BOISE (AP) — The head of Idaho’s health and welfare agency has painted a gloomy budget picture for lawmakers, saying cuts or rollbacks to major services and more staff layoffs could be coming as early as next July.

Dick Armstrong told legislative budget writers on Tuesday that his agency faces a projected shortfall of more than $171 million in the state’s Medicaid program for fiscal year 2012.

The shortfall is due to several factors, including a decline in federal matching money for Medicaid and the absence of economic stimulus funds that helped fill budget holes in previous years.

Those losses, combined with growing caseloads, will force some difficult choices in cutting or reducing programs, the Spokesman-Review reported.

“We would have to eliminate major categories of service,” Armstrong said.

The state’s Medicaid fund is also facing challenges in the current fiscal year, when, despite program cuts and other cost-saving measures, Armstrong is projecting a $42.3 million shortfall for Medicaid.

He suggested that deficit could be fixed with a one-time draw down on the state’s tobacco settlement fund.

The majority of future cuts would be to programs serving adults. Children’s programs are protected, Armstrong said, but states across the nation are facing tough and draconian-style cuts in services.

Gun crime drops across state, region, albeit unevenly

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Gun-related violent crimes were on the rise in 2007.

Then they were down. Then they were up again. It’s difficult to find a trend among Idaho State Police statistics that track violent crime against persons involving guns in south-central Idaho.

Between 2005 and 2009, the number of violent crimes — murder, negligent manslaughter, forcible rape, forcible sodomy, sexual assault, forcible fondling, aggravated assault and kidnapping — committed with a gun declined by 8 percent in the region. But year to year, the number has seesawed. In 2005, 60 such crimes occurred here, but that number fell to 33 in 2006. It then rolled from 52 down to 33 and back up to 55 from 2007 to 2009.

Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter said the back-and-forth swing has a lot to do with prisoner releases and possible repeat offenders.

Carey pulls together for accident victims

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

A Monday evening benefit raised about $27,000 to aid the families of two Carey students and a teacher involved in a fatal Oct. 26 car crash.

Meanwhile, investigators have released more information about the incident, in which a car with two Carey School students and a driver’s education teacher was struck by a second vehicle. One student was killed, while the other three people were injured.

The benefit event included a raffle and an auction, with 450 plates selling at the fundraiser, said Carey Principal John Peck.

“It was an amazing night,” he said. “The amount of generosity and the amount of support was absolutely amazing.”

The money raised will be split three ways, leaving each family of the students and teacher with a check for about $9,000.

Austin Hennefer, 15, a sophomore and driver of the driver’s education vehicle was killed in the crash. Passengers Jennifer Mares, 15, of Picabo and instructor Jeff Mecham, 41, were injured.

The results of the Blaine County Sheriff’s Office investigation into the crash have now been sent to the county prosecutor for legal review. No citations have been issued, according to Lt. Jay Davis.

Among its findings, investigators say that Hennefer was making an unsafe turn when the driver’s education car was struck by the second car.

Arsenic project nears completion

City officials hope for easier driving by winter

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Construction crews are making a mad dash to knock out the biggest chunks of work related to Twin Falls’ arsenic reduction project before winter — not that most drivers should know.

Twin Falls city officials said they hope the contractors’ traffic control methods remain about the same as they have been for the past several weeks.

“(Drivers) won’t see a different route or traffic control, just different equipment,” city Public Works Director Jon Caton said.

In the next week or so, that equipment should also start getting packed away for the winter, leaving most routes open, if not complete. Some major work that will remain is getting the top layer of paving complete on Washington Street South at the bridge over Rock Creek Canyon — for now, the bumps will be graded for a smoother drive — and filling a trench on Highland Avenue near Blue Lakes Boulevard.

“We’re hoping that it’ll look a lot like it usually does,” City Engineer Jackie Fields said of winter driving near arsenic-related construction sites.

The arsenic reduction project is a $20 million effort to reduce arsenic levels in city drinking water to comply with federal standards by blending low-arsenic water sources with higher-arsenic sources. The Twin Falls City Council approved a flat $11.15 monthly increase to city water rates this summer to pay for the project.

City officials said they are working to move back the city’s Jan. 1, 2011, deadline with the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality because of delays in roadwork. The federal compliance deadline is Jan. 1, 2012.

Assistant City Manager Travis Rothweiler said the city plans to have blending stations operational by midsummer, giving workers time to smooth out any kinks before the federal deadline.

“It will certainly change how we run our whole system,” Caton said.

