Carey High School student dies in car crash

Driver's education teacher, second student and other driver injured

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

CAREY — A small town grieved Tuesday after one of its teenagers was killed in a two-car accident on icy roads.

The Carey High School sophomore, whose name was not released Tuesday, was pronounced dead at the scene after the driver's education car he was driving was hit by another car at about 7:30 a.m., just west of the U.S. Highway 20/Idaho Highway 75 intersection near Stanton Crossing.

Three others were injured in the crash, including driver's ed instructor Jeff Mecham. He was transported to St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center near Ketchum, Blaine County School District Superintendent Lonnie Barber said, and later airlifted to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise with a collapsed lung, perforated spleen and liver, and internal bleeding.

Another student, a sophomore sitting behind the driver's seat whose name also was unavailable, was taken by air ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls with a broken hip. She was reported in good condition, awaiting word on whether doctors will need to perform surgery.

The driver of the other car, which struck the driver's education car in the side, was first transported to St. Luke's Wood River and then airlifted to Boise on Tuesday afternoon. That driver's name also was not released Tuesday.

Lt. Jay Davis with the Blaine County Sheriff's Office said the accident is still under investigation. Police want to talk to those involved to help them determine what happened, he said.

But reports already indicate slick roads were a factor. The road was so icy that emergency responders could barely stand up, said Jeff Nevins, assistant fire chief with Wood River Fire and Rescue.

PIZZA and POLITICS

CSI hosts candidate forum for county, legislative hopefuls

By Nick Coltrain

Turnout for the College of Southern Idaho's Meet the Candidates event was strong, at least until the pizza ran out.

The two-hour Tuesday event drew seven candidates — four hoping to head to the state legislature, three vying for the Twin Falls County Commission — but only one incumbent, Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls.

History professor and forum organizer Russ Tremayne said the turnout was strong, especially for a non-presidential election and for a panel featuring only local candidates. Though State Reps. Maxine Bell and Bert Stevenson did not attend, Tremayne said he failed to inform them properly and didn't take it as a snub.

"In the past, I've had 10 or 12 candidates there," Tremayne said of the decade-old event. "When I went to organize the event, I was surprised at the lack of contests."

Senate candidate Lee Heider and incumbent Rep. Leon Smith, both Republicans from Twin Falls and unopposed on November's ticket, also appeared, but aside from brief introductions did not participate in the forum.

The event's first question was directed at the commission candidates from a student who lives in Buhl and is struggling to pay his utility bill and his house payment. Buhl residents pay a minimum of about $130 per month for water and sewer, an increase of about $35 made two years ago. The increase, used to pay for a federal mandate regarding arsenic levels in drinking water, is flat for all water users.

The student asked what the commission candidates plan to do to help with those fees.

Independent candidate Randy Carpenter suggested creating a competitive atmosphere, putting the amount of water used

Labrador hails poll findings

Otter likes his lead, Allred says signals are mixed

By Dan Popkey
Idaho Statesman writer

Idaho's leading gubernatorial candidates met news of a new pre-election poll of voters with measured response on Tuesday, while Idaho's 1st Congressional District candidates offered widely different reactions.

Republican Raul Labrador got a reward for staying up late Monday night — the new poll showing him within 3 percentage points of Democratic 1st District Rep. Walt Minnick, a statistical tie.

"I was so excited I couldn't get to sleep," said Labrador, who went online after midnight to see the results of a poll commissioned by the Times-News and six other newspapers. "The race is getting tighter the more people hear about my message of prosperity and growth."

Minnick declined a request for comment. But his campaign manager, John Foster, raised doubts about the poll.

"This is a cheap poll with flawed methodology," Foster said in an e-mail. "Our internal numbers show the race to be decidedly different, and we remain confident heading into the final week."

Foster said the poll relied on respondents' word that they are registered voters, rather than using voter files; did not properly account for early voters; improperly split Ada County, where the 1st and 2nd congressional districts meet at Cole Road; and did not call cell phones.

Poll respondents: Just bring us new business

Religion, mega-loads not major factors in Idaho voters' decisions

Times-News

Idahoans just want jobs.

We don't care about a candidate's religion, and about a third of us really aren't sure if massive equipment should be ferried across our northern highways. We just want candidates who will put us to work.

A recent poll conducted by the Times-News and six other newspapers shows that 36 percent of poll respondents think that recruiting new business into Idaho should be the state's top priority to boost the economy. While many factors will influence our choices between one candidate or another, fixing Idaho's ailing economy has taken the forefront heading toward Election Day.

The economy

What the poll means: Poll respondents, asked to choose the top priority to boost the state's economy, thought private-sector jobs were the most important. Among six choices, the most popular was recruiting new businesses to the state. Easing regulations on businesses and spending more on colleges and universities both trailed in the poll.

What you should know: Idaho unemployment now stands at 9 percent and the state has lost more than 66,000 jobs since September 2007. "The best single indicator of the state's economy is the level of employment, and it's just not going anywhere," said Boise State University economics professor

Don Holley.

Why you should care: An ailing economy has not only cost thousands of Idahoans their jobs and left many owing more on their homes than they're now worth, it's also reduced state tax revenues and forced cutbacks in public services.

What the poll doesn't say: Pollster Brad Coker of Mason-Dixon Research said people likely favored many or all of the options by large margins, but they were asked to pick one as a top priority. The economy is the top concern of

Cassia County coroner, interim clerk resign

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Two Cassia County officials have turned in their resignations, effective Nov. 5.

Cassia County Republican Central Committee Chairman Wayne Hurst said Interim County Clerk Dee Yeaman gave his resignation to county commissioners last week. Longtime Coroner Paul Young resigned Monday, he said.

The central committee, comprised of 25 precincts with 23 of the positions currently filled, will meet at 8 p.m. Nov. 3 in the Cassia County District Courtroom to nominate three candidates for each position. The meeting is open to the public.

The list will be delivered to county commissioners, who will choose interim replacements for each position. The clerk’s office pays $49,976 a year and the coroner’s office pays $12,000.

It’s not a spider; it’s your imagination

Our house was evacuated last Sunday morning.

Yes, I forgot to close the damper before I built the first fire of the season. And yes, I accidentally made my wife a pot of decaf coffee because I didn’t have my eyes open wide enough to read the label.

That meant we had to go to Starbucks in our bathrobes, but when we got home Victoria saw a spider.

That’s no domestic triviality in our premises. If there’s a spider in the house, my wife isn’t. Same with my stepdaughters. I once had to wade into the middle of a slumber party my youngest daughter was hosting to kill a tiny speck of something nestled in the corner of the ceiling of her bedroom.

Turned out not to be a spider, but a tiny speck of something.

The issue arises again for two reasons. The first is that

DON’T ASK ME

a long, warm fall is coming to a quick end, meaning all manner of eight-legged interlopers are sneaking indoors.

The second reason is that it’s almost Halloween.

For reasons unclear to me, the more plastic, cardboard and candy spiders my wife encounters in the store this time of year, the more actual spiders she thinks she sees in our house.

None of them — even if they were black widows and hobo spiders — are ever close enough to present a clear and present danger to my beloved. Every spider Victoria reports is lurking in some distant, unreachable place.

The apex of the vaulted ceiling in the family room, for example.

Reaching it requires not merely putting the stepladder up on the couch, but carrying a broom. If you stand on the top step of the ladder and lean about three feet to the right, the tip of the broom is in more or less the same ZIP code as the offending arachnid.

Which, not surprisingly, doesn’t intimidate the spider at all.

Lately, I’ve taken to trying a slingshot and spitwads, but a couple of the spitwads stuck on the crown molding and I couldn’t reach to get them off.

(I did actually hit a spider with a spitwad, but the creature simply wove its egg sac around it.)

Still, last summer I took what I thought would be more-effective action. I called an exterminator.

The bug guy sprayed the garage, the crawspace, the attic and all of our trees and shrubs.

“That should take care of it,” he said 90 minutes and $125 later. “You should see those spider webs on your shrubs disappear right away.”

Darned if he wasn’t right. The webs vanished within a couple of days, and all the spiders moved inside.

So whenever I’m in the house these days, I spend a lot of time holding a shoe or a slipper. That’s so at the first “EEEEK” I can either assault the spider or launch a loafer in its general direction.

That explains, of course, why there’s a sneaker up there on the plant shelf. As to why the skylight is smashed, well ...

The spider ducked.

Crash

“There was black ice from the Bellevue Gun Club on down, and there was ice with a crust of snow across the entire road at the scene of the accident,” Nevins said.

While investigators began their work, school officials and students sought to cope with the tragedy.

Carey School Principal John Peck gathered the 109 students in Carey’s seventh through 12th grades in the school auditorium at 8:30 a.m., hoping to ward off rumors. Twenty minutes into the school day, one student had already received a text message about the accident.

Carey’s fifth- and sixth-graders were in Boise, decked out in orange sweat-shirts proclaiming “Carey loves BSU and ESPN” and hoping to get on the sidelines of the Boise State University football game. Peck figured parents of younger children might prefer to explain to their children what had happened in their own way.

“I told the students that one of the things about Carey School is that we’re family and that we laugh together and cry together. And I told them we’re going to have to get through this,” he said.

Barber and Assistant Superintendent John Blackman drove to Carey as soon as they heard about the crash and spent most of Tuesday there, cancelling a special meeting of the school board.

“Everyone was crying. The students were crying. The teachers were crying. We were crying,” Barber said. “It’s difficult because they’re all one big family. But the only thing you can do is help the school grieve.”

After Peck explained what had happened, the students formed into different groups to talk about it with their friends.

“They didn’t hold classes, but they didn’t send them home, either,” Barber said. “You can’t say, ‘Go back to class,’ after something like this happens. Some parents came and got their kids. Some parents came and sat with the kids.”

Students are writing memories and “thinking-of-you” messages to the hospitalized student in order to help her find some kind of closure, Peck said. And the football team has ordered black No. 37 stickers — the number on the deceased student’s football jersey — to wear on their helmets for the remainder of the season.

“He was involved in about everything — the football team, choir. He even had a part in the play next weekend. He was just an all-around good kid,” Peck said of the student, whose family has been in Carey for “a long, long time.”

Mecham, Peck said, has taught at Carey for about six years. A schedule posted on the school’s website had him tabbed to lead a field trip today.

“He cares a lot for the kids. He tries to do the very best for them,” Peck said.

This isn’t the first time this tiny community of 538 has had to deal with such a tragedy. Two Carey students were killed in a car wreck about eight years ago.

Barber said the school district has a crisis team of counselors and social workers ready to go to Carey if needed. And Peck noted the outpouring of support the school has received from the community and other schools.

“We are all in great pain today and are praying for the safe recovery of both of our Blaine County School’s family,” Barber wrote in an e-mail to district staff Tuesday afternoon.

Polling and Research Inc., who conducted the poll for the Times-News and its partner newspapers, has a 30-year track record of credible polling results.

Governor’s race

Republican Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter also declined comment. His campaign spokesman, Ryan Panitz, said Otter’s 22-percentage-point lead over Democrat Keith Allred was similar to internal poll results.

“But we are not taking our foot off the gas,” Panitz said. “The most important thing is getting people out to vote.”

Allred said in an interview, “These aren’t numbers we’re happy to see, but given the range of evidence we’re seeing, I’m not prone to put too much confidence in any one set of data.”

He said Otter’s hovering around 50 percent is “dangerous territory for an incumbent” and “tells you it’s a race in flux.”

Finally, Allred noted that the Republican Governors Association just made a second $200,000 contribution to Otter, and Otter loaned his campaign $206,000. Allred loaned his campaign $115,000 in October.

“Would the Republican Governors Association spend $400,000 and would Butch Otter be loaning himself $200,000 if they really were 22 points ahead?” Allred asked.

Superintendent of public instruction

Incumbent Republican Tom Luna issued a written statement about his 16-percentage-point lead: “This poll is evidence that as people have focused on our results and viewed the debates, we are generating more and more support. Ultimately what counts is what happens on Election Day, so I will continue to work hard.”

Democrat Stan Olson said in an interview, “It shows the election is still a tossup as far as I’m concerned.”

Olson said he expects late momentum on two fronts: concern about what Olson calls Luna’s “phony baloney statistics” on student progress, and advertising by outside groups attacking Olson. “I think that will backfire,” he said.

Americans in polls across the nation.

What people are saying about the poll: Poll participant Gary Hagman, a 60-year-old laid-off construction manager from Dalton Gardens, said, “We have to put the private sector back to work. ... Everybody wants good schools and roads, but it’s better if we start the economy (first) and pay for it as we go.”

— Betsy Z. Russell, Spokesman-Review.

Transportation funding

What the poll means: There’s a lack of broad public support for any single mechanism to increase funding for Idaho highways, with respondents especially wary of higher taxes.

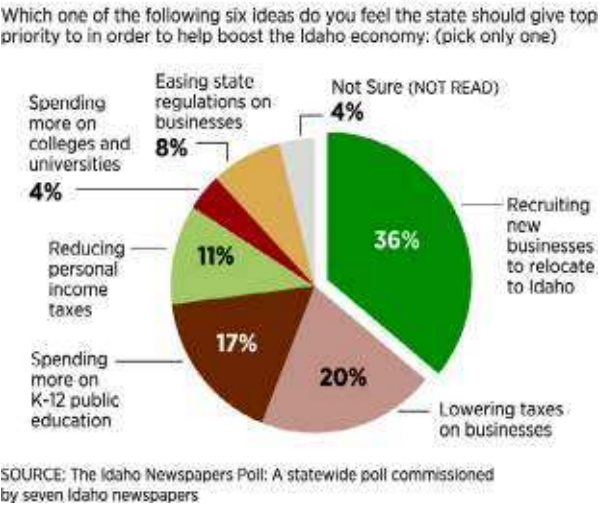

Two of the most frequently discussed options — a higher gasoline tax and increased truck fees — polled the worst.

What you should know: After failing to persuade the Legislature to increase the gas tax and vehicle registration fees in 2009, Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter assembled a 15-member task force to identify highway funding solutions. In July, the panel signaled it was leaning toward a one-cent hike to the gas tax. Its final report is expected by Dec. 1.

Why you should care: Transportation advocates have long argued that transportation revenue hasn’t kept pace with rising costs, and that failure to maintain the state’s highway system will eventually cost taxpayers much more.

What the poll doesn’t say:

How to boost the economy

AAA Idaho spokesman Dave Carlson noted that the poll respondents’ highest-scoring options — do nothing, shift existing revenue and increase heavy trucks fees — don’t directly hit most voters’ pocketbooks. The only funding option that would affect every driver — increase the gas tax — ranked last.

What people are saying about the poll: Poll participant Ken Roth, an 83-year-old Nampa resident and retired J.R. Simplot Co. safety director, said the fuel tax seems like a fair way to fund road work since it reflects use. But he’s concerned by claims that trucks aren’t paying their share.

— Bryan Dooley, Idaho Press-Tribune. The Idaho Statesman’s Cynthia Sewell contributed to this report.

Religion

What the poll means: The majority of respondents said it doesn’t matter if a candidate has a different religious background than their own. Only 3 percent said a candidate’s religion is very important in their decision whether to vote for them.

What you should know: The Republican Otter is a Catholic, while Democratic gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Why you should care: Idaho Falls businessman Frank VanderSloot publicly broached the religion issue during two recent Otter rallies. Allred “is saying basically, ‘So folks, I’m Mormon, so therefore, I’m one of you guys, so vote for me,’” VanderSloot said. Allred’s campaign team denied he plays up his religious credentials, but said he will discuss his faith if directly asked to do so.

What the poll doesn’t say: Jim Weatherby, emeritus professor of public policy at Boise State University, wondered whether respondents felt the “politically correct answer” was to say religious background was not a factor. He also wonders whether voters would have stronger feelings about an atheist or a candidate who was a member of a non-mainstream religion, as the poll didn’t address specific religions.

What people are saying about the poll: “I never vote for a person based on religion,” said Idaho Falls poll participant Lynn Kirby, who is Mormon.

Mega-loads

What the poll means: The proposed use of U.S. Highway 12 as a transportation corridor for massive equipment loads has garnered media attention across Canada and the U.S. More than two-thirds of poll respondents had opinions about the issue, with 36 percent opposed to the loads.

What you should know: Two oil companies want to ship more than 200 loads of equipment from the Port of Lewiston east along the highway. Most would block both lanes of traffic; the largest are more than 200 feet long and weigh up to 580,000 pounds. Each load would take three days to reach Lolo Pass under police escort and traveling only by night.

Why you should care: Opponents worry this designated Wild and Scenic River Corridor will turn into a major industrial route for massive shipments heading to Alberta. The Port of Lewiston says the loads mean more jobs.

What the poll doesn’t say:

HOW THE POLL WAS DONE

Mason-Dixon Polling and Research Inc. of Washington, D.C., interviewed 625 randomly chosen registered Idaho voters on Wednesday through Friday (Oct. 20-22), limiting the interviews to people who said they are likely to vote in November. The statewide poll’s margin of error is 4 percentage points, with a 95 percent probability that results would fall within that margin if the entire population were sampled.

Sixty additional interviews were conducted in the 1st Congressional District to bring the total sample size there to 400 likely voters, and 15 additional interviews were conducted in the 2nd Congressional District to bring the sample size there to 300. The margins of error are 5 percent in the 1st District and 6 percent in the 2nd. The extra interviews covered only the congressional races.

New ad attacks Minnick, distorts voting record

BOISE (AP) — At least two Idaho television stations have pulled a new political ad that attacks U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick and falsely claims that the congressman voted for the federal stimulus bill.

Minnick was among a handful of Democrats in the U.S. House who voted against President Barack Obama’s $787 billion plan to resuscitate the economy in February 2009.

KTVB-TV and KIVI-TV stations in Boise decided to pull the Super PAC for America ad.

“It appears the commercial is factually incorrect regarding vote No. 46 on Jan 28th. We’ve decided to pull the commercial effective immediately,” KTVB General Manager Doug Armstrong told The Spokesman-Review.

The political action committee started running its ad in Idaho earlier this week, telling TV viewers: “Minnick voted for almost a trillion in stimulus.”

Super PAC for America has run a similar version of the same ad in other states, blasting Democrats for their stances and votes on health care reform and the federal stimulus while promoting their GOP challengers.

When contacted Tuesday about the error in the Idaho ad that targets Minnick, the group responded in an e-mail to The Associated Press and said: “We are looking into it.”

The group lists former Democratic strategist-turned-conservative commentator Dick Morris as its chief strategist.

The committee was founded “to advocate for a Congress that supports limited government, less taxes, free enterprise, a strong national defense and positive American values,” according to its website.

Maxine Bell an essential voice for south-central Idaho

One of the most influential people in Idaho makes the trip to Walmart in Jerome every Saturday during the legislative session.

