friend who was retiring.

“He was retiring and I was looking for a change — and this was definitely a change. He stayed for a year and trained me,” Webb said.

Touring the facility, one quickly finds out that there is more to raising pheasants than meets the eye.

Webb purchases his chicks from NPIP Certified Hatchery in Utah. He raises 10,000 birds in a growing season, which begins in early April and ends the first week of December. The day-old chicks start out in the brooder room that holds 3,000 chicks. They are mostly roosters with about 10 percent hens.

“They can’t get a perfect 100 percent roosters because it’s pretty hard to tell male from female,” Webb said. “They say they tell by the shape of their eye. These are all Chinese ringneck pheasants, a species common in Idaho. The ringneck was introduced to Idaho by the Chinese when they were building the railroad through Idaho. It was one of their staples.”

Webb’s wife of 21 years, Rose, also is a partner in the business. She teaches first grade at Rupert Elementary School as well.

“Rose runs the brooder. They’re babies — they take a woman’s touch. Everything has to be perfect. And if I mess up something, do I ever hear about it!” Webb said.

The brooders are heat controlled with proper ventilation. The chicks stay in them for four weeks, then moved to the outside brooders. There they can be outside most of the day, but move inside in the evenings when it’s cold.

When the chicks are moved out of the brooders, everything is steam cleaned and sanitized before the new group is moved in.

At eight weeks the birds are moved to the flight pens, which have an alley between them and netting all around and over them.

“The netting keeps the predators out and the birds in,” Webb said.

Snapping photos of your outdoors catch takes some thought

By Ray Sasser
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — One of the readers with whom I exchange regular e-mails sent me a photo recently and asked for identification of a fish caught by a novice angler.

The fish was being held aloft by the fishing line. The photographer apparently was inexperienced at photographing fish because the shutter was snapped just as the fish spun around with its belly toward the camera.

In an e-mail, I called the fish a warmouth, a member of the sunfish family. That identification was an educated guess based on the fish’s coloration and its oversized mouth, unusual among sunfish.

The No. 1 rule of game-fish photography is to make the fish appear larger, not smaller, than it truly is.

Digital cameras are so good that I’m appalled by some of the outdoors photos people send me. The cameras aren’t at fault, of course. It’s the photographer. People don’t spend enough time thinking about issues such as background (uncluttered is best), posing and using fill flash to brighten up faces, fish and game that are in the shadows.

Photos are important to help remember and share great times afield, even when you don’t catch a big fish or shoot a big buck.

For fishing photos, give the subject serious thought before a memorable fish is caught. Particularly if you plan to release the fish, you can’t hold it out of the water indefinitely and expect it to survive. You don’t have much time to plan the photo.

Hold the fish in such a way that best shows off its size. That’s a broadside look at a fish. Hold it in front of you (but not way out in front) or out to the side so there’s nothing but sky behind the fish.

Photographing game, such as deer, ducks, doves or quail, is easier because

Fly fishers to hear regulations update

Magic Valley Fly Fishers will hear from Doug Megargle today. Megargle, regional fisheries biologist with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, will update the group on the draft 2011 fishing regulations at 7 p.m. at Rock Creek Restaurant, 200 Addison Ave., Twin Falls. The biggest rule change will be a statewide year-round open season for fishing on most waters. The main benefit of the change will be to eliminate the many exceptions to the existing regulations and make them easier to follow. However, exceptions will still occur such as the protection of certain species that need stream closures to allow spawning. The meeting also will feature a fly-tying demonstra-

Licensed and bonded

Every fall millions of big game hunters successfully fill their tags using their modestly-priced Winchester Power Point, Federal soft-point and Remington CoreLokt ammunition.

Regrettably, every year many fine big game animals are wounded and lost because these conventional lead core/copper jacketed bullets lack the gusto that tougher bullets deliver.

To compensate, all major manufacturers produce a carriage-class line of specialty ammunition topped with their preferred premium bullet(s). Each of these specialty loadings have proven to be rhino tough and capable of excellent expansion, weight retention and penetration on many types of big game.

The only fly-in-the-ointment is the price tag: these ballistic beauties are inordinately expensive.

Federal, after sensing a niche in the marketplace for high-performance ammunition with a reasonable price-point, came to the rescue several years ago when it introduced its Fusion line of bonded centerfire ammo. Its unprecedented success prompted Winchester to counter this summer with its PowerMax Bonded line.

SHOOTING THE BULL

Rich Simpson

ON THE WEB

So what advantages do bonded bullets have over conventional bullets?

Traditional copper jacket/lead core bullets employ some sort of bullet jacket modification to mechanically lock the jacket and lead core together. As a light big game bullet, they generally perform splendidly, expanding and penetrating sufficiently on deer, antelope, sheep and goats.

But they often fail if pushed too fast by today's popular magnum cartridges or asked to penetrate deeply into the heavy hide, muscle tissue and bone of truly big animals like elk, moose or bear.

Federal and Winchester approach the bonding process from two different angles. Federal electrochemically fuses the copper jacket material one molecule at a time to a preformed lead core, a procedure it claims

RICH SIMPSON/For the Times-News

Some of Winchester's and Federal's high-performance bonded-bullet offerings.

"totally eliminates component separation and the uniform deposition of the jacketing material builds balance, stability, and accuracy." They claim it as a "radically different technology that radiates energy, empowers the predator, and unleashes performance unthinkable by any conventional means."

Winchester makes slightly more subtle claims for its proprietary process, which chemically bonds the lead core to a notched and contoured gilding metal jacket.

The results: "the lead core remains welded to the jacket after impact for maximum retained weight, penetration, and dramatic knockdown power"

In reality, the most critical factor in harvesting any game animal is the placement of the bullet and its integrity upon impact. Why risk an expensive hunt on an "also ran" bullet when you can get a performance upgrade for roughly the same price? Both brands retail locally for $20-$25 and are offered in most all popular big game cartridges.

And the best part is you can brag to your friends, "I'm such a deadly predator that I'm licensed and bonded." Good hunting!

Bird farm

The pens are filled with weeds or "natural cover koshia."

"The weeds keep them wild so when you release them they will go for cover. I would say the koshia is probably the most important thing in raising pheasants," Webb said. "I was a crop consultant for 23 years and I spent lots of time trying to figure out ways to keep this stuff out of fields. Now I'm growing it."

The weeds are plowed under each season after the birds are gone and the koshia reseeds itself and grows back naturally each year. It starts out green in the spring, then dries out making a perfect groundcover for the birds.

When the roosters are between 5 and 16 weeks, they want to start fighting so they are fitted with anti-pecking devices called "peepers." The device does not hurt or injure the birds in any way and fits neatly in their nostril holes. Each bird is fitted with a peeper by hand.

"They act as blinders. They see a pheasant and when they turn their head to fight, they see another with the other eye," Webb said. "The birds wear the peepers for about 10 weeks, then they are manually removed. They pop right off."

