Labrador readies for Congress

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

U.S. Rep.-elect Raul Labrador is nearly two months away from being sworn into office, but his work has already started.

Labrador, who ousted incumbent Democrat U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick in the Nov. 2 election to represent Idaho's 1st Congressional District, will begin a weeklong orientation in Washington, D.C., on Sunday for the incoming freshman members of Congress. With Labrador in office, the Idaho delegation will be entirely Republican.

Labrador

Though Labrador's victory was part of a national tide of support for GOP candidates, he's not one to boast.

"The last week has been pretty surreal," Labrador said in an interview Wednesday with the Times-News. "It's pretty amazing. It's amazing and humbling all at the same time."

Labrador has an interest in playing a role in immigration reform, an issue that affects the dairy and agriculture industries of the Magic Valley.

He said there are three important components to meaningful immigration reform: obeying the laws that already exist, providing sufficient resources to law enforcement, and running a guest worker program that works properly.

His credentials for taking up immigration reform set him apart from many of his soon-to-be peers. He was born in Puerto Rico before moving with his

SHOSHONE — The recorded voices of children reciting the Pledge of Allegiance were almost drowned out by the voices of students, community members and veterans inside the Shoshone School gym. Shoshone's eighth-annual Veterans Day celebration on Thursday morning brought emotion, patriotism and the reminder that the freedoms Americans enjoy every day come with responsibility. Army veteran Dan Larson remind-

Elder veterans honor comrades

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Not surprisingly, many older people who came to Twin Falls City Park on Thursday had experienced military conflict. But some of the children present had also paid some price for war.

More than 100 people, many war veterans, gathered at the Twin Falls park to observe Veterans Day at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month. In the crowd, aging service members proudly wore colored garrison caps representing seven veterans' groups, including the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post and the American Legion. An expectant group of St. Edward's School children surrounded the crowd, their cheerful, innocent faces slightly out of place while they awaited their part in the somber ceremony.

The breeze ruffled a collection of flags on the band shell stage with the Stars and Stripes front-and-center, colors bright under the gray sky. A few yards behind the crowd, a color guard in blue windbreakers stood at ease, their white-strapped

Music on the move: MVAC gets 'lifetime' piano for new building

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The Magic Valley Arts Council took another step toward opening its new location on the canyon rim with the addition of a grand piano.

MVAC went with a Steinway & Sons semi-concert size, 7-foot piano with a black lacquer finish, which was delivered Thursday morning to the new Twin Falls Center for the Arts. The piano was purchased from Dunkley

Music of Twin Falls and Boise. "It's the last big stage equipment we need," said MVAC Director Robin Baumgartner, "except maybe the curtains."

A Steinway & Sons piano like the one MVAC now owns can retail anywhere from $70,000 to $80,000 and last for decades, as long as it's properly cared for, according to Dunkley Music manager Linda Schoepp. Baumgartner called it a long-term investment.

"It's a lifetime piano,"

Schoepp said.

A professional tuner will drop by at some point to check over the piano and make sure it's sounding good for the open houses planned for December at the new center. The piano will remain a permanent fixture of the auditorium.

The new center, built on the Snake River Canyon's south rim in Twin Falls, cost $1.4 million for construction and initial operation and is expected to officially open by early next year.

rifles by their sides. They brought their rifles up and came to attention as the ceremony opened with the national anthem.

Following the Pledge of Allegiance, U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo’s representative, A.J. Church, presented the senator’s Spirit of Freedom Award to Twin Falls resident Jimmy Berkeley. Next to the dark-suited Church, Berkeley stood out in white gloves, a bright red cap and medal-bedecked matching blazer. A Marine Corps radio man during the Vietnam War, Berkeley remains active in a number of veterans’ groups and was recently voted Idaho Marine of the Year.

The schoolchildren, who had managed to contain their energy up to that point, were finally given their moment as about 50 of them filed onto the stage. Using choreographed hand gestures, they sang “You’re a Grand Old Flag,” and a second round of the national anthem because, the director said, “It bears repeating.”

Eddie Jones listened as Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb gave a short speech on the meaning of Veterans Day. Jones had brought his three step-grandsons because their father couldn’t; James Ford is a member of the Idaho National Guard 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team now training in Mississippi for its deployment to Iraq on Nov. 16.

“The oldest, Michael, is 4, so he’s just starting to be old enough to be exposed to the values of America,” Jones said. “He doesn’t really understand it all yet but I’ll read him the story of the national anthem today before naptime.”

The rifle team, standing quietly in formation throughout the ceremony, made the crowd jump with the first volley of its 21-gun salute.

People dispersed with the sounding of “Taps,” and shortly after, a smiling Jones led his grandchildren home to lunch. In his hand, he carried three brass shells given to him by one of the rifle team, a gift from one veteran to another.

“These are meant for James,” Jones said.

Gooding High School students research and celebrate veterans

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Sixteen-year-old Cheyenne Robb hadn’t given much thought to Veterans Day until this year.

Every four years, Gooding High School history teacher Chris Thompson encourages the student body to learn about veterans within their families and social circles and to bring back photos and information for a community slide show.

The latest show was held at the school on Thursday morning and drew about 15 area veterans. The ceremony included opening remarks by retired Army nurse and current GHS health teacher Dene Miller.

Robb’s family tree had veterans serving the country for centuries — going all the way back to the Revolutionary War.

“My mom does genealogy and so we found records on 12 veterans just from her side of the family,” Robb said. “Andrew Pickens, seven generations back, fought in the Revolution. Finding that out was really neat.”

Her attitude toward the holiday and patriotism has been shifted, she said.

“I think I’m a prouder citizen and prouder of my family’s heritage,” Robb said.

Experiences like Robb’s are what keep Thompson re-creating the project with his students every four years.

The slide-show ceremony is simple by design, he said, and created entirely out of material submitted by students.

“The side the community doesn’t see is the research, the kids getting involved,” he said.

Like ceremonies in the past, Thursday’s presentation lasted about 45 minutes and contained around 150 veterans. Some enlisted men and women were shown in uniform, formally posed. Others were family snapshots of brothers, fathers, mothers and sisters riding on horseback, chopping wood, fishing or simply smoking a cigarette.

Senior Angela Vitek, 17, said the ceremony awakened her to the fact that those willing to serve the country come from varied backgrounds.

“It made me more aware,” Vitek said. “I’m happy that so many are willing to stand up for the country.”

Buhl approves land transfer with county

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Twin Falls County will see the monthly utility bill tied to its Department of Motor Vehicles office, located inside Buhl’s City Hall, reduced for three years. That’s in exchange for the county deeding a vacant lot on Broadway Avenue North to the city.

The county came into possession of the lot through a property tax delinquency, said Mayor Tom McCauley, and offered the lot to the city if it waived a portion of the county’s water and sewer bill. The waived portion, $28.13 a month, totals just more than $1,012. The county would continue paying its monthly portion of water and sewer bond repayments.

The city can use or sell the lot for “any specific purpose benefitting the city,” he said, like developing it into a pocket park or other city projects.

Council President Regie Finney motioned to approve the waiver, stipulating that if the lot is sold the waived portion would be repaid to the city “off the top of the sale.”

“It should go back into the utility fund,” Finney said.

Councilman Bob Linderman seconded the motion, which passed unanimously.

In other city news, the council supported an application for a $500,000 Community Development Block Grant being sought through the Idaho Department of Commerce. The application must be submitted to the department in December; awarded grants will be announced in January.

The city is applying for the grant in hopes of helping Seneca Foods’ planned $18.8 million investment to shift its operations from canning to freezing produce at its Buhl plant.

Grant Administrator Susan Riddle, of Twin Falls, said the Department of Commerce has a specific grant program that supports job creation. Riddle said Seneca’s investment plan will add about 150 employees to the company’s payroll. The funding must be used to improve public infrastructure, Riddle said, and, if awarded, will help offset Idaho Power construction costs.

Riddle said another stipulation to the grant program is that 51 percent of created jobs must be awarded to low-to-moderate income households as defined by federal guidelines, or the company will face repaying a portion of the grant.

“We don’t anticipate not meeting that requirement,” Riddle said.

Although the city is applying for the grant, Riddle stressed no city funds are supporting the project.

Margaret Price said the day meant a lot to them. Margaret’s father served in the Army during World War II as a paratrooper and Randy served in Vietnam in the Naval Air Force.

Randy wiped away a few tears when he started to recount some of the difficult moments from his time overseas on the USS Kitty Hawk.

He said he watched as his best friend was chopped to pieces by a helicopter. Despite the emotions that went with his time in the military, he resolutely stated that he would go back and do it all again.

The couple met on a beach in San Diego right after Randy’s carrier came into port, and he proposed to Margaret on the Kitty Hawk’s flight deck only four days after their first meeting. They were married a month later and celebrated their 36th wedding anniversary on Nov. 2.

Other stories were passed between veterans and those currently serving in the military. Air Force Col. Kevin P. Connolly was the event’s keynote speaker. He touched on the history of Veterans Day and thanked the audience for being grateful citizens of “the best nation in the world.”

After veterans from the Marines, Navy, Army, Coast Guard and Air Force were recognized, the Mountain Home Air Force Base gun drill team performed. The only sound besides that of the rifles being thrown in the air and behind the soldiers’ backs were the gasps of the children as they watched in awe.

After the program ended, a UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter flown by the Idaho Air National Guard departed.

Capt. Nathan Patrick, test pilot and company commander, said he sees Veterans Day as a way to give back to the people who supported his family while he was on tour.

“It’s also a good opportunity to talk to upper-level kids to recruit them to do my job one day because I won’t always be here,” Patrick said. “A lot of kids were interested today and the military is a good option to help them with college.”

He also has served two terms in the Idaho House, representing District 14 in Ada County.

Aside from immigration, Labrador stressed the need to reduce the nation’s debt and make sure that businesses have an environment where they can thrive.

Voters, he said, have given him and the Republican Party a “great responsibility.”

“Now we have to go back there and do the right thing,” Labrador said.

Besides his orientation, he has other tasks, like hiring a staff and opening offices. On Wednesday he announced the hiring of Jake Ball, a former assistant to U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, as his district director. Ball, a Brigham Young University graduate, will oversee Labrador’s offices in western and northern Idaho.

Labrador also doesn’t know yet what his committee assignments will be. As a freshman congressman, he doesn’t have much of a choice in where he’s assigned.

But that doesn’t diminish his enthusiasm.

“Everywhere I go, people are excited for me,” Labrador said. “They’re excited for Idaho overall. It’s a story that people are positive about and in politics, you don’t always have positive stories. For the most part, everyone I talk to, they like the fact that it was the underdog that was able to win an election and by a substantial margin.”

Rename Heyburn? Probably not

In a blog he writes for the Colorado-based High Country News, Boise State University professor John Freemuth recently suggested it's time to rename Mount Heyburn, arguably Idaho's most majestic peak.

"The early Forest Service ... had its enemies," said Freemuth, who teaches political science and public policy. "One of them, Sen. (Weldon) Heyburn of Idaho, tried to defund the new agency and have it abolished; it was that 'damn federal government' standing in the way of Heyburn and his cronies..."

"It is simply amazing, then, that a walk around or boat ride on Redfish Lake ... reveals Mount Heyburn in the Sawtooth Mountain range, one of the Forest Service's most proud and important places.

Shouldn't this mountain have a name more suited to someone who did something to protect the Sawtooths and at least dealt honorably with the agency that manages them? It is time to start the process to change the name of this peak?"

It's only a question of time, I suppose, until someone suggests renaming the 118-year-old Minidoka County city that also bears Heyburn's name.

Without question, Heyburn was no credit to Idaho. The Republican lawyer from Wallace was elected by the Idaho Legislature to the U.S. Senate in 1902, paying several lawmakers $750 apiece to switch their support from his rival William Borah.

Once in Washington, he opposed the eight-hour workday, "saying people should toil from sunup to sundown and to hell with the clock," according to author Timothy Egan.

Heyburn was also against child labor laws, contending it was the employer's right to hire anyone of any age.

But most of all, he hated the Forest Service. In nine years on Capitol Hill, the senator opposed every one of President Theodore Roosevelt's initiatives to protect public lands. And after Roosevelt left the White House, Heyburn came close to wrecking the agency that now manages 21.4 million acres of Idaho land.

So a pretty good case can be made for renaming Mount Heyburn, a spectacular, three-summit, two-mile-tall granite monolith that rises eight miles south of Stanley. Maybe it should become Mount Pinchot, after Gifford Pinchot — first director of the Forest Service and Heyburn's archenemy.

But I don't think Heyburn, the town, should revert back to Riverton, which was its name before 1905. It's a community that's had to struggle with more than its share of adversity — the agricultural recession of the 1920s, the Great Depression, and the closure of the J.R. Simplot potato processing plant seven years ago that wiped out 485 jobs in a town of 2,900.

Heyburn has rebounded remarkably, and its name has come to represent the triumph of perseverance.

Convicted Buhl man arrested again for allegedly taking jail keys

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Scott Lee Beede was arrested again recently while already in jail for another criminal case.

The 28-year-old Buhl man was accused of petit theft and arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court on Tuesday. He's accused of stealing a set of keys while incarcerated at the Twin Falls County Jail.

According to the police report, a maintenance worker at the jail reported that a set of keys went missing after he accidentally left them out in the jail. Deputies were not worried about a security breach as the keys only opened a locked box that houses a security camera — not any doors or cells in the facility.

From security footage, deputies identified Beede, who appeared as if he were concealing something in one of his hands. The report further indicated that Beede handed something off at the cell of Thomas Trevino Jr., who is awaiting a murder trial in 2011.

Deputies cleared the block's inmates of their cells, strip-searched them and searched the cells. When asked by a deputy if he took the keys, Beede allegedly said yes, but that they weren't in his cell.

Eventually, Beede told deputies that he wrapped each key in toilet paper and flushed them, though he didn't say why. The incident remains under investigation.

Meanwhile, Beede awaits sentencing for the crime of injury to a child. He was initially charged with 10 counts of the crime before agreeing to plead guilty to one count. The other nine counts were dropped. Beede was charged in 2008 after facing accusations that he victimized five children ages 5 to 16. He was accused in court records of shooting a BB gun at two of them, forcing another into a hot bath that resulted in burns, and keeping two girls inside a cooler.

According to the plea deal, the state will recommend 10 years in state prison, with eligibility for parole in five years. The state further recommended that Beede be placed on probation for four years if he successfully completes mental health court.

Sentencing is set for Dec. 13.

Former Kimberly school employee to plead guilty

A former employee of the Kimberly School District is scheduled to plead guilty to one count of felony injury to a child next week in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

William A. Palmer, 45, signed a plea agreement with the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's Office after his original charge of sexual abuse of a minor under 16 was amended to felony injury to a child.

Palmer was accused of placing a "love letter" inside the locker of a middle-school girl earlier this year. A criminal complaint was filed in April, along with a no-contact order for the victim's protection. He pleaded not guilty in district court in June.

The plea deal, signed on Nov. 8, states that prosecutors recommend a prison sentence of nine years. Palmer will be eligible for parole after three. Also, probation or retained jurisdiction should be decided by his psychosexual evaluation, the state said. If he tests low to moderate, the state will ask for probation. If he tests moderate to high, the state wants a retained jurisdiction, and if he tests high, the state wants Palmer to serve the full nine years.

The entry of plea will be heard by Judge G. Richard Bevan at 10 a.m. Monday.

Kimb. man serves jail time for burglary

Kristoffer D. Moreno, 18, of Kimberly, received a sentence of eight years in state prison following his guilty plea to the charge of burglary.

Moreno entered his plea in September, along with co-defendant Sean M. Griffith, 19, of Filer. The duo was accused of stealing 11 firearms and ammunition from a Twin Falls County residence this summer.

The sentence was suspended for a probationary period of five years, but Moreno will serve 100 days in the Twin Falls County Jail. He was also fined $1,000, which was also suspended. Griffith was sentenced to six years in prison, suspended for a four-year probationary period in late October. He is serving a 90-day sentence in the county jail.

TFPD searches for robbery suspect

Times-News

Twin Falls police are looking for a suspect in a daring daylight robbery.

An armed robbery suspect took an undisclosed amount of cash from a male victim Tuesday afternoon in the parking lot of the Lynwood Shopping Center in Twin Falls, and he is still on the loose.

Police arrived Thursday at the parking lot in front of the Dollar Tree at around 2 p.m.

Staff Sgt. John Wilson said the victim was in his vehicle when the suspect approached its passenger side. When the victim rolled down his window, the suspect allegedly announced it was a robbery and brandished a compact handgun. The victim handed over cash, and the suspect fled east along Filer Avenue on foot.

The suspect is described as a white male, 20 to 25 years old with short, blond hair and no facial hair. He was described as having a medium build and standing 5 feet, 7 inches to 5-foot-10. He was wearing a blue shirt with a brown jacket at the time of the robbery.

Police searched up and down streets along the shopping center and around Twin Falls High School during the afternoon. Wilson said the suspect likely reached a car and left the area.

Mexico yet to surrender triple-murder suspect

BOISE (AP) — Mexico has yet to deliver a man accused of triple-murder to Idaho, even though he's been in custody in that country for more than a year.

Jorge Orozco, who was once on the FBI's list of most-wanted fugitives, is charged in Elmore County with three counts of first-degree murder.

Law enforcement agents say Orozco, captured last October as he delivered metal to a Mexican scrapyard, killed Rebecca Ramirez and her sons, ages 2 and 4, in 2002, then burned their bodies in the southern Idaho desert.

Elmore County Sheriff Rick Layher said there's now concern that the process of bringing Orozco back to Idaho to face justice is taking too long, leaving survivors unsettled and uncertain about resolution of the case. Layher says he's not even sure where Orozco is, or if he's incarcerated.

"Is he still in jail?," Layher said. "Did something happen to him? We were told it might take a year, and it's been longer than that."

FBI officials contacted by the newspaper said only that they were "not aware of any developments in the return of Orozco to Idaho" and that the information they had indicated he was still in the custody of the Mexican law enforcement.