There she looks at the shopping carts being pushed by families, single parents and senior citizens to gauge the real-world consequences of the decisions she’s helped make in Boise.

And if there is too much ramen in those carts, Maxine Bell worries.

“I think, ‘Are they getting enough nutrition?’”

For 22 years, Bell — who chairs the House Appropriations Committees — has not only wielded one of the sharpest pencils in Boise, but served as the Legislature’s conscience.

She has gone to bat for public employees, pushed for greater spending in education and social services when the money was available, and never forgotten the taxpayers back in Jerome and Minidoka counties.

That’s why we’re endorsing her for a 12th term.

Bell and Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, have co-chaired the Legislative Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee since 2002. In the process, they’ve done a lot for the Magic Valley, but even more for Idaho.

How much worse would the budget crisis of the last legislative session have been had JFAC been in less-assured hands?

The coming session will be at least as challenging. Bell and Cameron can’t create revenue, but you can be sure whatever public funds are available will be stretched to maximum effectiveness.

Bell’s Democratic opponent, social worker Cindy Shotswell, is right to point out the human toll that cuts in state funding have caused in the past year. Her perspective is valuable, and we hope she’ll stay involved in politics.

But a Legislature without Maxine Bell’s mixture of fiscal discipline and compassion is hard to imagine.

The great bailout backlash

Nothing in this election season, no program or party or politician, is less popular than the Troubled Asset Relief Program of 2008 — aka the Wall Street bailout. No policy has fewer public figures willing to defend it, and fewer Americans who believe it worked. No issue has done more to stoke the fires of populist backlash, and the rage against elites.

Ross Douthat

It was TARP that first turned Tea Partiers against Republican incumbents, and independents against Washington. It was TARP that steadily undermined Barack Obama’s agenda, by making activist government seem like a game rigged to benefit privileged insiders. And it is TARP that’s spurred this campaign cycle’s only outbreak of bipartisanship: as of September, Politico’s Ben Smith noted recently, the two parties had combined to spend about $80 million on attack ads that invoke the bailout, with the Democrats alone accounting for $53 million of that spending.

The question is whether the program’s extraordinary unpopularity is justified. Few elected officials may be willing to argue for the bailout, but plenty of policy wonks will make the case that the Wall Street rescue package is actually “one of the most unfairly maligned policy initiatives of all time,” as the Center for American Progress’s Matthew Yglesias recently put it.

This case was strengthened by news that the bailout might actually end up costing the taxpayer less than $50 billion over all, rather than the $700 billion originally set aside to pay for it. Moreover, it’s the auto bailout, which the TARP

Then

Now

“TARP may have saved the United States from 15 percent unemployment, but it also implicated our government in the kind of crony capitalism you’d expect from a banana republic.”

funds eventually underwrote as well, that’s likely to end up being responsible for the bulk of these losses. As it stands, the federal government may end up turning a modest profit on the money injected into Wall Street’s failing banks.

Given what seemed to be at stake in the fall of ’08, TARP’s defenders argue, that doesn’t seem like such a bad bargain: The bailout may have averted a Great Depression, and it didn’t end up costing very much at all.

Or at least it didn’t cost much if you accept that the ends of public policy justify the means. But of course it was the means of TARP that made it so unpopular.

The bailout became law because the legislative branch was stamped with the threats of certain doom. It vested unprecedented economic authority in the secretary of the Treasury. And it used public funds to insulate well-connected private actors from the consequences of their recklessness. Its creation short-circuited republican self-government, and its execution created moral hazard on an epic scale. It may have been an economic necessity, but it felt like a travesty.

This is why it should be possible to sympathize with the politicians who voted for the bailout and welcome their rebuke at the ballot box. Faced with extraordinary circumstances political leaders will always incline toward a blunt utilitarianism, in which the need for stability trumps more high-minded ideals. But after a crisis has passed, it’s important that the ideals reassert themselves, so the moral compromises aren’t repeated.

This point is obvious in wartime. It was understandable that Harry Truman used the atomic bomb against Japanese to end years of global total war. But it would have been appalling if the memory of Hiroshima and Nagasaki hadn’t created a taboo around the use of nuclear weapons. Likewise, the Bush administration’s decision to waterboard Khalid Shaikh Mohammed in the wake of 9/11 was far more defensible than the attempt, by many administration apologists, to insist that waterboarding raised no moral or legal difficulties at all, and should be a routine part of our interrogation repertoire going forward.

What’s true in wartime can also be true in economic policy, even if the stakes aren’t life and death. TARP may have saved the United States from 15 percent unemployment, but it also implicated our government in the kind of crony capitalism you’d expect from a banana republic. If it was necessary, it was also un-American. If it worked, it did so while doing grievous damage to the credibility of Wall Street and Washington alike.

So it’s a healthy and necessary thing that our first post-crisis election has been defined by a groundswell of anti-bailout outrage. This no doubt seems unfair to the politicians who may lose their jobs for doing what they felt they had to do. But it would be an infinitely worse sign for America if the present backlash hadn’t materialized at all.

Time to invest in an energy overhaul

Possibilities:

The greatest contribution of a leader is personal sacrifice for those who would follow. Though my campaign is near its end, win or lose, the movement has only begun. I began this campaign nine months ago with one goal — I believe this community can be better.

Of course, so many good people have invested in this for years that I know I am not alone. Despite the influential realm I now tread so lightly, I believe my approach is unique.

I believe in the city on a hill, but live in a struggling neighborhood. I believe in the beacon of light, but I’ve seen the ocean of oil. I dream of my home as the gleaming tower, but I stand within a foundation showing years of neglect.

Presently the greatest economic opportunity is rebuilding our crumbling infrastructure. I consider myself a student of history and politics, and I see a glaring disconnect. Too much credit is awarded policies of the past 50 years for eco-

READER COMMENT

nomie growth. I see our national wealth as a direct result of the greatest infrastructure investment in our history. Dams, roads, rails, power grids, harbors, airports, parks, schools, libraries, all world class in their time, were given to us by our grandparents. As intended, we all capitalized — like a drunk with a credit card.

Currently our foundations fail the standard of our competition. The Chinese have tripled investment in education during the past 10 years while we make cuts. Bridges fall down, levees implode, oil gushes, while we squabble about how to divide the money we’ve saved. We can’t decide whether to drown our government or businesses with health care costs that grow more bloated than our waistlines. We need to stop!

For our great capitalist society, this is a lesson. Is this a long recession or are we merely suffering the results of being surpassed? As a businessman, why would I come here?

I do not believe in American exceptionalism. I do believe in the great American opportunity, and I believe I can change the world. This is why I ran for office. From my perspective, I see the growing cracks in our foundation, but I believe we can fix them. From the bottom, our worst problems are most obvious. We can rebuild one hole at a time.

I campaign on the idea of raising expectations. At the bottom, I have begun my work — trying to get the neglected mass re-engaged. The first steps are the most difficult. I have been told repeatedly to focus my campaign on communities with the highest voter turnout, but I blatantly disregard this advice. The areas with lowest turnout are those that need the most engagement and offer the greatest opportunity.

Note for the top-downers, many of the 1,000-square-foot homes cost more every month than 3,000-square-foot homes. Also 48 percent of the country’s overall energy usage goes into building operations, the majority of which were constructed before there was consideration of energy as a limited resource. Meanwhile, the bulk of the unemployed is laid-off construction workers. Banks are bloated with capital and nowhere to invest. Is anyone else seeing opportunity here?

Maybe I am idealistic, but a few mil to invest in a small conservative county for a complete energy overhaul seems like a good opportunity for returns.

This is my campaign and I would like to thank everyone who has given me a chance to speak and especially thank those of you so heavily invested in the betterment of my home. I remember, now, I am a builder and I should get to work.

South-central Idaho water issues need Stevenson's experience

Ten years ago, if you were looking for a water expert at the Legislature, all you had to do was turn around and shake somebody's hand. Now you have to go find state Rep. Bert Stevenson.

The seven-term Rupert Republican doesn't qualify as the only water specialist left in the Statehouse, but it's a far cry from the days when Sen. Laird Noh and Rep. Bruce Newcomb lent their natural resources acumen to Idaho public policy. And the defeat of state Sen. Chuck Coiner, R-Twin Falls, in last May's primary further narrowed the field. Now, the stakes couldn't be higher for Stevenson and for the House Resources and Conservation Committee he chairs:

- Because of budget cuts, the Idaho Department of Water Resources — a public agency absolutely critical to the Magic Valley — is running on empty. (The agency's General Fund appropriation has declined 22 percent and its payroll has shrunk by 16 percent since 2009). Worse, the department has lost many of its most skilled and experienced employees, and much of its institutional knowledge. In the case of major curtailment, it's questionable whether Water Resources is up to the task anymore.
- The Comprehensive Aquifer Management Planning project, a process essential to south-central Idaho's economy, is not out of the woods yet. Getting funding in place — and persuading the stakeholders to agree to it — couldn't be a higher priority.
- Sooner probably rather than later, the Legislature will have to weigh in on siting criteria for the massive swine and poultry operations headed to the Magic Valley. As it stands, individual counties have neither the expertise nor the resources to make decisions of that magnitude, so some multi-county entity — be it regulatory or advisory — will likely be necessary.

Stevenson's expertise is needed in shepherding these processes. And nowhere more than in reviving Water Resources. The days when all Idaho taxpayers paid the freight are ending; General Fund revenue makes up 53 percent of the agency's budget this year; in 2006 it was 64 percent.

User fees, in some form, will have to take up the slack. Making that happen, like all the processes described above, will take a steady hand. That's why we're endorsing Stevenson for an eighth term. That said, you can't help being impressed with Stevenson's Democratic opponent, Jerome engineer Scott McClure. McClure, who took on U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo six years ago, is a moderate with broad knowledge of how the Magic Valley makes a living — water and agriculture. His primary issue this year is the necessity of putting a mechanism in place to control swine and poultry operations, and he's right.

Although Cassia County's recent poultry ordinance was a good start, south-central Idaho as a whole is nowhere close to being ready for the land-use, water and zoning issues challenges these industries will bring.

Sen. Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, made a serious run during the last session of getting legislation to do that in place, but the urgency has increased.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Former Jerome Co. commissioner opposes bond

When I was Jerome County commissioner, I endorsed spending 10,000 taxpayer dollars to research a regional jail. After that concept died, I was against spending anymore taxpayer dollars to promote a lease/purchase with Rocky Mountain Corrections because we knew we needed a jail but RMC wouldn't provide concrete plans, costs or projections for the $30 million it wanted. After I left office, the commissioners have spent more than $100,000 pursuing their Rocky Mountain dream and, sadly, the only thing that has changed is that this "conceptual" jail is now proposed to be financed through a bond. During a recent commissioner meeting about the lack of blueprints, Commissioner Joe Davidson uttered "How many ways can you build a jail?"

It's like a three-bedroom house. How many ways can you build a three-bedroom house?"

Now, the commissioners have spent another $2,000-plus on computerized drawings provided by the same architect that is in bed with Rocky Mountain Corrections. They want you to believe that if you give them the right to borrow $13 million for you, they will find the best architect, the best contractors and that their "purchase" of 80 waterless acres with no sewer facilities at more than $5,000 an acre is the best site for this jail.

Instead of consolidating things, they are moving the sheriff's and driver's license divisions out to the jail? We have the multi-million dollar annex with all that unused space. We'll still have the overhead from the old courthouse with more unused space. Why do we only get more spread out and pay more in overhead, transportation, etc., instead of consolidating facilities and trying to minimize long term costs? We could build a jail right behind the annex.

Vote no Nov. 2 and we'll get it right in May 2011.

DIANA OBENAUER

Lawmakers should lead by example and forego pay increase

As most of us expected, the Social Security Administration has found a way to determine that there is no "cost of living" increase to warrant an annual increase in Social Security benefits again in 2011. Sounds like a bit of "fuzzy math" however, if this is the case, then it would seem logical to suggest that the "automatic" pay increase for our Senators and Congressmen also be foregone again in 2011 as it was in 2010. For that matter, there should be no COLA increases in pay for all Federal Government employees. Isn't it time the Government starts to lead by example?

I have written to our Senators and Congressman suggesting that they introduce legislation to accomplish the above suggestion. If everyone who reads this will also write, perhaps we can get some action. I suggest you ask for a reply.

Voter backs Mills and entire GOP ticket

We have the privilege to vote for good people who will represent us in our counties, in our state and in Washington, D.C. It is vital that we chose carefully, but even more important that we vote.

How many countries have our young men and women fought and died for so they would have the right and privilege to vote? And yet, only 20 to 30 percent of the people in the United States will exercise this freedom.

I know who I am voting for and I hope you will support this Republican leader to represent you as county commissioner. Leon Mills has worked diligently for Twin Falls County as a Republican Party and independent thinker for many years. He and his wife, Sheri, have instilled conservative family values in their children. Leon will bring a common-sense approach to managing the county, and he will work hard to exercise sound fiscal responsibly.

He knows the value of an earned dollar. Leon has worked with our family livestock feeding operation for 16 years. Tom and I are proud to say we will support Leon Mills for county commissioner and the entire Republican ballot.

Good luck, Butch!

Apple Attack

If you believe all the stories, apples are quite the impressive fruit. They helped Sir Isaac Newton develop the universal law of gravity. They were apparently responsible for getting a certain couple booted out of a well-known garden paradise, thereby forcing them to start wearing clothes. They even inspired a guy named John Chapman to change his name to Johnny Appleseed, wander around the country wearing a cooking pot on his head, and plant apple trees wherever he went (a sure sign that although apples may keep the doctor away, they don't necessarily guarantee good mental health). Celebrate the attack of the apples at Swensen's and enjoy the freshest, crispest apples in town.

Ford keeps rolling as net income jumps, debt eases

By Dee-Ann Durbin and Tom Krisher
Associated Press writers

DEARBORN, Mich. — Ford is on a roll.

Its popular new cars and trucks are grabbing a bigger share of the U.S. market. It's about to erase a big chunk of its health care debt. And it's adding a significant number of jobs for the first time in five years.

On Tuesday, the automaker said it made $1.7 billion from July through September, a jump of nearly 70 percent from a year earlier and its sixth consecutive quarter in the black.

The news puts Ford further ahead of its rivals as the U.S. auto industry slowly turns around. Chrysler has yet to make a profit after a stay in bankruptcy last year. General Motors is making money but losing market share — and still partly government-owned.

"They're in the best shape that they've been in for years," Gimme Credit analyst Shelly Lombard said of Ford.

Among the company's stars is the F-Series pickup, the top-selling vehicle in the U.S. The Ford Edge and Ford Escape are two of the country's best-selling small utility cars, while sales of the Fusion mid-size car are up 20 percent this year.

part because it's making more money on its highly rated cars and trucks. Buyers shelled out about $30,600 on average for a Ford in September, 10 percent more than in 2005, according to Edmunds.com.

Ford has also been able to cut back on costly incentives as buyers pay more for premium options. For example, 80 percent of people who buy the Ford Fiesta subcompact also spring for the Sync in-car communications system, a $395 option.

The Ford brand came in 10th place Tuesday in Consumer Reports' annual reliability rankings, just behind Lexus and a far better showing than four years ago.

It adds up to a bigger slice of the U.S. market for Ford — 16.7 percent, up from 15.2 percent a year ago, according to AutoData Corp. It has switched places with Toyota as the No. 2 automaker, after GM, by U.S. sales, as Toyota struggled with a series of safety recalls.

"The strength of the product is propelling our business results," Lewis Booth, Ford's chief financial officer, said in a conference call with media and analysts.

Consumer confidence up slightly in October

By Anne D'Innocenzio
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Americans' confidence in the economy stayed stuck in gloomy territory in October, with Wall Street's gains in recent months not boosting spirits much.

Coaxing shoppers out of their shells will be the major challenge for retailers heading into the holiday season. That could mean they'll be continuing to push big discounts.

The confidence report, released Tuesday by the Conference Board, comes in the face of a rebounding stock market. But many shoppers, grappling with weak job prospects and a renewed slide in home prices, see their personal financial health tied more to Main Street, not Wall Street. Another report, released Tuesday from a key home pricing index, showed home prices are weakening across the country.

"The things that matter most to consumers are either not improving or worsening," said Mark Vitner, an economist at Wells Fargo. "We are definitely going to see a heavily promotional holiday shopping season."

The Conference Board, a private research group, said its Consumer Confidence Index rose to 50.2 from a revised 48.6 in September. Economists surveyed by Thomson Reuters expected 49.2.

September's reading was the index's lowest point since February.

An index of 90 indicates a healthy economy. That hasn't been approached since the recession began in December 2007. Economists watch confidence closely because consumer spending accounts for about 70 percent of U.S. economic activity and is critical to a strong rebound.

The index, which measures how Americans feel

Confidence rises

The consumer confidence index from a survey of 5,000 U.S. households:

about business conditions, the job market and the next six months, has recovered only fitfully since hitting an all-time low of 25.3 in February 2009.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell about 10 points to 11153.91 after rising Monday to its highest close since late April. For the year, the Dow is up 7.1 percent.

But while the stock market has been on an upward path, confidence has been moving sideways. In October 2009, the index stood at 48.7. Since then, it has mostly hovered in a tight range between the mid-40s and the high 50s. May 2010 proved to be the only exception at 62.7, but even that is weak.

One component of the index, which measures how shoppers feel about the economy right now and is most closely correlated with consumer spending, is actually even lower than it was two years ago heading into the presidential election. The measure increased slightly to 23.9 in October from 23.3. Back in October 2008, it was 43.5.

The index's other component, which assesses consumers' outlook over the next six months, improved to 67.8 in September from 65.5.

But Wells Fargo's Vitner said he's not comforted by rising expectations because

Toyota, Honda lead quality rankings but GM gains

By Tom Krisher
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — The most problem-free cars and trucks are made by Honda and Toyota, but Ford is closing in fast and General Motors is making big quality improvements, according to Consumer Reports magazine's 2010 reliability rankings.

Ford and GM continue to narrow the large quality gap that once separated Toyota and other Asian automakers from their Detroit rivals. Large overhauls of American car companies in the last few years have resulted in fewer brands and better vehicles from Detroit.

This year's rankings, based on a survey of about 960,000 magazine subscribers, also restored recommended ratings for several recalled Toyota models and bumped up a pair of Korean brands. Chrysler, however, continued to languish.

Consumer Reports ratings are widely used by buyers shopping for cars and trucks. The magazine is the third-largest factor used by Americans to pick vehicles, topped only by brand loyalty and recommendations from friends and family.

For the third year in a row, Toyota's Scion brand had the fewest problems of any brand in the survey. The Toyota brand ranked sixth. Lexus, which had been a top finisher in past years, fell to ninth.