Shelter strives to embody its name

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

RUPERT — For some people, the difference between having a home and being homeless can come down to a bit of bad luck or a single mistake.

At the nonprofit Community Oasis Outreach shelter in Rupert, resident Aaron Whitaker rolled up his sleeve Wednesday to reveal a massive scar running up his forearm. A year ago, a toxic spider bite put him in the hospital for three months and withered his arm to the point that he had to re-learn how to write.

“It just destroyed the tissue. My body just turned to mush,” Whitaker said, adding that he lost his job during his recovery. “But I should have died. Fifteen years ago I would have been a tombstone.”

Today, after several months at the shelter, Whitaker is on the mend and working part-time.

“Without this place I’d be sleeping somewhere a lot colder,” he said.

Community Oasis Outreach Director DeeAnn Brower said the seven-room facility is full and turns away as many as five people a week who need a place to stay.

“We could use a bigger building but due to the economy we just can’t do it,” Brower said.

Brower, who said she’s always had “a heart for the homeless,” found herself on the streets at age 16.

“I don’t believe you are really helping someone if you just provide them with a meal, a set of clothes and a bed for one night,” Brower said. “To me, when you start to help someone, you must continue it.”

Although the shelter is full, officials often make room on a pull-out bed for someone in need of a place to stay for the night.

But the shelter’s policy of long-term help comes with conditions that include every resident showing continued progress toward independence.

“This is not a flop house,” Brower said.

In fact, residents must undergo a criminal background check and abide by common-sense household rules that include alcohol and drug abstinence and daily chores.

The shelter’s kitchen, which is open to anyone who would like a meal from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. weekdays, served 30,786 meals in 2009.

The shelter’s team plans on cooking a traditional Thanksgiving dinner this Sunday, which will be served from 3 to 5 p.m., and a Christmas dinner that will be served from 3 to 5 p.m. on Dec. 19.

Brower said money is always tight at the shelter but its most urgent need is a new roof, which is estimated to cost $2,006. The roof currently leaks in three of the shelter’s rooms.

The shelter also needs firewood, meat, condiments, spices, butter and coffee.

“There is no small gift,” Brower said.

Burley council opts to continue library funding

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Burley City Council voted 4-2 on Tuesday to continue transferring $42,000 yearly from the city’s general fund to the Burley Public Library.

The move continues the traditional transfer instead of lumping the amount in with a two-year, $210,000 override levy for the library that voters will be asked to pass in May and would go into effect in 2012.

Councilman Vaughn Egan made the motion to approve the transfer, which Councilmen Jay Lenkersdorfer and Steve McGill voted against.

“Vaughn, you’re looking at a year and a half from now. You’re making a funding commitment going a year and a half down the road,” said Lenkersdorfer. “None of us know what the finances of the city are going to be. If the library has the opportunity to ask the voters for the full amount of money they need to operate, I think that’s something they should do.”

Egan disagreed and said the city should continue the transfer.

“I would prefer that they ask for all they are asking for in the levy, and that allows us the flexibility of the council to use that money somewhere else,” Lenkersdorfer said. “If the voters want to support the library they’ll support the full levy even though it is $42,000 more.”

If it had been added to the levy, the $42,000 would have cost taxpayers an additional $4.76 in property tax per year, based on a home valued at $119,000.

Attendees gather at Carey School on Monday for a fundraiser to aid victims of a vehicle accident that involved two students and a driver’s education teacher. The event raised about $27,000.

The accident happened on U.S. Highway 20 in Blaine County when the driver’s ed car was westbound and made the turn.

Sergio Lopez-Rodriguez, 45, of Gooding, was also westbound in a 1993 Honda Accord. He told Blaine County Sheriff’s Office investigators that he tried to stop when he saw the other car turn, but slid on ice and hit the car.

Though his school is in Carey, Peck emphasized that the generosity displayed in Monday’s fundraiser extended far beyond the borders of the community. Donations of money and items for the auction and raffle poured in, including gift cards and services ranging from teeth whitening to horseshoeing to electrical labor.

“It was a lot more than just Carey,” Peck said. “There were people all over that helped out.”

For example, the fundraising was kicked off with a donation of a diamond ring valued at $2,500, courtesy of J.B. Knudson at Adobe Jewelry in Jerome. And a donor from Texas mailed in a check for $100, which was used for two $50 raffle awards.

Crime

“It’s whether or not certain people have gotten out of prison, those with a violent past,” Carter said. “People who have issues who get out still have issues.”

