Milner Dam permit may stop Snake River flow

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Idaho Power is trying to trade a continuous trickle for a brief torrent. In a process that stalled a year ago, the electric utility is again trying to change its Milner Dam permit to keep all the Snake River water it can. The company has asked the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to eliminate the requirement that Idaho Power continually release a minimum flow of water below the dam.

NO COURT, NO REST

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Despite Election Day shutdown, workers around judiciary will keep busy

Election Day is no paid holiday for these folks. Idaho Code 1-1607 states that no court can be opened and no judicial business can take place on a general election day such as Tuesday. That doesn't mean that state workers employed in the myriad systems surrounding the judicial process get a free day. Court services such as records departments are still open, and recently arrested individuals will still make their first appearances in magistrate court. According to Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb, the law is to prevent people like witnesses and jurors from being tied up in court all day, causing them to rush to the polls late in the evening before they close at 8 p.m. Though court hearings are off the books for Tuesday, attorneys everywhere are still on the job, doing the behind-the-scenes work that's often left out of the "Law & Order" pop culture representations of the judicial system. "Going to court is maybe 10 to 20 percent of our work," said Loeb. The same can be said for the public defender's office, which will also remain open on Election Day, or any other trial lawyer. Behind the curtain of the wizard's inner chamber lies the real work, done in the law libraries through research and reading. It's time spent writing briefs, filing motions, conducting witness interviews, viewing crime scenes and going through piles of evidence that builds the foundation of any court case. On court days with heavy dockets, a deputy prosecutor or public defender could spend hours waiting for the judge to call their cases, forcing them to play the game of "hurry up and wait."

Right now, it's an important time for prosecutors and defense attorneys to make forward strides as a number of high-profile cases such as the trials of accused murderer Thomas Trevino Jr. and alleged shooter Markus May are scheduled for the early months of 2011. Judges will likewise take the time to review the upcoming docket, dozens of motions, probation reports and pre-sentence investigations in their offices rather than ruling from the bench on Tuesday. "We all come to work," Loeb said. Also, the Twin Falls County Adult Probation Office will remain open, and of course, law enforcement officers are still on the beat. Andrew Gaudio, 22, reads an apology to the family of U.S. Army Sgt. Thomas E. Towers Jr., who was killed in an accident caused by Gaudio. As part of his sentence, Gaudio was ordered to send a postcard each week to the family for 15 years. Gaudio is shown on Oct. 15 in Tavares, Florida.

Creative sentences a growing trend, but legal experts question their effectiveness

ORLANDO, Fla. — For causing the accident that killed Army Sgt. Thomas E. Towers Jr., a two-tour veteran of the war in Iraq, 22-year-old Andrew Gaudio was ordered to send the Eustis, Fla., soldier's family a postcard every week for 15 years. "He said he thinks of my son every day but, excuse me, I don't really believe that," said Towers' father, Thomas E. Towers Sr. "At

Circuit Judge G. Richard Singeltary, does not specify what Gaudio should write on the postcard, which must be presented to his Lake County probation officer with the 28 cents postage paid. If he fails to send the weekly postcards, Gaudio could be sent to prison for 15 years. Creative sentences like Gaudio's are a growing trend in American courtrooms, said Jonathan Turley, a constitutional law expert at George Washington University and a critic of the practice, which often uses shame as punishment. Bicyclist injured in accident

A bicyclist was injured in an accident that involved another vehicle on Saturday night at the intersection of Second Avenue West and Shoshone Street North, police said.

The bicyclist, Zachary Neumann of Twin Falls, was taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, where he was treated for minor injuries, according to police.

No citations have been issued to the driver and the accident is still under investigation, police said.

Sentences

defendants to wear chicken costumes, sleep in doghouses or tote degrading signs.

Turley said so-called creative punishments threaten to reverse centuries of progress in U.S. courtrooms, where justice has evolved from pre-colonial practices of public pillories, scarlet letters and tar-and-feathering to a system of thoughtful, consistent sentences designed to punish offenders and protect the public.

"There is ample embarrassment in any criminal conviction. But there is a sharp difference between shame from a punishment and shame as the punishment," Turley said. "These sentences have a corrosive effect on the legal system."

Putnam County Judge Peter Miller, who has sentenced hundreds of shoplifters to parade in public carrying a poster-size placard that reads, "I stole from this store," could not disagree more.

"They can say what they want," Miller said of critics. "It works here."

Miller, 66, who has spent a quarter-century on the bench in North Florida, said the creative sentence is often more effective as a deterrent than fines or incarceration because public embarrassment stings more.

"I've had people tell me, 'Put me in jail. I don't want to hold that sign! That's how I know it's working,'" he said. "It holds them out as examples of what happens if you break the law, and it gives them some upbringing they obviously didn't get at home, but I do this because I want them to stop stealing. And we don't see a whole lot of recidivism."

In January, Alexandra Espinosa-Amaya, 24, who pleaded no contest to misdemeanor counts of simple battery and resisting an officer without violence for showing an Orlando police officer, was ordered to walk in front of the Orlando Police Department draped in a hand-lettered poster. It read, "I battered a police officer. I was wrong. I apologize."

Circuit Judge Walter Komanski, who admitted that he, too, lifted his eyebrows when first presented with the proposed punishment, recalled that Espinosa-Amaya saw little value in the sentence she called "humiliating."

"But I got some feedback from officers who thought it was great," he said.

The judge, who withheld adjudication in the case, also required Espinosa-Amaya to attend an anger management class, write a letter of apology to the police officer and perform 50 hours of community service.

"You can make different impacts in different ways," he said.

A judge in Painesville, Ohio, occasionally orders misdemeanor offenders to wear costumes and carry props to bring attention to their crimes. He once forced three men convicted of soliciting sex from an undercover police officer to wear bright yellow chicken suits and hold a sign that read, "No Chicken Ranch in Painesville," a reference to a famous Nevada brothel. He also ordered two 19-year-olds who stole a baby Jesus statue from a church nativity scene to walk down the street with a donkey bearing a sign apologizing for the crime.

A Texas judge gave an abusive father a choice between serving 30 days in the county jail or sleeping 30 nights in a doghouse. The father, fearing he would lose his job if incarcerated for a month, chose the doghouse.

Despite the debatable constitutionality of some creative sentences, they are rarely if ever challenged because offenders generally accept them, figuring a few hours of public scorn is better than a month in jail, said William Dunlap, a professor at the Quinnipiac University School of Law in Connecticut, who keeps track of such sentences.

Twin Falls City Council to take up bicycle safety

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Twin Falls City Council members will be talking about bicycle safety at today's council meeting.

The council will meet at 5:30 p.m. in chambers at 305 Third Ave. East in Twin Falls. First, they'll consider appointing Liyah Babayan to the Parks and Recreation Commission to fill a vacancy.

At 6 p.m., the council will have a public hearing to hear a request from the Parks and Recreation Commission that's aimed at improving bicyclist safety in Twin Falls. The proposal comes after the city has seen several serious accidents involving bicycles, with the committee forming a subcommittee to look at the issue.

Among the recommendations:

- Evaluate intersections with the most bicycle accidents for possible improvements. This is estimated to take seven to 24 months.

- Expanded bicyclist-friendly amenities, accommodating pedestrians and bicyclists with sidewalks and designated bike paths, and putting that goal in the city's strategic plan.

- Including bicyclist safety when planning future roadway projects.

- A safety and education campaign to boost public awareness.

Other recommendations would require city code changes. They include:

- A minimum three-foot distance that motorists must follow when passing bicycles.
- Making it a city misdemeanor for anyone to harass a bicyclist or pedestrian with the intent of making them fall or crash.

- Forbidding the use of a bicycle in a reckless fashion, including while under the influence of alcohol or illegal substances.

- A right-of-way ordinance that requires motorists to safely make right turns without requiring a bicyclist to brake.

Blaine schools meeting focused on communication

Times-News

HAILEY — The Blaine County School Board will have a town hall meeting from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Nov. 8, in rooms 301 and 302 of the Community Campus on Fox Acres Drive.

The board is looking for feedback on ways it can better communicate with parents, community members and staff.

The school district recently hired the National School Public Relations Association to conduct a district-wide communications audit. The final report, culled from community members, parents and teachers, offered numerous recommendations for improving communication — among them, expanding social media and developing strategies to enhance the district's image.

For more information prior to the meeting, visit www.blaineschools.org and view the Communications Audit Report under "Quicklinks" on the home page.

- Every vote counts, but how often can you watch the votes be counted? The Twin Falls County Election Department will have a public test and demonstration of a ballot-counting machine at 2 p.m. today. It's in the third-floor conference room of the Twin Falls County Courthouse and open to the public. You can eyeball the demonstration and grill election officials about how the process will unfold on Election Day.

- Here's where to find out the location of your polling place: idahovotes.gov. From there, click on the link that says: "Where do I vote?" The website allows users to type in their address and search for the appropriate polling place.

- Casting your ballot is quickest if you remember to bring your personal photo identification, which can be an Idaho driver's license, state identification card issued by the Idaho Transportation Department, a passport or identification card from a U.S. government agency with a photo, a tribal identification card, or a student identification card from a high school or Idaho higher education institution.

- Registered voters who forget their identification or don't have one can still cast ballots — they'll just need to sign an affidavit before voting. That's aimed at stopping voter fraud, because you can face perjury charges for pretending to be someone you aren't and lying on an affidavit.

- If you haven't registered, you still can on Election Day. You'll need to provide your driver's license number or the last four digits of your Social Security number, along with a valid photo identification and proof of your current address. So if the address on your identification isn't current, you'll need to bring other documentation with your valid address.

- Let's hope you don't need to call this number. But just in case, you can call the U.S. Department of Justice if you have concerns about election fraud and voting rights abuses. Assistant U.S. Attorney George Breitsemeter is the district election officer for Idaho, and he can be reached at 334-1211. The FBI will have agents at its Boise office to handle complaints of election fraud, intimidation, suppression and other abuses. The FBI can be reached at 344-7843.

"The public's help is critical to protect the sanctity of the ballot box," said U.S. Attorney Wendy Olson in a statement.

Milner Dam

In order to provide this minimum flow, two other permit requirements were that Idaho Power lease water from the upper Snake River and have a plan to ensure continued release during drought. The company is asking that these requirements also be eliminated because they would no longer be needed.

Idaho Power originally tried to change the permit in 2009. But in order to prove to FERC that eliminating the minimum flow wouldn't further reduce water quality, the company had to get a certification of water quality from the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality. That was granted in July with the provision that river temperature would be monitored.

Lewis Wardle, senior biologist with the Idaho Power licensing program, said he used river flow models that indicate that the minimal flow does more harm than good. A few miles downstream from the dam, springs add cold water to the river. Wardle said a small stream of stagnant reservoir water warms the spring water, making it less hospitable for fish.

Fish have struggled for decades in a river that state policy allows to be completely drained at Milner. In an effort to preserve fish populations, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation adopted a policy in the 1990s to release water from multiple reservoirs to augment summer flows.

In exchange for eliminating the minimum flow, Wardle said Idaho Power would capitalize on those upstream flows to release almost eight times as much for a two-week period in July following the reservoir releases. Wardle said the dam also releases water in the spring for white-water enthusiasts if they request it on certain days and if the water is available.

"This will provide a longer whitewater period and more aesthetic flow over the lower falls in July," Wardle said. "We'll just take that upstream storage and send it through in a different fashion."

Idaho Power has been trying to eliminate the minimum flow for years. In 2002, there was a proposal to drop the water amount to less than half its current level of 200 cubic feet per second. The Idaho Department of Fish and Game protested in a letter.

"Although a 200 cfs target is well below biologically preferable flows, it may maintain minimum habitat requirements for resident fish populations," wrote Terry Trent of the IDFG.

Biologist Scott Grunder, who was the IDFG fishery coordinator at the time, said it's not likely the state agency has much interest anymore.

"There are no longer any native species down there," Grunder said. "Species connectivity in the Snake is a thing of the past."

Idaho Power manages the dam's power production and the minimal flow powers a small 833-kilowatt generator. The dam's primary purpose is to provide irrigation water for the Twin Falls and North Side canal companies.

People can submit a comment, protest or motion to intervene on the permit application between now and Nov. 22. For questions, contact Anthony Deluca at 202-502-6632.

Utah police arrest man for alleged LDS church fires

SOUTH SALT LAKE, Utah (AP) — South Salt Lake authorities have arrested a 26-year-old man in connection with the alleged arson fires of two Mormon church buildings and a vacant home.

Patrick Ehat, of Salt Lake City, was arrested early Sunday morning and booked into jail, The Salt Lake Tribune reported on its website.

South Salt Lake police detective Gary Keller says no motive for the fires has been established. Police believe Ehat acted alone.