Scion has only three older models with few options, and as a result, there is less chance for reliability problems, said David Champion, senior director of auto testing for Consumer Reports.

Toyota generally fared well in the survey despite recalling more than 10 million vehicles worldwide for a variety of problems including sticky gas pedals, floor mats that trap the accelerator and brake fluid leaks.

"Toyota's taken a slight knock from the issues with their recalls," Champion said. The magazine's survey asks owners to ignore recalls unless they have experienced a problem, easing the impact, he said.

Lexus, however, has expanded its model lineup but the quality has slipped.

The Ford brand ranked 10th, still four slots below Toyota and six below Honda. But Champion said the Dearborn, Mich., automaker has several individual models that are better quality than Toyotas.

The company is led by its Fusion midsize sedan, which outranked Honda's Accord and Toyota's Camry. Ford's quality resurgence began around 2005 and has continued in small steps ever since, Champion said.

IBM authorizes $10B stock buyback

ARMONK, N.Y. (AP) — IBM Corp. on Tuesday said its board approved an additional $10 billion in stock buybacks, representing nearly 6 percent of the computer company's outstanding shares.

IBM says the new buyback authorization adds to $2.3 billion remaining from a previous $8 billion authorization, issued in April.

The company also said it plans to request permission to buy even more shares at its next April board meeting.

IBM shares rose 83 cents to $140.67.

Companies often use buybacks to take advantage of low stock prices, but IBM's stock is close to its all-time high of $143.03, hit Oct. 18, just before it reported its third-quarter results.

IBM also said its board maintained the company's 65 cent quarterly dividend.

"IBM's higher value, higher margin business strategy has enabled the return of $91 billion since 2003 to our shareholders through share repurchases and dividends," Samuel J. Palmisano, IBM chairman, president and CEO, said in a statement.

Foreclosures push home prices down

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Home prices are falling further, suggesting a bottom hasn't been reached in many metro areas.

Millions of foreclosures are expected to pour onto the market in the coming years. That's likely to force prices down and hurt even cities that had begun to rebound. Investigations into banks' foreclosure paperwork could further deter buyers and weigh down prices.

The past few months have been the worst time in a decade for the housing market. Few people have bought homes, and among the small pool of buyers, many have purchased foreclosures and

"If you're going down the hill, you tend to keep going down the hill."

— Mark Fleming, chief economist at real estate data firm CoreLogic other distressed properties.

The impact was apparent Tuesday when Standard & Poor's/Case-Shiller released its latest index for home prices in 20 major U.S. metro areas. The average price for all markets fell 0.2 percent in August and 15 cities posted declines.

But the foreclosure problem is far from over. A "shadow inventory" of homes on the verge of foreclosure is bound to force prices lower well into next year. About 2 million loans are in foreclosure, and another 2.4 million borrowers have missed at least 90 days of mortgage payments, according to LPS Applied Analytics.

"It's like a never-ending supply" of homes, said Daniel Alpert, managing partner at the New York investment bank Westwood Capital. He expects prices to fall another 10 percent over the next year — and not improve much after that.

Most troubled homeowners are concentrated in cities that have already been battered by the housing bust. One in 15 homeowners in Las Vegas received a foreclosure notice in the first half of the year, according to foreclosure listing service RealtyTrac Inc. In the Fort Myers, Fla. metro area, the ratio was one in 20; in the Phoenix metro area it was one in 23.

"If you're going down the hill, you tend to keep going down the hill," said Mark Fleming, chief economist at real estate data firm CoreLogic.

In Las Vegas, prices have fallen 57 percent from the peak four years ago. They are now at the lowest point since spring 2000. In August, they ticked up slightly — 0.1 percent — according to the Case-Shiller report.

As a result, Ford announced it would hire 500 new workers for a shift at the Chicago plant that makes the new Ford Explorer, its first significant hiring in years. And it has promised millions in new investments at various plants.

Ford got its financial house in order after mortgaging everything down to its blue oval logo four years ago to pay for a huge restructuring. It paid off $2 billion in debt in the third quarter and expects to pay off $3.6 billion more for retiree health care later this week.

The company now expects to end the year with as much cash as debt, reaching the goal a year earlier than it had forecast. It still owes about $22 billion, far more than Chrysler's $11 billion and GM's $8 billion. Those two companies shed billions in debt while under bankruptcy protection.

Ford is about to pay off its debt to the United Auto Workers health care trust. The UAW agreed to the trust in 2007, and it began paying health care benefits for 195,000 Ford retirees and spouses in January. Chrysler still owes $3.9 billion to the trust, while GM owes $2.5 billion, plus shares in both their companies once they go public.

Ford's total obligation to the trust was $13.2 billion.

The company has also offered to convert about $3.5

Ford revs up

billion in bonds held mainly by hedge funds and other investors into common stock. Even apart from that, it expects to reduce what it spends on debt interest by $800 million by the end of this year. The debt reductions also could help Ford retain its investment-grade rating, which it lost in 2005.

"I think that we are clearly ahead of where we thought we could be on improving our balance sheet and repaying our loans," Ford CEO Alan Mulally said.

Mulally, 65, who came to Ford in 2006 from Boeing and has been widely credited with Ford's turnaround, has not said when he might step down. But Ford's bench is filling with candidates who might replace him, including Asia president Joe Hinrichs, Americas president Mark Fields, marketing chief Jim Farley and product development chief Derrick Kuzak.

in this case, it means that things are so bad, the future has to look better. Such lack of confidence will weigh heavily on the Nov. 2 elections, when voters worried about increasing deficits and the economy will decide whether to keep Democrats in power in Congress.

While fears have eased that the economy isn't heading toward a double-dip recession, companies aren't making a lot of job offers. In fact, in September, unemployment remained stuck at 9.6 percent, but the Labor Department's job report also showed a net loss of 95,000 jobs because of rampant layoffs of teachers and other local government workers that offset hiring in the private sector.

The Conference Board survey, based on a random survey mailed to 5,000 households from Oct. 1 to Oct. 19, underscored worries about job prospects.

Meanwhile, the outlook for housing is weaker. The Standard & Poor's/Case-Shiller 20-city home index showed that home prices are falling around the country, even in metro areas that were showing strength earlier in the year. The index fell 0.2 percent in August

Investors buying properties to sell or lease have helped to stabilize the nation's worst housing market. Demand is also coming from retirees, said Paul Bell, a real estate agent with Prudential Americana Group in Las Vegas, who noted that 45 percent of the city's buyers are paying cash

That's "helping to contribute to a floor" in the city's home prices, Bell said.

Some markets are doing relatively well. Chicago, Washington and New York have been showing consistent price increases since spring, though the pace of those increases faded over the summer. In the nation's capital, the large number of federal employees and government contract workers have from July. Fifteen of the cities showed monthly price declines. Prices are expected to drop further in the coming months.

Home prices had risen in many markets from April through July. But those increases were mostly fueled by government tax credits, which have expired. Now that the peak buying season is over, foreclosures, job concerns and weak demand from buyers are pushing prices down.

Corporate earnings reports show the uneven pace of the recovery. The affluent appear to be recovering faster than everyone else.

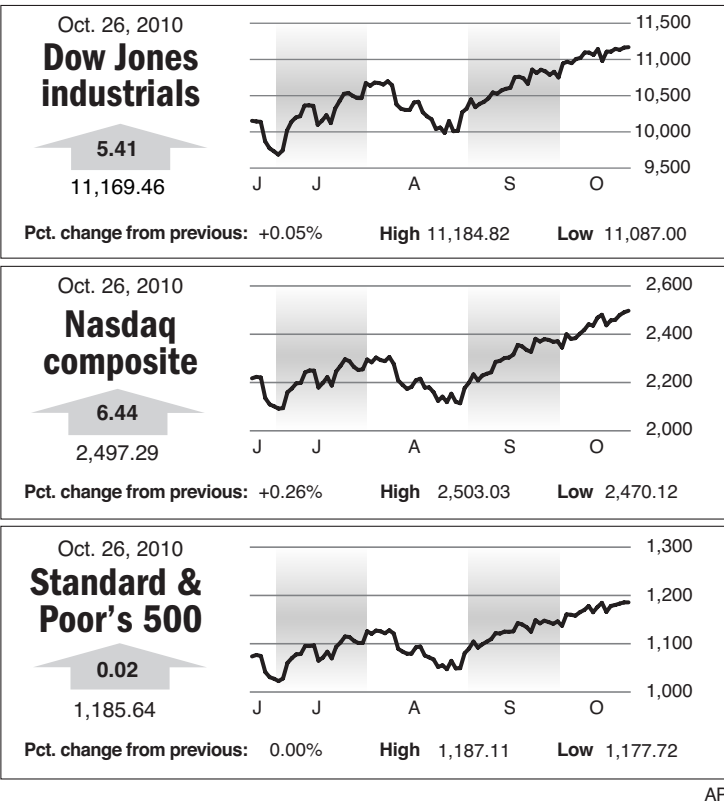

"In general, consumers are cautious, but they are less pessimistic than they were a year ago and they are spending more in the category than they did a year ago," Lew Frankfort, CEO of Coach Inc., said in a phone interview Tuesday. The luxury handbag maker reported a 34 percent in net income and sounded a positive holiday tone.

Cruise operator Royal Caribbean International's Chief Financial Officer Brian Rice told investors Tuesday that demand is gradually improving, with customer deposits currently running 20 percent higher than a year ago.

then. Prices in San Diego have risen nearly 14 percent and had increased for 15 consecutive months before falling in August.

In Los Angeles they have increased by more than 10 percent in that period. Home prices would have to rise by more than 50 percent in each of the markets to return to their peaks during the housing boom.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.41 points, or 0.1 percent, to 11,169.46. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 0.02 to 1,185.64, while the technology-focused Nasdaq composite index rose 6.44, or 0.3 percent, to 2,497.29.

The 30 stocks in the Dow were split down the middle, with half falling and half rising. Microsoft Corp. rose 2.8 percent to lead the index, while Procter & Gamble fell 1.1 percent as the measure's laggard.

A gain in consumer confidence this month helped stocks pare their losses and then edge higher in afternoon trading.

Shares of Netflix Inc. rose $10.78, or 6.4 percent, to $177.62 amid rumors that the company may be a target of an acquisition by Apple Inc.

Traders were moving out of riskier assets as the dollar strengthened. A stronger dollar makes stocks and commodities more expensive because they are priced in dollars. The dollar rose against Japan's yen and the euro Tuesday.

Paul volunteer to appear in court over attack on protester

By Roger Alford
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The volunteer with Rand Paul’s Republican U.S. Senate campaign who stepped on the head of a liberal activist and pinned her face to the concrete said Tuesday the scuffle was not as bad as it looked on video and blamed police for not intervening.

“I’m sorry that it came to that, and I apologize if it appeared overly forceful, but I was concerned about Rand’s safety,” Tim Proffitt told The Associated Press.

A judge will decide whether Proffitt should face criminal charges.

Lauren Valle, the 23-year-old activist with the group MoveOn.org, said her face was swollen and her neck and shoulder were sore after she was wrestled to the ground by Paul supporters Monday night before a debate between the tea party favorite and Democrat Jack Conway.

Valle was roughed up as she tried to give Paul a fake “employee of the month” award. She told police she was assaulted while trying to take a picture with Paul.

The race is one of the most closely watched and hotly contested in the midterm elections.

“I think that this is an extreme example of the kinds of sentiments that people are feeling in many races across the country,” Valle said. “I think that tension is incredibly high.”

Paul’s campaign dropped Proffitt as campaign coordinator in Bourbon County in central Kentucky and banned him from future events.

Sherelle Roberts, spokeswoman for the Lexington Division of Police, said Tuesday that officers will deliver a summons to Proffitt to appear in court. A judge will determine whether to proceed with an assault case.

Proffitt said the fight never would have occurred if police officers had intervened earlier.

“A friend of mine went up to three policemen before Rand got there, and told them about the girl who was standing there with that wig on and that she was getting ready to do something,” Proffitt said. “The policemen looked at him and said that’s not our job.”

Paul campaign manager Jesse Benton said Proffitt’s actions were unacceptable and would not be tolerated.

“The Paul campaign has disassociated itself with the individual who took part in this incident, and once again urges all activists — on both sides — to remember that their political passions should never manifest themselves in physical altercations of any kind.”

Paul’s campaign called the altercation “incredibly unfortunate” and expressed relief that the woman was not injured.

Sheen leaves hospital after NYC hotel outburst

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Charlie Sheen was briefly hospitalized Tuesday after security at the Plaza Hotel called police to report he was disorderly and had broken furniture in his room, police said.

His publicist blamed an allergic reaction to medication, and said the actor was discharged Tuesday evening and on his way back to Los Angeles.

Sheen appeared highly intoxicated when officers arrived to his room around 1:30 a.m., and a woman with him said they had been out drinking and partying that night, according to a law enforcement official. She said he was yelling and tossing furniture when they returned to the room, said the official, who was not authorized to speak publicly about the encounter and spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly said hotel security reported Sheen was disorderly. The actor voluntarily went with authorities for a psychiatric evaluation.

“No arrests were made. It’s not a complaint. He’s being treated at a hospital,” Kelly said.

Battery hazard sparks struggle between pilots, electronics industry

EDITOR’S NOTE — An occasional look at how behind-the-scenes influence is exercised in Washington.

By Joan Lowy
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Safety advocates have warned for more than a decade that someday an air shipment of lithium batteries like those used in cameras, cell phones and countless other products would catch fire, causing a plane to crash and people to die.

That day may have arrived last month.

A United Parcel Service cargo plane with a fire raging on board, and carrying a large quantity of lithium batteries, crashed near Dubai in the United Arab Emirates on Sept. 3, killing both pilots. The cause of the accident isn’t likely to be determined for months, but investigators suspect the batteries were either the source of the fire or contributed to its severity. The Federal Aviation Administration was concerned enough by the accident to warn air carriers about risks posed by lithium battery shipments.

The accident has given new urgency to a high-stakes lobbying struggle under way in Washington. Pilot unions and safety advocates are urging the government to treat air shipments of lithium batteries as hazardous materials. But rules proposed by the Obama administration are opposed by many of the nation’s top retailers, electronics manufacturers, battery makers and cargo airlines, including UPS.

They say the rules would cost them hundreds of millions of dollars in added packaging, paperwork and training for employees. The rechargeable battery industry alone says the rules would cost more than $1 billion in the first year.

The makers of medical devices say the rules might mean delays in getting equipment to patients, and one electronics lobbyist even portrayed the proposal as a holiday Grinch that could drive up the cost of gift shipments.

“The cost of expedited delivery to stores could become prohibitive and could ruin a lot of Christmases for children,” Christopher McLean, executive director of a retailers coalition that includes Amazon.com, Best Buy, Radio Shack, Target and Wal-Mart, told Transportation Department officials at a meeting earlier this year, though that’s unlikely this Christmas.

Industry lobbyists say the government already has enough rules to ensure safe battery shipments; they say the problem is that a relative few shippers aren’t following current packaging requirements. They recommend stronger enforcement. Indeed, many of the more than 40 documented incidents of lithium battery fires in flight or at airports involved improperly packaged or handled batteries.

George Kerchner, a lobbyist for the rechargeable battery industry, wrote Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood last month asking him not to let the Dubai crash cause regulators to rush put new rules in place.

“We urge that any actions taken by DOT be justified by facts, not speculation or political pressures,” Kerchner wrote. “They also should be narrowly drawn to minimize disruption of commerce in a holiday season that will be critical to the nation’s economic recovery.”

A bill that would prod DOT to move faster on new rules is opposed by industry supporters in Congress.

Pilots and safety advocates say the industry opposition is typical of the hurdles they face when trying to get government regulators to take action to prevent a tragedy even when there is clear evidence of danger.

“All regulation eventually gets written in blood because it takes something catastrophic to get anything done,” said Russ Leighton, safety director for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters’ airline division. “In this case, only two people died, and it wasn’t a huge media story, so we’ll probably have to wait till 300 people do die before there’s any change.”

Study: Conservation slowing extinctions

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — On average, 52 species of mammals, birds and amphibians are taking a significant step toward extinction each year, a huge new analysis says.

But if not for conservation efforts, the march would be even faster, researchers reported Tuesday.

Efforts to save endangered animals are making a difference, even as about 1 in 5 of the world’s backboneed species — mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians and fish — are threatened with extinction, according to a study published online in the journal Science.

The report was released as delegates from more than 190 nations meet at a United Nations conference in Nagoya, Japan, to set 20 measurable targets to combat the loss of many diverse species.

“Our results should be a timely wake-up call to governments in Nagoya,” said Stuart Butchart, a study author and global research coordinator at BirdLife International. “Biodiversity is in a desperate state. Its situation is getting worse . but our results show we can turn the situation around. We just need greater political will and resources.”

The study considered almost 26,000 species of vertebrates — animals with a backbone — whose conservation status is on the “Red List” of the International Union for Conservation of Nature. It found that about one-fifth of vertebrate species are “threatened,” meaning they are close to going extinct in the near future. That ranges from 13 percent of birds to 41 percent of amphibians.

The one-fifth number isn’t much of a surprise, but the new study is the first global audit of vertebrates, said Craig Hilton-Taylor of the IUCN, a study author.

To look for trends, the authors used a statistical measure that tracks how particular species have moved among the eight categories of the Red List — an indication of improvement or worsening of their conservation status. Because of data limitations, they focused on birds, mammals and amphibians. Their results translate to an average of 52 species moving one category closer to extinction each year.

Amphibians, which include frogs and salamanders, showed the fastest decline, with mammals second. The trend was less severe for birds, but still included creatures like the green-colored Hose’s broadbill of Malaysia and Indonesia, which has suffered declines in its forest habitat.

Notice of Request for Comment on Proposed TMDL Revision to TSS Wasteload Allocations to Twin Falls

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) is seeking public comment on a proposed revision to the limit on the amount of Total Suspended Solids or TSS that the city of Twin Falls wastewater treatment plant may discharge into the Mid-Snake River. TSS are solids in water that can be trapped by a filter. TSS can include a wide variety of material, such as silt, decaying plant and animal matter, industrial wastes, and treated sewage.

Based on an analysis of water quality conditions in the Mid-Snake River mainstem, DEQ has determined that water quality standards will not be adversely impacted by revising the limit. Overall targets of the water quality management plan for the Mid-Snake and the TSS loading capacity of the water body will be maintained. The proposed revision was requested by the city of Twin Falls, which has indicated that compliance with the limits originally set in the plan would be cost-prohibitive.

