The COUPLE who defy GRAVITY

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Rex and Kathy LaGrone sit in front of one of the airplanes owned by the Twin Falls Flyers on Friday at the Twin Falls airport. The couple joined the club in 1994 and flew this Cessna 182 until they bought their own plane in March. Rex, who is disabled, uses an adaptive hand control to fly the airplane.

Filer husband and wife bond through flight

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Rex LaGrone has always wanted to fly airplanes.

But it was his wife, Kathy, who learned how to navigate the winds first — paving the way for the tall man in the wheelchair to get his pilot's license in 1996.

Their flying adventures have allowed them to explore the backcountry of Idaho, chase a sunrise on the way to eat breakfast in Smiley Creek, and take quick trips to Los Angeles, South Dakota and Denver.

"It frees us to travel to places we probably wouldn't be able to go," Kathy said. "You get to see the light on the mountains in the morning — it's an escape for us."

"I started flying and I just fell in love with it. It really boosted my self-confidence and it brought me so much joy. When I first started flying — it was just so cool!"

— Kathy LaGrone

Rex, who works in the IT department for St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, has always dreamed about flying and took lessons before "school got in the way."

He thought it would be best if Kathy was initially integrated into the flying community so he would have more support while taking his lessons.

Kathy got her license in 1994 and they both bought memberships in the Twin Falls Flyers. The club has three airplanes that can be used by all members.

"It's a pretty tight-knit group. They'll do anything for you," Kathy said.

The couple, who live north of Filer, met after Rex broke his neck in a car accident in 1981 and have been married for almost 26 years.

They attribute faith, hard work and commitment to the success of their marriage. Flying has become a unique part of their relationship, testing them, encouraging them and bonding them together. They recently bought their own plane, a Cessna 182 that was dubbed "the Cardinal."

"I started flying and I just fell in love with it," said Kathy, a music teacher at Popplewell Elementary School in Buhl. "It really boosted my self-confidence and it brought me so much joy. When I first started flying — it was just so cool!"

Rex uses a retractable hand control to operate the airplane. The device, approved by the Federal Aviation Administration,

Wellness clinic struggles with funding

Patient load grows

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

It's time to reorganize.

From about 1,200 patients in 2004, the year it opened, the Mustard Tree Wellness Clinic has already seen 3,500 pass through its doors this year.

The patient load has grown significantly. But the clinic's funding has dwindled quickly — so much so that a Wednesday night women's clinic was officially ended last week, and clinic expenses are frozen until grants come through in January.

Funded solely by private donations and grants, the faith-based, volunteer-run clinic offers free services to patients who are at or below the poverty level.

"We are a short-term, acute care clinic," said Jonie Benson, Mustard Tree administrator. "That's where we got in trouble. We started doing more long-term care and didn't have the money for short-term."

Now, the clinic is reorganizing itself to focus again on short-term care, and so it doesn't duplicate services offered through other health care providers in the area.

Benson said the clinic will start referring the 25 to 30 women who seek assistance every week to the South Central Public Health District or Family Health Services for pap smears and birth control. The latter is a nonprofit that focuses on providing health care for Medicaid patients, the uninsured and other underserved groups.

Cheryl Becker, director of family and children's health at the health district, said hers is a very small operation that doesn't have a full-time provider on staff.

"We will see what we can do in our clinic here," Becker said. "I don't think we could see 25 more a week though."

Family Health Services has recently added providers and can accommodate more patients, according to a letter written by the Mustard Tree's board of directors. A call for further comment Monday afternoon to

Sawtooth Forest gets new supervisor

Nourse has Idaho ties

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

After an eight-month search, the U.S. Forest Service has hired a supervisor for the Sawtooth National Forest.

On Oct. 26, Intermountain Regional Forester Harv Forsgren announced that Rebecca Nourse, Tongass National Forest deputy supervisor, will soon migrate south to fill the Idaho position after serving the past eight years in Alaska.

Nourse will take over management of the 2.1 million acres of national forest land in south-central Idaho on Dec. 16.

Nourse has spent most of her career in Washington and Alaska, but this won't be her first foray into Idaho; she worked as deputy area ranger for the Sawtooth National Recreation Area from 1999 through 2001.

"I've often looked back fondly on the memories of my previous assignment on the Sawtooth NRA," Nourse said in a press release. "So now I'm looking forward to renewing old connections and friendships, as well as building new ones across the forest and the communities we serve."

The previous forest supervisor, Jane Kollmeyer, retired in March. Terry Clark, who also did a stint as deputy area ranger in the SNRA, has since served as acting forest supervisor. Forsgren had then projected the supervisor search would be over in July, but it took an additional three months.

Julie Thomas, spokeswoman for the Sawtooth forest, said 16 candidates applied. Sometimes it takes time to find the right candidate, she said, and the day-to-day management of such a varied forest as the Sawtooth can be challenging.

"We have everything from the Minidoka area, with its grazing issues, to a national recreation area, so there is a huge array of public concerns," Thomas said. "Becky has been here before and she knows the issues."

Twin Falls council OKs bike ordinance

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Bicyclists and motorists, get ready: rear lights and three-foot passing distances are now a must in the city of Twin Falls.

After going through a new bicycling ordinance section by section, the Twin Falls City Council voted 6-0 to pass an ordinance that came from recommendations by a Parks and Recreation subcommittee, though without the original measure to make helmets mandatory. Only Councilman and state Sen.-elect Lee Heider was absent.

Scientists: Beak deformities increase in the Northwest

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Scientists have observed the highest rate of beak abnormalities ever recorded in wild bird populations in Alaska and the Northwest, a study by two federal scientists said.

The U.S. Geological Survey study on beak deformities in northwestern crows in Alaska, Washington and British Columbia follows a trend found earlier in Alaska’s black-capped chickadees.

“The prevalence of these strange deformities is more than 10 times what is normally expected in a wild bird population,” said research biologist Colleen Handel.

Handel and wildlife biologist Caroline Van Hemert published their findings in The Auk, an ornithology journal.

They captured Alaska crows in six coastal locations and used documented reports and photographs for birds elsewhere.

The cause of the deformity — called “avian keratin disorder” — hasn’t been determined, Handel said. An estimated 17 percent of adult northwestern crows are affected by the disorder in coastal Alaska.

Clinic

FHS was not immediately returned.

“I think this will be a positive thing. It’s forcing medical partners in the community to work together to care for these individuals so patient care is at its highest level,” Benson said.

More than 200 health care providers volunteer their time and expertise at the wellness clinic, on their days off or after their work days are over.

People with diabetes account for about 70 percent of their patient load, Benson said.

“It is one of the highest health care costs out there,” Benson said. “We were doing simple stuff like blood pressure checks but now we are doing everything, and I mean everything.”

Money to pay for labs, pathology or X-rays has been exhausted, leading a new clinic advisory committee to suggest the shift back to short-term services. That original vision will encourage good stewardship and collaboration with other medical providers, Benson said.

“It’s going to cause us to give better care and stick to short-term medical care,” Benson said. “Without (the committee), we would have been shut down a long time ago. We would like the community to come alongside us to help us keep it open.”

URA to demolish building

No plans for lot bought as part of four-block project

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The former Red’s Trading Post building on Shoshone Street is going down, and a question mark is taking its place.

The Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency board on Monday unanimously approved a $20,000 demolition of the building. The demolition will be handled by PMF Inc. of Twin Falls and should be completed in about two months.

There has been little formal discussion of what to put in place of the original home of Idaho’s oldest gun shop.

The building “just needed to go,” URA board member Bob Richards said after today’s vote. Board member Larry Hall said it was a liability and eyesore to the area, and the building had been kept up “with Band Aids.”

The URA originally bought the building for $200,000 as part of a stalled four-block project to revitalize Old Towne Twin Falls. Red’s then bought downtown property from a then-URA board member so it could relocate.

looking to keep the soon-to-be-vacant lot from blighting the area while keeping its upkeep low-cost.

“We certainly don’t want to make that part of town look worse, so I’m sure that we’ll come up with some sort of plan, whatever that plan happens to be, that will make it look at least attractive so it doesn’t detract from the rest of the downtown area,” Richards said.

Board Vice-Chairman Tom Frank said he’s thought about making the site a small desert-landscaped park at least temporarily, though that idea hasn’t been formally discussed by the board.

He said the board also heard nothing back after soliciting ideas on what to do with the area when it becomes vacant.

“In a community like this, you hear all kinds of things but very seldom do people step up to the plate,” he said. “If someone does have a good idea, we’d be willing to listen to them.”

COSTS OF THE PLAN

Commissioners hear waste permit appeal

Some residents opposed to expansion

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Wendell’s treated wastewater is supposed to be sprayed onto crops — those not for human consumption, of course.

But in the past, the city’s treated effluent has made it on to Dee Clark’s home and automobile.

Clark doesn’t much trust the city’s handling of its sewer system, one of the reasons she said is opposed to the city being granted a special-use permit to expand that system by Gooding County.

The permit was granted by the county Planning and Zoning Commission in September but appealed by residents neighboring the property. Gooding County commissioners held a hearing for that appeal on Monday.

The city needs the special-use permit to bring its sewer treatment system into compliance with Idaho Department of Environmental Quality guidelines.

In June, the city settled to purchase 235 acres of land for $1.8 million from Robert and Kathi Meyers, Joe and Kay Hults and David and Nicole Hults.

However, the transaction cannot be finalized until the city obtains the necessary county permits and moves forward with improving its wastewater pond system and applying more effluent to farmland.

Clark, whose property will be nearly surrounded by the expansion, told commissioners her experience with the city over the past 20 years “has been a battle,” as effluent sometime leaves a film on her property.

Like the other appellants, she disagreed with the city’s assumption that the expansion would not decrease their property values.

“We’re essentially surrounded with sewage water,” Clark said.

James Kilgrow said he appealed the special use permit because he didn’t feel the city could afford the project. Residents passed a $12.5 million bond in 2006 to pay for the infrastructure upgrade. As a result, residents have seen their sewer rates increase to more than $50 a month.

Attorney John Lothspeich, representing the city, asked commissioners to deny the appeal, saying the permit is allowable under the county’s comprehensive plan.

“(DEQ) has told the city ‘you have no choice,’” Lothspeich said, adding it was “speculative” that property values would be adversely affected solely based on the facility’s expansion.

He said concerns over odor and effluent overspray would be alleviated once the project is complete because of increased buffer zones between the facility and neighboring property.

“This special-use permit is an absolute necessity for the city of Wendell,” Lothspeich said.

The commissioners said they will issue a ruling in the future. Clark vowed that the appellants will continue fighting if the appeal is denied.

Rinehart, Larsen appointed to interim posts

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Two interim county officials were sworn into office Monday to replace former Cassia County Coroner Paul Young and interim County Clerk Dee Yeaman.

County commissioners appointed Craig Rinehart to serve as interim coroner, and Clerk-elect Joseph Larsen as interim clerk.

Larsen won a four-year term in office after beating Yeaman in the Republican primary in May. Yeaman had been appointed interim clerk in March to replace retiring Clerk Larry Mickelsen, then resigned Friday to pursue other business ventures.

Rinehart has served as the county’s chief deputy coroner for the past five years. He was the Cassia County Republican Central Committee’s top pick for the office to replace Young, who resigned Friday after being called to serve his church.

The central committee will meet again in January to nominate candidates to serve as interim coroner for Young’s next term, as he had been elected Nov. 2 to serve another four-year term after being unopposed for the seat.

The clerk’s office pays $49,976 a year and the coroner’s office pays $12,000.

Rinehart also requested that Carmen Rodney Draper, who’s worked under contract for three years as a deputy coroner, be appointed as chief deputy coroner, a position that pays $3,000 yearly. The commissioners agreed to the appointment, and Draper was sworn in Monday as well.

“I’ve known Rod for the last 30 years. He’s worked on the ambulance since 1973, so he has a good background in this as well,” Rinehart said.

Bicycle

The council asked city staff to bring the helmet issue to a future meeting so the members can have a “clean vote.” Members also wanted to re-examine the mandatory $100 fine for most violations to the ordinance, such as unsafe passing and parking bikes on sidewalks. The fine already existed in city code.

Reckless riding of a bicycle, including riding while under the influence of drugs or alcohol, is now a misdemeanor punishable by up to a $1,000 fine and six months in jail.

The most contentious portion of the ordinance to come to a vote was the mandatory rear red lamp for night riding. Councilman

BIGGEST CHANGES

Of the redrafted city bicycle code, here are two of the biggest changes:

- Three-foot passing distance: Drivers, when overtaking bicyclists or pedestrians, whenever possible, must leave a safe distance of no more than three feet between their vehicle and the bicyclist or pedestrian.
- Rear lights: Bicyclists riding at night must have a front white lamp and a red lamp on the rear, both visible up to 500 feet. This is in addition to red reflectors.

David E. Johnson, who proposed getting rid of that requirement, said he felt it should be handled by the federal or state government, not the city council.

Councilman Trip Craig expressed concern over putting a financial burden on people. Johnson’s proposal failed 4-2, with he and Craig supporting it.

“Of all the things in here, I think the rear blinking light is among the most important safety features of this ordinance,” said Councilman Lance Clow.

Councilman Greg Laning, who said he rides his bike regularly at night, said he would feel responsible if a bicyclist was hit from behind by a car and the council failed to pass the measure.

“It makes me a thousand times more visible than just a reflector,” he said.

Several members of the bicycle safety subcommittee attended the meeting. They expressed relief at the city being almost finished with the proposal they had spent a year working on.

“I’m glad that it is 99 percent done,” subcommittee member Kevin Dane said, referring to the issue of helmets still to come before the council. “I still feel strongly that the helmet portion needs to be part of city code.”

Xavier board, Fulcher agree on panel

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Xavier Charter School board of trustees will not decide Principal Cindy Fulcher's fate — just the way she wanted it.

Attorneys for both sides of a civil lawsuit initiated by Fulcher met with 5th District Judge John K. Butler on Monday afternoon in Jerome County. They disclosed that the plaintiff and defendants had agreed to terms for a three-member panel, which will replace the five board members for the purpose of evaluating Fulcher's performance.

"The stipulation calls for a removal of the trustees," said Fulcher's attorney, John A. Bradley.

Board members Jeff Bulkley, Shawn Willsey, Teresa Berry, Emily Huber and Joan Hurlock unanimously voted to place Fulcher on paid leave back in August. In early October, Fulcher sued the board to keep them from possibly firing her. Xavier board members have not discussed why they placed Fulcher on leave or her status, citing that personnel matters are private.

In the suit, Fulcher asked for an injunction to keep the board from meeting to fire her, and for an independent panel to be formed solely to decide her future as Xavier Charter School's principal.

At Monday's hearing, Bradley said that the negotiations for the panel were finalized and agreed on by both sides.

The agreement was not filed into the court record prior to the hearing, leaving Butler with some questions as to how the panel would be selected and a timeline to get the process started.

