End of an era

New CSI trustees take their seats

By Ben Botkin

Times-News writer

LeRoy Craig and Charles Lehrman had some unusual seats at Monday's College of Southern Idaho Board of Trustees meeting: in the audience.

It was a rarity for the pair, who have sat around the board's table at every meeting since taking office in 1974. But Monday marked the end of an era, with the two outgoing trustees leaving office to newcomers Karl Kleinkopf and Bob Keegan, who beat the incumbents in contested elections for four-year terms.

So as the new five-member board met in a closed-door session to discuss personnel issues before the open meeting, Craig and Lehrman found themselves waiting outside for the meeting's public portion to begin.

As the meeting began, plenty of hugs and handshakes were exchanged among the other trustees, employees and the departing trustees, who addressed the new board.

Lehrman compared the college's workings to a well-oiled, smooth-running internal combustion engine. The institution's president is like the computer, the faculty and employees are like the thousands of moving parts, and the board provides the fuel — funding — to keep it running, Lehrman said.

"I think we're leaving it in good hands," he said. "My only advice is: Don't screw it up."

He got a hearty round of applause and a standing ovation, as did Craig.

Craig talked about buildings added to campus over the years, such as the recent health sciences building, and praised employees for taking on extra work in the last two years as funding has tightened.

He said that during his tenure, people have gone from complaining about the property taxes they pay the college to praising its role in educating their offspring.

Because of the election, the board was required to reorganize. Craig and Lehrman had been the chairman and vice chairman before leaving office.

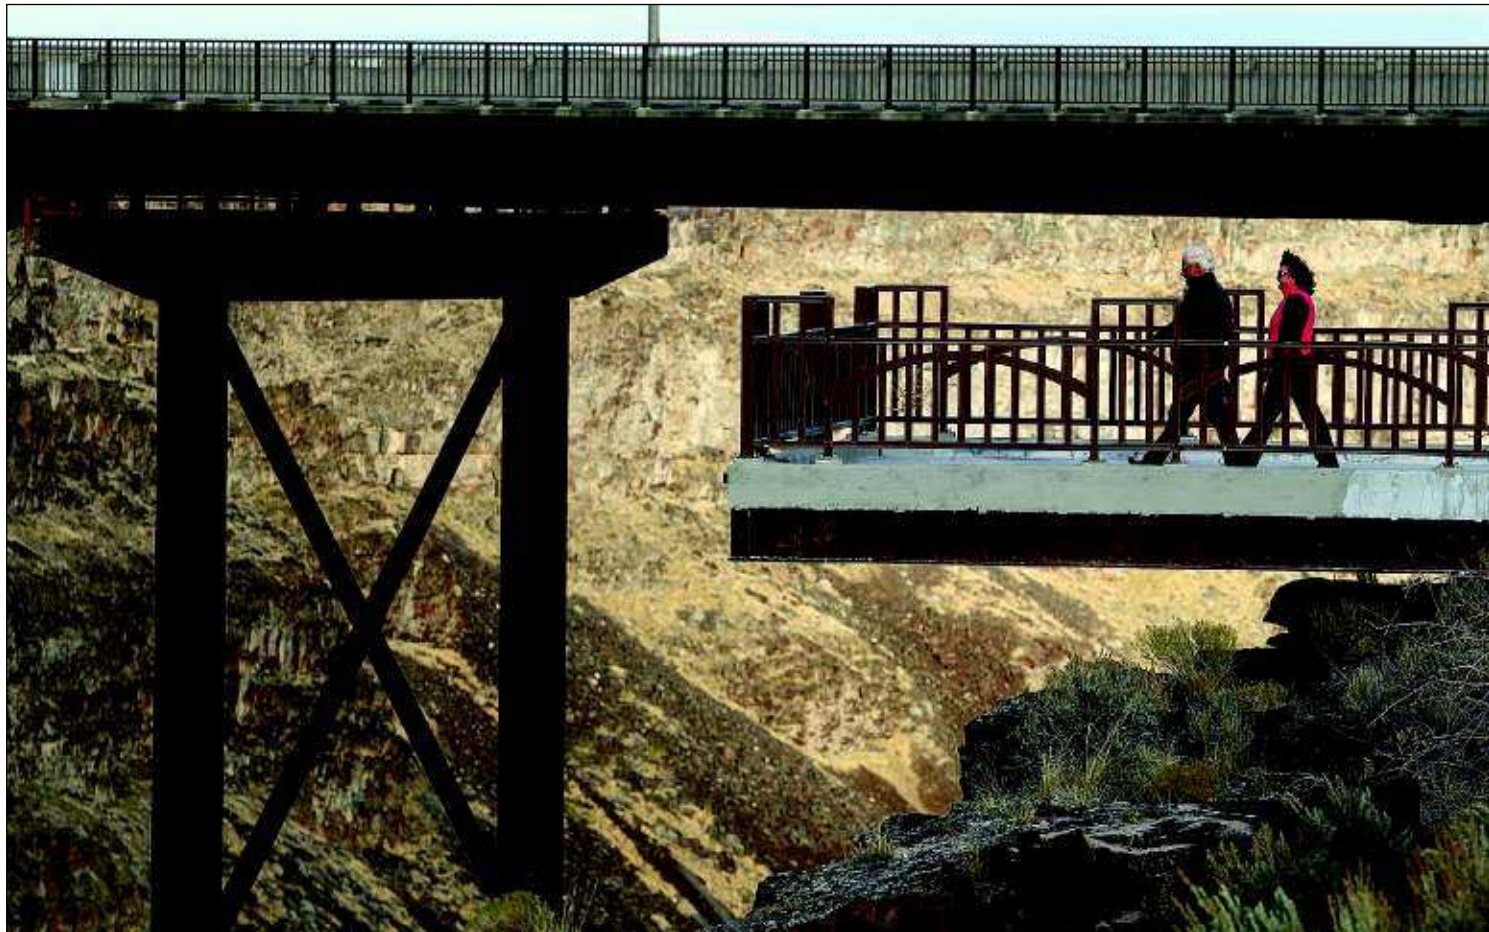

H. Thad Scholes, a trustee since 1981, was chosen as chairman by the board; Allan Frost, a trustee since 2006, was selected as the vice chairman.

Keegan, who won Craig's seat in a four-way race, said he's spent several hours visiting the campus and chatting with employees, who appreciate the institution.

"We're looking forward to it," Kleinkopf said of their future work. Kleinkopf won Lehrman's seat in a two-way race.

The next order of business will be to plan a work session that goes over the board's bylaws and duties of trustees.

CAN'T MISS OVERLOOK

John Helgesen, left, and Susan Kolbo, both of Wisconsin, walk on the new 43-foot-by-21-foot steel cantilever overlook Monday at the Buzz Langdon Visitor Center in Twin Falls. The Idaho Transportation Department announced Monday that work on the new overlook — which began in late July — was complete, except for some sprinklers and landscaping in the area near the site. The remaining work will be wrapped up in the spring.

The overlook was built by cutting out part of the rock wall and anchoring the structure into the ground. Construction closed the visitor center for the duration of the $212,900 project, which was performed by Cannon Builders Inc. of Blackfoot. ITD had first proposed building the overlook about 10 years ago.

T.F. Council confirms choice: Rothweiler for city manager

Heider announces exit date from council

By Nick Coltrain

Times-News writer

"The right choice," a "no-brainer" and the next Twin Falls city manager — just three descriptions used for Travis Rothweiler Monday night.

The Twin Falls City Council voted 6-0, with Councilman Will Kezele away on private business, to appoint Rothweiler to the $107,000-a-year job beginning April 1. Rothweiler will replace departing City Manager Tom Courtney, who is retiring at the end of March. The city manager handles day-to-day operations of the city and carries out directions from the council.

"Travis, I don't think anyone is more qualified than you are to take the reins," Councilman Lee Heider said. "I'm privileged to live in a city where you will lead."

The council also defended its endorsement of Rothweiler despite not holding any interviews with any of the 53 other candidates for the job. Councilman David E.

Rothweiler

Johnson, who called Rothweiler "the right choice," said it saved money and time not flying out lesser candidates. Councilman Lance Clow, a member of the initial search committee, said he couldn't see a better candidate than Rothweiler. Councilman Trip Craig, along with calling the choice a "no-brainer," said the council's endorsements quickly swayed his initial "sourpuss" outlook.

Rothweiler joined the city in 2008, being hired away from a city administrator job in Jerome. Since then, he's introduced several new budgeting tools, including a five-year projection of city finances.

New state BLM head meets local officials

Former Magic Valley resident plans to do a lot of listening

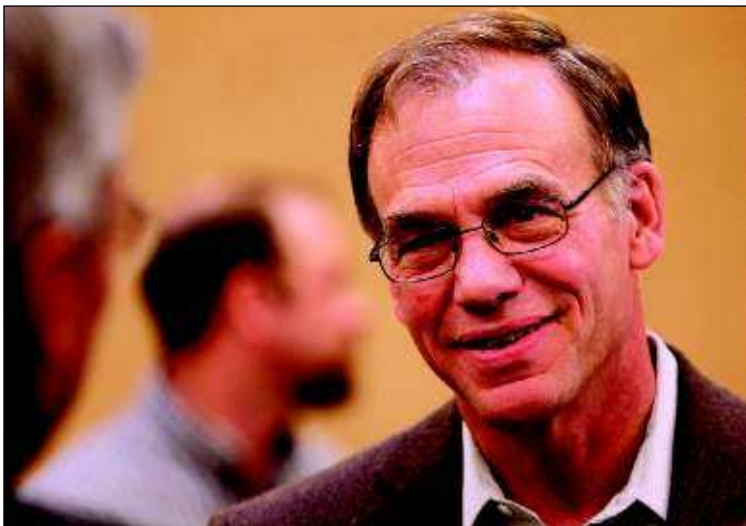

By Nick Coltrain

Times-News writer

From Burley to Twin Falls, to Washington, D.C., and back again is new U.S. Bureau of Land Management Idaho Director Steve Ellis' career in a nutshell, and some local officials hope it pays off.

"It's not like having somebody from back east coming in," said Dennis Crane, chairman of the Cassia County Commission, adding that Ellis knows the geography and the county. "We feel pretty lucky because the last two state directors are from here."

Ellis took the new job at the federal lands agency about a month ago. He held a meet-and-greet with local officials Monday in Twin Falls, drawing folks from throughout the Magic Valley. Officials said it was informal, but a good way to associate a face with a name.

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

U.S. Bureau of Land Management Idaho Director Steve Ellis talks with local officials Monday afternoon in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls County Commission Chairman George Urie said he doesn't expect Ellis' history in Idaho to give anyone extra pull on land-use issues, but it does lend Ellis perspective.

"I wouldn't count on (extra influence) but (Ellis) should have a better understanding of local issues," Urie said.

Ellis' 31-year federal career spans from working as a BLM forester in Burley to serving as a deputy state director for resources and planning. He said it's nice to be back in Idaho and getting ready to

Idaho may make food stamps more accessible

By Amy Huddleston

Times-News writer

More Idahoans may be allowed to apply for food stamps if lawmakers grant a proposal by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Idaho saw a 42.5 percent jump in food stamp users from March 2009 to March 2010, according to the most recent U.S. Department of Agriculture Food and Nutrition Service statistics, more than double the nationwide increase of 21.1 percent last year. And the need is still growing, thanks to the flood of layoffs and cutbacks triggered by the poor economy.

To qualify for food stamps, applicants must have an income close to the federal poverty line and their assets, such as recreation vehicles or property, must be valued at less than $2,000.

Idaho temporarily waived the asset requirement last year so the newly unemployed wouldn't be forced to unload assets just to feed their families. The Legislature continued the waiver early this year.

Health and Welfare now wants to make part of that adjustment more permanent, increasing the allowed assets from $2,000 to $5,000.

Whose fault is that? Ours, it turns out

Earthquakes rattle the china all around Idaho, but rarely here. In historical times, the Magic Valley hasn't suffered a seriously damaging quake and they're rarely noticeable in the Wood River Valley.

All of which has left south-central Idaho temblor-complacent. Maybe we shouldn't be.

Researchers at Idaho State University have discovered a previously unknown active fault in the Sawtooth Mountains and the Stanley Basin, with potential to do some real damage.

Between 25 and 40 miles long, it's located on the eastern edge of the Sawtooths and runs within about five miles of Stanley. Part of the crack in the Earth's subsurface passes through the upper end of Redfish Lake and at least as far south of Pettitt Lake.

YOU

ISU researchers estimate the fault has been active twice in the past 10,000 years — about 7,000 years ago and again 4,100 years ago.

"The reason this discovery is so important is that it is within the heavily visited areas of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, very close to the town of Stanley, and within 65 miles of Idaho's largest city, Boise, and the most populated area in the state," said Glenn Thackray, professor of geosciences at the Pocatello school. "We would like to know how big the earthquakes are along this fault and how active it is."

Thackray emphasized that the fault is cause for concern, but not alarm, for residents of and visitors to the Sawtooth and Wood River valleys. The discovery may have implications for land-use and emergency planning, and maybe for building codes. Depending on the magnitude of a potential earthquake, it could do damage to surrounding areas.

There are few major active faults in Idaho. Idaho's three other major faults run along the base of the Lost River Range (where the famous Borah Peak magnitude 7.3 earthquake, the largest ever recorded in Idaho, occurred in 1983), the Lemhi Range and the Beaverhead Range.

Cassia Co. discusses animal control costs

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia County doesn't seem in any rush to respond to the city of Burley's request that the county double its yearly contribution for shared animal control services.

County commissioners on Monday deliberated but took no action regarding the request that the county contribute $20,000 this year toward the city's budgeted $116,370 for the services. County sheriff's deputies respond to animal control calls outside of Burley's city limits and bring animals to the Burley facility.

County Administrator Kerry McMurray said the city first made the request during the budgeting process for this fiscal year, which began in October, but the county has yet to respond. On Monday, Commission Chairman Dennis Crane asked interim County Clerk Joseph Larsen to research whether the commissioners discussed an increased contribution for the city services during their prior budget preparations. Commissioners will continue the discussion at a later date.

Also Monday, commissioners approved a one-year law enforcement contract for county sheriff's coverage of the city of Burley.

McMurray said that city officials visited with him regarding a county-proposed contract that included a 3 percent increase in its second year.

"They don't want to sign a contract that is longer than one year," McMurray said. "So we cleaned up some of the language."

McMurray said that the contract now includes no increase in city costs during the current fiscal year and stipulates that if the city renews for a second year there will be a 3 percent increase, raising monthly payments from $127,449 to $131,390.

The city must indicate to the county if it will renew the contract for the second year by the third Friday in May.

The contract will be forwarded to the Burley City Council for approval.

Irrigation district stalls before Cassia commission

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A hearing on a new irrigation district in Cassia County was continued Monday due to uncertainty that the group petitioning for it had met its burden under Idaho law.

Cassia County commissioners heard testimony on whether the proposed Cassia Creek Irrigation District should be placed on a February election ballot. The district would be formed in eastern Cassia County and include 70 water rights spread across 60 landowners.

While Matt Darrington, the attorney for the proposed district, said the Idaho Department of Water Resources found that the 25-signature petition for forming the district met state requirements, County Prosecutor Al Barrus disagreed.

Barrus said his interpretation was that the signatures of the majority of water rights holders — 31 signatures — are required.

Darrington asked for a continuance to clear up the matter, which commissioners granted. The issue will return on Monday.

During other testimony, Malta resident Bob Parke said he was unsure why a new irrigation district is needed because the current system has been in place for more than 100 years.

"If it isn't broken, don't fix it," Parke said. "I'm against it personally. I don't see any advantages."

Leanne Trappen, community services director for South Central Community Action Partnership, said she thinks the increase would be very beneficial for Idahoans, especially for those who have lost their jobs and can't sell their assets right away.

"The asset test is keeping some people from getting help," Trappen said, explaining that if a couple lost their jobs and owned snowmobiles or property, they would have to sell them to qualify for food stamps.

"Should they have to sell everything to eat?" she said. "They don't live a welfare way of life."

SCCAP is often the first stop for people down the long road of assistance. The nonprofit organization gave away 296,000 pounds of food in 2009, a value of $281,603, and helped more than 68,000 people.

"The need is even higher this year," Trappen said. "I do think it (the new asset limit) would definitely make a difference, so people don't have to keep coming back and people won't be forced to make those choices."

Health and Welfare spokeswoman Emily Simnitt said the agency doesn't know how many more people would qualify under the new limit, but isn't expecting a large amount.

The $2,000 limit was established in 1986, Simnitt noted.

Area state lawmakers were not available for comment on Monday.