South Salt Lake firefighters put out fires at two Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints meetinghouses Saturday morning. The house fire broke out a short time later.

The combined damages are estimated at more than $1 million.

Ehat was is being held in the Salt Lake County Jail on suspicion of arson, burglary and criminal mischief.

Mont. gov. locks up his land on Mullan Pass

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — No trespassing signs and locked gates on 670 acres of land owned by Montana Gov. Brian Schweitzer on Mullan Pass appear to contradict his campaign pledge to not allow outsiders to buy up land and restrict public access.

The Independent Record reports that Schweitzer closed access to the land he had just bought in 2008 about the same time he was running for a second term as governor and pledging to continue public access to recreational land.

Schweitzer's actions do not prevent access to public land in the area, but they do close private land that had previously been open to snowmobilers, hunters and anglers.

The Democratic governor said he's had problems with vandalism and poachers on the land, but that he'll probably allow people to access the land if they ask his permission.

"Last year I had cattle shot, last summer every gate on the ranch was torn down and the cabin was broken into several times," he said. "Fish, Wildlife and Parks called me the year before and explained they had five people who poached elk, didn't have a hunting license and wanted to know if they had permission to be there. I never heard of any of those people. I didn't want to prosecute because I didn't want to get sideways in that, but if you want to hunt on a ranch you ask for permission."

Besides the no trespassing signs and locked gates, Schweitzer also put up a fence along a road that runs through the property.

People in the area told the newspaper landowners have the right to close private land, but that they still felt the loss of not being able to go on land they could access before Schweitzer bought it. Fred Bailey, with the Helena Snowdrifters club, said snowmobilers liked to use the land.

"It was a very popular area and was never vandalized before," Bailey said. "There's never been any kind of written agreement. We just appreciated that we knew we could ride there. Then all that fence went up and those signs that don't imply they'll be any permission to go there?"

On another front, about $330,000 in federal stimulus money was used this year to improve a road going by Schweitzer's land. The U.S. Forest Service said the road has been on a list for a long time to be improved, that it fit the stimulus criteria along with two other roads, and that it's just a coincidence it goes by Schweitzer's land.

"It's the first section for us to do on Hope and Dog Creek roads if we want to get to other sections farther up," said Eric Barclay, a Helena National Forest engineer.

Schweitzer said he purchased the three parcels in the area because of their remoteness, and is angry about the road being upgraded because it makes the area less remote.

Weber State energy plan has carbon neutral goal

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A Weber State University energy plan calls for the northern Utah schools two campuses to be carbon neutral by 2050.

"We will reduce the amount of carbon emission," said Kevin Hansen, associate vice president for Facilities Management at WSU. "Those we can't reduce, we'll find alternative methods and needs, go to more renewable sources?"

Hansen said the school adopted an earth-friendly initiative in 2008 and a climate action plan in 2009.

Some initiatives have been small, like adding bike racks, planting trees and recycling. Among the school's more ambitious plans are mod-ernizing irrigation systems, building a new chiller system and renovating the Shepherd Union Building on the Ogden campus, he said.

New buildings construction has also been designed to reduce the university's carbon footprint, including the Hurst Center for Lifelong Learning and Elizabeth Hall. Both received LEED silver certification and meet state high-performance energy-efficiency standards. Plans for a new residential housing complex also include designs for LEED silver certification, Hansen said.

"The initial steps have been fairly easy," Hansen said. "Where we are getting now is where people will see more of an impact."

E. Idaho man dies following police pursuit

ST. ANTHONY — The Idaho State Police say a 31-year-old St. Anthony man died Sunday morning after eluding Fremont County deputies who were trying to stop him for a speeding violation.

Police say Casey Rinehart was traveling at a high rate of speed when he lost control of his 2001 Oldsmobile Alero at about 1:45 a.m. near St. Anthony and was ejected when the car started rolling.

The Idaho State Police say Fremont County deputies had discontinued their attempt to stop Rinehart before the crash occurred.

Police say Rinehart was not wearing a seat belt and died at the scene.

Police identify couple found dead in northern Idaho home

POST FALLS — Police in northern Idaho say the deaths of two people whose bodies were found last week in a rental home in Post Falls is a murder-suicide, and no one else appears to be involved.

Post Falls Police Chief Scot Haug says the department has determined the sequence of the two deaths, but isn't releasing that information until the investigation is complete.

The dead have been identified as 54-year-old Jeff A. Hayes and 38-year-old Christina K. Mandriguez.

Police told the Coeur d'Alene Press late last week that the two died about 10 days before. Police say both had fatal gunshot wounds to the head.

Fla. man pleads guilty to Idaho kidnapping, rape

BOISE — A long-haul trucker from Florida has pleaded guilty to the 2003 first-degree kidnapping and rape of an Idaho woman who was abducted in Mountain Home and later dumped on the side of Interstate 84 about 13 miles from the Oregon border.

Forty-seven-year-old Hans Holsopple of Deltona, Fla., made the plea Friday in 4th District Court, and prosecutors dropped two other rape charges. Prosecutors want Holsopple to spend at least 25 years in prison.

Prosecutors say Holsopple's son, 27-year-old Douglas James Steinemer, also participated in the kidnapping and rape.

The Idaho Statesman reports that Steinemer, also of Deltona, has pleaded not guilty and his trial is scheduled to start Jan. 31.

Authorities say a DNA match led police to Steinemer, who named his father as his accomplice.

Late passenger allegedly claims bomb was on plane

DENVER — Police say a man who just missed his flight out Denver got angry and claimed there was a bomb in his luggage, which was already aboard.

Police say a search of the plane turned up no explosives, and the flight took off an hour late for its destination, Salt Lake City.

The incident occurred Saturday. Officials say the plane was still on the ground when the alleged threat was made.

Forty-nine-year-old Sergei Berejnoi of Sandy, Utah, was arrested on suspicion of endangering public transportation.

Police say he was taken to the Denver jail. Jail officials say they have no record of him. No current phone number for him could be located.

SkyWest Airlines, which operates the flight, says the search delayed takeoff by about an hour.

With images of civil rights, blacks urged to go and vote

By Errin Haines
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — On the Sunday before Election Day, preachers told black churchgoers across the country to get out and vote — and defy predictions that they'll be complacent or uninterested in a year that President Barack Obama isn't on the ballot.

Tying the vote to nostalgia and obligation, black pastors invoked the civil rights movement and Obama's historic 2008 victory. At Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta — the spiritual home of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. — the Rev. Raphael G. Warnock warned attendees that not voting would be nothing short of a sin.

"Go to the polls Tuesday in the name of our ancestors," Warnock said to cheering listeners who rose to their feet. "Know that your ballot is a blood-stained ballot. This is a sacred obligation."

Among those in the pews in black churches across the country were Democratic candidates hoping congregations would heed the message. Indeed, many pastors and worshippers said this election was more important than 2008, with Democrats struggling to hold on to large majorities in the House and Senate and Obama still working to put his agenda in place. Several voters said in interviews with The Associated Press that they planned to get to the polls, believing Obama needs more time to implement his plans.

The black electorate, one of the Democratic Party's most loyal constituencies, voted in record numbers to help elect the country's first African-American president two years ago, and Democrats are hoping at least some of that enthusiasm hasn't faded. Obama has in recent weeks tied a midterm vote for Democrats to continued support for his agenda — even as some candidates distance themselves from the president, who along with his policies has become less popular with the economy continuing to sputter.

Polls indicate that minority voters may not turn out at the same level as they did two years ago, but analysts say a solid showing among blacks could still swing several House, Senate and gubernatorial races, especially in the South.

Mike Thurmond, currently Georgia's labor commissioner, currently lags behind popular GOP incumbent Sen. Johnny Isakson. Thurmond — hoping to become the first black senator elected in Georgia and the first elected in the South since Reconstruction — attended Greater St. Stephen Full Gospel Baptist Church in Atlanta as he made his campaign rounds Sunday.

Rev. Raphael Warnock encourages parishioners to go out and vote in Tuesday's midterm elections during a service at the Ebenezer Baptist Church Sunday in Atlanta.

Thurmond said the polls are flat wrong.

"This whole notion about a lack of enthusiasm was an illusion, and a propaganda scheme at worst, designed to depress turnout," he said.

At the historic Dexter Avenue King Memorial Baptist Church in Montgomery, Ala., the Rev. Michael Thurman opened his sermon Sunday by asking parishioners to vote. He said he did not endorse any candidates, but he said this election would be even more important than 2008's historic vote.

"This one's going to decide the direction that the nation goes in from here," Thurman said.

The sea of negative political ads — many accusing Democratic candidates of being a rubber stamp for Obama's agenda — has quelled the enthusiasm of many black voters, said Calvin Johns, a retired medical doctor. African-Americans could be especially key to Blue Dog Democrat Bobby Bright, who narrowly won his first term two years ago with the help of black voters.

"To me it seems like whatever candidate they are talking about, the negative ads are talking about President Obama," Johns said. "Most people seem disconnected to the candidates."

In the small West Tennessee town of Brownsville, about 100 congregants sang and prayed at St. John Baptist Church on Sunday. Some worshippers came from as far as Jackson, Tenn., about 30 miles away, to attend the services led by pastor Johnny Shaw.

Shaw is also a state

Representative, a Democrat from nearby Bolivar. During the service, he asked congregants to pray for their leaders, including the president. Later, he urged them to vote, regardless of for whom they cast a ballot.

After the service, disabled veteran Stoney Springfield said he planned to vote for Democrats on Election Day but still was finalizing his decisions.

Springfield said he thinks Obama has done "an excellent job," despite dealing with issues left over from the Republican administration of George W. Bush. The wars in Iraq and Afghanistan began under Bush, and the economy had started to falter before Obama took office.

"He inherited a lot of these problems that we're dealing with," said Springfield, 48, of Jackson, Tenn. "He's trying to adjust everything to where we can have a better future."

As did several black pastors on Sunday, the Rev. George McRae, pastor of Mount Tabor Missionary Baptist Church in Miami's tough Liberty City neighborhood, invoked the civil rights struggle.

"Even though thousands of our brothers and sisters had to die in the struggle that we might be able to go in a voting booth and vote for the candidate of our choice, thank you, Lord!" McRae said at the pulpit.

Among the congregants in McRae's church: U.S. Rep. Kendrick Meek, Florida's Democratic nominee for Senate, and his mother, Carrie Meek, who was one of the first blacks elected to the U.S. House from Florida since Reconstruction. If he wins Tuesday — a long shot according to most observers — Meek would be Florida's first black senator.

Some worshippers lamented that the calls of "Yes, We Can!" from two years ago have faded.

At Friendship Baptist Church in Toledo, Ohio, 52-year-old Sandra Gill said she planned to take her pastor's advice and vote. However, she said, church members aren't making phone calls, wearing Obama t-shirts and buttons, and hosting voting parties like they did in 2008.

"There was excitement two years ago," she said. "We still have to keep the momentum going. We had a sense of pride. There was a feeling that we can do this. Maybe people feel we did what we needed to do."

Then, people voted for change, said 45-year-old Camelia Matthews on her way to the late service at the Mother African Union Church in Wilmington, Del. Matthews, who voted for Obama, pledged to vote Tuesday.

"I would like to help Obama with what his office is trying to do," she said.

The church was arranging transportation to the polls for people like JoeAnn Conyer, 89, who said she's anxious to vote in the U.S. Senate race for Democrat Chris Coons. Coons is leading in the polls against GOP tea party favorite Christine O'Donnell.

Conyer said Obama inherited "a lot of baggage" when he took office and deserves more time to get the country back on track.

"He's not doing all this on his own," she said.

Cheryl Moore, 61, similarly explained her duty to vote, saying Obama can be successful only if those in Congress understand what common people are going through.

"It's important that we make sure the balance of power remains the balance of power," said Moore, who voted for Obama in 2008.

"He needs more time."

No sign of Minn. family or plane in Wyo. mountains

LANDER, Wyo. (AP) — Searchers found no sign on Sunday of a single-engine plane believed missing in the northwest Wyoming mountains with a Minneapolis man and three of his sons aboard.

The Mooney 20J took off from the Jackson airport in a snowstorm on Oct. 25 and disappeared from radar about an hour later. The plane was bound for Riverton, Wyo., and then Minneapolis.

The pilot was Luke Bucklin, 40. His 14-year-old twins Nate and Nick and 12-year-old Noah were also aboard.

The search is centered on nine square miles of rugged terrain east of Gannett Peak, the highest in Wyoming at just over 13,800 feet. Crews have been searching in an area of steep canyons.

A search plane detected a signal on Thursday that officials thought was coming from the missing plane's emergency locator.

Jason Aanestad, the search operations chief, said Sunday the Civil Air Patrol would try to re-evaluate the signal.