Diane Tappen of Boise, counsel for Xavier Charter School, responded that the board and Fulcher will each pick one panel member. Those two panel will then choose the third member. Tappen added that the process will begin "as soon as possible."

Bradley offered that he expected one to two weeks to get the panel together. At that time, the panel will schedule witnesses and exhibits. When Butler asked if the matter could wrap in 90 days, both attorneys said yes. Butler then scheduled a status hearing in the case for Feb. 28, 2011.

Full details of the agreement were not available Monday, as the paperwork had not been filed in the court record as of that afternoon.

Bradley Guire may be reached at bguire@magicvalley.com or 735-3380.

Our man from Wendell stirs up a hornet's nest

Jim Amos, Wendell native and a 1970 graduate of the University of Idaho, has arrived as commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps with a flourish.

On Saturday — 15 days after he was sworn in as the leader of the USMC — Amos told reporters he has reservations about rescinding the Don't Ask Don't Tell rule, in which gays can serve in the military if they don't reveal their sexual orientation.

Other top military leaders — including Secretary of Defense Robert Gates and Adm. Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — support repealing the 17-year-old policy.

"There's risk involved; I'm trying to determine how to measure that risk," Amos said, according to The Associated Press. "This is not a social thing. This is combat effectiveness.

YOU DON'T SAY
Steve Crump

That's what the country pays its Marines to do ..."

Amos said the policy's repeal may have unique consequences for the Marines, who are exempt from a Defense Department rule for troops to have private living quarters except at basic training or officer candidate schools. The Marines put two people in each room to promote a sense of unity.

"There is nothing more intimate than young men and young women — and when you talk of infantry, we're talking our young men — laying out, sleeping alongside of one another and sharing death, fear and loss of brothers," he said. "I don't know what the effect of that will be on cohesion. I mean, that's what we're looking at. It's unit cohesion, it's combat effectiveness."

Amos — who will turn 64 on Friday — was born and grew up in Wendell and was a business major at the U of I. He earned a degree in economics, and after graduating joined the Navy, opted for the Marines, became a pilot and flew F-4 Phantoms in Vietnam, where he earned the Bronze Star. Later, Amos was a senior commander during the NATO bombing campaign over Serbia in 1999, and he commanded a Marine air wing during the U.S. invasion of Iraq in 2003.

He became deputy commander of the Marines in 2008 and was nominated by President Obama to succeed

Gen. Jack Conway as Marine commander earlier this year. The Senate confirmed his nomination on Sept. 30.

Amos registered his opposition to repealing Don't Ask Don't Tell during his Senate confirmation hearings.

"If you step away from the Don't Ask Don't Tell there are lots of things that go on today in the American military that the average Marine out there might not agree with," he said. "But the one thing we have in the Marine Corps is we got discipline and we got leadership and those are the two things that are, I think, the one thing that's going to carry the day for us should the law get changed."

1-vehicle injury crash blocks I-84

Times-News

A one-vehicle injury crash Monday blocked a portion of Interstate 84 at milepost 216 near Declo, according to Idaho State Police.

Justin W. Bromley, 32, of Aberdeen, Wash., was traveling eastbound in a 1979 Fireball recreational vehicle when he lost control and sent the RV into a broad slide. The RV hit the guard rail and overturned, according to the ISP release.

ISP investigated the crash at 4:21 p.m. Bromley and a passenger, Jina A. Beatty, 18, also of Aberdeen, were taken via ground ambulance to Cassia Regional Medical Center, where both were listed in stable condition

Monday evening. Both were reported as wearing seat belts.

As the eastbound lane was already reduced to one lane due to construction work, the wreck blocked the entire eastbound side of the interstate for three hours.

ISP continues to investigate the crash.

Alfrieda Corr

RUPERT — Alfrieda Corr, age 88, of Rupert, died Saturday, Nov. 6, 2010, at Parke View Rehabilitation and Care Center in Burley.

She was born May 4, 1922, in Arnold, Neb., the daughter of Bert U. and Bernice Davis Green. She graduated from high school in Arnold, Neb. She married Charles Melvin (Mel) Corr on Oct. 15, 1942, in Lander, Wyo. In 1956 they moved to Rupert. Following the death of her husband, she worked as a custodian for the Minidoka County School District.

Alfrieda was very involved with her church, where she belonged to the CWF (Christian Women's Fellowship) in Rupert and the Missouri Valley Women's Club in Lancaster County, Wyo. She enjoyed sewing and especially working in her flower gardens with her zinnias, bachelor buttons and her roses. She loved music and to dance. The most important thing to Alfrieda was her family, which was evident by looking at all of the pictures of her family on her refrigerator. She made sure that all eight of her kids graduated from high school and attended church.

She is survived by her children, Gary (Audrey) Corr of Torrington, Wyo., Gale (Susan) Corr of Meridian, Linda Corr and Wilma (Tom) Hume, both of Colville, Wash., Dean (Vickie) Corr of Heyburn, Sharon (Lynn) Veneman of Burley, James (Teresa) Corr of Rupert and Lony (Mary) Corr of Twin Falls; two brothers, Robert (Bob) Green of Rock Springs, Wyo., and Richard (Dick) Green of Filer; 18 grandchildren; and 22 great-grandchildren. Alfrieda was preceded in death by her husband, Charles; her parents; two brothers, Cloice and Don Green; one sister, Ardetta Andre; several sisters-in-law and brothers-in-law.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 10, at the First Christian Praise Chapel, 1110 Eighth St. in Rupert, with Pastor Mike McManus and Mark Newcomb officiating. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 9, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 1 until 1:45 p.m. Wednesday at the church.

The family wishes to express their appreciation to the nurses at Parke View Care and Rehabilitation Center and Highland Estates.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests that memorials be made to the First Christian Praise Chapel in Rupert or a charity of your choice.

Deborah Lee Knight

Deborah Lee Knight, 51, Twin Falls, an avid collector of Angels, became one herself Friday, Nov. 5, 2010, at the University of Utah Hospital.

She was born May 7, 1959, in Van Nuys, Calif. An avid lover of life, she was never forgetting to tell you the one last I love you or forget to hug you because she knew how important living in the moment was.

Debbie was preceded in death by her father, Michael Mascari; her grandfather, Jess Bidegeneta; and her paternal grandparents. She is survived by her son, Michael Hayes of Twin Falls; her mother, Phyllis Mascari of Twin Falls; brother, Frank (Tina) Mascari of Twin Falls; grandmother, Orellia Bidegeneta of Twin Falls; and aunts, uncles and several cousins and friends who became like family.

Finally at peace with herself and family, she became the free spirit she was always meant to be and left to take on the next part of her journey with the same fierce passion with which she lived her life.

A private family memorial service will take place Thursday, Nov. 11, with a luncheon for family and friends to follow at noon at Rosenau Funeral Home Community Room.

Family suggests memorials be made to the donor's favorite charity.

Family and friends are encouraged to share their thoughts at www.rosenau-funeralhome.com.

Former owners of US Fidelis reach settlement with 11 states

By Jim Salter
Associated Press writer

ST. LOUIS — The former owners of a suburban St. Louis company that was once among the nation's top marketers of auto service contracts have reached a settlement with 11 states that bars them from telemarketing or selling in those states.

The settlement was announced Monday between former US Fidelis owners Darain and Cory Atkinson and attorneys general in Arkansas, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin.

The Atkinsons do not have listed phone numbers. Messages seeking comment from the US Fidelis office, and with the attorney for the Atkinsons, were not returned.

US Fidelis, based in Wentzville, Mo., operated as National Auto Warranty Services and Dealer Services and sold more than 400,000 service contracts.

But in March, the company filed for bankruptcy amid accusations it used illegal telemarketing ploys and sold worthless warranties. The 11 attorneys general filed suit a short time later.

US Fidelis also sued the brothers, accusing them of stripping the company of at least $101 million through high salaries, cash distributions and company spending which kept them living in luxury.

In October, a federal bankruptcy judge in St. Louis approved a settlement calling for the Atkinsons to pay about $10.5 million and surrender possibly $10 million more in assets.

No criminal charges have been filed, but federal prosecutors continue to investigate.

The agreement with the attorneys general includes other restrictions on how the Atkinson brothers do business in the 11 states, Wisconsin Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen said.

"The Atkinsons bombarded Wisconsin residents with illegal robo-calls and deceptive mailings, and unfortunately persuaded numerous Wisconsin residents to purchase their auto service contracts," Van Hollen said in a statement.

Van Hollen said consumers were misled into believing that their auto warranties had expired or would soon expire. Consumers who purchased a warranty thinking it provided complete coverage later found there were various exemptions, he said. No-call laws were allegedly violated in several states.

"Every time a company tricks consumers into purchasing a phony product, it sheds a negative light on the business community," Kansas Attorney General Steve Six said.

Missouri is not part of the settlement.

Missouri Attorney General Chris Koster has filed his own suit against US Fidelis and the Atkinson brothers for violating consumer-fraud and telemarketing laws.

GOP taps tea partiers for transition to power

The first-termers comprise "no ordinary freshman class, and this is no ordinary time for our nation,"

— John Boehner, R-Ohio, and Rep. Eric Cantor, R-Va., in a letter to newly elected members

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — To help lead the GOP's transition to power in the House, Republicans on Monday tapped two newly elected congressmen who drew tea party backing in their campaigns.

Adam Kinzinger of Illinois and Tim Scott of South Carolina, who won endorsements by Sarah Palin and support from tea party activists, are part of a 22-member team charged with crafting new rules and smoothing the GOP's shift from minority to majority.

The team, led by Rep. Greg Walden of Oregon and headquartered in the basement of the Capitol, was to gather over Chinese food Monday evening in Republican leader John Boehner's office suite and meet again today.

The team includes several seasoned veterans and influential members: 15-term Rep. David Dreier of California, in line for his second stint as head of the powerful Rules Committee; Rep. Paul Ryan of Wisconsin, in line to head the Budget Committee; and Rep. Pete Sessions of Texas, the campaign committee chief.

Rep. Doc Hastings of Washington, one of a large crop of GOP lawmakers who came to Congress 16 years ago, the last time Republicans gained control of the House, is part of the group.

Two other freshmen, Cory Gardner of Colorado and Martha Roby of Alabama, are also on the roster.

Walden said he didn't choose the team based on whether they had tea party backing, telling reporters last week that he wasn't sure whether those he was recruiting were supported by the conservative-libertarian movement. "It's a nice cross-section of our Republican conference," he said of the group.

But it's clear Republicans are aware that the grass-roots movement that helped propel them to big wins in last week's elections will be an important part of their new House majority and bolstered Senate minority.

In a nod to the new blood, Boehner, R-Ohio, and Rep. Eric Cantor, R-Va., in line to be speaker and majority leader, told freshmen they would get "a larger voice" on major decisions next year. In a letter to the newly elected members, they said the class would get two posts — instead of the customary one — on the influential panel that hands out committee assignments, as well as a representative in the ranks of the House leadership.

The first-termers comprise "no ordinary freshman class, and this is no ordinary time for our nation," Boehner and Cantor wrote.

Many of the newly elected Republicans are political novices, including a pizzeria owner and a gospel-singing farmer. All four first-termers on the transition team have some degree of experience in elected office; Scott and Gardner have been state legislators while Roby has served as a city councilwoman and Kinzinger on a county board.

IDAHO

Police: 3 Colorado men face drug charges

BOISE — Three Colorado men are being held in an Idaho jail and face felony drug charges after police say they attempted to sell three pounds of methamphetamine to an undercover officer.

Police say 32-year-old Alejandro Bello-Tapia, 29-year-old Eleazar Caldera-Herrera and 26-year-old Homero Ortunes-Alvear were each arraigned Monday on charges of delivering a controlled substance.

The men, all from Denver, were booked into the Ada County jail on Friday following an eight-month investigation that was carried out by state and federal authorities. Each of the men are being held on a $1 million bond.

WYOMING

Yellowstone tourism records continue

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK — Tourists taking advantage of mild fall weather are adding to the already record number of people who have visited Yellowstone National Park this year.

The park had a record number of visitors in October. That's on top of the record number of visitors to Yellowstone in June, July, August and September.

Tourism in Yellowstone so far this year is up more than 10 percent compared to this time last year. More than 3.5 million people have visited the park this year, already topping the record 3.3 million who visited Yellowstone all last year. More than 189,000 people visited the park in October. That broke a 22-year-old record. Park officials say mild weather and less road construction may be encouraging people to visit.

Lawmakers will consider banning Spice

CHEYENNE — Wyoming could join other states in banning synthetic marijuana. The Wyoming Tribune Eagle reported Monday that next year state lawmakers will review proposals to ban products sold under the brand names Spice, K2 and Genie.

Democratic State Sen. Floyd Equibel of Cheyenne said it doesn't make sense to just impose age limits on who can buy the products since the mind altering substance affects anybody who uses it.

The mixture of herbs and spices is sprayed with a synthetic compound chemically similar to THC, the psychoactive ingredient in marijuana. Users roll it up in joints or inhale it from pipes.

Ten states have made it illegal, while Idaho has enacted a temporary ban on seven chemicals used to make spice to give the legislature a chance to decide if it wants to enact a permanent ban.

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

AROUND THE WORLD

UTAH Smart says she awoke to knife on her neck

SALT LAKE CITY — Elizabeth Smart remembers not being able to make out the threat, only the feel of cold knife at her neck.

As the then-14-year-old lay in bed alongside her baby sister, the man repeated: "Don't make a sound. Get out of bed and come with me, or I will kill you and your family." She was his hostage, he told her.

"I was shocked. I thought I was having a nightmare. It was just indescribable fear," Smart, now 23, told jurors Monday on the first day of testimony in the trial of Brian David Mitchell, the man accused of kidnapping her in June 2002.

That night, they fled up the hills above her home, with Smart in her red pajamas and tennis shoes, and the knife to her back.

Her younger sister — a baby blanket wrapped around her head and neck — rushed to their mother, telling of the kidnapping.

"It was utter terror," their mother, Lois Smart, testified earlier Monday. "It was the worst feeling, knowing that I didn't know where my child was. I was helpless."

WASHINGTON U.S. issues new security rules for air cargo

New U.S. security rules are in place banning all cargo from Yemen and Somalia and prohibiting toner and ink cartridges weighing more than one pound from passenger flights, Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano said Monday.

The new rules are a direct response to the thwarted terror plot that could have taken down two cargo planes over the U.S. last month. Terrorists in Yemen had hidden two powerful bombs inside printers and shipped them to addresses in Chicago.

As the packages made their way to the U.S., Saudi Arabia tipped off intelligence officials to the plot, providing the FedEx and UPS tracking numbers that allowed officials to pinpoint where the packages were en route.

"The threats of terrorism we face are serious and evolving, and these security measures reflect our commitment to using current intelligence to stay ahead of adversaries," Napolitano said in a statement.

The U.S. immediately banned cargo from Yemen after the bombs were intercepted. Other countries including England and Germany — which the bombs traveled through — followed suit.