Former Bellevue mayor Jon Anderson, left, sits in a Blaine County courtroom on Monday as his attorney, Doug Nelson, addresses the court. Blaine County prosecutors dismissed a charge of driving under the influence against Anderson, pending the outcome of a separate DUI charge in Lincoln County.

DUI charge against former Bellevue mayor dismissed; prosecutors may re-file

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Former Bellevue mayor Jon Anderson sat quietly Monday in a Blaine County courtroom as attorneys argued over an issue with a far-reaching impact on Anderson's life.

In May, Anderson was charged with driving under the influence in Lincoln County, his second such offense in Idaho in 10 years following a 2005 DUI in Blaine County. The May charge was later amended to excessive DUI.

In September, Anderson was again charged with DUI (second offense) in Blaine County, as well as driving without privileges and resisting or obstructing officers.

On Monday, Blaine County prosecutors moved to dismiss their charges against Anderson while they await the outcome of the Lincoln County case. If Anderson is convicted or pleads guilty in Lincoln County, Blaine County prosecutors said they intend to re-file charges against him and pursue a felony DUI charge, as it would be Anderson's third DUI in a 10-year period.

"They want to force Lincoln County to be the second offense, then amend this one to the felony," said Doug Nelson, Anderson's attorney. The Lincoln County case is scheduled for a plea and sentencing on Nov. 24.

Nelson said the law does not require that each DUI case be complete for a third filed case to be charged as a felony, but many prosecutors operate that way. "The prosecutor's belief down there (in Lincoln County) is you have to have offenses under your belt," Nelson said.

Appearing in Blaine County 5th District Magistrate Court for a scheduled plea and sentencing, Nelson said Anderson was prepared to plead guilty "straight up" to the second-offense DUI.

Judge Ted Israel, who heard the Blaine County prosecutors' request for dismissal, said that legally it did not appear that dismissing the case would create prejudice against Anderson.

"(Prosecutors) have the discretion how to prosecute these cases," Israel said,

If you didn't buy your boots from Vickers, you paid too much!

Despite drubbing, Allred won't rule out another run

By John Miller
Associated Press

BOISE — Despite a defeat in the Idaho governor's race, former Democratic gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred said Monday he would consider another run for elected office, including a second shot at the state's top job in 2014.

If Allred runs for office again, the 46-year-old said "it's not obvious" whether he'd run as a Democrat or seek out some other affiliation that would allow him to pursue an independent approach.

Allred lost to Republican Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in the November elections, securing just 33 percent to Otter's 59 percent. Voters overwhelmingly backed Otter, who touted his ability to balance Idaho's budget without raising taxes and his sustained fight against the federal government on issues ranging from the Endangered Species Act to the health care overhaul.

Allred won't lead The Common Interest, the government reform group he founded six years ago, during the 2011 Legislature.

He conceded his run as a Democrat, at least in the near future, would likely undermine his ability to promote the group's non-partisan credentials with an Idaho Legislature that's now four-fifths Republican.

"It will have a future. The problem of partisanship and special interest influence didn't go away, and may have gotten markedly worse, in this election," Allred said of The Common Interest. "When I go to my grave, I want to go knowing I'd done everything I could to improve my generation's record on that."

Laird Noh, a Common Interest board member and former Republican state senator, said it's premature to say just how the group will be remade in Allred's absence.

Under him, the group

lobbied for property tax relief and against Otter's plans to hike gas taxes and registration fees during the 2009 Legislature. But Allred ran the group on a voluntary basis, without collecting a paycheck, which makes finding a replacement difficult.

"It very much depended on his leadership skills," Noh said. "At some point, the group will be interested in moving forward again. The fundamental concept hasn't changed, and will be maybe even more relevant, as we move into the next phase of American politics."

Allred said Monday that he was joining HB Ventures, a small Boise-based private equity and consulting firm. The former Harvard University professor will work with the firm's portfolio of companies — an Idaho pharmacy, as well as several tutoring franchises — and with outside clients to develop business strategies.

While overseeing The Common Interest, Allred earned a living from his Allred Solutions consultancy, whose clients included J.R. Simplot Co. He's now merging that business with HB Ventures, where he'll lead strategy and organizational development activities, according to a statement from the firm.

His partners now include Dan Burton, who until recently led Micron Technology Inc.'s Corporate Strategy Group that guided the Boise-based computer chip maker as it acquired about $4 billion in assets and diversified its memory products.

Anderson, 54, was elected mayor of Bellevue in 2005, two months before his first DUI, and resigned the post in June of this year, citing family and health reasons.

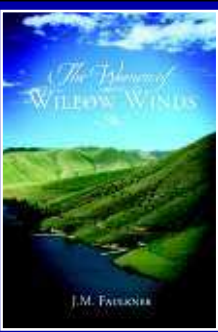

City Council President Chris Koch served as interim mayor until the November elections, when he was elected to the seat after running unopposed.

Former Latham employee arrested at closed dealership

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A former employee of Latham Motors was recently found squatting in the old car dealership on Second Avenue South in Twin Falls.

Ted Arthur Long, 52, of Twin Falls, was charged with possession of a controlled substance after officers found methamphetamine and marijuana in the areas of the dealership he used as private quarters.

According to the police report, Twin Falls Police Officer Kevin D. Loosli responded on Friday to a drug investigation at the dealership, which has been closed for more than a year. Police have watched the location, observing many vehicles coming and going from it.

Loosli reported that he found a meth pipe in a garage bay while watching several people gathered in a work bay with no electricity. Robert Latham Sr., still the owner of the property, was contacted, and he explained that no one should be on the property. He then gave Loosli permission to enter the property and meet him there.

Later that afternoon, Loosli reported meeting with Latham at the dealership. Upon attempting to unlock the back door, the one through which Loosli observed people entering and exiting earlier, Long opened the door.

Loosli had Long exit the building while Long claimed he had permission to be there. Personal belongings were found inside, and Loosli noted that copper wire had been removed in locations. Loosli also claimed to have found plastic baggies containing meth. Long was taken into custody.

The report also states that a meth pipe and a marijuana bong were found.

Latham said that Long did not have permission to be there as he was not a keyholder. However, a call to Latham's son, Robert Latham Jr., revealed, according to Loosli's report, that Latham Jr. had given Long permission to access the building but not to live there.

Long was detained in the Twin Falls County Jail. Bond was set at $5,000, and he faces a preliminary hearing on Nov. 26.

Trevino murder trial delayed again

Thomas Trevino Jr.'s murder trial has again been postponed.

The jury trial, originally set for early February, was already moved back to March. It is now slated for June 1.

Trevino's attorney, Keith Roark, asked Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Randy J. Stoker for more time to prepare as Roark is also working the Gerry Salgado murder trial in Cassia County early in 2011.

Alleged bar shooter pleads guilty

A man accused of a Jerome bar shooting has changed his plea to guilty.

Raymundo J. Luna-Gomez, 23, entered his plea on Nov. 8. He allegedly shot Arturo C. Vargas, 32, of Wendell, four times while Vargas and friends shared a table at El Parralito Bar in Jerome.

Vargas identified Gomez as the shooter during a June preliminary hearing in Jerome County 5th District Court. Gomez is scheduled for sentencing on Jan. 10.

Judge sentences final defendant for Twin Falls liquor store theft

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

So ends the saga of the Liquor Store Six.

The final defendant in the Kimberly Road state liquor store robbery faced sentencing Monday and received the lightest punishment of the bunch. Seventeen-year-old Esperanza Valladares will serve a five-year probationary period as Twin Falls County 5th District Judge G. Richard Bevan withheld judgment Monday.

Valladares will be incarcerated in the Twin Falls County Jail for 30 consecutive days with the option of work release. She may turn herself in at any time during the next 60 days.

"I think you show more promise for rehabilitation than the others," Bevan said.

"I'm taking a chance on you."

Valladares was initially charged as a juvenile, but the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's Office upgraded the charges. She pleaded guilty to felony burglary and grand theft on Sept. 15.

At 5:26 a.m. May 20, Twin Falls police found a stolen Pontiac lodged inside State Liquor Store No. 201. Surveillance video from the store showed suspects ramming the car through the store's front doors and destroying the entrance, the clerk's station and the bourbon section. Suspects entered the store and took approximately $300 in liquor items. Damage to liquor stock destroyed in the break-in is estimated at $6,000.

"I apologize for my negative actions," Valladares said at her hearing. "I was focused on impressing others and tagging along."

Deputy Prosecutor McKinzie Cole recommended a suspended sentence of six years, with eligibility for parole after two, and 60 days in county jail. Defense counsel Joseph R. Rockstahl noted that his client already spent 14 days in juvenile detention plus two months of house arrest while wearing an ankle monitor.

Valladares must also be employed full-time or be a student, and complete her high school equivalency as terms of probation. She is also subject to restitution in the amount of $34,638.41 along with her five co-defendants: Kristopher McKean, Kristan McKean, Charles Marovich, Megan Marovich and Brina Krohn.

Credit Card Debt?

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill
CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

CreditGUARD of America, a non-profit licensed debt management service provider, is making a new program available to lower debt payments and become free of all credit card debt in only three to five years. Consumers need only $2,000 or more in total credit card debt and are falling behind on any account, to cut their payment by 35% to 50%, and reduce or eliminate interest charges altogether.

Over 200,000 families, located throughout the U.S. have regained financial independence with CreditGUARD's licensed, bonded and insured service. CreditGUARD of America has received high marks in consumer surveys showing high consumer satisfaction and confidence. The CreditGUARD debt management program can lower your monthly payments by hundreds and save you thousands!

One such case is Sandra L. who proclaimed "CreditGUARD cut my monthly payment by $656 and saved me over $29,206.53 in interest. They saved my way of life and gave me back my piece of mind! Now I can see myself on my way to becoming debt free." or

Jeffrey C. who said "CreditGUARD of America helped me consolidate 3 of my credit cards into one affordable payment. They are now saving me nearly $200 a month. Now I will be debt free in 2 years or less"

Idaho senator among passengers on ill-fated cruise

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — State Sen. James Hammond missed part of a legislative budget meeting Monday, but he had a good excuse: He had been aboard a cruise ship that was stranded off the California coast until late last week.

The northern Idaho Republican didn't get home to Coeur d'Alene until late Sunday and caught a flight to Boise, nearly 400 miles to the south, this morning for the Senate and House Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee meeting.

Hammond promised his wife they would take a cruise on their 25th wedding anniversary in 2008, but the couple didn't get around to the trip until this year, when they bought tickets on the ill-fated Carnival Splendor.

"I haven't been on a cruise in 15 years," Hammond said.

An engine fire disabled the ship 200 miles from San Diego last Monday.

"At 6 a.m. there was an explosion, a bang, so we stepped outside," Hammond said. "We could see smoke coming from the back of the boat and then we looked inside, down the hall and could see smoke all up the stern."

Tugboats hauled the 952-foot cruise liner into a San Diego dock Thursday. There was no power, no hot showers and no hot food while the ship was stranded.

Hammond survived on salads, cold cereals and sandwiches that were composed mostly of bread, he said.

"I gained more weight than I would on a normal cruise because I ate so dang much bread because that's all there was to eat," said Hammond, a first-term state senator. "We were kind of sitting ducks out there in the water."

The passengers will receive full refunds and a free future cruise.

After they were brought to shore, Hammond said he and his wife decided to book a room at a San Diego hotel for the weekend and salvage some of their vacation. The couple woke up to a power outage Sunday morning.

"So once again, I shaved and showered in the dark," he said. "But at least I had hot water."

AROUND IDAHO

Revenue beats forecasts again in October

BOISE — A state economist says Idaho has ended the fourth straight month of this fiscal year with more tax revenue than forecast.

Derek Santos, who works for the state Division of Financial Management, provided lawmakers with figures Monday that show Idaho has taken in $800 million since July 1.

That figure is $22.8 million ahead of projections that were significantly lowered in August.

Santos reported to the Idaho Legislature's budget writing panel, which is meeting this week in preparation for the upcoming session that starts in January.

Schools, colleges seek $90M in new money

BOISE — State lawmakers who will be writing budgets for the next fiscal year have been asked to come up with nearly $90 million in new money for higher education and K-12 public schools in Idaho.

The Senate and House Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee met Monday to discuss their work in the upcoming session and review funding requests from state agencies.

Superintendent Tom Luna has told lawmakers they will need to come up with an additional $61 million to keep per-student spending kindergarten through 12th grades at current levels.

Idaho's colleges and universities have asked for an additional $28.3 million in new money, according to budget requests lawmakers reviewed on Monday.

Lawmakers face $340M problem in FY2012

BOISE — The Idaho Legislature's budget chief reminded lawmakers that the spending plan they built for the current fiscal year relies on about $270 million in one-time and temporary funding.

Cathy Holland-Smith, the legislative budget director, cautioned that the money represents funding solutions that will not be available to lawmakers writing the budget for the next fiscal year.

Holland-Smith briefed the Senate and House Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee Monday.

She cautioned the problem will be exacerbated by state programs like public schools and Idaho's health insurance program for the poor because they will need another $70 million to fund growth.

Altogether, Holland-Smith says lawmakers will need to come up with $340 million if they want to build a budget for the next fiscal year that addresses everything the budget for this fiscal year did.

Analyst: Student data system could yield savings

BOISE (AP) — A state budget analyst says Idaho could bank hefty savings from a new system designed to collect and monitor student test scores, attendance and other data from the time they enroll in kindergarten.

Paul Headlee, an Idaho Legislature budget analyst who covers public education, says Arkansas realized savings of $15 million after its newly installed longitudinal data system found the state had over counted students by 2,200.

Headlee told lawmakers Monday that there is potential for Idaho to realize some savings as well.

Idaho is among few states without a longitudinal data system to better track and count students. The state has put more than $2.5 million toward the creation of a student data system since March 2008.

Headlee says the state applied for, but did not win, a $20 million federal grant to finish building the system.

During the upcoming legislative session, public schools chief Tom Luna plans to request $926,000 in ongoing state funds for the program, along with $43,000 in one-time funds to purchase equipment.

Rev. Delbert Paul Remaley

Our amazing husband, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, uncle and friend, the Rev. Delbert “Bert” Paul Remaley, 89, passed away peacefully Sunday, Nov. 14, 2010, at River Ridge Rehabilitation and Care Center in Twin Falls. Bert was surrounded by many of his loving family as he made the transition from this earthly life.

He was born in Phillipston, Pa., on May 30, 1921. His parents were Paul Raymond and Lana Isabel (Neely) Remaley. Bert graduated from high school in Oil City, Pa., in 1938. He attended Clarion State College for two years and then joined the United States Army in 1940. He served in the Army during World War II for five years, achieving the rank of master sergeant. It was during this time that he met Letha Mae Barlow. They were married at Camp Polk, La., on Dec. 16, 1944. He received an honorable medical discharge in 1945. Bert then moved back to Oil City and became the plant manager of International Harvester Company.

His educational quests were in pursuit as he attended the University of Arkansas, graduating from there in 1950 with a Bachelor of Science degree in education. While there, he received the calling to go into the ministry of the Methodist Church. First, he was the youth director for the Springdale, Ark., Methodist Church.

He then attended Southern Methodist University, where he graduated with a master's degree in divinity. The Remaley family moved often during his dedicated ministry. He served the Methodist churches in Anna and Melissa, Texas; Widener, Round Pond, Madison, Tuni and Sulphur Springs, Ark.; DuBois, Reynoldsville, Brockway, Mars and Monaca, Pa.; Tillamook, Ore.; and in Kimberly, Murtaugh, Blackfoot, Payette and Gooding, Idaho. Following his retirement, he served as interim pastor at the First Presbyterian Church of Burley, the Christian Church in Jerome and Valley Presbyterian Church in Hazelton. Bert touched many lives in the churches that he served.

Bert was involved in Masonic organizations. He was a member of Twin Falls Lodge No. 45. His love for the Order of the Eastern Star manifested itself when he served as worthy grand patron of Pennsylvania in 1963 to 1964. In previous years, he was an active member of Twin Falls Chapter No. 29 where he held various offices. Bert's other civic involvements included substitute teaching for Magic Valley schools, officiating at sports events, the American Legion and Twin Falls County chairman for the March of Dimes. He also held several offices within the United Methodist Church Conference.

Bert and Letha's travels to 49 states were a highlight of their 66 years together. He relished in his fishing and camping adventures whenever the opportunity presented itself. He was the happiest when surrounded by his family — no matter the occasion. His claim to fame was that he baptized each of his children, nine grandchildren, and one great-granddaughter. He also performed many of their wedding ceremonies.