The revision document is available for review at DEQ’s Twin Falls Regional Office, 1363 Fillmore St., and on DEQ’s Web site at www.deq.idaho.gov/public/comment.cfm. # U.S.: Enemies are searching WikiLeaks Iraq papers

By Lara Jakes
Associated Press

BAGHDAD — U.S. enemies already are combing through data released last week in a trove of Iraq war documents for ways to harm the American military, the Pentagon's No. 2 official said Tuesday.

U.S. Deputy Defense Secretary William J. Lynn called the documents "stolen material" and said they give adversaries key insight on how the U.S. military operates. He did not say which groups, or how the Pentagon knew they were researching the documents.

"There are groups out there that have said they are indeed mining this data to turn around and use against us," Lynn told a small group of reporters during a brief visit to Baghdad. "We think this is problematic."

The Pentagon furiously opposed the documents' release Saturday by the whistle-blower WikiLeaks website. Lynn's remarks came a day after WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange told CNN that the nearly 400,000 papers did not put troops at risk because the names of any soldiers or Iraqi civilians have been redacted.

The U.S. has said that the WikiLeaks release of secret Afghan and Iraq war documents threatens national security.

WikiLeaks posted about 77,000 Afghanistan war logs on its site in July, and the Pentagon concluded that no U.S. intelligence sources or practices were compromised by the posting. A few weeks later, Defense

Secretary Robert Gates said he was not yet aware of any Afghan people who were killed as the result of the leak, "but I put emphasis on the word 'yet.'"

Lynn said the leaked information would not change the way the estimated 50,000 U.S. troops in Iraq operate. But he said he is mulling ways to keep more documents from leaking in the future, such as having computer systems monitor for irregular data searches.

"It does seem like common-sense, and I don't think we're doing enough of it, frankly," Lynn said. In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Marine Col. David Lapan said WikiLeaks may have even more classified material than U.S. officials previously believed. He declined to characterize it, but WikiLeaks already has posted half a million secret Iraq and Afghanistan war files since July. The group is also believed to have another 15,000 Afghan war field reports, 260,000 diplomatic cables and U.S. video of casualties in Afghanistan.

DEATH OF AN EMPEROR

Animal lovers mourn giant stag killed in UK

By Jill Lawless
Associated Press

LONDON — It's a photo of animal majesty that has turned into a murder mystery: Who shot the Emperor?

Nature lovers on Tuesday were mourning a red stag dubbed the Emperor of Exmoor — a 9-foot giant reported to be the biggest wild animal in the British Isles. He was found dead days after his picture appeared in the national press.

The Emperor's size set him apart from the herd, but may also have made him prize prey for hunters willing to pay handsomely for such a majestic trophy. "With a set of antlers such as this deer had, it was basically going to kill him in the end," said Richard Austin, the photographer whose images appeared in newspapers — inevitably accompanied by the word "majestic."

"He was his own worst enemy, I suppose," Austin told the BBC. "Growing that big and that huge and that magnificent, he was a definite target."

For the 12 years of his life, the Emperor roamed Exmoor in southwest England, a wild swath of heath and woodland that has drawn hunters for 1,000 years. At 300 pounds, he towered over the other stags around him, and during the autumn mating season he easily kept them at bay as he attracted a harem of female deer.

Austin photographed the stag during last year's mating season and again this year, publishing photos that expanded the animal's renown.

The photos, first published Oct. 5, showed the Emperor standing regally in a field, his dramatic antlers held high, and roaring as two female deer looked on.

Mystery surrounds the stag's demise. Douglas Batchelor, head of the anti-hunting group League Against Cruel Sports, said he was shot two weeks ago near a place called Rackenford Moor. Local and national media including the BBC gave a similar location, close to a main road between the towns of Barnstaple and Tiverton.

The Emperor's body is long gone — his head possibly to a taxidermist, the rest probably to a butcher.

In most cases the hunter — for a fee — takes the antlers or entire head as a trophy. The landowner keeps the carcass, which often ends up being sold for meat. Exmoor's stags are also stalked by poachers, who sell their meat for cash. Austin said he deliberately did not reveal the Emperor's exact location, but some wondered whether the attention his images drew to the animal may have helped bring about its death.

"Without a doubt the publicity of this photo led to its death," said Manni Walton, European sales director of the Corbis photo agency.

Patrick Llewellyn, assistant picture editor at The Sunday Times Magazine, said it was possible publicity made the Emperor a target. "But anyone who is interested in choosing a trophy stag probably would've known of its existence before the exposure of the photograph anyway, so it is very hard to tell."

Local people were speculating furiously Tuesday about the identity and nationality of the hunter: Was it an American, a European, or a wealthy Briton who saw the picture and decided he wanted those magnificent antlers on his wall?

"Whoever has got the trophy is going to keep pretty quiet about it, because it has stirred the most awful furor," said Peter Donnelly, a deer management expert in the Exmoor area.

Iraq court sentences Saddam's foreign minister to death

By Jane Arraf
The Christian Science Monitor

BAGHDAD — Iraqis thirsting for vengeance as much as justice welcomed the death sentence Tuesday of one of Saddam Hussein's best-known officials, Tariq Aziz.

"The men of the former regime were all criminals — they killed many Iraqis, and it is about time to taste what the people were suffering," said Kareem Ahmed Jassim, a retired government employee playing cards at a coffee shop in central Baghdad.

But some politicians condemned the sentencing of the former deputy prime minister as a politically motivated move that could drive even more of a wedge into efforts to form a new government.

The judge who handed down the sentence, Mahmoud Saleh al-Hassan, ran unsuccessfully for parliament as part of the State of Law coalition of Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki. A major part of the trial was related to main targets of Saddam's campaign against Islamic parties — including al-Maliki's Shiite Dawa Party.

"We believe that the sentences announced today are intended to serve the interests of nominating Maliki for the prime minister's position," said Maysoon al-Damluji from the rival Iraqiya bloc, a secular coalition with strong Sunni support. She said the sentence was also aimed at diverting attention from leaked U.S. military documents linking al-Maliki's office to secret prisons and other abuses.

More than seven months after Iraqis went to the polls in national elections, al-Maliki is struggling to win enough support to lead a coalition government.

Aziz, who also served as foreign minister, is best known as the international face of the regime. A fluent English speaker, he was the only high-ranking Christian in Saddam's circle.

The high tribunal ruled that Aziz was guilty of crimes against humanity related to murder, torture and forced exile of members of Islamic parties opposed to Saddam's leadership.

Two other Saddam-era officials, including the former president's chief aide, were also sentenced to hang.

Aziz looked ashen and clutched the handrail in front of him as the judge literally shouted out the sentence, at one point asking the former foreign minister if he understood.

International experts have criticized the proceedings, saying former regime officials should be tried in an international court, free from political influence and intimidation.

But many Iraqis had little sympathy for Aziz, who is seen by some as having shown no remorse in the 10-month trial aired on Iraqi TV, during which he argued that he had not been involved in the regime's decisions.

"Are you kidding? I would have executed them even without a trial," said Younis Hassan, a butcher playing cards at the same coffee shop in central Baghdad.

Indonesia hit by deadly tsunami, volcano

By Slamet Riyadi
Associated Press

MOUNT MERAPI, Indonesia — A volcanic eruption and a tsunami killed scores of people hundreds of miles apart in Indonesia — spasms from the Pacific "Ring of Fire," which spawns disasters from deep within the Earth.

Tuesday's eruption of Mount Merapi killed at least 18 people, forced thousands to flee down its slopes and spewed burning ash and smoke high into the air on the island of Java.

Meanwhile, off the coast of Sumatra, about 800 miles west of the volcano, rescuers battled rough seas to reach Indonesia's Mentawai islands, where a 10-foot tsunami triggered by an earthquake Monday night swept away hundreds of homes, killing at least 113 villagers, said Mujiharto of the Health Ministry's crisis center. Up to 500 others are missing.

The twin disasters happened hours apart in one of the most seismically active regions on the planet.

Scientists have warned that pressure building beneath Merapi's lava dome could trigger its most powerful explosion in years.

But Gede Swantika, a government volcanologist, expressed hope the 9,737-foot mountain, which sent rocks and debris cascading down its southern slope, could be releasing steam slowly.

"It's too early to know for sure," he said, adding that a big blast could still be coming. "But if it continues like this for a while, we are looking at a slow, long eruption."

A 2006 eruption at Merapi killed two people, one in 1994 killed 60 people, and a 1930 blast killed 1,300.

After refusing to budge from the volcano's fertile slopes, saying they wanted to tend to their crops and protect their homes, villagers started streaming by the thousands into makeshift emergency shelters late Tuesday. Many carried sleeping mats, bags of clothes and food as they settled in.

Officials said earlier that by closely monitoring the volcano 310 miles southeast of the capital of Jakarta, they thought they could avoid casualties.

But the death toll rose quickly.

Police and volunteers were shown on Metro TV pulling at least 14 ash-covered bodies and carrying them to waiting vehicles.

Among the dead was a 2-month-old baby, said Mareta, a hospital worker who goes by only one name. The infant's tiny body was draped in a sheet as his mother cried.

Three people at Panti Nugroho hospital died of burns after being hit by a searing cloud of ash, said Agustinus Parjo, a spokesman.

Iran admits funding Afghan government

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran acknowledged Tuesday it has been sending funds to neighboring Afghanistan for years, but said the money was intended to aid reconstruction, not to buy influence in the office of Afghan President Hamid Karzai.

Karzai said Monday he receives millions of dollars in cash from Iran, adding that Washington gives him "bags of money" too because his office lacks funds.

In Washington, President Obama's press secretary, Robert Gibbs, denied that. "We're not in the big bags of cash business," he said Tuesday.

Earlier, State Department spokesman P.J. Crowley said some of the U.S. aid to Afghanistan is in cash.

U.S. officials asserted the money flowing from Tehran was proof that Iran is playing a double game in Afghanistan — wooing the government while helping Taliban insurgents fighting U.S. and NATO forces. Iran denies that.

"Iran has provided the country with plenty of help," Foreign Ministry spokesman Ramin Mehmanparast said Tuesday in his weekly news briefing in Tehran. "Iran has helped construction of Afghanistan and the preparation of its economic infrastructure and it will pursue it in the future, too."

Terry Lynn Jacobsen

JEROME — Terry Lynn Jacobsen, 59, of Jerome, went home to Heaven to fish in the river of life after a long, courageous battle with cancer Saturday, Oct. 23, 2010.

Terry was born Sept. 6, 1951, in Burley, Idaho, to Charles Merrill and Bertha Jacobsen.

He is survived by his wife of 28 years, Sally — “Hun Bun”; four siblings, Betty, Vern, Carol and Dean; as well as a large extended family and friends. Terry had three children, Thomas, Elizabeth and Shawna. He was preceded in death by his parents.

Terry loved the outdoors, fishing, hunting, camping, family gatherings and baseball. He was drafted by the Houston Astros right out of high school but chose to attend ISU briefly then served briefly in the U.S. Army. Terry worked many jobs, but his favorite was Ramsey Produce driving the 18-wheeler. Terry was very loving and positive; he never met a person he didn't like. He always had a fish story to tell. We all will greatly miss him.

There will be a memorial celebration at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 30, at The Father's Heart Church, 131 E. Ave. F in Jerome.

The family requests that, in lieu of flowers, a donation to The Father's Heart Church in care of Terry Jacobsen will greatly be appreciated.

Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

from 6 to 8 p.m. today at the Morrison Funeral Home, 188 Highway 24 in Rupert, and 11 to 11:45 a.m. Thursday at the church.

Lucile L. Woodall

BOISE — Lucile L. Woodall, 93, of Boise and formerly Twin Falls, passed away Saturday, Oct. 23, 2010, at a local assisted living facility.

She was born Aug. 23, 1917, in Soda Springs, Idaho, to Stanley O. “Fox” and Lyda Tharp. She married Henry G. “Hank” Woodall on June 15, 1938, and together they had two children, Marsha and Steve. Upon Hank's discharge from the Army following World War II, the family moved to Weiser in 1947, Boise in 1949 and then to Twin Falls in 1952. Following Hank's retirement from American Oil and the Twin Falls City Council, Hank and Lucile moved back to Boise in 1982.

Lucile was a member of the Presbyterian Church and Eastern Star. She and Hank were active members of the Twin Falls Bruin Boosters, University of Idaho Vandal Boosters and the College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagle Boosters. In her later years, she also became an enthusiastic NASCAR fan.

She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Hank; her daughter, Marsha; her sister, Gaila Muslin; and brother, Stanley O. Tharp Jr. She is survived by her son, Steve (Elise); grandchildren, Peter (Dawn) Moon, Paul (Marnie) Brown, Shauna (Sean) Erdmann, Lara (Chris) Unger, Lisa (Mike) Ranieri and Chris Woodall; as well as nine great-grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews.

At her request, no local funeral will be held. Interment will be at a later date in Fairview Cemetery in Soda Springs.

Doris Wright

FRUITLAND — Doris Wright, age 82, beloved mother and grandmother, passed away at her home Friday, Oct. 22, 2010.

A memorial service will be held at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 27, at the First United Methodist Church, 502 N. 11th St. in Payette. Inurnment will be announced at a later date. Services and arrangements are under the direction of Shaffer-Jensen Memory Chapel in Fruitland. Condolences may be sent to the family at www.shaffer-jensenchapel.com.

Doris was born Jan. 30, 1928, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Rasmus and Florence Ring. She graduated from Buhl High School in 1944. Doris graduated Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Idaho in 1948 with a degree in bacteriology and Arizona State University in 1951 with a degree in elementary education. In 1978, she received her master's degree in education from Boise State University.

In 1961, she married James Lewis Wright and, in 1964, settled in Rupert, where she began a long teaching career. Doris and Jim raised one child, Russ, during their wonderful stay in Rupert.

Doris enjoyed all sports, golf and fishing (especially the annual vacation at Williams Lake); however, her true passion was caring for and following after her three grandsons, Will, Ryan and Adam.

Doris was a member of the PEO sisterhood, Gamma Phi Beta and the United Methodist Church, as well as the ladies golf association.

In 2002, Doris moved with Russ, Andrea and her grandsons to Fruitland, where she spent the last years of her life following her favorite teams, the Fruitland Grizzlies and the Carroll College Saints. She now gets to see those games whenever she pleases. Doris met many wonderful friends, coaches and players that made her life extraordinary.

Doris was preceded in death by her parents; infant brother, Eugene; and her husband, Jim. She is survived by her sister, Betty (John) Conover; nieces, Marilyn and Peach and families; son, Russ; daughter-in-law, Andrea; and her three grandsons, Will, Ryan and Adam.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests any memorials be made to Dollars for Scholars Fruitland Chapter, in care of Shaffer-Jensen Memory Chapel, P.O. 730, Payette, ID 83661.

Inmate caught after escaping in SW Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Prison officials in southwestern Idaho say they've recaptured an inmate who walked away from his job in Boise earlier this month.

Michael Edward Austin, an inmate assigned to the South Idaho Correctional Institution's Community Work Center, was arrested late Monday after a burglary in Ada County.

When he was arrested, he had minor cuts, what authorities say resulted from breaking one of the burglarized home's windows.

The 44-year-old Austin has convictions for grand theft, driving under the influence and forgery in Twin Falls and Bannock counties.

Authorities: All three dead in Washington small plane crash

CHEHALIS, Wash. (AP) — A light plane that vanished in southwest Washington crashed and disintegrated on impact in remote, rugged terrain, killing all three people aboard, authorities said Tuesday.

A ground team that reached the crash site, about 10 miles northeast of Morton, found the wreckage of the twin-engine Cessna, said Lewis County sheriff's Chief Deputy Stacy Brown. The plane vanished from radar early Monday after leaving Chehalis for Lewiston, Idaho.

Searchers used information from radar tracking and reports from loggers who said they heard a plane turning.

The plane was registered to Pacific Cataract and Laser Institute of Chehalis, an eye surgery company. Two employees were reported aboard the plane, which was reportedly piloted by a veteran 70-year-old pilot from the Chehalis area.

In a statement Tuesday evening, PCLI Executive Vice President Debbie Eldredge said those on board included eye surgeon Dr. Paul Shenk of Woodland, laser technician Rod Rinta of Chehalis and contract pilot Ken Sabin of Chehalis.

“We are in full cooperation with the National Transportation and Safety Board in their federal investigation and anxiously awaiting answers to this tragedy,” Eldredge said.

The institute has more than 385 staffers in 17 offices in Alaska, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Oregon and Washington.

With snowfall increasing, a crew from the coroner's office was unable to reach the crash site Tuesday to retrieve the victims, Chief Deputy Coroner Dawn Harris said.

The sheriff's office, Federal Aviation Administration and the county coroner's office are investigating the crash, Brown said.

Massive windstorm howls across Midwest

By Tammy Webber
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — A massive storm with wind gusts up to 81 mph howled across the nation's midsection Tuesday, snapping trees and power lines, ripping off roofs, delaying flights and soaking commuters hunched under crumpled umbrellas.

Spanning from the Dakotas to the eastern Great Lakes, the unusual system mesmerized meteorologists because of its size and because it had barometric pressure similar to a Category 3 hurricane, but with much less destructive power.

Scientists said the storm had the force of a blizzard minus the snow.

"If it were colder, we'd have a blizzard with this system," said David Imy, operations chief at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Storm Prediction Center in Norman, Okla. But temperatures were in the 50s and 60s, instead of the 20s.

The National Weather Service said the system's pressure reading Tuesday was the lowest ever in a non-tropical storm in the mainland U.S. If confirmed, that would be worse than the pressure that produced the Blizzard of 1978, the March 1993 "Storm of the Century" or the November 1975 storm that sank the Edmund Fitzgerald freighter, memorialized in a song by Gordon Lightfoot.

The storm blew in from the Pacific Northwest on the strength of a jet stream that is about one-third stronger than normal for this time of year, Imy said. As the system moved into the nation's heartland, it drew in warm air needed to fuel thunderstorms. Then the winds intensified and tornados formed. Add to that the fact the storm was moving fast, 50 to 60 mph, and the winds became even stronger, Imy said.

By Tuesday morning, sustained winds were about 35 to 40 mph and gusting much higher. A gust of 81 mph was recorded in Butlerville, Ohio, and 80 mph in Greenfield, Ind., according to NOAA.

At one point, more than 145,000 homes and businesses were without power in Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and the St. Louis area.

The storms were headed toward the East Coast by late afternoon, and winds were expected to subside in the evening. But forecasters said the winds could pick up again on Wednesday.

A tornado touched down in Racine County, Wis., where two people were injured when a section of roof was torn off a tractor factory, and in Van Wert County, Ohio, near the Indiana border, where a barn was flattened and flipped over a tractor-trailer and camper. A tornado also touched down in Peotone, Ill., where three people were injured when a home's roof came off, and twisters were suspected in several other states.

More complete health coverage.