Two ground teams spent Saturday night in the search area because weather conditions kept helicopters from retrieving them.

A helicopter did get a third crew out of the area. Members of that team reported blizzard-like conditions.

The weather improved Sunday.

Bonnie Harris, a friend of the Bucklin family, said they had been in Wyoming for a wedding and family vacation. Luke Bucklin's wife, Ginger Bucklin, and the couple's youngest son flew home separately on a commercial flight, Harris said.

Luke Bucklin is president and co-founder of the Bloomington, Minn.-based Web development company Sierra Bravo Corp.

Harris said Bucklin received his pilot's license in 2002.

Trial begins 8 years after Smart kidnapping

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Eight years after he's accused of slicing through a kitchen window screen with a knife and whisking away a young girl in the middle of the night, the man charged in the abduction of Elizabeth Smart is headed to trial in federal court.

Jury selection in the trial of Brian David Mitchell is scheduled to begin Monday in Salt Lake City's U.S. District Court.

After years of delays driven by questions about Mitchell's mental health and a jump from state to federal court, the trial of the one-time itinerant street preacher should finally bring Smart's saga to a close. Hers is a tale of loss, a family's fears and an improbable recovery that has long riveted the nation.

"It's certainly been a long time coming," Ed Smart, Elizabeth's father said Thursday. "We're very confident in the prosecution."

Mitchell, 57, was indicted in March 2008 on federal charges of kidnapping and unlawful transportation of a minor across state lines — for allegedly taking Smart to San Diego. If convicted, he could spend the rest of his life in a federal prison.

A 2003 state case — in which Mitchell was charged with aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault — stalled after Mitchell was diagnosed with a delusional disorder and deemed incompetent to stand trial. A state judge rejected a request to force Mitchell to be treated with medications, saying she didn't believe the drugs would work.

The ruling left Mitchell incarcerated in the state hospital — where he had refused treatment — before federal prosecutors stepped in to take a run at the case.

Mitchell was judged competent to stand trial in federal court earlier this year after an expert witness for the government said he believed Mitchell was "malingering," essentially faking a mental illness to avoid prosecution.

With prosecutors expected to call as many as 22 witnesses, the trial could take up to six weeks. Just picking a jury could take several weeks. Defense attorneys have argued that publicity of the case has tainted the pool of more than 200 jurors called for consideration, but efforts to move the trial out of Utah were rejected by both the U.S. District Judge Dale Kimball and the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.

Mitchell's federal public defenders maintain that he is ill and unable to participate in his own defense. In court papers, defense attorneys have said they'll mount an insanity defense, claiming Mitchell was so impaired at the time of the alleged crime that he can't be held legally responsible.

As evidence the defense is expected to rely on testimony from mental health experts who have evaluated Mitchell and will likely point to a 27-page manifesto drafted by Mitchell — "The Book of Immanuel David Isaiah" — as evidence of his delusions.

The rambling tome drafted a few months before Smart's June 5, 2002, kidnapping lays out Mitchell's own brand of religion that mixes revelations from early Mormon theology with excerpts from the King James version of the Bible and the writings of several New Age philosophers. The manifesto, an addendum to which has been written since Mitchell was arrested in March 2003, proclaims Mitchell a prophet and predicts his wife, Wanda Eileen Barzee, will take "seven times, seven sisters," an apparent endorsement of polygamy.

In Smart's first public testimony during a competency hearing last year, Smart said after being led from home in her pajamas and tennis shoes to a mountainside campsite she was forced to become Mitchell's second wife in a quickie religious ceremony and raped. During her captivity, Smart said Mitchell read frequently from his manifesto, sang hymns and laced his daily conversations with religious language.

"He told me he was a prophet," said Smart, who was given a religious name and was forced to wear a long, white robe, head scarf and two veils across her face. "He said he was the voice of God on Earth and that he would reign over God's children until Jesus came."

Smart said she believed Mitchell's religious devotions were a ruse. Religious revelations came conveniently when he wanted something or when he was trying to calm Barzee, Smart said.

Smart was 14 when she was abducted in the middle of the night. The disappearance transfixed the country as thousands of Utahns turned out to comb Salt Lake City and the surrounding mountains to search for her.

She was rescued nine months later after motorists spotted her walking the streets of a Salt Lake City suburb with Mitchell and Barzee.

Now, 22, Smart is expected to return to Utah from France where she is serving a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to testify against Mitchell.

Not on the prosecution's list of 22 possible witnesses is Mitchell's now-estranged wife, Barzee, who also was charged in both state and federal court with crimes related to the kidnapping.

Like Mitchell, Barzee was twice deemed incompetent for trial in state proceedings. Ordered to undergo forced treatment with anti-psychotic medications, Barzee's competency was restored last year.

She pleaded guilty to federal kidnapping and unlawful transportation of a minor charges in federal court last year and was sentenced to 15 years in prison. State authorities dropped Barzee's pending case related to Smart's kidnapping in favor of her guilty plea in a companion case involving the attempted abduction of one of Smart's cousins.

Oregon, Auburn swap spots atop BCS standings; Boise St. falls to No. 4

Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Oregon and Auburn swapped spots atop the BCS standings and Boise State was passed again, this time by TCU.

The Ducks (8-0) moved into first place for the first time this season, which is interesting but not necessarily important. Auburn (9-0) grabbed the top spot last week, but Oregon caught up after beating Southern California 53-32, leaving the Tigers in second place.

The top two teams in the final BCS standings on Dec. 5 play in the championship game Jan. 10 in Glendale, Ariz. Right now, the Ducks and Tigers are in control of the title race.

“They’re fighting over what color uniform to wear in the championship game,” BCS analyst Jerry Palm said.

Oregon is No. 1 in the two polls used in the standings and No. 2 according to the computer ratings. Auburn is first according to the computers and No. 2 among the voters of the Harris and coaches polls.

The other three unbeaten teams, TCU (9-0), Boise State (7-0) and Utah (8-0), are next in the standings, but they’ll need Oregon or Auburn to lose to even have a shot at playing for the national championship.

Boise State had been No. 3 for two weeks, but as the Broncos beat up on the soft part of their schedule, others are catching up — as expected. TCU jumped from fourth to third.

Utah, which plays TCU on Saturday, is fifth. Alabama is the highest rated one-loss team in sixth. With a game against rival Auburn to end the regular season and a possible Southeastern Conference title game, the defending national champion Crimson Tide (7-1) are definitely alive to repeat.

What are the chances the Tide returns to the national title game if it wins out?

“I don’t think it’s a slam dunk,” Palm said. “If forced to make a prediction now, I’d guess Alabama would go over undefeated Boise State or TCU, but I’m not operating under the assumption that would happen.”

Voters are giving more support than ever before to Boise State and TCU, and both are benefiting from some good non-conference victories that help their computer ratings. Those two factors could keep ‘Bama at bay, Palm said.

Still, the Broncos, Horned Frogs and Utes better watch their backs while they’re keeping an eye on each other.

Boise State beat Louisiana Tech 49-20 on Tuesday. Utah beat Air Force 28-23, and TCU easily handled UNLV 48-6 on Saturday. Those results didn’t necessarily swing things toward the Horned Frogs as much as Oregon and Auburn’s performances did.

After both won convincingly on the road, the Ducks

SAN FRANCISCO'S TREAT

San Francisco Giants' Madison Bumgarner throws during the first inning of Game 4 of baseball's World Series against the Texas Rangers Sunday.

Rookie Bumgarner pitches Giants to brink of Series crown

By Ben Walker
Associated Press writer

ARLINGTON, Texas — The rookie pitched way beyond his years, sending a shudder through Rangers Ballpark.

Madison Bumgarner dominated for eight innings, Aubrey Huff and Buster Posey homered and the San Francisco Giants put on a fielding clinic in Game 4, beating Texas 4-0 on Sunday night to move within one win of that elusive World Series title.

Dressed in black-and-orange, the Giants were spooky good in taking a 3-1 edge. Bumgarner allowed only three hits and took all the fun out of a festive, Halloween crowd.

“I can’t say enough about what he did,” Giants manager Bruce Bochy said.

Ace Tim Lincecum will try Monday night to deliver the Giants’ first championship since they moved to San Francisco in 1958. Now it’s up to Cliff Lee to save the Rangers’ season in Game 5.

The 21-year-old Bumgarner and closer Brian Wilson helped the Giants become the first team to post two shutouts in a World Series since Baltimore threw three straight to close out the Dodgers in 1966.

Huff’s two-run homer in the third gave Bumgarner all the support he needed. Posey added a solo shot in the eighth — Bumgarner and Posey became the first rookie battery to start in the Series since Spec Shea and Yogi Berra for the Yankees in 1947.

Even though Bumgarner got relief help, it was a complete game for the Giants. Andres Torres and Edgar Renteria each got three hits and their teammates made almost every play in the field.

up with a shoestring catch, second baseman Freddy Sanchez made a leaping grab and Posey threw out Josh Hamilton trying to steal. Bumgarner helped himself, too, knocking down Hamilton’s scorcher up the middle.

Bumgarner didn’t permit a runner past first base until the seventh. Facing his only jam, he retired Ian Kinsler on a fly ball to strand two runners and preserve a 3-0 lead.

Bumgarner struck out Vladimir Guerrero three times, the first time the star Texas designated hitter had done that this season.

Raiders destroy Seahawks 33-3

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jason Campbell and a relentless defense gave the Oakland Raiders that elusive back-to-back win in emphatic fashion.

Campbell threw for 310 yards and two touchdowns, and Oakland’s defense did the rest to help the Raiders even their record at the midpoint of the season with a 33-3 victory over the Seattle Seahawks on Sunday.

Darren McFadden ran for 111 yards as the Raiders (4-4) reached the .500 mark this late in the season for the first time since 2002.

They did it by finally putting together back-to-back wins, a feat that had eluded them the past two seasons. Oakland had lost its last seven games following a win, outscored by an average of 17 points. This time, the Raiders followed up their 59-point offensive outburst in Denver a week ago with a defensive masterpiece against the Seahawks (4-3).

Oakland didn’t allow a first down until more than 27 minutes into the game and gave up just 162 yards of offense, including 47 on the ground. It was the fewest yards allowed by the Raiders since 2006 and the fewest points allowed since shutting out Kansas City in the final game of the 2002 season.

The Raiders also gained 545 yards, marking the first time in franchise history they put together back-to-back 500-yard offensive performances. Oakland has outscored the opposition 92-17 the past two weeks.

It wasn’t all good news for the Raiders. Pro Bowl cornerback Nnamdi Asomugha left the game in the fourth quarter with an injured right ankle. He was unable to walk off under his own power and went immediately to the locker room.

The normally reliable Olindo Mare missed two field goal attempts for Seattle, ending a streak of 30 consecutive makes on a day all the bounces went Oakland’s way. The Raiders turned one double-deflection into a 55-yard pass play and another into an interception.

The first of those breaks came on a third down late in the third quarter.

Campbell’s slant pass hit Darrius Heyward-Bey in the chest, bounced up and was bobbled by Jacoby Ford before Michael Bush picked it out of the air and rumbled for the big gain. That set up one of Sebastian Janikowski’s four field goals to give Oakland a 16-0 lead.

On the next possession, Matt Hasselbeck threw a deep ball to Deon Butler that cornerback Stanford Routt deflected. Butler tried to make a diving catch of the batted pass, but the ball popped out right to Tyvon Branch for an interception.

Campbell connected on a 69-yard touchdown pass to Heyward-Bey on the next play to make it 23-0, sending the half-filled Coliseum into delirium.

The only remaining drama was whether the Raiders would finish their first shutout in eight years. Mare finally made a 47-yard field goal with 9:02 remaining to get Seattle on the board.

McFadden had his fourth 100-yard rushing day of the season. Heyward-Bey had a career-high 105 yards receiving and his second career touchdown, and fullback Marcel Reece also had a career high corner with 90 yards receiving, including a 30-yard TD on fourth-and-1 in the second quarter.

Bowyer edges Harvick under caution at Talladega

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. — NASCAR’s three title contenders hoped the tightest championship in seven years wouldn’t be derailed by the typically chaotic racing at Talladega Superspeedway.

They got what they wanted Sunday.

There was a photo-finish win for Clint Bowyer, and a traffic jam at the top of the standings featuring Jimmie Johnson, Denny Hamlin and Kevin Harvick with three races left in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

Harvick was the runner-up to his Richard Childress Racing teammate, Johnson was seventh and Hamlin rallied to finish ninth. They now head to Texas with four-time defending champion Johnson leading Hamlin by 14 points and Harvick 38 back.

“It’s going to be an awesome championship battle all the way to Homestead, and I’m really looking forward to it,” said Johnson, the four-time defending champion.