Bert is survived by his loving and caring wife, Letha; his children, Paul (Sue) of Twin Falls, Paula von Lindern (Sean) of Boise, Wes (Benita) of Jerome; and Philip (Sonja) of Yearington, Nev. He also leaves 14 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. His family will truly miss his sense of humor and quick wit. He was preceded in death by his parents, three brothers and one sister.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 18, at the Twin Falls United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E., with the Rev. Carol Thompson and the Rev. Philip J. Airhart officiating. Order of the Eastern Star rites will be provided by Twin Falls Chapter No. 29. Entombment and military rites will follow at the Sunset Memorial Park Mausoleum. A viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 until 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 17, and from 1 until 1:45 p.m. Thursday, both at the Twin Falls United Methodist Church.

Memorial contributions, in lieu of flowers, may be given to the Scholarship Fund of Twin Falls Chapter No. 29, Order of the Eastern Star. Maxine Machamer, secretary, will receive donations at 833 El Monte, Twin Falls, ID 83301.

The family wishes to express thanks for the love and care the entire family received from Idaho Home Health and Hospice, River Ridge Care Center, and Rasmussen Funeral Home in Burley.

Perdita Carman-Humphreys

FAIRFIELD — Perdita Carman-Humphreys, 88, a resident of Fairfield, Idaho, died Friday, Nov. 12, 2010, at St. Luke's Hospital in Ketchum, Idaho.

Perdita was born July 25, 1922, to Alyce (Holmberg) Russman and F.H. (Herb) Russman near Bancroft, Neb. She was the first grandchild born to a large extended family of aunts, uncles and doting grandparents. During grade-school years, Perdita attended a one-room school near Pender, Neb. In 1936, the “Dust Bowl” era, the family moved to Buhl, Idaho. Perdita's father was finally fulfilling his lifetime dream of living near mountains and of starting his own business. After three years in Buhl, the family moved to Twin Falls, where she attended Twin Falls High School, graduating in 1940. Then a job opportunity again led the family to move to Fairfield, where Perdita began a life-long love affair with Camas Prairie. In 1942, she met and married Alvin Carman, moving immediately to the Carman ranch which Alvin farmed. The early years of their marriage were filled with numerous activities, raising children and becoming very involved in community and church activities. Primary among these were leading Girl Scout troops and volunteering as a 4-H leader as well as becoming a charter member of the Fairfield Community Church.

She took a deep interest in all aspects of farming, becoming knowledgeable about both farming equipment and farming practices. This stood her in good stead as she faced a major decision to stay on the farm after the death of Alvin in 1961. With a 3-month-old son (David) and two teenage daughters (Sharon and Linda), her decision was based on her love of the land and the community and encouragement from family and friends. This decision led her to purchase the farm from the Carman family and continue farming with the help of her (by then) retired father and mother. Each summer, her mother would cook and tend the baby, while Perdita and her father did the farming. During these years, life took on a major challenge as the extent of David's physical and learning disabilities were discovered. David endured numerous surgeries and illnesses and became a cherished son and brother until his passing in 2006.

In 1973, Perdita married John K. Humphreys, a pioneer resident of Corral, Idaho. Perdita and David then moved to Corral to the Humphreys ranch and, for the next 19 years, Perdita spent her time between the Humphreys and Carman farms. During these years, Perdita learned to “pan for gold,” identify geological formations, rock climb and expand her knowledge of the history of the Prairie. David learned to fish and was a part of all the outdoor activities. John's love and care for his “son” was unsurpassed until his passing in 1992.

In 1980, to the enthusiastic support of her family and friends, Perdita was nominated and chosen as Idaho's Mother of the Year. She remained active in this organization until independent travel was no longer possible. She deeply believed in the values of this organization and exemplified by example and encouragement to others the vital role of mothers.

In 1995, Perdita and David moved back to the Carman ranch, where she continued to oversee farming activities contracted by Doug and Dirk Hollowell. Her delight and interest in the farm never waned. Frequent trips during the next few years such as family reunions in Nebraska, visits to her wonderful friend, Marie Tucker in South Dakota, visits to her daughter and son-in-law in Chicago to taking an always dreamed of Alaskan Cruise would keep her busy. She loved being a part of Fairfield's Tourist Information Center and continued her involvement in the Fairfield Community Church. During these years she would oversee the sale of farm machinery and do a major building project on the Carman ranch. Her interest in and concern for all she knew, both as a friend and mentor, continued strong with increasing health issues a “minor inconvenience.”

Perdita is survived by two daughters, Sharon (Bill) Kohler of Chicago, Ill., and Linda Carman of Twin Falls; three sisters-in-law, Ruth Scifres of Boise, Dorothy (Lawrence) Coltrin of Meridian and Lora Carman of Pendleton, Ore.; a beloved aunt, Leora Russman; and numerous cousins, nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husbands, Alvin N. Carman and John K. Humphreys; and her son, David.

The funeral, under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service Inc., will be held at 10:30 a.m. Friday, Nov. 19, at the Fairfield Community Church, with Pastor Chuck Butler officiating. A burial service will follow at 3:30 p.m. at Cloverdale Memorial Park Cemetery in Boise. Visitation and viewing for family and friends will be from 4 to 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 18, at Demaray Funeral Service Gooding Chapel, and one hour before the funeral Friday at the church.

Condolences, memories and photos may be shared with the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfunerlser-vic.com.

Dolores de Hernandez

Dolores de Hernandez, 83, of Twin Falls, passed away Friday, Nov. 12, 2010.

Dolores was born Sept. 15, 1927, in Zacatecas, Mexico, to Santos and Maria de Jesus Montoya. In 1948, she married Margarito Hernandez. They moved to Idaho in 1973, where she lived the rest of her years. Before retiring, Dolores worked at Seneca in Buhl and for Idaho Frozen Foods in Twin Falls. Dolores loved to work in her garden and especially with her roses. She loved to cook and be in the kitchen. Dolores, above all, loved her family and enjoyed playing with her grandchildren. “Te queremos mucho, Ama!”

Dolores is preceded in death by her husband; her parents; three brothers; and one sister. Dolores is survived by one sister, Ernestina Aguilar of Dallas, Texas; and other family members, Jaunita Gonzalez, Taide Hernandez, Cande (Wesley) Miller, Gloria (James) Wardrip, Maria Hernandez and Silvia (Carlos) Silvaz, all of Twin Falls, Arturo (Tina) Hernandez of Jerome, Yolanda (Joel) Phillips of Carson, Calif., Margarita (Rosendo) Mireles of Twin Falls and Mauricio Hernandez of Twin Falls; 21 grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren.

The funeral Mass will be held at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 16, at St. Edwards the Confessor Catholic Church in Twin Falls, with interment to follow at Sunset Memorial Park. Arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary “Chapel by the Park.”

For obituary rates and information, call 735-3266 Monday through Saturday. Deadline is 3 p.m. for next-day publication. The e-mail address for obituaries is obits@magicvalley.com. Death notices are a free service and can be placed until 4 p.m. every day. Alex Kochneff

Alex Kochneff passed away at the age of 93 on Sunday, Nov. 14, 2010.

He was born on April 17, 1917, and died of natural causes.

Survivors include his wife, Faye; his sons, William and Thomas Lee; and his daughter, Nancy. Last June, Alex and Faye celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary. Alex was very proud of his service to his country during World War II. He enlisted in the Coast Guard on Jan. 1, 1941, and was honorably discharged on Jan. 1, 1946. Of his many duties during the war, perhaps the most significant was initiating a baking school and teaching others the art of baking bread. Many servicemen enjoyed a better meal due to his expertise.

Alex was very well known and respected in Twin Falls. He was an avid golfer and played for years with his group of senior friends. He recorded four holes-in-one during the course of his lifetime and once broke his age by eight strokes, shooting a score of 68 when he was 76 years old. Alex was also active with a recycling project which he began as a member of the local Kiwanis Club. Proceeds from the recycling when to charity and to the Methodist Church. Two years ago, at the age of 91, Alex's recycling was depicted in an article and picture in the Twin Falls Times-News.

Perhaps Alex's biggest contribution to the community came when several families of the former Soviet Union immigrated to Idaho and settled in Twin Falls. Alex spoke Russian as a child due to the fact his parents were born in Russia. After having spoken little Russian since the age of 5, Alex worked hard to improve his vocabulary and master the Russian language. He was able to assist the integration of many Russian families into the community by helping them buy property, obtain jobs, establish relationships and he even interpreted for them in court.

Friends and family will remember Alex for his outgoing personality, his jovial manner, his willingness to reach out to those in need, his many contributions to the Twin Falls community and for the love he shared with his wife, Faye, for more than six decades.

The Kochneff family would like to thank Hospice Visions and Home Care Options for taking such good care of Alex and Faye over the past few months. They have gone above and beyond in order to provide a much-needed service.

Donations to Hospice Visions, a non-profit organization, are always welcomed and appreciated.

Leon Rex Street

BOISE — Leon Rex Street was born March 9, 1919, in Ponca City, Okla., to Herman and EvaBel Street. He spent most of his early years in Kansas before moving to Tule Lake, Calif., where his father homesteaded after World War I. He graduated from Tule Lake High School and then from the University of California at Berkeley with a degree in Economics in 1942.

After graduation, he served in the United States Army in the China-Burma-India Theater. Leon was there with the 21st Army Quartermaster Group who was responsible for transporting personnel and supplies necessary to construct the Ledo Road. He was discharged in 1945. He also was in the Army Reserves for 25 years and retired as a lieutenant colonel. While in the Army, he received training at Fort Benning, Ga., and met Mary Rebecca Shipley. On March 2, 1946, he married Mary Rebecca in Macon, Ga.

They moved to the Tule Lake area, where he farmed with his father. In 1948, their son, Paul Shipley Street, was born and, in 1952, their daughter, Leah Virginia Street, was born. Soon after her birth, they moved to the north side of Rupert, where Leon homesteaded. They continued to farm until 1960, when they moved to Burley and Leon began selling insurance with Joe Preston. Through the years, he also was in the insurance business with Mack Crouch and Ron Cunningham and in the real estate business with Truman Bradley. Leon retired from the insurance business in 1997 when he sold his business.

He and Rebecca enjoyed traveling and took many trips all over the globe. Leon was an active member of the Burley United Methodist Church, serving in many capacities. Leon and Rebecca moved to the Overland Park Senior Center in Boise in 2010, where he was living at the time of his death.

Leon is survived by his wife, Rebecca; daughter, Leah; son, Paul and his wife, Peggy and their children, Adam Nakatani Street, Blake Shipley Street, Heather Anderson, Robert Anderson and his wife, Madaline; and Leon's great-grandson, Cooper. He was preceded in death by his parents and his sister, Virginia Brownscombe.

Military rites will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 19, at the Idaho State Veterans Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorials be sent to the BUMC Foundation, in care of the Burley United Methodist Church, 450 E. 27th St., Burley, ID 83318.

To share memories with the family, please visit Leon's memorial webpage online at www.CloverdaleFuneral-Home.com.

P. Chad Bailey

P. Chad Bailey died Saturday, Nov. 13, 2010, after a long battle with cancer.

He was born in Rupert, Idaho, on May 30, 1948.

Chad is survived by his wife, Susan; son, Brandon (Nicole); four grandsons, Spencer, Jackson, Peyton and Carter; his parents, Norman and Letta Bailey; siblings, Ron (Mary), Vaughn (Joni), Renae (Mark) Neilson and Gina (Jim) Voss; along with many nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his brother, Kent.

Always an optimist, Chad viewed life as a glass half full rather than half empty. Life was and is good. You will be missed our friend. Today, tomorrow, always — happy trails to you!

A memorial celebrating Chad's life will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 19, at Peterson's Barn in Rupert.

Chad had a great appreciation and love for children. Memorials in Chad's memory are suggested to the Ronald McDonald House or any family hospital housing, kids with cancer or any charity of choice.

Thelma N. (Durfee) Weldin

Thelma N. (Durfee) Weldin, 81, passed away after a lingering illness Sunday, Oct. 31, 2010.

She was born May 27, 1929, in Almo, Cassia County, Idaho. Her parents were Ralph W. Durfee and Kturah M. Millard. Thelma's pioneer grandparents were Henry Dennison Durfee Jr. and Ida Pauline Nicholas, whose families helped settle Almo and surrounding areas.

She is preceded in death by her parents; her sisters, Rhoda, Cleo and Barbara; her brothers, Raymond and Ralph; her sons, Randy and Danny Weldin; her grandson, Johnny Durfee; and her husband, Merritt E. (Tom) Weldin. She is survived by two sisters, Wanda Coffman (Leland) of Rupert and Nona Drussel (Jay) of Burley; six brothers, Lonnie Durfee (Dorothy), Dean Durfee (Ann) and Denny Durfee (Mary), all of Quincy, Wash., Cliff Durfee of Preston, Wash., Eldon Durfee (Rowene) of Burley and Bill Durfee (Elberta) of Declo; sisters-in-law, Gertie “Ruth” (Ray) Weldin and Hallie Stuckey, both of Boise; and several nieces and nephews.

After marrying Merritt, they spent many years traveling around Oregon and Washington helping to build many of the roads throughout those states. They made many friends and had numerous adventures.

The last three years, she and Merritt lived with their niece, Gayle Dickson. Before that they lived in Union, Ore. Merritt passed away in July 2010, and she has now joined him. Thelma was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A memorial service for friends and family will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 20, at the LDS Chapel, 2210 Parke Ave. in Burley. A luncheon will follow. She and Merritt will be inurned in John Day, Ore. Services are under the direction of White Mortuary and Crematory “Chapel by the Park” in Twin Falls.

Labrador could be key player in immigration reform

Could newly elected Idaho Republican Congressman Raul Labrador help unlock America’s bitter impasse over immigration reform? A prominent Latino Democrat thinks so.

Outgoing New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson told reporters Monday that the election earlier this month of Labrador and fellow Republicans Jaime Herrera in Washington and Bill Flores and Francisco Canseco in Texas is a promising sign for bipartisan progress on immigration reform in the coming Congress.

“I think the chances are improved,” said Richardson, a Latino who served in Congress and later in President Bill Clinton’s Cabinet. “My hope is the newly elected Hispanic Republicans ... move beyond their campaign rhetoric, which was mostly anti-immigrant, and become ... leaders. I see them as potential linchpins of a bipartisan compromise agreement.

Our view: Who better to lead the way on immigration reform than a conservative immigration lawyer who happens to be Latino?

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

He’s right.

During the just-concluded campaign, Labrador opposed amnesty for illegal aliens, but he supports the concept of the DREAM Act, although not the version pending in Congress. That legislation would provide some illegal aliens who graduate from U.S. high schools and have been in the country continuously for five years the chance to earn conditional permanent residency if they serve two years in the military or study two years at a four-year college.

More importantly for southern Idaho, Labrador – an immigration attorney by trade – is a strong advocate of AgJobs, former Sen. Larry Craig’s proposal to set up a guest worker program for farm laborers.

Certainly, Labrador was playing to a conservative audience in his successful campaign against incumbent Democrat Walt Minnick when he advocated sending illegal aliens who qualify for a residency program back to their home countries first – and proposed posting the National Guard on the Mexican border. Those ideas would be of limited value in dealing with the 11 million illegal aliens already in the United States.

But it’s conceivable that Labrador and his newly elected Republican colleagues could occupy the high ground on immigration reform and make common cause with like-minded Democrats.

The real obstacle to reform is the incoming chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, who is co-sponsor of a controversial measure to eliminate birthright citizenship for the children of illegal immigrants. And the Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration, Citizenship, Refugees, Border Security and International Law is likely to be chaired by Rep. Steve King, R-Iowa, a Tea Party conservative staunchly opposed to any legal path to citizenship for illegal immigrants.

Still, with Arizona’s tough immigration law being challenged in court by the federal government, this is an issue that’s going to becoming more – not less – acute. And Labrador is one of a few members of Congress who might have the bully pulpit to forge a compromise.

The failure of political transcendence

Last Wednesday David Axelrod, President Obama’s top political adviser, appeared to signal that the White House was ready to cave on tax cuts – to give in to Republican demands that tax cuts be extended for the wealthy as well as the middle class. “We have to deal with the world as we find it,” he declared.

The White House then tried to walk back what Mr. Axelrod had said. But it was a telling remark, in more ways than one.

The obvious point is the contrast between the administration’s current whipped-dog demeanor and Obama’s soaring rhetoric as a candidate. How did we get from “We are the ones we’ve been waiting for” to here?

But the bitter irony goes deeper than that: The main reason Obama finds himself in this situation is that two years ago he was not, in fact, prepared to deal with the world as he was going to find it. And it seems as if he still isn’t.

In retrospect, the roots of current Democratic despond go all the way back to the way Obama ran for president. Again and again, he defined America’s problem as one of process, not substance – we were in trouble not because we had been governed by people with the wrong ideas, but because partisan divisions and politics as usual had prevented men and women of good will from coming together to solve our problems. And he promised to transcend those partisan divisions.