COLORADO Goodwill auctions purported Dali print

GRAND JUNCTION — A Colorado Goodwill is auctioning off a purported lithograph of a Salvador Dali work that it received from a mystery donor.

But the Grand Junction store says it doesn't plan to verify the work's authenticity. A customer at the store recently pointed out the signature on the print of "The Discovery of America by Christopher Columbus," which was numbered 168 out of 300.

Manager Bill Atwell told Denver's KMGH-TV he doesn't know who donated the piece.

Atwell says the store is "here just to raise money for our programs," and it isn't going to pay an expert to determine if the work is authentic. He says the store will instead let people bid for the piece and determine its value on their own.

As of Monday afternoon, bidding had climbed to $550.

The original painting is in the Salvador Dali Museum in St. Petersburg, Fla.

HAITI Cholera may have entered Haitian capital

PORT-AU-PRINCE — Health officials said Monday they are examining at least 120 suspected cases of cholera in Haiti's capital, the most significant warning sign yet that the epidemic has spread from outlying areas to threaten as many as 3 million people.

Samples from patients in Port-au-Prince are being tested in a laboratory to confirm the presence of vibrio cholera bacteria, which has already killed at least 544 people in Haiti, Health Ministry Executive Director Gabriel Timothee told The Associated Press.

If confirmed, the bacteria could imperil an estimated 2.5 to 3 million inhabitants, nearly half of whom have been living in tents or under tarps in easily flooded encampments since their houses were destroyed in the Jan. 12 earthquake.

"We are working on the cases. ... We don't have confirmation yet," Timothee said.

He said many of the hospitalized patients are believed to have recently arrived from parts of Haiti such as the Artibonite Valley, where the epidemic was first registered and has done its most ferocious damage. More than 6,400 of the known 8,138 cases to date have been in the agricultural region, clustered around the Artibonite River.

SWITZERLAND Scientists at $10B atom smasher use lead ions to recreate moments after Big Bang

GENEVA — Scientists at the world's largest atom smasher said Monday they have succeeded in recreating conditions shortly after the Big Bang by switching the particles they use for collisions from protons to much heavier lead ions.

The Large Hadron Collider recorded its first lead ion collisions on Sunday and has since stabilized the twin beams sufficiently to start running physics experiments, said a spokeswoman for the European Organization for Nuclear Research, or CERN.

The collisions produce an effect that is as close as researchers have ever come to observing the state of matter moments after the formation of the universe, which is believed to have begun with a colossal explosion known as the Big Bang.

The event inside the collider "is a very, very, very small bang," CERN spokeswoman Barbara Warmbein said.

Obama pushes for India to take 'rightful place in world'

By Ben Feller
Associated Press writer

NEW DELHI — Deepening America's stake in Asian power politics, President Barack Obama on Monday endorsed India's bid to become a permanent member of the U.N. Security Council, hoping to elevate the nation of a billion people to "its rightful place in the world" alongside an assertive China.

Obama's declaration, delivered to the pounding applause of India's parliament members, spoke to a mission broader than the makeup of one global institution. By spending three packed days in India, announcing trade deals, dismissing job-outsourcing gripes and admonishing India's rival Pakistan, Obama went all in for an ally whose support he hopes to bank on for years.

"I want every Indian citizen to know: The United States of America will not simply be cheering you on from the sidelines," Obama said inside the soaring legislative chamber of the capital city. "We will be right there with you, shoulder to shoulder, because we believe in the promise of India."

To Obama, that promise entails shaking up the world order by giving more voice to developing countries that offer lucrative markets for U.S. products and potential help to counter terrorism and a warming planet. India fits Obama's agenda perfectly because it is the world's largest democracy and sits in the heart of a pivotal, vexing region.

The diplomacy in India also gave Obama a chance to reassert himself on the global stage, far from Washington in the aftermath after humbling congressional elections.

His final day in India began with a lavish welcome ceremony at the majestic palace residence of India's president and ended there as Obama and his wife, Michelle, were toasted to a state dinner.

India is part of the so-called Group of Four, with Germany, Japan and Brazil, that has been seeking permanent seats as major economic and political powers.

Car bombs in Iraqi Shiite cities kill 21

BAGHDAD (AP) — Car bombs struck three Shiite cities in southern Iraq on Monday, killing more than 20 people in an apparent move to derail progress toward forming a new government as political leaders tried to break the eight-month deadlock.

The blasts in the holy cities of Karbala and Najaf and in Iraq's second largest city of Basra were the third major attacks since last week, after the slaughter of more than 50 Christians in a Baghdad church and a string of 13 coordinated bombings across Baghdad that killed more than 90 people.

There was no claim of responsibility for Monday's attacks, but the violence underscores the desire of al-Qaida and other Sunni extremists to foment sectarian division at a time when Iraqis are watching to see if their leaders can form a new government accepted by both the Shiite majority and the Sunni minority.

In the northern town of Irbil, leaders of Iraq's major political blocs met Monday for the first time since parliamentary elections in March. The 90-minute televised session, the start of three days of talks, did not lead to a breakthrough.

The battle is largely a contest between the Iranian-favored coalition of Shiite Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki along with followers of anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr against a Sunni-backed secular coalition led by former prime minister Ayad Allawi.

At stake is whether Iraq has an inclusive government of both the majority Shiites and the minority Sunnis or a Shiite-dominated government with the Sunnis largely in opposition — a recipe that many worry will turn the country back to the sectarian violence of a few years ago.

Al-Maliki's bloc won 89 seats in the March 7 election compared to 91 for Allawi's coalition; neither side won a majority of seats needed to govern.

Recently momentum has moved in al-Maliki's direction. After gaining the support of al-Sadr, who used to be one of al-Maliki's staunchest opponents, he also picked up the support of a smaller coalition this weekend.

And the Kurds, who rule the three northern Iraqi provinces, are thought to support al-Maliki's re-election bid so long as President Jalal Talabani, a Kurd, is allowed to remain in office.

Minimum flows below Milner may soon be thing of the past

Since Milner Dam was built in 1905, it's been said by irrigators that's where the Snake River ends.

Idaho Power has been seeking to stop minimum flows and last month filed an amendment application with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to do so. If it's approved, the flows will disappear because there are no native fisheries downstream to preserve.

As it stands, a minimum of 200 cubic feet per second is required to flow beyond Milner to preserve the fisheries.

But the dam releases haven't done much for the fish, because in summer water heated by the sun in the reservoir in turn heats up downstream spring water, doing more harm than good.

Instead, the utility wants to hold the water and use it when it needs to produce hydropower. That in turn will lengthen the whitewater season, which is popular and significant to the local economy.

The minimum stream flow grew out of a 1980s court case in which canal companies sought to drain the Snake River when needed to provide water for farmers. A judge upheld that decision but the Bureau of Reclamation fought the ruling in order to protect fish.

So when the hydro plant was installed at Milner, the minimum flow was added as part of the license.

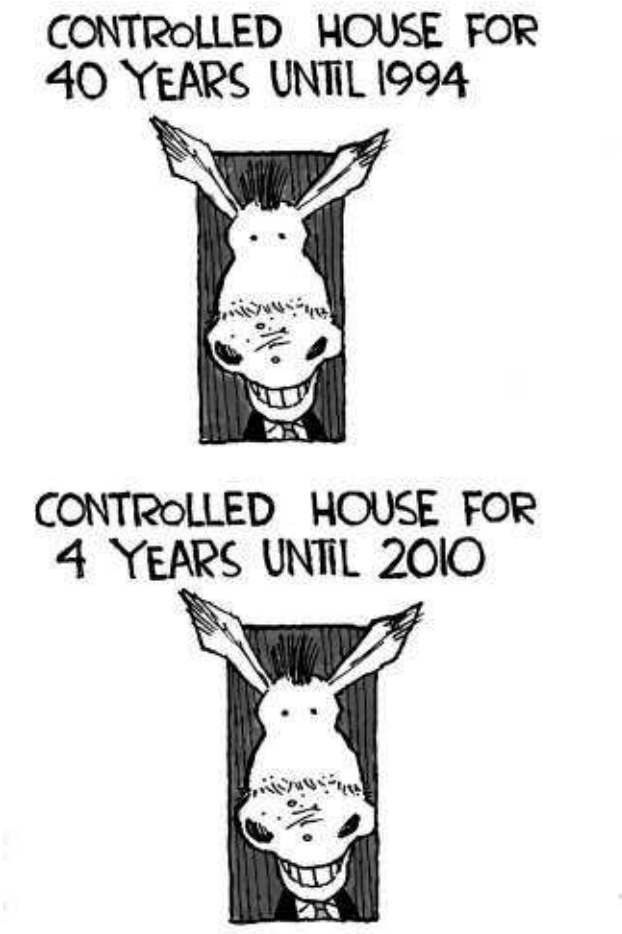

For practical purposes, FERC's approval of Idaho Power's application won't mean much. The springs downstream of Milner will still restore the river's water.

But it will be a stark specter for all of us who have lived alongside the river below Milner for many years. For there will be times when our river is — literally — no more.

Fear and loathing in post-traumatic Washington

The cynic in me says that Democrats will learn nothing from the midterm election. They not only took a bath, they were effectively water-boarded by voters.

Democrats lost the House by a margin not seen since 1948. They lost 10 governorships while retaining two — New York and California. Both states are insolvent and can be expected to ask for bailouts from the federal government, something a Republican House is unlikely to grant. Republicans will get to re-district most states in ways favorable to them for at least the next decade.

While Democrats have complained about lack of cooperation from Republicans in enacting President Obama's agenda, don't look for them to show the way by cooperating with Republicans. The GOP has swept solidly into the House on a wave of voter anger at the elitism and condescension shown by so many Democrats and their big media allies who think the public is stupid because a majority do not agree with the notion of government as savior. Democrats aren't in a cooperating mood, as they usually aren't when they lose. And make no mistake they've lost big. By every measuring stick — governorships, legislatures, independents, women — Democrats have lost. Republicans would be crazy to water down what clearly is a mandate to stop the Obama-Reid-Pelosi liberal agenda.

I expect congressional Democrats, in collusion with the White House, to attempt to maneuver Republicans into another government shutdown. It worked before and since Democrats have not had a new idea in years — or even a good, old idea — all they know is class warfare, entitlement and grievance.

At his post-election news conference last week, President Obama said many of the things he thought people wanted to hear — common ground, consensus, working together — but he steadfastly and perhaps understandably would not cede any territory on his administration's core policies, especially national health insurance. Newly-empowered Republicans aren't likely to compromise, since that usually means they are the only ones doing the compromising, which in the past has led to disgust by Republican voters who don't want watered-down conservatism, but spending reductions and smaller government.

Don't look for President Obama or the Democrats who survived the carnage to admit their policies were wrong, or that they misjudged the public. After so many in the leadership denigrated voters as being insufficiently enthusiastic about all government was attempting to do for them and questioning the smarts and the sanity of those ingrates who don't agree with their policies, I wouldn't expect such people to have a change of heart or mind. That is especially so since the mainstream media can be relied on to question every Republican effort to reverse the policies and spending initiatives of the last two years.

For Republicans the challenge is to maintain their "purity" in an environment that is the political equivalent of a brothel. Both Sens.-elect Rand Paul, Kentucky Republican, and Joe Manchin, West Virginia Democrat, said in their victory statements that Washington is broken and they are going there to fix it. That reminds me of an old lyric: "It seems to me I've heard that song before. It's from an old familiar score. I know it well, that melody." A little more than two years ago, outgoing (thankfully) Speaker Nancy Pelosi pledged to "drain the swamp" that is Washington. Instead she built a hot tub. It's difficult to change Washington. More often, Washington transforms the reformers. It's the political equivalent of Prohibition. Maybe this bunch will avoid the "speakeasy" Maybe.

Idaho Democrats not going away or changing its name

While many local Democrats took umbrage at the recent Times-News editorial suggesting Idaho Democrats change our name, I congratulate your newspaper on what I personally thought to be an insightful, if somewhat tongue-in-cheek, commentary. Indeed, every Idahoan should read and consider your words.

Though the election of 1990 was indeed a high point for the Idaho Democratic Party, when all the votes were counted Idaho was still what it long had been: a red state, with both U.S. senators and four of the seven statewide offices held by the GOP. What changed after 1990 was that the legendarily independent Idaho voter became slavishly obsessed with the national Democratic Party label and registered his/her dissatisfaction with Tip O'Neil, Ted Kennedy, Bill Clinton, etc. by voting against every Democrat on the Idaho ballot, even if that Democrat was running for county sheriff against the town drunk.

Idaho Democrats stand today for what they have always stood for: good schools, open and honest government, a fair tax system and policies that afford every man, woman and child an equal opportunity to reach their full, human potential. We strongly believe in free enterprise but oppose the corrupting influence of unregulated corporate campaign contributions. We believe that government of the people, by Wall Street for Wall Street is a perverse and potentially fatal threat to our government and way of life.

I honestly believe that most Idaho voters embrace those same ideals. Unfortunately, a very large number of those voters are reflexively registering their protest against politicians in other states by voting against local Democrats at every level of government.

This proclivity on the part of many, though by no means all, voters has all but destroyed the two-party system and created a political climate in which Republican Rep. Phil Hart can steal timber from Idaho's school children and Republican Canyon County Prosecutor John Bujak can walk away with more than a quarter of a million taxpayer dollars without raising a single Republican eyebrow.

I supported and continue to support our president, who was handed two unpopular wars and the greatest financial crisis in more than 50 years when he took over from his Republican predecessor. However, only once in more than half a century has Idaho voted for a Democratic presidential candidate and I don't believe they'll do so again soon. My concern is not that Idahoans didn't vote for Jimmy Carter or Bill Clinton or Barack Obama. My concern is that robotic voting on the basis of party label at the state and local level is not good for our state and its people.

We are not going to change our name. We recognize the anger many voters feel for our president. But Democrats in Idaho know that, without our party, the Social Security checks and Medicare payments upon which many who voted against our local candidates depend would not exist. We know that without our party's leadership lynching would still be a part of life in the solid red South and the right to vote, to attend decent schools, to eat in restaurants and ride on public transportation would still depend upon skin color. We have championed the cause of equal rights for women, for African-Americans, immigrants, gays and other minorities. We have fought for collective bargaining, fair housing and policies that guarantee our children will be able to enjoy the great legacy which is our vast public lands.

No, we are not going to change our name. And we're not going away either.

Keith Roark of Hailey is the chairman of the Idaho Democratic Party.

Can Republicans rescind Obamacare?

Republicans have declared war on the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act — or Obamacare, as they call it. They have called for its repeal, and promised to work toward that end if elected.

But the rhetoric is largely political theater. Even though Republicans gained control of the House in last week's election, the Democrats are still in charge in the Senate. In the unlikely event repeal passed the Senate, President Barack Obama would surely wield his veto pen to prevent destruction of his signature legislative achievement. Still, the knives are out, and though the foes of health care reform can't turn back the clock, they certainly will try to inflict whatever damage they can. The reforms passed by Congress require five years of implementation, which will involve complex decisions at the federal and state level. At every step, vociferous opponents, including virtually all Republicans and many special-interest groups, will be looking for ways to undermine the reforms.