The race was marked by 87 lead changes, second most in NASCAR history, and a multi-car accident that sent AJ Allmendinger’s car flipping across the track as the leaders roared toward the white flag. NASCAR threw the caution for Allmendinger’s accident, and nobody had any idea who was out front when the yellow waved.

It took several minutes of reviews for NASCAR to declare Bowyer the victor. He jumped the gun with celebratory burnouts, then stuck his hand out his window for a congratulatory high-five with Harvick, who waited in his parked Chevrolet for the NASCAR call.

While Bowyer celebrated in Victory Lane, the title contenders tried to make sense of the day. Johnson hovered around a TV monitor in the infield media center to watch replays of the final two laps, while a wide-eyed Harvick was later distracted by another view.

“Oh, I didn’t know somebody flipped,” he said.

That’s how it usually goes at Talladega, which every driver considered the wild card of the 10 Chase races.

The goal was to set a strategy that would prevent mayhem at Talladega. For Johnson and Hamlin, it was riding around the back most of the day then hooking up with a teammate for help for a final push.

Only Hamlin lost the draft and fell behind the pack and dropped a lap down. He needed to wait for the field to catch him, then slid inside a promised hole from fellow Toyota driver David Reutimann to stop the bleeding. From there, Hamlin needed cautions to get back on the lead lap and into position to keep his title chances alive.

Jazz get first win, 120-99 over Thunder

OKLAHOMA CITY — Paul Millsap had 30 points and 16 rebounds, Deron Williams added 16 points and 15 assists and the Utah Jazz avoided matching their worst start in 31 years by beating the Oklahoma City Thunder 120-99 on Sunday night.

Al Jefferson notched his first double-double since joining the Jazz in an offseason trading, putting up 23 points and 10 rebounds.

The Jazz haven't started 0-3 since the 1979-80 season, the franchise's first in Utah. Instead, they snapped Oklahoma City's season opening two-game win streak behind a strong push in the middle of the game when they outscored the Thunder 40-13.

Kevin Durant led Oklahoma City with 29 points and Russell Westbrook scored 22.

HEAT 101, NETS 78

NEWARK, N.J. — LeBron James scored 20 points, Chris Bosh and Dwyane Wade were close behind, and the Miami Heat ended the New Jersey Nets' two-game unbeaten start with a 101-78 victory Sunday.

Bosh finished with 18 points and Wade added 17, both getting most of them in Miami's dominant first half before sitting out the fourth quarter. James played a little of the final period and added seven rebounds and seven assists.

It was the most impressive offensive performance yet for the Heat, who have won three straight since beginning their new era with a loss in Boston on opening night. Miami shot 68 percent in the first half, when its Big Three combined for 41 points — one fewer than New Jersey — and the stats only lowered when the reserves took over toward the end.

MAVERICKS 99, CLIPPERS 83

LOS ANGELES — Jason Kidd ended the first half with a 65-foot shot-put heave from inside the 3-point arc at the opposite end, Caron Butler scored 17 points and Shawn Marion had 10 of his 12 points in the fourth quarter, leading Dallas past the Los Angeles Clippers.

Dirk Nowitzki added 16 points and seven rebounds for the defending Southwest Division champions in their first road game of the season. Kidd finished with 13 points, nine rebounds and seven assists.

Rookie Blake Griffin had 16 points and nine rebounds for the Clippers, who missed 14 of their first 16 shots and finished at 34 percent while falling to 0-3 on the season under new coach Vinny Del Negro. None of the starters reached double digits until Griffin converted a slam dunk with 5:32 left in the third quarter.

LAKERS 107, WARRIORS 83

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pau Gasol had 26 points and 12 rebounds, Kobe Bryant added 20 points and the Los Angeles Lakers kept up their unbeaten start to the season with a 107-83 victory over the Golden State Warriors on Sunday night.

Lamar Odom had 16 points and 14 rebounds for the Lakers, who easily improved to 3-0 with their 10th consecutive win over their upstate rivals.

Los Angeles outbounded Golden State 55-42 and held a comfortable double-digit lead throughout the second half, with the Lakers' starters continually outrunning the Warriors at their own up tempo game.

Monta Ellis scored 20 points for the Warriors, whose first loss ended their first 2-0 start in 16 years. Golden State played without guard Stephen Curry, who aggravated his sprained right ankle Friday.

“Gov. Crist talked to me about getting out of the race. I recommended to the governor that he should consider getting out of the race.”

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Olson will lead our kids into tomorrow's world

Through hard work and luck I have been fortunate enough to be involved in successful business ventures. In addition I have been a school trustee and a superintendent for more than 30 years. I was awarded Idaho's Educational Leadership award in 1999, the Idaho Superintendent of the Year award in 2007 and I was president of the Idaho Superintendents' Association in 2005. Does that make me a "Bureaucrat or an 'Educrat'"? I don't think so. It makes me a knowledgeable Idaho citizen gravely concerned about the future of our state and our children.

I have always considered myself a Republican. However, this year's race for the superintendent of public instruction is not about politics. It's about knowledge, understanding, and above all, leadership.

Superintendent Luna is quick to give himself credit for accomplishments way outside the scope of that office. Superintendent Luna is fond of the word "I", with no apparent understanding of the power of "we".

"More money in the classroom," is an irrefutable sound bite. It gets a lot of political mileage, but is simplistic at best. True improvement begins with strong leadership. Competent teachers will not work for mean, onerous or ineffective principals, and if they can't transfer to another building or another district, their production will decline. Strong principals don't work with weak superintendents. The quality of leadership permeates the entire district and will affect student achievement.

During the last debate, Tom Luna belittled the Boise School District for paying Dr. Stan Olson a salary that is required to hire a person of his quality. While serving as superintendent of schools, Dr. Olson was chief executive officer of a very large business. The education of 25,000 students, a $200 million operation budget and the ultimate responsibility for over 4,000 employees requires skills beyond comprehension. He moved that district forward over a 10-year period by being good at what he does!

Would we question Boise State University about the wisdom of paying Coach Chris Peterson his salary? Does anyone want to pay him less and watch him leave? How much recognition and money has the state of Idaho received because of the success of the Boise State football team? In my mind "Coach Pete" is the poster child of what leadership can do! Stan Olson can be education's "Coach Pete." Under his leadership, education will get a higher ranking than number 50.

Dr. Olson was questioned about the dollar amount Boise spends to educate each student. Doesn't Superintendent Luna understand that the Boise School Board sets the budget and knows the expectations of the community? Could quality educational be one reason Boise is ranked so highly as a desirable place to live?

An overwhelming majority of Idaho's teachers, principals, support staff and superintendents support Dr. Olson. His support comes from big districts, little districts, eastern Idaho districts, western Idaho districts and all those in between. It's because our children's greatest advocates know that he has the expertise, passion and leadership to stabilize this unacceptable decline. He will hold educators accountable. He knows what to measure and when to measure it. When the economy recovers, Stan will lead our children into tomorrow's world. He will do it with us, not to us.

Career politicians give reader 'deja-moo'

You're not supposed to look straight into the sun, but if you did, you know what you'd find in Idaho? Jobs, and lots of them.

I looked. I couldn't find them. Maybe they'll start pouring in if Butch Otter gets re-elected. You think?

Butch's biggest claim to fame is his balanced budget. OK, but isn't that his job? Doesn't Idaho's Constitution require a balanced budget? Maybe that will be his legacy: Butch Otter, he balanced the budget then spent way too much time looking directly into the sun.

Mike Crapo claims that Washington is totally screwed up and, if re-elected, he'll fix it. Hasn't he been a player in Washington for two terms now? What part of screwed up has he fixed so far? What has he done to put Idahoans back to work besides procrastinate? It's a common trait of career politicians. I call it deja-moo — a feeling that I've heard this bull before.

Crapo wants to increase truck limits on the interstate. He thinks it won't damage the road surface. I think he, too, has been looking directly into the sun. It doesn't take a rocket highway engineer to see the amount of damage already done from the current 40-ton limit.

Ever wonder why there are so many single-car accidents on I-84 where the driver overcorrects and loses control? Could enormous ruts left by heavy trucks be playing a part? Even truckers have trouble steering in those ruts.

If we discard the old, useless politicians and replace them with new, energy efficient ones, we should be eligible for a tax credit. Plus, we can send Butch and Sundance back to the ranch where they can keep staring into the sun until they find those jobs.

We need a gov. that will work with the Legislature

In Idaho, we elect citizens to represent us in the Idaho Legislature. These "citizen legislators" have full-time careers and are part-time politicians. Our citizen legislators care about Idaho and want what is best for the people of Idaho. Career politicians have full-time careers of being politicians and make decisions based on what will get them the most votes and not what is best for the people of Idaho.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter is a career politician. Career politicians and our citizen legislators have different values and don't work well together, which is a big reason why the Legislature goes into time and money wasting overtime almost every year. The next four years are going to be crucial to the future of Idaho, and it will be important to have a governor that will work together with the Legislature.

This election, let's put a "citizen governor" into office — a governor that shares the same values as our citizen legislators. For those folks who are afraid of having a Democratic governor changing everything for the worse, consider this: the Legislature is overwhelmingly Republican and will serve as the check-and-balance that is a cornerstone of American government.

On Nov. 2, consider voting career politician C.L. "Butch" Otter out of office and let those checks and balances serve the best interest of the people of Idaho.

If you want real change, get out and go vote

Several months ago, I submitted a letter describing how we should just vote everyone out of office and start all over. Well, we are now down to less than a week before the election. All of the parties are running highly negative ads about each other, and the mudslinging has just gotten out of hand.

I believe that if the people of this country really want change, then they need to get out and vote. That is the only way you are going to change things. You may or may not agree with my view on starting all over, and that's why I served in the military so you could have that freedom. But I also served so you would have the freedom to vote. So don't take that freedom lightly, get out and vote.

Olson understands the meaning of 'public' in the job title he's fighting for

Let me get this straight. It is acceptable and honorable for the head football coach at Boise State University to receive a substantial bonus for the successful coaching of a successful team. It is not acceptable or honorable for the superintendent of the second largest school district in Idaho to be awarded a bonus of $25,000 by the district's publicly elected board of trustees for working with his district to figure out (among other things) how to stop the bleeding of students from his district to so-called public charter schools, private schools and surrounding school districts.

Dr. Stan Olson did lead his district in creating school choice, including the incorporation of charter schools within the district. The student population has increased, a trend not often seen in urban school districts. Rather than create another school district, which a charter school does (and seems to be the antithesis of the state's desire to have smaller school districts unify), Dr. Olson and the Boise School District worked within the system to give alternatives for students. I call this thinking "outside of the box."

I urge you to vote for Stan Olson for superintendent of public instruction. He understands the meaning of "public" in the job title.

Kudos to McClellan, good luck to Shotswell

It is election time and I will vote, but not with as much enthusiasm as when I was a younger voter. I am now older and wiser to the entrenched political party machinery. Money and big interests cancel out the mass of "ordinary" voters. Some candidates do not even have to do any "campaigning" — just pay others to do it.

For these reasons, I heartily commend those rare individuals who buck the system. I happily became aware of two such people (I am sure there are more), one a Republican, one a Democrat, that did just that this year.

First, kudos to Kent McClellan for running a successful campaign for Minidoka County commissioner and campaigning the old-fashioned way by going door-to-door to introduce himself. Money cannot buy that. It takes time and an openness that invites questioning from the electorate. How unusual is that? No big-party fund raisers to meet your candidate. Not the only thing that matters in voting for someone but if all else appears equal, it tips the scale for me.

The other candidate is a newcomer to running for public office, Cindy Shotswell (District 26), but not new to public scrutiny. As a social worker, Ms. Shotswell has to abide by one of the strictest professional codes of ethics there is and her "good standing" is publicly available for all Idahoans to see. She understands that serving the public means doing what is in the best interests for the most people most of the time. She is thoughtful, respectful and gracious but do not mistake that for weak.

Good for you, Cindy, for stepping up to the plate and taking a swing, even though realistically I think we all know the likely outcome. But then again who knows? Boise State, a top college football team? Nah, never happen! Happy Election Day!

Please use your common sense when you vote

I have become extremely confused about the assessor office issue in Lincoln County.

On one hand, we have the incumbent, Linda Jones, the current Lincoln County assessor. She is qualified, schooled, trained, experienced and knowledgeable, with more than 10 years at the Lincoln County assessor's office.

On the other hand, we have the challenger, who lost in the primary and is running as a write-in. He has previously stated that he is inexperienced and does not know anything about the position, but he is a nice person.

What am I missing? If you want a nice person with no knowledge or experience don't vote for the incumbent who is also nice but has been doing a great job? Please, please, please use common sense and intelligence and preserve our assessor credibility. Vote Linda Jones.