The birds are fed 28-30 percent protein gamebird crumble for eight weeks then go to 16-18 percent game bird pellets. Fully grown birds get cracked grain. The pheasants fully mature in 20 weeks. When mature, the roosters weigh about four pounds, the hens weighing in at about two and a half pounds.

"We use no antibiotics," Webb said. "Five years ago we started to use probiotics and it has dramatically increased livability, quality and strong healthy birds. It has decreased the death rate by 25 percent. We lose very few birds."

When the pheasants are fully matured and ready to be sold, the weeds are smashed down in the pens and they are run out of the pens up the alley into the shipping crates.

Webb sells to game preserves in Idaho only, as well as restocking the Idaho state preserve. His orders usually run from 100 to 400 birds at a time and he delivers them himself.

Webb also raises the illusive chukar.

"The chukars are the largest of the partridge family," Webb said. "They are really interesting to watch. In the morning they start chirping and they all chirp alike. Then in the evening they start again, only it is a different kind of chirp. If a predator flies over they all freeze and are completely still. They're hard to hunt because they are so fast."

Webb says the best part of raising gamebirds is the learning curve.

"Every year there is something different to be learned," he said. "No year is like the other year. The biggest thrill of it is wild releases on private ground and watching them fly off. After eight years of doing this I still get a thrill when they leave the cage and fly away. It still excites me."

Webb and Rose have two grown children. Their daughter is a school teacher in Kuna and their son is making a career in the service. They hope their pheasant project will help them retire soon.

"Our five-year goal is to be able to winter in a beautiful, warm, sunny location," Webb said.

More waterfowl seasons open

Waterfowl hunters should be pleased as more seasons open next week, according to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

The season on scaup opens in Area 1 on Saturday and runs through Jan. 14; and opens in Area 2 Oct. 30 and runs through Jan. 21.

The season on Canada and greater white-fronted geese, ducks, coots and snipe already is open and runs to Jan. 14 in Area 1 and to Jan. 21 in Area 2.

The daily bag limit is seven ducks, no more than two female mallards, two redheads, three scaup, two pintails and one canvasback. The daily dark goose bag limit is four, and the daily limit for light geese is 10.

Possession limits are twice the daily bag limit. The daily and possession limit for coots is 25, and the daily limit for common snipe is eight; the possession limit is 16.

you don't have to worry about keeping the secondary subject matter alive. Last December, my wife was lucky enough to make a terrific shot on a great Texas mule deer. It's by far the biggest buck she's shot, and you've never seen anyone so excited about a deer.

It was dark by the time we found the buck and took the obligatory photos at the spot where he dropped, then loaded it in the truck, then again in a barn at the hunting camp.

None of those photos was what I wanted, however, so we used nearly a roll of paper towels to clean the blood off the buck, then propped it against the side of the barn with his front legs folded under him. A rope tied from his antlers to a roof support allowed the deer to stiffen with his head upright.

The next morning, we went back to the camp at daylight, loaded the deer into the truck, drove to a scenic-looking hillside, moved the deer out of the truck and set him up for photos with Emilie behind the buck. I took the photos from low on the ground, with nothing but open sky behind the deer and the hunter.

My wife noted how much trouble we were going through to take the photos. By the time we'd made the long drive home, she realized the value of that effort. It took 10 months to get the mounted mule deer. During the interminable wait, we had great photos to remind us of the high point in her big game hunting career. We've e-mailed and showed the photos to all our friends.

The fishing trip of a lifetime or the hunt of a lifetime only comes once in a lifetime and it deserves to be memorialized as thoughtfully as possible.

Area dentist takes a stand against sweets this Halloween

This Halloween, trick-or-treaters can bring their excess candy to Summit Dental Care, 285 Canyon Dr. in Twin Falls, and exchange it for $1 per pound.

Dr. Bryce Barfuss is leading this anti-decay movement by giving away dollars and electric glowing toothbrushes in exchange for cavity-provoking candy.

"Ditch the candy, that's what we're saying," Barfuss said in a press release.

"Visiting your dentist twice a year and brushing daily are great preventative measures, but doing away with excess sweets altogether would really give your teeth a healthy boost."

Global sugar consumption for kids increases by about 2 percent annually and currently sits at 50 million tons per year, according to Barfuss. That means parents need to be sure their kids' teeth are being cared for more than ever.

Candy will be collected from 4 to 6 p.m. at Summit Dental Care on Nov. 1, the day after Halloween. The candy must be unopened, with no bite marks. All that's collected will be shipped to troops overseas.

I'm in excellent shape.

Can you give me any suggestions?

DEAR READER: There are a number of common causes for weight loss, but you don't appear to fit the norm. They include malnutrition, depression, chronic diarrhea, drug use, cancer, excessive alcohol consumption, eating disorders and loss of appetite. One thing that might be an issue is a dental problem or mouth ulcers. Should you have ill-fitting dentures or canker sores, this might be addressed. If you faint or feel lightheaded, sweat excessively, have increased thirst, palpitations, have hair loss, or are on laxatives or diuretics, these issues, too, might be considered. They may lead to an underlying cause that your physician has not addressed.

You might consider speaking with your doctor regarding a nutritional assessment and making sure that you have had complete laboratory analysis. A vegetarian diet is commonly a healthful one and far better than consuming fast foods on a regular basis. You might choose to speak with a dietician at your local hospital for some fine-tuning that will allow your weight to stabilize.

You apparently are burning more calories than you are consuming. A way around this is to supplement your meals with snacks throughout the day. Granola bars, fruit and raw vegetables would be good choices.

I don't know what your breakfast consists of, but you might consider making your own cereal with a variety of nuts, cranberries, honey and raisins. Top it with skim milk, and have a glass of orange juice and tea or black coffee.

There are countless ways of incorporating good foods into your diet without packing on the pounds, but it may take a little preparation on your part to make

COMMUNITY NEWS

Free dental sealants for Jerome Middle School students

Beginning today, Jerome Middle School seventh- and eighth-graders can receive free dental sealants to help prevent cavities.

Dental sealants fill the deep grooves of a child's back teeth, where 90 percent of children's cavities occur. The sealants are painless to apply and can last several years or more. Delta Dental of Idaho provides sealants on-site at schools serving low-income families as part of its community outreach program.

The Delta Dental Sealant Clinic will be held through Nov. 19 at Jerome Middle School. To receive this free cavity-prevention treatment, children must have a parent or guardian sign a health history and permission form, which was sent home with students early this month and must be returned to the school by the date the service is provided. Additional permission forms are available at the school.

He was born Aug. 27, 1935. Manfred was the sixth of 10 children born to Charlotte Zimmermann and the Rev. Markus Berndt in Eau Claire, Wis. They were Lutheran missionaries serving in Argentina, and Manfred was born on their furlough to the United States. Manfred spent the first years of his life in Argentina until the family moved to Wisconsin when he was 13. He was known as "Pastor" to most and as "Opa" to his family.