The 34-year-old Orozco was caught in southern Mexico in the Pacific coast state of Guerrero last year after a seven-year man-hunt.

Law enforcement officials said Orozco and Ramirez had an on-again, off-again affair.

They say Orozco called Ramirez on July 30, 2002, and later picked up her and her two sons at her father's house in Nyssa, Ore., according to FBI reports.

Ohio tower falls wrong way, 4,000 lose power

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — A nearly 300-foot smokestack being demolished at an old Ohio power plant toppled in the wrong direction and sent spectators scrambling Wednesday before knocking down two 12,000-volt power lines and crashing onto a building housing backup generators, officials said.

No injuries were reported after the 275-foot tower at the unused 83-year-old Mad River Power Plant teetered and then fell in a southeast direction — instead of east, as originally planned — seconds after explosives were detonated.

The falling tower brought down the power lines and sent spectators scrambling to avoid the sparking lines.

"It just started leaning the other way and I thought, 'Holy cow' ... It was terrifying for a little bit," Springfield Township Fire Chief John Roeder told the Dayton Daily News.

Lisa Kelly, the president and owner of Idaho-based Advanced Explosives Demolition Inc. which handled the demolition, told the Daily News that the explosives detonated correctly, but an undetected crack on the south side of the tower pulled it backward.

"Nobody's happy with things that go wrong in life, and sometimes it's out of our hands and beyond anybody's prediction ... We're all extremely thankful no one was injured," Kelly told The Columbus Dispatch.

Businesses back plan to move oil equipment on N. Idaho highway

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

SPOKANE, Wash. — Plans to move gigantic oil refinery equipment down a mountainous Idaho highway are being defended by ConocoPhillips and an Idaho business group.

A group called Drive Our Economy was launched this week, intending to ensure that U.S. Highway 12 and other roads in Idaho and Montana remain open for commercial use.

"Idaho farmers and businesses rely heavily on our roadways to move our products and to keep Idahoans employed," said Pat Richardson, Clearwater County president of the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation.

Opponents in state courts have denounced the loads, saying they present a threat to tourism, public safety and convenience and pristine rivers along the proposed route.

ConocoPhillips, the company that wants to move the equipment, pointed out in a court brief that the Montana refinery where the equipment is bound produces 65 million gallons of motor fuel used in Idaho each year.

Richardson accused environmental groups of "using scare tactics around these 'megaloads' to drown out a productive discussion." The various proposed shipments down U.S. 12 would be worth $13 million to Idaho, he said.

The loads would be more than 200 feet long, up to three stories tall and take up both lanes of the rural highway.

way. Trucks would move only at night and pull over in newly designed turnouts during the day.

The Idaho Transportation Department issued permits Wednesday allowing ConocoPhillips to haul four massive, oversized loads of refinery equipment along U.S. 12 from Lewiston to the Montana border.

Suspect found at bar after burglary

LEWISTON (AP) — Police say it didn't take them long to locate an Idaho man suspected in the robbery of a Cedars Inn — he was next door at The Alibi bar.

Lewiston police say 40-year-old Donald Mosley Jr. was arrested less than 15 minutes after he walked into the hotel and demanded cash from the desk clerk late Wednesday.

Police found Mosley at The Alibi, a bar located next to the hotel. Mosley was booked into the Nez Perce County Jail early Thursday and faces possible felony robbery charges.

The Lewiston Tribune reports this is the second time Mosley has been arrested in recent weeks.

In late October, police say he called in a fake fire report from a pay phone after he was declined a cup of coffee at a Lewiston fire station. It was unclear if Mosley had hired an attorney Thursday, when various state and county offices were closed in observance of Veterans Day.

Idaho man gets lighter sentence in Russian coin case

BOISE (AP) — A Boise man ordered to spend three years in a Russian prison for trying to leave that country with two old coins was granted a reduced sentence of six months, officials said.

Eugene Kravtsov, a 26-year-old U.S. citizen who emigrated from Russia in 2000, wasn't aware he was breaking any laws when he tried to leave Russia with the coins he had purchased for $100, his family told the Idaho Statesman.

"You can buy them at any marketplace," said his brother, 23-year-old Pavel Kravtsov. "They're not valuable or anything."

He was arrested on smuggling charges when he tried to board a flight home to Boise, his family said.

Kravtsov appealed his sentence, which was reduced

Wednesday, said a spokesman for U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, who called the incident an honest mistake. The senator intervened in the case and urged Kravtsov's release in a Nov. 5 letter.

"I am hopeful that a fair and reasonable ruling will be made, one that will serve justice on the merits of this case and allow Mr. Kravtsov's prompt return home to his concerned and aging parents," Crapo wrote.

The U.S. State Department declined to discuss the charges against Kravtsov, citing privacy laws.

Kravtsov, a student at the College of Western Idaho, was in Russia visiting family. He has been jailed since July 21.

Russia has restrictions on the export of cultural and historic items.

Health groups aim to boost Idaho cigarette tax to discourage smoking

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A coalition of health groups wants Idaho to join states that have boosted taxes on cigarettes, arguing it will help curb smoking, especially among kids.

They've won support of Rep. Dennis Lake, the Republican who heads the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

After the conservative turn of the Idaho Legislature during the Nov. 2 election, however, proposals to hike taxes — regardless of which product is targeted — face a tough fight in the 2011 session.

American Heart Association lobbyist Adrean Casper says raising Idaho's 57-cent-per-pack cigarette tax just 10 percent would cut youth smoking by about 6.5 percent.

"From our perspective, it's the No. 1 leading cause of preventative death in Idaho," Casper said. "If you want youth to stop smoking, you raise the price. It's a pretty simple model."

Others pushing the plan include state chapters of the American Cancer Society and the Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids. Casper says details, including how much her group would like to see taxes hiked, are due out later this year.

Idaho's tax on cigarettes ranks 42nd nationally, tied with tobacco-producing South Carolina. The state raises about $45 million annually from its cigarette tax, and another $8.5 million from taxes on other tobacco products, according to the 2009 annual Idaho State Tax Commission report.

Washington state just boosted its tax by a $1 to just over $3, pushing cigarettes there to about $8 a pack. Utah lifted its tax to $1.70.

More than a dozen states have lifted their taxes on cigarettes over two years, for health reasons and to lift revenue during the economic downturn.

With Idaho facing a projected 2012 budget deficit of up to $350 million, depending on how the economy fares next fiscal year, higher tobacco taxes could help close the gap.

But the election last week that left just 13 Democratic representatives in Idaho's state House and seven in the Senate installed an even more conservative GOP majority in both chambers. That doesn't bode well for higher taxes, even for what Casper's group sees as a good cause.

House Speaker Lawrence Denney, R-Midvale, said he's torn.

"I don't like to go after just specific products and people," Denney said. "However, I don't mind the idea of trying to reduce smoking. If it's a price thing, maybe that's something I could support sometime down the road. I don't like the idea of it being used as a revenue source for the general fund."

Lake, the tax panel's leader, said he's on board, with this caveat: Raising more revenue should only be a side benefit, with the primary focus on discouraging people, especially youngsters, from picking up the habit.

Back in 2009, a drive to raise Idaho's beer and wine taxes to fund substance abuse treatment failed in Lake's committee. But Casper said this push to target cigarettes can't be compared to that effort, because the connection between smoking and health problems is more solidly documented than the link between beer or wine and drug abuse.

Higher ed isn’t making enough of a case in Idaho

Idaho’s colleges and universities haven’t yet figured out how to capture the hearts and minds of the state’s taxpayers.

In a Mason-Dixon poll commissioned by seven Idaho newspapers in September, just more than one-third of Idahoans thought state spending for higher education was too low; 42 percent said it was about right.

In a second survey taken in October, just 4 percent of respondents rated spending more on colleges and universities as Idaho’s first priority.

State spending on higher ed has been slashed 24 percent — by $61 million — in two years. State funding for the College of Southern Idaho has declined 19 percent in the same period.

Public schools have been cut too, but the magnitude is much smaller — 7 percent.

All of which matters because the link between the quality of higher education and job growth is unmistakable.

Idaho spends about 9 percent of its general fund budget on higher education and ranks 16th in Chief Executive magazine’s ratings of the best states for business and job growth. Of the 15 states that rank higher, 11 them devote a great percentage of their spending on higher ed than Idaho does.

In the top 10 states for business and job growth, there are nine of the top 35 public colleges in America, according to U.S. News & World Report.

Idahoans apparently don’t yet grasp the fact that tech will provide a critical segment of the employment growth — and many of the good-paying jobs — in Idaho between now and 2050, just as it has since Micron Technology set up shop in Boise in 1978.

Part of the problem is there’s no champion for higher ed in Idaho. The superintendent of public instruction sits on the State Board of Education, but his responsibility is primarily public schools. The rest of the board has been — so far — too low-profile to be effective spokesmen for colleges and universities or disinclined to do so.

The best-known name in Idaho higher ed by far is Boise State University President Bob Kustra, but while Kustra has set the bar high for his institution he doesn’t speak for the rest of the state’s colleges and universities.

He does, however, have some good ideas for making higher ed better in Idaho, including leveraging public support to attract more private funding.

But Kustra has raised tuition and fees at his school by nearly 28 percent in five years to offset the effects of state budget cuts. That’s a growth curve neither BSU nor the other public colleges in the state can sustain without pricing Idaho students out of college.

During his unsuccessful campaign for superintendent of public instruction this fall, Democrat Stan Olson argued that Idaho’s colleges have been serving as a bank to help the Legislature pay for public schools and other needs. He’s right.

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter has said that he’s less reluctant to cut higher ed funding because college students have other options. That’s a mind-set that could be disastrous for Idaho’s economic future.

Investment and employment flow to places with good education systems. Whether you still have a job in 2030 may depend on the decisions the governor and the Legislature make in the next few years about supporting colleges and universities.

The Olbermann and Beck hypocrisies

If MSNBC were consistent, Keith Olbermann would not have been the only on-air personality disciplined for making political contributions.

Cal Thomas

For those who don’t watch his Countdown program (which would be most of the country), Olbermann was suspended “indefinitely” after it was learned he donated money without approval from management to three Democratic congressional candidates. The problem for MSNBC was not only Olbermann’s failure to get permission, but that he anchored part of the network’s Election Night coverage. Apparently at MSNBC, the chair you sit in matters more than the content of your journalistic character.

Unlike Juan Williams, who was fired by National Public Radio for expressing an opinion on the hated (by liberals) Fox News Channel, Olbermann enjoyed a four-day weekend and is back on the air at MSNBC because he is a liberal and liberals mostly take care of their own.

I am intrigued by MSNBC’s policy prohibiting host-anchors from financially contributing to political campaigns, because donating money isn’t the only way one can make a contribution. Olbermann, along with other MSNBC hosts, regularly make “in-kind” contributions to Democrats by favoring candidates and policies in line with their beliefs. And yes, some host-anchors at Fox, including Glenn Beck, do the same. Most observers of broadcast TV (and cable news) know of other “contributions” made by on-air personalities, contributions that include the types of questions asked and even the kinds of guests invited to appear on programs.

For a conservative guest, the questioning by a liberal usually goes something like this: “What do you say to people who think you are a jerk?” Translated this means, “I think you’re a jerk, but I’ll couch it in a way that makes me look professional.” To a liberal guest, the liberal host asks: “When did you first realize you were right about everything and the opposition was wrong?” I exaggerate only slightly to make a point. What passes for modern “journalism” is something quite different from what I remember growing up.

“Today’s ‘opinion journalism’ ... has eroded the public’s trust in networks and newspapers, as reflected in declining ratings and circulation. People today tune in to programming that only reinforces what they already believe.”

Mentors from my days as a copyboy at NBC News in Washington look at me now from black-and-white photos on my office wall. Most of their names would not be familiar to people younger than 40, unless they studied the history of the profession. Among them are Martin Agronsky, Ray Scherer, Bryson Rash, Frank McGee and Elie Abel, all now dead. The late David Brinkley is probably remembered more than the others because of his greater fame and a career that extended into the last decade.

These were real journalists who came to broadcast network news mostly from newspapers and wire services. They could write. They believed journalism was a calling and a public trust. Their agenda was to report facts as they discovered them. Probably most were Democrats, but compared to what passes for contemporary journalism, their politics and opinions were mostly kept out of their reporting. The cynicism created by Vietnam and Watergate began to change journalism and compromised many journalists and the ethical standard by which they once lived.

Today’s “opinion journalism,” which is a contradiction, has eroded the public’s trust in networks and newspapers, as reflected in declining ratings and circulation. People today tune in to programming that only reinforces what they already believe.

Still, Keith Olbermann should not have been disciplined, if that’s what a two-day suspension can be called. Instead, each time he makes a political comment, a disclaimer should be put on the screen which states which politicians he favored with donations. The same holds true for all the others. Silencing people does nothing for the credibility of a network. Every network “performer” and newspaper political reporter should have information about his or her actual and in-kind contributions available to the public, including any speeches given that endorse a specific candidate or political group.

We in the media demand full disclosure from politicians. If more of us were transparent about our political “contributions,” perhaps the public would trust us more. Or not. Either way, what we demand of others, we should also demand of ourselves and show the way by example.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

What kind of message does hiring send to teachers?

I am a retired teacher, having taught 20 wonderful years in the Twin Falls School District. This is the first time I have ever written to the Times-News, but an article appearing on Oct. 29 left me with such sadness and anger that I felt I could not ignore it.

It was stated in the article that Dale Thornsberry had been hired as a part-time activities director at Canyon Ridge High School at a salary of $30,178. I am not attacking Mr. Thornsberry as I feel he has been a good administrator over the years and is qualified for this job. I am, however, questioning the decision of the Twin Falls School District and the School Board to pay such an inflated salary for less than part time. I have many friends that are still teaching and I have watched them struggle trying to make ends meet as a result of the large cuts in their salaries. One has taught for eight years, gotten his master’s degree and is now making what he was making his second year of teaching.

I am asking, how can the Twin Falls School District afford to pay $30,178 for a part-time employee when current employees have seen such a drastic cut in their pay? The financial and emotional burden on

Editorial shows hostility toward people of Idaho

Quite an editorial in the Sunday, Nov. 6, edition. Such hostility toward the good people of Idaho. You just can’t accept the fact that Idahoans may be smarter than the editorial board of the Times-News and most of the other liberal news organizations. And it was brilliant to use Nevada, Oregon and Washington for comparison. These states are facing huge deficits, Oregon and Nevada around $3 to $4 billion and Washington coming in at better than $5 billion.

Everything that you people talk about is money related. Tell me how retirees of Idaho are being forced to take lower benefits because I believe that PERSI is solvent and continues to pay its entire package. And on the same page, the wage comparison between the top 50 jobs in Idaho — everything in hourly wages except for educators. Just a mistake or are you afraid to compare their hourly compensation? I know you will say they are salaried but each and everyone signs a contract stating the amount of days and hours per day. Seems like a computer could tell you their hourly compensation but that might make them look greedy as their pay is going to be around $40 per hour or more. Don’t see too many wages at that rate.

No illegal alien pilot left behind under broken system

Chalk up another Code Red Elmo moment for the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. While Islamic terrorists groom suicide bombers starting in kindergarten, the grownups in charge of protecting America can't seem to reach an elementary level of competence.

The "good" news: Hindsight-driven bureaucrats at DHS moved to ban high-risk cargo from Yemen and Somalia recently after a global air scare involving makeshift printer/toner cartridge-bombs. The bad news: More than nine years after the 9/11 jihadist attacks, untold numbers of high-risk flyers have been able to board, ride and pilot American planes — some with Transportation Security Administration approval to boot.

Outside Boston, one shady flight school provided single-engine pilot lessons to at least 33 illegal immigrants from Brazil. But clear counter-terror rules ban illegal aliens from enrolling in U.S. flight schools. Clear counter-terror regulations require TSA to run foreign flight students' names against a plethora of terrorism, criminal and immigration databases. Head-scratching airport security officials were at a loss last week to explain how dozens of these illegal alien students eluded their radar screen when the agency "performs a thorough background check on each applicant at the time of application" and checks "for available disqualifying immigration information," the Boston Globe reported.

A cluebat for the Keystone Kops: No matter how DHS Secretary Janet Napolitano might spin it, the "system" is not "working" in any sense of either word.

Whistleblowers have warned for years about the gaping holes in both the TSA's and the Federal Aviation Administration's foreign pilot screening systems. In 2005, aviation safety inspector Edward H. Blount of the Alabama Flight Standards District Office sent a letter to the TSA warning of federal policies that were "fostering illegal flight training by foreign individuals" in the U.S. on improper visas. Blount reported that he and another investigator were told by a TSA official that the agency was "not going to look at the visa status" of pilot applicants.

The next year, TSA issued a backside-covering memo shirking responsibility and instead pointing fingers at the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement and the Department of State for neglecting to follow up on rigorous immigration status checks for foreign pilots.

In 2008, ABC News discovered that thousands of foreign nationals were able to enroll in flight schools despite the strict flight security rules. "Some of the very same conditions that allowed the 9-11 tragedy to happen in the first place are still very much in existence today," one regional TSA officer warned. "TSA's enforcement is basically nonexistent," former FAA inspector Bill McNease told the network. The matter was kicked upstairs to DHS higher-ups in Washington. And there it gathered dust.

Compounding those persistent gaps are the myriad ways the open-borders lobby has undermined secure identification. Homeland security officials were warned years ago about the use of bogus Mexican matricula consular cards by illegal aliens boarding planes. American banks have pandered to the pro-amnesty lobby in search of illegal alien customers; the financial industry championed the use of the matricula consular cards as identification despite widespread fraud, inability to verify validating documents and lack of any central database. Dozens of municipalities have incorporated consular cards as "valid" ID for illegal aliens, and three states still issue driver's licenses to illegal immigrants. Open-borders ideologues populate every corner of the Obama administration, from DHS to the Department of Justice, where civil rights division head Thomas Perez has long crusaded for illegal alien licenses.