Of the 233 violent crimes committed with a gun from 2005-09 across the region, only 13 were murders committed with a gun. Aggravated assault was the crime committed most often with a gun, accounting for 201 reports. Also, handguns were the most commonly used firearms for criminal activities — the report distinguishes between handgun, rifle/shotgun, other and unknown — accounting for 138 crimes.

With its large population base, Twin Falls County accounted for 42 percent of south-central Idaho’s violent gun crimes between 2005 and 2009. Of those crimes,

What becomes of the seized weapons?

Whenever a weapon is confiscated, it’s up the individual agency to squirrel it away for safekeeping.

For example, the Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Office keeps approximately 100 guns at any given time, according to evidence technician Irma Kulasevic. Weapons used in the commission of a crime are held as evidence for county prosecutors and must be strictly accounted for when transported to and from court.

However, not all seized weapons were used in the commission of a crime. Many are confiscated during traffic stops or other investigations. Some are just found with no way to be linked to an owner. All weapons stay in a secured lockup until the agency gets a court order to dispose of them.

“We have some dating back to 2008,” Kulasevic said.

Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall said his department will have confiscated weapons destroyed, adapted for the department’s use or traded at gun stores for other supplies, such as ammunition.

83 percent occurred within Twin Falls city limits. With their smaller populations, Jerome and Cassia counties averaged five gun crimes per year between 2005 and 2009, while Minidoka County averaged less than two.

Knives were used in 275 area crimes between 2005 and 2009, though their yearly total dropped 34 percent during that span. Carter said that knives are easier to access than guns.

“Anybody can get their hands on a knife,” he said. “Just go to (a store) or grab one from a buddy’s closet. It’s a simple thing.”

From 2005 to 2009, violent crimes involving guns decreased by 17 percent across Idaho, while statewide crimes involving knives dropped 16 percent. On the other hand, crimes involving blunt objects were on the rise, up 12 percent.

Medicaid

In Washington state, for example, officials are considering eliminating all coverage for pharmaceuticals for adults. Idaho provides some services that are considered optional under federal law, including prescription drug coverage and services for the developmentally disabled.

Also considered optional: hospice care, dentures, eyeglasses, preventive care, mental health treatment and prosthetics, among others.

Armstrong has not yet offered a list of cuts.

One solution for offsetting a potential staffing and program cuts may be a return to volunteerism.

Armstrong said in the 1950s and 1960s, volunteers performed many of the services Medicaid now provides. He added that a resurgence in volunteers could help, from getting the elderly to physician appointments to monitoring prescriptions for mentally ill patients.

“I think there’s some merit there,” said Rep. George Eskridge, R-Dover. “We all have an obligation to help our fellow citizens, it’s not all a state responsibility. I’m intrigued ... and hope there’ll be some ways we’re able to pursue that.”

T.F. council to answer $94,000 question

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

About $94,000 remains of the defunct Twin Falls downtown Business Improvement District's budget, and its proposed uses are as varied as building a public restroom or using it as seed cash for a new merchant's association.

About a dozen downtown merchants, property owners and interested citizens attended a subdued town hall meeting with city officials Wednesday that ultimately left the City Council with no concrete direction on how to spend the leftover cash.

"There were some new ideas there, which is what we needed," said Councilman Greg Lanting after the meeting. He added that it'll be up to the council to decide how to spend it.

One idea that gained surprising traction was the formation of a new, voluntary merchant's association downtown, though Mayor Don Hall said, "It's got to be grassroots. It's got to be the people in this room!"

Robert Myrland, a downtown property owner, was one who leaned toward that option and the idea of saving at least some of the leftover money for it.

"I'd be happy to send some cash down there because it is in my own best interest as a property owner to have a viable association down there," Myrland said. "Maybe we should hold on to that money for six, seven months or a year (until that can be formed).

"I never thought I'd hear myself say that."

The suggestions from a City Council committee were to spend $13,000 for two years worth of holiday decorations, $50,000 for deferred downtown parking improvements and maintenance, and use the rest to develop a matching fund program for property owners making landscaping and sidewalk upgrades.

Shoshone chooses course on bonuses

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone City Council reached a decision Tuesday about which employee certifications will qualify for raises or one-time bonuses.

After a month of deliberation, including reviewing lists of required and optional certifications and available funds, the council decided not to make a blanket resolution. Instead, supervisors can approach the council and raises or bonuses will be dealt with on an individual basis.

Though city Maintenance Supervisor Aaron Aggeler said he didn't want to speak for the employees he supervised, he thought his crew would like bonuses, but wasn't clamoring for them.