It's simple math.
Together, both plans could protect you from out-of-pocket costs.

Having more complete health insurance coverage is vital. Medicare alone may not be enough. Medicare Parts A and B don't cover all of your medical expenses or the cost of most prescription drugs. Together, an AARP® Medicare Supplement Insurance Plan and an AARP® MedicareRx plan, both insured by UnitedHealthcare Insurance Company, may help provide a solution.

- AARP Medicare Supplement Insurance is offered in a variety of plans to help fit your needs. Medicare supplement plans help pay for some of the remaining out-of-pocket medical costs not paid for by Medicare.
- AARP MedicareRx Plans are prescription drug plans that provide coverage for the high cost of most prescription drugs (not paid for by Medicare Parts A and B).

Together, both plans help provide more complete health coverage.

CSI's new pastry oven turns out glorious little MACARONS

Photos by MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

With its bright colors and delicate texture, the macaron has been described as divine treat or gem of the cookie world. College of Southern Idaho baking and pastry instructor Susan Ettesvold says the finicky little cookie is one of the seven most expensive desserts in the world. Pictured are the raspberry and peach macaron, top, lemon blueberry macaron and passion fruit macaron, all made by CSI students.

Reporter Melissa Davlin gently presses the top and bottom of a macaron together as she and fellow bakers finish their coffee-flavored macarons.

On Oct. 20, I joined Susan Ettesvold's Baking and Pastry Arts students for a morning of macaron making in the program's new baking facility at College of Southern Idaho.

The Baking and Pastry Arts program is a one-year course with 16 students who spend their days preparing desserts for CSI's Desert Cafe and other fundraising events. The pastry program is in its second year, and Ettesvold hopes to expand it to a two-year program.

My day started at 8 a.m. in a Canyon building classroom. A handful of students brought breads and cookies to share, which their classmates nibbled on while watching presentations on famous pastry chefs. ("Better up the spinning class," Ettesvold said before taking a treat.)

Ettesvold briefed us on the day's project: macarons. These aren't the coconut macaroons that are so common in the U.S. — French macarons are sweet sandwiches composed of buttercream or jam fillings and meringue-like cookies that are made from almond flour, sugar and egg whites. The desserts, which have been tea time staples in Paris for years, are gaining popularity in America, according to NPR, the Wall Street Journal and Salon.com.

When made properly, the cookies are shiny and develop a base that pastry chefs call the piéd, or foot. Such delicate cookies require precision in preparation, Ettesvold said. Any small misstep can result in imperfect macarons. If the batter is stirred more than 20 times, the cookies will have oily spots; fewer than 10 times, and they

Interested in joining the Baking and Pastry Arts program? The spring-semester Professional Baking and Pastry 1 class meets from 8 a.m. to 1:50 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, Jan. 18 to May 12. Instructor Susan Ettesvold encourages prospective students to read the FAQ on her site, csi.edu/dir.asp?settesvold. Registration starts Monday. Visit csi.edu for information.

... or just eat the food

There are only a handful of Desert Cafe days left this year, but you can still taste the baking and pastry arts students' wares at lunches served from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. today, Thursday, Nov. 10, Nov. 11, Dec. 1 and Dec. 2. The Desert Cafe is in the Desert building on the College of Southern Idaho campus in Twin Falls.

When it's chilly outside, and you want to take advantage of every moment of sunlight, what could be better for dinner than a casserole?

But who makes the best casseroles in south-central Idaho? The Times-News wants to find out.

To enter, submit the recipe for your family's favorite casserole by Friday. From the entrants, we will select the recipes that best fit the following criteria:

- Easy to make (not a lot of special equipment or techniques required)
- Uses commonly found ingredients (a few specialty ingredients OK)

- Versatile (substitutions can be made easily if an ingredient is unavailable)
- We'll give extra points for casseroles that are unexpected in flavor or construction and those that have a good story (perhaps they were great-grandma's recipe from the old country, or you found the recipe in a cookbook you bought on your honeymoon).

Finalists will be selected based on recipes, and those chosen cooks will need to be available the week of Nov. 8 to demonstrate how to make the casserole for a reporter and photographer (and have a completed casserole available for them to sample). The winner — chosen based on the taste of the casserole as well as the recipe criteria — will be announced Nov. 17.

Submit your recipes to reporter Ariel Hansen at ahansen@magicvalley.com (deadline 5 p.m. Friday), or drop them off in person at the Times-News offices, 132 Fairfield St. W., Twin Falls (deadline noon Friday). Include a phone number where you can be reached during the day.

Macarons

won't be shiny.

We learned tips on how to avoid common errors and set off to change into our pastry chef get-ups. Ettesvold hooked me up with a loaner chef hat and jacket, and I followed the students to the kitchen.

The new facility in the Canyon building has eight tables, each with its own stand mixers and power stations. Ettesvold's table at the front sits under an angled mirror, which allows her to demonstrate baking techniques without everyone crowding around. With the exception of a big stand mixer and storage bins, everything in the bake shop is new, Ettesvold said. In the pastry program's first year, the students shared a kitchen with instructor Mike Johnson's culinary arts students, making for crowded class sessions, said student Sladjana Mandura.

I teamed up with Mandura and her baking partner, Tina Lowder, to create coffee macarons. The plan: sprinkle instant coffee on top of vanilla macarons after they bake. A coffee buttercream would complete the dessert.

Remembering how easy it was to mess up the macarons at this stage, I let Lowder and Mandura stir the batter while I snuck a taste of Ettesvold's test macarons in the hallway. The dainty dessert hits the mouth with a crisp airiness that gives way to a sweet density, much like a meringue.

Oh mon Dieu. The French are on to something.

Back in the kitchen, Alissa Dean and Taylor Twitchell had already scooped most of their rum-flavored macaron batter into a piping bag and let me pipe some circles onto the tray. My efforts weren't nearly as pretty as theirs, but the two humored me. Mine would be the special VIP desserts, they said.

While I worked, Twitchell told me about her love of the pastry program. Classes can get intense, she said, but it's worth it when they get to show off their work to diners at the Desert Cafe.

"When we give out desserts, we really want to impress," Twitchell said. And it's working. "People are loving it." She pulled out her cell phone and showed me a picture of a wedding cake she had baked recently. Large-scale cakes helped her realize how much she loves pastries.

"I just decided, you know, this is what I want to do," she said.

I chatted with other students about their creations: Lemon and blueberry by Megan McFarland and her partner. Pumpkin by Trevor Dixon and his partner. Chocolate with gold luster by Claire Bearden's team. Thursday's Desert Cafe diners would be in for a colorful treat.

Across the room, Ettesvold pulled out another demonstration batch. These were shiny but cracked; she had forgotten to double up the sheet pans, which protects the cookies from too much heat.

"Better me than them," she said as she reminded students to use two of the metal sheets.

With their coffee macarons piped and dried, Mandura and Lowder loaded the trays into the industrial baking oven, which is one of the coolest features of the new kitchen. The oven holds 12 trays, rotates to distribute heat evenly, and has a steam injector to help bread develop nice crusts. (The program doesn't have much of a bread focus right now, Ettesvold said, but that may change.)

As the racks rotated, we watched the pieds form on our tiny cookies. So far, so good — they didn't crack, and they looked shiny. While they cooled, Mandura retreated to the prep table to make the coffee buttercream that would fill the centers. Her classmates noticed and came over with clean spoons for a sample.

"This is not lunch," she told them, then let them sample anyway.

As soon as the cookies cooled, Mandura and I filled them. She showed me the best way to pipe the buttercream onto the cookies: Start at the edge and circle in, then twist the top slightly when sandwiching the two together. By the end, I was no macaron master, but the ones we made were pretty darn tasty.

When I left the kitchen to return to my computer, the students hooked me up with a few macarons for the road. I had to turn in my awesome chef coat and hat, but the knowledge that I helped produce such delicious treats was souvenir enough for me.

Making marvelous macarons

Susan Ettesvold uses this basic recipe from Hisako Ogita's "I Love Macarons" and adds colors and flavors to the macaron batter. You can find almond flour in health food sections of most grocery stores or in some baking sections. Bob's Red Mill almond flour is widely available in Magic Valley but is more coarse than other brands. Pulsing in a food processor with sugar will help break down the almond bits, Ettesvold said, but make sure you do it at the same time as the sugar; otherwise, it turns into almond butter.

Want more than vanilla? Experiment with other flavors — ginger, pumpkin, raspberry, lemon, pistachio. Add liquid food coloring or flavors, like pureed fruit, to the whipped egg whites before adding flour. Add dry flavors, like powders or dehydrated fruit, to the flour mix. Use small amounts of intense flavors so you don't throw off the liquid-to-dry ingredient ratio.

And you may have to adjust your oven temperature. "Macarons make you learn about your oven too," Ettesvold wrote in an e-mail to the Times-News. "The batches I've baked at home were terrific at 350 (degrees). In our commercial oven, 300-310 was just right."

BASIC MACARON BATTER

Adapted from Hisako Ogita's "I Love Macarons."

2/3 cup (3 ounces) almond flour
1 1/2 cups (5.25 ounces)

powdered sugar
3 large egg whites, room temperature
5 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract, or seeds from half a vanilla bean

Preheat oven to 375 degrees and line metal baking sheets with parchment paper. In a food processor, grind almond flour and powdered sugar together to a fine powder. Sift the mixture through a medium-mesh sieve twice. Set aside.

In a stainless steel mixing bowl, beat egg whites on high speed until they are foamy. Gradually add the granulated sugar to the egg whites, making sure to scrape mixture off sides of bowl. Add vanilla and stir lightly. When the meringue is stiff, firm and has a glossy texture, it is done.

Add half of the sifted almond flour mixture. Stir with a spatula while scooping up from the bottom of the bowl. Add the rest of the flour and mix lightly in a circular motion. When you run out of flour, press and spread out the batter against the bowl's sides. Repeat the scooping-and-pressing about 15 times. When batter is nicely firm and drips slowly as you scoop it with a spatula, the mixture is done.

Attach a .4-inch tip to a pastry bag. Twist the bag to hold the tip tightly to prevent batter from leaking out. Pour batter into pastry bag and clip the bag top to prevent batter from escaping.

Squeeze batter onto parchment paper-lined metal baking sheets, making 1-inch circles. Space the batter circles at least 1/2 inch apart.

Rap the baking sheet firmly against the counter or other flat surface. Dry the batter at room temperature, uncovered, for 15 minutes. When dry, a slight crust should form on top of the macarons, and the batter shouldn't stick to your fingers when you touch them.

Place oven racks in the center of the oven. Stack the baking sheet with the batter circles into an empty baking sheet and slide both into the oven. (The doubled baking sheet prevents the macarons from getting overbaked.) Bake for 15 to 18 minutes, until slightly crisp and cracked on top. Rotate the tray throughout to bake the macarons evenly.

If the insides of the macarons are still soft after 15 minutes, lower the oven temperature to 300 degrees, cover the tray with aluminum foil, and bake for another 2 to 3 minutes.

Remove baking sheet from oven and cool. Spread cream between two of the macaron shells.

SIMPLE BUTTERCREAM

1 pound lightly salted butter, softened
2 pounds powdered sugar, sifted
2 teaspoons vanilla extract

Cream the butter until light and fluffy. Add the powdered sugar and mix on low until combined, then whip until smooth. Add the vanilla and continue beating until the icing is smooth and light. Add desired flavors and colors to complement the macaron.

Get new ‘green’ ideas for your backyard garden at Farms and Food Conference

Times-News

Can backyards and small acreages really help make communities sustainable? Next week’s Farms and Food Conference hosted by the University of Idaho Extension will begin to answer that question in a one-day conference and field trip Nov. 4 in Gooding.

This event will help small-acreage landowners discover how to expand and improve their management practices, organizers said. Concurrent sessions focus on either farm production (soil, compost, forage quality and budgeting) or integrated farm systems (chickens, marketing, bees and food quality).

Rodent control and greenhouse gardening will also offer some solutions to problems that face small producers. Even producers who have just begun and plan to only feed their families will benefit, organizers said.

“With a growing interest in alternative farming, we hope this conference will help small-acreage farmers balance ideas and practicalities of integrated farm systems,” said Lauren Hunter, U of I Extension educator.

A panel of local grower experts will discuss bringing animals back on the farm. A tour of a small farm and greenhouse concludes the conference.

Cost is $15. Register: 943-4417 or gooding@uidaho.edu. The event will be at the Gooding County Extension Office, 203 Lucy Lane on the Gooding fairgrounds.

Bartenders call on spirits for Halloween

By Michelle Locke
For The Associated Press

The trick to a memorable Halloween is knowing when to treat yourself. So, while the children are loading up on bite-sized pieces of future dental bills, why not sip on a cocktail inspired by a classic film of horror and suspense?

After all, this is the night when spirits roam.

Just about any holiday inspires libation creation, but there’s something about Halloween that gets bartenders in touch with their inner Wes Cravens.

Take the “Red Rum” created by Dave Greekwood, bar supervisor of the Boston Burlington Marriott. This is in honor of the “The Shining,” in which scary kid Danny sees messages of “Redrum” that are a warning about his even scarier dad, Jack. When the message is reflected in a mirror, the meaning becomes clear.

To make the drink, Greekwood burns a sage leaf and places a rocks glass over it to absorb the smoke. Then he muddles another sage leaf with 1 ounce of elderflower liqueur. After that comes 2 ounces of silver rum, 1 ounce each of pomegranate liqueur and pomegranate juice and a scoop of ice. He gives it a shake and a strain and then garnishes with one last burning sage leaf “to keep the bad spirits away.”

“The Shining is one of the best scary stories ever told,” says Greekwood, who thinks the two undead little girls portrayed in the film are the most haunting image of any horror movie. And he says the Red Rum cocktail was specifically inspired by the scenes of a hallway overflowing with blood. “I hope Jack would be proud.”

For something a little more subtle, Jack Huang, owner of Basho Japanese Brasserie in Boston, uses sake for “The Samurai,” inspired by the onryo, or vengeful spirit, of Japanese folklore. Huang sought to recreate the lingering, deadly curse that haunts the characters in “The Grudge,” a 2004 remake of classic Japanese horror film “Ju-on.”

The drink is made with 2 1/2 ounces of vodka, 2 ounces of sake, a half ounce of elderflower liqueur and 1 ounce of fresh lime juice, all combined in a shaker over ice and garnished with a sprig of fresh mint. The idea is the elderflower liqueur lingers on the palate after the first few sips, like a haunting spirit.

This recipe calls for homemade grenadine, which resembles blood in this vampire-inspired cocktail.

Dracula doesn’t drink cocktails. At least not those served over ice. But if he did, he might like New York City mixologist Jonathan Pogash’s Vampire Bite, a deep red concoction inspired by movies like “Nosferatu” and “30 Days of Night.”

Pogash, bartender at Bookmarks Lounge, sees two ways to approach Halloween. One is to go the locavore route and take advantage of seasonal ingredients. “Anything with apples — apple cider is great. If you’re making a Halloween punch there are all kinds of baking spices like cloves and cinnamon and nutmeg.”

Or, you can use ripe blood oranges and grenadine and practice a “gore is more” aesthetic.

Pogash likes the Halloween bar scene. “People are definitely more fun, they’re dressed up. Even the day before or the day after.”

Of course, sometimes things can get a little too frightful, especially when patrons disguise themselves as characters like scream king Jason of “Friday the 13th” fame. “It’s a little freaky bartending and not seeing people’s faces and just seeing someone walk up to you in a Jason mask.”

VAMPIRE BITE

This recipe calls for homemade grenadine, which resembles blood in this vampire-inspired cocktail. Don’t be tempted to use purchased grenadine, as it is too sweet, too thin and will change the flavor of the drink. And if blood oranges aren’t available, use a slice of regular orange that has been soaked in the “blood.”

If you have trouble finding tamarind soda (check the grocer’s ethnic aisle), tamarind juice can blended with seltzer water.

Start to finish: 1 hour (15 minutes active)

Servings: 1 (plus extra “blood”)

For the grenadine “blood”:

1/2 cup pomegranate juice
1/2 cup sugar
Several drops orange flower water

For the cocktail:

Ice
1 1/2 ounces silver tequila
1/2 ounce Campari
1 ounce blood orange juice
2 ounces tamarind soda
1/2 ounce grenadine “blood”
1 slice blood orange (optional)

To make the grenadine “blood,” in a small saucepan over high heat, combine the pomegranate juice and sugar. Bring to a boil and heat until the sugar is dissolved. Add the orange flower water, then reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Remove from the heat, transfer to an airtight container and refrigerate until chilled.

In a highball glass filled with ice, combine the tequila, Campari, blood orange juice and soda. Lightly stir, then top with grenadine “blood.” Garnish with a slice of blood orange.

Inspired by Halloween's most iconic candies, these cupcakes are a totally different take on the familiar yellow, orange and white treat.

Your favorite Halloween candy, as a cupcake treat

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

As one of Halloween's most iconic candies, candy corn seemed worthy of a makeover. After all, we've seen the candy mixed into cookie dough, sprinkled over ice cream, worked into brownies and blondies, even used to infuse vodka for a very adult sort of sticky tricky treat.

But we hadn't seen candy corn reworked as a cupcake, so we decided to give it a try. Truth be told, no actual candy corn is harmed in the making of this recipe. But there would be nothing stopping you from sprinkling a few over the white frosting.

To get these cupcakes to bake up with clear distinctions between the yellow and orange layers of the cake, the recipe uses a pound cake batter, rather than a traditional (and lighter) yellow cake batter. The result is a rich and hearty cupcake.

CANDY CORN CUPCAKES

Start to finish: 2 hours (45 minutes active) Makes 16

For the cupcakes:
2 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup (2 sticks) butter, room temperature

1 cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 teaspoon orange extract
4 whole eggs
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons heavy cream
Yellow and orange gel food coloring

For the frosting:

1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, room temperature
2 cups powdered sugar, sifted
2 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Heat the oven to 325 degrees. Lightly coat the cups of a muffin tin with baking spray.

In a medium bowl, sift together the flour, baking powder and salt.

In another bowl, use an electric mixer to beat together the butter and sugar. Beat for 5 minutes, until very light and fluffy. Beat in the vanilla and orange extracts.

In a liquid measuring cup with a pour spout, beat together the whole eggs, yolks and cream. With the mixer on medium-high, a bit at a time pour the eggs into the butter-sugar mixture. This should take about 5 minutes.

Using a spoon or silicone spatula, gently but thoroughly fold the flour mixture into the butter and egg mixture.

Divide the batter into 2 bowls, one having slightly more batter than the other. Add several drops of yellow food coloring to the bowl with slightly more batter, then gently mix in until evenly colored. Repeat using orange coloring for the second bowl of batter.