These comprehensive failures are partly attributable to incompetence, partly attributable to industry pressure and partly attributable to the intentional undermining of the very immigration laws Congress passed after 9/11 — laws specifically designed to prevent future alien hijackers like the 9/11 monsters from so easily exploiting the homeland security lapses that allowed them to live and train here for years unencumbered even after their temporary visas had expired.

Without the ability to share and access the information across numerous agencies, the data are useless.

As usual, the homeland security moppets under fire stress that they found no links to terrorism among the immigration law-breaking flight students outside Boston. This misses the gob-smackingly obvious point that, despite billions of dollars and years of bureaucratic expansion, our homeland security infrastructure cannot yet provide adequate protection against unauthorized, unscreened, undocumented and unwanted intruders — terror-related or not. That is not a consolation. That is an indictment.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... big stores, small towns

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

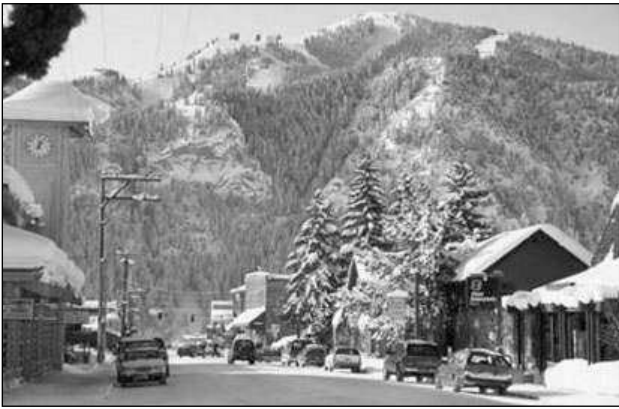

The emerging field of behavioral economics tells us that, contrary to belief, logic very often does not influence behavior. However, the lure of "free" goods does, and it follows that cheap goods are powerfully persuasive as well.

Why does this matter except to navel-gazers in ivory towers? Because it helps explain why the lure of "cheap" leads people to make decisions that harm their personal, community or national health.

The debate in Ketchum over throwing out zoning ordinances that prohibit development of retail stores, specifically a grocery store, in its sole Light Industrial zone is a case in point.

The debate in the election races for the Bellevue City Council over whether the city should actively try to attract big box discounters is another.

The factor that drives support of both ideas is the perception that cheap goods would become available. Supporters also claim that new businesses would provide new jobs and thus create a healthier economy to make the propositions seem even more attractive.

What's conveniently forgotten is the net effect of the proposals.

New businesses do bring new jobs, but in an economy that hasn't grown much in 30 years, in order to survive they must take business from someone else. That means that when new jobs are created, old jobs will disappear. That means that the arrival of new businesses, low-wage discounters in particular, would result not only in fewer local jobs, but jobs that pay less and leave workers poorer.

Making the pursuit of "cheap" a priority that supersedes all else has had demonstrably negative repercussions throughout the country.

Downtown centers and mom-and-pop businesses have been destroyed by big box retailers. The nation's manufacturing base has been destroyed by tax policies that support moving factories offshore to countries where labor is cheap. These moves have broken the back of the American middle class ...

The question before us is whether a cheap ticket to nowhere is worth it.

... Otter's bad decision

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

Idahoans re-elected Gov. Butch Otter by an overwhelming margin last week — he got about 60 percent of the vote in a five-way race. Voters have clearly embraced his fiscally conservative message.

They also respond favorably to the way he's not afraid to take on the federal government. Otter was the nation's first governor to sign a measure requiring the attorney general to sue the feds over the sweeping, controversial health care law Congress passed last winter.

People in this state like that kind of feistiness, which the governor has expressed in other ways. Take last month, for example, when Otter told the federal government that he would not use state resources to enforce the Endangered Species Act for wolves.

In other words, Idaho biologists and wardens will no longer monitor the predators or investigate wolf poachers.

The move was the governor's way of expressing his frustration at a federal judge's ruling in August that returned gray wolves in the Rocky Mountain region to the endangered species list despite the fact they thrive in Idaho. That meant Idaho hunters could no longer hunt the predators, who are decimating the state's livestock.

Otter and all Idahoans were justified in their aggravation at the lousy ruling. The state has shown it can responsibly manage wolves. The judge's ruling that individual states in the northern Rocky Mountain Region can't set their own wolf protection policies was wrong-headed.

But is tossing up your hands, taking your little red wagon and going home really going to help Idaho regain its control over wolves?

Actually, no. The net result is that the feds will have more control over what happens here, not less.

Shortly after Otter's announcement last month, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said it would take over wolf management in Idaho. The feds said they would investigate any reports of wolf poaching and take appropriate action.

The situation is comparable to the Canyon County Commission's refusal to propose a reasonable auto emission testing program here. The Department of Environmental Quality was left with no choice but to implement its own program. The county's obstinacy may have played well with voters, but the net result was loss of power to the state.

Otter's anger is justified, but his response may ultimately result in more federal control over wolves, not less. Doesn't that defeat the entire purpose?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why doesn't Hart run for election in Burley?

I wonder why Mr. Hart doesn't run for office in the city of Burley. He didn't like the previous mayor nor does he like the current one. If he thinks there is a better way to run the city of Burley, why doesn't he run for office and show us how it's done?

Maybe he just likes to rant and rave and be a pain in everyone's backside for the hell of it.

Only 30% support Xavier Charter board

I am writing in response to the recall hearing held by the Xavier Charter School Board of Directors on Oct. 28.

I was asked to speak at the meeting, but due to the restrictions placed on the meeting by the board and its attorney, Diane Tappen, I was only allowed to address one page of three pages of concerns of inappropriate procedures and events perpetuated by the board. Due to the ambiguity of the board's articles, it was not only allowed to dictate what few items could be discussed but was also allowed to determine if they recalled themselves or not. I always thought that in America if you were voted into a position by a group of people, those same people could vote you out. Apparently, the board is above this basic American concept.

Also, in response to Mr. Bulkley's comment in the Times-News that "there's a resounding amount of people who support the board," based on my observation of those applauding for the board and those applauding in favor of the recall, only about 30 percent appeared to support the board's position. If a 30 percent minority approval is "resounding," then what is a 70 percent disapproval?

As concerned parents, our intent in bringing forward a recall petition was to ensure the original intent and vision of the school, as outlined in our charter, is maintained. Based on board decisions and actions, we feel that the current board does not share this same vision.

AWOL soldier returns on Veterans Day

By Kristin M. Hall
Associated Press writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — AWOL soldier Jeff Hanks said he walked away from the Army in the middle of a deployment to Afghanistan because his problems with anxiety and stress from combat have been ignored. On Veterans Day, he returned to face the consequences.

The 30-year-old Army infantryman said he has suffered post-traumatic stress disorder since his 2008 tour in Iraq. He tried to seek treatment at Fort Campbell, Ky., last month during his mid-tour leave from Afghanistan. He said when his commanders failed to help and told him he would have to immediately go back, he instead went home to North Carolina.

The specialist could face less-than-honorable discharge or jail after turning himself in Thursday at Fort Campbell.

“All I wanted was to be treated. Going AWOL is not what I wanted to do,” Hanks told reporters outside the gates of the Army post. He choked up as he talked about how his actions might affect his daughters, ages 5 and 3. He said the older daughter pulled him aside one day and said: “You’re not as nice as you used to be.”

As for turning himself in, Hanks said, “I am nervous but I’m ready to accept anything.”

Hanks said in an interview before he left his home in White Lake, N.C., that he chose to return on Veterans Day because he didn’t want to exceed 30 days of being AWOL and face the more serious charge of desertion. His actions and the timing were supported by Iraq Veterans Against the War, and some members of the group were with him as he surrendered.

Reporters weren’t allowed on the post as Hanks turned himself in.

Hanks’ unit command has discretion over what happens now, but Hanks could face a court-martial and jail time if convicted, Fort Campbell spokesman Rick Rzepka said.

“AWOL and desertion is a self-centered act,” Rzepka said. “It doesn’t only affect the soldier, but in a time of war puts other soldiers at risk.”

Hanks said he understands that his actions could be considered disrespectful to other veterans, but said the military would continue to see high rates of suicide and substance abuse if it ignores soldiers’ mental health problems.

would say, ‘Why do you have to bring this up on Veterans Day?’” Hanks said. “So when is a good time to bring it up?”

Hanks is a member of the 101st Airborne Division, which has been deployed numerous times to Iraq and Afghanistan. He said his PTSD dates to his 2008 deployment to Iraq. On his second day there, his vehicle was struck by an improvised explosive device. He was rocked, but survived with no apparent injuries.

He said he was more disturbed by seeing the aftermath of a car bomb outside his base in Balad that wounded many civilians, including a young Iraqi girl.

“Ever since then, I think about her all the time,” he said. “I have had a lot of bad dreams, just reliving it.”

During his leave from his most recent deployment to Afghanistan, his family urged him to get help, but he told them he wanted to wait until he finished his deployment. As he was saying goodbye to his wife in the airport, a loud noise set off a panic attack and he had to be treated at an emergency room.

Companies yank cord on residential phone books

By Michael Felberbaum
Associated Press writer

RICHMOND, Va. — What’s black and white and read all over? Not the white pages, which is why regulators have begun granting telecommunications companies the go-ahead to stop mass-printing residential phone books, a musty fixture of Americans’ kitchen counters, refrigerator tops and junk drawers.

In the past month alone, New York, Florida and Pennsylvania approved Verizon Communications Inc.’s request to quit distributing residential white pages. Residents in Virginia have until Nov. 19 to provide comments on a similar request pending with state regulators.

Telephone companies argue that most consumers now check the Internet rather than flip through pages when they want to reach out and touch someone.

“Anybody who doesn’t have access to some kind of online way to look things up now is probably too old to be able to read the print in the white pages anyway,” joked Robert Thompson, a pop culture professor at Syracuse University.

Phone companies note that eliminating residential white pages would reduce environmental impact by using less paper and ink. It also can’t hurt their bottom lines to cut out the cost of a service that rarely gets used and generates little beyond nostalgia.

The first telephone directory was issued in February 1878 — a single page that covered 50 customers in New Haven, Conn. That sheet grew into a book that became virtually a household appliance, listing numbers for neighbors, friends and colleagues, not to mention countless potential victims of prank calls.

Fewer people rely on paper directories for a variety of reasons: more people rely solely on cell phones, whose numbers typically aren’t included in the listings; more listings are available online; and mobile phones and caller ID systems on land lines can store a large number of frequently called numbers.

The number of traditional land lines has been declining for the better part of the decade, and now are being disconnected at a rate of nearly 10 percent each year, according to company financial reports.

And a survey conducted for SuperMedia Inc. by Gallup shows that between 2005 and 2008, the percentage of households relying on stand-alone residential white pages fell from 25 percent to 11 percent. Dallas-based SuperMedia, which publishes Verizon’s telephone directories, has instead focused on its yellow pages and paid advertising listings, and their online equivalents.

Unlike the residential white pages, the business directories printed on yellow pages are doing fine, at least according to the Yellow Pages Association. The industry trade group claims more half the people in the U.S. still let their fingers do the walking every month, and that 550 million residential and business directories are still printed every year.

Specter of trade war looms at G-20 meet

By Jean H. Lee and Paul Wiseman
Associated Press writer

SEOUL, South Korea — The world’s economies stand on the brink of a trade war as leaders of rich and emerging nations gather in Seoul.

A dispute over whether China and the United States are manipulating their currencies is threatening to resurrect destructive protectionist policies like those that worsened the Great Depression. The biggest fear is that trade barriers will send the global economy back into recession.

Hopes had been high that the Group of 20, which includes wealthy nations like Germany and the U.S. and rising giants like China, could be a forum to forge a lasting global economic recovery. Yet so far, G-20 countries haven’t agreed on an agenda, let alone solutions to the problems that divide them.

G-20 leaders were expected to issue a communique detailing results of the summit on Friday.

The delegates have clashed in particular over the value of their currencies. Some countries, like the United States, want China to let the value of its currency, the yuan, rise. That would make Chinese exports costlier abroad and make U.S. imports cheaper for the Chinese to buy.

Action, not talk

Deficit panel pushes Dems, GOP to make painful decisions

By Andrew Taylor and Charles Babington
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The leaders of the deficit commission are baldly calling out the budget myths of both political parties, challenging lawmakers to engage in the “adult conversation” they say they want.

Their plan — mixing painful cuts to Social Security and Medicare with big tax increases — has no chance of enactment as written, certainly not as a whole. But the commission’s high profile will make it harder for Republicans and Democrats to simply keep reciting their tax and spending talking points without acknowledging the real sacrifices that progress against government deficits would demand.

It’s time for both conservatives and liberals to “put up or shut up,” says Jon Cowan, head of the centrist-Democratic group Third Way, which praised the bold new proposals and urged politicians to show courage. Republicans failed to produce their often-promised deficit reductions when they controlled the government, Cowan said, and Democrats refuse to acknowledge that entitlement programs such as Social Security and Medicare must be trimmed.

Already, some top elected officials — House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, for one — have declared Wednesday’s proposals by President Obama’s bipartisan commission unacceptable. Others still say deficits can be reduced in relatively easy ways, a notion that few mainstream economists accept.

There’s no need to trim Social Security, Sen. Jim DeMint, R-S.C., a tea party favorite, said Sunday on NBC’s “Meet The Press.” “If we can just cut the administrative waste,” he said, “we can cut hundreds of billions of dollars a year at the federal level.”

Well, no.

As amply demonstrated by the panel’s co-chairmen — former Clinton White House chief of staff Erskine Bowles and retired Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo. — taming the deficit requires real pain all around. One person’s government “waste” is another’s essential program.

The co-chairmen’s ideas, which they agree are simply a starting point, include calls to raise the Social Security retirement age and reduce scheduled benefit increases, whack the Pentagon budget, cut farm subsidies and increase the federal tax on gasoline by 15 cents a gallon.

The most vocal critics of the plan, which would cut spending by $3 for every $1 raised through higher taxes, are Democrats. Many will strongly oppose the bid to slowly raise the Social Security retirement age to 69. Republicans, especially three commission members appointed by incoming House Speaker John Boehner, are likely to balk at tax increases

Opinion is split on whether 14 of the panel’s 18 members will ultimately agree on a plan. That’s the number needed to demonstrate bipartisan support and send the measure to the Senate and, maybe, the House for a vote. Either way, commission members are unlikely to produce actual legislation that could become law. But they could bless a set of recommendations that would put lawmakers on record for or against a serious deficit-reduction recipe.

Holiday shopping battle starts to get pitched

NEW YORK (AP) — From free shipping from Wal-Mart to Sears stores open on Thanksgiving for the first time, the battle for holiday shoppers’ dollars has begun in earnest.

The early competition to break through shoppers’ caution about spending promises savings for those willing to buy amid an economy that’s still worrying many. It also promises convenience. Retailers are offering deals anytime, anywhere their customers want, through websites, smart phones and Facebook.

Black Friday, the day after Thanksgiving that typically kicks off holiday shopping, is not only being marketed as “Black Friday week,” but for a growing number of stores, “Black Friday month.”

As for Thanksgiving, some retailers like Sears and Gap’s Old Navy hope shoppers will head to stores after they finish their turkey feasts. On the Web, Kohl’s Corp. and Target Corp. are among many merchants dramatically stepping up deals that day, counting on that holiday to be one of the busiest days of the year online.

“Everything is faster and sooner,” said Dan Grandpre, editor-in-chief of Dealnews.com, which opened an office in Dublin, Ireland, a few months ago to monitor the frenetic pace of offers, particularly during the holidays. Dealnews is based in Huntsville, Ala.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is clearly going for the jugular in the holiday retailing fight. It announced Thursday that it will offer free shipping on nearly 60,000 online items — with no minimum purchase requirement. The offer, which includes most electronics, jewelry and toys, will run through Dec. 20. Return shipping is also free, or items can be returned to a local store.

Wal-Mart’s free offer comes on top of similarly aggressive free shipping programs from Target and J.C. Penney. Wal-Mart’s deal adds to the discounters’ Site to Store program, which lets customers buy an item online and have it shipped free to their local Walmart store for pickup.

Walmart.com is even testing a service at nearly 800 stores that lets customers see inventory and purchase products right from home. The online orders are usually ready to be picked up at a store within four hours.

That concept isn’t new, but many stores are joining Walmart in trying to speed up the turnaround time, says Noam Paransky, retail strategist at Kurt Salmon Associates.

“Retailers are trying to be in front of customers 24/7,” Paransky said. With the wider adoption of smart phones, “it’s exploding this year.”

Facebook.com recently launched its Deals program, teaming up with a number of stores including Penney and Gap Inc. The offering allows shoppers to “check in” using smart phones to these shops and reap rewards or discounts.

Iraq parliament picks leaders, but Sunnis walk out

By Leila Fadel
The Washington Post

BAGHDAD — Iraq’s parliament achieved an important milestone Thursday, agreeing on who would hold the country’s top leadership spots after more than eight months of acrimonious negotiations. But a dramatic walkout by members of the Sunni-backed Iraqiya bloc marred the nearly five-hour session and underscored the deep divisions and distrust that dominate the country’s political system.

The day’s events, which appeared to catch U.S. officials off guard, followed a deal late Wednesday on a power-sharing arrangement among Iraq’s biggest political factions, and they were a vivid illustration of both the dysfunction that remains here and the small glimmers of hope about the future.

Iraqiya’s move also raised the prospect that some Sunni Arabs, disaffected by the political process, could take up arms again, just as the United States moves toward a planned withdrawal of forces by the end of 2011.

U.S. hopes for leaving behind a stable Iraq rest heavily on the establishment of a fully representative government that all of the country’s major factions can support. But Thursday’s chaotic session reflects just how challenging that will be.

Despite the twists and turns, lawmakers reappointed President Jalal Talabani, a Kurd, who renamed incumbent Nouri al-Maliki, a Shiite, as prime minister.