This promise of transcendence may have been good general election politics, although even that is questionable: People forget how close the presidential race was at the beginning of September 2008, how worried Democrats were until Sarah Palin and Lehman Brothers pushed them over the hump. But the real question was whether Obama could change his tune when he ran into the partisan firestorm everyone who remembered the 1990s knew was coming. He could do uplift – but could he fight?

So far the answer has been no.

Right at the beginning of his administration, what Obama needed to do, above all, was fight for an economic plan commensurate with the scale of the crisis. Instead, he negotiated with himself before he ever got around to negotiating with Congress, proposing a plan that was clearly, grossly inadequate – then allowed that plan to be scaled back even further without protest. And the failure to act forcefully on the economy, more than anything else, accounts for the midterm “shellacking.”

Even given the economy’s troubles, however, the administration’s efforts to limit the political damage were amazingly weak. There were no catchy slogans, no clear statements of principle; the administration’s political messaging was not so much ineffective as invisible. How many voters even noticed the ever-changing campaign themes – does anyone remember the “Summer of Recovery” – that were rolled out as catastrophe loomed?

“... two years ago (Obama) was not, in fact, prepared to deal with the world as he was going to find it. And it seems as if he still isn’t.”

And things haven’t improved since the election. Consider Obama’s recent remarks on two fronts.

At the predictably unproductive G-20 summit meeting in South Korea, the president faced demands from China and Germany that the Federal Reserve stop its policy of “quantitative easing” – which is, given Republican obstructionism, one of the few tools available to promote U.S. economic recovery. What Obama should have said is that nations’ running huge trade surpluses – and in China’s case, doing so thanks to currency manipulation on a scale unprecedented in world history – have no business telling the United States that it can’t act to help its own economy.

But what he actually said was “From everything I can see, this decision was not one designed to have an impact on the currency, on the dollar.” Fighting words!

And then there’s the tax-cut issue. Obama could and should be hammering Republicans for trying to hold the middle class hostage to secure tax cuts for the wealthy. He could be pointing out that making the Bush tax cuts for the wealthy permanent is a huge budget issue – over the next 75 years it would cost as much as the entire Social Security shortfall. Instead, however, he is once again negotiating with himself, long before he actually gets to the table with the GOP.

Here’s the thing: Obama still has immense power, if he chooses to use it. At home, he has the veto pen, control of the Senate and the bully pulpit. He still has substantial executive authority to act on things like mortgage relief – there are billions of dollars not yet spent, not to mention the enormous leverage the government has via its ownership of Fannie and Freddie. Abroad, he still leads the world’s greatest economic power – and one area where he surely would get bipartisan support would be taking a tougher stand on China and other international bad actors.

But none of this will matter unless the president can find it within himself to use his power, to actually take a stand. And the signs aren’t good.

Here comes the Congress of Low Expectations

Republicans will have to give some ground to gain some. This is not likely to sit well with their far-right constituents who prefer paralysis to compromise-built progress.

Charles Blow

the Democrats in 2006 would be successful in getting their programs passed into law. This year, just more than 40 percent believed this about the Republicans. In fact, unlike in 2008 and 2006, more people than not believed that relations between Republicans and Democrats in Washington would now get worse.

That doesn’t sound like a ringing endorsement to me. It sounds like a Congress of Low Expectations.

Furthermore, about half of the respondents said that President Obama still should take the lead in solving the nation’s problems. Only 39 percent said the same about Bill Clinton in 1994 and only 29 percent said so about George W. Bush in 2006. This seems to be at odds with what Republican respondents want. By more than 2 to 1, Republicans think that their leaders should “stand up to Obama” as opposed to working with him, and most think that those leaders should stick to their positions as opposed to making compromises. (This is stunning. Compromise is how democracies function. Are they saying that they don’t want a functioning democracy?)

And Republicans seem to think that their positions should become even more extreme. While most Democrats, and those who lean Democratic, appear to think that Democratic leaders should move in a more moderate direction, most Republicans and their leaners think that the Republicans should move in a more conservative direction.

Now that sounds like a Congress of Few Achievements.

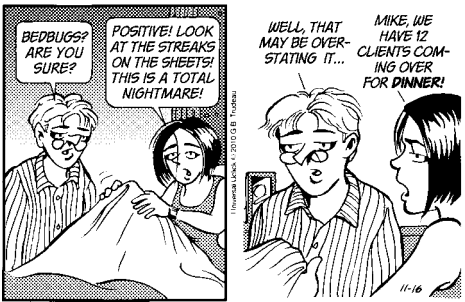

At some point, the rubber must meet the road. Republicans will have to give some ground to gain some. This is not likely to sit well with their far-right constituents who prefer constant paralysis to compromise-built progress.

This situation has impending disappointment written all over it.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

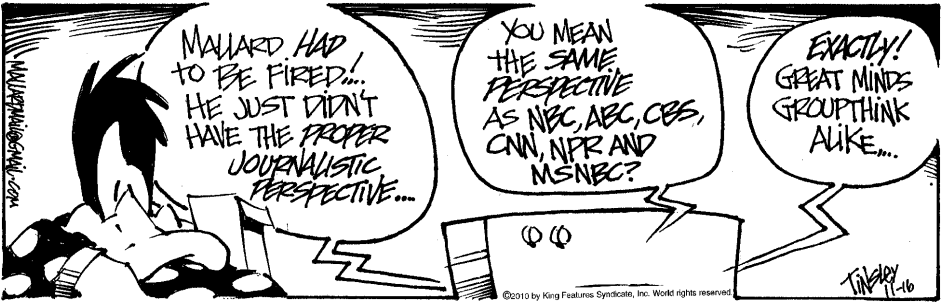

By Garry Trudeau

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

It's easy to forget how cigarettes were portrayed

Frank Sinatra, exuding crisp sophistication, a squared pocket handkerchief peeking out of his suit jacket, a fedora tilted back from his forehead, eased into the opening words of “I Get a Kick Out of You.” Behind him, in this 1950s black-and-white television appearance, was a giant blowup of what looks like an album cover, with the title “Music for Smokers Only.”

And Sinatra was smoking, all right, even as he sang. He took deep puffs between phrases; inhaling, exhaling a thick plume of smoke, then: “I get no kick from champagne ...” He held the cigarette between his first and second fingers throughout the song, sometimes flicking the ash as percussive punctuation; at moments, he was absolutely encased in white smoke. Once he had to briefly turn his head to clear his throat, but then, cigarette aloft, he sang on.

This presentation, included in a new boxed DVD set of vintage Sinatra performances, must have been an unremarkable sight half a century ago: America's most revered singer, a man who set the tone for how other men wanted to behave, puffing away on national TV even as he worked at his craft. It was a reflection of what life in the United States looked like, what the culture expected.

What might the Sinatra of the 1950s — and the men and women who watched and listened to him — have made of the pictures federal regulators now plan to require on every cigarette pack sold in the United States, beginning in 2012? The images, meant to cover fully half the pack's surface area, are purposely grim and gruesome: smoke billowing from a tracheotomy hole in a man's neck; a woman blowing smoke in an infant's face; a toe tag attached to a corpse; a colorful rendering of a diseased lung; a cancerous lip; a man stricken with an apparent heart attack; another man in a coffin; tombstones in a cemetery.

Because this strategy for discouraging smoking has been building for decades, beginning with the first tepid warning labels in 1966, it is easy to forget the blithesome way cigarettes used to be presented to the public. But a look back at old magazine ads demonstrates how the tobacco industry once could dismiss any suggestion that cigarettes might pose harm. In one ad from 1950, a woman's dancing legs protrude from the bottom of an oversized Old Gold pack, which covers her head and torso. “No song and dance about medical claims ... Old Gold's specialty is to give you a treat instead of a treatment!”

In another ad, from 1946, a beaming mother and daughter are shown with their family doctor. The text below declares that “113,597 doctors from coast to coast” had been asked to name the brand they preferred to smoke. Thousands of responses “from general physicians, diagnosticians, surgeons — yes, and nose and throat specialists too” determined that “the most-named brand was Camel.”

Smokers were portrayed as willing to do battle for their brands. “Us Tareyton smokers would rather fight than switch!” says a woman holding a cigarette in a 1964 ad, smiling under a black eye. The tagline: “The taste that makes Tareyton smokers so aggressively loyal.”

Cigarettes were promoted as being calming for family life. A 1950 ad shows a pensive-looking baby below the words, “Before you scold me, Mom ... maybe you'd better light up a Marlboro.”

Who, back then, could have foreseen that one day cigarette makers would be required to wrap their own packages in images of suffering and death?

In that long-ago TV appearance, after he had sung the final words — “you give me a boot, I get a kick out of you” — Sinatra seemed just about to exit. But first he reached back toward a table — and snatched up his pack of smokes.

Bob Greene was a long-time columnist for the Chicago Tribune. He wrote this commentary for The New York Times.

On budget, Democrats sound like new Party of No

By offering up their joint recommendation last week for balancing the budget, the co-chairmen of Barack Obama's fiscal commission didn't solve our deficit problem once and for all, or clear a path through the political thickets facing would-be budget-cutters. But Erskine Bowles and Alan Simpson performed a valuable public service nonetheless: The reaction to their proposals demonstrated that when it comes to addressing the long-term challenges facing this country, the Democrats, too, can play the Party of No.

Last week's media coverage sometimes made it sound as if Bowles and Simpson were taking the same amount of fire from left and right. But the reaction from Republican lawmakers and the conservative intelligentsia was muted, respectful and often favorable. The liberal attacks, on the other hand, came fast and furious, from pundits and leading Democratic politicians alike — starting with the speaker of the House, Nancy Pelosi, who pronounced the recommendations “simply unacceptable” “almost immediately after their release.

Liberals defended this knee-jerk response on the grounds that the commissioners' vision, ostensibly bipartisan, was actually tilted toward Republican priorities. And it's true that Bowles and Simpson proposed more spending cuts than tax increases over all. But most of the programs and tax breaks that they suggested trimming — from farm subsidies to Defense Department bloat and the home-mortgage tax deduction — represent the American welfare state at its absolute worst. And the duo went out of their way to avoid balancing the budget on the backs of the poor. (Social Security, for instance, would be strengthened through a mix of tax increases and benefit cuts for wealthier seniors; retirees close to the poverty line would see their benefits increase.)

Their proposals certainly weren't flawless, but they did manage to include good ideas from right and left alike. And it's illuminating, and very depressing, that Democrats were so immediately outraged by a plan that reduces corporate welfare, makes Social Security more progressive, slashes the defense budget, raises the tax rate on millionaires' summer homes — and does all of this while capping the government's share of gross domestic product, not at some Scrooge-like minimum but at the highest level in modern American history.

Needless to say, none of the liberal lawmakers attacking the Simpson-Bowles proposals offered alternative blueprints for restoring America's solvency. The Democratic Party has plans for many things, but a balanced budget isn't one of them.

But pondering what Nancy Pelosi and her compatriots are rejecting gives us a pretty good sense of what they're for. It's a world where the government perpetually warps the real estate and health care marketplaces, subsidizing McMansions and gold-plated insurance plans to the tune of billions every year. It's a world where federal jobs are sacrosanct, but the private sector has to labor under one of the higher corporate tax rates in the developed West. It's a world where the Social Security retirement age never budges, no matter how high average life expectancy climbs. And it's a world where federal spending rises inexorably to 25 percent of G.D.P. and beyond, and taxes rise with it.

Liberals sometimes justify this vision by arguing that government has to permanently subsidize the middle class and affluent in order to maintain public support for any safety net at all. (Most voters won't support a system of basic social insurance for the poor, the theory goes, unless they're getting something out of it as well.) And they defend the ever-rising tax rates required to finance these ever-expanding entitlements by noting that America thrived economically in the wake of World War II, when income-tax rates were much higher than they are today.

The first argument ignores the lessons of liberalism's usual teacher, Western Europe, where governments have successfully reduced spending on their pension and entitlement systems without compromising their commitment to their neediest citizens. The second argument ignores the fact that the postwar United States didn't have any serious economic competitors (the rest of the globe having been brought to its knees by total war), whereas today, an overtaxed America would struggle to compete with China and India and Brazil.

But the deeper problem is that the entire approach treats Americans as moral midgets, incapable of providing for the elderly and indigent without being bribed with giveaways and propped up with subsidies. The alternative sketched by Bowles and Simpson last week has its weaknesses, but it has this great virtue: It treats Americans not as clients but as citizens, and not as children but as adults.

OBITUARY

Viola Ellen Baldwin Regan

Viola Regan, 96, of Twin Falls, passed away Sunday, Nov. 14, 2010, at River Ridge Care Center.

She was born May 8, 1914, in Deadwood, S.D., the daughter of James Henry and Anna Lee Goulette Baldwin. Viola married Lee R. Regan on Feb. 3, 1946. Together they enjoyed camping and fishing trips with their family and friends.

She is survived by her husband, Lee of Twin Falls; son, James (Brenda) Regan of Escondido, Calif.; daughter, Linda (Jay) Simmons of Twin Falls; son-in-law, Bill Hurd of Gooding; grandchildren, Jeffrey (Melissa) Ford, Jennifer Ford, Curtis Ford, Kenny Hurd, Troy (Bridget) Hurd, Tammy (Willie) Carter, Kim (Bill) Rotner and Derek (Patty) Kiley; 11 great-grandchildren; one great-great-grandchild; and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; sister, Ann Sharrai; brother, Gerald Baldwin; daughter, Francis Hurd; and son, Robert Lee Regan.

Special times held close to her were spending time with four of her great-grandchildren, Madison, Conner, Carson and Gary Ford.

A visitation for friends and family will be held from noon until 2 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 17, with a brief prayer service following the viewing at 2 p.m. A graveside service will be held at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding.

Baby photos from the ultimate edge – a black hole

By Seth Borenstein
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Astronomers may have lucked into the ultimate in cosmic baby pictures: a voracious black hole fresh from its violent birth.

After watching a nearby star that exploded into a supernova in 1979, astronomers now believe the star's death wasn't an ordinary one. The star's explosion was big enough to cause a black hole to develop in its wake. They think it's a black hole because they see something steadily consuming the gassy remnants of the exploded star, which is a tell-tale sign of a black hole. It sucks up everything in sight.

And in this case it's a lot. In the past 30 years since this star exploded, this baby black hole has eaten about the equivalent of the Earth in mass, which is about as big as black hole appetites can get, said Harvard astrophysicist Avi Loeb. He's co-author of a new paper in the journal New Astronomy and he discussed the findings at a NASA news conference Monday.

On a cosmic scale the mass of the Earth is not an awful lot to eat, but from Earth's point of view, it's kind of awesome, said NASA astrophysicist Kimberly Weaver. "It's like the planet eater in 'Star Trek,'" she said.

Black holes are warped regions in space where it is so dense that nothing – not even light – escapes. Scientists in this case see energy bursts from matter as it is sucked in. That matter is heavy gas from the exploded star, and possibly a partner star that may have been next to it, Weaver said.

"It's the first time we're seeing a black hole being born in a normal supernova," Loeb said. "We're able to learn about environments that cannot be reproduced in the lab and can only be observed in the universe."

While black holes are seen throughout the universe, it is unusual to witness one from near birth that "evolves and changes into its youthful stages," said Weaver. And unlike other black holes, thanks to the keen eye of a Maryland schoolteacher who witnessed the supernova in 1979, astronomers know exactly when this black hole was born, Weaver said.

By continuing to follow the black hole, future astronomers will learn how much material is left over from the star's explosion, said Dan Patnaude of Harvard, a study co-author.

This black hole is about five times more massive than our sun and the star that exploded to give it birth was maybe 20 times bigger than our sun.

Police: building collapse in New Delhi kills 51

NEW DELHI (AP) — Police and rescuers raced today to pull survivors from the debris of a four-story apartment building that collapsed in a congested neighborhood in New Delhi, killing at least 51 people and injuring 76 others.

The 15-year-old building housing about 200 people — mostly migrant workers and their families — collapsed Monday evening into a mountain of concrete slabs, iron rods, bricks and mortar in New Delhi's Lalita Park neighborhood.

About 30 people were believed still trapped under the rubble, said New Delhi's top elected official, Sheila Dikshit, and emergency efforts were hampered because fire engines had difficulty navigating the neighborhood's narrow alleyways.

At least 51 people were killed and 76 injured, said Rajesh Kumar, a spokesman of the Delhi Fire Service.

Good ideas for your home, from local crafters

By Melissa Davlin • Times-News writer

Want to pretty up your home? Consider south-central Idaho crafters.

Whether you're decorating for the holidays, looking for gifts or just seeking an excuse to shop, check out these local artisans. We scoured craft fairs, local stores and online shops for this sampling of home decor. Stop by any craft fair and find so much more: vinyl wall decor, hand-knit blankets, decorative plates.