Divide the orange batter between the cups of the prepared muffin tin.

Transfer the yellow batter to a medium zip-close bag. Snip off one corner, then gently squeeze (pipe) the batter over the orange batter in each cup, creating 2 layers of colored cake. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean. Allow to cool for 5 minutes, then transfer to a rack to finish cooling.

Once the cupcakes have cooled, prepare the frosting.

In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to beat together the butter, sugar and milk until smooth and creamy. Add the vanilla and beat to combine.

To finish the cupcakes, overturn them so the bottoms face up. If the tops are too rounded for them to sit flat once overturned, they can be trimmed with a serrated knife.

Transfer the frosting to a zip-close bag. Cut off one corner of the bag, then squeeze the frosting into a slightly pointed mound on top of each cupcake.

Temperature of oven may be culprit

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Q: After using the same brownie recipe for 20 years, my brownies now turn out gooey in the middle. What would cause that?

A: Small changes can cause a difference in how your brownies turn out, including switching to a different kind of flour or using margarine instead of butter.

However, the first thing I'd check is your oven. Home ovens routinely run 25 to 50 degrees off, either higher or lower. If the oven has started running a little lower, you may be baking at a lower temperature without realizing it.

It's easy to check it yourself. Oven thermometers are available at most hardware and kitchen-supply stores. Ovens also can have hot spots, so it's a good idea to try the thermometer in a couple of places.

If the oven is running a little high or low, you can make a note of it and adjust the setting when you heat it. If it's more than 50 degrees off, though, it would be a good idea to call a repair service and have it checked out.

Dinner in 35 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

There’s something comforting and basic about this dish. Its mostly-pantry ingredients, plus sweet turkey sausage and cannellini beans, provide mild flavor, which means this is a soup that young cooks can pull together and will want to dig into. See whether it fits into your weeknight rotation.

Leftovers are better refrigerated, not frozen (to preserve the texture of the pasta). When reheating, you might need to add more broth or tomato juices to coax the mixture back into soupy territory.

Serve with garlic bread. Adapted from “The Old Farmer’s Almanac Everyday Recipes,” by the editors of “The Old Farmer’s Almanac” (Yankee Publishing, 2010).

SPINACH AND PASTA SOUP

- 1 pound turkey or chicken sausage, without casings
- 1 medium onion
- 1 or 2 large cloves garlic
- 28 ounces canned whole peeled tomatoes, drained
- 4 cups water
- 4 cups no-salt-added chicken broth, such as Kitchen Basics brand
- 8 ounces dried mini-farfalle (bow-tie) pasta
- 8 ounces baby spinach leaves
- 15 ounces (1 can) no-salt-added cannellini (white kidney) beans, such as Eden brand
- Kosher salt
- Freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese, for serving (optional)

Pinch pieces of the sausage and place in a stockpot over medium-high heat. Cook the sausage, stirring to break up large clumps, until the exterior is no longer pink (it need not be fully cooked through at this point).

Cut the onion into small dice to yield 1 cup. Mince the garlic (to taste). Coarsely chop the tomatoes, reserving their juices.

Add the onion and garlic to the pot; cook for 4 minutes, stirring a few times, until just softened, then add the tomatoes and their juices.

Stir in 2 cups of the water and the 4 cups of broth. Increase the heat to high and bring to a boil, then add the pasta and cook for 3 minutes; it will still be firm.

Rinse, then coarsely chop the spinach. Drain and rinse the beans.

Add the remaining 2 cups of water, the spinach and the beans to the pot. Stir, then cover and cook for 5 to 8 minutes; the spinach should be tender, the pasta should be al dente and the sausage will be cooked through. Season with salt to taste (keeping in mind that cheese might be added).

Divide among individual wide shallow bowls; sprinkle with the freshly grated cheese, if desired. Serve hot.

Makes 6 servings.

Chocolate toffee apples

By Julie Rothman
The Baltimore Sun

Larney Birkenbach from Parkville, Md., was looking for a recipe for making chocolate toffee apples. He said that back in the 1950s there was a street vendor in downtown Baltimore who made them and sold them on sticks. Nowadays, these goodies are available this time of year in many grocery stores and farmers’ markets, but they can be a bit expensive, and it’s easy to make them at home.

Dorothy Griffith from Sparks, Md., sent in a recipe she clipped some years ago from this column. The recipe originally was sent in by Jay Carter of Baltimore and came from the September 1976 issue of House and Garden magazine.

The recipe is straightforward, but you must use a candy thermometer and make sure that the candy coating reaches the proper temperature. I used tart Granny Smith apples, as the original tester suggested, which made for a delicious combination with the sweetness of the chocolate caramel coating. One caveat: After about 24 hours, the apples can begin to sweat and the candy coating can start to slide, so it’s best to eat them the day they are made. This yummy and almost healthy homemade fall treat was a big hit at my house.

CHOCOLATE TOFFEE APPLES

Makes: 12 apples.

- 1 cup (2 sticks) butter or margarine
- 1 (16 ounce) package (2 1/4 cups) brown sugar
- Dash salt
- 1 cup light corn syrup
- 1 (14-ounce) can sweetened condensed milk
- 3 (1 ounce each) squares unsweetened chocolate
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 12 apples
- 12 sticks

In a heavy 3-quart saucepan, melt butter. Stir in brown sugar and salt. Add corn syrup. Stir to combine. Gradually stir in condensed milk. Add chocolate squares. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until candy reaches the firm ball stage (245 degrees), about 12 to 15 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla extract. Put apples on sticks (insert stick through core, but not in the stem end). Dip apples in candy and allow to cool on buttered baking sheet.

Eating lighter: Chicken thighs with apple

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

This is a win-win dish: Apple pie spices and honey provide the sweetness we don't usually have at week-night meals (dessert is rare), and diced apples melt into the sweet-savory sauce for the chicken.

Skinless chicken breast halves can be used instead of chicken thighs, but the meat might not end up quite as moist; if you use them, reduce the oven time to 40 to 45 minutes.

HONEY-BRAISED CHICKEN THIGHS WITH APPLE

8 servings
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg

1/4 teaspoon salt
3 pounds bone-in, skinless chicken thighs (8 large thighs or 16 small thighs), trimmed of all excess fat
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 medium onion, finely chopped (1 cup)
2 large, crisp apples, peeled, cored and cut into 1-inch pieces
3/4 cup plus 3 tablespoons apple cider
3/4 cup low-sodium or homemade chicken broth
3 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons cornstarch

Preheat the oven to 300 degrees.
Combine the cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg and salt. Rub the spice mixture all over the chicken thighs.
Heat the oil in a large shallow ovenproof braising pan or roasting pan large enough to hold all the chicken, over medium-high heat. Add the chicken thighs, smooth sides down; if the pan seems crowded, cook the thighs in 2 batches. Cook until the thighs have some brown color, about 4 minutes, then turn them over and cook for 2 to 3 minutes. Transfer the browned pieces to a large plate.

After all the chicken has been browned, add the onion to the pan. Reduce the heat as needed so the onion cooks without burning; this will take 5 to 6 minutes. Add the apple pieces and cook for 2 to 3 minutes, stirring, then add 3/4 cup of the apple cider, the broth and honey. Bring the liquid to a boil then add the browned chicken pieces. Cover the pan and transfer to the oven.

Bake for about 1 hour, or until the chicken is cooked through and tender.

Transfer the chicken and any intact apple pieces to a serving bowl or platter. Return the pan to the stove, over high heat so the liquid in the pan comes to a boil.

Meanwhile, whisk together the remaining 3 tablespoons of apple cider and the cornstarch in a small bowl so the cornstarch dissolves, then whisk that mixture into the liquid in the pan.

As soon as the liquid thickens to form a sauce, remove the pan from the heat. Pour the thickened sauce over the chicken and apples. Serve hot.

There’s more than one way to approach Swiss chard

By Vered Guttman
Special to The Washington Post

If you have never cooked with Swiss chard and dare to do so, here’s the place to start: Replace the sauteed spinach in your favorite side-dish recipe with these beet-family greens. You’ll notice that the chard is milder, yet slightly bitter. Definitely worth trying.

But if your favorite spinach recipe calls for cooking the vegetable to death and leaving it limp on the plate, don’t bother.

I’m a Swiss chard fan. I’m always amazed by talented cooks who put a lot of thought into the diversity of their main courses but treat their veggies — especially the leafy green ones — like second-class citizens.

The popular route with chard seems to be rinse, chop, saute in olive oil. That’s a fine way to go, but because we need greens to be part of our diet, we ought to employ a variety of techniques to prepare them. If you make them tasty — and that is easy to do, because these leaves are so flavorful — you and your family will like to eat them.

My beautiful 1-year-old niece in Israel, Roni, will not touch a banana. But she will happily devour a bowl of Swiss chard chicken soup with just a touch of lemon. To me, she is proof that kids are not born with an attitude toward the green stuff.

One of the best ways to use chard is to incorporate it into a main course. Wrap a fish fillet with chard before roasting. Chop it into rice dishes. Add it to lentil or pea soups in the last five minutes of cooking. I love substituting chard for spinach in spanakopita (try adding roasted fennel seeds as well), and it’s wonderful in any salad with dry legumes such as fava beans, black-eyed peas and chickpeas.

The sturdy leaves are perfect for rolling and stuffing: with rice and ground turkey, with ground beef or with lentils and bulgur. When green chard leaves are first chopped and sauteed in olive oil for five minutes (sound familiar?), they turn into something fabulous once they are whisked into scrambled eggs, then topped with crumbled feta and a sprinkling of black pepper.

While most Middle Eastern recipes use only the green parts of the leaf, Italian and French recipes treat the stalk of the white variety of Swiss chard as a vegetable by itself. It is used like celery, in gratins and in the tripart Italian base for stews, along with onion and carrot.

The Greek and French love their chard so much, they incorporate it into dessert as well. They prepare sweet pastries stuffed with chard, raisins, and pine nuts or walnuts. (Personally, I’d rather eat overcooked spinach.)

When buying chard, choose bunches with small, vivid-green leaves and firm stalks. Store in the refrigerator for up to a week. Chard is rich in vitamins A and C, calcium and antioxidants.

And, despite that, it is still pretty delicious.

Guttman is a Chevy Chase, Md., caterer.

Photos by DEB LINDSEY/For The Washington Post

If you have never cooked with Swiss chard, here’s the place to start: Replace the sauteed spinach in your favorite side-dish recipe with it.

Swiss Chard and Fava Bean Dip.

MAKE AHEAD: The fava beans need to be soaked in cool water overnight. The dip can be covered in an airtight container, with plastic wrap placed directly on the surface, and refrigerated for up to 1 day. From Chevy Chase, Md., caterer Vered Guttman.

- 1 cup dried split fava beans (see headnote)
- 1 bunch Swiss chard (3/4 to 1 pound)
- 6 tablespoons olive oil, plus more as needed
- 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt, plus more to taste

Place the dried split fava beans in a bowl and cover with cool water. Cover with a plate and let sit overnight.

Drain through a fine-mesh strainer; discard the water. Transfer the beans to a medium saucepan and cover with water by 1/2 inch. Bring to a boil over high heat, skimming any foam from the surface. Reduce the heat to medium-low and cook for 1 1/2 hours, so the fava beans are completely soft and the contents of the pot resemble porridge.

Use your hands to tear the green parts off the stems of the chard. Discard the stems and coarsely chop the leaves. Squeeze out any excess moisture.

Heat the oil in a skillet over medium heat. Add the chard and cook for about 10 minutes, stirring once or twice, until it has darkened in color.

Transfer the Swiss chard with the oil to the bowl of a food processor; add the 1/2 teaspoon of salt. Use a fine-mesh strainer to scoop the soft fava beans into the processor, shaking out as much liquid as possible before each addition.

Puree to form a smooth, green and creamy mixture. Taste, and add salt as needed. The dip will thicken a bit as it cools.

Transfer to a bowl for serving. If not using right away, let the dip cool, then press plastic wrap directly on the surface to prevent discoloration. Refrigerate until ready to use (up to 1 day).

BULGUR- AND BEEF-STUFFED SWISS CHARD ROLLS

Try these instead of stuffed grape leaves for your next party with hors d’oeuvres (cut in half). Stuffed chard is a popular dish in Israel.

Serve as a main course with a crisp green salad.

MAKE AHEAD: The filling can be made a day in advance and refrigerated in an airtight container.

From Chevy Chase, Md., caterer Vered Guttman. 6 servings

For the chard and stuffing: 2 bunches Swiss chard, preferably with small, whole leaves, rinsed well (about 1 3/4 pounds total)

- 1 1/2 cups coarsely ground bulgur
- 12 ounces lean ground beef
- 1/2 medium or 1 small tomato, chopped
- 1/4 cup flat-leaf parsley, finely chopped
- 1 1/2 teaspoons kosher salt
- 1 1/2 teaspoons freshly ground black pepper

For the sauce: 1/4 cup olive oil, plus more for greasing the pot

- Swiss chard stems, chopped (about 1 cup)
- 1 medium yellow onion, chopped
- 2 medium cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 1/3 cups low-sodium chicken broth
- Freshly squeezed juice of 1 or 2 lemons (1/3 cup)
- Kosher salt

For the chard and stuffing: Bring a large pot of water to a boil over high heat. One by one, hold each bunch of chard upside down by the stems and plunge the leaves into the water for 5 seconds. Transfer to a colander. When cool enough to handle, cut off the stems below the leaves and coarsely chop to yield 1 cup; reserve them for the sauce. (If the stem that’s still attached to the leaf is very thick, use a knife to flatten it. If the leaves are large, you can cut them in half crosswise, but it is okay to prepare large stuffed leaves; they will still cook well.)

Place the bulgur in a fine-mesh strainer and rinse under cool running water for 1 minute. Drain and transfer to a mixing bowl.

Add the beef, tomato, parsley, salt and pepper to the bowl; use your clean hands to mix well and form the stuffing.

For the sauce: Heat the oil in a small skillet over medium heat. Add the chopped chard stems, onion and garlic; cook for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the stems have softened. Add the sugar and cook for 1 minute, stirring to dissolve, then add the broth and lemon juice. Increase the heat to medium-high and bring just to a boil, then remove from the heat. Add salt to taste.

Use a little oil to grease the bottom of a medium Dutch oven or 10-inch skillet; it should be large enough to hold the stuffed leaves in a single layer.

To assemble the rolls, work with 3 or 4 leaves at a time. Lay them flat on a cutting board with the veined side up and tapered ends pointing away from you. Place 2 to 3 tablespoons of the stuffing (depending on the size of the leaf) at the leaf end that’s closest to you. Roll over once, then fold in the sides and roll to complete the package (without making the roll too tight). Repeat to use all of the leaves; you might have a little stuffing left over, which could be placed in the pot or reserved for another use.

Arrange the rolls in the Dutch oven or skillet. Pour the sauce evenly over the top. Cover and place over medium-high heat and bring just to a boil, then reduce the heat to low and cook for 20 minutes or until the stuffing is cooked through; you might need to make a shallow cut in one roll to judge doneness.

Serve warm.

Some Relationships Were Just Meant To Be

Trust, compromise, understanding, a commitment to meet each others needs, an appreciation for what each brings to the relationship, chemistry... but most of all, just knowing it's right.

A lot goes into a great relationship.

Because if it's right, all of those other things will come. That's the way it was with C3, a perfect partner, everything the Magic Valley was looking for in a relationship. We belonged together.

That doesn't mean a lot of hard work didn't go into making it happen, it just means both of us knew it was worth working for. When it's meant to be, work becomes a labor of love, a relationship that has grown by almost 900 jobs since June, and shortly that number will swell to nearly 1,000. Proving that, like all great relationships, with time it only gets better.

It is our desire that as a community we can grow together for a long, long time. Thank you for being such an important part of our lives.

Broncos roll past Louisiana Tech

By Todd Dvorak
The Associated Press

BOISE — Kellen Moore threw two touchdown passes and caught another on a trick play, helping No. 2 Boise State beat Louisiana Tech 49-20 on Tuesday night for its 21st consecutive victory.

Moore was 20 of 28 for 298 yards while coolly directing the Broncos to 468 total yards. Tyler Shoemaker caught six passes for a career-high 124 yards and Doug Martin had 21 carries for a career-best 150 yards and two scores.

Moore threw a 6-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter to Austin Pettis, who snapped a three-game drought without a TD. He tossed a 32-yarder to Shoemaker in the second to give the Broncos a 21-7 lead.

Pettis returned the favor in the third when he took a pitch on an end around and quickly fired a 7-yard pass to Moore all alone in the right corner of the end zone.

The Broncos (7-0, 3-0 Western Athletic Conference) also got a big boost from Martin, who had a 2-yard run in the first that made it 7-0 and a 20-yard

Leave it to Kellen Moore

BOISE — Looking bedraggled on a cool, blustery autumn evening, Boise State turned to star quarterback Kellen Moore to provide a much-needed spark.

Uninterested in personal accolades, Moore proved why he is a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate with a performance that would've been good enough to win any punt, pass and kick contest.

Boise State head coach Chris Petersen even quipped after BSU's 49-20 win over Louisiana Tech that his do-it-all quarterback had even more assignments: "He's out there cleaning the stadium right now."

He certainly cleaned up on the stat sheet in what was just another ho-hum night on The Blue for Moore.

Heat struggle in opening loss to Celtics

By Ira Winderman
South Florida Sun Sentinel

BOSTON — Perfect? Not even close. Strangers? It sure looked that way early.

With a start that evoked something closer to the Kasib Powell-Blake Ahearn-Earl Barron Era than the unveiling of the NBA's ultimate power trio, the Miami Heat struggled early and were unable to recover sufficiently in an 88-80 loss Tuesday night to the Boston Celtics at TD Garden.

A struggle most of the way for Dwyane Wade, an uneven effort for Chris Bosh, only the third of the Heat's Big Three equation proved up to this debut.

Scoring 31 points, the most by a Heat player in his team debut, LeBron James sparked the Heat back from a 19-point deficit to within six entering the final period, after a 15-point third quarter.

The previous high by a Heat player in his team debut was 25 by Willie Burton against Washington in 1990 and 25 by Antoine Walker against Memphis in 2005.

But it wasn't enough.

Bosh's debut was not nearly as prolific, with eight points and eight rebounds.

And Wade's return from his preseason hamstring injury showed a player with plenty of rust, as he closed with 13 points on 4-of-16 shooting.

The Heat closed within 83-80 on a Wade 3-pointer and then James layup with 1:10 to play. But a Ray Allen 3-pointer with 49.8 seconds to play staked Boston back to an 86-80 edge.

The game ended amid chants of "Over-rated!

Miami Heat forward LeBron James lands on Boston Celtics forward Paul Pierce during the second half of Boston's 88-80 win in Boston on Tuesday.