Manfred was born to serve the Lord. He went to seminary to become a pastor and, in his last year, he met the love of his life, a cute little German girl named Jutta Struckmeyer. They married June 17, 1961, and moved to Hong Kong, where he was president of the Hong Kong Seminary and he and Jutta raised four children. He received his doctorate in theology in 1970. In 1977, the family moved to Pocatello, Idaho, where Manfred was challenged to bring life to Grace Lutheran Church. He became a part-time pastor at Valley of Peace Lutheran Church in Hailey until his retirement in 2006. One of his greatest passions was sharing his love for his wife and his Lord through Marriage Encounter ministries. For 32 years, they led Marriage Encounter weekends until their retirement just a few weeks ago.

He was preceded in death by his parents; his brother, the Rev. Herbert Berndt; and his sister, Dr. Erna Kelley.

Hans Berndt, Margarita Berndt, Martin (Heidi) Berndt, the Rev. Leander (Joyce) Berndt, Dr. Theodore (Nancy) Berndt, Dorothy (Bill) Fletcher and Dr. Ernst (Joan) Berndt; and many, many nieces and nephews. We will miss you, Opa, but we know you are with the Lord in eternal glory!

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23, at Grace Lutheran Church, 1350 Baldy Ave. in Pocatello, presided by Pastor Jonathan Dinger. A second memorial service will be held at Valley of Peace Lutheran Church at a later date.

Officials knew early about shipments

Otter, Wasden, Ysursa OK'd plan to pay officers to accompany refinery equipment

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's top three elected officials voted unanimously to approve a plan to pay state patrol officers to accompany huge loads of oil refinery equipment across northern Idaho a year before public meetings were held to discuss the shipments.

The Spokesman-Review reports that state records show the Idaho Board of Examiners approved the overtime plan for officers in June 2009 that involved Exxon Mobil Corp. moving 207 mammoth loads through northern Idaho on U.S. Highway 12 and then through Montana to reach the Kearl Oil Sands in Alberta, Canada.

The board includes Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, Attorney General Lawrence Wasden, and Secretary of State Ben Ysursa.

Ysursa told the newspaper that the decision last year was similar to others the board sometimes makes to pre-approve overtime for state police and that the request didn't draw special attention from the board.

"I really don't have a lot of knowledge about it to say much, other than certain projects we pre-approve for overtime for state police, and that's what we did here," Ysursa said. "Knowing now what happened then, maybe there would've been more discussion about it, but it wasn't even on our radar screen back then."

A second oil company, ConocoPhillips, wants to use the route to move four coke drums — huge pressure vessels that refineries use to make gasoline and coke — to its operations in Billings, Mont.

In March 2010, the Board of Examiners approved a request from the Idaho State Police for overtime to accompany those shipments across Idaho.

Those shipments, though, have been blocked by a lawsuit after a judge ruled the Idaho Transportation Department violated its own regulations in issuing the permits. The court said the agency didn't adequately consider concerns about both lanes of the two-lane route being blocked by the shipments.

The decision was appealed and the Idaho Supreme Court is deciding if the issuance of a state permit will imperil the safety of residents along the highway and also the economy of the region.

Environmental groups and some local residents along the highway have been trying to prevent the oil company shipments, contending they will turn the spectacular mountain highway into a permanent industrial route.

Jeff Stratten, spokesman for the Idaho Transportation Department, said Idaho doesn't require hearings or meetings for over-size load permits. But he said the agency decided to hold meetings on the ExxonMobil plan because of the size and number of loads being proposed.

Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, opposes the shipments. She said the discussion should have started sooner.

"It needed much more transparency and debate," she told the newspaper. "They've known about this for a long time, and the fact that they haven't talked about it is troublesome."

Tamarack faces lease deadline

BOISE — As Tamarack Resort scrambles to find a buyer, the clock is ticking on the failed Idaho vacation getaway's lease of 1,200 acres of state land where most of its ski lifts are located.

Tamarack has until Nov. 5 to pay Idaho $250,000 for the lease, which was due last January. If the November deadline passes, creditors led by Credit Suisse Group would get another 15 days to pay Idaho.

If nobody covers the lease, it would terminate. On Tuesday, U.S.

Bankruptcy Judge Terry Myers rejected a proposed $2 million loan to prop up Tamarack and help it find a buyer, ruling the Credit Suisse-led proposal was likely to default and had the potential to further hurt those already owed millions after the resort's 2008 collapse.

A portion of the $2 million had been earmarked to pay the lease with Idaho.

Homeowners said Wednesday they are still counting on the lease being brought current to bolster their separate plan to operate skiing starting Dec. 20.

Salazar OKs solar plant for public land

BARSTOW — Interior Secretary Ken Salazar has approved a big solar energy plant in the Mojave Desert, making it the fifth such project on western U.S. public lands to win federal authorization.

Salazar's approval Wednesday authorizes the Bureau of Land Management to offer Tessera Solar use of more than 4,600 acres for 30 years to build the Calico Solar Project.

The Interior Department says the 663.5-megawatt project could power 200,000 to 500,000 homes.

Houston-based Tessera originally sought more than 8,200 acres, but the BLM wanted to limit impacts on the endangered desert tortoise.

Car linked to bank robbery crashes west of Nampa

BOISE (AP) — Police say a high-speed pursuit of a suspect in a Boise bank robbery ended in a crash west of Nampa. Two people were taken to the hospital.

Officials say a woman robbed Key Bank in southeast Boise at 2:10 p.m. Wednesday.

About 20 minutes later, an officer spotted a car speeding westbound on Interstate 84 matching the description of the one connected to the bank robbery — a silver Mazda RX8 with Nevada plates.

Law enforcement officers pursued the vehicle until it exited the interstate. Nampa police took over and the chase continued another eight miles until the driver lost control.

JOE JASZEWSKI/Idaho Statesman

A car linked to a bank robbery reported in Boise smashed into the backyard of a residence in Canyon County near Highway 55 on Wednesday after a high speed pursuit by police.

The car came to rest on its roof on a shed in someone's backyard.

A man and a woman that were in the vehicle were taken to the hospital. Their conditions were not immediately available.

Twin Falls harriers sweep region titles

Harris, Chojnacky cap dominating seasons

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Amanda Ward dominated her freshman year. Approaching the district cross country meet for the final time, the Twin Falls senior had even more satisfying goals.

Ward achieved them in the Class 4A District IV championship meet at the College of Southern Idaho on Wednesday, breaking up Jerome's bid for a 1-2-3 finish by placing third and leading the Bruins to the team title by seven points over the Tigers.

"We've been on and off with Jerome the last few races and they've beaten us (in the team standings)," Ward said. "I just wanted to break up the top three and have us win our third team title in a row."