"I talked to my guys and they seemed kind of OK with what they have," he said. "... I didn't hear anyone say they felt like they were owed anything for anything they'd done in the past."

Aggeler also said new certifications make employees more attractive candidates if they look for a new job. Police Chief Jon Daubner compared them to getting a degree from a college.

"What I hear from supervisors is (the system's) not broke yet," Councilman Mike Wallace said. "But I don't have a problem benefiting people at the end of the year, either."

The council also heard a presentation about Shoshone's yearly audit. Raymond Ware, who performed the audit, said the city received an unqualified opinion — meaning its accounting practices were sound.

Ware said with the exception of a small overspending by the library, Shoshone's budget was in good shape, including almost twice as much carryover in the general fund than is required.

"Since my wife's a teacher, or used to be, I can tell you that this is a grade-A paper," Ware said.

In other council news:

- A resident complained about loose trash behind his business, which was blown into an alley as it was being dumped into a garbage truck. Aggeler said two things citizens can do to keep the wind from pushing trash around are bag all garbage and break down cardboard boxes.
- "I always tell people don't hesitate to call us," Aggeler said. "Even if we're grumpy, that's our job. We'll go down there and pick it up!"

- The council debated replacing light bulbs in Shoshone's Christmas decorations with LED light bulbs. Though LED lights are more energy-efficient and would last longer, the initial cost to buy each bulb would be much higher. Some of Shoshone's decorations have 60 bulbs each, with the city clocking in at about 6,000 total bulbs.
- "When I found out how much it's cost me to put one damn decoration up, I chickened out," Mayor J.R. Churchman said.

The council approved purchasing enough LED lights to fill one decoration as a test run, and $199.50 worth of traditional bulbs to get the Christmas lights up next week.

Proposed Twin Falls-Sun Valley bus route dropped

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Bus transportation between Twin Falls and Sun Valley was nixed Wednesday after the Mountain Rides board couldn't come up with the numbers to make it work.

"We want to provide service to Twin Falls but we want to provide it in a brand-conscious and cost-conscious way," said Board President Peter Everett. "We're getting four new vans — with our logo — so perhaps we can focus on improving our van service between here and Twin Falls."

Mountain Rides began looking into running a bus between Twin Falls and Sun Valley two years ago, after the vanpool program grew from two routes to eight routes with a waiting list within one year. It applied for and received $500,000 in grants to start the service, but had to put the route out for bid when it realized it didn't have equipment capable of running the distance.

Even after Salt Lake Express — the lone bidder — reduced its cost to $230,000 a year, Mountain Rides Director Jason Miller said he still couldn't get the numbers to work given the current market. Even an attempt to get Sun Valley Co. on board didn't produce the financial figures Mountain Rides needed.

"We could possibly have enough funding to support the service the third year but there would still be a gap of at least $110,000 that would have to come from somewhere, even if we raise the rates," Miller said.

A bus pass would have likely cost between $125 and $140 per month, Miller said — the market currently won't support a higher rate.

Van commuters pay $150 a month for weekday service that takes them to their places of work. But van users didn't appear to have much support for switching to the bus, he said.

Everett said he feared getting "significant egg on our face" if Mountain Rides started the service and couldn't keep it going. He also said he doubted the new Sun Valley Marketing Alliance would be happy about having buses with the Salt Lake Express logo running through town.

"We can't develop a sustainable model at this time and that's what it's all about," said board member Nils Ribi. Transportation consultant

Vanessa Fry said that Mountain Rides may be able to ask the state to allow it to repurpose at least part of the grant money for its van service.

Interestingly, while demand for ride service from Twin Falls to Sun Valley has reduced by 25 percent, the number of inquiries from Blaine County residents needing to get to Twin Falls has risen to three to five a week.

Those inquiries likely represented people needing medical care, as well as those wanting to shop, noted board member Heather Dawson.

"Blaine County residents wanting to go to Twin Falls represent an entirely different type of market and need to be served in a different way," she said.

Congratulations, Mr. Councilman: That'll be $107,000

Coeur d'Alene City Council member Mike Kennedy is guilty of the high crime and misdemeanor of winning reelection by three votes in November 2009.

As punishment, he got sued by the loser, Jim Brannon. To date, his lawyers have run up $107,000 in legal fees.

That's crazy. What kind of democratic system penalizes people for running for public office?