Over-rated!"

In many ways, this was James back with the Cleveland Cavaliers, having to do just about everything. And against the team that eliminated both the Heat and Cavaliers from last season's playoffs, it simply wasn't enough, not with Paul Pierce and Allen consistently converting outside daggers.

No, this start was not what Pat Riley had in mind when he dipped into Micky Arison's pockets in July and plucked out what he spoke of in terms of dynasty.

Instead, the Heat very much had the look of a team that had its core intact for only three-plus minutes during the preseason and seemingly has little else beyond that core.

Having been sidelined during the preseason for all but those first three-plus minutes of the exhibition schedule by a strained right hamstring, Wade was well off his game.

And on this night, so much more was needed by the Heat's core.

Because, right now, with forward Mike Miller sidelined until at least January with a shattered right thumb, there isn't much otherwise there.

Point guard Carlos Arroyo and center Joel Anthony played nominal starting roles, Arroyo was unable to contain Celtics point guard Rajon Rondo, who passed for 17 assists, Anthony allowing Shaquille O'Neal to come off surprisingly spry.

The Heat trailed 16-9 at the end of the first quarter, 45-30 at halftime.

As a matter of perspective, when Quentin Richardson held James' current role, and when Michael Beasley held Bosh's role, the Heat never scored fewer than 12 points

Broncos

the scamper in the fourth that wrapped up the scoring for Boise State.

Boise State needed another convincing win to keep pace in the BCS standings. The WAC powerhouse is No. 3 behind Auburn and Oregon.

The Broncos never trailed, building a 28-7 halftime lead thanks to Moore's accurate passing and some miscues by Louisiana Tech (3-5, 2-2).

The Bulldogs used their hurry-up, spread offense to roll up 394 total yards against the nation's top-ranked defense. But they hurt themselves with several costly penalties and mistakes.

Louisiana Tech had a chance to grab the momentum after a bold onside kick attempt in the first quarter following Lennon Creer's tying 1-yard touchdown run. The Bulldogs caught the Broncos flat-footed and recovered the kick, but the play was nullified by an off-side penalty. The call angered coach Sonny Dyke, who was flagged 15 yards, forcing Louisiana Tech to kick from the 13.

The Broncos made them pay as Titus Young returned the kick to the Bulldogs 17-yard line. Four plays later, Moore passed to Pettis to make it 14-7 with two minutes left in the first quarter.

Then late in the half, the Bulldogs were flagged for pass interference on consecutive plays to set up another Boise State touchdown. Tight end Kyle Efaw recovered a fumble in the end zone to make it 28-7.

Ross Jenkins was 24 of 39 for 222 yards for the Bulldogs, but was sacked four times. Creer had a career-high 157 yards on 33 carries against a Bronco defense that came into the game allowing 59 yards rushing per game.

Jenkins tossed a 23-yard TD pass to Phillip Livas on fourth down to cut it to 28-13 in the third and Louisiana Tech got the ball back when Boise State fumbled the ensuing kickoff. But defensive tackle Chase Baker deflected Jenkins' pass on fourth down to stuff the Bulldogs' drive.

Boise State responded with an eight-play, 91-yard drive capped by Jeremy Avery's 18-yard run down the right sideline. Avery, lined up in the wildcat, fumbled the snap, then slipped two defenders and ran untouched to make it 35-13.

Moore

passing for 298 yards and two touchdowns. But he also had a 6-yard touchdown reception and a 54-yard punt, the longest of the season by a Boise State punter.

"We got a little bit of variety in there tonight," Moore said of all the ways the Broncos involved him on offense. "It's stuff we practiced and situational stuff that hadn't come up much this year until tonight." Every play seemed to come up with Moore's number somehow attached to it — and he did it by finding an almost forgotten receiver in Tyler Shoemaker as opposed to senior star wideouts Titus Young and Austin Pettis.

Moore's second pass of the game to a streaking Tyler Shoemaker would have resulted in a touchdown if Shoemaker could have tight-rope the sideline.

But Moore's special connection with Shoemaker was only getting started, as the junior walk-on rolled up 117 yards receiving — in the first half.

Midway through the second quarter, Moore hit Shoemaker for a 32-yard scoring strike.

Then Moore got in on the scoring action himself when Pettis found his quarterback wide open in the end zone.

"It was fun, getting a touchdown pass," Moore said, smiling after the game. "I thought there was about a 10 percent chance that play would get called."

Moore eventually returned the favor, throwing a 7-yard touchdown pass to Pettis, tying Ryan Dimwiddle for the school record for career touchdown passes at 82.

And Moore still has a season and a half left to play.

"I think that's awesome if you're in any category with some of those great guys," Moore said after the game. "It's just my job to carry on that quarterback tradition we have here."

Moore is doing more than carrying on a tradition at quarterback for the Broncos — he's redefining it — and he's doing it with more than just his arm.

In a fourth-down situation with Boise State struggling with ailing kicker Kyle Brotzman sidelined, Moore delivered a spectacular punt that was an eyelash away from being downed inside the Louisiana Tech 3-yard line.

"I think I'm finally starting to understand how that punting thing goes," said Moore, who has been practicing on his punting since spring practice. "I've gotten a little bit better on how it goes."

Despite a lopsided win on the scoreboard Tuesday night over Louisiana Tech, Boise State has plenty of concerns with a hot Hawaii team coming to Boise on Nov. 6. But with the way he is playing, Moore is the least of the Broncos' worries.

BSU-Hawaii picked up by ESPNU

Boise State's Nov. 6 football game against Hawaii will be televised on ESPNU, the Western Athletic Conference announced Tuesday. Kickoff for the game has been moved to 1:30 p.m. (MDT).

The game was originally slated for noon on KTVB. The change gives BSU eight nationally televised games on its 2010 schedule.

The Broncos will play on ESPN2 on Nov. 12 against Idaho, Nov. 19 against Fresno State and Nov. 26 against Nevada.

NBA

in a quarter last season.

Amid that ragged start, coach Erik Spoelstra, implored his team, "We've got the jitters out, OK? Let's make a move."

The only move was to that 15-point halftime deficit. The 30-point first half tied the sixth-worst in the franchise's 23 seasons.

It reached the point where Spoelstra also exhorted, "Exhale. It's going to get better than this."

Not in the first half it didn't.

"A lot of bad basketball," Charles Barkley said on TNT's broadcast.

Especially for the men in black. The last time James' team scored nine or fewer points in a period was in Feb. 2007 with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Turkey could be Iverson’s final answer

AP photo

Allen Iverson, center, won't likely play in the NBA this year. A top official of Turkish basketball team Besiktas says Iverson is keen to play for the Istanbul squad.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Allen Iverson seems set for another crossover — this one from the NBA to the Turkish basketball league.

On a night another NBA season opens, Iverson will be checking his passport status. He's close to a deal to sign with Besiktas, and team executive board member Seref Yalcin is ready to meet with him this week to work out contract details.

For those close to Iverson, the idea of the All-Star guard playing in Turkey instead of braiding his cornrows for opening night is an inglorious end to a 14-year career.

"I think it's sad having him have to go to Turkey to finish his career," Bobcats coach Larry Brown said Tuesday. "I wish there was some way I was in a position to help."

Brown and the 2001 NBA MVP had a contentious relationship with the Sixers, but the two worked together despite several disputes. Iverson had survived the rift with Brown, joked about his memorable rants about practice and had seemingly put his troubled off-court past behind him.

He was humbled and more reserved when he returned to the Sixers last season.

Iverson turned 35 in June and had wanted to keep playing in the NBA. He has been out of work since leaving the Philadelphia in March to deal with family issues. He returned to Atlanta to be with his family as they dealt with an undisclosed illness of his 4-year-old daughter, Messiah. Iverson's wife, Tawanna, filed for divorce the same week he left the Sixers.

"The only thing I'd like to say about Allen's personal life is his daughter's health has improved tremendously and she's doing much, much better," Moore said.

Iverson's biggest supporters feel his personal baggage — such as complaints last season about coming off the bench — is the primary reason he can't find a home in the NBA.

"I don't think it's helped him," Sixers general manager Ed Stefanski said.

It might not matter overseas.

Gary Moore, Iverson's personal manager, said Iverson was not contacted by any NBA team. He cautioned not to put those No. 3 jerseys in storage quite yet, even if the team name sounds a bit unfamiliar.

"You should be extremely optimistic that you have not seen the last of Allen Iverson," Moore said.

Barring any last-minute snags, Iverson and Besiktas could have a signed deal by the end of the week. Yalcin said he would discuss "a variety of details" with Iverson at their meeting, including schools in Istanbul for Iverson's children.

Yalcin said earlier this week, "I think this transfer will take place."

Iverson has not talked publicly since ending his second stint with the Sixers. Attempts to reach him were unsuccessful.

Iverson's employment search has baffled some of those around the league who feel that Iverson, even with hard miles from his all-out style on those knees, could still land a job somewhere.

"I haven't seen him play in about a year and a half, but I don't think he could've lost his game in a year and a half," former Nuggets teammate Carmelo Anthony said.

Sixers assistant coach Aaron McKie, a former teammate, said Iverson returned more focused on becoming a leader.

"I think he tried, he tried everything," he said. "But when you're used to being Mick Jagger and playing in front of 100,000 people to playing your music in bars, it's not easy. I still think he has a place in this game."

Iverson is 17th on the NBA's career scoring list with 24,368 points over a 14-year career with Philadelphia, Denver, Detroit and Memphis. He was the No. 1 overall pick in the 1996 draft and spent his first 10 seasons in Philadelphia. He was a four-time scoring champion, averaged 26.7 points and never won a championship.

"He transcended the game," McKie said. "He needs to be honored for that. Look at the whole culture, the braids, the swagger, giving the smaller people on the court confidence they could compete with the big guys. He should be celebrated for that."

Ross, Giants ready for Lee in World Series opener

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Buster Posey, Pablo Sandoval and the rest of the San Francisco Giants can study the scouting reports and videotape all they want, trying to find the secret to getting a hit against Cliff Lee.

Or, they can just ask Cody Ross. Because many years ago, before he blossomed into the MVP of the NL championship series, Ross was a struggling rookie with the Detroit Tigers. Who happened to hit his first major league home run off Lee. A grand slam, at that.

Of course, Lee was early in his career, too. He hardly had become Mr. Perfect in the postseason, the left-hander who will pose a giant challenge for San Francisco when it faces the Texas Rangers in Game 1 of the World Series on Wednesday night.

“Cliff Lee, superhero,” summed up Sandoval.

Watch Lee from the center-field camera and it’s difficult to tell exactly what makes him so dominant.

October experience. But Lee beat them in the playoffs.

Maybe it’s the way he throws any of his pitches for strikes on any count. At any speed, too. A real-life version of a video game — try to duplicate that in “Major League Baseball 2K10.”

“Confidence, relying on my routine,” Lee said Tuesday before the Rangers worked out. “Going out there and expecting to be successful.”

Lee is 7-0 with a 1.26 ERA in eight lifetime postseason starts heading into his matchup with two-time NL Cy Young winner Tim Lincecum in the opener. Lee went 3-0 this year in the AL playoffs, striking out 34 and walking just one.

Lincecum and Lee pose an intriguing matchup of opposite artisans. The Giants’ lanky ace’s pitches have dizzying movement, while Lee is able to adjust his pinpoint control for an umpire’s strike zone.

Rangers pitching coach Mike Maddux said Lee reminds him of someone he knows well — namely

“If you can command your fastball and change speeds, you’re going to have good results,” Maddux said.

Lee’s severe strikeout-to-walk ratio has prompted many to suggest the best strategy is to hit the first strike he throws, rather than risk falling behind in the count.

“People love to talk about Cliff throwing strikes but it’s not like he’s just gunning balls down the middle of the plate,” Texas third baseman Michael Young said. “There’s a big difference between throwing strikes and throwing quality strike after quality strike.”

A win over the Giants will tie Lee for the best start in postseason history — Orlando “El Duque” Hernandez, with all his quirky gyrations and deliveries, won his first eight decisions.

To Lee, it’s all rather routine. In fact, there was a neat picture of him during the playoffs, yawning in the dugout at Yankee Stadium.

Sure doesn’t look like someone pitching in huge games.

“I don’t really look at it like that,” Lee said a few days ago. “Some people might, I don’t feel any more pressure.”

RANGERS-GIANTS: A LOOK AT THE 2010 WORLD SERIES

Projected Rotations

Rangers: LH Cliff Lee (12-9, 3.18 ERA, 7 CGs in 28 starts, 185 Ks, 18 walks, 212 1-3 innings; 4-6, 3.98 in 15 starts after acquired from Seattle on July 9), LH C.J. Wilson (15-8, 3.35, 3 CGs in 33 starts), RH Colby Lewis (12-13, 3.72 in career-high 201 innings), RH Tommy Hunter (13-4, 3.73) or LH Derek Holland (3-4, 4.08).

Giants: RH Tim Lincecum (16-10, 3.43, 231 Ks), RH Matt Cain (13-11, 3.14, 177 Ks), LH Jonathan Sanchez (13-9, 3.07, 205 Ks, career-high 193 1-3 innings), LH Madison Bumgarner (7-6, 3.00, 86 Ks in 18 starts as rookie).

Relievers

Rangers: RH Neftali Feliz (4-3, 2.37, MLB rookie-record 40 saves in 43 chances), RH Darren O'Day (6-2, 2.03 in 72 games), RH Alexi Ogando (4-1, 1.30 in 44 games), LH Darren Oliver (1-2, 2.48 ERA in 64 games), LH Clay Rapada (0-0, 4.00 in 13 games after September call-up), LH Michael Kirkman (0-0, 1.65 in 14 games after Aug. 20 recall).

Giants: RH Brian Wilson (3-3, 1.81, major league-best 48/53 saves), RH Ramon Ramirez (1-0, 0.67, 1 save), LH Javier Lopez (4-2, 2.34), LH Jeremy Affeldt (4-3, 4.14, 4 saves), RH Santiago Casilla (7-2, 1.95, 2 saves), RH Sergio Romo (5-3, 2.18).

Projected Lineups

Rangers: SS Elvis Andrus (.265, 0 HRs, 35 RBIs, 88 runs, 32/47 SBs), 3B Michael Young (.284, 21, 91, 99 runs, career-high 115 strikeouts), CF Josh Hamilton (major league-leading .359, 32, 100), RF Vladimir Guerrero (.300, 29, 115), LF Nelson Cruz (.318, 22, 78 in 108 games), 2B Ian Kinsler (.286, 9, 45), C Bengie Molina (.240, 2, 19 in 57 games since acquired from San Francisco), 1B Mitch Moreland (.255, 9, 25 in 47 games since called up from Triple-A on July 29).

Giants: CF Andres Torres (.268, 16, 63, 26 SBs), 2B Freddy Sanchez (.292, 7, 47), 1B Aubrey Huff (.290, 26, 86), C Buster Posey (.305, 18, 67 after being called up from minors May 29), LF Pat Burrell (.266, 18, 51, signed to minor league deal May 29 after release by Tampa Bay and called up from Triple-A on June 4), RF Cody Ross (.269, 14, 65 with Florida and Giants), 3B Juan Uribe (.248, 24, 85), SS Edgar Renteria (.276, 3, 22 in 72 games).

What to watch for

- Mr. Lee. For starters, it’s Lee again. This is the second straight year he will pitch the World Series opener, this time for Texas after winning Games 1 and 5 for Philadelphia last year against the Yankees. The free agent-to-be could easily wind up pitching for someone else next season, too. October ace is at his best under pressure, going 7-0 with a 1.26 ERA in eight postseason starts. He has 67 strikeouts and seven walks in 64 1-3 innings during those outings.
- Cody’s Ride. Ross, who aspired to be a rodeo clown until switching to baseball at age 10, has been San Francisco’s go-to guy in clutch situations. Can his tear at the plate continue? He’s one of a handful of postseason first-timers on this roster, including Huff and Freddy Sanchez.
- Runnin’ Rangers. Texas is 15 of 17 on stolen base attempts this postseason, and will run to get things going. Andrus even scored on a double steal in Game 2 of the ALCS, becoming the first player to steal home in the postseason since 2002. Hamilton had four stolen bases in the playoffs, and the Rangers should have no problem playing by NL rules — they led the AL with 53 sacrifice bunts.
- All The Right Moves. Bochy has used different combinations and substitution patterns to get the Giants this far. Whether it was starting Torres over Rowand in center field or sitting a struggling Sandoval in favor of playing Uribe at third and Renteria at shortstop, Bochy has displayed a perfect touch with this team.

Rangers make it four times in six seasons that a team is playing in its first World Series. Previous three all lost in five games or fewer: Houston (2005), Colorado (2007) and Tampa Bay (2008). ... Giants haven’t won World Series since upsetting Cleveland Indians in 1954, when Willie Mays and Co. played at Polo Grounds in New York. Club moved to San Francisco for 1958 season, three years before Rangers franchise began play as expansion Washington Senators. Team moved to Texas, with Ted Williams as manager, and changed name in 1972. Rangers make first World Series appearance in franchise’s 50th season. ... Giants lead all-time series against Texas 15-7 and have won last seven meetings (2001-09). Rangers have lost 11 in a row in San Francisco, where they are 2-12. ... Rangers and Giants both hit 162 home runs during regular season, averaging one per game. In playoffs, Texas had 17 in 11 games and Giants hit six in 10 games. ... Lee is 3-0 with 1.13 ERA in three career starts against San Francisco while holding Giants to .159 batting average. He has 21 strikeouts and four walks in 24 innings, and threw complete game against them on July 31, 2009, his first start for Philadelphia after being traded from Cleveland. ... Molina was Giants’ starting catcher for 3½ seasons until they traded him to Texas on July 1. That cleared the way in San Francisco for rookie Posey to be everyday catcher. Molina hit .276 with 58 home runs and 273 RBIs in 472 games for the Giants. ... Guerrero is .330 career hitter against Giants, with nine homers and 31 RBIs in 62 games. He was primarily DH this season, playing only 18 games in outfield. He’s likely to move back to old spot in right during games in San Francisco, where NL rules prohibit DH. Bad knees from all those years on hard turf in Montreal have slowed him, and right field in San Francisco can be tricky, with some odd angles and long runs. Look for strong-armed Jeff Francoeur to play RF against left-handed starters back home in Texas. ... Giants can use switch-hitter Pablo Sandoval at DH in Texas. His production dropped off dramatically this season, but “Kung Fu Panda” is still dangerous at plate. ... Oliver, 40, was a starter and the loser when Texas lost 8-3 to San Francisco on June 12, 1997, in baseball’s first interleague game. He allowed four runs and eight hits in 7 2-3 innings. ... Giants have home-field advantage in World Series because NL won All-Star game in July, first victory over AL since 1996.