In addition, a member of Iraqiya was elected speaker of parliament. With the three top slots resolved, Maliki will now begin to distribute ministries and other top jobs, a process that has the potential to be as divisive as the initial phase of government formation.

The moment of high drama came when members of the Iraqiya bloc — which, by a slim margin, won more seats in Iraq’s 325-member parliament than any other bloc — walked out of the session to protest what they called duplicious tactics by political rivals and broken promises to roll back a controversial law that they feel unfairly targeted their members.

“They have to know that they cannot run the parliament the way they want,” said Falah al Naqib, a legislator from Iraqiya. He called the walkout a strong and important message of Iraqiya’s power. “There is no trust. The political process is very fragile. You can see that there are major differences. They should at least respect their promises.”

Superjumbo woes

Prior to explosion, jet engine showed 4 warning signs

By Michael Weissenstein and Joan Lowy
Associated Press writers

LONDON — Rolls-Royce engines on the world’s largest airliner malfunctioned four times before one of them disintegrated during flight last week, and aviation experts said Thursday that the earlier mishaps may hold clues to design or construction flaws.

Four problems dating to 2008 led to two warnings for airlines to check parts of the Rolls-Royce Trent 900, a technologically advanced model used by 20 Airbus A380s around the world.

Three of the four previous problems centered on the turbines or oil system. An oil leak is suspected in last week’s disintegration, and since then several A380s have been grounded after oil leaks or stains were discovered in another six Trent 900 engines.

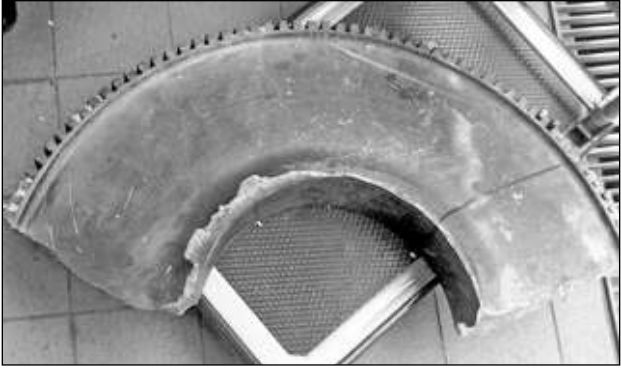

The number of problems identified in the Trent 900 is not unusual for a jet engine, and analysts, pilots and former safety investigators caution that there is no obvious link between the earlier mishaps and last week’s failure.

But the experts also said they suspect there may be critical problems that weren’t detected before the engine went into use. Several experts pointed to the tubes that pump oil around the spinning turbines of the house-sized engine as a possible culprit.

Based on what authorities have said so far, it appears the problem with the Trent 900 is a “fundamental unforeseen flaw” that will likely be very expensive to fix, said Michael Barr, who teaches aviation safety at the University of Southern California.

Joerg Handweg, a spokesman for the pilots’ union for German airline Lufthansa, said that minor problems are routine for any jet engine, but it is possible that the issues are an indication that regulators did not adequately check the engine before approving it for commercial use.

“When you see we have a problem with not just one of these engines but several then it points towards that we have a problem in the certification process,” Handweg said.

Barr said the Trent 900 is “out there right at the edge of the envelope” of new engines that are lighter, more energy efficient, less polluting and less noisy.

“The engine has been out there for a few years, they’ve got some miles on it, and now they’re finding things they didn’t foresee,” he said.

The European air-safety regulator pointed to the oil system as a culprit in last week’s incident, saying Thursday that leaking oil may have caught fire in the Qantas Trent 900 that disintegrated and sent pieces of machinery slicing through vital control systems in the wing.

With the final determination of what caused the Qantas accident months away, experts said it was too early to know if regulators had missed clues that could have helped prevent the midair disintegration.

The European Aviation Safety Authority issued an emergency order requiring airlines to re-examine their Trent 900s and ground any planes with suspicious leaks. It said a preliminary probe showed that an oil fire had broken out in the section housing the turbines, shafts that power the engine when they are spun at great speeds by combusting jet fuel. An oil pump and network of tubes lubricate and cool the turbines.

EASA said the blaze may have caused the breakup of the intermediate pressure turbine disc, a heavy metal plate that holds the blades of the middle of three turbines.

Turbine engines are known to generate vibrations that can cause parts to wear prematurely. The EASA order, known as an airworthiness directive, indicates that the oil tubes may have fractured as a result of such vibrations and spewed oil in a very hot section of the engine, causing a fire. The resulting heat could have caused the rotor to which the turbine blades are attached to expand, bringing the turbine blades into contact with the casing that encloses the engine.

“Once these things start rubbing, catastrophic failure can occur rapidly,” said William Voss, head of the Flight Safety Foundation from Alexandria, Virginia.

2014 is new date to watch in Afghanistan

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press writer

KABUL, Afghanistan — Message to the Taliban: Forget July 2011, the date that President Obama set to begin withdrawing U.S. forces from Afghanistan. The more important date is 2014 when the international coalition hopes Afghan soldiers and policemen will be ready to take the lead in securing the nation.

That date will be the focus of discussions later this month at a NATO summit in Lisbon, Portugal, the third and largest international meeting on Afghanistan this year.

Heads of state and other officials there will talk about how to assess security and other conditions so that government security forces can begin to take control of some of Afghanistan’s 34 provinces next spring, allowing international forces to go home or move to other parts of the country.

“NATO emissaries are still bargaining over exactly how many troops will remain after departure day and for what purposes,” says Leslie H. Gelb, president emeritus of the Council on Foreign Relations. “Details aside, the devastating truth is that U.S. forces will be fighting in Afghanistan for at least four more years.”

The 2014 target date isn’t new. Afghan President Hamid Karzai said in his November 2009 inauguration speech that he wanted Afghans to take responsibility for security across the country in four years. But that was all but forgotten the next month when Obama announced he was dispatching 30,000 more troops to Afghanistan, but hoped to start a gradual pullout in July 2011 — if conditions are deemed secure enough.

Obama has said he was not forecasting a mass exodus of American forces next summer, but that’s what many Afghans, Americans and others around the world believed. U.S. and NATO officials have been working for months to right what they insist was a misinterpretation of Obama’s remarks.

“We’re not going anywhere,” U.S. Sen. Joe Lieberman, an independent from Connecticut, said Thursday in Kabul. “In fact, the better date to think about is the end of 2014.”

U.S. Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said earlier this week that he hoped the Taliban is under the impression that July 2011 is the end date for U.S. forces in Afghanistan. “It’s not and they’re going to be very surprised come August, September, October and November when most American forces are still there and still coming after them,” Gates said.

Gates once said that he hoped a few of Afghanistan’s 398 districts could be transferred to Afghan security forces this year, but NATO officials now say the transition process won’t begin in earnest until next spring — or perhaps the summer.

Palestinian arrested for Facebook slam of Islam

By Diaa Hadid
Associated Press writer

QALQILIYA, West Bank — A mysterious blogger who set off an uproar in the Arab world by claiming he was God and hurling insults at the Prophet Muhammad is now behind bars — caught in a sting that used Facebook to track him down.

The case of the unlikely apostate, a shy barber from this backwater West Bank town, is highlighting the limits of tolerance in the Western-backed Palestinian Authority — and illustrating a new trend by authorities in the Arab world to mine social media for evidence.

Residents of Qalqiliya say they had no idea that Walid Husayin — the 26-year-old son of a Muslim scholar — was leading a double life.

Known as a quiet man who prayed with his family each Friday and spent his evenings working in his father’s barbershop, Husayin was secretly posting anti-religion rants on the Internet during his free time.

Now, he faces a potential life prison sentence on heresy charges for “insulting the divine essence.”

Many in this conservative Muslim town say he should be killed for renouncing Islam, and even family members say he should remain behind bars for life.

“He should be burned to death,” said Abdul-Latif Dahoud, a 35-year-old Qalqiliya resident. The execution should take place in public “to be an example to others,” he added.

Over several years, Husayin is suspected of posting arguments in favor of atheism on English and Arabic blogs, where he described the God of Islam as having the attributes of a “primitive Bedouin.” He called Islam a “blind faith that grows and takes over people’s minds where there is irrationality and ignorance.”

If that wasn’t enough, he is also suspected of creating three Facebook groups in which he sarcastically declared himself God and ordered his followers, among other things, to smoke marijuana in verses that spoof the Muslim holy book, the Quran. At its peak, Husayin’s Arabic-language blog had more than 70,000 visitors, overwhelmingly from Arab countries.

It would shrink the United States’ trade deficit with China, which is on track this year to match its 2008 record of $268 billion.

But other countries are irate over the Federal Reserve’s plans to pump $600 billion into the sluggish American economy. They see that move as a reckless and selfish scheme to flood markets with dollars, driving down the value of the U.S. currency and giving American exporters an advantage.

Richard Portes, president of the Center for Economic Policy Research in London, said the dim prospect for a substantive agreement “is very dangerous for the world economy.”

Portes said he fears “the possibility that currency wars and global imbalances might lead to severe trade protectionism over the next year or so.”

For now, the G-20 countries are expected to agree on noncontroversial issues, like an anti-corruption initiative and the need for oversight by the International Monetary Fund.

But they’re finding no common ground on the most vexing problem: how to address a global economy that’s long been nourished by huge U.S. trade deficits with China, Germany and Japan.

Exports to the United States powered those countries’ economies for years. But they’ve also produced enormous trade gaps for the U.S. because Americans consume far more in foreign goods and services than they sell abroad.

President Barack Obama told fellow leaders that the U.S. cannot just keep borrowing lavishly and sending its money overseas. It needs other countries to buy more exports from the United States and elsewhere so Americans can afford to buy other countries’ goods, he said.

“The most important thing that the United States can do for the world economy is to grow, because we continue to be the world’s largest market and a huge engine for all other countries to grow,” Obama said at a news conference in Seoul.

But Brazil’s president, Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, warned that the world would go “bankrupt” if rich countries reduced their consumption and tried to export their way to prosperity.

“There would be no one to buy,” he told reporters.

A failure to agree on currency and trade in Seoul could intensify countries’ efforts to rig their currencies to gain an advantage. A full-blown trade war could lead countries to erect punitive barriers to imports — a replay of what happened in the 1930s. A law the United States passed in 1930 that raised tariffs on imports is widely thought to have deepened the Great Depression by stifling trade.

The U.S. Congress “wants to see some blood... wants a bit of a spat with China on currency wars,” contends

Colonoscopy a timely procedure for man in his 50s

DEAR DR. GOTT: I just turned 50, and my doctor keeps talking about ordering a colonoscopy for me. I'm not sure I want to undergo one and haven't even asked what one entails. Can you enlighten me?

DEAR READER: This is a simple same-day procedure, meaning that you will enter the hospital in the morning, have the procedure performed, and be discharged a short time after the sedative wears off.

Colonoscopy is preceded by a preparation that will be explained by someone from your doctor's office. You will be given a solution to drink that will remove all solids from your digestive tract. Following that, you will be restricted to drinking liquids such as clear soup broth, fruit juice, ginger ale or tea the day before. You can work or function as you would ordinarily but will find yourself spending a fair amount of time in the bathroom.

After you check in at the hospital, you will receive a sedative through an IV tube to help you relax. Once in the operating room, your doctor will insert a flexible tube with a camera known as a colonoscope into your rectum. Air will inflate the colon as the colonoscope advances. Images from the camera will be sent to a computer monitor that he or she watches throughout the procedure. If polyps or unusual tissue are noted, small tools can pass through the scope to remove the questionable material so the tissue can be biopsied. The whole process usually takes an hour or less. You will then be taken to the recovery room, and once the sedative wears off, will likely be free to go home. Because of the sedative, it will be necessary to have a ride home. Some patients experience temporary gas and bloating following colonoscopy because of the air introduced into the rectum, but

This is normal. Your physician will advise you to report to him or her if pain, bleeding, fever or other symptoms occur.

At your next appointment or through a telephone conversation from your physician, you will be advised of the results. If all is well, you will likely be cleared from further testing for five to 10 years.

Colonoscopy can be a lifesaver. It can detect cancer in its early stages, and any lesions can be removed early. Because of your age, your physician is timely with his recommendation. While the procedure may be mentally daunting, it can save years of treatment when cancer is detected early.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there some difference in the throat, mouth or salivary glands of a man from a woman that makes it necessary for them to always spit? You don't see most women doing this.

DEAR READER: Not to my knowledge. There are some traits men (and women) have that are rather unattractive, and spitting is one of them, particularly for men. I can understand that if a man chews tobacco, he might have an increased urge to spit.

Belching, chewing food with your mouth open, scratching and tooting are but a few of the more mild things one should never do when not alone.

Fredrick K. Danner

BOURNEMOUTH, England — Fredrick Kim Danner, age 57, of Bournemouth, England, passed away Sunday, Oct. 31, 2010, at the Royal Bournemouth Hospital.

Fred was born Dec. 7, 1952, in Pomona, Calif., the second of six children born to Donald B. and Della R. Danner. He attended elementary school in Hinkley, Calif., high school in Barstow, Calif., and Kubasaki High School in Okinawa, Japan. He then continued his education at Ricks College in Rexburg and BYU in Provo, Utah.

Fred had a real zest for life and was totally committed and very professional in everything he undertook. He had a high energy level and a natural talent to learn and produce. His life was filled with many interesting experiences and accomplishments such as 4-H Club awards, high school tennis team, student teacher program while in high school, high school graduation at Kubasaki High School in Okinawa, Japan; LDS Church mission in the Ohio-West Virginia Mission from 1972 to 1974, honors and scholarships while attending Ricks College from 1970 to 1972, and BYU from 1975 to 1977, a BA degree with a major in early education and a minor in botany and several International Folk dance teams while at BYU.

Fred was a part of the dance production, "Christmas Around the World." During a summer semester at BYU, he participated in the "Survival Program," where he lived totally off the land and used his survival skills for four weeks in the desert and mountains of southern Utah. One semester was spent in the International Study Abroad program in Israel. Fred lived and worked in Israel for one year. He sang in the choir at BYU and was able to sing in one of the LDS Church's General Conference sessions. He played the accordion, piano and harp. He spoke, wrote and read in Hebrew and took several trips back to Israel throughout his life with his last trip being in 2007. Additionally, he enjoyed stone sculpturing, coin collecting (with a special interest in ancient Roman and Greek coins), kayaking, attending opera performances and classical concerts, traveling, and learning and understanding different languages.

He wrote several books for youth between the ages of 10 and 14, and had several short stories published in England. He won a short story contest in England for a story he wrote of a brother and sister who went on holiday to the sea and met a mermaid. It was read on an English children's program. Fred was a program and movie critic on the BBC. In 1987, Fred had a career opportunity to go to southern England for what was supposed to be a few years, but it turned out to be where he would make his home for the last 25 years of his life. He worked for the European community college system and was instrumental in helping develop and set what they call "open learning." In America, we call it online classes. He traveled a lot in Europe and received many awards for his part in making this such a successful part of the education system.

During his time in England, Fred had the opportunity to meet and establish a number of wonderful friendships. Many of these people were his family away from home. Hazel Allen, a nurse practitioner, helped Fred navigate the English medical system. Chrissie Pollard introduced him on her BBC program and expanded his social life. Pat and Roy Perry were wonderful neighbors. However, it was Jason Ford who became the compassionate caregiver and constant companion during Fred's illness. Without the help and support of Jason, Fred would not have survived as long as he did. Our family is eternally grateful for the commitment, dedication, love and support we have all received from this good man. Fred arrived in England with two suitcases and no friends. With his passing, more than 100 cards from around the world have been received at his English home.

Fred was preceded in death by his mother, Della Rea Smith Danner; his paternal grandparents, Heber and Ellen Danner; and his maternal grandparents, Eldoras "Doc" and Lema Smith. He is survived by his father and stepmother, Donald B. and Sally Danner; and his siblings, Donald K. (Christy) Danner and Joann Murphy, all of Provo, Utah, Theresa M. (Vincent) Vella of San Diego, Calif., Karen L. (Danny) Loveless of Provo, Utah, and Katherine E. (Todd) Adams of Albion.

The funeral will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13, at the Albion LDS Church, 889 S. Main St. in Albion, with Bishop Randy Brackenbury officiating. Burial will be in the Mormon Cemetery.

Friends may call at the church from noon until 1:15 p.m. Saturday prior to the service.

Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St., Burley, ID 83318.

Mildred (Millie) Killian Jervik

SEAL BEACH, Calif. — Mildred (Millie) Killian Jervik, 90 years old, died of natural causes Tuesday, Nov. 9, 2010.

Millie was a very loving and caring mother with many friends. She was born the first of six children to William (Bill) Arnold Killian and Mabel Betty Killian in Goshen, Idaho, on July 26, 1920.

Millie was raised on a farm and attended elementary school in Shelley, Idaho. She started working full time as a cook and housekeeper at the age of 16 on a ranch near Shelley in 1937. The ranch is where Millie met a farm hand named Leonard Bjarne Jervik. Leonard was working his way from South Dakota to Seattle, Wash., to start a life at sea as a fisherman, but Millie proved to be the life-long match that he would not leave. Leonard and Millie married on Nov. 23, 1938.

Leonard and Millie had three children while living and working in Shelley. Marolyn (born June 4, 1939), Larry (born April 18, 1941) and Leland (born April 18, 1942). In 1944, they moved to Gooding, Idaho, where they farmed and ranched in the area until 1961. While in Gooding, they had two more sons, Lynn (born Sept. 25, 1945) and Lamar (born Feb. 7, 1953).

In 1962, Leonard and Millie embarked on a different way of life as owner operators of businesses that included a cafe/restaurant, truck and bus stop, motel, service station and trailer court in Gooding and Bliss, Idaho.

In 1972, Leonard and Millie moved to Southern California, where they managed apartment complexes and later Millie worked at Knott's Berry Farm as manager of the famous Basket Shop. In 1983, Leonard and Millie retired and moved to Modesto, Calif., to be near daughter, Marolyn and son-in-law, Carroll. Restless retirement led them to continue part-time work as office managers for Darryl's Mini Storage in Modesto for nearly 12 years.