So far, the cash-strapped city of Coeur d'Alene — a co-defendant in this case — has declined to pick up Kennedy's tab. It's already spent $35,000 on its own for outside legal fees. Between Kennedy and the city, they've ponied up about 142,000 of the dollars neither can afford to fend off this frivolous litigation.

State law requires that legal challenges be completed within 30 days after the election, which didn't happen in the case. If the challenger wins, a judge can award him or her court costs. If not, Brannon's on the hook.

Our view:

Did you win the election? You may be hearing from a lawyer.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

What's not clear is whether a court could award payment of the other party's legal fees.

As a state, Idaho is crying for qualified people to run for public office. We don't pay them much — Kennedy, a small business owner, makes about $750 a month or $9,000 a year from his City Council job — and turnover is high.

So what's the next person interested in making Coeur d'Alene a better place to live to make of Kennedy's experience? Simply this: Shut up and stay on the sidelines.

Brannon and his grand-standing lawyer, Starr Kelso, ought to be ashamed of themselves. Single-handedly, they've made the idea of running for City Council toxic.

And if legislators don't think the same thing could happen to them, they're deluding themselves.

The Legislature needs to fix this by exempting candidates from lawsuits against cities, counties or the state over election results.

Every city council member we know of spends far more hours on the job than he or she is compensated for. The notion that they should also be compelled to pay for their right to hold office is repulsive.

W. and Dick Cheney, reunited at last

Talk about your misty watercolor memories. What's too painful to remember, we simply choose to forget. The bittersweet story of a prepie for whom things always came too easily and his noodging partner, pressuring with sky-high expectations until that final clash split them apart.

Has time rewritten every line? It's trying, big-time.

Yes, Robert Redford and Barbra Streisand met up on Oprah on Tuesday to talk about their 1973 turn in The Way We Were as the culture-crossed Hubbell and Katie.

But the more charged reunion was taking place in Dallas at the groundbreaking ceremony for the George W. Bush Presidential Center at Southern Methodist University.

After a period of estrangement and after circling each other with dueling memoirs, a happy W. and a gaunt Dick Cheney were reunited on stage.

"History is beginning to come around," Cheney said with satisfaction. After hailing W. as "classy," Vice acted unclassy. Demonstrating that Bush still cannot control Cheney, the former vice president defied W's promise not to mock President Obama.

"This may be the only shovel-ready project in America," Cheney noted sardonically, making fun of Obama's attempts to dig out from under the trillions of debt left by his predecessors.

Together again were the president and vice president who invaded, deregulated, overspent, created a climate of fear and intensified the class divide with tax cuts — all so recklessly that our resources are sapped just as we need to step up and compete with our banker, China.

"I wasn't a very good economic prognosticator," Bush told CNN's Candy Crowley. No kidding. The pair fell out over the Scooter

Maureen Dowd

Libby pardon. Up until that point, Vice had been able to lead W. off various cliffs with faux deference and a good sense of which buttons to push. (W. would do anything to avoid getting labeled a wimp.)

Bush writes in his autobiography that when he told Scooter's old boss that the jury verdict should be respected, Dick stared at him intensely.

"I can't believe you're going to leave a soldier on the battlefield," Cheney said.

"The comment stung," Bush concedes. "In eight years, I had never seen Dick like this, or even close to this. I worried that the friendship we had built was about to be severely strained, at best."

In his book, Bush is respectful to Cheney. He doesn't even mention his vice president's near-deadly aim with a shotgun.

But it is telling that W. takes pains to paint his Vice as a mere supporting player, not the huge force for global domination that he was. This conscious diminution of Cheney makes the power struggle in that White House all the more apparent.

W. writes that he considered dropping Cheney from the ticket in 2004, but even that wasn't his own idea. Cheney diabolically suggested it, knowing the Dauphin would refuse.

On the Today show interview with Matt Lauer, Bush was asked by an audience member to name his most insightful adviser.

The chagrined ex-president tried to avoid the question at first. It was fascinating to watch the body language of the man who said his decision to invade Iraq relied more on body language than vigorous debate.

When W. did offer a list, Cheney did not immediately pop to mind. Hank Paulson was first. Then Condi, who肘bowed Cheney aside. Then Colin Powell, Cheney's nemesis. Then Rummy, Cheney's mentor and partner in dark machinations. And then, finally, when W. could avoid it no longer, he mentioned Vice, damning with faint praise: "Dick Cheney's advice was consistent and strong."

He told Lauer that he was motivated to run for president because of his father: "I wondered whether or not I had what it took to get in the arena like he did." And he writes that one of the motivating factors for sacking Saddam was that the Butcher of Baghdad tried to assassinate his dad.