Lawrence R. Jacobs

In Congress, there are two tactics that the new Republican majority in the House might use to slow health care reform. One is to attach amendments to essential, non-health care-related legislation to delay new taxes and benefits and undercut cost-control measures. The GOP is also likely to use committee hearings and investigations to harass Obama administration officials and prod federal and state officials to loosen rules and accommodate private insurers. Another avenue for fighting the law will be the courts. Legal cases asking judges to rule the reforms unconstitutional are great fundraising tools for opponents, and they will probably produce the occasional legal victory as the cases work their way through the courts. But most legal scholars agree that in the end, all or most of the legislation will probably survive. As health care reform was designed in Congress during 2009 and 2010, its advocates chose the most advantageous legal terrain; indeed, the actual bill can be read as a conversation with the courts, complete with findings and quotes from prior judicial decisions. For the Supreme Court to ultimately find the law unconstitutional would uproot a wide swath of past decisions, including established conservative jurisprudence relating to restricting abortion, extending the right to bear arms, outlawing medical marijuana and other findings. Another avenue of attack will come from the health care industry. As the Obama administration and states draw up rules to implement the new law, they are also having to parry arguments from lobbyists over such issues as how much of the premiums collected by insurance companies are devoted to actual health care, as opposed to administrative overhead and CEO bonuses. Big profits are at stake, and not surprisingly, insurers as well as employers, health care providers and the manufacturers of medical devices and pharmaceutical products are all pressing for rules that grant them maximum discretion and generous payments. Administration officials have to decide when to play tough and when to give temporary ground — for example, making concessions that would prevent insurers or businesses from dumping people who currently have insurance before the full implementation of the reforms in 2014. The battle also will play out at the state level, where some Republican governors are already dragging their feet on setting up the new insurance exchanges that will allow people to use subsidies and shop for insurance plans. All of these attempts to undermine the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act carry a potential cost. Though public opinion remains closely divided about the law as a whole, majorities of Americans approve of many of its specifics, such as rules that will stop insurers from dropping sick people, or that keep young adults eligible to stay on family insurance plans, or provide new benefits for seniors and tax breaks for businesses. Other aspects — including subsidies for lower-income Americans, measures to control rapidly rising health care costs and a requirement that people must purchase insurance or pay a penalty — are more controversial. Still, the more Americans learn about threats to popular parts of health care reform, the less they will like those threatening to go back to 2009. Republicans may soon learn that reopening years of battle over health care reform will play poorly with most Americans. Obama's legacy will stand in the end, and we're betting that by 2025, we will look back and wonder what all the shouting was about.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Election day was a sad day for Idaho

Nov. 3, 2010; it's a sad day for Idaho. Four more years of the same corruption and special interests at our Statehouse while our school teachers and state employees pay the price. I'm not surprised, just disappointed that no matter what the facts are as long as there is an "R" behind the name on the ballot, people will vote for you. Many thanks to Keith Allred and his valiant effort to change this situation. I hope you will try it again in four years.

Clearing up details about I-84 crash

About the I-84 wrong-way driver: I just wanted to clear some things up. Your article about this accident named Jerod Sweesy as the one who assisted the first crash victim, Harold Carrol; this is somewhat not true. Mr. Sweesy wasn't even on the bus with us. All the coaches that were sitting in the front of the bus actually witnessed the whole first accident happen. The coaches were myself, Mike Bagley, Brooke Rey (athletic trainer), Jacoby Fox, Justin Alsterlund and Ben Benoit. The guy that was driving down the interstate the wrong way was actually right next to our bus traveling on the opposite side of the freeway. We stopped the bus and all five of us ran back down the freeway over to where we believed the accident was, which was at least a quarter of a mile, while the bus driver was on the phone with 911. Upon coming up to the accident, we found Harold sitting on the shoulder of the freeway. Brooke then checked him over to make sure there were no serious injuries, and I checked the vehicle for other occupants. Brooke then had Harold come back off the shoulder and out of harm's way and laid him down and held his neck in place in case of neck injury. Brooke laid on the ground without a coat or sweatshirt for over an hour holding his neck in place before they were able to get the proper C collar that would fit Harold. While this was happening, myself, Jacoby Fox and Ben Benoit held up a tarp to attempt to block the wind while Justin Alsterlund was holding a flashlight so we all could see. We gave Harold coats to try to keep him warm, and we waited for an ambulance to arrive. All five of us were out there for almost an hour before the proper help showed up to give Harold the proper treatment that he needed.

We assisted the EMTs in putting him on a backboard and actually putting him in the ambulance. Sweesy didn't even arrive on the scene until after almost 45 minutes of the initial accident, and the only thing that he really did was talk to the other police officers and hand us police reports to fill out.

I'm not trying to steal anyone's glory or anything like that; I'm just making sure credit is given where it is deserved, and if anyone deserves the credit, it is Brooke. If there are anymore questions about the accident let me know.

Thanks.

Minico lacked sportsmanship

Maybe if Minico had worked as hard on its game against Shelley and on sportsmanship as it did on screwing up my son's knee they might have had a chance at winning. By the way, you were just as successful at screwing up his knee as you were at winning the game.

Jefferson's thoughts on private banks

"If the American people ever allow private banks to control the issue of their currency, first by inflation, then be deflation (i.e., the "business cycle"), the banks and corporations that will grow up around them will deprive the people of all property until their children wake up homeless on the continent their fathers conquered" (Thomas Jefferson, president of the United States, 1801-1809) (from a biography of Thomas Jefferson found on the Internet).

Five myths about George W. Bush

September 11. Katrina. Iraq. These events will be forever linked with the presidency of George W. Bush. Now, with the release of his memoir, Decision Points, the former president has the chance to defend his record and explain his actions. But as historians and the public alike look back on the Bush White House, will we be able to move past the persistent myths that endure about those tumultuous eight years?

1. George W. Bush was an uninformed Texas cowboy.

Nobody loved this myth more than Bush himself. During his 2000 campaign against Vice President Al Gore, Bush went to great lengths to depict himself as the down-home Texan whom voters could relate to.

That image, of course, was at odds with his upbringing. With a grandfather who served as U.S. senator from Connecticut and a father who led the CIA and eventually becoming president, Bush had plenty of blue in his blood.

Again in 2004, Republicans deployed the president's folksy image and manner of speech, contrasting Democratic nominee Sen. John Kerry with Bush (the guy you'd rather have a beer with — even if he doesn't drink.)

Bush's image backfired, of course. As the administration stumbled, the reputation turned into a huge liability as Americans increasingly questioned his competence.

2. Compassionate conservatism was just a campaign slogan.

Many critics dismiss Bush's talk about "compassionate conservatism" as nothing more than a cynical ploy to win over moderate voters in 2000. Liberals never believed that Bush truly wanted to bring racial and ethnic diversity to the Republican Party or that he accepted the need for the federal government to deal with entrenched social problems. The administration's bungled response to the Gulf Coast disaster plus regressive fiscal policies that disproportionately benefited wealthier Americans also seemed to contradict the promise of compassion.

Bush's experience as a born-again Christian led him to empathize with individuals' personal struggles and to respect the role of religion in civic life. As president, he insisted that the war on terrorism must not become a war against Muslims. And his signature legislative accomplishments included expansive domestic programs, such as the No Child Left Behind Act and the Medicare prescription drug benefit.

Compassionate conservatism struggled not because Bush lacked conviction but because the GOP turned against it.

3. Bush committed America to nation-building projects in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Following the 9/11 terror attacks, Bush appeared to commit the United States to remaking enemy nations into pro-Western democracies. In Afghanistan and Iraq, the United States destroyed the governments in power and touted an ambitious "freedom agenda" far exceeding anything even Woodrow Wilson ever conceived.

Yet in many ways, Bush's commitment to nation building was primarily a rhetorical tool to build domestic support for military operations. In the minds of key foreign-policy players on Bush's team, regime change, not rebuilding civil societies, was the real goal.

4. Dick Cheney ran the Bush White House.

The Bush era produced a stream of good books examining the vice president's hidden influence. We learned how this crafty insider expanded executive power and shaped foreign policy by relying on a network of loyal advisers.

However, much of the subsequent writing about the presidency — including works by journalists such as The Washington Post's Bob Woodward — challenges this portrait. Instead, we have begun to see that Bush, surrounded by political advisers such as Karl Rove, didn't allow power to move too far away from the president's control.

Bush rejected Cheney's preference for a hard-line stance toward North Korea and Iran, and it was Bush, not Cheney, who pushed for the troop surge in Iraq as well as the Troubled Assets Relief Program in 2008.

5. Bush left conservatism in ruins.

On election night 2008, the conservative era appeared over, and the age of Obama seemed set to begin.

Except it didn't happen. From the early months of the Obama administration, congressional Republicans proved remarkably disciplined. Only a few broke ranks by voting for the stimulus bill, and frustration over the economy and health care reform contributed to the strength and reach of the tea party movement.

The Republican victories in the midterm elections suggest that, for all the problems that still face the GOP, conservatism is alive and well — even if it is a far different brand of conservatism than the kind Bush championed when he took office in 2001.

Spill panel: No evidence of saving $ over safety

By Seth Borenstein and Dina Cappiello
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The BP oil rig explosion and spill wasn't about anyone purposely trading money for safety, investigators on a special presidential commission said Monday. Instead it was more about seemingly acceptable risks adding up to disaster.

Investigators at the commission's hearing outlined more than a dozen decisions that at the time seemed questionable but also explainable. It was how those cascaded and crashed together that fueled catastrophe.

Yet there was no evidence of a conscious decision on the BP rig to do things on the cheap at the expense of safety, investigators stressed several times. Likewise, representatives of the companies involved in the disaster denied that corners were cut because of cost.

Critics — including a top academic, a congressman

A panel with representatives from BP, Transocean and Halliburton, prepare to give their views before the National Commission on the BP Deepwater Horizon Oil Spill and Offshore Drilling, during the panel's public hearing in Washington, Monday.

and people on the temporarily polluted Bayou — are balking at what they see as something close a free pass for BP's history of cost cutting. In the first nonpolitical and independent investigation of the disaster, commission officials say they aren't excusing BP at all, but pointing out there was no clear single decision that came down solely to money.

"Anytime you are talking about a million and a half dollars a day, money enters in. All I am saying is human beings did not sit there and sell safety down the river for dollars on the rig that night," said commission chief attorney Fred H. Bartlit Jr.

That doesn't mean that a general culture of cost cutting wasn't an issue, added commission co-chairman Bob Graham, the former Florida senator and governor. Graham wrapped up the day by saying he was worried that there was "a compulsion to get this rig completed in that April 19-April 20 timetable."

And panel co-chairman William K. Reilly said in an interview after the hearing that BP does deserve a good share of blame: "A lot of the key decisions were in fact made by BP." He said that while it might look as if the commission wasn't concerned about the culture of cost cutting at BP, it will address that broader corporate problem in the future. Monday was more about what immediately led to the disaster.

Halliburton Co., which had the crucial job of cementing the well, was on the hotseat as much as BP on Monday, clashing more often with investigators than the oil company. And the commission still hasn't dealt with the blowout preventer, a key instrument, because it is still being examined. No written report was issued on Monday.

Bartlit, the panel's chief investigator, revealed in a letter last month that testing on cement mixtures similar to those used in the well showed that the formula was unstable before the blowout, but BP and Halliburton used it anyway. Bartlit said the companies should have reconsidered the type of cement used in the well. Cement is an essential barrier to preventing blowouts.

Led by commission investigators, BP Vice President Mark Bly said Halliburton officials were slow about testing and results. Several times during the hearing, BP and commission investigators found themselves agreeing on blaming Halliburton.

So far, the inquiry into the April 20 rig explosion — which killed 11 workers and dumped 172 million gallons of oil into the Gulf of Mexico — is echoing investigations into past technological disasters, such as space shuttle explosions. If there is one large problem, it is the way that all sorts of small decisions become a cascade of failures that short-circuit normal safety features.

Bush is back, and eager to help history judge him

WASHINGTON (AP) — George W. Bush knows that history will shape his legacy more than anything he can say. But that's not gonna stop a guy from trying.

After two years of near silence, Bush is back.

With his new memoir, "Decision Points," and a promotion tour, the president who in cockier times could not think of a single mistake he had made, lists many. He counts the years without a post-9/11 attack as his transcendent achievement. He says the economic calamity he handed off to Barack Obama was "one ugly way to end a presidency."

While he's been absent from the national scene, Bush's team has been busy. Some of the most polarizing figures from his 2001-2009 presidency have found second lives in the political world.

Karl Rove, the operative who might as well have put "mastermind" on his business card, became a master money-raiser for the midterm elections in plenty of time to make Democrats apoplectic all over again. Dick Cheney, the Bush vice president whose influence rivaled if not surpassed Rove's, has tormented the Obama administration at many turns.

Not Bush.

He has given the occasional innocuous speech, has tended his presidential center, has helped with Haiti earthquake relief and has offered glimpses of a life that has him walking Barney the dog in his Dallas neighborhood with a poop bag, "picking up that which I had been dodging for the past eight years."

"Decision Points" puts Bush back in the public eye. He'll be all over TV this week and beyond, from news and opinion shows to Oprah Winfrey and Jay Leno.

In his book, Bush details difficult times with Cheney, still his friend, delivering some of the buzz-generating palace intrigue that is expected of any political memoir. Expect still more with memoirs coming out in January by Bush's first defense secretary, Donald H. Rumsfeld, and by Cheney himself in the spring.

Bush was unpopular when he left office and he still is, according to an Associated Press-GfK poll in September. In the survey, 55 percent looked at him unfavorably and 51 percent blamed him for the economic crisis that began on his watch.

Too much money in politics? You ain't seen nothing yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — All those campaign ads and cash? Just wait until 2012.

The next election will bring an explosion of political money — perhaps hundreds of millions more than ever before — without effective spending limits, a fundraising bar raised sky high by Barack Obama in his presidential campaign in 2008 and multi-million-dollar fuel added by Republican outside groups this year.

The $5.3 billion spent in 2008 and $4 billion anticipated this year? A hint of things to come.

Republicans considering running for president are preparing to sidestep the federal public financing system, eager to follow the example Obama set in 2008 when he raised nearly three quarters of a billion dollars for his presidential bid.

"The public financing system is going to look like a relic by the time we get to 2012," said Kevin Madden, a senior adviser to Mitt Romney's 2008 Republican presidential bid and informal adviser to Romney's political action committee as the former Massachusetts governor weighs a new White House run.

Every presidential election in recent history has set new spending records, as candidates, big donors and party strategists find new ways to bypass the post-Watergate laws that imposed restrictions on money and politics and the 2002 law that banned unlimited millionaire, corporate and labor contributions to the national parties.