After Leonard's death in 1995, Millie moved back to Southern California (Leisure World Seal Beach) to be close to her children and grandchildren, where she remained until her death.

Millie was preceded in death by her husband, Leonard; sons Larry and Leland; and grandson, Dusty. She is survived by three children, Marolyn (Salome, Ariz.), Lynn (Redondo Beach, Calif.) and Lamar (Huntington Beach, Calif.); two sisters, Billie Louise Ellsworth (Basalt, Idaho) and Nadine Watson (Blackfoot, Idaho); 10 grandchildren; 13 great-grandchildren; and three great-great-grandchildren.

Millie's final resting place will be next to her husband at Lands Lutheran Church in Hudson, S.D. Services are being planned for Southern California and South Dakota.

De Laurentiis, last of the movie moguls, dies

NEW YORK (AP) — He was a small man who dreamed big, hit the highest heights and failed like few others.

Dino De Laurentiis was born to be a movie producer. The Academy Award-winning legend of the Italian New Wave and producer of "Serpico" and "Barbarella" who helped revolutionize the way movies are bankrolled and helped personify the no-limits life of a cinematic king, died Wednesday night at the age of 91 in Beverly Hills.

His dozens of credits included the art-house classics "La Strada" and "Nights of Cabiria," the cult favorite "Blue Velvet," the Hollywood epics "War and Peace" and "The Bible," and such mainstream hits as "Three Days of the Condor." He backed horror films ("Halloween 2"), police drama ("Serpico") and the most far-out science fiction fused with sex and sexuality ("Barbarella").

And when he bombed, he really bombed: "Dune," about which director David Lynch complained he was denied creative control; the Madonna vehicle "Body of Evidence"; the 1976 remake of "King, Kong," which nearly finished off the career of Jessica Lange before it really started.

Not all his movies had big budgets, but De Laurentiis didn't think a film was real without real money. "Night of Earth" director Jim Jarmusch has spoken of meeting with the producer at his office, where De Laurentiis' desk was big as Jarmusch's apartment. He spoke to Jarmusch about the director's low-cost productions.

"He asked me, 'Why do you make amateur films instead of professional ones?'" Jarmusch once recalled. "I asked what made a film amateur or professional. He said any film that costs more than $5 million is professional."

'Nightmare' cruise ends amid cheers

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — They can call it a nightmare. A cruise from hell. Even a Spamcation.

Whatever they label it, the grueling three-day journey of the crippled Carnival Splendor is over, and the nearly 4,500 passengers and crew members can forget about the backed-up toilets, the darkened, stuffy cabins and the canned meat.

"I love being back on land," said passenger Ken King, 42, of Los Angeles.

As the ship docked on Thursday, people who had gathered on the decks and about 100 waiting onshore cheered loudly. Along the harbor, tourists, joggers and fishermen stopped to snap photos.

Passengers snapped up $20 T-shirts being sold on land with the phrase: "I survived the 2010 Carnival cruise Spamcation."

An engine fire aboard the 952-foot cruise liner on Monday morning knocked out power early in its seven-day trip to the Mexican

Riviera, setting the ship adrift about 200 miles outside San Diego and 44 miles off the coast of Mexico.

No one was hurt, but passengers said they were jolted awake by the fire. Few of them panicked.

Smoke filled hallways toward the back of the ship, and a smoky odor reached the front cabins. Carnival said a crankcase split on one of the ship's six diesel engines, causing the fire.

"It felt like an earthquake and sounded like a jackhammer," said Amber Haslerud, 27, of Chula Vista.

Sabrina Klinge, right, a passenger on the Carnival Splendor cruise ship who was on her honeymoon, leaves the ship terminal in San Diego, Calif., Thursday.

The captain immediately announced that there would be no need to abandon ship, said Amy Watts, 25, of Seattle. "You think about the Titanic," she said.

The fire left the ship without air conditioning, hot water or hot food. The casino was closed and, for a time, so were the bars. The swimming pool was off-limits because the pumps wouldn't work.

Navy helicopters flew in Spam, Pop Tarts and canned crab meat and other goods.

Passengers on lower decks had to climb as many as nine flights of stairs to get to the cafeteria only to meet long lines that stretched on for hours. By the time those at the end got to the food, they were left with tomatoes and lettuce, Haslerud said.

Ex-President Bush honors vets in Ohio

By Dan Sewell
Associated Press writer

DAYTON, Ohio — Former president George W. Bush said Thursday he's enjoying being away from politics and won't get involved in current debates about his successor or Washington.

"I will not be criticizing President (Barack) Obama," Bush told a Veterans Day tribute audience. "As a matter of fact, we wish him well. We're all Americans, and we want to succeed."

He said he didn't miss Washington, "all the politics, all the name calling ... the spitballs."

But he told some 1,500 people, many of them veterans, at the National Museum of the U.S. Air Force in southwest Ohio that he does miss serving as commander in chief.

With interviews and speeches, Bush has been vigorously promoting his newly released memoir "Decision Points." He focused his speech Thursday on parts of the book dealing with wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, and the support and inspiration he drew from wounded warriors, families of those killed during his presidency, and the military.

"America is a magnificent country that produces patriots," he said.

He offered thanks to those who have served in the military, "on behalf of a grateful nation," and smiled as he insisted: "I've really come to praise the veterans, not to sell my book. But if I sell a couple of copies, that's OK, too!"

Charlie Crall, a mailman from nearby Medway, Ohio, said he mainly just wanted to see Bush and hadn't planned to buy the book. But he said he has decided to buy it after hearing excerpts and seeing some of Bush's interviews.

"From what I'm hearing, he speaks candidly," said Crall, 55. "I think it will be good reading."

Bush was back in a state that was crucial to his presidency. He twice carried Ohio, which clinched his re-election in 2004.

Miami University political scientist Ryan Barilleaux says the book and the Republican rout in Nov. 2 elections should help Bush burnish his image two years after leaving office with low approval ratings.

"I will not be criticizing President Obama. As a matter of fact, we wish him well. We're all Americans, and we want to succeed."

— George W. Bush

AARP® Medicare Supplement Insurance + AARP Medicare Part D Insurance = More complete health coverage.

It's simple math. Together, both plans could protect you from out-of-pocket costs.

Having more complete health insurance coverage is vital. Medicare alone may not be enough. Medicare Parts A and B don't cover all of your medical expenses or the cost of most prescription drugs. Together, an AARP® Medicare Supplement Insurance Plan and an AARP® MedicareRx plan, both insured by UnitedHealthcare Insurance Company, may help provide a solution.

- AARP Medicare Supplement Insurance is offered in a variety of plans to help fit your needs. Medicare supplement plans help pay for some of the remaining out-of-pocket medical costs not paid for by Medicare.
- AARP MedicareRx Plans are prescription drug plans that provide coverage for the high cost of most prescription drugs (not paid for by Medicare Parts A and B).

Together, both plans help provide more complete health coverage.

Call today for more information or to reserve your seat at a local meeting where you could learn about an AARP Medicare Supplement Insurance Plan and an AARP MedicareRx prescription drug plan.

Acting and Attitude

Finding a 'Treasure Island' cast in a crowded room

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

From the moment children started arriving at Missoula Children's Theatre auditions on Monday, the directors were watching.

What were they looking for? MCT veteran Cameron Sheppard, 11, thought she knew.

"I think you gotta be really loud," said Sheppard, who has been in several MCT and school plays. "You've got to be able to act and put your whole heart and soul into it. Otherwise, it's not going to be a good play."

With 80 hopeful children in a room and only an hour and a half to make an impression, standing out is crucial. But as MCT traveling directors Caity Johnson and Katie Northcutt have learned, acting ability isn't everything.

Montana-based Missoula Children's Theatre stages plays across the U.S. and Canada. Traveling directors bring the scripts, costumes and props with them. Auditions are on Mondays, and by the end of the week, another community's children are ready to perform. This year's play, "Treasure Island," features 60 local children.

Before Monday's audition, Johnson and Northcutt kept an eye on the children as they walked into Canyon Crest Dining and Events Center. They watched how the kids interacted with each other.

"It starts immediately," Northcutt said in a Tuesday interview. Some distinct characters, like this year's pirates, require actors who are outgoing and funny.

"Sometimes, they really just stick out like that," Northcutt said.

The directors also look for teenagers who have a good attitude and are good with little kids for roles like Mother Hawkins and Jim Hawkins.

"You want to make sure they can be a good role model and a good leader for those kids," Johnson said.

Monday afternoon, Stephen Gomez, 8, and his sister Abbey, 5, waited with their dad. Stephen had been in MCT plays before, while this was Abbey's first time.

"It's just fun," Stephen said. "I just like doing it. Now that Abbey is old enough, she wanted to give it a shot, their dad said.

At 4 p.m., Northcutt and Johnson gathered the group and explained what they were looking for: loud and clear voices, expressive faces and bodies, the ability to listen and follow directions. The third is the most important — it doesn't matter if a child is a great actor if he or she doesn't pay attention. Even as they spoke, they watched the kids. Who was eager? Who whispered to a neighbor? Who rolled their eyes?

"If a kid has a bad attitude, it affects everyone so much," Johnson said.

The directors then told the children to arrange themselves in a rectangle from

RING IN THE HOLIDAYS

Magic Valley Symphony features handbells in Christmas concert

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

You might be thinking the middle of November is too soon for a Christmas concert. Well, Magic Valley Symphony conductor Ted Hadley is planning ahead.

"I want to get it in people's ears before they get sick of it in the stores," he said. "Holiday music has a feel and sound that no other genre really has, a special sound that goes really well with the spirit of the season."

Tuesday's concert will feature the "Nutcracker Suite" by Tchaikovsky, "Sound the Bell" by John Williams, "Stille Nacht" (Silent Night) by Mannheim Steamroller and a medley of Christmas tunes that features jazzy arrangements.

The 11-member handbell choir, with each person playing three to four bells apiece, features nine symphony musicians and is directed by Diane Davis, adjunct music professor at College of Southern Idaho. She has offered handbell choir as a college music class for several semesters — and hopes the concert will ring up some interest in the community for future handbell classes.

Student theater served with a side of dessert

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

With expedition hat and clipboard, Austin Murray drags a wooden chair to the middle of room D5 inside Twin Falls High School. Murray rests his loafer-clad foot authoritatively on the wooden seat, like a mountain climber reaching a peak, and sneers out from under his hat rim. Now in character, Murray gives his audience, fellow high school thespians, an “Introduction to the Deep South.”

The 16-year-old sophomore will present his original skit Tuesday and Thursday during the Twin Falls High drama department’s five-day Dessert Theater. It’s an opportunity for the public to enjoy works that students prepared for this weekend’s District IV high school theater competition.

Soon it becomes apparent Murray’s character is not an adventurer. “I’m known as a lot of things,” the character begins, with chuckle and deep Southern drawl. “Satan, the devil ... Beelzebub.”

That explains the (blasphemous) large golden cross around The Deceiver’s neck, and the clipboard: a list of newcomers into his lair. Some of the names (Hitler) aren’t a surprise, but Murray’s skit is well played. Divorced regular folks to Tiger Woods are cast into the pit and, in keeping with current events, Brett Farve (being scrutinized for allegedly sending pictures of his you-know-what) is in close company. Atheists and agnostics are ordered into a group as well. But Gandhi in hell? Probably not, Murray says, but the addition adds macabre laughs.

“I wanted to put someone who obviously doesn’t belong there into it,” Murray said later. “The whole idea was to look at hell and get people thinking, ‘What if this is what it’s really like?’” Inspiration for his skit and character came from one of his favorite movies, “Addams Family Values,” the 1993 sequel to the 1991 comedy “The Addams Family.”

Twin Falls High School drama student Austin Murray, 16, rehearses his humorous original act ‘Introduction to the Deep South.’ Murray’s delightfully wry monologue portrays the devil as a camp director introducing new residents of hell — including a few people ‘who obviously don’t belong there,’ Murray says.

“In the movie the siblings are sent to summer camp, and I thought the camp director was a good fit to base the devil’s character on,” Murray said. “When you think of what the devil is believed to be, this is completely opposite and it’s funny.”

The skit is well researched, too. Murray studied the names Satan has been given over the years and by different cultures and what earthly deeds are condemned. “I had no idea who Beelzebub was,” Murray said. Murray pokes at current news as well, such as noting America’s election of its first black president. Murray’s Satan ponders the thought aloud. Isn’t hell to freeze over when a black man wins the highest elected seat? That skit isn’t the only one dealing with adult themes, said drama teacher James Haycock, recommending children younger than 12 not attend. “Students have the freedom to choose scripts, and some deal in mature subjects — murder, incest and death — although none have uber-profane language,” Haycock said. “Art, theater often explore those depths in humanity.” Some skits are light-hearted, like “Bank Robbed,” a pantomime performed by Tyler Newbry and Danny Seastrom, which is also on the Tuesday/Thursday program. The short skit is set to hip spy-themed music, changing with the plot. The pair is still working out costumes but leaning toward one wearing all black, the other dressed in white.

“It’s kind of spy versus spy,” said Newbry, 17. “My character is going to rob a bank, but the teller doesn’t just hand over the money. He’s a superhero.” The struggle goes back and forth, each taking turns out-manuevering the other. Newbry’s facial expressions are delightfully over the top and well balanced by Seastrom’s courageous yet more cautious attempt at heroism. Ultimately, nether

“Bells are a fun way of learning how to read music; you don’t have to be a pianist who’s taken it for 10 years,” Davis said, though she has enjoyed teaching those who are already musicians. “It’s just a different instrument, and most musicians enjoy learning something new.”

In addition to conducting the symphony, Hadley is a handbell chorister.

“It’s really a precision kind of thing. You’re only responsible for a couple notes, and when (it is time for) your notes you have to come in right on,” he said. “The sound, of course, is magical.”

Hadley said that, aside from the “Nutcracker,” the style of many of the pieces in the program will be more modern. The Williams piece will be similar to music that composer recently wrote for the Olympics, while the medley arrangements will be in a

“It’s a really meaty piece, very familiar to everyone, but when we started practicing it, the familiarity didn’t necessarily translate into ease of putting it together, because there are all these parts that weave back and forth between the different instruments,” she said.

Janie Griff of Twin Falls, who plays oboe, agreed that the “Nutcracker” was more difficult than many of the

“Everything is going on back there,” she said. “I tallest to shortest. They ranged in age from 5 to 16, with tiny Joanne Lee standing next to tall James Adamson at the formation’s corner.

Then they ran the children through exercises: Say your name and age like you just won a billion dollars and are super happy, say your name and age like you’re really sad. As they went through the room, Northcutt and Johnson immediately began shifting children in the line. Some stayed in the same place, some changed only a few positions, and expressive 7-year-old JT Barry ended up with the teenagers.

Their methods were a mystery to the children and to the parents sitting on the room’s perimeter.

The lineup helps directors keep track of who is who, Northcutt and Johnson explained later. Although the kids have nametags, it can be difficult to keep them straight. While most kids and parents figure out why they’re switching the kids around, they can’t figure out which groups mean what.

That’s how the directors want it. No one wants the kids to think they’re being put in a group where no one is getting a part, Northcutt explained, so they mix it up a bit. And each directing team does it differently, so there’s no use trying to reason it out year to year.

To further test the kids’ acting abilities, the pair gave separate sections different lines to say, like “Oh no, we’re out of cookies!” and “I am the coolest person you will ever meet.” Most kids were expressive and comically melodramatic, while a few of the younger children were too shy to say the line aloud. Between tasks, Northcutt and Johnson gave the kids topics to discuss, like a favorite superhero, while the two quietly talked about their impressions of the children. Toward the end, they walked around the rectangle, writing down names of those who would get a part.

As they waited, 12-year-old Ethan Alexander wondered what part he would land.

“A big part, hopefully,” he said. He did pretty well, he thought, and had been in several MCT plays before.

Across the room, 14-year-old Andrew Cook was hoping he wouldn’t get a role at all. He had volunteered for an assistant director position, an alternative offered to kids who would rather help out behind the scenes.

“I don’t really like to be on the stage, but I like to help kids,” Cook said.

Next came the hard part: telling the children who would be in the play, and who would have to wait until next year. Before directors broke the news to the kids, they reiterated that not everyone would receive a role. But they shouldn’t take it personally, Northcutt said. Even she and Johnson don’t get into every part they want.

Later, Johnson and

Northcutt said this was one of the hardest auditions they’ve ever faced. There were far more talented kids than there were parts, so deciding was excruciating.

“I wish that we had room for 80 kids,” Johnson said.

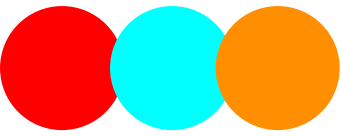

“They would have all been in the show,” Northcutt added. “Every single one of them.”

‘Boy Gets Girl’ gets intense

OutCast Theater’s first play explores stalking

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

They’re jumping right in. Magic Valley’s new OutCast Theater is debuting its first production, “Boy Gets Girl,” next week. The mature, powerful play isn’t for the faint of heart, but the cast hopes its important message surpasses the adult themes.

“Boy Gets Girl,” a 2000 play by Rebecca Gilman, explores the effects of stalking. To get a feel for their characters, the actors studied stalking and spoke to Patty Clark at Crisis Center of Magic Valley. Tim Yenne, who plays the blind-date-gone-bad character Tony, spoke to friends who are studying psychology at College of Southern Idaho and read the FBI’s website to learn how a stalker behaves. He learned he fits the profile of a stalker: white male, between the ages of 25 and 40, high school dropout who got his GED later.

A last-minute cast shake-up threw Yenne and fellow actor Jo Stevenson into roles when they hadn’t been affiliated with the play before. At Monday’s rehearsal, Yenne studied his lines before his scenes and brought his notebook on stage with him. Already, though, he brought depths of creepiness to his character.