The Bruins placed five runners inside the top nine and had nine cross the finish line in the space of 12 runners from third to 14th place, including two soccer players who voluntarily missed the bus to Post Falls so they could help run Twin Falls to a cross country title.

Almost immediately after the finish, Claire Goss and

Chojnacky

Harris

Isabel von Zastrow hopped in a car to the airport to link up with their soccer teammates ahead of today's opening round of the state tournament.

Jerome's Mackenzie Chojnacky dominated yet again, finishing 34 seconds ahead of teammate Mikesell Clegg. While the victory raised the prospects of Chojnacky having a good showing at state, she said she was going to enjoy the final cross country race of her high-school career.

"If I don't collapse at the end I guess I didn't try hard enough," she said with a laugh. "I'm not worried about placing at the state meet. I just want to do my personal best and go as hard as I can."

The boys race was similarly predictable. Erik Harris cruised through the course to win by almost half a minute over teammate Karl Lundgren. Including those two, Twin Falls placed three in the top four and four in the top seven as it comfortably won the team title over Wood River.

BULLDOGS BEST BUHL

Kimberly claims SCIC title

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

With two evenly matched volleyball teams pounding the ball at each other in the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference championship match, it was hard to say which of the two, Kimberly or Buhl, was the better team. The Bulldogs managed to battle back from a two-set deficit to force a fifth set and eventually won the war 8-25, 23-25, 26-24, 25-22, 18-16.

But a block here or a kill there, and the outcome could have been reversed. With the district title, Kimberly advances to the Class 3A state tournament Oct. 29-30 in Wendell.

"Buhl is an amazing team," said Kimberly senior Kalie Wright, who had 10 kills and 27 digs. "They made us play great."

After the Indians beat top-seeded Filer to reach the championship game, Buhl rode its high level of momentum to wins in the first two sets. But Kimberly regrouped.

"Buhl came out and played great," said Kimberly coach Lawrence Pfefferle. "We were lucky — we got some tips that fell our way. Our passing left something to be desired. Taylor Sievers played great at the net and Kylie Haskell played a steady back row."

In the fifth set, Kimberly led 12-4 before Kendyl Hamilton

Bruins try to end skid vs. Minico

The seniors on Twin Falls football team enjoyed a Great Basin Conference championship and a third-place finish in the Class 4A tournament last year and will add another Great 8 playoff berth this year.

A good two years of football accomplishments.

But their resume is still missing one item — beating Minico.

Twin Falls hasn't beaten Minico since 2005, when the Bruins delivered a 46-7 beatdown.

Since then, it's either been a blowout or a nail-biter.

Last year, a T.J. Ellis interception in the endzone and a missed extra point doomed the Bruins in the 14-13 loss in Rupert. Though they had already won a share of the first-ever GBC title, coach Allyn Reynolds said after the game, "We didn't play like champions tonight."

In 2007, Twin Falls fell

Stephen Meyers

23-21 to a Minico team which finished the regular season ranked No. 1 in the Class 4A media poll.

The 2008 and 2006 matchups were blowouts.

The Bruins lost 28-7 in 2008 and luckily this year's seniors weren't around for the 2006 season. The Bruins didn't beat anybody that year and lost 20-7 to Minico en route to a forgettable 0-9 season.

But this season, the Bruins are undefeated in GBC play, full of confidence and headed to the Great 8. Could this be the year Twin Falls jumps over the hurdle and defeats Minico?

"I think it's going to be all champions tonight."

Idaho defense trying to regain its swagger

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — From the moment trends started to crystallize in spring camp through the first three weeks of the season, the Idaho Vandals were sure of one thing about their defense: It was playing with a boldness and energy that had been absent for years.

The new-look defensive mentality was evident for a while. But somewhere between the second half of a numbing loss to Colorado State and last week's meltdown at Louisiana Tech, the defense's confidence has given way to a flurry of questions.

"We've got to play with a swagger," safety Shiloh Keo said. "That's one thing we started developing this past spring is a swagger, a mentality out here on this field that hey, whoever we face — whether it's our own team or an opponent — you're not going to gain a yard on us. That's one thing that we need to bring back."

"I think it's gone away a little bit the past few weeks really."

The 3-3 Vandals started the season by shutting out North Dakota, offered hints of promise at Nebraska and held UNLV to 187 yards and a late touchdown. But in the last three weeks, they've allowed 32.3 points a game.

Defensive coordinator Mark Criner said much of the inconsistency is related to three T's: tackling, turnovers and third downs. Outside of forcing fumbles, the Idaho defense didn't receive high marks from coaches in any of those categories after the 48-35 drubbing at Louisiana Tech.

"Quite frankly, how do we tackle so well against Nebraska and we don't against La. Tech?" Criner said. "That's the magic question. Our jobs depend on 18-year-old kids, 18- to 21-year-old kids. That's the frustrating part about it too. They have lives too. If they're not totally focused, I don't think you have a totally great football player."

Mushers hang on for Northside title

Dietrich punches state ticket

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

CAREY — Camas County and Dietrich have forged one of the best volleyball rivalries in the state, and it shows no signs of cooling off anytime soon.

Led by Katelyn Peterson's 24 kills, Camas County outlasted Dietrich in five sets Wednesday to win the Northside Conference volleyball tournament championship.

"We've had three goals this season," said Mushers coach Shelli Schroeder. "Undefeated in the conference, district champions and state champions."

Camas County's Katelyn Peterson celebrates the Mushers' Northside Conference volleyball tournament championship Wednesday at Carey High School.

RYAN HOWE/Times-News

Check off the first two. The third could be realized next week as the defending state champion Mushers advance to the Class 1A Division II state tournament Oct. 29-30 at Burley High School.

Dietrich will also beat there after beating Lighthouse Christian to finish as runner-up in the tournament and punch its ticket to state.

In the title match, momentum swung back and forth throughout, and the fifth set was a thriller as Camas County won 20-25, 27-25, 25-18, 14-25, 15-13.

"It takes some physical stamina to continue jumping and diving after the ball," said Schroeder.

"Where the mental toughness comes in is when it's 11 to 11 and you're going to 15 and the other team has the serve."

That's exactly what the Mushers overcame, as freshman Carlie Strom had three of her six kills during the final stretch, and Peterson made two big plays at the net to win the title.

Stephanie Moore had 12 kills, Sierra Sabin had 53 digs and Larissa Stewart had 43 assists for Camas, which beat Dietrich for the third time this season — which happens to be the Blue Devils' only losses.

"It was what we expected it to be with Dietrich," Schroeder said. "Beating the same team three times in a season was going to be tough."

Indeed it was. Led by more than 40 assists by setter Jessica Perron, Dietrich took the first set and then

Crane, Wilsey lead Kimberly to 3A team titles

McHan, Dalton win 2A races

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

A glance at the top 10 finishers from District IV Class 3A race Wednesday reveals plenty of Kimberly and Buhl runners.