The decision to abandon public financing in presidential elections and recent Supreme Court rulings, particularly the Citizens United case early this year that gave unions and corporations a greater voice in politics, will push the boundaries further.

The stakes will be even higher in 2012 as Republicans seek to gain control of the Senate and keep their newfound House majority. Twenty-one Senate Democrats and two Democratic-leaning independents are up for election, compared to only 10 Republicans. And a slow economic recovery could keep Obama pinned down as he works to get re-elected.

It's a recipe for explosive spending. "The left will be looking for a competitive

Organized closets can simplify your life

Experts show how to rescue your closets from anarchy

By Terri Sapienza
The Washington Post

It's 7 a.m., and you're running late because you couldn't find your favorite sweater or your child's left shoe. As you reach for a jacket before heading out the door, a soccer ball rolls across the room and a broom handle hits you in the head.

Instead of getting angry, resolve to get organized — and what better place to begin than your overflowing closets?

"An organized closet makes your life easier on a daily basis," says Edwin Santiago, a designer for California Closets in Fairfax, Va. "It simplifies your life."

Because we could all benefit from a little simplicity and a lot more storage, we asked readers to send us photos of closets in their homes that give them the most grief (a single rod and stationary shelf, anyone?). We picked three and then asked closet companies to suggest redesigns of the storage spaces to make them more efficient. Their solutions for a bedroom, kids' and coat closet are shown in the accompanying sidebars.

Should you become inspired by these designs and decide to consider your own custom closet, ask yourself: How do I use my closet space? What are my frustrations? What do I want to keep in my closet? What would I eliminate?

Here's a tip: Resist the urge to tidy up before inviting a designer to see your closet.

"It's actually a detriment to de-clutter," says Karen Sylvestre of Closets by Design in Manassas, Va. Designers say they need to see exactly how a closet is being used to figure out the best organization. Most closet companies offer a free in-house consultation. Prices for custom closets will vary depending on sizes and your choices of options and accessories.

If you're not in the market for a major closet redesign, we've included guidelines and storage products that can help anyone improve the function, efficiency and look of their closets today.

Whether you tackle the job yourself or hire someone to do it for you, a properly organized and uncluttered closet will make you happy every time you open the door. Even if it's to pull out the vacuum.

The coat closet

Jen Wheeler's coat closet in Arlington, Va.
Dimensions: 97" h x 36" w x 41" d

The Challenge

The coat closet is one of only two closets in Wheeler's apartment. It has become a catch-all for many household items that have no other place to go, including coats, scarves, mittens and hats; a vacuum; reusable grocery totes; ironing board and iron; broom and mop; picnic bags and blankets; a cooler; small tool box; laundry detergent and a small stepladder. At more than 3 feet deep, the closet has lots of space but no efficient system to store everything.

The Solution

Provided by Closet Stretchers, Rockville, Md., www.closetstretchers.com

Price as shown: $769, including installation

More Ideas

- First, consider hanging space. Then design storage with a combination of shelves, baskets, drawers and hooks.
- Add hooks on the back of the door for often-used items that you can grab quickly.
- Take advantage of the deep space by installing shelving on the back wall and one side wall.

Store less frequently used items at the top.

The shelves are made of affordable, laminated high-density white MDF.

Fully adjustable shelving and rod will customize the space.

There's enough hanging space for the renter and her guests.

Take advantage of vertical space by hanging the ironing board and iron on the wall.

Keep the stepladder at the bottom where it's easily accessible

The shelving is securely attached to the walls but can be moved to another location.

Pullout wire baskets hold more than drawers. You can also see what's inside without opening them.

Illustration by JULIUS GOYANKO/For The Washington Post

In a makeover of Jen Wheeler's coat closet, there's room for coats, but the addition of wire baskets and shelves provides a home for other clothing items, such as scarves and hats, as well as some non-apparel household items.

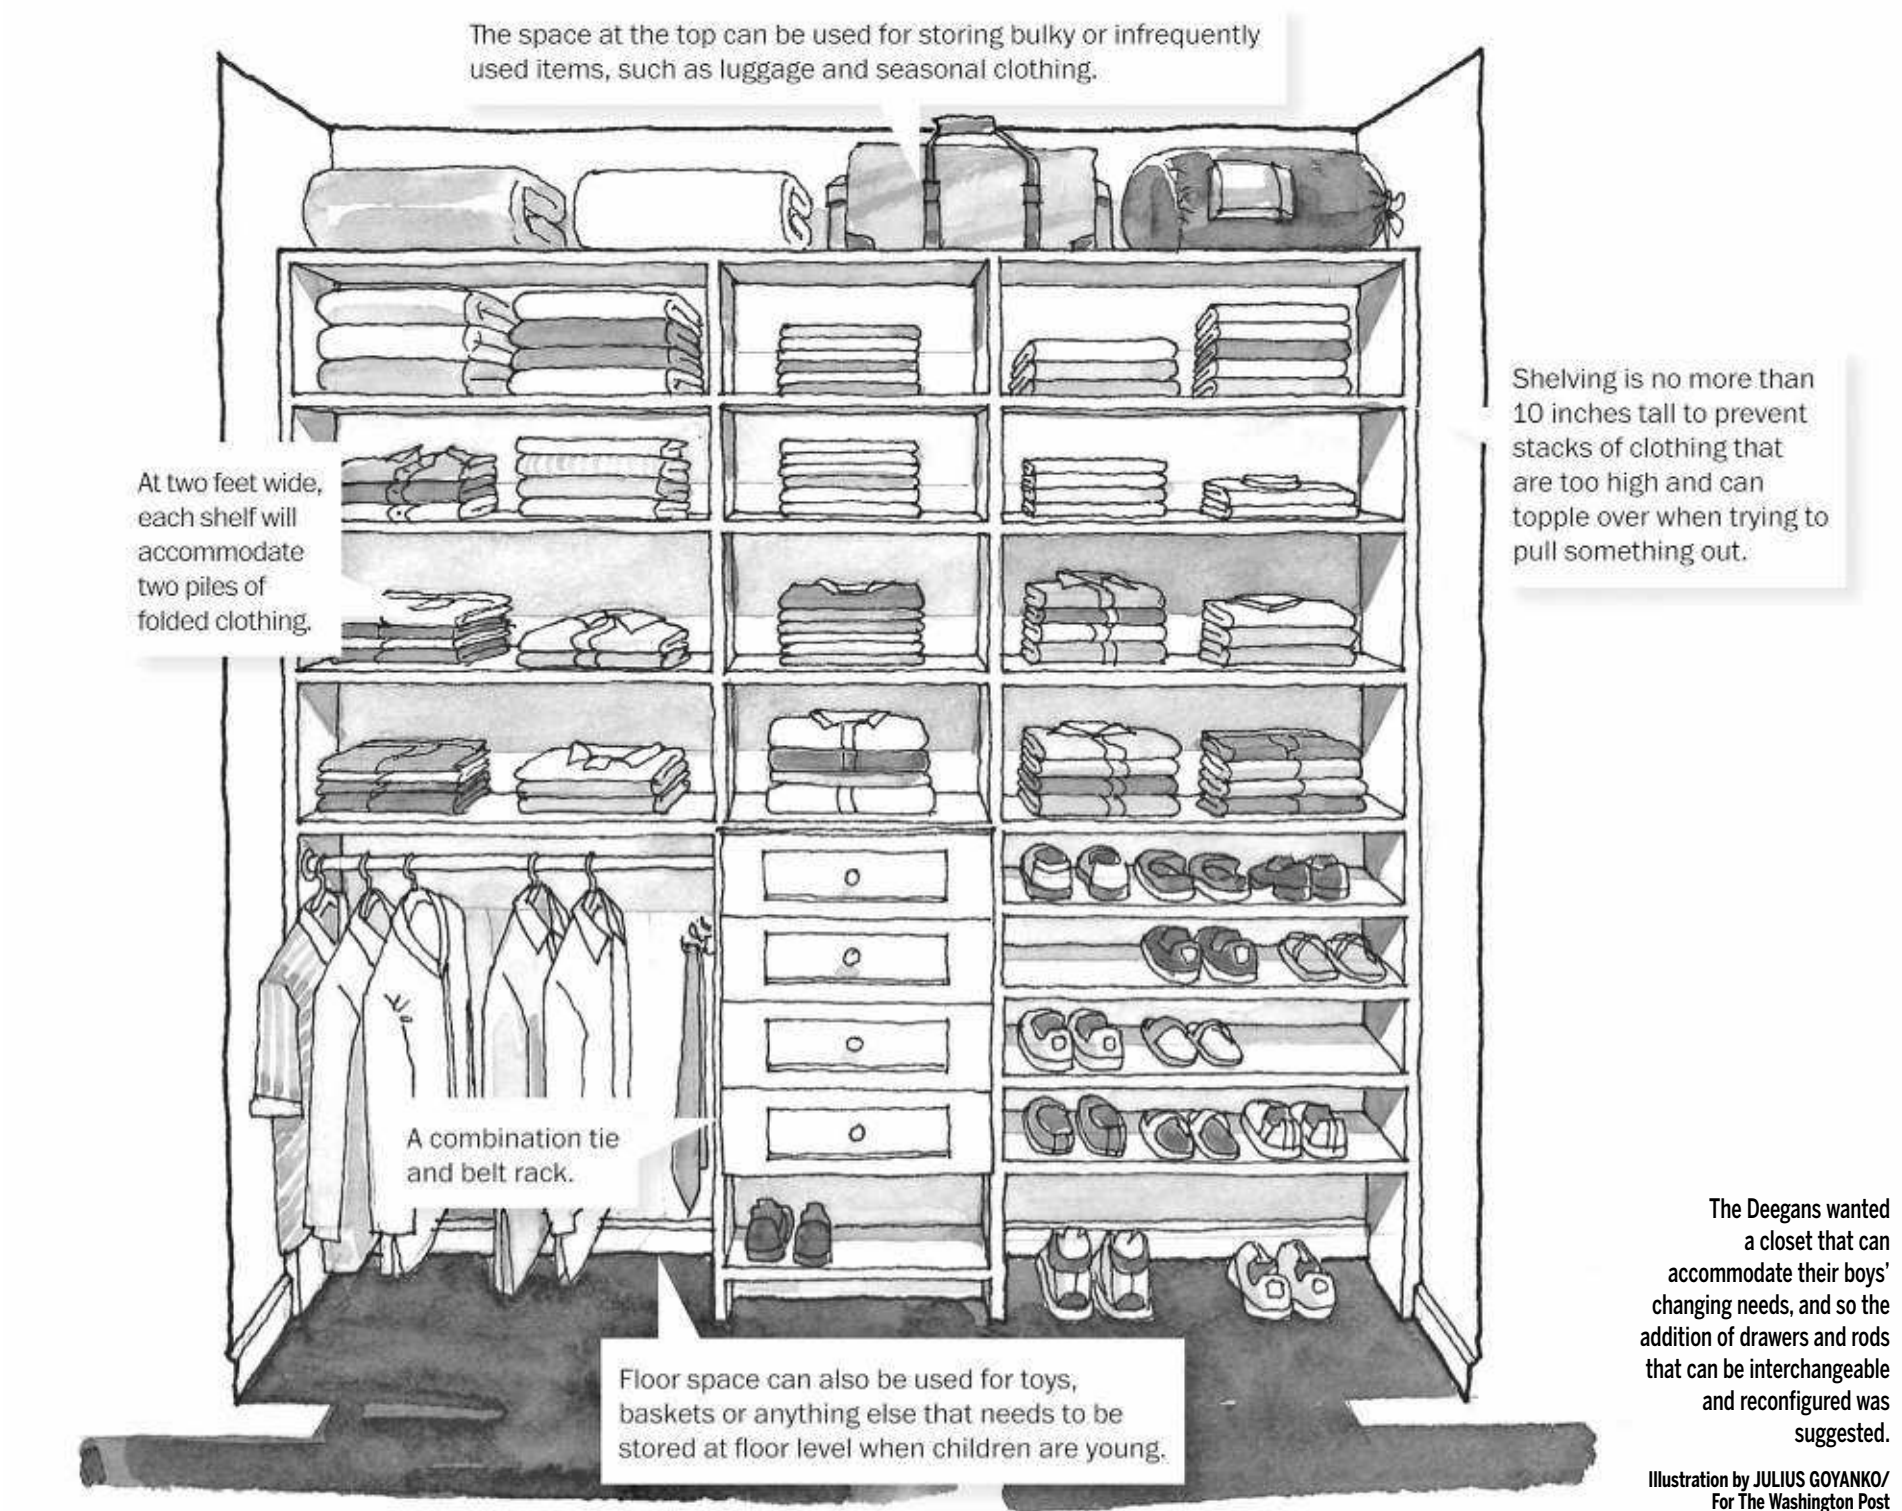

A common closet mistake is storing items in a coat closet that could — and should — be stored elsewhere in the house; Jen Wheeler's coat closet had become a catch-all for many household items that had no other place to go.

hung, but they will once they start high school. The Deegans would like a storage solution for this space that can change as their children's needs do.

The Solution

Provided by Closets by Design, Manassas, Va., www.closetorganizersdc.com

Price as shown: $1,400, including installation

More Ideas

- The shelves are adjustable and can be moved or taken out. An additional hanging rod for future use is stored in the rear of the closet.
- The shelving is 14 inches deep, which will prevent folded clothes from hanging over the edges.

- Two drawers for each child.
- The shelving is 86 1/2-inches high. This is a standard height for most adult closets, so there should be no problem setting up double clothing rods to accommodate the boys as they grow.

If space on each side of the drawers is exactly the same, the rods and shelves can be interchangeable and easily reconfigured as the children grow.

The Deegans wanted a closet that can accommodate their boys' changing needs, and so the addition of drawers and rods that can be interchangeable and reconfigured was suggested.

Before adding outdoor lights, pay attention to other security points

DEAR JIM: I am interested in adding some outdoor security lighting at my home. I want to do it in the most efficient manner and I don't want to add significantly to night light pollution. What do you recommend? — Paul H.

DEAR PAUL: Before you consider adding outdoor lighting, first make other security improvements to your home. These security improvements include making sure your window latches lock securely, installing new bump-resistance door deadbolts and installing a monitored alarm system.

Even with adequate outdoor lighting at your home, if a thief can get a door or window open in less than a minute, the lighting likely will not deter them. Imagine if you saw a person at a front door and they could open it in 30 seconds, you would just assume they had a key and belonged there.

Once you have made the security improvements and you feel the perimeter your home is relatively secure, start to plan your security lighting. Do an outdoor walk-around inspection of your house at night to see where some security lighting might be required. Often there is enough brightness from a neighbor's outdoor lighting to make a suspect area at your home safe.

Since outdoor lighting uses a tremendous amount of electricity, prioritize the areas where you think lighting might be needed.

An add-on motion-sensing switch is attached to a standard two-bulb halogen floodlight over a garage door. It stays on for only 60 seconds after no motion is detected.