Yet, despite his father being the measuring stick and prod, he did not keep the former president and foreign affairs expert in the loop on Iraq.

Asked by Bill O'Reilly why he did not like to seek advice from his father — the only other American president who went to war with Saddam — W. offered a nonsensical answer that simply underscored his perpetual fear of being overshadowed by his dad.

"He knew that I had better information at the time than he would have known," W. said, adding that when "the heat" is on "you tend to seek out the advice of the people closest to you." He also talked as usual about how close he and his dad are, which makes the whole thing even weirder.

As Barbra sang on Oprah: If we had the chance to do it all again, tell me, would we? Could we?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Shame on Times-News for not honoring vets

Shame on the Times-News! Veteran's Day and not a front-page article as a tribute or a thank you. With all the local veterans in the Magic Valley and you couldn't come up with a feature article? Although we are sure they were touched by a little something in the Outdoors section, Page 4 no less, at least you did print a couple of Associated Press stories (Outdoors Page 6 and Business Page 3).

We are grateful to all veterans and even more thankful they didn't do a substandard job during their service. This paper has no difficulties writing about the negative issues in the public educational systems; at least we didn't drop the ball when it comes to honor and respect for our veterans.

If you need help next year creating a feature article, we have eighth-graders with great suggestions. Thank you to all veterans for your service and sacrifice. Please know that not all Magic Valley citizens are unappreciative.

Roark enhances status as state Dems chief

The recent offensive comments by Keith Roark, State Democratic Party chairman, were typically demeaning to "the other side" but surprising, considering they came from the Magic Valley.

The column appeared within a week of the elections, in which the D-Party did poorly, not only in Idaho but on a national level as well. If Mr. Roark's comments were meant to elevate the party, they may have been misguided, but assuredly, they were insulting to those outside his party.

Sadly, the letter comes straight out of the D-Party playbook. It questions the intelligence of those who did not favor his candidates as well as portraying them as closed-minded robots, mindlessly searching for the "R" next to the candidates' names, so as to know whom to vote for.

Furthermore, Mr. Roark clearly yet mistakenly implies that civil rights for blacks and women would not exist today if it weren't for the D-Party. The rhetoric becomes even more ridiculous and dangerous when he insinuates that the southern states would currently be lynching blacks if it were not for his party. From a historical context, these premises are both wrong. From a human standpoint, to make these assumptions is not only wrong but negligent as well.

The insulting nature of the remarks seemed noticeably similar to those made by our president when describing southern Republicans as "bitter clingers, holding on to their guns and bibles." If the purpose was to encourage civil discussion between the enlightened, open-minded Democrats and the corrupt, anti-civil rights, closed-minded Republican voting citizens, it was a colossal failure. If this was an attempt to rally the base and convince them of your faithful commitment to the party, then congratulations, Mr. Roark. You just enhanced your status as the state Democratic Party chairman.

More school days off each month, please

I am a Boy Scout and am trying to get my communications merit badge. I am supposed to pick a topic on the community, so I am going to talk about getting longer school breaks.

I think that we should have more days off of school a month. I am always tired and I get a little behind on homework. I only get Thanksgiving and the day after off. There are a lot of kids who have to travel out of state to be with family for Thanksgiving.

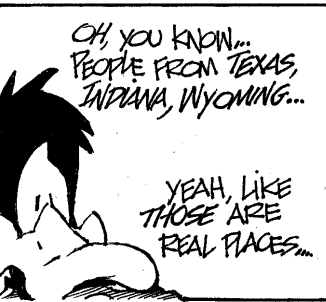

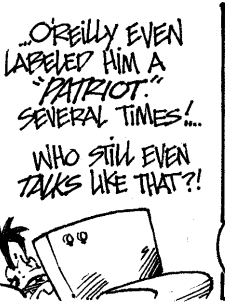

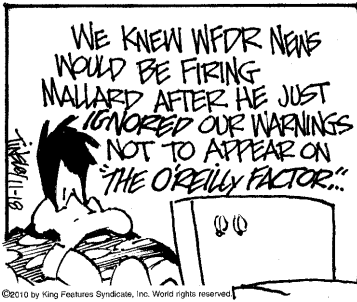

Thanks for reading.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

Pretty good for government work

Dear Uncle Sam, My mother told me to send thank-you notes promptly. I've been remiss.