The two teams went toe-to-toe, each placing at least four runners in the top 10, but it was Kimberly's fifth runner, Skyler Crystal's 10th-place finish, that clinched the district title for the Bulldogs with 27 points to Buhl's 30.

"We knew going in it was going to be close," said Kimberly coach David Emerson.

Kimberly's Brian Crane won in a time of 17 minutes, 23 seconds, ahead of teammate Wesley Kelly who finished in 17:33.

The Buhl trio of Dylan Jacobson, Caleb Vanhoozer and Sam Loveless followed and Kimberly and Buhl alternated runners sixth through eighth and ran the entire race jockeying for position.

"Today we just stepped up. The entire team ran great and came through when we needed them. This feels awesome," Crane said.

Both Kimberly and Buhl will travel to the Class 3A state race Oct. 30 in Soda Springs.

Another Kimberly runner, Halie Wilsey, ran the race of her life with new-found expectations.

With her team's top runner Taliya Murphy in Indianapolis, Ind., for FFA nationals, Wilsey stepped into the No. 1 role.

She responded by winning the district championship in a time of 22:00, more than two minutes ahead of her nearest competitor.

"I was really nervous

Crane

McHan

before the race, but once it started I used that adrenaline rush to just push the entire race," Wilsey said. "I'm really excited for state."

Wilsey will bring her teammates along as the Bulldogs dominated the race, winning the district championship with 24 points, placing six runners in the top 10.

Filer finished second with 51 points and also qualified for the state meet.

Dietrich's Ellie Dalton is getting her new pair of cowboy boots after her win in the District IV 2A race.

Dalton's mother made a bet with her that if she won the race she would buy her a new pair of boots. Dalton used a late kick to pull away from Richfield's Sasha Kent to win in a time of 19:33.

Dalton and Kent are very familiar with each other as Kent had beaten Dalton every year since they were freshman.

"I had pretty good motivation today," Dalton said. "It feels great to finally beat Sasha. We've been going at it for a long time and it's been my dream the past three years to beat her."

Gooding won the team title with 33 points, led by Rachel Youren, Ashley Bullers and Keely Pickens' top-10 finishes.

The Community School finished second and will join the Senators at the state meet.

On the boys side, Mike

McHan continued his dominance in the 2A ranks, easily winning the district title in a time of 17:17 — 27 seconds ahead of second place.

"I felt pretty good most of the race and was just trying to push myself as hard as I could," said McHan, who is aiming for a Class 2A state championship after finishing second the past two years.

Declo won the team title with 27 points, while Gooding and the Community School finished second and third respectively to all clinch a berth to the state meet.

Senators take Canyon crown

GOODING — Nothing less than expected.

With two volleyball teams that had battled throughout the season for the top spot, things would not end quickly.

Forced to a second championship match, and after three hours on the court, Gooding welcomed itself back into the Canyon Conference by defeating Declo 25-14, 25-18, 23-25, 25-10 for the Class 2A District IV championship. The Senators will be part of the state tournament for the first time since 2005.

"We were not going to leave this gym without the district championship," said Gooding senior Angela Vitek, who led the Senators with 16 kills in the final match.

A scrappy Hornet team started the day defeating Glenss Ferry in four sets. Then they swept host Gooding 28-26, 25-22, 25-18 to force the second title match. But they ran out of gas after playing for over five hours.

"Physically we were there. We fell too far behind and couldn't get back in the swing of things," said Declo coach Kerl Wilson.

The Hornets will take on the runner-up from District VI at 7 p.m. Saturday at American Falls High School in a state play-in match.

In their first match Wednesday, Declo had the Senators running around the net for the ball, often tipping it over the net to find the floor. But the Senators were ready in the rematch.

"Gooding covered the floor well," said Wilson.

The Senators stormed out to a 7-0 advantage in Game 1 and won going away. Vitek led the way with six kills, including the set winner.

Declo led early in the second set, but the constant pressure by Gooding was too much. Allison Flora (seven kills) and Sue Erickson (11 kills) stepped up for the Senators.

The Hornets found the energy to take Game 3 25-23, but could not hold back Gooding, which dominated the fourth set 25-10.

Declo was led by Keva Robinson (10 kills) and Kaylee Holmstead (seven kills).

The difference was simple according to Vitek.

"Intensity. We were determined and everybody wanted it," she said.

In the early match, Declo rallied in Set 1 behind eight kills from Robinson. Robinson had 14 of the Hornets 44 kills in the win and back-to-back kills by Holmstead and Sydney Webb sealed Declo's 28-26 win in the first set.

The Senators jumped out in Game 2 behind a quartet of kills by Vitek, but Declo dinked its way back to a 21-21 tie. Holmstead, who finished with 10 kills and five blocks, found he floor two straight times during battles at the net as Declo took the set 25-22.

The Hornets continued to dominate and grabbed the biggest lead of the night at match point as libero Tenesia Schroeder sent a shot over the net that found the floor.

DECLO 3, GLENS FERRY 1

The Hornets struggled early but defeated Glenss Ferry 15-25, 25-15, 25-13, 25-13 to build momentum for the title matches.

"That was our warm-up game," said Wilson. "We knew we couldn't look past Glenss Ferry. We were playing not to lose. I told them to loosen up and play our game. They got the job done."

The team tallied 29 kills, with Holmstead leading the way with 10. Robinson collected seven kills along with four of the Hornets' 10 aces.

CSI hopes to send sophs off in style

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team has one goal to achieve this week: send off its sophomores with six good sets in their final home weekend.

Five sophomores will take to their home court for the final time Saturday against Scenic West Athletic Conference bottom-feeder Colorado Northwestern. A sixth player, redshirt freshman Ashleigh Pollard, could do the same, though she has another year of JUCO eligibility remaining.

But as the SWAC grind reaches its end, the focus narrows. CSI coach Heidi Cartisser said the first hurdle, tonight's opponent Eastern Utah, is the focus before relaxing and enjoying Saturday's sendoff.

"Eastern Utah's going to be a tricky team," Cartisser said, noting that the visiting Golden Eagles defeated perennial SWAC power Salt Lake in five sets last weekend. "It's one at a time from now on."

CSI, which stayed rooted at No. 10 in a largely unchanged NJCAA Division I poll released Wednesday, looks to continue with its new lineup to try and gain chemistry ahead of the region tournament.

That means Alyssa Everett should continue on the right side in the front row, with backup setter Sierra Hansen spelling her in the back row.

20. Mineral Area, Mo.	23-4	3

Others receiving votes: Arizona Western, Dodge City, Kan.; Hillsborough, Fla.; Laredo, Texas; Missouri State-West Plains, Paris, Texas; Pratt, Kan.; Seminole State, Okla.