JAMES DULLEY/
For the Times-News

SENSIBLE HOME

Installing just two 150-watt security lights and keeping them on all night can increase your electric bills by more than $100 per year. When you include light fixture, installation and bulb replacement expenses, the overall cost is substantial.

It is important to use the least brightness needed to minimize nighttime light pollution. Bright lights create a problem for wildlife and can be annoying to neighbors. There is an excessively bright floodlight at a doctor's office 300 yards from my house which shines in my bedroom window. If you install a floodlight, mount a directional light shield over it.

Wherever there is access to the sun, install solar-powered motion-sensing floodlights. These operate for free and you can install them yourself. If the light senses someone and comes on, they assume you heard them and turned on the light. A light coming on is also more effective at catching a neighbor's attention when you are not home.

If you install standard 120-volt lighting, use efficient CFL's (compact fluorescent lights) wherever possible. These use only one-quarter as much electricity as standard incandescent bulbs and last many times longer.

Another super-efficient option is using LED (light emitting diode) outdoor lighting. Its light output is limited and it is directional so it is best to light a specific door or dark spot. To light a larger area, LPS (low-pressure sodium) fixtures are very efficient. The light quality is monochromatic (yellowish) and the fixture itself is fairly expensive.

DEAR JIM: Since the end of summer, there has been a musty odor coming from the air registers. I have not used the furnace yet. Last fall, the odor went away on its own. What is causing this and how can I fix it? — James G.

DEAR JAMES: The fact that you also noticed the odor last year and it went away in the fall indicates the drip pan under the air conditioner coils is the source. The drain hole is partially clogged allowing mildew to grow.

Next time you have your furnace or air conditioner serviced, mention this odor. The technician will make sure the drain hole is fully open.

Also clean off the drain pan with bleach to kill any mold spores.

CLEANING

Question:

I bought Don Aslett's famous toilet bowl cleaner along with the handy caddy and Johnny Mop. When I used the Johnny Mop, I was surprised that it was soft and swabby. I'm used to the hard core brushes that will scrape away all the nasty hard water rings, and other gunky bowl build up. Is there something I'm missing?

Bonding with Johnny!"

Answer:

Nope, you've got it right! The Johnny Mop is merely an applicator of Don's incredible bowl cleaner SAFETY FOAM. This special formula does all the work so you don't have to. Merely apply, and let it sit for 5-10 minutes while it eats away all the stains, gunk and toilet scum. Relax, your work is done! (When used regularly, you'll never see any of that gross, scummy build up in the first place.)

P.S. The Johnny Mop is also used as a plunger to lower the water level. This way the SAFETY FOAM is not diluted in your toilet water and has direct contact to the porcelain bowl.

Carita Parker's bedroom closet in Calvert County, Md.

Dimensions: 87" h x 109" w x 21" d

The Challenge

Parker shares the master bedroom closet in her Lusby home with her boyfriend. Their clothing and shoes as well as Parker's purses are stored there. She would love to have a combination of shelving and hanging rods and would also like to keep everything off the floor. She's open to any ideas to organize the crowded space.

The Solution

Provided by California Closets, Fairfax, Va., www.californiaclosets.com

Price as shown: $1,816, including installation

More Ideas

- A telescoping valet rod extends 13 inches and is used to hold garment bags or dry cleaning or for setting out clothes for the next day.
- Shelving that is 24 inches wide can accommodate two side-by-side stacks of folded clothes.

- Shoe shelving, usually six inches high, can be adjusted in this closet to make more or less room as needed. Women's flats, for example, need less than six inches of shelf height.
- A pullout tie rack and a stationary belt rack are installed on the inside walls of the shelving.
- All shelving and rods are adjustable.
- Standard closet depth is 24 inches. That's how wide clothes are when they are hanging.
- Use drawers for storing personal items.

Carita Parker's master bedroom closet typifies the standard closet with the single rod and stationary shelf, and she wanted especially to eliminate the clutter that had accumulated on the floor of the closet.

Compost piles aren't as fussy as some think

By Lee Reich
For The Associated Press

Pity the beginning gardener who dares to read about composting. (Please dare to read on, in this case, even if you are a beginner.)

What novice would not be intimidated by the too often very complicated instructions, as well as alleged needs for exotic or hard-to-find ingredients.

Some British gardening books, for example, might have you tossing in your pitchfork and gloves in despair trying to find — of all things! — soil for your compost pile. Many British "authorities" recommend laying down a 1- to 2-inch blanket after every foot or so of other ingredients. Where are you going to find all that soil?

In fact, soil is a nice, but surely not necessary, addition to a compost pile. Rather than those 1- to 2-inch layers, just add sprinklings of soil to your compost piles. Or none at all.

'Clean' leaves, stems and fruits

The directives most likely to persuade a beginner to abandon composting are those telling us not to compost diseased plants or plant parts. The same could be said for warnings against composting plants or plant parts harboring insect pests. You might similarly be instructed to keep weeds out of your compost piles. Is any of this possible or desirable?

Unless you regularly douse your property with a slew of insecticides and fungicides, you are unlikely to find much plant material that does not host some insect or disease pest. That's if you looked closely enough. You might find a clean leaf here and there, but nothing in quantity, and surely nothing worth picking through. And if you follow warnings against using weeds, you miss out on the sweet revenge of reincarnating them, from agents that rob plants of nutrients and water into compost, which has the opposite effect.

It's all good

So forget all the talk about keeping pest-ridden plants and weeds out of compost piles. Using a finished compost that has been fed such things should not cause any problems.

What spells death to insect, disease and weed pests in a compost pile is a combination of heat and time. Pile up compostable materials in a big batch, with attention to the mix of ingredients, air and moisture, and intense heat soon follows.

Get a long-probed compost thermometer (you can find them at Charleysgreenhouse.com, Fedcoseeds.com, Gardeners.com or Johnnyseeds.com, among other places) and watch the dial spin as high as 160 degrees, which is hot enough to kill virtually all pests in short order.

A casually made pile, built gradually over a few weeks — especially when weather turns cooler — will generate little heat. But let any pile of living or once living material sit long enough and it will eventually turn dark brown and crumbly. Along the way, pests will have expired or been gobbled up by other microorganisms. A week at 100 degrees could have the same killing effect on some pest as an hour at 140 degrees.

Garden gold

You cannot do much better for your garden than to lavish it with compost. And you need plenty of raw materials to make plenty of compost.

Don't waste any compostable materials — including weeds and pest-ridden plants — by bagging them up as garbage or burning them.

Tips for movers

By Al Heavens
The Philadelphia Inquirer

Are you moving? Here are some tips to keep the folks who are hauling your belongings happy, from the American Moving and Storage Association:

Provide the essentials. Consider the crew's needs and comfort: Offer access to drinking water, designate a bathroom for their use, and keep hand sanitizer available. Have disposable paper towels handy, to save your linens and other items from the possibility of moving-related grime. And you might want to identify an outside area where smoking would be permitted.

Meet and greet. Take time to meet your crew members and make them feel welcome. Always have one responsible adult available throughout the move to answer questions, and make sure the movers know which room you're calling a den and which one is a "family room," etc.

Keep kids and pets busy. Make arrangements to keep small children and pets occupied so they don't get in the way. If possible, have them stay with friends or relatives at the time of the move.

It's food for thought: Most crews greatly appreciate coffee in the morning and the offer to pick up a fast lunch, since it's time-consuming to close up the truck and cumbersome to maneuver a tractor-trailer around a typical residential area.

Keep the temperature in check. If moving during very hot or cold weather, consider providing fans or space heaters, as exterior doors will likely be left open.

When selecting upholstered furniture for men, check for comfort, durability and style.

Men want comfort, durability and, of course, 'guy style' in their furniture

By Jean Patteson
The Orlando Sentinel

When men buy "guy stuff" — cars, lawn mowers, electronics — they're on their home turf.

For those purchases, "Men can rely on familiar brand names and test drives to guide their decision-making," says Jackie Hirschhaut, spokesperson for the American Home Furnishings Alliance.

But even though men are becoming more involved in decorating their homes, according to research by the American Furniture Manufacturers Association, "For most men, furniture stores are unfamiliar territory," says Hirschhaut.

Sofas and chairs top the list of furniture men are most likely to purchase, she says. And the qualities men want in those pieces are comfort, durability and attractive styling.

Beauty is in the eye of the beholder, of course. But once a guy has settled on a style of sofa or armchair — traditional, contemporary or something-in-between — he'll need to check for comfort and durability.

How does he do that if he doesn't feel at home in a furniture showroom? For men — or women — shopping for upholstered furniture, Hirschhaut offers the following tips:

Kick the tires. Not literally, of course. But do put likely pieces through your version of a quality test. Lift one corner of a sofa to see if the frame feels sturdy. Press gently outward on the arms to make sure there is no "give." Ask what materials are used and how joints and stress points, such as arms, are reinforced. Frames made of link-dried hardwood and hardwood plywood hold pegs, screws, staples and nails more firmly in place than do softwood plywood and strand board.

If the sales associate cannot answer your questions, find another associate — or a store with a better-informed staff.

Look under the hood. Some stores have handy "cut-aways" which show how upholstered pieces are assembled. But you probably will have to rely on the know-how of a well-trained sales associate to explain the hidden benefits of a piece. A variety of construction techniques offer comfort and durability, but in general, the number of springs in a foundation and the way they are reinforced determines the cost and quality level.

Take a test drive. Don't buy a sofa, chair or recliner without sitting, slouching or reclining in it — for at least a few minutes. Put your feet up. Put your head back. Settle into the piece the way you would at home. Furniture cushions may be constructed using springs, cotton or polyester fiber or down, but most are made from some type of polyurethane foam. Generally, the higher the density the foam, the more durable (and expensive) the cushion. But the only way to tell if the piece is going to feel comfortable to you is to sit in it yourself.

Think safety. Make sure the piece carries a gold UFAC tag, which indicates it was manufactured according to fire-safety standards developed by the Upholstered Furniture Action Council. Those standards reduce the likelihood of the furniture catching fire from a smoldering cigarette, which is the leading cause of upholstery fires in the home.

BUYING WOOD FURNITURE

Wood furniture is easier to buy than upholstered styles because the materials and construction techniques are not hidden under layers of fabric and fillings. What you see is what you get, more or less.

It's important to understand that all woods have characteristic colors and characteristics, such as knots and grain markings. And each wood reacts differently to the various stains and finishes used in manufacturing. Even within matched sets of chairs, there will be variations of color and grain.

Also, manufacturers often treat wood with a variety of finishes, including distressed, antiqued, high-gloss and painted. The more complex the finish, the more costly the furniture. And remember, a piece described as having a "cherry finish" may not necessarily be made of cherry wood. Much of today's furniture uses engineered wood such as plywood or fiberboard. The latter is made from a mix of wood fiber and adhesive, which is fused under intense heat and pressure to create a uniformly strong product which resists warping, splitting and has no knots or other surface imperfections. A laminate made of plastic, foil or paper printed or engraved to look like real wood usually is applied on top of the engineered wood, which is generally less expensive than real wood.

When buying wood furniture, follow these tips from the American Furniture Manufacturers Association:

- Operate all doors and drawers. Do they open and close easily? The fronts of higher-quality drawers should be attached with dovetail joints.
- Check that hardware is attached securely and straight. Drawer interiors should be smooth. Higher-quality pieces should have support blocks on drawer bottoms and dust panels between drawers.
- Dressers and chests-of-drawers should not wobble or creak.
- Turn chairs upside-down and examine the joints, which should be snug and free of excess glue. Check under tables that the corners are reinforced and the legs securely attached. If a table has leaves, make sure the opening/closing mechanism works smoothly.
- Measure the length of walls where furniture will be positioned and the width of doorways before purchasing pieces. For entertainment centers, measure the height, width and depth of the TV and other components.

Exceptions to new bulb rules

By Mary Beth Breckenridge
Akron Beacon Journal

Q: I recently purchased new decorative light fixtures that take certain bulbs, and compact fluorescent bulbs will not fit. Will those bulbs be available once the government's restrictions on incandescent bulbs kick in, and if so, will they be expensive?

A: Terry McGowan, a Cleveland lighting consultant who is also director of engineering and technology for the American Lighting Association, assures that you have nothing to worry about. The federal government's new energy-efficiency standards for light bulbs will apply only to standard household bulbs with medium screw bases, the kind of bulb we're most familiar with.

He said bulbs with smaller bases will not be subject to the standards, nor will specialty bulbs with medium screw bases, such as rough-service and ceiling-fan bulbs.

The new standards will be phased in over two years, starting in January 2012. First to be regulated will be 100-watt bulbs, then 75-watt bulbs in 2013 and 40- and 60-watt bulbs in 2014, McGowan said.

Some reports have characterized the new standards as a ban on incandescent bulbs, but that's not accurate. New, more efficient incandescent bulbs are being developed that will meet the standards, along with compact fluorescent and LED bulbs, McGowan said.

LEDs will be the most expensive choice — probably around $20, he predicted — but they'll last for many years. He expects the new incandescent bulbs to cost about the same as compact fluorescent bulbs.

Jerome cheese adds mozzarella to the menu

Production change expected to lead to 20 additional jobs

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome Cheese Company, a division of Davisco Foods International, has announced plans to add the capability to produce mozzarella cheese at its Jerome location.

The company intends to hire up to 20 new full-time employees. The plant currently has about 250 on payroll.

“Our focus is to provide solutions for our West Coast customers by supplying mozzarella from the Idaho location. We’ve positioned ourselves to add the mozzarella production in Jerome after realizing the overwhelming demand from these customers,” said Troy Ammann, Davisco director of cheese operations, in a press release. “Not only will we better serve our customers in the western U.S., but the Idaho location will provide better access to our international customers that we ship to from western ports.”

The plant already produces 520,000 pounds of American type cheddar cheese per day. The plan is to invest in a process allowing the Jerome plant to shift production to mozzarella or cheddar as the market demands.

Employees will be added as mozzarella demand increases, Davisco Chief Operating Officer Jon Davis told the Times-News on Monday.

“At times, there is a surplus of cheddar cheese on the market, which causes cheddar inventories to build and prices to weaken,” Davis said. “We’ll be able to produce both cheddar and mozzarella, which gives us flexibility to meet market demand while maximizing the value of milk we process.”

Davis said the increased demand for mozzarella is being driven by American’s love for pizza and increased marketing of pizza from companies like Pizza Hut and Papa John’s Pizza.

Davisco also produces mozzarella at its South Dakota plant, supplying customers mostly east of the Rocky Mountains.

Transportation and freight costs are one challenge to the company in supplying the western U.S. with mozzarella from that plant.

“Demand for pizza is up and our adding mozzarella production in the Jerome location allows us to take advantage of that growth,” Davis said.

Adding the processing line is part of the company’s long term goal of doubling the amount of milk processed at the Jerome location.

Market factors will determine the speed of that growth, Davis said, but as that goal is met the company anticipates the need to hire up to 175 additional employees.