Let me remind you why I'm writing. Just over two years ago, in September 2008, our country faced an economic meltdown. Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, the pillars that supported our mortgage system, had been forced into conservatorship. Several of our largest commercial banks were teetering. One of Wall Street's giant investment banks had gone bankrupt, and the remaining three were poised to follow. AIG, the world's most famous insurer, was at death's door.

Many of our largest industrial companies, dependent on commercial paper financing that had disappeared, were weeks away from exhausting their cash resources. Indeed, all of corporate America's dominoes were lined up, ready to topple at lightning speed. My own company, Berkshire Hathaway, might have been the last to fall, but that distinction provided little solace.

Nor was it just business that was in peril: 300 million Americans were in the domino line as well. Just days before, the jobs, income, 401(k)'s and money-market funds of these citizens had seemed secure. Then, virtually overnight, everything began to turn into pumpkins and mice. There was no hiding place. A destructive economic force unlike any seen for generations had been unleashed.

Only one counterforce was available, and that was you, Uncle Sam. Yes, you are often clumsy, even inept. But when businesses and people worldwide race to get liquid, you are the only party with the resources to take the other side of the transaction. And when our citizens are losing trust by the hour in institutions they once revered, only you can restore calm.

When the crisis struck, I felt you would understand the role you had to play. But you've never been known for speed, and in a meltdown minutes matter. I worried whether the barrage of shattering surprises would disorient you. You would have to improvise solutions on the run, stretch legal boundaries and avoid slowdowns, like Congressional hearings and studies. You would also need to get turf-conscious departments to work together in mounting your counterattack. The Uncle Sam, you delivered. People will second-guess your specific decisions; you can always count on that. But just as there is a fog of war, there is a fog of panic — and, overall, your actions were remarkably effective.

challenge was huge, and many people thought you were not up to it.

Well, Uncle Sam, you delivered. People will second-guess your specific decisions; you can always count on that. But just as there is a fog of war, there is a fog of panic — and, overall, your actions were remarkably effective.

I don't know precisely how you orchestrated these. But I did have a pretty good seat as events unfolded, and I would like to commend a few of your troops. In the darkest of days, Ben Bernanke, Hank Paulson, Tim Geithner and Sheila Bair grasped the gravity of the situation and acted with courage and dispatch. And though I never voted for George W. Bush, I give him great credit for leading, even as Congress postured and squabbled.

You have been criticized, Uncle Sam, for some of the earlier decisions that got us in this mess — most prominently, for not battling the rot building up in the housing market. But then few of your critics saw matters clearly either. In truth, almost all of the country became possessed by the idea that home prices could never fall significantly.

That was a mass delusion, reinforced by rapidly rising prices that discredited the few skeptics who warned of trouble. Delusions, whether about tulips or Internet stocks, produce bubbles. And when bubbles pop, they can generate waves of trouble that hit shores far from their origin. This bubble was a doozy and its pop was felt around the world.

So, again, Uncle Sam, thanks to you and your aides. Often you are wasteful, and sometimes you are bullying. On occasion, you are downright maddening. But in this extraordinary emergency, you came through — and the world would look far different now if you had not.

Your grateful nephew, Warren

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

A word to the wise about fighting city hall

Regarding Mr. Tony Hart's Nov. 7 letters, "Corruption rampant in Burley City Council":

I applaud his willingness to go out on a limb by addressing topics which are concerns of mine. But I believe that I must caution Mr. Hart because I have been a gadfly for years and I have had to pay an awful price.

When I dogged Burley's previous administration and showed that things were being done unethically, that Idaho's Open Meeting Law was being violated, that deliberate mischaracterizations of truth were being made, nothing much came of it — except that Burley's legal muscle was unleashed.

My personal life was examined and made a topic of derision. I was publicly called "either an agnostic or an atheist." Strong suggestions were made that I was a felon who had had to leave Burley in the middle '80s because of involvement in an accounting scandal.

In a city council meeting, the legal muscle behaved like a loud-mouthed inadequate politician (he later resigned), calling me a liar and defending a city councilman, a client of his firm.

One of my employers was contacted by the legal muscle in an outrageous attempt to find dirt on me and to suggest that I and my employer might not be in compliance with IRS regulations.

A few months ago, I was injured by the councilman mentioned above. He quickly pled guilty to battery but not to profanity. Since then, I have had serious health problems resulting in a massive surgery and complications.

My health bills are now almost $100,000 and climbing. I can't work and might never be able to.

Burley's new mayor, Terry Greenman, refuses to answer my questions by sitting back in his chair and wearing an expression that resembles a curious blend of excruciating constipation and boiling anger.