Taylor Wilkinson should continue to start in the middle along with Beth Carey.

"I like that change a lot," Cartisser said. "It's gotten us more production and a better block."

CSI could have its region tournament destination and bracket path confirmed this weekend.

North Idaho holds the hammer, needing two wins in its final four matches to clinch hosting rights. The Cardinals host Colorado Northwestern tonight and Eastern Utah on Saturday before visiting Snow and Salt Lake next week.

Snow can lock itself and CSI into the second and third seeds, with the final order yet to be determined, if North Idaho and CSI sweep the weekend and the Badgers win on the road at Salt Lake tonight.

served eight straight points to tie it. Trailing 16-15, the Bulldogs scored three straight points to claim the title.

Sievers finished with a team-high nine blocks and junior libero Haskell recorded 19 digs.

"Playing the back row is the best because it is so intense and you have to keep moving all the time," said Haskell.

For the runner-up Indians, Katherine Hunter led with 14 kills and Morgan Pearson chipped in 13. Annie Lauda added nine kills and six blocks and Arly Pettinger had seven kills and four blocks. Cassidee Kippes collected 36 assists.

"Not really one thing we could have done different," said Buhl coach Denny Moretto. "We were up for three matches. The girls played their guts out and never quit. They followed our game plan and tried to keep from getting too excited and played level."

BUHL 3, FILER 0

There was too much Buhl defense and not enough Filer offense as the No. 3 Indians eliminated No. 1 Filer 25-20, 25-20, 25-18.

"Our defense was on fire in the third game," said Moretto. "Our bench really came through and did well, especially Whitney Amoth, who went in cold and had some good hits and blocks."

The Buhl offense was led by junior setter Kippes' 27 assists and Hunter's eight kills. Kendyl Hamilton led the defense with four blocks and Hunter had 10 digs.

"We just didn't execute and we let the pressure get to us," said Filer coach Ed Richards. "We weren't really very aggressive. We did have a lot of good attacks but Buhl made some good digs, especially Hunter."

Buhl's Katherine Hunter (10) celebrates a point with teammates as they take on Kimberly Wednesday night during the SCIC volleyball tournament.

Mackenzie Jasper and Audrey Croy each had 10 kills and Leah Schaal dished out 24 assists for Filer. Moriah Boone played a tough back row, recording 15 digs.

appeared to have all the momentum heading into the final set after dominating the fourth 25-14.

"With these two teams, the name of the game is passing. Whoever was passing better was able to attack," said Dietrich coach Traci Perron.

Yoshira McDaniel and Moriah Dill led Dietrich in hitting with more than 30 kills combined.

DIETRICH 3, LIGHTHOUSE CHRISTIAN 1

Dietrich finished as the tournament's runner-up, downing Lighthouse Christian 25-12, 18-25, 25-18, 25-21.

LIGHTHOUSE CHRISTIAN 3, CASTLEFORD 0

Lighthouse Christian reached the second-place match by eliminating Castleford 25-22, 25-18, 25-15.

The Lions spread the ball around well, with Becca Storm recording six kills, while Alex VerHoeven and Andrea Helman each had five kills.

Castleford was led by Roxanne Hill's 27 digs. Lisa Cantu had eight assists and Jessica Welch had six kills.

"Tonight they made a lot of errors, but they kept fighting," Castleford coach Oscar Flores said of his team. "A lot of teams didn't bank on us doing much, and to finish where we're at is really respectful. I think they earned the respect of the district and I'm proud of them."

Yankees stay alive, beat Rangers

NEW YORK (AP) — They were facing the end of their season and a miserable winter after that.

Not to worry, Joe Girardi said. Speaking in the wee hours before his players went home for a few hours sleep ahead of Game 5, the New York Yankees manager implored them not to give up.

“That was huge,” CC Sabathia said. “Just having us be able to relax and not panic.”

No panic here. Sabathia pitched like a champion, and the Yankees are heading for Texas.

Nick Swisher and Robinson Cano hit consecutive homers to build an early cushion, Sabathia made the lead stand up and the Yankees beat the Rangers 7-2 Wednesday to close within 3-2 in the AL championship series.

“We’re right where we need to be,” Swisher said.

A late-arriving crowd for the late-afternoon game wondered whether this would be it for the defending World Series champs after Texas outscored them 25-5 while winning three straight.

A difficult comeback? Yes.

Impossible? No.

As Girardi remembered telling his players, “Before we lost the three games in a row, we won four in a row.” He added: “Just look at tomorrow. Win a game tomorrow.”

By the time Curtis Granderson hit an eighth-inning homer for his second RBI of the game, belief among the Yankees was starting to grow.

Now the teams will go deep in the heart of Texas to decide the pennant in the best-of-seven series. When they resume in Arlington for Game 6, Phil Hughes starts for the Yankees against Colby Lewis in a rematch of Game 2, won by the Rangers 7-2.

Texas may be holding the ultimate postseason ace in the hole: Cliff Lee would start a Game 7 against Andy Pettitte.

“Who cares about Cliff going in Game 7?” Texas right fielder Jeff Francoeur said. “We’ve got a game to win in Game 6.”

Still, Lee’s 7-0 postseason record is on their minds. In the 50th anniversary of a franchise that has never reached the World Series, Texas remains one win away.

“We’re in a good position,” second baseman Ian Kinsler said.

New York is trying to overcome its first 3-1 postseason deficit since 1958. After the LCS went to a best-of-seven format, 24 of the 30 previous teams to take 3-1 series leads have won pennants.

Uribe's sac fly lifts Giants to win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Juan Uribe hit a game-ending sacrifice fly off reliever Roy Oswalt with one out in the ninth inning and the San Francisco Giants moved within one win of the World Series, beating the Philadelphia Phillies 6-5 Wednesday night for a 3-1 lead in the NL championship series.

Aubrey Huff singled with one out in the ninth and took third when Buster Posey singled for his fourth hit of the game. Uribe hit a medium-deep fly, leaving left fielder Ben Francisco with no chance to get the sliding Huff.

The Phillies, the two-time defending NL champions with the best record in the majors this year, are suddenly on the brink of elimination. They’ll send Roy Halladay against Tim Lincecum in Game 5 Thursday night — it’s a rematch of aces that Lincecum won in the opener.

Going to Oswalt to begin the ninth backed manager Charlie Manuel’s words this was his club’s biggest game yet this year. Oswalt is one of the majors’ top starters and beat the Giants in Game 2. He’s made only a few relief appearances in the last several years, including a stint in the 2004 NLCS for Houston.

Uribe, sore left wrist and all that kept him out of the starting lineup, entered at shortstop in the top of the ninth. He immediately picked up a hard one-hopper by pinch-hitter Ross Gload in the hole and made a strong throw while falling away for the out.

Major league saves Brian Wilson pitched a perfect ninth for the win.