Small farms of the future

Gooding conference gives info on making leap to small-scale production

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Farms of the future may look a lot like farms of the past — small in size and diverse in nature.

Eight percent of U.S. agricultural production is classified as local or organic. That percentage is expected to rise to 20 percent of all production by 2025. It’s a niche that small-scale producers can fill better than their larger counterparts.

Arden Schmitt is one of many small scale farmers in southern Idaho who is having success as a small farmer.

He raises chickens and sells the eggs in Sun Valley. But he also raises homing pigeons that can be used for weddings, funerals and events such as the Relay for Life.

Schmitt built an underground greenhouse where he propagates spider plants and “pots” them in lava rock that is harvested each spring from the farm; but he also raises more traditional vegetables for sale.

It’s that combination of traditional small farm production along with unique products that gives Schmitt a niche. And his enthusiasm for small farms is contagious.

His farm near Gooding was featured during the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service one-day small conference in Gooding last week. He shared his experiences with combining livestock and crop production on a small scale, and juggling his farm duties with his career at the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding.

Cindy Kinder, UI extension educator for Camas County, has been getting more questions from people about small scale farming. Many of those people have had small gardens of their own for many years, but to make the leap from gardening to small-farm production, they need to either get larger or work cooperatively with their neighbors.

The goal of the conference was to get them the information they need from backyard chickens to raising quality hay, and from using compost in fields to beekeeping. “But more important, to give participants a chance to share their experiences and ideas.”

Food, fiber and fuel have been the mainstays of agricultural production for generations, but that list is growing. Increasingly producers are raising crops with pharmaceutical benefits such as high beta glucan barley or livestock that can provide tissues for humans.

Salmonella discovery leads to egg recall

Farm receiving financing from owner behind recall earlier this year

By Mary Clare Jalonick
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Evidence of salmonella has been found at an Ohio egg farm that’s received financing from the owner of an Iowa egg farm that was behind a massive recall earlier this year.

Cal-Maine Foods Inc., the nation’s biggest egg seller and distributor, said it is recalling 288,000 eggs the company had purchased from supplier Ohio Fresh Eggs after a test showed salmonella at the Ohio farm.

No illnesses have been reported. According to Cal-Maine Foods, the Ohio Fresh eggs were distributed to food wholesalers and retailers in Arkansas, California, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

In a statement from company officials, Ohio Fresh Eggs said the farm had held back eggs from the Croton, Ohio, barn where the salmonella was found. However, through discussions with the FDA, the company discovered that some eggs from that barn were mistakenly sent to a distributor.

“Ohio Fresh Eggs sincerely regrets the error made on our farm, and we apologize to our customer and to consumers who may have purchased the eggs,” the officials said. “We are redoubling our efforts to ensure thorough and ongoing training of our workers so that this situation is not repeated.”

Cal-Maine Foods said the FDA told them about the positive sample.

Earlier this year, salmonella was found on two Iowa egg farms, Wright County Egg and Hillandale Farms. The two companies recalled 550 million eggs in August when the products were linked to as many as 1,600 illnesses.

Austin “Jack” DeCoster owns Wright County Egg and has lent money to Ohio Fresh Eggs.

USDA to distribute $420 million in crop revenue payments

Times-News

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has started issuing an estimated $420 million in 2009 Average Crop Revenue Election, or ACRE, payments to producers enrolled in the program for wheat, corn, barley, dry peas, grain sorghum, lentils, oats, peanuts, soybeans, and upland cotton.

Of the $420 million in payments, about 70 percent are expected to be issued to wheat producers and 23 percent to corn producers. About 80 percent of the payments are expected to be issued to producers in Idaho, Oklahoma, Washington, Illinois, South Dakota and

“These payments are an important part of the farm safety net ...”

— Agriculture Secretary
Tom Vilsack

North Dakota.

“These payments are an important part of the farm safety net because they help protect the farmers who provide America and the world with a reliable stream of food and commodities by buffering them from the effects of revenue declines,” said Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack.

In order for producers to receive ACRE payments, revenue triggers for a commodity must be met on both a state and farm basis.

The Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 requires 2009 ACRE payments to be made as soon as possible following the end of the marketing year, but no earlier than Oct. 1, 2010.

Congress established ACRE as part of the 2008 Farm Bill to protect producers from farm market revenue declines.

State payment rates for other commodities will be determined after the 2009-2010 marketing year average price is published by the National Agricultural Statistical Service.

for non-farm customers. Corn mazes, pumpkin patches and u-pick gardens all examples of how customers can experience farm life by visiting small farms.

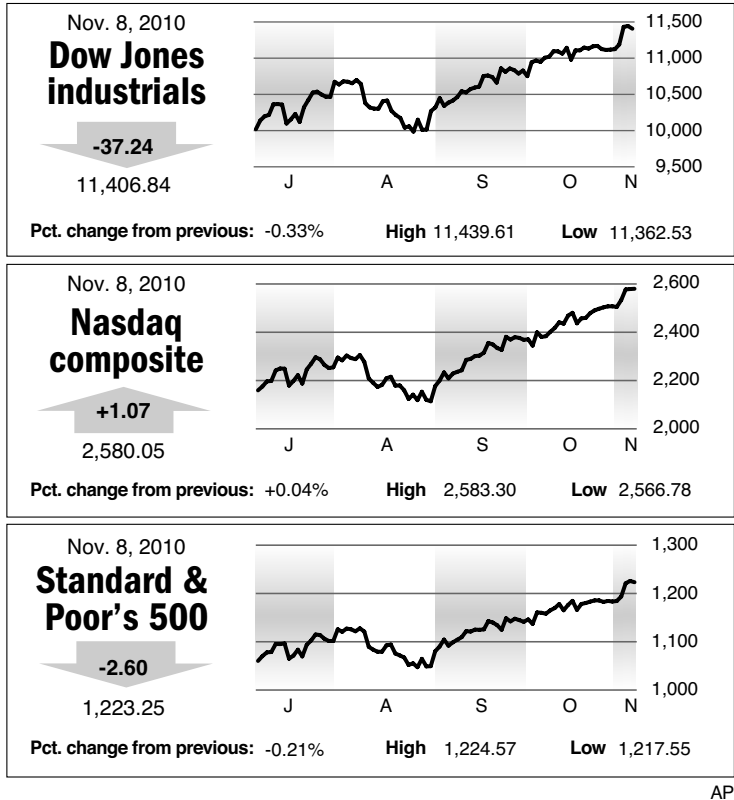

For example, Homestead Creamery offers two open houses annually for their home delivery customers and community.

David Kohl, a partner in the creamery and an agricultural economist, said that providing those kinds of experiences will be more important as Americans become more removed from farms.

“We’ve got to make a connection with people who don’t have have a connection with agriculture. We’ve got to explain to non-farm people the importance of agriculture.”

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 9, the 313th day of 2010. There are 52 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Nov. 9, 1965, the great Northeast blackout occurred as a series of power failures lasting up to 13 1/2 hours left 30 million people in seven states and part of Canada without electricity.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1872, fire destroyed nearly 800 buildings in Boston.

In 1918, it was announced that Germany's Kaiser Wilhelm II would abdicate. He then fled to the Netherlands.

In 1935, United Mine Workers president John L. Lewis and other labor leaders formed the Committee for Industrial Organization (later renamed the Congress of Industrial Organizations).

In 1938, Nazis looted and burned synagogues as well as Jewish-owned stores and houses in Germany and Austria in a pogrom that became known as "Kristallnacht."

In 1953, author-poet Dylan Thomas died in New York at age 39.

In 1963, twin disasters struck Japan as some 450 miners were killed in a coal-dust explosion, and about 160 people died in a train crash.

In 1967, a Saturn V rocket carrying an unmanned Apollo spacecraft blasted off from Cape Kennedy on a successful test flight.

In 1970, former French President Charles de Gaulle died at age 79.

In 1976, the U.N. General Assembly approved resolutions condemning apartheid in South Africa, including one characterizing the white-ruled government as "illegitimate."

In 1989, communist East Germany threw open its borders, allowing citizens to travel freely to the West; joyous Germans danced atop the Berlin Wall.

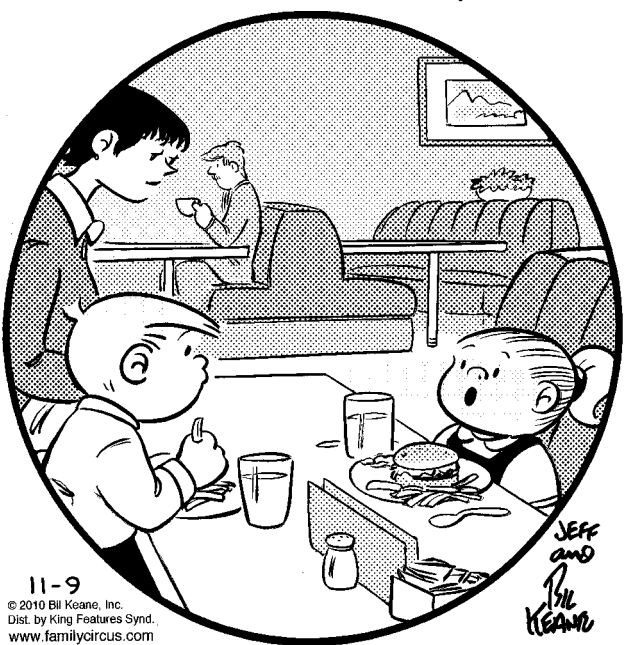

Ten years ago: George W. Bush's lead over Al Gore in all-or-nothing Florida slipped beneath 300 votes in a suspense-filled recount, as Democrats threw the presidential election to the courts, claiming "an injustice unparalleled in our history." Hussein Abayat, a West Bank militia commander, was killed by a missile from an Israeli helicopter gunship.

Five years ago: Three suicide bombers carried out nearly simultaneous attacks on three U.S.-based hotels in Amman, Jordan, killing 60 victims, and wounding hundreds. Oil executives testified before Congress that their huge profits were justified, but got a skeptical reaction from lawmakers. Carolina's Erik Cole became the first player in NHL history to be awarded two penalty shots in one game. (Cole scored on the first, helping the Hurricanes defeat Buffalo 5-3.)

One year ago: The Dow Jones industrial average rose 203.52, or 2 percent, to 10,226.94, its highest finish since Oct. 3, 2008, as a falling dollar boosted prices for gold, oil and other commodities. Germany celebrated the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall.

DEAR ABBY: I read your advice to “Getting Grief in Grants Pass, Ore.,” (Sept. 11), whose father was reading her cell phone messages. You called his supervision “heavy-handed” and suggested she discuss it with him. While I applaud your suggestion to have a talk with her father, please reconsider the characterization that he was heavy-handed.

As a parent and high school assistant principal, I have seen too often the dangers of “sexting” and other illicit communications. Today’s smart phone tells us all sorts of things that we as parents need to know. It also has connections to social networking and applications that allow teenagers to blindly send their phone numbers to anonymous users and have conversations.

The world has changed with this technology, and the attention we pay as parents must change with it. I strongly urge the parents at my school to check their children’s phones and computers regularly. I suggest to parents to start doing it when their children are young and explain that it is part of their job as a parent.

— DAVE MILLER

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR DAVE: Thank you for writing and reminding me that kids today face many challenges that had never been an issue for them in past generations.

Read on:
DEAR ABBY: The number of teens and children who engage in inappropriate sexting and texting is shocking. These behaviors can be evidence of sexual exploitation, harassment, bullying and teen dating violence. The results of this teenage behavior can be devastating and have lifetime consequences.

Kids sometimes are afraid to go to parents or other responsible adults to seek help when they need it; often kids may not even know they are in trouble or exposing themselves to danger by their behavior. How long do you think it takes a “sext” between a girl and her boyfriend to make it to a child porn website? A cell phone is a computer, and parents are responsible for ensuring the safety of their children and protecting them from predators and others who might harm them. If “Grief” is not engaging in inappropriate behavior, she shouldn’t be embarrassed if her parents read the text messages. Abby, please use your column to help educate children, teens and their parents that a text/sext lasts a lifetime.

— PATRICIA DAILEY
LEWIS, DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL DEL. DEPT. OF JUSTICE
DEAR ABBY: As a crime prevention officer, I regularly encourage parents to check a child’s cell phone for bullying and sexting, most of which a child won’t share with a parent. Especially if the child is the one who is using the phone to bully others, she certainly won’t share her pictures with her parents.

Most children are unaware that state laws have not changed, and children who send pornographic pictures of themselves to others can be charged with distributing child pornography and may have to register as a sexual predator for the rest of their lives.

Kudos to “Grief’s” father for protecting his child not only from herself, but ensuring she is not hurting others!

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"None but the well-bred man knows how to confess a fault, or acknowledge himself in an error."

— Benjamin Franklin

In today's deal from the Dyspeptics Club, South picked up his rock-crusher with the air of a man who knew he deserved nothing less and drove to game as soon as he found the spade fit. The lead of the heart nine encouraged him to believe that the deal would be a pianola. (For those of you too young to remember, a pianola "plays itself.")

He covered the heart nine with the 10, which held the trick. Then he drew trumps in two rounds and paused for reflection, realizing that there was a shortage of entries to dummy to set up the hearts. Finally, shrugging his shoulders, he cashed the heart ace, hoping for a minor miracle, then crossed to the spade ace and advanced the heart jack, covered by East. South ruffed and played the diamond ace and a second diamond. East overtook his partner's jack to shift to a club, and down South went.

For once, North was temporarily silent, giving South the opportunity to complain about his bad luck. That triggered an outburst from North, in which "pinhead" was the most flattering epithet. Can you see what North was upset about?

Four spades is cold after the heart lead, as long as declarer wins the first trick with the heart ace. He then draws trump — in three rounds if necessary — preserving dummy's entry. Next he knocks out the heart king and can claim at least 10 tricks: three hearts, six spades and the diamond ace.

ANSWER: Opinions would be divided about whether you have enough to invite if you were facing an opening bid of one no-trump. However, the upper range for a one-no-trump overcall is a fraction higher, and there are so many ways that a Stayman inquiry might work here that it is clear to bid two clubs. You can then invite game in no-trump or in a major-suit fit, if you find one.

FINAL RIVAL CLASH?

Petersen taking final rivalry game for near future seriously

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE – The Boise State-Idaho rivalry may be hitting the pause button—with no real foreseeable future—but BSU head coach Chris Petersen is taking the game as serious as ever.

At Petersen's weekly press conference, he said Boise State put its players off limits to the media this week in preparation for Friday night's game with the Vandals in order to reduce distractions and keep the players focused.

"With the short week, it's a good time to take a break (from player interviews)," Petersen said. "There's been quite a bit of scrutiny on these guys and it's nice for them to get a break."

While Petersen didn't elaborate on the scrutiny, it's easy to assume it would be Boise State's perception from a national standpoint that has slipped in recent weeks despite convincing wins over Louisiana Tech and Hawaii.

Boise State, once ranked No. 2 in the polls, has since fallen to No. 4 in the USA Today Coaches Poll and in the BCS rankings.