New Mexico gives Negedu a second chance

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Emmanuel Negedu got a second chance at life after Tennessee’s medical staff revived him during a frightening training episode.

He got a second chance at playing college basketball after NCAA officials determined he would be eligible immediately this season at New Mexico.

Last summer, the Tennessee transfer was attending a public speaking class on New Mexico’s campus when he noticed he had received a voice message from Lobos coach Steve Alford.

“I was like, ‘Oh, let me call coach right away,’” Negedu recalled. “I was shaking. I knew this might be good news, this might be bad news. Coach said, ‘Hey, you have been cleared!’ Then I was jumping and screaming. I was so excited. I called everybody. It was a real big relief for me.”

That makes two big reliefs for the 6-foot-7, 220-pound forward, who was allowed to play this season as a 22-year-old sophomore.

On Sept. 28, 2009, Negedu had just completed a Tennessee weightlifting session and was racing a teammate on the Vols’ indoor football field when he collapsed. He lost consciousness and had no pulse.

Athletic trainers used an external defibrillator and performed CPR to revive Negedu. He eventually had surgery to have a cardiac defibrillator implanted in his chest to monitor his heart rhythm and apply a shock if irregularities are detected.

But then came the waiting to learn if he could play again.

Tennessee administrators consulted the school’s medical staff and decided they wouldn’t allow Negedu to play, which cleared him to transfer. Negedu had prospects — Iowa State, Memphis, Nebraska,

New Mexico forward Emmanuel Negedu answering questions during an interview in Albuquerque, N.M. Negedu transferred from Tennessee, where last fall he suffered sudden cardiac arrest after a workout, and received an NCAA waiver that makes him eligible this season.

Oregon, Rhode Island, UNLV — but he remembered being recruited by Iowa when Alford coached there.

“Well, I didn’t have any doubt,” Negedu said. “I just put everything up to God about where I was going to play and if I was going to play. Before I got cleared, there were checkups. They told me I can do what I want to do. That was a big relief.”

No easy road for Ducks to reach BCS title game

By John Marshall
Associated Press writer

Oregon appears to be hurtling toward the national title game, No. 1 in the polls, No. 2 in the BCS, overwhelming teams with an intimidating blend of speed and depth.

But between the Ducks and their first national championship stands the hardest part of the season: a five-game gauntlet of tough teams, all vying to be the one to knock the Ducks off.

Let up even for a moment and everything Oregon has accomplished this season will go up in a puff of dust, just like it did for Alabama and Oklahoma the past two weeks.

“You can get knocked out in the seventh round,” Oregon coach Chip Kelly said. “All you can do is be ready to battle each week and make it to the eighth round.”

The first seven rounds have been relatively easy for the Ducks (7-0, 4-0 Pac-10).

Oregon has the nation’s best offense at a staggering 569.14 yards a game and is tops in scoring at 55.4 points — nearly seven more than the next closest team. The Ducks won their first seven games by an average of 39 points and have done it quickly and efficiently, ranking 114th in time of possession at 26.28 minutes per game.

The road figures to get tougher from now on, though, starting Saturday at No. 24 Southern California.

The Trojans, despite sanctions and a subsequent lack of depth due to defections, are still plenty talented. Their defense has struggled at times, but seems to be gaining momentum under new coordinator Monte Kiffin. The offense has been good since a shaky start to the season, led by maturing sophomore quarterback Matt Barkley.

“USC is the most talented team in our league, by far,” Kelly said.

But get by the Trojans and the schedule doesn’t get much easier. A look at what the Ducks have left this season:

- Saturday, at USC. The Trojans had been the Pac-10’s dominant team, winning seven straight conference titles heading into last season. Oregon ended that run last Halloween in a game the fans dubbed Fright Night, a 47-20 rout at Autzen Stadium that was fourth-ranked USC’s worst since 1997. The Trojans would love to return the title-ending favor.

• Nov. 6, vs. Washington. The Huskies have been inconsistent this season, beating USC and Oregon State, getting routed by Nebraska and Arizona. Washington’s defense will likely have a hard time matching up with the Ducks — 98th in total defense — but quarterback Jake Locker has the arm and legs to keep the Huskies in the game.

• Nov. 13, at California. The Bears have made Washington seem consistent with their up-and-down season. Other than a 1-point loss at Arizona, Cal has been the router or the routee, the latest a 50-17 blasting of Arizona State last Saturday. Catch the Bears on one of their good days and the Ducks could be in for a shootout.

NFC teams not looking Super

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Maybe they should put two AFC teams in the Super Bowl this season. The search for someone worthy of playing for the league title sure looks easy in that conference, where the Patriots, Jets, Steelers, Ravens, Colts, Texans and Titans are dangerous, and sometimes dominant. Over in the NFC, even the losing teams still talk bravely about making the playoffs.

When Mike Singletary claims his 49ers (1-6) still have a shot at the postseason, it would be heresy in the AFC. In the NFC, well, who knows?

“There’s no doubt in my mind that somehow, some way, we will regroup and keep fighting,” Singletary said. “We’re going to make a season of it, and I still believe we can go to the playoffs. I still believe we can get those things done.”

It will take a long string of wins, but nothing crazier than getting to 9-7, perhaps even 8-8 in the mediocre NFC West. Fortunately for the 49ers, their two remaining AFC opponents are underachieving San Diego and Denver, both 2-5.

NFC teams are 12-17 against the AFC so far and have not beaten a first-place AFC opponent yet. The conference’s supposed best squads — the Cowboys, Giants, Saints, Packers and Vikings — are 3-7 against the AFC.

Of course, they are not competing for spots in the playoffs with AFC teams. And while the prospect of the first division winner with a losing record remains remote, it’s possible a .500 record could take the NFC North or NFC West.

The NFC has not measured up in the Super Bowl for more than a decade, losing seven of the past 10. Yet, just a year ago, the Saints, Vikings, Cowboys, Eagles and Packers all won at least 11 times — only the Colts and Chargers managed that many wins in the AFC.

So what’s gone wrong in the NFC?

Plummeting Powerhouses

No defending division champion is alone in first place in either conference, but at least the Patriots (5-1) are tied with the Jets atop the AFC East, and the Colts (4-2) are a half-game in back of Tennessee in the AFC South. Combined, the 2009 NFC division winners are 10-15.

Turnovers have been particularly damaging, with the Cardinals at minus-7, the Vikings at minus-6, the Saints at minus-5 and the Cowboys at minus-2.

Minnesota’s usually strong passing game ranks 24th even with the addition of Randy Moss. Brett Favre’s physical woes at 41, plus his off-field problems, have exacerbated the Vikings’ collapse.

Drew Brees, who threw only 11 picks in leading New Orleans to its first NFL title last season, already has 10 and the Saints have no running game.

Key Injuries

No team has established itself because no team is whole. Sure, AFC clubs haven’t been perfectly healthy, but the most damaging injuries have occurred in the NFC.

Washington’s starting running back, Ryan Torain, began the season on the practice squad. The Giants, probably the conference’s top team so far, have seen key starters Mathias Kiwanuka, Keith Bulluck and Aaron Ross hobbled on their defense, center Shaun O’Hara and tight end Kevin Boss on offense. And they have lost to the Colts and Titans.

Philadelphia has shuffled quarterbacks as neither Kevin Kolb nor Michael Vick has steadily been available.

That’s just in the NFC East.

Coaching Concerns

Carolina is ready to part with John Fox despite his 76-60 record, one NFC title and another loss in the conference championship game heading into 2010. So the Panthers allowed him to become a lame duck in the final year of his contract.

Singletary already has fired his offensive coordinator, and communication is better between the league and the players association than it is among 49ers coaches.

Chicago, while tied atop the NFC North with Green Bay (4-3), can’t protect QB Jay Cutler in new offensive coordinator Mike Martz’s offense and coach Lovie Smith and his staff are clueless about how to use replay challenges. The Bears have lost 12 of their past 15 replay challenges.

Not surprisingly, there’s still plenty of optimism from just about everyone in the inferior conference.

“The scary thing is I don’t think we’ve ever played on all cylinders in regards to offense, defense and special teams,” Packers linebacker Clay Matthews said. “But you see little flashes here and there.”

No surgery for Romo, QB to miss 6-8 weeks

IRVING, Texas — Tony Romo doesn’t need surgery on his broken left collarbone, just time for it to heal.

He may have all the way until the spring minicamp.

Romo is expected to miss between six and eight weeks, which could be an eternity for the 1-5 Dallas Cowboys. If their playoff hopes aren’t already squelched, they likely will be by the time their Pro Bowl quarterback is healthy again. So perhaps team owner Jerry Jones will end up telling Romo to call it a season and rest up for 2011.

Think about it: Considering how wretched the Cowboys were led by their star, it seems unlikely they will turn things around while led by 38-year-old backup Jon Kitna, who hadn’t thrown a pass in more than two years before Monday night and whose last gig as a starter was on the Detroit club that went winless in 2008.

“We’re not going to stop right now and give up or quit or whine or even make excuses,” coach Wade Phillips said Tuesday. “You’ve just got to go forward. That’s what we have to do. I think our guys will band together.”

Dallas Cowboys quarterback Tony Romo (9) will be out 6-8 weeks after breaking his left collarbone against the New York Giants Monday in Arlington, Texas.

down catch by Vikings tight end Visanthe Shiancoe. He also was upset by a facemask call against right tackle Phil Loadholt and not calling a hold on Jared Allen that allowed Packers quarterback Aaron Rodgers to scramble for a first down.

HALL IN THE HALL: CANTON GETS REDSKINS CB'S JERSEY

ASHBURN, Va. — After tying an NFL record with four interceptions in a game, DeAngelo Hall is getting his jersey picked off — and shipped to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The Washington Redskins cornerback announced Tuesday on Twitter that the No. 23 he wore in Sunday’s 17-14 win over Chicago is on the way to Canton, Ohio.

A spokesman for the Hall of Fame confirmed that it had asked for the jersey.

Hall is the 19th player to intercept four passes in a game, and the first to do it since Deltha O’Neal with Denver in 2001.

Hall tweeted that he is “definitely humbled and honored” by the Hall of Fame’s request.

BENGALS PUT CB ‘PACMAN’ JONES ON IR

CINCINNATI — Cornerback Adam “Pacman” Jones will miss the rest of his comeback season with the Cincinnati Bengals because of a neck injury that might require surgery.

The Bengals placed Jones on injured reserve Tuesday with a herniated disk in his neck. Jones was injured late in a 39-32 loss to Atlanta on Sunday. He was examined by a doctor who indicated that surgery was needed, agent Tom Hunter told The Associated Press.

Jones will see other specialists before deciding whether to have surgery, Hunter said. An operation wouldn’t necessarily end his career.

GARRARD CLEARED TO PRACTICE, PLAY FOR JAGUARS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Jacksonville Jaguars quarterback David Garrard has been cleared to practice and play after passing post-concussion tests.

Garrard passed the NFL-mandated tests Tuesday, then worked out at the facility.

Coach Jack Del Rio said Monday that Garrard would start Sunday’s game at Dallas if he received clearance. The Jaguars (3-4) don’t have many choices.

Backup Luke McCown is on injured reserve with a knee injury, Trent Edwards has a badly sprained thumb on his throwing hand and last week’s starter, Todd Bouman, injured the ring finger on his throwing hand while making a tackle after his second interception. Newly acquired Patrick Ramsey is healthy, but still learning the offense.

Garrard sustained a concussion last in a 30-3 loss to Tennessee last Monday.

PUBLISH: October 27, November 3, 10 and 17, 2010

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 2010. There are 65 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 27, 1787, the first of the Federalist Papers, a series of essays calling for ratification of the United States Constitution, was published in New York.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1795, the United States and Spain signed the Treaty of San Lorenzo (also known as "Pinckney's Treaty"), which provided for free navigation of the Mississippi River.

In 1858, the 26th president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, was born in New York City.

In 1880, Theodore Roosevelt married his first wife, Alice Lee.

In 1904, the first rapid transit subway, the IRT, was inaugurated in New York City.

In 1922, the first annual celebration of Navy Day took place.

In 1938, Du Pont announced a name for its new synthetic yarn: "nylon."

In 1947, "You Bet Your Life," starring Groucho Marx, premiered on ABC Radio. (It later became a television show on NBC.)

In 1978, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin were named winners of the Nobel Peace Prize for their progress toward achieving a Middle East accord.

In 1990, death claimed bandleader Xavier Cugat at age 90, author Elliott Roosevelt at age 80 and French movie director Jacques Demy ("The Umbrellas of Cherbourg") at age 59.

In 1995, a sniper killed one soldier and wounded 18 others at Fort Bragg, N.C. (Paratrooper William J. Kreutzer was convicted in the shootings, and condemned to death; however, the sentence was later commuted to life in prison.)

Ten years ago: Canadian authorities arrested two men they said masterminded the 1985 bombing of an Air India jumbo jet near Ireland that claimed the lives of all 329 people aboard. (However, the men were acquitted at trial in March 2005.)

Five years ago: White House counsel Harriet Miers withdrew her nomination to the Supreme Court after three weeks of brutal criticism from fellow conservatives. As many Floridians continued to struggle to find food, water and fuel in the wake of Hurricane Wilma,

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Through all the compass of the notes it ran,
The diapason closing full in Man."

— John Dryden

Bridge literature has documented the lead of the jack by East from K-J-9, when North has 10-third, to prevent declarer from taking an extra trick when he has either the queen or the ace-queen. The "surrounding" play that crops up in today's deal is less well-known.

Suppose that West leads the spade queen against three hearts and leads a second spade, won by East, who switches to a low diamond. Declarer wins, draws trumps, and on the face of it has three further losers. However, if South continues with the second top diamond, then plays a third, he will prevail unless West has unblocked both of his diamond honors.

The point is that a third spade return from West would allow a ruff and discard, and a club to the king and a club back means that declarer will end with two tricks in the suit if he guesses well. West needs to unblock his diamond honors so that East wins the third round of diamonds. Now East must switch to the club 10, "surrounding" the nine in dummy.

If the 10 is covered all around, declarer will lose two further tricks in the suit, and if not, the 10 fetches the ace, again leaving two losers. Had East led the low club instead, South plays low, and West is forced to contribute the queen. When dummy's ace wins, a low club toward the jack means that the defense comes to just one club trick.

ANSWER: The jump to two spades is a game-force. Just because you have extras does not mean you have to make an extravagant leap. Support your partner with a call of three clubs. Let him have all the space he needs to tell you why he forced to game.

DEAR ABBY: I am a rabbi who was asked by a funeral director to talk with a family dealing with the wife's terminal illness. When I met Mindy, I was touched by her bravery and sensitivity in confronting her disease. She shared that she and her family were taking charge of the calendar and moving all the holidays forward so they could squeeze in as many celebrations as possible in the coming weeks.

Regardless of the actual date on the calendar, they were celebrating secular and religious holidays, birthdays and anniversaries. These events included decorating, serving the appropriate food associated with the observance — even wearing costumes for Halloween.

On my last visit, Mindy described something else she had done. She invited relatives who lived far away to be with her and gave them quilts she had created over her lifetime. She remarked that it made sense for her to be able to say her goodbyes rather than miss that opportunity. She described it as a "living wake." A few weeks later, she was gone.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

For Mindy, condensing the holidays gave her the ability to control her medical situation in a gracious and innovative way. Her choice of saying goodbye to loved ones gave her — and them — time to heal any rifts that had occurred. In dealing with her own impending death, she bestowed a special gift to us for these upcoming holidays.

Let loved ones know today how important they are to you. If there is a way of resolving a family disagreement, do it as soon as possible. Life is too short for many of these disagreements. Finally, appreciate and enjoy the time we have with family, relatives and friends. It is truly irreplaceable.

— RABBI ALBERT SLOMOVITZ

DEAR RABBI SLOMOVITZ: Well said. I confess that your account of Mindy's final weeks and her passing left me feeling very emotional. It is a profound lesson for us all, as is a poem that is a favorite of my dear mother's and mine:

THE TIME IS NOW

— Author Unknown

If you are ever going to love me,

Love me now, while I can know

The sweet and tender feelings

Which from true affection flow.

Love me now

While I am living.

Do not wait until I'm gone

And then have it chiseled in marble.

Sweet words on ice-cold stone.

If you have tender thoughts of me,

Please tell me now.

If you wait until I am sleeping,

Never to awaken,

There will be death between us

And I won't hear you then.

So, if you love me, even a little bit,

Let me know it while I am living

So I can treasure it.

IF OCTOBER 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Learning to be compassionate and caring for others could be an underlying theme that develops in the year ahead. You might get back in touch with your childlike wonder and feel younger than your years. You could have career aspirations that will come to fruition in April or to a lesser degree in July, but the important thing is to get in touch with the spiritual side of life. Since you are more romantic at heart your love life may blossom especially in April and through the summer. Be creative and turn any deficit into an asset.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Feelings of lust can last. When you are paired with the right person, you ooze sex appeal and burst with sensuality. If you are going to stop to smell the flowers, you might as well pick them for a bouquet.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Adoring allies push all the right buttons. Gifts given or received now could develop a sentimental value later. Friendly flirtations that tweak your interest could propel you into a new relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Balance your image of a better future with the lessons of the past. Make earthshaking decisions based on facts, not fantasies. Be willing to experiment with new playthings and a special playmate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Never evade the pertinent issue. You must jump in and commit yourself heart and soul to a cause, a career or a person. You will receive plenty of attention in public places for loyalty and dedication.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep the scorecard handy. You can garner high points for style and content if you put a business plan or a romance into motion under these stars. Find a peaceful place to work quietly in the background.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Navigate your way to love by using an accurate internal compass. Ignore a business transaction or investment that looks too good to be true. A thing of real value is found right on your doorstep.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The early bird gets the worm. Turn up the heat on a relationship. The sooner you begin to plant sensual ideas, the more delectable the results will be. Purchase items that delight the eye as well as the senses.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put passions on parade, not out to pasture. Someone new in your life can earn instant trust and admiration. If you are in a romantic relationship, this is the right time to prove devotion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Build them up, don't tear them down. You and a certain someone might fit together like the plastic building blocks in the toy box. Serious romantic or business connections can flourish today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Discretion is the better part of amour. A secret love can be shared now. Someone might give you a clue about their true feelings. You might give off an aura of sensuality that is hard to resist.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Affairs of the heart can get steamy under these stars. Keep an eye open for potential hookups if you are single and pamper your mate if you aren't. Commitments will work out in the best possible way.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Anticipation is to be savored. Your inner clock is counting down the hours of bliss spent with an amorous hookup. Your intuitions are right on target. A conversation might lead to a new feeling of permanence.