After Freddy Sanchez lined out to right to start the bottom half, Huff and Posey singled. Phillies right fielder Jayson Werth made a nice sliding stop on the warning track to keep Huff from scoring.

Then came Uribe, a quiet 1 for 7 in the NLCS before this one. On a 1-1 pitch, he claimed he got hit in the hand by Oswalt’s fastball, but plate umpire Wally Bell said it was a foul.

Uribe wound up with the game-winner moments later, leaving the Giants just one victory shy of reaching the World Series for the first time in eight years.

Posey starred at the plate and behind it, too. He made a great play at the plate to save a run earlier, neatly handling a short hop and tagging out Carlos Ruiz at the plate.

IDAHO STATE HIGH SCHOOL SOCCER CHAMPIONSHIPS

Class 4A boys

Burley opens with high-flying Bishop Kelly, a program that headed back toward the level it enjoyed as a juggernaut before soccer became a sanctioned sport. But the Bobcats too are playing well and seem to have hit their stride at the right time. A tight defense has led to seven draws on the season, but Burley's technical ability, and the valuable asset of a target man in senior forward Alex Greener, should cause some concern for opponents down the stretch.

Wood River opens with District VI champ Bonneville, which is aiming to improve on its runner-up finish from a year ago. The Wolverines won their first district title since moving to Class 4A in 2004 by shocking Jerome, and they handed the Tigers two of their three losses. A healthy mix of power and technique will make this team a handful for anyone.

Burley coach Wes Nyblade: "I think we match up well with everyone this year because our league was one of the toughest in the state this year. ... Our league this year was so close and every game was so competitive that I think that's going to set us up well."

Wood River coach Luis Monjaras: "We have one more year of (state) experience. Last year most of the kids played scared in the first round of state and this year they're really pumped up and believe they can be a state contending team."

Bashore's breakdown: I really like the way Burley is coming into form at the right time. Playing Bishop Kelly anytime, much less in the first round, is no picnic. But the Bobcats showed in the district tournament that they're no slouches and will swiftly drop the hammer if their opponents aren't careful. I think Bonneville has enough to nip past Wood River in the first round, but it will definitely be tight. I think it'll be an all 'B' final with Burley just edging Bonneville for it all. Wood River falls in the consolation game to an angry Bishop Kelly side.

Class 4A girls

Twin Falls' reward for making the state tournament is a date with undefeated Bishop Kelly in the first round. While that's a tough draw for the Bruins, they can hang their hat on a summer-league victory over the Knights. They'll have to dig deep and ride that confidence if they're to spring the upset. This is the third straight state trip for Twin Falls, which hopes to finally come home with a trophy.

Wood River also gets an unbeaten, playing Hillcrest right out of the chutes. The Wolverines played three of the other seven teams in the draw during the regular season, beating Twin Falls twice and Century once. Tanner Dredge once again scored for fun during the regular season, but the Wolverines are anxious to prove they're anything but a one-girl show as they chase the title.

Twin Falls coach Katie Kauffman: "I feel pretty good opening up against Bishop Kelly. We played them in the summer and played well against them. I think the girls are feeling pretty good going into the state tournament. We've got some pretty high expectations for ourselves."

Wood River coach Jenni Conrad: "We're actually excited about the draw. I think we're going in strong mentally and physically and girls will be up for the challenge. ... Last year we were there physically, but not mentally. This year we've got the whole package. I think we're definitely a contender."

Bashore's breakdown: Both District IV teams have tough sledding in their first-round matches. Twin Falls feels this is its best chance to trophy, but it's going to have to be the consolation trophy or nothing as Bishop Kelly may be simply too good. The Bruins have enough about them to get that done, while Wood River will make a serious run at the title. But I think they end up watching Bishop Kelly hoist the trophy.

Class 3A boys

Gooding took care of business and earned the right to defend its 2009 championship, but it won't be an easy road. South Fremont should prove tricky, while a potential fourth matchup with Wendell looms in the semifinals — the Trojans won all three previous battles. But the Senators can be counted on making life difficult for anyone who wants to take their crown away.

Wendell opens with a tough matchup with Weiser, which finished third a season ago. But the Trojans have the desired mix of pace, power and technical ability to make them a tough matchup for anyone. As long as they don't come in expecting to walk through the tournament, they have to be considered among the favorites with a defense that allowed 17 goals in 16 matches.

Gooding coach Roger Johnson: "We're just happy to be here. ... (The players are) really working hard and I'm looking forward to the games. We're going to go in confident and we're definitely going to try (to defend our state title). We're not going to give it up easily."

Wendell coach Jonathan Goss: "We're preparing for a tough game against Weiser. They've made it to the state tournament and for that we have to take them very seriously. We feel good about the defense being ready. ... We're happy that some of our players have that experience and we're hoping they're going to come in with the confidence they need to do well."

Bashore's breakdown: It's tough to see any team other than Wendell making it out of the bottom half of the bracket. Gooding has the ability to match its county rival but there's something about the matchup that gives Wendell the edge every time. The Trojans have the physicality to match up with Weiser and the technique to rival highly-skilled teams. The top half of the bracket is loaded, but I still see happy Trojans on Saturday afternoon. Gooding makes a gallant effort to retain its title before settling for third place.

Class 3A girls

Another year, another trip to the state tournament for the Community School. The first round, however, looks to be as big a pitfall as it's been in past years for the Cutthroats. They face Payette, a very good runner-up out of District III and a team that the club from Sun Valley hasn't had a lot of success with over the years. But this is the deepest team the Community School has had in a while and that will pay dividends.

Filer has continued to grind out wins but there's a different level between Sugar-Salem and the rest of District IV. The Wildcats will have their hands full with the Diggers as they try to advance out of the first round for the first time in their program's four-year history. Candra Coelho is a goal machine, but Filer's fate lies in whether it can control the midfield and keep it tight at the back, something it struggled with against the state-caliber Community School outfit.

Community School coach Kelly Feldman: "We're always hopeful. It's tough to start against Payette. We don't have a really good history against them but at the same time we're a totally different team this year."

Filer coach Shane Hild: "We like our chances in that first round. Our thing this year is defense. If we play solid defense and hustle and are first to every ball, we're going to have a chance in any game that we play."

Bashore's breakdown: It's tough to see District IV getting anything out this tournament, to be frank. The Cutthroats play probably the second best team in the field in the opening round and then figure to get another power, Snake River, in the consolation final or Teton in the semifinals, win or lose.

Still, the Cutthroats will be happy to hoist any color trophy and could nip a win in the consolation final. Filer could certainly get a win against a similar Sugar-Salem team but will find tough going against Teton in the third-place game.

Criner and Idaho coach Robb Akey this week questioned their players' mindset against the Bulldogs, particularly after the Vandals gave up a touchdown on fourth down to relinquish the lead late in the second quarter.