Want more? Look for upcoming fairs in the Times-News' craft fair calendar, published on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or mdavlin@magicvalley.com.

Lampshades

Dot and Line Home Accessories, Annie Bierma, Twin Falls

Bierma doesn't just cover old lampshades; she makes them from scratch. She orders bold, modern fabrics from textile companies and buys vintage fabric to make shades you won't find in a store.

Have something specific in mind? Bierma also makes custom lampshades. Several customers have sent her fabric and swatches. Some sent fabric from their grandparents.

Because Bierma also makes the wire frames, she can design shades any size. Currently, she's working on a custom pair about 3 feet in diameter at the base.

"The thing that we really enjoy doing is creating just the right custom piece for people," Bierma said.

Bierma cuts down on waste as much as possible, using fabric scraps to make coffee sleeves.

Cost: Prices start at $29.95 for sale lampshades, $6.99 for the coffee sleeves.

Where to find it: dotandline.etsy.com or dotandlineshop.com. Bierma has a studio above Pomerelle Studios in Twin Falls and takes customers by appointment only. Call her at 410-0963.

On Dec. 3-4, Bierma will have a display at The Nehemiah's holiday open house in Buhl; 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days.

Tin puppy candy holder

Larry Laub, Jerome

Laub only recently started making these candy holders, reusing soup cans to shape the puppy — and putting himself in the middle of the trash-art trend.

One of his customers uses the dog tin to store his remote controls. Another customer bought it for a veterinary clinic, to store dog treats. Laub recently started making tin can cats; keep an eye on his Etsy store for those.

Cost: $20.

Where to find it: Watch for Laub at local craft fairs; as of Thursday, he didn't have anything scheduled for sure but was trying to book a booth. Otherwise, you can find his work online at idahospudnik.etsy.com.

Painted Christmas ornaments

Sue Melson, Rupert

Instead of tossing away faded Christmas balls last year, Melson decided to give them new life with acrylic paint. She added images of hummingbirds, flowers and winter scenes. The scenes painted on some of the ornaments come from postcards from the early 1900s that Melson's grandmother saved.

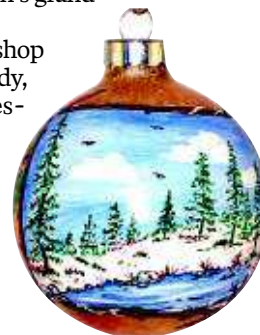

Her daughter, who sells crafts through online shop Etsy, offered to list Melson's ornaments. Already, there has been some interest, but Melson doesn't plan to sell them elsewhere.

"I've painted for ages," Melson said.

"When you get in the upper years, you've got to have something to do."

Cost: $18 each.

Where to find it: sandstormstudio.etsy.com.

Recycled paper boxes

Mickey Tanner, Twin Falls

For these cute gift boxes, Tanner uses recycled paper, handmade paper, card stock and old greeting cards. The boxes come in a variety of colors and patterns in 2-, 3-, 4- and 6-inch squares.

Tanner started making the boxes after learning from a friend, who learned from her great-grandmother.

The boxes have exploded in popularity. After being featured on the cover of Country Living Magazine's December 2009 issue, Tanner has received orders from across the U.S. She recently debuted boxes with see-through vellum lids — a pretty way to package cookies, candies or other small gifts.

"I figured if people were going to make something handmade, why shouldn't the product they package it in be handmade as well?" Tanner said.

Before you give them away, these boxes can be part of your home's holiday decor.

Cost: From $18 for a set of 12.

Where to find it: ecovintagevegan.etsy.com

Magnet recipe holder

Steffany Wells, Burley

Wells got the idea for a magnetic recipe holder after seeing similar boards meant for pictures. Tired of her recipe cards sitting on the counter, she made magnetic holders for her own kitchen, then started selling them.

She makes standard recipe card holders, but prefers to do custom.

"I love that it's something that fits with someone's specific colors, specific style," she said. A recent customer wanted lime green, while another wanted a saying in Italian.

Wells also sells decorative plates, letter blocks and other crafts.

Cost: Starting at $8. DIY kits are available; contact Wells for pricing.

Where to find it:

warmandwelcoming.etsy.com. Or call Wells at 678-2371.

Wood River Valley homes clean up Gem State's architectural honors

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Mark Pynn conceived his dream house 13 years ago.

He finally got to build it a few years ago, watching as builders tucked it into a sun-splashed, sagebrush-covered hillside in East Fork Canyon south of Ketchum.

Now other architects have taken note of Pynn's home sweet home, as well. It's one of six projects honored in the Bi-Annual American Institute of Architects Design Awards ceremony held a week ago in Ketchum.

Pynn was one of four Sun Valley-area architects selected. Susan Desko won an Award of Citation for her Lake Creek residence; Jeff Williams and Williams Partners Architects received an Award of Merit for their 600 Second Condominium residences; and Michael Doty Associates won an Award of Honor for his work on the new Cornerstone Bar and Grill, on the site of an 1800s grocery store on Ketchum's Main Street.

Franklin Allen Architects received an award for a modest remodeling of a rustic cabin in Cascade, and CSHQA for its restoration of the Idaho Capitol.

Pynn covered the outside of his house with maintenance-free galvanized siding similar to that found on Fairfield's grain elevators, which he said "never have to be painted but last forever."

The main floor is cantilevered over the subterranean garage, with the cantilevered roofs giving the building the appearance of being "of the hill."

White oak panels and black steel characterize architect Jeff Williams' condominiums.

were chosen to reflect the natural environment.

Native aggregates taken from the nearby Wood River were mixed into the concrete floors before they dried to emulate Idaho's streambeds. Natural birch cabinets, floor, ceiling panels and trim pay homage to the area's aspen trees. The fireplace was made of nearby Idaho quartzite. And the interior walls were painted to match native grasses in the fall.

Meanwhile, developer Jack Bariteau became convinced a luxury condominium project would work in the middle of town after building the Colonnade and Christiania buildings, both of which combine residential and retail space.

He found property that had never been built on because of its steep drop to Trail Creek. And he commissioned Williams Partners Architects to build a "mountain contemporary" project.

"People kept asking me when I was going to do something more modern. And it was appealing to me because I've been a student of architecture for a long time," he said.

The result: Nine two-level, four-bedroom, four-bath townhouses on East Second Street, each of which has a view of Baldy from the front and Dollar Mountain from the back. The project also includes a single-story affordable unit.

The project, which AIA judges called a "very sound and well-executed high-density residential project," borders a beautiful park characterized by its rock staircase that Bariteau built for the city.

The condominiums utilize stonework in a contemporary fashion, offering an alternative to Sun Valley's more typical rustic lodge look, Williams said.

Inside, 100-year-old white oak panels, recycled from a Portland building that was set for demolition, hang on the ceilings to define the great room from the kitchen and dining room. The ceiling panels also offer a wood look without rustic logs. Black steel accents corners, stairways and fireplace mantles.

"It has very clean lines and a neutral palate that can be furnished with contemporary furniture or antiques. We opened in 2009 after the recession had started, and we've sold all but one unit, even in difficult economic circumstances," Bariteau said.

The third residential project is Desko's contemporary three-story home in the Lake Creek area just north of Ketchum.

The exterior features reclaimed wood that Desko cut to resemble slate. The entryway features a huge door and foyer. The master bedroom sits on the top floor.

"It's definitely an art piece given the cabinetry and the creative ways she's worked with the material in the house," said Robin Reiners, a Ketchum gallery owner. "Each room is so quaint and yet so voluminous. And she utilizes the space in a very unique way so that it's set up very well for entertaining."

CSI reschedules tile installation class

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center is offering another session of its "DIY: Tile Installation" class taught by Rob O'Donnell, 7-9 p.m. Dec. 3 and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 4 in CSI's Shields 106.

Students will learn how to install tile inside or outside the home. Class will cover use and installation of ceramic, porcelain, glass and natural stone tiles and will teach the skills needed, including calculating materials and gathering tools to complete projects from floors to showers and backsplashes.

Class will also introduce concrete as a cost-effective way to upgrade a home.

Cost is $60, plus a $10 supply fee. Register: communityed.csi.edu.

Stumped by the table decor question?

Times-News

Overcome your table decor woes with a pair of holiday-themed, hands-on workshops from the College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center, taught by Heather Hopkins.

• In "Thanksgiving Centerpiece," students will be guided through the process of making a table centerpiece using brilliant fall color. They'll learn design basics using floral principles and make a centerpiece to take home. Class is 6:30-8:30 p.m. Nov. 22 in the CSI Greenhouse. Cost is $20, plus a $15 materials fee.

• In "Christmas Centerpieces and Wreaths," students will learn to create fresh evergreen wreaths, and each will make a centerpiece to take home. Class is 6:30-8:30 p.m. Dec. 2 in the CSI Greenhouse.

Cost is $20, plus a $15 materials fee.

Register: communityed.csi.edu or 732-6442.

What's new: Extra for paint takes away odor

Akron Beacon Journal

A new additive turns latex paint or primer into an odor eater.

ZorbX Odor Remover Paint Additive, from Cleveland's ZorbX Inc., penetrates the surface you're painting and permanently removes its odors. The company says the product works on odors such as cigarette smoke, pet urine and musty smells without affecting the chemistry or performance of the paint or primer.

The additive can be ordered at www.zorbx.com. Two 3.5-ounce jars, enough for two gallons of paint, cost $14.99 plus shipping.

Tweaking tradition at Thanksgiving

By Kim Cook
For The Associated Press

For much of America, Thanksgiving is one celebration not to be messed with.

Those who try to jettison the candied yams or who forget Grandma's gravy boat might have the family to answer to. And if it's been a chrysanthemum centerpiece since your husband was a baby, it may be difficult to try something new.

But for some — young people setting up their own homes, empty nesters and many folks in-between — the same old same old is just that. They'd like to tweak tradition and mark the holiday in new ways.

If you're looking for stylish ways to update the table, you don't have to spend a lot. It's more a matter of color, and changing up a few elements.

"Choose a palette of one or two colors — brown, orange or pale yellow will go with existing neutrals," says Jenn Aaronson, Martha Stewart Living's food and entertaining editorial director. "Tablecloths aren't always necessary; dress your table with cloth napkins and even paper cutouts. Simple branches or single color floral arrangements always look modern."

The magazine's website has a number of pretty ideas for a contemporary holiday table. Painted or natural gourds mixed with modern pottery can be filled with pine cones or nuts; gild the contents for some shine. Paint small bird feathers, stamp them on ivory napery, and arrange with white dishware on chartreuse placemats for an airy yet elegant table.

HGTV.com contributor Erinn Valencich pairs warm-toned pillar candles with simple berry branches.

This buffet plate from Crate and Barrel's Dorata collection would work well on a casual table setting but also suit a sleek, contemporary table.

More easy, inexpensive ideas include using pears and seed pods for place card holders, leaf-shaped felt cutouts as mats and runners, and colorful Indian-corn husks as wrappers for glass votive holders.

Erinn Valencich, blogger for HGTV.com's Design Happens, likes to experiment with colors. "Last year I chose chocolate and lavender," she says. "A beautiful set of gold rimmed dinnerware and gold accents on the votive holders gave the table an elegant, modern look."

Burlap, cafe colors and white dinnerware are another option. "Have fun with materials; contrast ceramic with glass, wood and gleaming metal," Valencich says. "Forgo the old standby tablecloth and opt for glamorous, polished silver chargers and chocolate-brown linen napkins."

She also likes aubergine, fuchsia and deep purple layered with gold accents, "and a large, from-the-market centerpiece of black champagne grapes, artichokes and eggplant. All deep fall colors that set a gorgeous, modern table in minutes."

Even if you're still putting lots of effort into the traditional feast, there's no reason why the setting can't be easy and look chic.

Unbutton more than the sweater vest, and have fun.

Avoid a trashy party

By Terri Bennett
McClatchy Newspapers

From Thanksgiving dinner to a New Year's Eve bash, it's easy to throw a fabulous get-together without busting the budget or generating a bunch of extra trash.

In fact, according to the Environmental Protection Agency, we generate about 25 percent more trash than usual between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day. That's an additional million tons of trash!

If your invitation list exceeds your number of place settings, renting your supplies really can be a green and economical way to entertain. You can rent linens, table settings, glassware, food servers, vases and so much more. Renting can make your job easier because many companies deliver to your door and pick up after the party. In many cases, you only need to rinse the dishes before sending them back.

If you're looking for a more economical idea, look no further than nearby friends and relatives. They may have a stash of holiday-themed plates or some extra cloth napkins they will gladly let you borrow.

However, if you still have the silver-plated cheese straightener that you borrowed last June, you should return it before you ask for the plates.

Thrift stores and consignment shops are perfect places to find interesting one-of-a-kind items on a budget. It's a great conversation starter when each person has a unique place setting.

If disposable items are your only option, choose paper products made with recycled paper content. Look for ones that contain at least 30 percent post-consumer content. Plastic products are convenient and can also be eco-friendly if you rinse and recycle them. Better yet, wash and use them again.

The real key is to avoid buying plastic foam-like products labeled No. 6 on the bottom. These items are rarely accepted in plastic recycling programs and never break down in the environment.

Beverages served in reusable cups are the greenest party option, and this is where renting or borrowing can really come in handy. Otherwise, choose beverage containers that you can easily recycle. Aluminum cans are always a good choice because the packaging is lighter, more compact and more easily recycled than glass or plastic.

Presentation on energy conservation scheduled for Wood River residents

Times-News

Want to learn how to increase energy efficiency in your home? Plan to attend a Ketchum event hosted by the Environmental Resource Center and The Community Library to learn about energy assessments and energy audits of your home.

The interactive presentation will be 6 to 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at The Community Library, 415 Spruce St. N. in Ketchum.

Energy auditors will field questions, and Jolyon Sawrey will give an overview about saving money through smart energy-efficiency efforts. Craig Barry of the ERC will answer questions about local $2,000 rebates and federal and state tax credits.

Wood River Valley residents continue to take advantage of local rebates and federal tax credits to reduce their energy bills and environmental impact, but funds are dwindling, according to the ERC.

Information: Amber Gray at 726-4333.

Bring fall to the table with napkin rings adorned with acorns, a natural decoration.

Courtesy of Kelly Wilkinson

Around the table, naturally

By Kelly Wilkinson
The Washington Post

How to

When it comes to the Thanksgiving table, I don't bother much with fussy decorations. There's so much natural warmth and atmosphere generated by the act of gathering those you love most around a table. Plus, if your table is anything like mine, it's crowded!

But I do cherish the opportunity to bring a small touch of craft and nature to the dinner table.

Acorns are sleek and sculptural, as well as being cheery symbols of fall and gathering. Using them to create napkin rings out of leather plays up the warmth of that rich nut brown color, adding to the coziness of the main event.

If you can find leather with a metallic sheen, that adds a glamorous note. And using pink waxed cotton to tie on the acorns brings a hit of color to the muted palette. Check high-quality fabric stores for inexpensive leather remnants or hides. If you can't get your hands on leather, I recommend using cork instead. Its color and texture are similar, and the kind sold in rolls at office supply stores is plenty pliable to work with.

Don't get me wrong: Decorations don't stand in for people you miss around the table. But embellishing the meal with thought and gratitude amplifies what Thanksgiving is all about.

Makes 4 napkin rings; multiply as needed.

You'll need

- 4 acorns
- Safety glasses
- Drill with 1/8-inch drill bit
- Scrap of leather or cork
- Ruler
- Pencil
- Sharp scissors, such as fabric shears
- Chopping board
- Nail (4-6 inches) or nail punch and hammer
- Cotton waxed cord
- Masking tape
- Hot glue gun or strong epoxy glue, such as E-6000
- Clothespin

1. Prepare the acorns. Wipe them clean if needed, then separate the acorn caps from the nuts. Wearing safety glasses, drill through the bottom of each acorn cap and set aside the acorns, keeping each nut with its original cap.

2. Prepare the leather: Cut 4 rectangles 1 1/2 by 6 inches each. This makes napkin rings that are about 2 inches in diameter, which I find holds a napkin snugly. On the chopping board, center the nail punch on the front side of the leather and hit it strongly with a hammer to punch a small hole. If you're using a nail instead of a nail punch, hammer the nail through the leather.

3. Cut 12 8-inch lengths of waxed cord (3 lengths per napkin ring). Knot three cords at one end and tape to your workspace to secure. Then braid strands for 1 1/2 to 2 inches and knot again at the end of the braid. You will have a few inches of unbraided cord left.

4. Push the unbraided ends of cord through the hole in the leather. If the hole is too tight, reinsert the nail or nail punch through the hole and wiggle to make the hole larger.