With a win Friday, the Broncos could tie Idaho's longest streak in the series at 12 wins—but could not top it as the two rivals have jettisoned the series with Boise State moving to the Mountain West and unwilling to travel to the Kibbie Dome.

Petersen's tone toward the Idaho rivalry was much more tempered Monday than it was in July during the WAC Media Days when asked about continuing the series with the Vandals on a home-and-home basis.

"Why would we (go to Moscow)?" Petersen reportedly said during the WAC Media Days. "I don't think MOSCOW — Idaho football coach Robb Akey made his feelings very clear Monday on the hazy future of the Vandals' 40-year-old series with Boise State — at least when it comes to where the rivalry should take place if and when it returns.

"That is ridiculous," Akey said when asked if the game should remain in Boise every year, as BSU coach Chris Petersen suggests. "You play the rival game as a true rival game. Their home and our home every other year, or you don't play at all. Bottom line."

Akey takes stance on future of rivalry between Idaho, BSU

The Vandals (4-5) and fourth-ranked Broncos (8-0) meet on Friday at the Kibbie Dome in what will be the last encounter between the team for at least two years. The Broncos are headed to the Mountain West Conference next year and both teams' nonconference schedule in 2011 and 2012 are booked.

Earlier this year, Petersen said he sees no reason to continue playing in Moscow because of the lack of seating in the Dome and the fact most Vandal alumni are in the Boise area anyway. He reiterated that sentiment Monday while pointing out Friday's game — when BSU will try for its 12th straight win over UI — will be "as tough an atmosphere as we go into."

That's partly because fewer Boise State fans make the trip compared to other road games, he said.

"Since I've been here that's how it's always been: The Boise people don't go up there," Petersen said. "There are no seats and they don't go up there. So it's going to be kind of business as usual."

Dallas Cowboys fire coach Wade Phillips

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press writer

IRVING, Texas — Wade Phillips was fired Monday as coach of the Dallas Cowboys, with offensive coordinator Jason Garrett promoted to take his place.

Team owner Jerry Jones decided enough was enough following a 45-7 loss to the Green Bay Packers the night before. It was the Cowboys' fifth straight loss, dropping them to 1-7.

"We are grateful to Wade and his contribution to the Cowboys, leading us," Jones said. "We also clearly understand we are not where we want to be at this time, and that's an understatement. We share the responsibility all of us."

This is the Cowboys' worst season since 1989 and among the worst in franchise history by record alone. Realistically, it's the low point considering Dallas was coming off a division title and a playoff win, and was expected to contend for the Super Bowl that'll be held at Cowboys Stadium.

Phillips' departure takes another dubious spot in club history: the first in-season coaching change.

"An in-season changing is something I was reluctant to consider," Jones said. "I recently addressed the team and my comments with them were very brief and pointed. I told them they should not think this an admission of defeat or finality in this season."

"We have eight games left and we have one goal —

Times-News sports curse strikes again

H eard of the Sports Illustrated Cover Jinx? That's nothing compared to the Times-News Sports Page Curse.

Just ask Raft River football coach Randy Spaeth.

Here's a guy with two state championships and a .750 winning percentage. However, prior to this season, the Times-News ran a feature story about Spaeth being one victory shy of the 100-win milestone.

Well, he got the 100th this season, but that's it.

Us sports media types like to dissect stats and put them in historical perspective. So, over the past few weeks, I've asked Spaeth questions like:

When was the last time a Spaeth-coached Raft River team lost to Hansen?

When was the last time the Trojans lost four in a row?

When was the last time an opponent scored 70 points on Raft River?

When was the last time... well, you get the picture.

Spaeth grew tired of my questions pretty quick, because all of them had the same answer: Never.

It was a fluky fall in Malta. In Spaeth's 14 years as the head coach, the Trojans have never had a season like this — which is a credit to the quality program he's established.

Was the Times-News Sports Page Curse to blame for Raft River's season? If so, how do we explain Carey, which also had a pre-season feature story? The Panthers are 9-1 and playing in the Class 1A Division II state semifinals this week.

Curses, by their nature, are mysterious.

For a moment last Friday, I was convinced the Times-News Sports Page Curse was real. Prior to Declo's state quarterfinal game, I wrote a story highlighting Hornet quarterback Kai Garner and kicker Erik Henrikson.

Three plays into the game, Garner was injured.

Then, after Declo rallied from a two-touchdown deficit, Henrikson had his point-after attempt blocked, leaving Declo behind 28-27 in the fourth quarter.

From my mobile device, I sent a message to Times-News sports editor Mike Christensen, informing him of Declo's misfortune.

Steelers hold on for 27-21 win over Bengals

By Joe Kay
Associated Press writer

CINCINNATI — At the end of a night full of foibles, tricks and missed chances, the Pittsburgh Steelers turned to their one constant to finish it off.

That unyielding defense came through again.

James Harrison and Ryan Clark stripped the ball away from Jordan Shipley near the 5-yard line on Cincinnati's final play, preserving a 27-21 victory over the Bengals on Monday night that left the AFC North with a familiar, old look.

The Steelers (6-2) are again at the top, sharing the spot with Baltimore. The defending-champion Bengals (2-6) are in last place alone after their fifth straight loss, coming up one completion short.

Area swimmers compete at state meet

Times-News

Several area swimmers competed at the Idaho State High School Swimming Championships this past weekend at the Boise City Aquatic Center.

Wood River's Lena Friesen won the 200-yard individual medley in 2 minutes, 8:48 seconds. She also took second in the 100 freestyle in 54.8 seconds.

Minico's Wes Walton had a solid weekend, placing second in both the 200 IM and 100 backstroke in 2:01.48 and 55.86, respectively.

Parker Twiss turned in the best individual finish among Twin Falls High School swimmers, placing fourth in the boys 100-yard breaststroke in 1:02.71. Twiss also finished ninth in the 200 IM.

Josh Wirtz of Twin Falls placed fifth in the boys 500-yard freestyle in 5:28.82. He took 11th in the 200 IM.

Abby Biedenbach placed sixth in the girls 100 breaststroke in 1:13.57, while her sister Hannah placed 16. Hannah Biedenbach also took 11th in the 200 IM.

Kate Reed took 15th in the 50 freestyle and 16th in the 100 freestyle.

The TFHS girls placed ninth in both the 200 medley relay and the 400 freestyle relay.

Wood River's Elizabeth Fry was fourth in the 500 freestyle, while aiding her team's third-place finish in the 400 freestyle relay and a fourth-place effort in the 200 freestyle relay with Friesen, Taylor Bates and Colby Werley. Wood River's JT Sutton was sixth on the boys side in both the 50 and 100 freestyles. Werley (seventh in girls 200 IM), Adam Potts (sixth in boys 500 freestyle, seventh in 200 freestyle), Kelsey Syms (13th in girls 100 backstroke) and Tori Emerick (14th in 100 backstroke) also competed for Wood River.

Burley's Brandon Hoard took 12th in the 100 butterfly.

Howard, Magic squeak out 93-89 win over Hawks

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dwight Howard had 27 points and 11 rebounds, and the Magic continue their recent reign over the Hawks with a victory in a rematch of last season's lopsided Eastern Conference semifinal.

Vince Carter finished with 19 points and made two huge layups in the final minute-plus to seal the Magic's victory, the 11th in the last 12 meetings over Atlanta. Jason Williams also had eight points and eight rebounds to fill in for an injured Jameer Nelson.

Joe Johnson had 23 points and Al Horford scored 16 for the Hawks, who have lost two games in two days after winning their first six this season.

WARRIORS 109, RAPTORS 102

TORONTO — Stephen Curry scored a season-high 34 points, Monta Ellis added 28 points and the Golden State Warriors beat the Toronto Raptors 109-102 Monday night.

Ellis, the NBA's leading scorer, fell heavily after a collision under Toronto's basket late in the fourth quarter. He remained down for several minutes before being helped up and walking slowly to the locker room. Ellis topped 25 points for the third time in seven games.

David Lee fouled out with 14 points and 12 rebounds and Andris Biedrins had eight points and nine rebounds for the Warriors, who won their first road game in three tries.

Golden State has won four straight and nine of 11 against Toronto, averaging 113.1 points in those 11 contests.

SPURS 95, BOBCATS 91

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Manu Ginobili scored 26 points, including a driving layup with 4.9 seconds left to end Charlotte's late comeback bid, and the Spurs held on for a win to continue the Bobcats' early season misery.

Surprising rookie Gary Neal added 15 points, Tim Duncan had 14 points and 10 rebounds and Tony Parker had 12 points and eight assists for the Spurs, who nearly blew a nine-point lead with under 3 minutes left before securing their fourth straight win.

Charlotte, which was 31-10 at home last season en route to the franchise' first playoff berth, fell to 0-3 on its home floor thanks to 40 percent shooting from the field.

Stephen Jackson and Boris Diaw had 15 points apiece for the Bobcats, who dropped to 1-6.

MAVERICKS 89, CELTICS 87

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki scored 25 points, including the go-ahead jumper with less than 20 seconds to play, and the Dallas Mavericks snapped Boston's five-game winning streak with a 89-87 victory over the Celtics on Monday night.

Jason Terry added 17 points, and Tyson Chandler had 12 points and 13 rebounds for Dallas.

Paul Pierce scored 24 points, Kevin Garnett had 18 points and 15 rebounds, and Rajon Rondo had 11 points and 15 assists for the Celtics, who'd won their from eight points down to beat the Rams 83-75.

Pitt ended a sluggish first half in the 2K Sports Classic opener by scoring nine consecutive points over the final 1:21 after Rhode Island went ahead 36-28. The Panthers then wore down Rhode Island with their size, defense and the experienced play of the backcourt of Gibbs and Wanamaker to offset the Rams' 14 3-pointers.

last three trips to Dallas.

Boston held an 87-82 lead with 1:58 left on Pierce's 17-footer. But Nowitzki converted a layup, then Terry made a 3-pointer with 1:13 remaining to tie it at 87. Garnett missed an inside shot with 36 seconds left, and Nowitzki connected from 16 feet on the left wing with 17.4 to play to give Dallas the lead for good.

GRIZZLIES 109, SUNS 99

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Zach Randolph had 23 points and 20 rebounds while Rudy Gay added 22 points to help the Memphis Grizzlies defeat the Phoenix Suns 109-99 on Monday night.

Randolph was 9 of 16 from the field and led six Grizzlies in double figures. The points and rebounds were season highs for the Memphis forward, and the fifth 20-20 game in his career.

O.J. Mayo and Mike Conley scored 16 apiece for the Grizzlies, while rookie Xavier Henry scored 14 points off the bench. Marc Gasol finished with 10 points and eight rebounds.

Grant Hill led the Suns

Delroy James scored 17 of his 20 points in the second half for Rhode Island, which trailed 76-74 with 1:41 to play before Pitt finished it off by making seven of eight free throws.

ILLINOIS 79, UC-IRVINE 65

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Reserve Brandon Paul scored all of his 18 points on 3-pointers to lead No. 13 Illinois to a 79-65 season-opening win over UC-

Irvine on Monday night in the opening round of the 2K Sports Classic.

Paul, a sophomore guard, hit his first five 3-point attempts as the Illini opened a 42-18 halftime lead.

Demetri McCamey added 13 points and eight assists for Illinois.

Darren Moore scored 18 points for the Anteaters.

While at odds on the future site of the series, both coaches agree that the annual game will resume one day. And Akey said the spirited discussion about the rivalry's fate and the debate BSU president Bob Kustra's comments sparked this summer show that it is still relevant.

"If it didn't matter, certainly it wouldn't be discussed," Akey said. "And if it didn't matter, it certainly wouldn't be discussed with emotion. Obviously those were emotional comments that came out. So the bottom line: Maybe the rival game does mean something."

Boise State has made its players off limits to the media this week to "stay focused and do what we need to do on this short week," Petersen said.

But Akey is taking a different approach.

"Our guys are going to get a chance to talk," he said. "Our kids are excited about playing them" our fans even like to go up there. Most of Idaho's fans are in Boise anyway?"

On Monday, however, Petersen acted as if there was still hope for the rivalry to be renewed in the future.

"I think those are just hard decisions," Petersen said of ending the rivalry. "I don't think it's going away forever. But when you change leagues ... everybody talks about Boise State and the schedule.

"So, we're trying to make it the best we can and trying to please everybody—and you just can't please everybody.

"You know the game will eventually come back. I think (BSU athletics director) Gene (Bleymaier) is trying to finagle it and make it come back."

And while Petersen's implications were clear—Idaho weakens Boise State's schedule and hampers its perception nationally—he didn't downplay the importance of Friday's game.

"I think (this rivalry is) important and there's so much history in this," Petersen said. "It's an important game in the state. A lot of our kids don't come from around here so we try to educate them on the history of it. But we do have enough guys from around here who get it loud and clear."

His response: "Times-News curse strikes again. It's like SI cover curse only more powerful"

When I had interviewed Henrickson earlier in the week, I asked him how he would feel if Friday's game came down to a last-second field goal.

"Hope we can just win without it," he said.

As curse would have it, the game did come down to a heart-stopping last-second field goal. After 48 grueling minutes, Declo's improbable come-from-behind victory hinged on a sophomore long snapper, a sophomore holder and a soccer player who had never worn shoulder pads until three weeks ago.

The 32-yard field goal was good and the Hornets won. Randy Spaeth was even in attendance.

The first game under Garrett will be at the New York Giants on Sunday.

"He does have the opportunity to get the job long-term," Jones said. "I do believe Jason has the temperament and disposition to affect a culture change.

the Steelers' on-the-spot defenders.

Pittsburgh seemed to be in control when Antwan Randle El threw a 39-yard touchdown pass off a trick play to open the fourth quarter, building a 27-7 lead made possible by the Bengals' many mistakes. Pittsburgh also had points set up by a fumble, a blocked punt and a missed field goal.

Then, the Steelers turned sloppy on their own. Ben Roethlisberger threw an interception that set up Terrell Owens' second touchdown catch of the game, and Jeff Reed missed a 46-yard field goal try that would have clinched it with 3:59 to go.

The drama had just begun.

Palmer led the Bengals downfield with the help of a wacky play. His pass to Cedric Benson was tipped, but the running back made a juggling catch for a 16-yard gain on third-and-long. Chad Ochocinco's only catch of the game moved it to the 12-yard line.

On fourth-and-5, Palmer found Shipley open over the middle in first-down range, but the two Steelers converged and squeezed the ball out to end it.

Wanamaker leads No. 5 Pitt past Rhode Island 83-75

PITTSBURGH — All summer, his fellow coaches asked Pitt's Jamie Dixon why he agreed to play an opponent like Rhode Island in the season opener. For most of Monday night's game, Dixon was asking himself the same question.

Brad Wanamaker scored 24 points, Ashton Gibbs had 22 and No. 5 Pittsburgh survived an upset scare in the nation's first Division I game of the season, rallying