"When we play physical and we play flying around with confidence, we're good," Akey said. "When we don't play that way, that has been when we have not performed well."

The defense has been dominant at times this season. Yet the progress from 2009 has been countered by puzzling second-half efforts against CSU and La. Tech, both of which had offenses that were floundering before playing Idaho.

Saturday, the Vandals will host New Mexico State, an opponent that comes to Moscow at an ideal time for the Idaho defense. The Aggies (1-5) are 118th out of 120 FBS teams in scoring offense and 116th in total offense.

But the Vandals will have to rebound without senior cornerback Isaac Butts, a starter who did not play at Louisiana Tech and was dismissed from the team for undisclosed reasons.

"We lost a guy and nobody wants to lose a guy that has played a lot and was getting better and better," Criner said. "... It's unfortunate that he's not going to be with us. But, hey, move forward and go from there."

RUNNING GAME IN A SLUMP
The Vandals have had no problem picking up chunks of yardage with the Nate Enderle-led passing attack. But their running game has regressed from 165 yards per game last year to an average of less than 90 yards this season.

The struggles have been most glaring in short-yardage situations.

"We didn't move the line of scrimmage (last week)," Akey said. "Earl Campbell running through that wall, it's going to be hard to bang through that dang thing. We've got to get it moved out a little bit better."

AKEY'S TAKE ON BSU

Akey told a Boise radio station on Wednesday that he was one of 11 members of the USA Today coaches poll to put Boise State No. 1 on his ballot. But that shouldn't come as a huge surprise — Akey, when asked, has been spoken glowingly of the Broncos this season.

"This football team they have now is probably the best they have had in the history of that school," he said.

about our mentality. The last four years, they've been the king of the conference," said senior Jayson Welker. "We need to get after those guys."

Welker, along with Ellis, linebacker Brady Barton, defensive back Tyler Wolters and running backs Josh Settlemoir and Ricky Akridge will have to direct the Bruins on Friday with their senior leadership.

Said Akridge: "Anytime a team beats you four years in a row it's frustrating. It's not so much a mental hurdle, we just need to execute and string together four quarters."

Four quarters. That's all this year's seniors have left against Minico.

Forty-eight minutes to fill the gaping hole on that resume.

Titles

"I just really wanted to lead this team to a title," Harris said. "Everyone did a really good job, and if we can step it up a little more I think we can do well at state."

The best run of all came from fellow Bruin Matt Schenk, who finished seventh despite losing one of his shoes early in the race. Schenk and another runner clipped feet, and the other runner's spikes knocked the shoe off Schenk's foot.

With no time to waste in grabbing the missing footwear, Schenk pushed through the pain barrier and came home strong with Ben Stout of Wood River breathing down his neck.

"Picking up the shoe wasn't worth it ... you just have to ignore the pain and keep going," said Schenk, examining his blistered foot through a pair of holes worn into the sock. "I just had to keep telling myself to fight through it."

The top three teams from each side (the Twin Falls, Jerome, Wood River girls and the Twin Falls, Wood River and Burley boys) plus individuals among the top 14 scoring runners qualified for the state meet next Saturday in Soda Springs.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"The man is a perfect stone. We might boil him in the pig-market, and we should get no word out of him."
— Victor Hugo

As a big, if not especially bad, Wolff, I've always had a remarkably soft spot for the tormentor of the three little pigs. Let's look at them in action here, where each one of them declares six hearts on the challenging trump lead. Little piggy number one wins the trump in dummy, leads to his diamond ace, ruffs a diamond, and crosses to the club ace to ruff a second diamond, then leads a second club. He is more hurt than surprised when East ruffs in and cashes his spade ace for down one.

Little piggy number two exerts a trifle more diligence. He wins the trump lead, takes his diamond ace, ruffs a diamond and crosses back to hand with a top club to ruff a second diamond. So far so good, but now, after cashing dummy's top trump, he leads a low spade from the board, and East steels himself to duck the trick. West wins his spade eight and returns a club. East ruffs, and there is no joy in Pigville.

The third little piggy is made of sterner stuff. Again, play starts with a trump lead won in dummy. Declarer cashes both top diamonds, ruffs a diamond low, then crosses to hand with a club to ruff a second diamond. If diamonds had not split, he might need to risk coming back to hand with a club to draw the trumps. As it is, he now exits from dummy by leading the spade king! This prevents the club ruff, unless one defender has the spade ace and five clubs, when declarer was doomed anyway.

ANSWER: Your partner has a maximum overcall, and you have what looks like a good hand for defense. Double two spades — which is not a command, but more of a suggestion to defend. If your partner simply has a good hand and very short spades, he does not have to sit for the double.

Equal Opportunity Provider

IF OCTOBER 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Life is just a bowl of cherries during your year ahead. During November, be sure to maintain a sense of proportion. You have a good business sense, but might take good luck for granted. After the first of the year, you can solidify your position at work or in the career arena with help from those who admire your talents. You can form a solid romantic or business commitment in January and rest assured it will be fulfilling and successful, especially if love and affection are on the menu.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Going rogue is rude. You may need to exert extra effort to control your impulsiveness during the next day or two. Friends might stir up trouble or urge you to take unnecessary chances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid letting suspicions cloud your judgment or letting clouds block the truth. Distance, rather than closeness, lends accuracy to the view. Try to stand back from arguments as you could be off base.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Watch out for verbal misunderstandings and conflicts over differing philosophies. Your good humor is an asset that can lighten social situations but you could briefly be at odds with those closest to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Invite dialog. The more you can learn and the more you learn the better you can deal with it. It is very easy to foster misunderstandings by showing a problem under the carpet.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Truth will always have consequences. Dispel rumors or doubts by deliberately bringing them out into the open. Write down dreams and inspirations. You can act as a bridge between conflicting factions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Know your enemy. An intuitive grasp of business situations and lightening fast reflexes will prevent you from floundering when faced with opposition. Don't spend too much money to impress others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): "No pain, no gain" is no way to live your life. There could be a way to painlessly achieve your goals. The people you are thrown in contact with at the moment might be doing everything the hard way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You want to attain an ideal. Family members, however, may resent being pushed and prodded into the mold you want them to form. Avoid confrontations at home. Do not begin construction or redecorating.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Too much, too soon, too quickly. People have a tendency to jump to conclusions. Take time to weed out well-meant, but somewhat confused, assurances from promises that are reliable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pleasure delayed can turn into pleasure heightened. Your little love light will need to remain glowing on the back burner until you accomplish other objectives. Keep a firm grip on achieving ambitions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take things in stride. A simple favor may be withdrawn if you make too much of a to-do or gush like a geyser. If you expect support or insist on favors from too many people there could be a backlash.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): No good deed goes unpunished. This is a saying that has almost become an urban mantra and at times it is truer than at others. Try not to go to extremes when being kindhearted and generous.