The state of Idaho needs leadership and decisiveness

I appreciate Keith Allred returning to Idaho to bring his professional wisdom to those of us living in the sticks. With his condescending swagger and "I told you so" demeanor, I can just imagine how well this guy would work with the Idaho Legislature. Allred's gall continues to amaze me as he throws the governor and the entire Legislature under the bus for trimming Idaho schools by just 7 percent while the rest of the state government has been hacked to pieces with holdbacks and reductions. It must be delicious to say that Gov. Otter was the first governor to cut education, but it's academically dishonest to exclude significant cuts made to education in the 1940s for the sake of rhetoric (look it up, Allred).

While Keith Allred chatted up soft-handed East Coast elites, Butch Otter transformed a career working for Idaho business into a career working for all of Idaho as a legislator, lieutenant governor, member of Congress and now, thankfully, as governor. Idaho needs leadership and decisiveness. Gov. Otter has never said he relished cutting education and he is on record as saying it will be the first government function to see increased investment as revenue returns. For his candor, he is beaten up by a man who knows the halls of Columbia better than the realities of governance.

A vote for Sen. Brackett is a good vote for Idaho

Sen. Bert Brackett, District 23, has devoted his work in our state Capitol to preserving the traditions and culture that has made Idaho great. He works diligently to prepare our state for a future that affords ample opportunities to the next generation. Your children and grandchildren deserve nothing less than the very best.

Bert is highly regarded by those he works with and for. He uses a common sense approach to any problem he encounters, whether it be moving cattle or fighting fires on his ranch to the many diverse problems he helps solve for the state of Idaho.

Bert Brackett's leadership qualities are very apparent. He served as a former school board member in Three Creek. A former highway board member, a past president of the Idaho Cattle Association, past chairman of the Rangeland Resource Commission and past president of the University of Idaho College Ag Consulting Council are just a few of the boards and commissions Bert has served on. Bert also served two terms in the House of Representatives before being elected to serve in the Senate.

Bert Brackett not only believes in personal responsibility, he exemplifies all the requisite qualities of personal responsibility. A vote for Sen. Bert Brackett is a good vote for Idaho.

Michelle stands on her own record and works well with both parties as she proved when filling in for her now-deceased husband, Clint, while he was ill last session. She represents us all with dignity and class. She knows the issues of her district really well, having been involved with water rights and farming in southern Idaho with her husband for years. She is respected by both Democrats and Republicans and this was proven by former speaker of the House (Idaho Legislature) Bruce Newcomb, who himself is a Republican, who has endorsed her for this race, saying she is the best candidate for District 25.

Her opponent is only a two-year Idaho resident and has no grasp of a lot of the issues facing the people in our state these days. He has approached this race without much integrity — it has been an angry and negative campaign on his part.

Michelle approaches the issues with calm, patience and intelligence, listening carefully to her constituents. She works for them, as it should be.

Her opponent is running on the premise that he knows what is best for the people of Idaho and he'll do it his way. This is not the Idaho way. Never has been and never should be. Michelle is dedicated to the people of Idaho.

Please join me and vote for Michelle Stennett for District 25 on Nov. 2.

Generation gap divides troops on gays in military

By Kristin M. Hall and Tom Breen
Associated Press writers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — If you want to know what a member of the armed forces thinks about repealing “don’t ask, don’t tell,” you could start by asking how old they are.

Generational differences appear to play a prominent role in whether soldiers, airmen, Marines and sailors are worried about repealing the policy that has barred gays from serving openly since 1993 but faces a possible court-ordered end. Generation may also influence how a change is implemented, if the courts or Congress ultimately lift the ban.

“Younger soldiers wouldn’t have a problem with it, but older soldiers are the ones that enforce Army regulations,” noted Jason Ashley, 43, a former Army first sergeant who served with the 101st Airborne Division based at Fort Campbell, Ky.

There is no comprehensive survey of military-wide views of gays in the ranks — yet. The Pentagon is set to release a study of the issue in December after questioning 400,000 service members and 150,000 relatives, an effort ordered by Defense Secretary Robert Gates to determine how to repeal the policy without hurting the military.

Officials familiar with its findings told The Associated Press this week that the survey found most U.S. troops and their families don’t care whether gays serve openly and think “don’t ask, don’t tell” could be done away with. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because the results of the survey have not been released.

Details on the findings were still scarce. But in conversations with troops and veterans, the idea repeatedly emerges that younger recruits, who make up the bulk of combat troops in Afghanistan and Iraq, are indifferent while older ones, including many officers, don’t want the ban lifted.

Many veterans of the current wars use terms like “archaic” and “old-school” to describe the viewpoint they see from higher-ranking officers and others who support the ban.

“You can’t expect a 60-year-old colonel who was reared in the 1950s to have the same opinion about homosexuality as a soldier who was reared in the 1990s,” said Abel Trevino, who served in the Army from 2003 to 2008, including two tours in Iraq, before returning to civilian life and enrolling at the University of Washington.

Some say that despite the ban, they knew they were serving with gay soldiers. But the topic was simply not discussed and rarely created a problem.

Justin Little, 30, is a National Guard medic who asked that his unit not be identified, because he serves with a gay soldier.

“We keep it to ourselves, because of the current policies, of course, and conceal it from new recruits that we get in our platoon from time to time until we can be confident in how they’d react,” Little said.

Lance Shults, 25, a master at arms at Naval Base San Diego, said he was in boot camp with gay men and women, and that serving alongside them isn’t a concern. Shults believes his attitude is common among younger members of the military, who have grown up with portrayals of gays in the media and who may be likelier to have openly gay friends or relatives than older officers and enlistees.

“The older generation grew up with a phobia and a stigma and stereotype,” he says. “Younger people have been around it longer than older people have. You hear about them in the news, you have gay or lesbian friends. It’s not a big deal.”

Government bailouts go against everything America stands for Mike Simpson, Not My Congressman Nationally, congressmen who voted for the TARP bailouts are struggling for their re-election, and rightfully so! What we are told about TARP was deceitful, as the program was meant to transfer wealth from the middle class to the super rich, and seemingly most voters understand this.

Since the approved $700 billion TARP vote, Sen. James Inhofe has revealed that Henry Paulson (the ex-chief executive officer of Goldman Sachs turned U.S. treasury secretary) threatened Congress into voting for TARP. Bloomberg has since sued the Federal Reserve to uncover the true cost of the bailouts tallied over $12.7 trillion (with a “T”)!

It was just months prior to Simpson’s TARP vote (which was heavily pushed by Obama and Pelosi) when the Idaho Republican Party added new language to the party platform that made it clear that such legislation was a violation of Idaho Republican principles.

To show how asinine Simpson had become over TARP, he blasted then Idaho Congressman Bill Sali for voting against it in the Idaho Statesman (Sept. 20, 2008). Simpson questioned Sali’s “philosophical position,” whereas it was Simpson who had his “philosophical position” backward. That came during Sali’s re-election bid against Minnick who claimed, in the Statesman, to be “good friends with Henry Paulson.”

All this would be sad if it weren’t so crazy. While the bailout goes against everything that America stands for (free enterprise, right to succeed and fail on your own merits, no government intervention), Mike Simpson not only votes for TARP bailouts but also the $168 billion Stimulus Package, the $2 billion Cash-for-Clunkers Program, as well as billions of dollars in annual appropriations (welfare for the rich)!

Mike Simpson has forever lost my vote and I will celebrate the day Idaho voters join me in retiring him.

Gary Eller used soldier’s funeral as a soapbox

I am urging you to vote against Gary Eller for county commissioner. Here is why:

Four years ago, Mr. Eller was invited to speak at my stepson’s funeral; he was a former teacher that had been the inspiration for my stepson enlisting in the Army. My stepson was killed in action in Iraq. Mr. Eller chose to use this soldier’s funeral as a soapbox to hurl political rocks and spew his unwelcomed opinions. Mr. Eller couldn’t accurately describe the type of person my stepson was and came across as not remembering my stepson very well. Mr. Eller offended my family, veterans and soldiers attending this funeral. War is terrible, but it is entirely inappropriate to express one’s political opinions at a fallen hero’s funeral. In one of his frequent rantings-to-the-editor, Mr. Eller compared the pay a soldier earns with that of a teacher, trying to make the case that soldiers make too much money. Mr. Eller, shame on you! Comparing those two occupations and arguing that a teacher should earn more than a soldier is an outrage. A soldier works 24/7 in conditions that most teachers could not endure, and potentially faces injury, torture, and death. Mr. Eller, if you have so much disdain for the amount of money a soldier receives, maybe you should refuse to accept the military pension you get. You obviously make too much money.

How absurd for Mr. Eller to state that personalizing disagreements is the behavior of a small mind. This is one “hardheaded Republican” that will be voting for Leon Mills.

Obama may follow Bill Clinton’s model

By Anne E. Kornblut
The Washington Post

In the fall of 1994, Bill Clinton suffered a bruising defeat in his first midterm elections. He held a desultory news conference, then left the country for a whirlwind trip to Indonesia. Back home, the new Republican Congress set about changing the course of his presidency.

If Republicans repeat some version of that narrative on Tuesday, Obama may well follow a path similar to Clinton’s — sometimes compromising, at the risk of angering his own base, and sometimes daring the GOP to oppose him, as Clinton did during the government shutdown of 1995.

Already, there are shades of Clinton’s rhetoric in Obama’s phrases on the campaign trail. Two days after his defeat in 1994, Clinton said he would work with Republicans but block them from doing anything that would “take us back to the policies that failed us before.”

Sixteen years later, the line seems still in vogue. “We don’t want to relive the past,” Obama said Saturday in Chicago, on a campaign swing aimed at shoring up his party’s prospects. “We’re not going back.”

Their schedules this week may turn out to be mirror images as well. On Friday, Obama is slated to leave for a 10-day trip to Asia that includes three nights in Indonesia.

In 1994, when Clinton made a similar post-election trip, he found himself, during a stop in Jakarta, discussing the minutiae of domestic policy, including his willingness to work with Republicans on a constitutional amendment allowing prayer in public schools.

Some of the issues Obama has said he wants to pursue next year, such as deficit reduction and education initiatives, resemble the kinds of narrow and achievable priorities Clinton embraced immediately after both houses changed hands in 1994.

White House officials resist comparisons between the two presidents. If the House falls into Republican hands, they say, Obama will not repeat the Clinton governing script of 1995, when the former president downsized his ambitions and often used the newly Republican Congress to his advantage by finding areas of compromise.

That “triangulation” approach aggravated Clinton’s liberal base, as did his smaller-scale policy proposals, such as advocating school uniforms. But it built Clinton a centrist coalition nationwide and secured his reelection two years later. “This president is not like that president,” one senior White House official said.

OHIO

Palin says Obama 'blew it' in first 2 years and Dems will now pay

CLEVELAND — President Barack Obama made Ohio his final campaign stop Sunday in the tumultuous midterm elections, trying to help hard-pressed Democrats in a state that could prove crucial to his fortunes in two years.

Republicans said it was too little and too late, confident their party will pick up more than 40 House seats and regain the majority they lost four years ago. Republican control of the Senate seems less likely, although they expect to gain several seats there, as well as numerous governors' seats.

Obama, bracing for perhaps one of the biggest midterm setbacks in recent times, made a four-state weekend sprint to help embattled Democrats as best he can. He said their chances are good if their supporters turn out heavily on Tuesday.

But Sarah Palin, the 2008 GOP vice presidential nominee, predicted voters will send a sobering message: "You blew it, President Obama. We gave you the two years to fulfill your promise of making sure that our economy starts roaring back to life again."

As he did in three other states this weekend, the president implored voters in Ohio to recall how poorly the Republicans handled the economy when they were in control, and to give Democrats more time.

Labeling birth control 'preventive medicine' could make contraception free for US women

Fifty years after the pill, another birth control revolution may be on the horizon: free contraception for women in the U.S., thanks to the new health care law.

That could start a shift toward more reliable — and expensive — forms of birth control that are gaining acceptance in other developed countries.

But first, look for a fight over social mores. A panel of experts advising the government meets in November to begin considering what kind of preventive care for women should be covered at no cost to the patient, as required under President Barack Obama's overhaul.

Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., author of the women's health amendment, says the clear intent was to include family planning.

SAUDI ARABIA

Saudi top clerical body endorses fatwa that bans female cashiers at stores

RIYADH — Saudi Arabia's top government-sanctioned board of senior Islamic clerics has endorsed a fatwa that calls for a ban on female vendors because it violates the kingdom's strict segregation of the sexes.

The powerful committee said in its ruling Sunday that the mixing of sexes is forbidden and women should not seek jobs where they could encounter men.

The decision comes after a conservative preacher was reprimanded in August for violating a government-mandated restriction on fatwas by calling for a boycott of supermarkets employing female cashiers.