Adding to the play’s intensity is the untraditional space. Instead of performing in a theater, the cast is using a vacant property on Main Avenue. The long room is split lengthwise, with half the room serving as the stage and half seating the audience in four rows. The intimate setting makes the suspense more real; those viewing the play feel the creepy

Jennifer Miller, as Theresa Bedell, lets Tim Yenne, as Tony, know that she is not interested in dating him during their rehearsal for ‘Boy Gets Girl’ Monday night in Twin Falls. The show is about a woman being stalked, and it opens Thursday in downtown’s Rogerson Mall.

Superb acting by both Yenne and Jennifer Miller, who plays literary magazine writer Theresa Bedell, lend to the experience as well. Yenne is a stand-up comedian known in theater circles for his humor. His nice-guy attitude makes the character even more believable, said director AJ

Hoffman. In the first scene, when Theresa and Tony meet on a blind date, Theresa comes off as cold, while Tony seems friendly — if not awkward and bumbling. But over the next few days, as Theresa makes it clear she is not interested, Tony becomes increasingly aggressive and threatening in his pursuit. Throughout

GET INVOLVED

OutCast Theater is searching for managers, cast members and musicians for its February performance of “I Love You, You’re Perfect, Now Change.” These volunteer positions are available: Stage manager, sets manager, props manager, piano player, violin player and a cast of two men and two women.

Information: AJ Hoffman, 404-6152 or ajhoffman0731@gmail.com.

the play, though, other characters blame Theresa for Tony’s actions, or don’t believe it can be that bad.

Part of the problem, Hoffman and Miller said, is that women are trained to be polite and complacent, even when they aren’t comfortable.

“A man can draw a line and be respected,” Hoffman said. “A woman draws a line and she’s a bitch.”

But being unpleasant to someone you don’t like is preferable to putting yourself in danger, Miller and Hoffman said.

results of stalking,” Hoffman said.

Because of the language and story content, Hoffman made it clear the play is for mature audiences. Choosing an adult play is a risk, she acknowledged, but she and the cast feel strongly about its message.

“In this area, a lot of shows are very straight-laced,” Hoffman said. But keeping the edge is important to this story. Without the well-placed f-bombs, Yenne said, many lines lose their impact.

“Do we clean it up to appeal to more audiences, or do we tell the truth?” Hoffman said.

Invited to an island getaway, guests find themselves sharing their darkest secrets as the noose tightens in on each, in the Agatha Christie murder mystery 'And Then There Were None.'

Ketchum troupe starts two-week run of Christie mystery

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — It seems like a delightful invitation: to spend a few days of vacation on an island off the coast of southern England.

Until a voice suddenly interrupts dinner, accusing each of the guests of murder.

Soon the guests find themselves sharing their deepest, darkest secrets to complete strangers as the noose tightens in on each.

Agatha Christie's engrossing murder mystery "And Then There Were None" has become the world's best-selling mystery as readers endeavor to figure out who will be left standing on an island where guests are being killed off one by one.

And it's equally entertaining on stage, said Ben Schepps.

Schepps will play William Blore, a retired police inspector who wonders if he might be the target of a murderer, in Laughing Stock Theatre's production of "And Then There Were None." The play begins tonight for a two-week run at the nexStage Theatre in Ketchum.

"It's a brain teaser," said Page Klune, who will play Emily Brent, an elderly spinster and religious zealot. "Agatha Christie is very convoluted in presenting many characters and scenarios, so it's hard to figure out who dunit. You really have to pay attention."

Director Jamey Reynolds, a former theater professor, chose to stage the play because the characters are exciting for actors to do.

"The suspense is terrific — a lot of horror movies, like 'Halloween' and Freddy Krueger, have used this for inspiration," he said. "And this particular play is fun because the audience thinks they're getting a clue only to find out it's not what they think at all."

In addition to Klune and Schepps, the play features Doug Neff, Patty Parsons, Rick Hoffman, Claire Cassano, Ed Clark, Mac Harbaugh, Bill Nagel and Dean Cerutti.

EUROPEAN-NORTHWEST JAZZ:

a duo's distinctly modern sound

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Twin Falls' jazz scene is set to fire up Wednesday, as the College of Southern Idaho Jazz Club welcomes a trio of white-hot jazz musicians.

Pianist Michal Vanoucek is winner of the 2008 Deloitte Jazz Award for best musician. Chad McCullough, trumpeter and composer, has tread the Seattle jazz scene for more than a decade. Seattle-based drummer Matt Jorgensen plays with the rock-tinged 451 and hard-bop ensemble Radio Action.

They'll be joined by CSI faculty members Brent Jensen on saxophone and Adam Crofts on bass for a Wednesday-night concert.

Slovakian-born Vanoucek calls his jazz a "very, very open and eclectic style," a reflection of his mixed musical background. He was classically trained on piano and cello as a child, later studying orchestra conducting at the Conservatory of Zilina and later Bratislava, graduating in 1998.

He majored in jazz piano at the Royal Conservatory of The Hague, and his work, as both pianist and conductor, includes musicals such as the German productions of "The King and I" "Mahalia" and "Kiss Me Kate." Dutch productions include "Aida," "Lion King" and "Les Miserables."

Recently, McCullough and Vanoucek, who lives in Holland, collaborated on the 2010 release of "The Sky Cries." The album was produced by Origin Records, and Jorgensen is featured on drums.

Wednesday's set won't contain just tracks from the album, but the musicians are sure to share a couple of its tunes, most likely its opening track, "Where the Sky Cries," and "Krasna." Both illustrate how well Vanoucek's European influences blend seamlessly into McCullough's Northwest sound to create distinctly unique, modern jazz.

Although the pair met at the Banff Centre, Creative Music Workshop in Canada in 2009, their sound suggests years of intimacy. Sometimes, people just click. The pair's music is evidence their meeting "was meant to be," McCullough said.

"We were in tuned so instantly," McCullough said. "Sometimes you just know right away whether you're going to be able to play and make it work. When we started playing I thought, 'Hey, he's really listening to me! We understood and could communicate musically very easily. It's a lot of fun playing together!"

Although Vanoucek spends much time abroad, the pair is able to play together enough to make it work. All three musicians participated in Seattle's annual Earshot Jazz Festival, which wrapped up Sunday.

The trio was lured to Twin Falls by Jensen, director of jazz and woodwind studies at CSI. Jensen's debut on Origin, his 2002 "The Sound of a Dry Martini: Remembering Paul Desmond," charted on the National Jazz Top 50 for more than 13 weeks that spring.

That project was one of McCullough's firsts with Origin, where he continues to work.

Crofts, who teaches Spanish at the college, said working with musicians of this trio's caliber is a chance for his own musical wings to spread.

"Theirs is a higher level of jazz," Crofts said. "I look forward to playing because it pushes me into directions I wouldn't normally go. Getting to improvise gets me out of my comfort zone. I think I'm much more uninhibited because of gigs like this one."

Vanoucek isn't worried about sharing the stage with musicians he's never met.

"My approach is the same, whether I'm playing with someone I have history with or someone I'm just meeting. I just open up, talk with them, talk about the music and try to get in touch with them, exchange opinions. You never know what will happen when you start playing ... and it takes everyone to listen, pay attention to the music and the attitudes to make it work," Vanoucek said. "For me, my preference is attitude versus the style of music. If they're giving their all, then attitude transcends judgment and creates accessibility. That is the best accomplishment."

Whiting began acquiring paintings each year to hang in the small country school in 1933 with the help of Olaf Moller, an artist from Heyburn who achieved nationwide fame. Moller urged fellow artists to contribute to the collection each year. Heyburn students got involved with a queen contest that included voting on their favorite painting. Donations from the class went toward purchase of the painting that got the most votes. Annual exhibits drew an estimated 10,000 viewers in 1948 and 12,000 in 1949. In 1952, the tradition ended and the collection of 51 paintings stayed in the school. The collection was donated to the Herrett Center this spring. With 'Cosmic' project, consider your place in the universe

A new multidisciplinary project at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts explores humans' relationship to the stars, and how it has shifted as knowledge of the universe has grown. The project features visual arts exhibitions in Ketchum and Hailey, a lecture by the director of the Hayden Planetarium and classes and workshops.

"In the past, the appearance of comets, eclipses and particular stars triggered awe and anxiety and gave rise to religious beliefs and myths," the center's Courtney Gilbert said in a press release. "Today we have enormous telescopes and satellites, and yet there are still so many unanswered questions."

Gilbert selected work by six artists for the Ketchum exhibition, "Cosmic: Artists Consider Astronomy," which opens with a reception at 5:30 p.m. today. Artist Charles Lindsay, who is using technology to transform the center's project room into an alternate universe, will speak about his work at 6 p.m.

"It's a complete immersion experience that combines photography, video and sound and grows out of the idea that so much of our expanding scientific knowledge is based on images beyond our normal scope of vision — things that are either too immense to be seen or too microscopic," Gilbert said.

Lindsay received a 2010 Guggenheim Fellowship for his work with a camera-less process he calls CARBON, which utilizes a carbon emulsion on a transparent base. (For a taste, visit www.charleslindsay.com.)

The five other artists:

- Anna Von Mertens' hand-dyed cotton quilts chart the rotation of stars at particular moments in history.

- Matthew Cusick's paintings explore the intersections between history, capitalism, war and religion. A recent series of paintings, "Constellations," charts the night skies on top of collaged pages of illustrated Bibles, their images of suffering and epic battles subtly visible under sumi ink.

- Russell Crotty makes ink drawings of the night skies based on his observations as an amateur astronomer. He often draws on globes, creating small models of the universe.

- Painters Lee Mullican and Gordon Onslow Ford were two founders of the Dynaton group in San Francisco in the 1950s. Mullican's highly textured paintings depict his interpretations of the cosmos and convey his interest in spiritual and metaphysical possibilities. Onslow Ford, a participant in Andre Breton's surrealist group in Paris in the 1930s, spent much of his career painting the cosmos in a desire to link outer space to what he referred to as the "inner worlds."

The center is offering free exhibition tours at 5:30 p.m. Dec. 16 and 2 p.m. Dec. 28. The gallery will also be open late for Gallery Walk on Nov. 26 and Dec. 29.

A related exhibition in Hailey, "Astronomical: An Installation by Jennifer Wood," will be on view Nov.

19 through Jan. 14, using materials as varied as light, Swarovski crystals and pinhole light drawings.

For details on related programs and to purchase tickets or register for classes, visit www.sunvalleycenter.org or call 726-9491, ext. 10. The lineup:

- Lecture: Neil deGrasse Tyson, director of New York's Hayden Planetarium; 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Church of the Big Wood, Ketchum; $25 for Sun Valley Center members and $35 for others.

- Teen workshop: noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, The Center, Hailey; $10, registration required. Teens will learn stories behind the constellations Orion and Corona Borealis and make pinhole drawings and an "astro-scope" to view them through with Boise artist and graphic design professor Jennifer Wood.

- Adult class: "Star Gazing" with Chris

Anderson; 6-8 p.m. Dec. 9, The Center, Hailey; $20 for members and $25 for others, registration required.

Anderson, production specialist for College of Southern Idaho's Faulkner Planetarium, will orient participants to the night sky and then escort them outdoors for guided star gazing.

- Family Day: 3-5 p.m. Dec. 4, The Center, Hailey; free drop-in activity. Families will tour the exhibition "Astronomical" and learn about the Greek myths behind constellations in the show. Children can create their own constellations, with stories and legends they make up.

CSI men outpoint talented Westwind

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

With Westwind Prep's talented trio in fine form, College of Southern Idaho men's basketball coach Steve Gosar implored his team to "play smarter, not harder."

It made all the difference as the Golden Eagles controlled the second half in a 109-95 win in their home opener as part of the Gordon Paving/Gold's Gym Invitational.

"We went from giving them easy buckets to making them score over us and through us," said Gosar, whose team moved to 3-0.

Westwind point guard Kiwi Gardner and forwards John Green and George Matthews lit it up in the fast-paced first half as the Warriors built a large lead of nine at 47-38.

"They're a talented group," said Gosar.

But the trio got little help and ran out of gas in the second half as CSI outscored the visitors 54-39 after the break.

"We just got back on defense," said guard Jerrold Brooks, who scored 16 of his 18 points in the first half to keep CSI in striking distance. Brooks said CSI's 10-man rotation "was really big" in outlasting the Warriors.

After closing to within 56-55 at halftime, CSI grabbed a 10-point lead at 77-67 and held off the visitors from there.

Sophomore guard Pierre Jackson missed his first seven shots, but ended with a game-high 22 points and nine assists in his duel with Gardner, who tallied 25 points and 15 assists, but had 12 turnovers.

Of his slow start, Jackson said "I just had to get comfortable."

He certainly looked that way in the final 20 minutes, dishing out some beautiful assists and hitting several key baskets. Sophomore post Kenny Buckner also came up big after intermission and finished with 17 points and 16 boards. CSI had six players in double figures with Mitch Bruneel coming off the bench for 15, while Gerson Santo had 11 and Fabyon Harris 10.

Green finished with 26 points and 10 boards for Westwind. Matthews hit 5 of 11 treys on his way to 21 points.

"Those guys are good. That's why I've been so worried about this game all week," said Gosar.

Confident Bulldogs aim to topple Snake River

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

The Kimberly high school football team has had a flair for the dramatic in these Class 3A state playoffs.

A 21-point rally fourth-quarter rally for a one-point win over Parma in the first round, coupled with a two-point win last week over South Fremont, leaves the Bulldogs high on confidence.

"We just never give up. Nobody wants to lose. Even when we're behind, we know we can win. We can score at anytime," said Kimberly running back Clay Matthews.

Kimberly (8-2) faces its toughest yet at 8:45 p.m. today against Snake River (7-3), which upset Sugar Salem 14-12 last week.

The Panthers displayed some late-game heroics of their own, stuffing Sugar Salem at the goal line on the Diggers' 2-point conversion attempt which would have tied the game with two minutes remaining.

Vandals face tall task against Broncos

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Reporters from all over the state this week asked Idaho players and coaches variations of the same question: What's it going to take to finally bring down one of the nation's most consistent programs?

For the Vandals, the answer begins with something that's been painfully absent against elite competition all season.

"Execute well," said quarterback Nate Enderle, relating one of his keys for today's showdown with BSU (7 p.m. MST, ESPN2) at the Kibbie Dome.

"We need to play, I'm not going to say flawless or mistake-free, but we really need to minimize those big errors — turnovers, blown coverages," he said. "It just can't happen against a

40th meeting could be last for BSU, Idaho

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Tonight in the Kibbie Dome, Boise State and Idaho will conclude their rivalry with the 40th meeting between the two schools — but will anyone care if the matchup isn't resumed?

Boise State has beaten Idaho so badly in recent years that the Broncos' head coach explained one of the main reasons the Vandals were being dropped from the schedule —for now — was that Idaho weakened their schedule strength.

"There is probably no hotter topic around here than our schedule and (BSU Athletic Director) Gene (Bleymaier) is trying to make it as good as we can and figure out how Idaho fits in," Petersen said on Monday. "But I've got to suspect that they're going to be back on the schedule at

Defense leads Carey to win

By Ryan Howe

POCATELLO — Castleford's defense was good. Carey's was great.

If defense wins championships, Carey's resume is flawless as the Panthers will make their fourth state title game appearance in five years after defeating Castleford 20-6 Thursday in the Class 1A Division II state semifinals at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

"I feel overwhelmed by the great success we're having at Carey," said Panthers coach Lane

Kirkland. "I can't put words to it, other than it's so much fun and we're so lucky. We've worked hard for this, and these guys have been so determined to get back and to bring home the state championship."

Carey's defense (10-1) stuffed Castleford's heralded rushing attack to just 46 yards, held the Wolves 47 points below their season scoring average and handed Castleford (10-1) its first loss of the season.

Hagerman loses heartbreaker

Grace uses speed to defeat Pirates

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — Hagerman and Grace might as well have put on track spikes.

On the artificial turf at Holt Arena, these two teams put on a speed clinic. Grace will take that speed to the Class 1A Division I state championship game next week as the Grizzlies beat Hagerman 30-22 Thursday night.

That speed was no more evident after a Hagerman stalled drive in the third quarter.

The Pirates drove down to the Grace 45-yard line, but were stuffed and forced to punt. They boomed a great punt, pinning the Grizzlies at the 10-yard line.

But it was no big deal for quarterback Josh Jensen as he found receiver Chase Ackerman streaking down the sideline for the 90-yard score to put the Grizzlies up for good, 22-14. Running back Trevor Simonson added a 65-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter to pad the lead.

Hagerman wasn't done however. Freshman Kade Kress returned the ensuing kickoff to the Grace 35-yard

Kress on fourth-and-four for the 23-yard strike.

The comeback was short-lived as Grace never gave the ball back after the kickoff, bleeding the final 4:56 off the clock.

The Grizzlies move on to the championship game next Friday at the Kibbie Dome in Moscow, where they'll play either Troy or Prairie.

Hagerman takes home the third-place trophy.

The Pirates jumped out to a 14-0 lead.

Reid wasted no time to get the Pirates on the board early. The senior quarterback ripped off a 60-yard run down the sideline on the Pirates' second play from scrimmage to give Hagerman the 6-0 lead.

The Pirates struck again on their next drive on an innocent-looking 2-yard receiver screen to Kress, who turned that into a 51-yard touchdown as he shook defenders left and right and turned on the after-burners down the sideline.

Grace answered in the second quarter with a 32-yard pass from Jensen to a streaking Ackerman.

Hagerman went into half-time with the 14-8 lead.

Grace tied the game early in the third quarter on a Kendal Britton 8-yard run.

CSI's Everett inks with Utah St.

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

When Alyssa Everett was coming out of high school, Utah State's assessment was that she hadn't yet developed into a NCAA Division I-caliber volleyball player.

After the College of Southern Idaho schooled the Aggies in a spring tournament a year later, USU immediately declared its interest.