5. Knot the cords on the underside of the leather and trim the ends.

6. Add the acorns: Take the other end of the cord (beyond the braid) and insert it though the hole in one acorn cap, so the knot sits on top of the cap. Squeeze hot glue or epoxy onto the underside of the cap and press the ends of the cord into the glue to secure. Trim the ends that hang beyond the cap.

7. Squeeze more glue onto the underside of the cap and reattach the acorn. Let dry according to instructions on the glue.

8. Apply a thin layer of glue along the far edge on the backside of the leather. Wrap the leather to create a circle, pressing the other edge of the leather on top of the glue. Secure with a clothespin until dry.

9. Repeat to make as many napkin rings as required.

Remodeling tips help you go green

By Mary Beth Breckenridge
Akron Beacon Journal

Green construction doesn't have to happen from the ground up. Builder Barry Katz advocates remodeling to make a house more environmentally sensitive in his book, "Practical Green Remodeling: Down-to-Earth Solutions for Everyday Homes."

Katz emphasizes that the book isn't a how-to guide but rather a "what-to-book," a compilation of possibilities designed to help readers see what they can achieve through remodeling. He offers a wealth of ideas for conserving resources or making a home healthier or more energy-efficient, from simple strategies such as caulking to large-scale projects such as major additions.

Profiles of several remodeling projects let readers see how other homeowners have achieved their green goals.

"Practical Green Remodeling" is published by Taunton Press and sells for $24.95 in softcover.

CLEANING

Question:

Hi Lori, I'm a very short housekeeper, only 4' 5"! Most of the homes I clean have vaulted ceilings with high window ledges, plant shelves and decorative platforms. Although they are architecturally pleasing, they collect tons of dust requiring frequent cleaning. Help! When I'm on my tippy toes with arms fully extended, my maximum reach is 5' 1"!

"Trying to Reach New Heights!"
(p.s. I hate climbing ladders!)

Answer:

Relax, you're not alone. Even 7' housekeepers are vertically challenged when it comes to those out of reach areas. You need my Flexi-Reach Microfiber Duster. Not only will the long pile washable microfiber dusting cover trap and hold dust & dirt like nothing else, but it's flexible steel core will bend & hold it's shape allowing you to get into those difficult nooks and crannies. And best of all, it's extension pole allows you to reach up to 20' high... FLAT FOOTED!

Trading the technicals of grain marketing

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

Supply and demand fundamentals have driven grain marketing decisions for years, but the technicals are becoming ever more important.

“Technical analysis is not witchcraft, it’s not rolling the dice, it’s not throwing a dart,” explained Craig Corbett, a grain producer from Grace. He describes technical analysis as the study of market action through the use of charts.

The technicals used to trade grain are exactly the same as traders use to trade

“Technical analysis is not witchcraft, it’s not rolling the dice, it’s not throwing a dart.”

— Craig Corbett, a grain producer from Grace stocks, gold or oil, Corbett said.

He spoke during a webinar sponsored by the Idaho Barley Commission last week. He is also providing analysis for the IBC’s market alert which is a supplement to the IBC’s weekly market report.

One of the key points to remember about markets — any market — is that prices move in (sometimes unperfect) trends.

For example, a chart for the December corn futures contract showed a classic wedge last Wednesday, a pattern indicating a commodity is poised to make a major up or down price break. Charts the next day indicated a sell off was likely and by Friday the markets had all broken lower thanks to widespread liquidation in the stock and commodity markets.

The charts showed a big break was coming, but Corbett said in the market technical signals do reflect supply and demand fundamentals.

Technicals are just like the gauges in a piece of equipment, Corbett said; “Sometimes they give you a false signal but you have to stop and pay attention.”

There are only three trends to worry about when marketing grain or anything else: up, down and sideways. Of the three, sideways is the most difficult.

Corrections will happen in either an up or down market, but those are relatively easy to identify. The trouble with

The staying power of farm subsidies

By Mary Clare Jalonick
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Many Republicans who swept rural Democrats from office are now confronting the reality of a promise to reduce spending: Should it cover the farm subsidies that have brought money and jobs to their districts — and directly benefited some GOP lawmakers or their families?

Analysis

At least 13 Democrats on the House Agriculture Committee lost on Nov. 2, and most of them helped steer generous farm support back home. Many of their replacements avoided the issue of farm payments during the campaign as they focused on broader themes of lowering federal spending and changing Washington.

They’ll have to face it soon enough. Congress is expected to begin work on the next five-year farm bill before the 2012 election.

“They are here to represent their districts, and if their district is clearly a strong agricultural district that uses the programs in the farm bill, it may be something where they have to break with what they campaigned on,” says Chandler Goule, a lobbyist for the National Farmers Union.

For some deficit-cutting Republicans, it’s a question that’s close to home.

Crop insurance — it costs taxpayers billions of dollars a year — is an effective way to give farmers the security they need when weather ruins a harvest, Hartzler said. She suggests the Conservation Reserve Program, which pays farmers to idle environmentally sensitive land, may have to go.

GOP Rep. Michele Bachmann of Minnesota, an outspoken critic of farm payments, listed between $15,000 and $50,000 in farm income as one source of revenue on her personal financial disclosure statement last year, citing a Bachmann family farm in Independence, Wis., as an asset.

That farm, which was owned by her

Stores swallow high costs to keep turkey prices low

By Melissa Allison
The Seattle Times

SEATTLE — Cheap turkey is a blessing that grocery stores bestow on shoppers every November, but this year the bargains are especially meaningful.

Stores are paying 33 percent more for turkeys because of high feed prices and low inventory, according to The Food Institute, a trade association in New Jersey.

In the first eight months of this year, the U.S. slaughtered 157 million turkeys, down 3.4 percent from the same period in 2009; stocks of cold-stored birds are down 24 percent; and prices for wheat and other feed are high following a disastrous drought in Russia.

That means stores are paying more — an average of $1.05 a pound — for turkeys this holiday season, but many will sell them far below their cost.

Turkeys are traditionally loss leaders at Thanksgiving, like soft drinks are in the summer. Because Thanksgiving is such a narrow window, turkey pricing remains highly secretive and is not discussed publicly until the birds arrive in stores and sale prices appear in advertisements.

For example, Haggen, a Pacific Northwest supermarket chain, will not discuss how much it plans to charge for fresh turkeys this year, which are scheduled to arrive in stores next week.

“There’s going to be a sale, but no one shows their hand until the ad,” said Becky Skaggs, a Haggen spokeswoman.

Haggen offers frozen turkeys for 27 cents a pound with a $25 purchase, although its turkey costs are up 10 to 15 percent from last year.

It sells three times as many turkeys during the two weeks before Thanksgiving as the whole rest of the year, Skaggs said.

Nevada study says livestock eat dry cheatgrass

Elko Daily Free Press

ELKO — Federal land managers in Nevada are embracing new research that shows livestock will eat cheatgrass when the invasive plant dries out in the fall, not just when it’s green during the spring grazing season.

The study by researchers at the University of Nevada, Reno debunks the belief by some ranchers that dry cheatgrass has little or no nutritional value for cattle grazing on federal lands, officials for the U.S. Bureau of Management said.

It also suggests fall grazing on the invasive weeds could help make a dent on cheatgrass-covered hillsides that fuel late summer wildfires across northern Nevada, the Great Basin and other parts of the interior West.

“The notion that animals don’t eat dry cheatgrass is incorrect,” said Barry Perryman, an associate professor of rangeland ecology and member of the BLM’s Northeastern Resource Advisory Council.

“Our experiment showed that once the seeds fell off the plants, the cheatgrass became palatable,” he said.

Ben Bruce, a Nevada associate professor of rangeland animal nutrition who co-authored the study, said it provides ranchers with “another source of forage that previously was not considered nutritious.”

“The protein content and energy of cheatgrass in the fall is at least as good, if not better, than perennial grasses,” Perryman said. “And the results were consistent through the four-year study.”

The two conducted the experiment from 2006 to 2008 at the Gund Ranch near Eureka, about 200 miles east of Reno.

Schirete Zick, spokeswoman for the BLM’s Battle Mountain district, said UNR financed the study itself but agency officials “are excited about the findings and are helping publicize the results.”

“The results clearly demonstrate that cheatgrass can be significantly reduced with the aid of fall grazing,” she told the Elko Daily Free Press.

Cheatgrass is believed to arrived in the United States in the late 19th and early 20th centuries in contaminated ship ballast and railroad packing materials from Europe and Asia.

It spread quickly, displacing native plants, and is now the dominant species on more than 100 million acres in the West, according to the BLM.

Jerry Smith, district manager for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management’s Battle Mountain District, said cheatgrass was father-in-law, received more than $250,000 in subsidies over the past 15 years, according to the Environmental Working Group. A Bachmann spokesman said she is not involved in any operational decisions.

South Dakota Republican Kristi Noem, who ousted Democratic Rep. Stephanie Herseth Sandlin, had partial ownership in a ranch that received more than $3 million in subsidies over 15 years, though her family bought her out last year.

Whether those members defend farm spending or not, the agriculture sector may be in for cuts when Congress looks at writing the next five-year farm bill, expected by 2012. There probably will be much less money to go around, and Republican Rep. John Boehner of Ohio, in line to be speaker, voted against the last farm bill, saying it was too costly.

a sideways trend is that it can last a long time and often producers – or even traders – get antsy and make a decision too quickly.

“You have to be patient, you have to watch the technicals,” Corbett said. He suggested tuning out market reports or weather reports that may give a false preconceived notion of where the market is headed.

Patience is also going to be critical this week. “This is a time to watch and be very careful that decisions are not made on pure emotion. Is this a correction or a new trend? Right now the charts point to a correction from over-bought conditions, but next week’s trade will be key,” Corbett said.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 9.39, or 0.1 percent, to close at 11,201.97. It had been up as much as 88 points earlier.

The broader Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 1.46, or 0.1 percent, to 1,197.75, while the technology-focused Nasdaq composite index fell 4.39, or 0.2 percent, to 2,513.82.

Six out of the 10 industry groups within the S&P 500 index fell. Companies in the materials industry fell the most, down 0.9 percent. Financial companies posted the index's largest gains with a 0.4 rise. JP Morgan Chase gained 1.3 percent to become the top stock among the 30 companies that make up the Dow. Walt Disney's 1.3 fall made it the laggard.

Yields for Treasury bonds rose for the third straight day, lifting interest rates to their highest level in four months. The 10 year Treasury bond's yield rose to 2.95 percent, the highest since before the Federal Reserve announced that it would spend $600 billion to buy bonds in an attempt to spur the economy.

Scanners and pat-downs upset airline passengers

By Joan Lowy and Adam Goldman
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Nearly a week before the Thanksgiving travel crush, federal air security officials were struggling to reassure rising numbers of fliers and airline workers outraged by new anti-terrorism screening procedures they consider invasive and harmful.

Across the country, passengers simmered over being forced to choose scans by full-body image detectors or probing pat-downs. Top federal security officials said Monday that the procedures were safe and necessary sacrifices to ward off terror attacks.

“It’s all about security,” Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano said. “It’s all about everybody recognizing their role.”

Despite officials’ insistence that they had taken care to prepare the American flying public, the flurry of criticism from private citizens to airline pilots’ groups suggested that Napolitano and other federal officials had been caught off guard.

At the San Diego airport, a software engineer posted an Internet blog item saying he had been ejected after being threatened with a fine and lawsuit for refusing a groin check after turning down a full-body scan. The passenger, John Tyner, said he told a federal Transportation Security Administration worker, “If you touch my junk, I’m gonna have you arrested.”

Tyner’s individual protest quickly became a web sensation, but questions also came from travel business groups, civil liberties activists and pilots, raising concerns both about the procedures themselves and about the possibility of delays caused by passengers reluctant to accept the new procedures.

“Almost to a person, travel managers are concerned that TSA is going too far and without proper procedures and sufficient oversight,” said Kevin Mitchell, chairman of the Business Travel Coalition, an advocacy group representing corporate travel departments. “Travel managers are hearing from their travelers about this virtually on a daily basis.”

Jeffrey Price, an aviation professor at Metropolitan State College of Denver, said

two trends are converging: the regular holiday security increases and the addition of body scanners and new heightened measures stemming from the recent attempted cargo bombings. Also, several airports are short-staffed, which will add to delays, Price said.

Homeland Security and the TSA have moved forcefully to shift airport screening from familiar scanners to full-body detection machines. The new machines show the body’s contours on a computer stationed in a private room removed from the security checkpoints. A person’s face is never shown and the person’s identity is supposedly not known to the screener reviewing the computer images.

Concerns about privacy and low-level radiation emitted by the machines have led some passengers to refuse screening. Under TSA rules, those who decline must submit to rigorous pat-down inspections that include checks of the inside of travelers’ thighs and buttocks. The American Civil Liberties Union has denounced the machines as a “virtual strip search.”

Scientists propose one-way trips to Mars

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

PULLMAN, Wash. — It’s usually cheaper to fly one way, even to Mars.

Two scientists are suggesting that colonization of the red planet could happen faster and more economically if astronauts behaved like the first settlers to come to North America — not expecting to go home.

“The main point is to get Mars exploration moving,” said Dirk Schulze-Makuch, a Washington State University professor who co-authored an article that seriously proposes what sounds like a preposterous idea.

At least one moon-walking astronaut was not impressed.

“This is premature,” Ed Mitchell of Apollo 14 wrote in an e-mail. “We aren’t ready for this yet.”

Also cool to the idea was NASA. President Barack Obama has already outlined a plan to go to Mars by the mid-2030s, but he never suggested these space travelers wouldn’t come home.

“We want our people back,” NASA spokesman Michael Braukus said.

The article titled “To Boldly Go” appears in the latest issue of the Journal of Cosmology, which featured more than 50 articles and essays on Mars exploration.

Schulze-Makuch and Paul Davies, a physicist at Arizona State University, argue that humans must begin colonizing another planet as a hedge against a catastrophe on Earth. They believe the one-way trips could start in two decades.

“You would send a little bit older folks, around 60 or something like that,” Schulze-Makuch said, bringing to mind the aging heroes who saved the day in the movie “Space Cowboys.”

That’s because the mission would undoubtedly reduce a person’s lifespan, from a lack of medical care and exposure to radiation. Radiation could also damage reproductive organs, so sending people of childbearing age is not a good idea, Schulze-Makuch said.

Mars is a six-month flight away, and it has surface gravity, a thin atmosphere, frozen water, carbon dioxide and essential minerals. The two scientists propose the missions begin with two two-person teams, in separate ships that would serve as living quarters on the planet. More colonists and regular supply ships would follow.

Rep. elect Jaime Herrera, R-Wash., talks with the media on Capitol Hill in Washington, Monday, during Congressional freshmen orientation.

A new day on Capitol Hill: Change coming — now

By Laurie Kellman
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Old and new Washington collided on Capitol Hill Monday, and new won.

Within moments of flicking on the Senate lights, Sen. Mitch McConnell announced that when it came to pork barrel politics he had changed his mind. The Senate’s staunchest fan of so-called earmarks reversed course and supported a ban on those special spending requests, a bow to the tea partiers and others in the populist, antiestablishment wave that gave the GOP control of the House and six more seats in the Senate.

“Old habits aren’t easy to break, but sometimes they must be,” McConnell said on the Senate floor.

His announcement put an exclamation mark on the return of lawmakers to Capitol Hill Monday for a “lame duck” session before the newcomers take their places officially in January. There’s still major business for the current Congress, from tax cuts that will or won’t be preserved to possible special Social Security checks to spending bills to keep the government going.

Monday was an extraordinary day that blended Congresses past, present and future as the fading Democratic majority began to yield.

It wasn’t going quietly.

For the more than 100 rookies dining and orienting around campus, there was no starker lesson than the spectacle of Rep. Charles Rangel, a once-mighty committee chairman now facing ethics charges — four decades after his arrival was supposed to herald the shake-up of an old, corrupt political order.

Ethics panel deliberates whether veteran NY Rep. Rangel misused office, broke House rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shortly after veteran Rep. Charles Rangel of New York walked out of his ethics trial in protest, a House panel began closed-door deliberations Monday on 13 counts of alleged financial and fundraising misconduct that could bring formal condemnation.

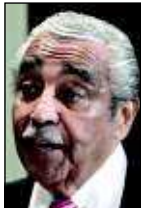

Only recently one of the most powerful members of Congress, Rangel was reduced to pleading in vain for colleagues to give him time to raise money for a lawyer before taking up the charges. The 80-year-old congressman left even before they said no, and the rare proceeding — only the second for this type of hearing in two decades — went on without him.

There were plenty of other lessons, pedestrian as well as profound for the new folks: not only how to be an employer, a first for some of them, and how to avoid Washington’s ethical traps, but also where to eat, how to vote, how to get to the subway beneath the Capitol, even which elevators to use.