Saudi King Abdullah has been trying to clamp down on ultraconservative ideology as part of his bid to modernize the kingdom. But his efforts appear to be challenged by the influential religious scholars, who play a key role in the monarch's legitimacy.

AFGHANISTAN

Taliban leaders hold secret talks with Afghan president on al-Qaida linked Haqqani network

KABUL — Three Taliban figures met secretly with Afghanistan's president two weeks ago in an effort by the Afghan government to weaken the U.S.-led coalition's most vicious enemy, a powerful al-Qaida linked network that straddles the border region with Pakistan.

A former Afghan official said the meeting in Kabul included an ex-Taliban governor, Maulvi Abdul Kabir. He comes from the same Zadran tribe as the leaders of the Haqqani network, an autonomous wing of the Taliban responsible for many attacks against U.S. and Afghan forces, the former official said over the weekend.

U.S. and Afghan officials hope that if Kabir agrees to quit the insurgency, it could split the Zadran tribe and undercut the pool of recruits from which the Haqqanis currently draw fighters. But it was unclear whether any progress toward that end was made during the talks.

Weakening the Haqqanis' grip over the Zadran tribe could help shift the power balance in eastern provinces where the network poses a major threat. The Haqqani network, led by ailing Jalaluddin Haqqani and his son Sirajuddin, is believed to be sheltering top al-Qaida leaders across the border in Pakistan.

Kabir served as governor of Nangarhar province and deputy prime minister during the Taliban rule, which ended with the U.S.-led invasion of 2001. He is believed to run the Taliban council in the Pakistani city of Peshawar but is not considered a powerhouse in the Taliban.

Last 2 survivors of notorious Nazi death camp Treblinka devote last years to memory of victims

BAT YAM — They are believed to be the last two survivors of the most chillingly efficient killing machine of the Nazi Holocaust: the Treblinka extermination camp in occupied Poland.

Samuel Willenberg and Kalman Taigman, 87-year-old Israelis, are devoting their final years to trying to preserve the memory of the 875,000 people systematically murdered in a one-year killing spree at the height of World War II. Almost all of them were Jews.

Only 67 people are known to have survived the camp, fleeing in a brazen revolt shortly before Treblinka was destroyed. Following the recent death of a prominent chronicler, Israel's national Holocaust memorial says the two Israeli men are now the final living link to one of the most notorious death camps in human history.

"The world cannot forget Treblinka," said Willenberg.

"Soon there will be no one left to tell," added Taigman.

On NOVEMBER 2nd, decisions will be made.

Ex-guerrilla to be Brazil's first female president

By Bradley Brooks
Associated Press writer

SAO PAULO — A former Marxist guerrilla who was tortured and imprisoned during Brazil's long dictatorship was elected Sunday as the first female president of Latin America's biggest nation, a country in the midst of a rapid economic and political rise.

Rousseff

A statement from the Supreme Electoral Court, which oversees elections, said governing party candidate Dilma Rousseff won the election.

With nearly all ballots counted, Rousseff had 56 percent of the vote compared to just under 44 percent for her centrist rival, Jose Serra, the electoral court said.

In a 25-minute victory speech to jubilant supporters in Brasilia, Rousseff said that her first promise was to "honor the women" of Brazil and that she hoped her win would allow "fathers and mothers to look their daughters in the eyes and say, 'Yes, a woman can.'"

Known for her tough and serious demeanor, Rousseff only betrayed emotion when she spoke about President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, Brazil's hugely popular leader the last eight years who chose her as his party's candidate to succeed him and used all his political will to get her elected.

"The joy I feel with this victory today is mixed with the emotion of his farewell. I know that a leader like Lula will never be away from his people," she said, using the president's nickname as her eyes welled with tears and her voice cracked. "I will always be able to knock on his door and I'm sure that it will always will be open."

Bill Gene Allen

BURLEY — Bill Gene Allen, 66, peacefully slipped from this life surrounded by his loving and beloved family at his home in Burley, Idaho, on Wednesday, Oct. 27, 2010.

Bill amazed doctors, family, and friends by living four years beyond his diagnosis of terminal lung cancer. He stands as a great example of determination to live life to its fullest, with strength and a remarkable, positive attitude.

Bill, a lifelong resident of Burley, was born Nov. 11, 1943, to Cleve Edward and Adine Hinkley Allen, the third of four children. He attended Burley schools, graduated from Burley High School in 1962 and attended the College of Southern Idaho.

Bill loved his country, was a true patriot, and served with pride in the United States Navy during the Vietnam Conflict. He earned an electrician certification during his military service.

After his honorable discharge from the Navy, he married Leah Fenstermaker in 1969. Leah died in 1981.

In 1983, Bill married Terri L. Hansen of Priest River, Idaho. They were later divorced.

For 30 years, Bill worked for Ore-Ida as operations manager, and also traveled throughout the U.S. to give training in other company plants.

He was a very active and involved member of the Burley Elks, where he was trustee, accountant and bar manager.

He was coordinator and score official for the Tuesday Night Golf League and the Annual BPOE Golf Scramble.

Bill was an avid outdoorsman, enjoying the beauties of nature, and camping, hunting and fishing. He enjoyed playing the pool (billiards) with his friends at the Rupert Elks Lodge. He also was a collector of vintage cars.

Bill was a devoted family man, and was known to his friends as "Big Heart" and "Billy-Bob."

Bill is survived by his former wife, Terri L. Allen; his children, Michelle Allen Ketchum of Bellingham, Wash., Bret James Allen of Mankato, Minn., Nicole (Curtis) Miller of Nampa, Idaho, stepson, Christopher Ayers, and daughter-in-law, Dana Ayers of Burley, Idaho; grandchildren, Sabra Ketchum, Felonee Ketchum, Dominique and Damien Ayers. Keiriana Sutton; his brother, Jerry Dean Allen of Pennsylvania; sister-in-law, Kathy McPhee Allen; sister-in-law, Lynda V. (Mrs. Max) Allen; and several nieces, nephews and cousins. Also, his constant companion and friend, his dog, Bullitt.

Preceding him in death are his parents; son, Michael William Allen; sister, Kay Erlene Lee; and brother, Cleve "Max" Allen.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 2, with a viewing one hour prior to the service at Hansen Payne Mortuary, 321 E. Main St. in Burley, officiated by Elder Jeff Bronson. Viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 1, at the mortuary. Services will conclude with burial in the Pleasant View Cemetery, with military graveside rites under the direction of Hansen Payne Mortuary.

Our tender hearts have a special cause — The American Cancer Society. We would be grateful for your contributions to it in Bills honor.

We express our appreciation to the wonderful people of Hospice and their kind service; to the Elks Brotherhood; to the Veterans' of America for their tribute. Special thanks and love to our wonderful Aunt Lynda (Mrs. Max) Allen; to dear friends Forrest Stephens and Bill Martindale for taking care of Bill during his final weeks; and to Joel Heward of Hansen Payne Mortuary.

Top JFK aide Theodore Sorensen dies at 82 in NY

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — President John F. Kennedy's aide and speechwriter, Theodore C. Sorensen, a symbol of hope and liberal governance, died at a time of contempt for Washington and political leaders.

Sorensen's passing Sunday came just as supporters of his friend and boss were preparing to celebrate the 50th anniversary of a very different moment in history: The election of Kennedy as president and the speech that remains the greatest collaboration between Sorensen and Kennedy and the standard for modern oratory.

With its call for self-sacrifice and civic engagement — "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country" — and its promise to spare no cost in defending the country's interests worldwide, the address is an uplifting but haunting reminder of national purpose and confidence, before Vietnam, assassinations, Watergate, terrorists attacks and economic shock.

But to the end, Sorensen was a believer.

He was 82 when he died at noon at Manhattan's New York Presbyterian Hospital/Weill Cornell Medical Center from complications of a stroke, his widow, Gillian Sorensen, said.

Sorensen had been in poor health in recent years and a stroke in 2001 left him with such poor eyesight that he was unable to write his memoir, "Counselor," published in 2008. Instead, he had to dictate it to an assistant.

President Barack Obama issued a statement saying he was saddened to learn of Sorensen's death.

"I know his legacy will live on in the words he wrote, the causes he advanced, and the hearts of anyone who is inspired by the promise of a new frontier," Obama said.

Sorensen, the studious, star-struck aide and alter ego to President Kennedy whose crisp, poetic turns of phrase helped idealize and immortalize a tragically brief administration, died Sunday. He was 82.

Hours after his death, Gillian Sorensen told The Associated Press that although a first stroke nine years ago robbed him of much of his sight, "he managed to get back up and going."

She said he continued to give speeches and traveled, and just two weeks ago, he collaborated on the lyrics to music to be performed in January at the Kennedy Center in Washington — a symphony commemorating a half-century since Kennedy took office.

"I can really say he lived to be 82 and he lived to the fullest and to the last — with vigor and pleasure and engagement," said Gillian Sorensen, who was at his side to the last. "His mind, his memory, his speech were unaffected."

Her husband was hospitalized Oct. 22 after a second stroke that was "devastating," she said.

Of the courtiers to Camelot's king, special counsel Sorensen ranked just below Kennedy's brother Bobby. He was the adoring, tireless speechwriter and confidant to a president whose term was marked by Cold War struggles, growing civil rights strife and the beginnings of the U.S. intervention in Vietnam.

Some of Kennedy's most memorable speeches, from his inaugural address to his vow to place a man on the moon, resulted from such close collaborations with Sorensen that scholars debated who wrote what. He had long been suspected as the real writer of the future president's Pulitzer Prize-winning "Profiles in Courage," an allegation Sorensen and the Kennedys emphatically — and litigiously — denied.

They were an odd but utterly compatible duo, the glamorous, wealthy politician from Massachusetts and the shy wordsmith from Nebraska, described by Time magazine in 1960 as "a sober, deadly earnest, self-effacing man with a blue steel brain." But as Sorensen would write in "Counselor," the difference in their lifestyles was offset by the closeness of their minds: Each had a wry sense of humor, a dislike of hypocrisy, a love of books and a high-minded regard for public life.

Kennedy called him "my intellectual blood bank" and the press frequently referred to Sorensen as Kennedy's "ghostwriter," especially after the release of "Profiles in Courage." Presidential secretary Evelyn Lincoln saw it another way: "Ted was really more shadow than ghost, in the sense that he was never really very far from Kennedy."

Sorensen's brain of steel was never needed more than in October 1962, with the U.S. and the Soviet Union on the brink of nuclear annihilation over the placement of Soviet missiles in Cuba. Kennedy directed Sorensen and Bobby Kennedy, the administration's attorney general, to draft a letter to Nikita Khrushchev, who had sent conflicting messages, first conciliatory, then confrontational.

The carefully worded response — which ignored the Soviet leader's harsher statements and included a U.S. concession involving U.S. weaponry in Turkey — was credited with persuading the Soviets to withdraw their missiles from Cuba and with averting war between the superpowers.

Sorensen considered his role his greatest achievement.

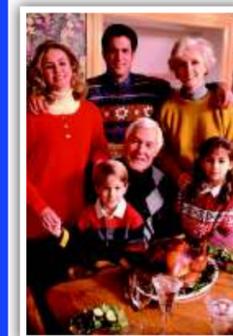

"That's what I'm proudest of," he once told the Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald. "Never had this country, this world, faced such great danger. You and I wouldn't be sitting here today if that had gone badly."

Robert Dallek, a historian and the author of "An Unfinished Life: John F. Kennedy, 1917-1963," agreed that Sorensen played a central role in that crisis and throughout the administration.

"He was one of the principal architects of the Kennedy presidency — in fact, the entire Kennedy career," he said Sunday.

Yoga for you — whatever your tastes

Magic Valley offers some of the world's variety

By Melissa Davlin ♦ Times-News writer

Kathy Jones demonstrates the Cobra in her 'Yoga Flow' class.

There are plenty of yoga disciplines in the world, a handful of which are offered in south-central Idaho. But the Sanskrit words used to describe the classes — vinyasa, hatha, iyengar — can intimidate the uninitiated.

Not sure what to choose? Here's a quick guide.

This list isn't comprehensive. Most gyms and many senior centers offer yoga classes, so check with them for schedules and prices.

And no matter which class you choose, make sure you land a teacher who communicates clearly and offers modifications on the poses for students of all abilities. As with any exercise, improper technique can lead to strains and other injuries.

If you're new to exercise, try:

Hatha, gentle yoga

Hatha yoga classes focus on the alignment of a posture, breathing and relaxation, said Sonny Buhidar, hatha yoga instructor at the YMCA in Twin Falls. The breathing helps students relax more and settle more deeply into the poses.