Everett heralded the end to her CSI career by opening a new chapter Thursday, signing a National Letter of Intent to join Utah State's rising volleyball program.

She'll join the program for the spring semester upon graduating from CSI in December.

"I'm just excited to have crossed all my Ts and dotted all my Is, so everything's good to go," Everett said of signing on the second day of the eight-day early signing period. "It's going to make things easier to get there early, and know some faces rather than having to make 12 new friends.

One of the reasons I'm going early is so I can get a jump on the system and have a semester in the program."

the right side, Everett was third in Scenic West Athletic Conference play with a .318 hitting percentage and eighth in blocks.

Her versatility lends itself to productivity, even if the Aggies will likely slot her right back into the middle. They lose two middles from this season's squad, allowing Everett to step in as a junior to go with a redshirt sophomore and true freshman in competing for middle spots.

"I'm excited for Alyssa, and I think it's a really great fit," said CSI coach Heidi and we've heard a lot of things about them. We worked hard on our pass D and run D and we just go hard every play," said Carey senior Caleb Cenarrusa.

It all started with Carey's defensive line, which contained the run and got pressure on Castleford's quarterbacks, led by Glen Andrews' two sacks.

"We thought we'd be OK off the guards and just play power football, but they were on top of the ball so fast we couldn't get anything going," said Castleford coach Tracy Vulgamore. "They beat us to everything. They were faster in every single aspect. We were just a step behind all night long."

One of the top rushers in the state, Castleford's Cody Quinn was held to 28 yards on 15 carries.

"We just weren't doing the little things that we've been doing all season," said Castleford quarterback Kale Weekes, who had 77 yards passing. "They're a good team. It was a hard-fought battle. I think it was two evenly-matched teams, they just did what they had to do to win. They executed more than us."

Offensively, Carey didn't put up the type of numbers it's used to, either. Instead, the Panthers controlled the clock with 182 yards rushing, led by Tim Hoopes' 90 yards on 19 carries and two touchdowns. Hoopes also had 54 yards receiving, while Cenarrusa added 67 yards passing and 35 rushing.

"When we played Alamo, Nevada, earlier this season we saw what it was going to take to get to the championship game and finish," Kirkland said. "It taught us a lot and really made our kids tougher. Today it really showed because we ran the ball more than we ever had. We really controlled the clock."

Carey ran the ball effectively despite losing running back Charlie Rivera to a concussion early in the second quarter. But Shane Bingham moved to his spot and the Panthers didn't miss a beat.

An interception by Hoopes set Carey up at midfield for its first scoring drive, which Hoopes finished on a 12-yard run. Hoopes added a 2-yard TD run in the second quarter as Carey led 12-0 at halftime.

After forcing a Castleford three-and-out to start the second half, the Panthers executed nine straight running plays, capped by Cenarrusa's 8-yard TD to put Carey ahead 20-0.

Castleford finally put together a scoring drive in the fourth quarter as Weekes connected on a couple of passes to Adam Machado and Quinn to set up Machado's 1-yard TD dive.

"It was a great year," Vulgamore said. "I couldn't be more proud of our guys. There's nothing wrong when you get beat by a better team. Everybody on my team left everything on the field, and that's all you can ever ask."

In next week's state championship game, Carey will face the winner of the other semifinal between Salmon River and Garden Valley, which will be played Saturday afternoon.

CSI women get balanced effort in opener

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

The bright spots were abundant as the College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team opened its season with an 81-61 win over Eastern Arizona College Thursday night in the Coca Cola Classic.

The Golden Eagles (1-0) proved they're certainly not shy about putting up shots, launching 29 3-pointers in the game. They shot just 38.7 percent (29 of 75) from the field, but used their pressure defense to force 34 turnovers.

"I'll take 38 percent if we can get up that many shots," said CSI head coach Randy Rogers, whose team knocked down 10 treys.

Sophomore Kylie Hardison got the start and scored eight of her 15 points in the early going and hit 3 of 5 from long range. In her second year at CSI she said she is "more confident and can just go out there and play basketball."

Her teammates followed her lead. All 12 available players played and scored.

"I'm pleased," said Hardison. "I think we did a good job as a whole team. The bench came in ready to play and everybody shared the ball."

While freshman guard Kyler Paria airballed her first shot, she settled down, scoring seven straight points during one first-half stretch and finished with 12 points and eight steals.

"I was just nervous," Paria said of her errant first shot. "I haven't played in front of that many people before. But I felt like we yelled really well and we were able to just go out there and have fun."

Rogers praised freshman point guard Mechela Barnes, who finished with 11 points and had four assists and just one turnover in her 21 minutes.

"Give her a ton of credit," said Rogers.

Australian guard Guili El-Mir was solid off the bench, with 11 points and four assists. Her 25-foot trey put CSI up 64-32 midway through the second half.

But not every CSI player had a sparkling debut. Returning All-American Laurel Kearsley picked up two quick fouls and sat out most of the first half. She didn't score until well into the second half and wound up with only three points and five rebounds in 19 minutes of play. With Kearsley and forward Tina Fakahafua in foul trouble, CSI had to go small, especially with French post Fanny Cavallo awaiting paperwork before she is eligible to play.

"We had to change our game play," said Rogers, whose team was out-rebounded 59-45.

But the small-ball plan worked well otherwise as Eastern Arizona struggled to handle CSI's pressure. The Gila Monsters were led by Talia Rayford's 20 points and 11 boards.

With the game tied 7-7, Hardison hit a 3-pointer to ignite a 7-0 spurt that put CSI up for good. The lead shrunk to 20-18 before Barnes and Tayllor Gipson hit consecutive treys. Paria took over from there, scoring seven points as CSI built its first double-digit lead and forged a 45-27 halftime lead.

Falcons rally for wild win over Ravens

ATLANTA (AP) — If this was a Super Bowl preview, that's going to be quite a game in Big D.

Roddy White hauled in a 33-yard touchdown pass from Matt Ryan with 20 seconds remaining and the Atlanta Falcons, after squandering a 13-point lead in the fourth quarter, rallied to beat the Baltimore Ravens 26-21 on Thursday in a prime-time matchup between two of the NFL's top teams.

With commissioner Roger Goodell looking on, just adding to the big-game feel, the Falcons (7-2) appeared to be control after Ryan hooked up with White on a 4-yard touchdown with 11:34 remaining to make it 20-7.

Curiously, Atlanta coach Mike Smith didn't attempt a 2-point conversion, which nearly came back to bite him.

Atlanta Falcons running back Jason Snelling (44) reacts after scoring a touchdown in the second quarter of Thursday's game against the Baltimore Ravens in Atlanta. Falcons receiver Roddy White (84) celebrates in the background.

After barely touching the ball in the first half, Baltimore (6-3) rallied behind Joe Flacco's two fourth-quarter TD passes, the second of them a 9-yarder to Todd Heap with 1:05 left.

Back came the Falcons, who improved to 18-1 at home with Ryan as the starter. He needed less than a minute to pull off an 80-yard drive, hooking up with Michael Jenkins on a huge third-down pass along the sideline before going back to his favorite receiver for the winner.

Ryan rolled to his left to get away from the pressure, and White appeared to push off Josh Wilson with his right hand to get free, sending the cornerback tumbling to the turf. Ryan delivered the ball perfectly, White caught it with no one around and cruised into the end zone.

Wilson hopped up, screaming for a flag. But the official kept the yellow flags in his back pocket and held up both arms. Touchdown.

"If you like football, like intense football, that was it," said Falcons coach Mike Smith, a former Ravens assistant. "That might have been the most intense game I've ever been involved with at any level of football."

White came into the game listed as questionable after hurting his right knee in last Sunday's win over Tampa Bay and practicing only once during the short week. But he danced out of the tunnel during the pregame introductions with a big smile and clearly wasn't bothered.

He finished with 12 catches for 138 yards. Ryan threw a career-high 50 passes, completing 32 of them for 316 yards and three touchdowns.

Flacco, coming back from a sluggish start, was 22 of 34 for 215 yards and three touchdowns, too.

Allen lifts Celtics to 2nd win over Heat

MIAMI — New roster, same problem for the Miami Heat.

They just can't find a way to beat the Boston Celtics.

Ray Allen hit his first seven 3-point tries and finished with 35 points, Paul Pierce added 25 and the Celtics led wire-to-wire in a 112-107 win over Miami on Thursday night, beating the Heat for the second time this season and handing them a second straight home loss.

Boston has won 13 of the last 14 regular-season meetings in addition to eliminating Miami in the opening round of last season's playoffs. Then, the Celtics ended the LeBron James era in Cleveland a couple of weeks later, setting the wheels in motion for James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh to team up in Miami.

Rajon Rondo finished with 16 assists and Kevin Garnett had 16 points and 13 rebounds for Boston, which led by as many as 20.

James finished with 35 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists, narrowly missing his second straight triple-double. Wade was held to eight points on 2-for-12 shooting. The Heat got within 110-107 on Udonis Haslem's free throws with 13.3 seconds left, but Allen hit a pair of free throws to seal it.

BULLS 120, WARRIORS 90

CHICAGO — Luol Deng scored 26 points, Derrick Rose had 22 and the Chicago Bulls raced to a 30-point lead in the first half.

Rose added 13 assists for his third double-double of the season. He finished one assist shy of his career best, which he's increased twice already this season. Rose is averaging 9.6 assists per game, 3.3 better than he averaged in either of his first two NBA seasons.

Monta Ellis had 24 points to lead the Warriors, who pulled out a 122-117 victory in New York on Wednesday night. Ellis entered second in the NBA in scoring at 27.1 points per game.

Stephen Curry added 17 points for Golden State.

Tiger Woods in the hunt in Australia

MELBOURNE, Australia — Playing golf in Melbourne's famous sand-belt region suits Tiger Woods just fine.

The Victoria course measures only 6,886 yards, making it one of the shortest Woods has played. Yet he found it challenging enough Thursday in the opening round of the Australian Masters that he had to make a 7-foot putt on the final hole for a 2-under 69. That left him four shots off the lead in the last tournament where he is the defending champion.

Woods hit driver only on the par 5s, a similar strategy to what he used last year in winning at Kingston Heath. He switched irons on the 257-yard opening hole to make sure he wound up just short of the green.

"Why can't we build golf courses like this in America?" Woods said as he walked to the seventh tee. "This is cool. This is so cool."

All he needs now is to putt better.

As has been the case for so much of this forgettable season, Woods simply doesn't make as many putts as he once did. In his first competitive round at Victoria, he followed his plan to perfection by missing only two fairways and having birdie putts on all but two greens. But he took 19 putts on his outward nine and was fooled for most of the day.

"That's probably the highest score I could have shot," Woods said.

Adam Bland and Alistair Presnell, roommates while they traveled the Nationwide Tour in the United States this year, each had a 6-under 65, with Bland making birdie on his last four holes. They were joined atop the leaderboard by Daniel Gaunt, who was equally impressive under the warming of the afternoon sun.

KERR LEADS LORENA OCHOA INVITATIONAL

GUADALAJARA, Mexico — Cristie Kerr shot a tournament-record 8-under 64 to take a three-stroke lead over Stacy Lewis in the Lorena Ochoa Invitational, while Ochoa opened with a 74 on her home course in her first LPGA Tour start since retiring in April.

The third-ranked Kerr birdied nine of the first 15 holes at Guadalajara Country Club, but dropped a stroke on the par-3 17th. She won the LPGA State Farm Classic and LPGA Championship in consecutive starts in June.

STROUD LEADS IN FLORIDA

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Chris Stroud shot a 10-under 62 on Disney World's Palm Course to take a three-stroke lead in the PGA Tour's season-ending Children's Miracle Network Classic.

Roland Thatcher opened with a 65, and rookie star Rickie Fowler was a stroke back at 66 along with Jerry Kelly, Cameron Percy, Tim Herron and Brenden Pappas. They also played the easier Palm Course.

Chris Tidland opened with a 67 on the Magnolia Course, the site of the final two rounds.

TWO LEAD SOGGY SINGAPORE OPEN

SINGAPORE — Phil Mickelson opened with a 4-under 67 in the Singapore Open, leaving him four strokes behind clubhouse leaders Chris Wood and Kim Bi-o in the rain-soaked tournament.

Only 96 of the 204 players were able to comple play after thunderstorms delayed play for more than four hours. Ignacio Garrido also had a share off the lead at 8 under with seven holes left.

The tournament is sanctioned by the European and Asian tours.

Kimberly

Snake River operates an offense very similar to Kimberly, running out of the Wing-T with running back Emmett Smith getting most of the carries. Quarterback C.J. Toulhouse has a favorite target in Chad VanOrden, and the Panthers like to throw a variety of screens.

"They're definitely playing well right now," said Kimberly coach Kirby Bright. "It will be a lot like facing ourselves. They are really good with the screens and we'll have to be solid on the defensive side of the ball."

Added Matthews: "They're probably the best team we'll play all season. We'll just have to be ready defensively and score the ball on offense."

Quarterback Seth Champlin and running back Cody Casperson will do the scoring for the Bulldogs, who are averaging 32.1 points per game this season.

Riding that offense and a stout defense led by Tyler Bringhurst, Jeremy Howell and Dally Charters, the Bulldogs find themselves in the semifinal game — one step closer to traveling to the blue turf at Boise State for a shot at the state championship.

"It feels amazing to still be playing in the playoffs and into the semifinals," Matthews said. "It's been our goal all season to make it to state."

And if the Bulldogs face adversity tonight, they'll be ready.

"They've put the game on themselves and pick themselves up when something goes wrong. There's never any quit in them," Bright said. "You're going to get knocked down, you're going to miss a play, but it's not the last play that matters, it's the next play."

Foster tied the game at 71-71 with a bucket with 1.7 seconds remaining. He was fouled on the shot and missed the potential game-winning free throw, but the Patriots (4-1) quickly pulled away in overtime. Mathiang Muo added 15 points for Central Florida. Cameron Jackson paced Casper with 21 points, while Denzel Douglas chipped in 15.

BRUIN UPRISING?

Twin Falls girls look to shake up GBC standings

By David Bashore and Ryan Howe
Times-News writers

It's a familiar refrain. But for the Twin Falls girls basketball team, merely getting to the state tournament this season won't be good enough.

With seven returners from a two-and-out performance at last season's Class 4A state tournament, the Bruins are hoping for bigger and better things this time around.

As the preseason on-paper favorites to unseat Jerome in the Great Basin Conference race, there's a quiet confidence emanating from Baun Gymnasium.

"We're a little ahead of where we were last year," said fourth-year head coach Nancy Jones. "There's a lot still for us to work on, but the girls' attitudes are great and the team dynamic is strong. This is just a great bunch of girls to be around."

Forwards Jazlyn Nielsen and Josie Jordan will look to occupy the paint, while Nielsen can step out to hit the 3-pointer alongside sharpshooters Mallory Jund and Allie Kelsey.

A deeper bench of similarly athletic players will boost both the in-squad competition and the on-floor performance.

"We've definitely come in trying to be more competitive within our team, so that it makes all of us better," Jordan said. "We're just a lot more intense to start this season."

The Bruins have to overcome a major mental hurdle if they want to become conference champions. It's been an uphill struggle to play against Jerome the past few seasons, with Twin Falls being well-beaten each time.

Now it's just a matter of making sure the Bruins are taking care of their own business.

"In the past we've been thinking too much about having to beat Jerome," Nielsen said. "Now we're just taking it game by game,

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News
The Twin Falls High School girls basketball team is prepared in its quest to unseat three-time reigning champion Jerome atop the Great Basin Conference.

and we're worrying about what we do and not about the other team."

In order to test their mettle, however, the Bruins beefed up on their out-of-conference schedule, adding perennial state tournament teams like Mountain Home and Middleton, the reigning Class 4A champion and winner in two of the previous three titles, to go with mainstay opponents Century and Highland.

Here's a look at the rest of the GBC in predicted order of finish.

Jerome

The three-time reigning conference champion Tigers are getting used to life without superstar guard Aubree Callen. But senior point guard Carrie Thibault has been waiting in the wings for the opportunity to put her stamp on the team, and head coach Brent Clark is confident in her ability to shine.

"Carrie's going to be the big player for us," Clark said. "It's going to be fun to watch her develop and embrace the chance to lead this team."

Thibault and Haylee Burnham mark two returning starters in the backcourt, while Jerome will introduce three new starters to the floor. But with six returning players with state tournament experience and a tradition of excellence on the defensive end of the floor, there's no reason to think Jerome won't be in the reckoning when all's said and done.

Clark said Jasmine Branch, Frankie Carey, Savannah Lott and Mattie MacGregor will combine to give the team an athletic rotation in the block.

One point of concern Clark noted is depth. The Tigers have 10 players on their roster, but one, senior guard Ashley Yagla, is out until at least January — if they get her back at all — as she continues to rehab an ACL injury suffered in the summer.

Minico

Minico could be a GBC darkhorse come district tournament time if the Spartans can jell.

"We'll be pretty good once we get a few games under our belt and everybody comes together," said coach Joe D. Shepard.

Minico, which finished last season 14-9, returns three players with varsity experience in seniors Taylor

O'Connell and Melinda Martinez, and junior Marlee Chandler. Junior guards Micaela Merrill and Malarie Pratt will each play key roles on the perimeter, while senior Lauren Nesbitt gives the Spartans depth in the post.

The Spartans, whose last district title and state tournament appearance came in 2005, also have two move-ins who will be nice additions. Dayna Phillips moved in from Dietrich and Hanna Munns arrived from Utah.

"The girls haven't played much together as a group, but I think we've got all the parts to have a very strong team by the end of the year," Shepard said. "I think these girls will step up and play and if we get some experience I think we'll be a contender for the two district spots (to the state tournament)."

Shepard says the defending GBC champs are still on top.

"I'm still saying Jerome's the team to beat," Shepard said. "They've had that going for the last few years and I'm sure (the coaching staff) will get them ready to play. They've got a couple real strong players coming back."

Wood River

Wood River lost seven players from last season, four to graduation and three who moved. But those who remain are poised to continue the program's rise under third-year coach Mendy Benson.