As for politics — in case any politicians had missed the message of the Nov. 2 elections — triumphant conservative activists, many of them tea partiers, rallied on the Capitol lawn with signs urging Congress to heed their call for smaller government and greater accountability.

“Phase One, Nov. 2010. Complete,” read one sign. “Phase Two, Nov. 2012. We are watching you.”

Acutely aware of that, longtime lawmakers began to let change flow through the corri-

Rangel

An ethics committee panel of four Democrats and four Republicans was sitting as a jury in the case late Monday. The official acting as prosecutor said the facts were so clear there was no need to call witnesses, and panel members agreed.

If the panel members decide Rangel violated any House rules, the full committee will hold a hearing on how he should be punished. The most likely sanction would be a House vote deploring his conduct.

Rangel, a 20-term congressman representing New York’s Harlem neighborhood, implored the ethics panel for further delay, saying that “50 years of public service is on the line.”

dors of power, already heavy with the cold-weather scent of fireplaces ablaze in the Capitol’s grand parlors.

President Barack Obama, just back from a 10-day trip to the other side of the globe, said he would be ready to talk policy when the Republicans were finished celebrating. He said of his upcoming meeting with congressional leaders: “I’m sure it will be very relaxing.”

“Campaigning is very different from governing. All of us learn that. And they’re still flush with victory,” he said. “We’re going to have a whole bunch of time next year for some serious philosophical debates.”

Change was evident at the lunch table, too. In the Senate, 16 newly elected senators — 13 of them Republicans — were invited to dine with veterans, including some not returning next year.

Facebook revamps messaging

By Barbara Ortutay and Michael Liedtke
Associated Press writers

SAN FRANCISCO — Facebook is betting that one day soon, we’ll all be acting like high school students — more texting and instant-messaging, at the expense of e-mail.

Facebook unveiled a new messaging system Monday, and while CEO Mark Zuckerberg didn’t go as far as declaring e-mail dead, he clearly sees the four-decade-old technology being eclipsed by more real-time ways of communicating.

“We don’t think a modern messaging system is going to be e-mail,” Zuckerberg said.

Right now, Facebook’s Messages section is a lot like an e-mail inbox. The overhauled version, which will be rolled out to users by invitation in coming months, brings in cell phone texts, IM chats and e-mails from non-Facebook accounts.

All the messages stack up in one inbox, and they’re organized by the person sending them rather than the type of technology they use. For those who want one, Facebook will hand out facebook.com e-mail addresses — mostly to make it easier to communicate with people who aren’t on Facebook.

“If we do a good job, some people will say this is the way that the future will work,” Zuckerberg said.

By making e-mail part of its communications hub, Facebook escalates its duel with Internet search leader Google Inc., which shook up online communications 6½ years ago with its Gmail service. Google has said it will roll out more social networking features to counter Facebook’s growing popularity, and within Gmail it already lets people chat, e-mail and make phone calls.

Yahoo, AOL and Microsoft are working to incorporate messages from other social sites into their main e-mail systems.

Conn. firms to suspend deliveries of Four Loko

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut liquor wholesalers have agreed to voluntarily suspend their shipment and deliveries of a caffeinated alcoholic drink that has been banned in four states.

Gov. M. Jodi Rell and Consumer Protection Commissioner Jerry Farrell said on Monday that they have secured the deal to curb the distribution of Four Loko and two similar beverages, including Four Maxed and Joose.

The popular drinks have been banned in Washington, Michigan, Utah and Oklahoma.

Four Loko is made by Chicago-based Phusion Projects. A 23.5-ounce can has an alcohol content of 12 percent, comparable to four beers. Its co-founder says the company believes that mixing alcohol and caffeine is safe.

College students have been hospitalized after drinking the beverages, including in New Jersey, where one school banned them on campus.

Golfer blinded by bad shot sues pal for no ‘Fore!’

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Two doctors are playing golf on Long Island. One hits such a poor shot from the rough that it hits his partner, standing somewhere off to the side, in the head. Whose fault is that?

New York’s top court will hear arguments today about whether Dr. Anoop Kapoor was negligent and should have yelled, “Fore!” as a warning before the shot. A judge dismissed Dr. Azad Anand’s lawsuit, finding he took on the primary risk by golfing.

A midlevel court, divided 3-1, agreed, concluding Anand was “not in the foreseeable danger zone” and his friend had no duty to yell the customary warning. Anand was blinded in one eye.

The Appellate Division majority also questioned whether even a negligent failure to warn another golfer before taking a swing is inconsistent with the doctrine that anyone stepping onto the course assumes the risk of getting hit.

“It relieves the striker of almost any responsibility whatsoever,” said Steven Cohn, a lawyer representing Anand. “Common practice pretty much says you have a duty to yell, ‘Fore!’ You have a duty to know where the other golfers are.”

A dissenting justice said there’s a factual question under existing case law about whether Kapoor violated the sport’s rule or custom, “unreasonably increased” his partner’s risk and caused the accident.

The Court of Appeals is expected to rule next month.

The men were playing in 2002 at the Dix Hills Park Golf Course with another friend. After hitting a second shot on the first hole, each set off to find his ball.

Anand testified he was hit after he found his ball and turned around, about 15 to 20 feet away from Kapoor.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

By Bil Keane

“... or I just might hafta give you a good ticklin’!”

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 16, the 320th day of 2010. There are 45 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 16, 1960, Academy Award-winning actor Clark Gable died in Los Angeles at age 59 shortly after he completed filming “The Misfits” with co-star Marilyn Monroe.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1776, British troops captured Fort Washington in New York during the American Revolution.

In 1885, Canadian rebel leader Louis Riel was executed for high treason.

In 1907, Oklahoma became the 46th state of the union.

In 1917, Georges Clemenceau again became prime minister of France.

In 1933, the United States and the Soviet Union established diplomatic relations.

In 1959, the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical “The Sound of Music” opened on Broadway.

In 1966, Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard was acquitted in his second trial of murdering his pregnant wife, Marilyn, in 1954.

In 1970, the Lockheed L-1011 Tristar jetliner went on its first test flight from Palmdale, Calif.

In 1973, Skylab 4, carrying a crew of three astronauts, was launched from Cape Canaveral on an 84-day mission.

In 1982, an agreement was announced in the 57th day of a strike by National Football League players.

Ten years ago: Al Gore won a legal fight to expand manual recounts as he struggled to trim George W. Bush's 300-vote lead in Florida's presidential race. President Bill Clinton arrived in Vietnam for the first visit by a U.S. chief executive since the fall of Saigon and the communist takeover in 1975. Civil rights activist Hosea Williams died in Atlanta at age 74.

Five years ago: Hoping to reverse the deterioration of pension plans, the Senate voted 97-2 to force companies to make up underfunding and live up to promises made to employees. (The bill, however, never became law.) Vice President Dick Cheney joined the chorus of Republican criticism of Democrats who contended the Bush administration had manipulated intelligence on Iraq, an accusation Cheney called “one of the most dishonest and reprehensible charges ever aired in this city.” “This Is Your Life” host Ralph Edwards died in West Hollywood at age 92.

One year ago: President Barack Obama, on his first trip to China, gave his hosts a pointed, unexpected nudge to stop censoring Internet access. A U.S. government health task force suggested most women wait until age 50 to get mammograms, conflicting with the American Cancer Society's advice to start at 40. Searchers in North Carolina found the body of missing 5-year-old Shaniya Davis. (A suspect, Mario Andrette McNeill, is charged with kidnapping, rape and murder.) Space shuttle Atlantis blasted off with six astronauts and a full load of spare parts for the International Space Station. British actor Edward Woodward, 79, died in Cornwall, England.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Men talk of killing time, while time quietly kills them.”

— Dion de Boucicault

Sometimes it is right to duck with the idea of saving your honors for later, when you can get the maximum use out of them.

For example, when West leads the diamond four against four spades, it looks normal to put up an honor from dummy. However, if East wins and does not return the suit (allowing South to discard, and then discard again on dummy's established diamond honor), South will lose a trick in each side suit, making only nine tricks unless he takes an inspired view in trumps.

Now let's see what happens if South plays low from dummy at trick one. It is going to take a pretty brave East player to insert the nine and run the risk of losing to a singleton 10 in declarer's hand, or possibly even to a doubleton 10 if West's lead was from K-8-4 originally.

Surely, most East players will put up the ace. This will enable South, sometime later in the deal, to make a routine loser-on-loser play in diamonds for his contract. (South runs the diamond queen while discarding a club and afterwards discards a heart on the jack.)

The recommended play also picks up a trick when East started with both the diamond ace and king, but not the 10. Would anybody insert an eight or nine from A-K-9-x or A-K-8-x when dummy played low? If they would, you should either stop playing against them, or hold your cards much farther back!

ANSWER: Some auctions do not require prolonged navel contemplation. You showed a balanced 13-15, and partner suggested that five diamonds might be better than no-trump. You may not agree with him, but you were not consulted, since you have described your hand already. So pass and respect his decision. (Maybe partner has seven diamonds to the king, the spade ace and club king, and a void in hearts.)

DEAR ABBY: My dear friend “Shelby” has been involved with a man for three years. “Mr. Secret Agent” is always on the go and can visit her only occasionally because of all of his international business travels. She told me he is from New Zealand and plans to return there when he retires in a few years.

Something about him just didn’t feel right to me, so I did some Internet sleuthing and discovered that Shelby’s “successful businessman” was born right here in the U.S.A. He has no passport, is using an assumed name, works as a janitor, has filed bankruptcy twice and actually lives in a trailer.

Shelby is overjoyed when he comes to visit her, but I am getting tired of hearing his lies. I know she’ll be hurt, but don’t you think she deserves to know the truth? I’m concerned he may extort money from her. What should I do?

— 2 GOOD 2 BE TRUE
IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR 2 GOOD 2 BE TRUE: The first thing to do is confess to your friend that you did some snooping and learned some troubling information about her gentleman friend. Then offer to share it with her so she can decide for herself if continuing a relationship with him is something she wants to do. She may or may not be interested — and she may or may not thank you for warning her up. Be prepared for her to be upset — but it’s a risk you should take.

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion for people who are stuck for gift ideas. Several years ago, I asked my mom for a very special Christmas gift. I asked her to write down her life story — things she had done as a child, the experience of hitchhiking from New Mexico to Tennessee during the Great Depression, and all the other experiences of her life. She did, and I printed it for her. That year she gave each child, grandchild and great-grandchild a copy. It was the best Christmas present ever and one that’s still cherished by us all.

Both my parents are gone now, but we have Mom’s wonderful stories to remember. Without her book, those memories would be lost forever. I encourage everyone to record their family history and memories for your loved ones to read. You’ll never regret it, and it will be enjoyed for generations to come.

— ANDREW IN
JOHNSON CITY, TENN.
DEAR ANDREW: That’s a terrific suggestion. And if the parent or grandparent isn’t comfortable with writing, the same goal can be accomplished by setting up a video camera and interviewing the family member by asking questions about his or her youth.

DEAR ABBY: I left my abusive husband two years ago. My parents and my brother chose him over me. My father and brother kicked me out of their house when I tried to explain, while my mother stood there and said nothing.

My father is now dying and I don’t know what I should do. I feel like talking to him would be “giving in.” My family made their choice two years ago. Abby, I am torn. How do I forgive my father when I don’t think he deserves it?

BEHIND IN OREGON
DEAR ONE LEFT BEHIND: Frankly, you don’t. If you had said your father had ASKED for forgiveness, my answer might be different. But unless your father asks to see you, keep your distance. That is, unless you want to risk yet another dose of rejection.

GIVE YOUR HORSE A 2ND CHANCE. WANTED: Unwanted horses, ponies, mules and draft horses. Call 208-539-1714

IF NOVEMBER 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Luck might be your middle name this year. You could be more compassionate toward the unfortunate and willing to help the underdog, especially between now and the end of the year, but at the same time you are incredibly ambitious. This is a good time to improve your health, concentrate on financial stability or find a true love. During March and April, keep your nose to the grindstone and don't be vague about the details. Your ability to carry out responsibilities may be tested, so it is wise to be as organized and conscientious as possible.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you want to have a mind like a steel trap, start with a healthy and flexible spring. Don't forget to get plenty of exercise and to take frequent breaks from tedious jobs. Take a time out to stretch muscles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Roll up the shirtsleeves. Leave romantic banter and flirtations to the TV characters and work to maintain a businesslike demeanor. Your consistency and diligence eventually will pay off.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accuracy and truth are not always the same. Someone you meet under these celestial conditions may not be in it for the long haul. People have a tendency to only see what they want to see.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be wiser in hindsight than in foresight. Cupid's arrows might fall short of the target. Those who take a shine to you under the magnetic pull of today's astral conditions might be under the wrong impression.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Flattery will get you nowhere. Steer clear of insincerity, flirtations and romantic intrigues for the next few days. Focus on being diligent about meeting deadlines and being conscientious about details.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put your wild enthusiasms in an envelope — and then seal it. Concentrate on one thing at a time. To make the most progress, you must be methodical. Strive to be cautious, not carefree.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): All the things memorized in school might end up being of little help. Think from the heart and don't be side-tracked by misunderstandings or a desire to play hardball. Make no business decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Faith in others can be your copilot. Sometimes it is wisest to hand over the controls to someone else or to delegate authority. Have faith that others will honorably keep their end of a bargain.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give and get. Enlist support from others, but offer your support to others when it is obviously needed. Use your social skills to put others at ease. Share enthusiasms, hopes, and wishes with loved ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is time to play second fiddle. Others might view you as less competitive and more cooperative than usual. You can achieve more by being kind and courteous than by pretending to be tough and callous.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Subtle crosscurrents are at work. It is best to adopt an attitude of "when in doubt, don't" with investments and upcoming commitments. Don't ignore existing obligations such as deadlines.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This is not the Indy 500. Thinking outside the box does not mean you must go around and around in endless circles. You can get widespread attention for original thinking and objectivity.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Vick, Eagles embarrass Redskins

Washington Redskins safety LaRon Landry (30) chases Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Michael Vick (7) during the first half Monday in Landover, Md.

By Joseph White
Associated Press writer

LANDOVER, Md. — Michael Vick, not Donovan McNabb, played like a $78 million quarterback, accounting for six touchdowns all by himself. And his Philadelphia Eagles marched down the field in one big chunk after another, doing enough times to put new entries in the various record books. On a day the Washington Redskins hoped to celebrate McNabb's new contract and set aside the swirl of distractions from his benching two weeks earlier, Vick and the Eagles stormed the party and thoroughly embarrassed their NFC East rivals 59-28 Monday night.

The Eagles scored on an 88-yard pass from Vick to DeSean Jackson on the first play from scrimmage, led 35-0 after the first play of the second quarter and barely let up. Vick completed his first 10 passes and finished 20 for 28 for 333 yards with four touchdowns. He also ran eight times for 80 yards and two scores, moving past Steve Young and into second place in NFL history for yards rushing by a quarterback. The Eagles set team records for total yards in a game (592), points in a half (45) and had the biggest lead after the first quarter for any NFL road team (28-0) since at least 1950. Vick became the first player in NFL history with at least 300 yards passing, 50 yards rushing, four passing touchdowns and two rushing touchdowns in a game. He hasn't thrown an interception or lost a fumble this season. More practically, the win moved Philadelphia (6-3) into a first-place tie with the New York Giants in the division, with both teams two games ahead of the Redskins (4-5). The Eagles are 4-0 when Vick starts and finishes the game. A few hours before kickoff, the Redskins signed McNabb to a five-year, $78 million contract extension with $40 million guaranteed, putting to rest any doubts as to whether he would remain the centerpiece of coach Mike Shanahan's rebuilding

Early tests, late returns?

Tough nonconference games could aid CSI men's squad in March

Sacrificial lambs these were not. No overmatched victims ready to lie down for their 156-55 beatdown. These guys were good. Long, athletic, talented. Not a Montana Tech JV among them. And that's going to pay dividends.