Where to go: Shimmy Shakti in Twin Falls, Twin Falls YMCA, Wood River YMCA in Ketchum.

If you're fit or want a challenge, try:

Vinyasa, flow, power

These energizing yoga classes aren't for the timid. Whitney Hopkins, who teaches yoga at Gold's Gym, said her flow yoga class moves quickly.

Her motto: "One breath, one movement," she said.

Kathy Jones, who teaches at Gold's Gym and Shimmy Shakti Studio of Yoga and Belly Dance, said that although most first-time students are fit, she still tells them not to push themselves.

"I always let them know, you know, just do what you can for the first time," she said.

Where to go: Gold's Gym in Twin Falls, Twin Falls YMCA, Impact Athletic in Burley, Shimmy Shakti, Wood River YMCA.

If you like to mix it up, try:

Yoga hybrids like PiYo or Body Moves

Instructor Kathy Jones, foreground, leads her 'Yoga Flow' class Thursday evening at Gold's Gym in Twin Falls. 'Yoga Flow' moves more quickly from pose to pose than do some other yoga types. 'It's kind of a guided class, so we all flow together,' Jones says.

Photos by DREW NASH/Times-News

Instructor Kathy Jones, in blue, uses alternative music — mellow but not Eastern — in her yoga classes.

Buhidar said.

Where to go: Shimmy Shakti, Twin Falls YMCA.

If you're a senior: YogaStretch, gentle yoga, hatha

Like everyone else, seniors have varying fitness levels, but this group is more likely to have had surgeries, injuries and physical impairments. Choose a class that uses props, like blocks or bands, that help get the most out of your abilities.

Where to go: Senior centers often have yoga classes, such as Jerome Senior Center's YogaStretch sessions on Thursday mornings. Check with yours for the latest schedule.

If you want to relax: Spa yoga

This new yoga class incorporates traditional stretches and poses with essential oils. The oils help add to the atmosphere — lavender for relaxing, cinnamon and cloves for stimulation.

"It's just the most amazing experience," said Kay Parker, a YMCA instructor who has taken the class. The oils help Parker remember to breathe. "I love to smell those scents," she said.

Where to go: Twin Falls YMCA.

Exhausted? Feeling really tired can threaten your health

By Julie Deardorff
Chicago Tribune

For many of us, exhaustion is a fact of life. But for the rich and famous, it seems acute weariness can be so debilitating that it requires hospitalization and, in the case of Chicago Symphony Orchestra music director Riccardo Muti, a monthlong rest along Italy's Adriatic coast.

Though eyes often roll when celebrities vanish to be treated for "exhaustion," experts say it can be a valid medical condition, even for those who don't have a publicist. Prolonged periods of physical stress and sleep deprivation can cause problems that shouldn't be ignored, they say, though Americans may not want to admit it.

"Exhaustion is real on many levels, but it's not part of our medical lexicon," said Dr. John Stracks, a mind-body specialist at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Center for Integrative Medicine who treats chronic pain. "So when you hear about Muti (being prescribed rest), it seems like a spoof, which speaks to how jaded and hard-driving we are these days?"

Americans have more sleep loss and longer work schedules than residents of most other industrialized countries, and both factors can lead to physical and emotional collapse, said Dr. Eve Van Cauter, a sleep researcher and professor of medicine at the University of Chicago.

Experts say chronic stress can trigger a cascade of negative health effects — in particular, the gastrointestinal distress suffered by Muti. The condition is frequently seen in night or shift workers, a description that, in some ways, applies to the maestro.

"Your mood and your gut function are intimately tied together," said Dr. Gerard Mullin, a gastroenterologist and associate professor of medicine at

FOUR WAYS TO FIGHT EXHAUSTION

Exercise. Once you have enough energy to stand, get moving. Exercise can especially help if the exhaustion is related to depression.

Take meditation mini breaks. If you're wired all day, you'll have trouble calming down at night and getting to sleep. The short breaks "will help you decompress, calm your mind and relax," said Judith Orloff, an assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of California at Los Angeles and the author of "Positive Energy." "Take a few deep breaths to relax the body," she said. "Focus on a positive image such as a sunset, a flower, a child's face. Stay focused on the positive image, breathe and relax. This will keep you in a centered place so you are not frazzled."

Stay present. Worrying is exhausting. "Do not project into the future or catastrophize," Orloff said. "Take doable action steps to solve problems."

Nip it in the bud. Before things get too bad, prescribe yourself some rest. Manhattan's Lisa Zaslow, 46, recently decided to put her work on hold and spend a month in the remote town of Marfa, Texas, to recharge emotionally and reflect on her life. "My business is about helping people create time and space, and I needed to do that for myself," said Zaslow, owner of Gotham Organizers.

Q&A on flu season

The Hartford Courant

What you'll need to know to protect yourself from the flu this season:

Who should get the vaccine?

The Center for Disease Control is recommending that everyone over 6 months of age receive the flu vaccine.

When should you get the flu vaccine?

As soon as you can. Conventional wisdom has been that October is the ideal time to get the vaccine. The season peaks in February, so you should definitely get it before then.

The immunization takes up to 10 days to take effect, and is effective for about six months.

Where can you get the vaccine?

Your doctor should have it available now. Pharmacies have been offering it since August. For the first time this year, pharmacists have been eligible to administer the vaccine, but only to people 18 years and older. Anyone younger has to go to a doctor or otherwise qualified health professional for a shot.

How much does a vaccination cost?

Prices are ranging from $20 to $38. Many insurance plans will cover the cost.

In what form does the vaccination come?

In three forms. Standard vaccination comes as a shot, made from a killed virus, which is recommended for the general population. There is also a high concentration form of that vaccine, recommended for people 65 and older.

Can you get the flu from the vaccine?

No. You often hear people say they've gotten the flu right after getting the shot. That's probably because they were either coming down with it when the shot was administered, or it's a reaction of their immune system. Myalgia and low-grade fever do occur as a reaction in some people, says Dr. Robert Lyons of St. Francis Hospital, but it's brief, and, compared to the flu, very mild.

Such reactions are more common with the nasal spray than with the shot, because it's made with a live weakened virus, but this also will not give you the flu.

Does the vaccine contain thimerosal?

Yes. Although some have claimed a link between thimerosal and autism, health experts have consistently said there is no evidence of any connection.

How many shots will you need?

Because the vaccine covers the three most common strains circulating — H1N1, H2N3 and Influenza B — most people will need only one. The CDC recommends that children ages 9 and under who are getting the shot for the first time this year receive two doses, administered within 30 days of each other.

Who in particular should get it?

Pregnant women, children younger than 5, anyone with chronic ailments and anyone who cares for those at higher risk of infection.

Who should not get it?

Because the vaccine is made in eggs, anyone allergic to eggs should not receive the vaccine.

Victoria's Secret has sexiness in the bag

By Amelia Rayno
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

Everyone knows what most women are aiming for when they make a purchase at Victoria's Secret: They want to be sexy.

But a new study says they might not have to wait until they get home to feel that way. For some, it's all about the bag.

A University of Minnesota study finds that for some women, just carrying a Victoria's Secret bag can affect the way they perceive themselves and their personal qualities.

"These people carried the bag for an hour and as a result felt more glamorous, more sexy and more feminine. They didn't even use or wear any of the products," said marketing professor Deborah Roedder John, who conducted the study with Ji Kyung Park.

John said the study underscores that some women can be very affected by brands in a way that has nothing to do with the product.

"A brand like Victoria's Secret, people think of that as being very sexy and glamorous and feminine," she said. "We were interested in finding out, if you use that brand, will you start to believe that you are more glamorous, sexy feminine?"

The answer, she said, is a resounding "yes," but only for a particular type of personality.

The researchers, who asked female mall shoppers to carry around either a Victoria's Secret bag or a regular pink shopping bag, learned that women who believe their personality is fixed and can't be improved through their efforts perceived themselves as more attractive than those with just the plain bags.

It's these women, she said, who are most affected by using a brand. "They kind of need a crutch to lean on in order to feel better about themselves," she said.

On the flip side, women who believe their personalities are malleable and can be improved were not affected by which bag they carried.

Maple Grove, Minn., resident Judy Covar, who was shopping at Ridgedale Center in Minnetonka, Minn., thinks it's silly that a woman can feel sexy because of a bag. "A bag can't give you that. Those things start in your mind."

But St. Paul, Minn., resident April Hill gave the idea at least a chance. "There's underwear, and then there's Victoria Secret. It's the first (bag) you notice; it's very distinctive."

Racing for reflectivity

Activewear embraces hot hues

By Vicky Hallett
The Washington Post

When City Sports wanted to draw more attention to its window displays this fall, the exercise apparel chain turned to the most eye-catching stuff in stock: highlighter-hued clothes in fluorescent yellow and orange, splashed generously with silvery reflective spots.

It's turned out to be a bright idea, says Michael Mosca, executive vice president of merchandising, because urban athletes need neon. "In D.C., a lot of them are running on The Mall in the early morning," he says. "There are people in training for the Marine Corps Marathon, and running and cycling for exercise, and it makes sense to be dressing in high-visibility clothing."

And these days, it makes fashion sense, too. For years, the only option for anyone fearing a future as road kill was donning one of those crossing guard-inspired vests. But manufacturers — particularly Brooks, which pioneered the practice with its Nightlife line — are finally turning out stuff designed to be seen that you're not embarrassed to be seen in. "The idea is to make it something that fits well, wicks and breathes,"

The 3M company is pushing a new campaign, 'No White At Night,' featuring a video proving how hard it can be to spot runners without reflective attire, compared with those sporting products that have its '360 degree enhanced visibility' standard.

Mosca adds.

City Sports is raising awareness through its run clubs, including a recent reflectivity-themed night to introduce customers to what to wear in low-light conditions.

It's been shoppers doing the educating at Lululemon, which was flooded with requests for reflective gear. So this summer, the brand launched "Run: Reflection," a line of pieces made with a fabric woven with reflective yarns so "it looks like you're shimmering," describes Amanda Casgar, Lululemon's regional community guru.

A more visible running ensemble might include Brooks' Infiniti Beanie ($24) with reflective powers.

Non-traditional cuts — including a racer-back vest ($98) — and wild plaid patterns are aiming to make safety chic. "We're not in the business of making hideous clothing," adds Casgar, who notes that more items, including shorts and a pullover, will be available in stores by Thanksgiving.

Will this be a fitness fad that just runs its course? Not according to Mosca. "This is what we'll be carrying going forward," he says.

That probably includes Under Armour's new line of run wear that made its debut at the Baltimore Running Festival earlier this month. Marathoners and staff sported shirts in a super bright yellow, which will be all over jackets, half-zips and other garments scheduled to be on sale starting in January.

That's one high-visibility way to promote high-visibility.

Reflective refusniks often believe they're fine outside as long as they're not dressed like ninjas. "We've all heard not to wear all black," says Shari Franklin-Smith, a reflectivity expert for 3M. But she doesn't give light-colored fabrics glowing reviews, either, since they're still only visible from 300 feet. That's why 3M is pushing a new campaign, "No White At Night," featuring a video proving how hard it can be to spot runners without reflective attire, along with products that boast its "360 degree enhanced visibility" standard.

"If you're running at a 90 degree-angle to traffic, and it's all on the front or back, the person isn't visible," Franklin-Smith explains.

Although it would be possible to make a garment entirely out of reflective material, less is more. When there are bits of reflectivity at biomotion points, "the brain can fill in that's a person," Franklin-Smith says. A completely reflective blob might instead look like a giant traffic cone. "You may see it but not recognize it as human," she adds.

Exhausted

Johns Hopkins School of Medicine.

When you're stressed, for example, the body's "flight or fight" response causes a surge in adrenaline, which can result in valves in the upper digestive tract staying open. When this happens, food and digestive enzymes can travel the wrong way, resulting in reflux, heartburn and other stomach problems, Mullin said.

Sleep loss and fatigue also lead to problems with people's circadian rhythm, which can promote inflammation throughout the body and cause gastrointestinal issues, Van Cauter added.

In some cases, fatigue is a sign of an underlying disease, including cancer, low thyroid, anemia or other metabolic abnormalities, such as adrenal insufficiency. Exhaustion is commonly seen with depression and is a possible side effect of many prescription drugs, including beta blockers, muscle relaxants and mood stabilizers.

But University of Chicago Medical Center internist Dr. Alex Lickerman said fatigue caused by dehydration, infection, drug or alcohol abuse, or lack of sleep — either due to insomnia or just burning the candle at both ends — is treatable in the outpatient realm. Lickerman has yet to admit anyone to the hospital for being tired.

"It's a symptom," he said. Of course, dozens of celebrities — from hip-hop star Wyclef Jean to actress Lindsay Lohan — have been carted off to the hospital amid reports of exhaustion. Though the term is a common euphemism for "drug or alcohol addiction" or a mental illness such as depression, performers also can suffer physical effects from their frenetic lifestyle and the harsh glare of the spotlight.