The Wolverines tied their all-time high in wins last season, posting a 17-7 record. They'll look to improve on that with a healthy stable of bigs and one of the most talented players in the conference in slasher Kaitana Martinez. Sharpshooter Allie Hesteness and forward Haylee Thompson figure to be two more of the Wolverines' key cogs.

Benson paid tribute to the league's coaches, saying that they all instill a tenacious dedication to defense that makes wins hard to come by — particularly when playing away from home.

"Our defense will be solid again. It's kind of a staple of the program where we're pretty consistently going to be able to defend the good teams," Benson said. "It's a really well-coached league. ... Everybody's tough at home. You can get some people at your place, but it's tough to win on the road. It's nice to be in that conversation where it's tough to beat us at our place now, too."

"Road wins are going to be huge because it'll put a team in a position to be in an easier spot in the district tournament. Talent-wise, there is a lot of equity in the league."

Canyon Ridge

For a squad still in search of its first-ever win, the Riverhawks are optimistic about the season ahead.

They return four starters, including three underclassmen, and two reserve players from last year's squad that dropped all 22 games in its first season as a program.

The Riverhawks don't have a ton of size, but 6-foot-2 post Breyanna Burk will be counted on to anchor a scheme built around speedy guards like Karly Hudelson and Bonnie Detweiler, as well as 5-10 wing Staci Baird.

"Our biggest strengths this year are going to be our quickness and our determination to win games," said second year coach Kim Wray. "We worked hard in the offseason ... turned up our motivation level along with our intensity level."

One point of concern for the Riverhawks is going to be the lack of overall size, particularly against bigger teams. They'll have to spread the floor and utilize speed to create mismatches.

If they can do that, Wray is confident that wins will come, and sooner rather than later.

Burley

Burley, which hasn't reached the Class 4A state tournament since winning it all in 2007, has a new coach and a lot of fresh faces on the court.

What Burley lacks in experience, it makes up for in athleticism and a good attitude, according to first-year coach Roger Caresia.

"The girls are working hard, it's just going to take time for us to come together as a team," Caresia said. "I want to see where we're at Jan. 15, because there's no doubt that we'll get better every day, just by the fact that the girls will get more experienced and more comfortable playing at this level."

Burley, which had an 11-12 record last season, has a good mix of seniors and underclassmen. Kayla Kerbs, Sara Behunin, Melanie Garrard and Mikaela Salazar were all on the varsity team last year, but saw limited playing time.

Sophomores Brooke Bowers and Aubrie Vale, along with freshman Chelsea Baker, will also be integral pieces as Burley tries to push the ball in transition and look for shots early in its offense.

halftime advantage. And last week, Nevada vaulted to a 35-3 lead.

None of those opponents has operated as smoothly this season — or in recent years — as the fourth-ranked Broncos.

Boise State hasn't just prevailed 11 consecutive years against Idaho, each time by at least two touchdowns. It's also won 22 straight games since the start of 2009 — the longest FBS winning streak — and has the nation's best winning percentage since 1997 (.820).

In the last five seasons, BSU has dropped one WAC game.

"This is probably the best team we will face or have faced in some years," Idaho tailback Deonte Jackson said. "... We're going to have to execute. Everybody's going to have to be sound in their assignments, do their job."

The Vandals' defense in particular has regressed after a string of encouraging performances early in the year. Idaho is now 103rd out of 120 FBS teams in total defense after allowing 48, 45 and 63 points in three of the last four weeks.

Tonight the Idaho defense will try to hold up against a Boise State offense that is typically only slowed by self-inflicted errors — which are rare.

Vandal coach Robb Akey noted that quarterback Kellen Moore, after getting Heisman Trophy consideration last year, might be BSU's most-improved player from a season ago. The junior quarterback has two terrific receivers in Titus Young and Austin Pettis and a powerful running back in Doug Martin.

The Vandals' best stretches of play have come when defensive end Aaron Lavarias and others have made opposing QBs uncomfortable with consistent pressure. But BSU has surrendered just three sacks in eight games, and Moore has the highest passing efficiency among FBS quarterbacks.

"He knows exactly where all of his reads are, where he feels pressure, where he needs to get the ball to," Lavarias said. "... He gets the ball away so quickly and he knows where's he's going to take the ball every time he takes a snap."

This is the 40th meeting between these schools and perhaps the last as BSU move to the Mountain West Conference next season. With the rivalry on hold after tonight, the Vandals understand this is the best time — with an ESPN2 audience watching — for a breakthrough against BSU.

"Certainly the bragging rights that come with this one are going to last more than 365 days," Akey said, "so I think that's something that's pretty important right there."

But the game is also huge for the Broncos (8-0, 4-0).

Clearly, if Boise State is to remain on the fringes of the national title discussion, it can't afford a lackluster effort against the Vandals — let alone a season-crushing loss. And just to make sure his players didn't drop any potential nuggets of motivation for the Vandals, BSU coach Chris Petersen banned all player interviews this week.

"We just have got a short week and usually when we get into this game situation with Idaho, usually somebody says something they shouldn't say," Petersen said. "With all the distractions we've had going on here I thought it was a good time for our guys just to take care of our own business and worry about ourselves rather than a bunch of people asking them questions about a bunch of things they don't really need to be focused on right now."

But one thing's certain: the Gem State will be focused on this one tonight.

being one win away from reaching the Class 2A state championship game for the third consecutive season, the Hornets feel like they still have much to prove.

Of the four teams remaining in these playoffs, the Hornets (7-3) are considered the overachieving underdogs as they head to Holt Arena for today's 1:30 p.m. semifinal game against West Side (9-1) — and Declo senior captain Mark Knobbe isn't shy regarding how he feels about that.

"Everybody expects West Side to give us a nice little butt kicking and then move on to the state championship game, but as far as I'm concerned, if they want to win they're going to have to bring their A game," he said.

Declo won't go down without a fight, but the Hornets will certainly need a better performance than they had in last week's quarterfinal game against Nampa Christian. Declo won

— Mark Knobbe,
Declo senior captain

30-28, despite getting outgained 396 yards to 265 — including just three yards passing.

Declo quarterback Kai Garner, who was injured last week, is questionable today, leaving the QB duties to Justin Cameron and Jaxon Wrigley.

Whoever the quarterback is, the heart of Declo's offense is its line, anchored by center Craig Christensen, with Jake Lancaster and Jared Patterson holding down the right side, and Jacob Turner and Kage Osterhout manning the left, along with tight end Nik Brown.

For Declo to have a chance, the guys up front must sustain blocks and open holes for Kyle Zollinger and Knobbe — who has already broken the school's single-season rushing record.

West Side doesn't have one stud athlete, but it doesn't have any weak links, either. Offensively the Pirates are led by quarterback Dallas Turnbow, receiver Kyler Austin and a stable of running backs.

But West Side's biggest strength is its defense. In the Pirates' nine victories, they've only surrendered 7.7 points on average.

West Side and Declo have had three common opponents. Both teams lost to Malad this season, and both teams have beaten Glenns Ferry and Aberdeen.

If Declo wins, it will play for the state title next week against Saturday's New Plymouth-Malad winner.

The Hornets would like nothing more than another week of cold November practices.

Rivalry

the next opportunity?"

If Boise State has its way, the "next opportunity" will be when Idaho finally succumbs to the Broncos' demands of scheduling a 2-for-1 deal or playing all the games in Boise. And for the moment, Idaho officials aren't warming to that idea.

There are only 10 states that have only two state-funded schools in different conferences that have been playing at the FBS level for 12 years or more. In only two of those states are the rivalries not being played.

Utah and Utah State are in the midst of a brief two-year hiatus before cranking the series up again in 2012.

And then there's Pennsylvania. The storied rivalry between two of the Northeast's best college football programs in Penn State and Pitt was shelved following the 2000 season. And the blueprint for how this rivalry fell apart is one that Boise State and Idaho seem to be following closely, albeit at a much faster pace.

In the early 1980s, Pitt raised the ire of Penn State coach Joe Paterno when it elected to join the Big East rather than become part Paterno's Eastern Conference brainchild. Suddenly, the two previously independent schools weren't on the same page.

(Step One: One school makes scheduling the game "difficult" due to new conference obligations.)

Then in the 1990s, Penn State began to dominate the rivalry, winning all six of the games scheduled that decade.

(Step Two: One school dominates the other.)

Penn State offered some 2-for-1 and 3-for-2 scheduling alternatives, but Pitt held its ground, demanding a home-and-home series.

(Step Three: Appear amenable to the series by offering something you know your bitter rivals will never agree to.)

played their final game on the gridiron — and Pitt gleefully stuck it to Penn State, claiming a 12-0 shutout victory.

Pittsburgh Post-Gazette sports columnist Ron Cook said the loss of the rivalry is sad, but not as bad for one side.

"It's horrible not having Pitt and Penn State play each year, but it's much worse for Pitt than it is for Penn State," Cook explained. "Penn State is in the stronger Big Ten and makes a fortune from the Big Ten Network. ... It doesn't need Pitt."

"Pitt, being in a pro town, has problems filling its stadium. It would benefit greatly from playing Penn State but isn't willing to give up the 2-for-1 — nor should it."

Could the Gem State be staring at the same fate as Pennsylvania 10 years down the road, lamenting the loss of a great in-state rivalry on the gridiron? Only time will tell, but early indications are it's headed that way in a hurry.

2011 FORD F-SERIES SUPER DUTY PICKUP ALWAYS PREPARED!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

Boasting all-new powertrains with best-in-class performance and capabilities, the new 2011 Super Duty further underscores Ford's Built Ford Tough legacy. With class-leading torque, horsepower, fuel economy and towing and payload capability, the all-new Super Duty trucks are designed to deliver results day after day, year after year in the most demanding situations. No nonsense. And never any excuses.

For 2011, Super Duty is available in XL, XLT, Lariat and King Ranch trim levels featuring both all-new diesel and gasoline engines. The new 6.7L Power Stroke V-8 turbocharged diesel provides best-in-class fuel economy and biodiesel compatibility up to B20. An all-new 6.2L V-8 gasoline engine also best-in-class with 85 more horsepower and 40 lbs.-ft. more torque than the current 5.4L V-8 gas engine – combined with class-leading fuel economy and E85 compatibility.

Both new engines are mated to the all-new 6R140 heavy-duty TorqShift® six-speed automatic transmission, which has been optimized for the increased torque of the new diesel engine and the higher speeds of the new gas engine. The new transmission features SelectShift Automatic™ capability, with segment-exclusive Live Drive Power Take Off (PTO) available for diesels.

The all-new powertrains are the backbone of the new 2011 F-Series Super Duty, which has class-leading towing capability of 24,400 pounds and best-in-class payload capability of 6,520 pounds; the new Super Duty averages an 18 percent improvement for pickup models and up to 25 percent improvement for chassis cabs over outgoing model.

Putting all that power to work is what defines Super Duty. The 2011 Super Duty builds on its best-in-class towing and payload capability and also offers more towing options from inside the bed. New is the first-ever factory-installed and warranted fifth wheel and gooseneck substructure directly attached to the frame.

Ford's lauded Trailer Sway Control (TSC) system also joins the Super Duty lineup, giving those customers segment-first capability. TSC is integrated with AdvanceTrac® with Roll Stability Control™, which now is standard on all single rear wheel (SRW) configurations.

Inside, customers will benefit from a new reconfigurable flow-through console that improves the functionality of the truck. Storage space is increased about 60 percent, and at least 70 different configurations are possible. A 12-volt powerpoint is available at the rear of the console and another is located inside the main bin, which is lockable. A 110-volt power inverter is standard with all console configurations.

The seats of the new Super Duty are based off the well-received seats from the Ford F-150 and feature improved comfort and support, upgraded cloth and leather, and have available 10-way power adjustments. The front seats can be heated and cooled, and the driver's seat has manual lumbar support standard. Lockable, underseat storage also is available.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Life without industry is guilt, and industry without art is brutality.”

— John Ruskin

Today’s deal, from the final of the United States Bridge Championships to select a team for the 2007 World Championships, features a superb defense by Zia Mahmood and Michael Rosenberg. Their team went on to win the silver medal, behind Norway.

In the other room Zia and Michael’s counterparts as East-West had scored plus 430 in three no-trump. But here, an enterprising South elected to sacrifice in four hearts, and North did well to let his partner stew in his own juice rather than rescuing in four spades. It appears that two down, for plus 500, is the limit — two hearts, two diamonds and a spade trick — but Zia’s reasoning led to a third undertrick.

His club lead was won by dummy’s ace, Rosenberg playing the three. Declarer then played the heart queen, putting Zia back on lead. Because East’s simple overcall showed values, Zia accurately placed him with the red kings and a singleton spade. (Rosenberg’s club three was suit preference, suggesting the diamond king.)

So Zia shifted to a low diamond, which went to Rosenberg’s king, and the spade return was taken by South’s ace. East won the ensuing trump lead with the king and played a diamond to West’s ace. Then the spade king and a spade ruff produced plus 800.

Note that had Zia played the diamond ace and a second diamond, the defenders’ communications would have been cut for the spade ruff.

ANSWER: Your partner’s redouble shows a good hand (typically upwards of 10 HCP, rarely based on diamond support). You would normally pass and await clarification, but here your extra shape suggests you continue describing your hand pattern by bidding one spade. You have not shown your extra values yet, but you can do so later, assuming the auction continues.

DEAR ABBY: Last year for Thanksgiving, I made a special effort to get the entire family together for the traditional meal. All 13 of us met at my mother's home and everyone was to bring a dish or two to share.

One of my brothers has two college-age daughters. Both are vegan, and he insisted that all the dishes we brought be vegan! I did it, but I resented it because I felt that two out of 13 people should not decide the menu. If they wanted vegan dishes, they should bring something for themselves, while the rest of us brought what we wanted.

My brother and nieces are now asking what we're doing this year for Thanksgiving. Frankly, I don't want to go through that again. Am I wrong in thinking everyone should not bend over backward for the vegan meal? I don't mind some of the menu accommodating them, but I don't think the whole dinner should be altered.

— TURKEY EATER IN TEXAS

DEAR TURKEY EATER: Neither do I. And the response you should give your brother (and his daughters) is that you'll be serving a traditional Thanksgiving dinner this year, so they can either bring something they will enjoy or make other plans.

DEAR ABBY: I read your column every day and find it interesting and useful. Many of the writers have the same emotions and problems as I do. I'm always pleased to see that I am not too far off.

I am a woman who married for the second time after 54 years of marriage. I was 71 and had been a widow for only one year. I had married my late husband at 16, and thought I could not live alone.

Do you have any words of wisdom for someone such as myself? Older people are so set in their ways that blending is so very difficult.

— HAVING TROUBLE IN FLORIDA

DEAR HAVING TROUBLE: If you remarried only because you were afraid of living alone, then you did it for the wrong reason. There are worse things than living alone — and one of them is being married to a person who is unwilling to compromise. The keys to a successful union are affection, communication, respect and compromise. If both parties sincerely care about and respect each other, the union will be successful and lasting.

DEAR ABBY: My wife recently attended her 35th high school reunion alone. Her high school sweetheart was there, and they talked and exchanged e-mail addresses. As the night wore on, he started making advances and my wife rebuffed him somewhat rudely. Three days later, she e-mailed him an apology and they started an eight-week exchange.

I suspected something was wrong and checked her e-mails, where I discovered some pretty torrid messages and a dinner meeting being planned. When I confronted my wife, she denied everything — until I gave her copies of the e-mails. She says they never met, but I say the intent was there. To me, this is the same as a physical affair. She disagrees. Who is right?

— DECEIVED IN LOUISIANA

DEAR DECEIVED: You are. The only thing that prevented things from proceeding further was the fact that you intervened. And if your wife had been proud of what she was doing she wouldn't have lied to you.

IF NOVEMBER 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Holidays are just around the corner, so your social life should speed up in return. Until the New Year, you can turn on the charm whenever you are at group festivities or social events. Don't be bashful about joining a new group or club, as you might meet a lifelong friend. Do not makes changes to your finances or job during February. Wait until April or May, which is when your judgment and luck are better than average — and when you will have more support and help from others.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Rise to the challenge. Your problem-solving skills are at their zenith and you should use your powers for good. Leave extra time to complete tasks, as you are likely to experience unexpected pitfalls along the way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Light the candles and put some champagne on ice. After a long week, you've more than earned some quiet R&R with that special someone tonight. The best things in life really are free.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep up the pace. Events are moving fast and your production has increased to the point where you seemingly can't fail. While business is good, a quality relationship is something that requires much more time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sail the seas of romance. Set no limits on the happiness that you can achieve. Don't expect to have it all on one day, however, as relationships are a carefully built house of cards that take much time and effort to construct.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Open up that piggy bank and buy a tasteful item that you've had your eye on. You appreciate the finer things and strive to have the best of everything, so think of it as a well-deserved trophy for all the hard work you do.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep a pot cooking on every burner. Multitasking is the only way you can be sure of accomplishing your goals for the day. Socializing must suffer, as you will need to make good use of every spare second today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): In the kingdom of the blind, the one-eyed man is king. The romance that you've long sought could be right under your nose if you are sharp enough to pick up the signals. Read between the lines.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Paint the town red. Dress to impress as you accompany a significant other for an evening of intimate enjoyment. Rekindle the sparks of your relationship with extravagant gifts and plenty of attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Slow and steady wins the race. Your cronies may be ready for life in the fast lane, but you'll achieve your greatest success by taking your time on your own. A romantic adventure waits in the wings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The more, the merrier. You'll gain much more satisfaction from events if you are surrounded by friends and loved ones. Show your appreciation for those who have remained loyal to you over time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Feed your desire for adventure. Search for exciting new people and places to pass the time. A change of pace will be infinitely more satisfying than the dreary old routine. Keep your spending on a leash.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love makes the world go around. The doldrums from a long week of business can be easily cured by an intimate evening with a certain special someone. Leave work until next week and focus on enjoyment.