Mike Christensen

"As you play these better teams, you definitely find your weaknesses," said College of Southern Idaho men's basketball coach Steve Gosar, whose team fought, scratched and clawed its way to wins over Westwind Prep, Central Florida and Casper College at last weekend's Gordon Paving/Gold's Gym Invitational. CSI's most glaring weakness in the three-day affair? The opening gate. More specifically, coming out of it. The 24th-ranked Golden Eagles (5-0) trailed by nine, 17 and 11 in the first half of the three games. But somehow, somehow, they came back to win. "These guys have had the ability to dodge the bullet," said Gosar. Like the Little Engine That Could, CSI's little lineup of undersized guards mastered its own uphill climbs, doing it with a recipe of pressure defense, 3-point shooting and fast-break buckets. And finding a way in November will make finding a way in March that much easier. It'll be second nature, old hat. Gosar said CSI was "lucky" to get three quality teams in Twin Falls on one weekend. "Scheduling is difficult, especially in junior college," he said. At CSI, it's a challenge made harder by the Golden Eagles' reputation for on-court success. The situation is one the Boise State football program knows firsthand. When you're good, no one wants to play you at your house. The risks are great, the rewards few. Just ask that Montana Tech JV team that walked out of CSI Gymnasium with a 101-point loss in 2006. When CSI was loaded in 2006-07 and 2007-08, a team that had nine players sign with NCAA Division I schools, it had to bring in some low-level community college teams and junior varsity squads from four-year programs just to fill its slate. "I don't think people were very excited about playing that team, so it was awfully difficult to fill out that schedule," said Gosar. But as good as the 2007-08 squad was, winning 30 games and holding the No. 1 ranking for several weeks of the season, it didn't make it to the NJCAA Tournament. Could a few more nonconference tests have made a difference? We'll never know. But this year's Eagles weren't carving up lambs at their first home tournament, they were slaying lions. "This first tournament was definitely a good one for us," said Gosar. "We had some really good teams in here." Good thing, too. Because in the Scenic West Athletic Conference, good teams are all there are. Mike Christensen may be reached at mikec@magicvalley.com or 735-3239.

Posey, Feliz picked as Rookies of the Year

By Ben Walker
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — San Francisco Giants catcher Buster Posey and Texas Rangers closer Neftali Feliz wound up together on the winning side Monday when they were voted the Rookies of the Year. Earlier this month, Posey singled off Feliz as the Giants beat Texas in the clinching Game 5 of the World Series. "It's hard to believe it's been two weeks," Posey said. Posey hit several key home runs and helped the Giants win the crown for the first time since 1954. He easily outdistanced Atlanta outfielder Jason Heyward for the National League award. Feliz, the rocket-armed righty who set a rookie record with 40 saves as Texas reached its first World Series, finished far ahead of Detroit center fielder Austin Jackson for the AL honor. "I hope it's not a fluke. I hope I have a better season next year," the 22-year-old Dominican reliever said through a translator on a conference call. Promoted from Triple-A on May 29, Posey quickly adjusted to the big leagues — both at the plate and behind it. The 23-year-old Posey hit .305 with 18 home runs and 67 RBIs. He homered eight times after Sept. 1 in leading the Giants to the NL West title, and his homer on the final day of the regular season helped them clinch the division.

BSU's Potter earns WAC honor

Times-News

Chris Potter put Boise State in control right off the bat. His effort was recognized Monday when he was named the Western Athletic Conference's special teams player of the week. Potter returned a punt 76 yards for a touchdown in the opening minute of BSU's 52-14 rout of rival Idaho last Friday in Moscow. The sophomore finished the night with four punt returns for 106 yards — an average of 26.5 yards per return. The WAC honor is Potter's second of the season, following his Oct. 18 recognition. Offensive honors went to Nevada quarterback Colin Kaepernick, who passed for 171 yards and rushed for 153 in a win over Fresno State.

SALT LAKE CITY — Kevin Durant scored 30 points, Serge Ibaka and Russell Westbrook added 22 apiece, and the Oklahoma City Thunder halted the Utah Jazz's five-game winning streak with a 115-108 victory on Monday night. The Thunder avenged a 21-point home loss on Oct. 31. Deron Williams, the Western Conference player of the week, had the Jazz up by as many as 12 points early as he hit his first six shots. But his 31 points and 11 assists weren't enough, as the Thunder made 33 of 34 from the free throw line, including 10 straight in the fourth quarter to seal the victory. The Jazz pulled within three points with 12 seconds left, but Durant made four straight free throws to end it. Utah, which needed double-digit comebacks in its last five games, was determined to start fast. The Jazz led 13-4 and 30-19, before Oklahoma City found its rhythm.

Terry, Mavericks hand Hornets first setback

DALLAS — Jason Terry scored 26 points, including the go-ahead jumper in the final minute, and the Dallas Mavericks handed the New Orleans Hornets their first loss of the season, 98-95 on Monday night.

New Orleans, which had been off to a franchise-best 8-0 start, got 22 points from Chris Paul, but only two came in the second half.

Dirk Nowitzki had 25 points and 10 rebounds to help the Mavericks stretch their winning streak to four games.

Peja Stojakovic added 17 points and Emeka Okafor pulled down 14 rebounds for New Orleans.

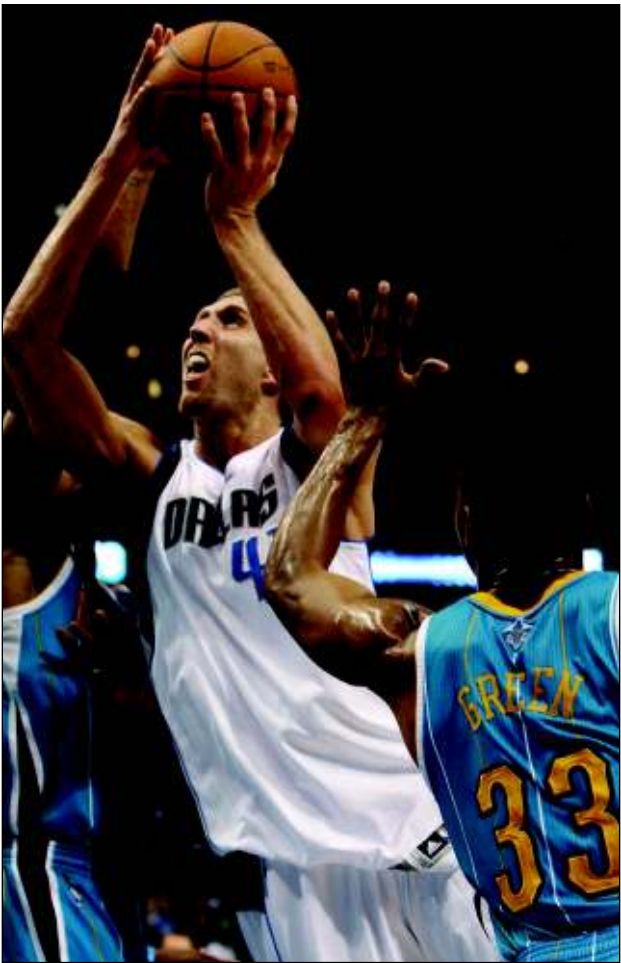

Terry's 17-footer with 46 seconds remaining gave the Mavericks a 95-92 edge, but Trevor Ariza's 3-pointer with 40 seconds left tied it at 95.

Terry drained an 18-footer with 34 seconds to play for a 97-95 advantage. Nowitzki made only one free throw with 2.8 seconds left, giving New Orleans a final chance to tie, but Okafor missed a contested 25-footer at the buzzer.

The teams have a rematch Wednesday night in New Orleans.

Jason Kidd contributed 16 points and six assists as Dallas rallied from a 10-point, fourth-quarter deficit. The Hornets were hurt by missing eight of 24 free throws. The Mavericks weren't much better from the line, missing eight of 27.

After the Mavs trailed by as many as 11 in the third quarter, Terry made 3-pointers on consecutive possessions to open the final quarter, pulling the Dallas Mavericks forward Dirk Nowitzki (41) drives against New Orleans Hornets shooting guard Willie Green (33) during the fourth quarter in Dallas Monday. The Mavericks won 98-95.

PHOENIX — Hakim Warrick scored 21 points to lead a balanced attack, helping the Phoenix Suns overcome a 15-point, first-half deficit to beat the Denver Nuggets for the 12th straight time at home.

The Suns had a rough night from 3-point range, making just 4 of 20 after nearly breaking the NBA record with 22 in a win over the Lakers the day before. Phoenix also had a sloppy first half (at both ends), making up for it by putting six players in double figures. Steve Nash had 15 points and seven assists, and Channing Frye chipped in 15 points.

Carmelo Anthony had 20 points and 22 rebounds for Denver, which hasn't won in the desert since April 7, 2004.

MAGIC 89, GRIZZLIES 72

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dwight Howard had 18 points and 14 rebounds, Vince Carter scored 19 points and Orlando smothered Memphis defensively.

Jameer Nelson added 11 points and nine rebounds as the Magic built a 16-point lead, lost it, then went back ahead by 17 points in the fourth quarter to put away the game. They held the high-scoring Grizzlies to 36 percent shooting and their fewest points in a game in two seasons.

Marc Gasol had 14 points and eight rebounds, and Mike Conley scored 11 points in the Grizzlies' third straight loss. Memphis entered the game averaging 104 points but could get nothing going offensively.

BOBCATS 113, TIMBERWOLVES 110

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Gerald Wallace scored 26 points, set a franchise record with 17 free throws made and had a key steal late as Charlotte rallied to beat Minnesota.

The Bobcats, who at 0-4 entered as the NBA's only winless team at home, appeared finished when they trailed 107-99 with 2:08 left. But Wallace and Stephen Jackson, who also scored 26 points, led Charlotte's comeback.

Wallace's two free throws with 31.6 seconds left put Charlotte ahead to stay.

Michael Beasley scored 28 points, but had two key turnovers in the closing minutes. Kevin Love had 20 points and nine rebounds, returning to the game late after a scary fall.

Morris twins lead No. 7 Kansas past Valparaiso

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Twin brothers Marcus and Markieff Morris each had double-doubles and No. 7 Kansas romped past Valparaiso 79-44 Monday night for the Jayhawks' 61st consecutive home victory.

Kansas can tie its school record for consecutive wins at home on Friday night against North Texas.

Marcus Morris, one inch shorter than his 6-foot-10 sibling, had 11 rebounds and 22 points on 10-of-12 shooting for the Jayhawks (2-0), who have launched their season with a pair of lopsided victories.

Markieff Morris, who had a double-double against Longwood in the season opener, added 12 points and 13 rebounds.

Valparaiso (1-1), picked fourth in the Horizon League, had one lead — at 2-1. Cory Johnson and Kevin Van Wijk each had 10 points for the Crusaders and Brandon Wood had nine.

Tyrel Reed scored eight points, including two 3-pointers, and Mario Little added seven in a 27-10 first-half run that put the Jayhawks firmly in control.

After Howard Little — Mario's cousin — made a bucket to draw the Crusaders to 14-11, Reed drilled the Jayhawks fifth 3-pointer, Little blocked a shot and Travis Releford converted on the other end.

NO. 20 GEORGETOWN 69, TULANE 53

WASHINGTON — With three standout guards and down its one experienced big man, No. 20 Georgetown's transition to a perimeter team was on full display during Monday night's home opener against Tulane.

The Hoyas attempted 29 3-pointers — five off the school record — and made 12 in a 69-53 win over the Green Wave. It's not exactly what Georgetown coach John Thompson III has in mind for his offense, but when the opportunity presents itself, his team will not hesitate to shoot.

"There was a stretch there where I told them, 'We're taking too many,' but then I thought about it and Tulane made a concerted effort; that's what they were going to give us," Thompson said. "They clogged everything up when we threw it down and said, 'We're going to let you take shots and see if you can make them.' I'm comfortable with that because I think we have guys that can make them."

Austin Freeman was the early beneficiary of Tulane's strategy, scoring 13 points in the game's first 13 minutes, including three 3-pointers. The rest of Freeman's teammates went 8 of 12 during that stretch as Georgetown (2-0) built a 32-12 lead over the flustered Green Wave.

Jazz

The Thunder controlled the boards, holding a 39-34 advantage in rebounds. But the biggest difference came at the foul line, where Oklahoma City had a 33-18 advantage.

The game was physical from the start, with Utah's Kyrylo Fesenko needing four stitches in his chin in the first half and Earl Watson requiring three to close a cut on his lower lip.

But Utah had no defense for Durant, who was 16 of 16 from the free throw line, with two 3-pointers and six rebounds. Ibaka had a game-high 11 rebounds to go with his 9-of-13 shooting.

Gordon Hayward, a rookie making his first NBA start in place of injured Raja Bell (groin), had early foul trouble and finished with four points for the Jazz. C.J. Miles added 16 as Utah had five players score in double figures.

effort. It was Washington's first game since Shanahan benched McNabb in the final two minutes of a loss to the Detroit, when the coach cited McNabb's less-than-full grasp of the two-minute offense and later the quarterback's lack of "cardio-vascular endurance" stemming from sore hamstrings.

McNabb received a standing ovation and applauded the fans in return when he was introduced with the starting lineups, but most of those fans had left by halftime on a rainy night in which they heartily booed offense and defense alike.

McNabb finished 17 for 31 for 295 yards with two touchdowns and three interceptions, nearly all of the yards coming after the Redskins had dug themselves a five-touchdown hole. Dimitri Patterson intercepted McNabb twice, returning one of them 40 yards for a touchdown in the third quarter.

Interestingly, Shanahan made McNabb finish the entire game this time, even with the game out of reach in the fourth quarter.

The 45 first-half points allowed by the Redskins tied a franchise record, and the Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Jason Avant (81) celebrates his touchdown reception with teammate LeSean McCoy, top, during the second half against the Washington Redskins Monday.

(59) total points were the most allowed by a team coached by Shanahan. It was almost as if the players had decided there was no incentive to play well, given that a teammate who got benched in the last game had just received a mega contract.

Vick was among the players at the forefront of a skirmish between the teams on the field before the game, forcing officials to step in and restore peace. Maybe it fired him and his teammates up, because everything seemed to work early on: The Eagles piled up 280 total yards in the first quarter.

The touchdowns came early and often: the 88-yarder to Jackson, who had time to strut backward into the end zone; a 7-yard scramble by Vick; an 11-yard shovel pass to LeSean McCoy; a 50-yard run by Jerome Harrison, who weaved through missed tackles and around bad angles taken by Redskins defenders; a 48-yard pass to Jeremy Maclin, who made a remarkable grab as fell backward onto the pylon; a 6-yard run by Vick on a quarterback draw; a 3-yard pass to Jason Avant; and Patterson's interception runback.

Rookies

Posey was picked first on 20 of 32 ballots in voting by members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. Voting was done by two members of the BBWAA in every league city after the regular season, with each person listing three players.

Posey was left off the ballot by Yasushi Kikuchi of Kyodo News from the Los Angeles-Anaheim chapter. Kikuchi chose Florida first baseman Gaby Sanchez first, Heyward second and St. Louis pitcher Jaime Garcia third.

"I think Rookie of the Year is for the rookie player who plays better than any other through the entire season. From this standpoint, Gaby and Jason produced more hits and played more games than Posey. Also, Jaime Garcia pitched as a starter through the entire season," Kikuchi said in an e-mail to The Associated Press.

Born Gerald Dempsey Posey III, the nickname "Buster" runs in his family. He was driving with his wife to the Florida Keys when he got word that he had won. He acknowledged he was wondering about the outcome.

"I think I'd be lying to you if I said I didn't think about it," he said on a conference call.

Feliz got 20 first-place votes and was listed on all 28 ballots. He drew seven seconds and one third. He was at Rangers Ballpark, where the World Series ended, when he found out he'd won.

The NL Cy Young will be the next major award to be announced. Philadelphia ace Roy Halladay is considered the front-runner for Tuesday.

Posey hit third and even cleanup for the Giants as they brought the championship to San Francisco for the first time. He was equally praised for handling a pitching staff that seemed to get better throughout the postseason.

Posey became the first Rookie of the Year winner to become a World Series champion in the same season since Boston's Dustin Pedroia in 2007. The last NL player to do it was Florida's Dontrelle Willis in 2003.

A star at Florida State, the Georgia native went to see the Seminoles play Clemson last weekend. Several football fans in the crowd recognized one of baseball's fastest-rising stars.

Louisiana Tech safety Javontay Crowe earned defensive honors after recording nine tackles in a win at New Mexico State.

Boise State (9-0, 5-0 WAC) is ranked third in all three national polls and sits fourth in this week's BCS standings entering Friday's game with Fresno State (6-3, 4-2). The Bulldogs are coming off a 35-34 home loss to No. 19 Nevada.

Tickets remain for BSU-Fresno St. game

There are 600 tickets remaining for the Broncos' 7:30 p.m. matchup Friday with Fresno State, the Boise State athletic department said Monday.

The seats are all in reserved sections with prices ranging from $49 ($32 for youth ticket) in the south end zone to $64 ($43 for youth ticket) in the main area of the stadium. Tickets may be purchased at the Athletic Ticket Office, any Select-A-Seat outlet or online at <http://www.idahotickets.com>.

Friday's game is an Orange Out, as fans are asked to come all dressed in Orange, commemorating the original Orange Out game from Oct. 18, 2002, when Boise State hosted Fresno State for the first time in Bronco Stadium as a WAC member.