"Exhaustion can also lead to low serotonin, which causes depression, anxiety and insomnia. But it's not accurate if the real diagnosis is drug or alcohol intoxication or overdose."

Exhaustion, by any name, is hardly a new phenomenon.

FAMOUSLY EXHAUSTED CELEBS

Here are some stars who have claimed exhaustion:

Wyclef Jean: The hip-hop star and would-be Haitian presidential candidate was hospitalized this fall to treat exhaustion.

Lindsay Lohan: The troubled star's "exhaustion" generally translates to "trip to rehab." She's on her fifth stint and is undergoing treatment at the Betty Ford Center.

Colin Farrell: Like Lohan, the hunky Irish heartthrob was "exhausted" before heading off to rehab in 2005.

Ruben Studdard: Upon the release of his second album, "I Need an Angel," in 2004, Studdard checked himself into an Alabama hospital for "exhaustion," canceling a number of appearances.

Susan Boyle: The "Britain's Got

Talent" runner-up jetted to worldwide fame before entering the Priory rehab facility in London after the show's 2009 finale, suffering from exhaustion.

Amy Winehouse: In 2007, the "Rehab" singer canceled a number of shows in Europe as a result of what her publicists called "exhaustion" and ill health. Winehouse told the German magazine Stern she was hospitalized during this time after overdosing on a mix of substances, including heroin, ecstasy, cocaine, ketamine and alcohol.

Ashlee Simpson: During a 2005 performance in Japan, the singer left the stage mid-song and briefly returned to apologize for losing her voice. She was hospitalized later that night for dehydration, bronchitis and what she reportedly called "complete exhaustion."

Eminem: The rapper canceled a tour because of exhaustion and other medical issues in 2005. He was reportedly treated for sleeping-pill addiction.

Vincent D'Onofrio: After being hospitalized for exhaustion in 2004, D'Onofrio, who at the time starred in "Law & Order: Criminal Intent," began sharing his leading-man duties.

Dave Chappelle: The popular comedian was reportedly hospitalized for exhaustion in 2007. His representatives said he needed to drink more water.

In the 1800s, women were said to suffer from hysteroneurasthenia, or "nervous exhaustion." Triggers included excessive amounts of exercise, cohabitation, brain work and worries over motherhood, according to an 1887 article in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Women were also at risk if they worried too much about "impending or actual misfortune."

In the 1950s, around the time women were having "nervous breakdowns," scientists published research showing that it was, indeed, possible for business executives to suffer from exhaustion. Today the term burnout, which is characterized by emotional exhaustion, is recognized in Europe and is a common concern among those who work in the medical or humanitarian aid fields.

Still, while the World Health Organization recognizes several forms of medical exhaustion due to heat, pregnancy, excessive exertion, combat, malaise and other conditions, the U.S. government has not given it a diagnostic code.

Some data suggest "vital exhaustion," or a state of excessive fatigue, irritability and hopelessness, can be a risk factor for heart attacks and death. Dutch researchers found that people with high vital exhaustion scores were three times as likely to suffer a subsequent heart attack, perhaps because it increases blood clotting.

In the U.S., a problem is that the main treatment for exhaustion — sleep — is often seen as laziness, a bother or a barrier to productivity. In 1960, the average American received a luxurious amount of shut-eye: 8 1/2 hours a night. Today, most people get by on an average of less than seven hours, and a substantial proportion sleep less than six hours, according to National Sleep Foundation data.

Stracks says he believes investing in rest for the chronically tuckered-out could have a large payoff down the road. "Would a two-week break really cost that much more than another MRI or ER visit?" he asked.

Today is Monday, Nov. 1, the 305th day of 2010. There are 60 days left in the year. This is All Saints Day.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 1, 1950, two Puerto Rican nationalists tried to force their way into Blair House in Washington, D.C. to assassinate President Harry S. Truman. The attempt failed, and one of the pair was killed, along with a White House police officer.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1512, Michelangelo finished painting the ceiling of the Vatican's Sistine Chapel.

In 1765, the Stamp Act went into effect, prompting stiff resistance from American colonists.

In 1870, the United States Weather Bureau made its first meteorological observations.

In 1936, in a speech in Milan, Italy, Benito Mussolini described the alliance between his country and Nazi Germany as an "axis" running between Rome and Berlin.

In 1949, an Eastern Airlines DC-4 collided in midair with a Lockheed P-38 fighter plane near Washington National Airport, killing all 55 people aboard the DC-4 and seriously injuring the pilot of the P-38.

In 1952, the United States exploded the first hydrogen bomb, code-named "Ivy Mike," at Eniwetok Atoll in the Marshall Islands.

In 1954, Algerian nationalists began their successful rebellion against French rule.

In 1968, the Motion Picture Association of America unveiled its new voluntary film rating system: G for general, M for mature (later changed to GP, then PG), R for restricted and X (later changed to NC-17) for adults only.

In 1979, former first lady Mamie Eisenhower died in Washington, D.C. at age 82.

In 1989, East Germany reopened its border with Czechoslovakia, prompting tens of thousands of refugees to flee to the West.

Ten years ago:
Yugoslavia's new democratic government joined the United Nations after eight years of U.N. ostracism under former strongman Slobodan Milosevic.

Five years ago:
Democrats forced the Republican-controlled Senate into an unusual closed session, questioning the intelligence utilized by the White House in the run-up to the war in Iraq; Republicans derided the move as a political stunt. The Federal Reserve increased a key interest rate by a quarter-point to 4 percent, the highest level in more than four years. Musical conductor Skitch Henderson died in New Milford, Conn. at age 87.

One year ago:
Afghan President Hamid Karzai's challenger, former Foreign Minister Abdullah Abdullah, withdrew from an upcoming runoff election, effectively handing Karzai a victory. Lender CIT Group filed one of the biggest Chapter 11 bankruptcy filings in U.S. corporate history. (CIT Group emerged from bankruptcy protection the following month.) Three North Dakota college softball players believed to be on a stargazing trip drove their SUV into a pond and drowned. The New York Yankees took a 3-1 lead in the World Series as they defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 7-4. Meb Keflezighi became the first U.S. man in 27 years to win the New York City Marathon, in a time of 2:09:15. Ethiopian runner Derartu Tulu won the women's title in 2:28:52.

IF NOVEMBER 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Hold your tongue until after the middle of the month. You might feel like griping or grumbling about the boss or the job, but every word you say could be broadcast on the gossip grapevine and cause more trouble. Don't air your grievances even if they are valid. Plan an end of the year getaway with a loved one or sit down with pen and paper and write down your dreams. Don't meddle with financial or career decisions until late February or early March when your judgment is at its best and when you will easily receive helpful advice and support from people in the know.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can plod along. Or you can look at life as though it was a huge present that you can unwrap, layer by layer, to find surprise after surprise tucked inside. Contemplate the possibilities rather than acting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Listen for the "sounds of silence." It might not be what is said, but what is left unsaid, that is most significant. The ground might be shifting under a key personal relationship or a business situation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Righteous ruminations rule. You have many thoughts that could have great value in the future, so keep a notepad handy and jot down your ideas. You could have insights that help you understand others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have perhaps come to a place where the sign reads "way station." You might be feeling that you are on the outside looking in, but your vague sense of discomfort will lift before the day is done.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A busy schedule leaves little time for tears and tribulations. The good news is that a partner or close companion might offer to take some responsibilities off your hands. Plan your work and work your plan.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You must remain fixed on the target like a housecat watching a bird outside the window. Deep thinking might be a challenge, but if you dig down far enough you will uncover something of value.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Remain light on your feet like a cat. Shove past problems and lingering doubts into the background. To make the most progress, be flexible. You can juggle conflicting viewpoints without being judgmental.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take a leisurely promenade. With several planets in your birth sign, it seems that all eyes are on you - no matter what you are doing. Keep credit cards in your pocket today, as financial logic is lacking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Might does not make right. Insistence on "doing your own thing" can be exhilarating, but excludes others and makes them resent you. Depend upon the tides and time to sort out all your problems.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The less said, the better. Your silence in the face of adversity can make your opponent give up like the soldiers at a castle breached by a battering ram. Secrets can be a powerful, relentless force.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do your best and don't get discouraged; turn a frown into a smile by this time tomorrow. You may be subjected to pressure to perform, but might not be at your best if challenged to try something new.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Logic leaves you marooned. You might feel that you must insist on having proof of someone's allegiance or love. That leaves you marooned like Robinson Crusoe on the beach, searching for footprints.

Do you need an extra hand with your project?
 We have qualified, screened employees ready to help you. Twin/Jerome 733-730

DEAR ABBY: My partner and I are vegetarians. Occasionally we eat fish, but neither of us has had pork, beef or fowl for more than 10 years.

We were at a barbecue at a good friend's house a short time ago and our gracious hosts kindly prepared veggie burgers especially for us. Another guest at the party asked me if I'd be as good-natured as our hosts if I were to have a get-together at my house. (In other words, would I serve meat to our carnivorous guests.) I told him no, to which he (jokingly?) replied that I was "selfish."

Abby, the idea of eating meat is gross to me now. The reason I stopped eating it in the first place is my ethical opposition to how it's produced, and I would not want to compromise my ideals simply in the name of being a good hostess.

Am I "selfish"? Should I offer my friends meat if that is what they prefer? I'd appreciate your input.

— WHERE'S THE BEEF? IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR W.T.B.: A gracious guest does not criticize what his or her hosts serve. Your friends are aware that you are a vegetarian and why. As long as you make sure they don't go hungry, you are not obligated to serve guests flesh of anything that doesn't come from the ground, a bush or a tree. And you can say I said so.

DEAR ABBY: I am a sophomore in high school who has the responsibility of helping my mother raise four boys and a baby girl until their mothers (my sisters) are able to take care of them. Instead of being able to attend a football game or go to the mall with friends, I spend half my time at school and the other half baby sitting. The only "joy" I feel is knowing the kids are safe in my capable hands.

I have been around babies all my life and I'm reaching the breaking point. I'm worried about my future after high school. I feel like a middle-aged woman instead of a teenager from the stress I have had to accept. Can you tell me how I can feel like I can accomplish something more?

— TEENAGE FOSTER MOM/AUNT

DEAR TEENAGE FOSTER MOM/AUNT: By completing your education. For you, freedom lies in getting a college education or learning a trade that will get you out and on your own. You should not have been saddled with the responsibility of raising the children your irresponsible sisters brought into this world. Learn from their example and be sure that the only pregnancies you have are those that have been planned and prepared for, and you will have the freedom and the future for which you are longing.

DEAR ABBY: I'm seeing this guy, "Jerry," who is an amazing person. Both of us are divorced single parents. I'm attracted to him — but I'm not sure if there is passion. My question is, do I choose security and a life that I want, or the passion that fuels romantic fire?

— SEARCHING IN COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR SEARCHING: The problem with the "passion that fuels romantic fire" is that it's so intense at the beginning that it usually can't sustain itself. Was your first marriage fueled by it? If so, this time around seriously consider marriage to an "amazing person" to whom you say you are attracted and who can provide a stable and secure future for you and your children. These qualities can form the basis of lasting and rewarding partnership.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"One of the greatest pains to human nature is the pain of a new idea."

— Walter Bagehot

Two terms that are hardest to explain to novices are the trick and the finesse. Once they master the finesse, players take them willy-nilly. Yet sometimes a finesse is not only unnecessary, but downright inadvisable. Consider today's deal to see how good your judgment is.

After an opening bid of two no-trump, you find yourself in the mundane contract of four hearts, and West leads a top diamond. Since you have possible homes for dummy's slow diamond losers, you win the ace. What next?

The answer is that the right plan is to cash the two top trumps, rejecting the heart finesse because you cannot afford to lose the lead. Now come four rounds of spades, both diamonds being pitched from dummy. It would do West no good to ruff the fourth spade (he wants to keep his heart queen to draw two of declarer's trumps), so he discards a diamond.

Declarer can now ruff a diamond in dummy and again is faced with a tempting finesse in clubs. If he takes it, West can win and draw dummy's last trump, holding declarer to 10 tricks, but since that is only a question of an overtrick, it is safe enough to make the play. If South wants to make 11 tricks against any likely distribution, he should win the club ace and ruff a second diamond.

Note that an early heart finesse leads to one down when West cashes two diamonds, then sits back for his club trick.

ANSWER: When your partner opens a minor suit, the least attractive lead against no-trump tends to be the other minor, so I would not lead a diamond. I might lead a spade from a four-card suit, but here I will settle for an unimaginative club, expecting to get the chance to shift to a spade later if circumstances demand it.