Stay the course, Mr. Hart, but be careful.

Credit Card Debt?

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill
CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

CreditGUARD of America, a non-profit licensed debt management service provider, is making a new program available to lower debt payments and become free of all credit card debt in only three to five years. Consumers need only $2,000 or more in total credit card debt and are falling behind on any account, to cut their payment by 35% to 50%, and reduce or eliminate interest charges altogether.

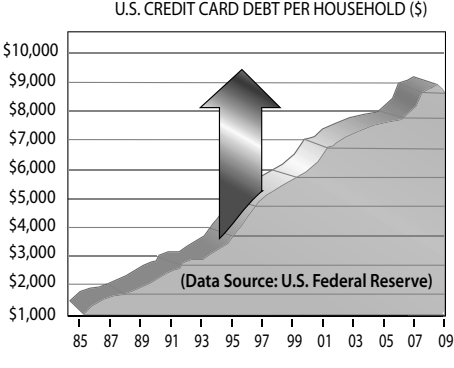

Over 200,000 families, located throughout the U.S. have regained financial independence with CreditGUARD's licensed, bonded and insured service. CreditGUARD of America has received high marks in consumer surveys showing high consumer satisfaction and confidence. The CreditGUARD debt management program can lower your monthly payments by hundreds and save you thousands!

One such case is Sandra L. who proclaimed "CreditGUARD cut my monthly payment by $656 and saved me over $29,206.53 in interest. They saved my way of life and gave me back my piece of mind! Now I can see myself on my way to becoming debt free." or Jeffrey C. who said "CreditGUARD of America helped me consolidate 3 of my credit cards into one affordable payment. ## Hansen jettisoned as state Democratic Party director

BOISE — Idaho Democrats' poor showing in the Nov. 2 election has led to consequences for the party's leadership: Chairman Keith Roark is jettisoning executive director Jim Hansen on Dec. 31, when his term ends.

During the debacle at the polls two weeks ago, Democrats saw U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick ousted from the 1st Congressional District, they gave up five state House of Representatives seats and lost the governor's race by the widest margin since 1998.

Roark isn't blaming Hansen, who ran the party since 2008, but said it's clear Idaho's long-suffering minority needs a new direction.

"Obviously, in the wake of this past election, the Idaho Democratic Party has to look in new directions, we're going to need new approaches, new energy," Roark said. "We're going to need new faces. Change is necessary."

There's at least one benefit to Democrats' poor performance nationally: There is plenty of newly jobless Democratic talent beyond Idaho borders who could be good candidates to replace Hansen. Roark said the party plans to conduct a nationwide search for a replacement.

Allred to amend disclosure to include in-kind help

BOISE — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred is amending his campaign's financial disclosures to include an in-kind contribution worth $3,000 to $4,000 for work done by the Boise-based business consulting firm he just joined as a partner.

Several employees at HB Ventures conducted an analysis last March or April that was meant to examine how far Idaho's economy had fallen behind neighboring states — and why it had slipped in the rankings.

HB Ventures is now touting this work for Allred in its web site marketing materials among its "Case Studies" pages, contending "this analysis became a foundational element of the gubernatorial candidate's proposed economic strategy for the state to realize an economic turnaround."

But Allred, who lost to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter by 26 percentage points on Nov. 2, didn't report his new firm's contribution on campaign disclosure documents filed with the Idaho secretary of state earlier this year.

After an inquiry from The Associated Press, Allred said Wednesday he was filing new paperwork, to correctly account for the in-kind contribution.

Lobbyist registers for Conoco ahead of hearing on big loads

BOISE — A big oil company has hired one of Idaho's best-known lobbyists as it tries to convince the state to allow four massive loads of refinery equipment along U.S. Highway 12.

Skip Smyser registered as a lobbyist for ConocoPhillips on Monday with Idaho's secretary of state.

The Houston-based oil giant is preparing for a hearing Friday, where it will defend its plans to ship coke drums between the port of Lewiston and Billings, Mont., along the winding riverside highway through mountainous north-central Idaho.

Environmentalists, residents and some business owners along the U.S. 12 corridor are fighting those shipments — and more than 200 additional proposed oversized loads planned by Exxon Mobil Corp.

The Idaho Transportation Department issued permits last Wednesday for ConocoPhillips' loads, but they can't move until shipment foes get a hearing.

Officials lower speed in wake of pedestrian fatality

MIDDELTON — Authorities in southwestern Idaho say they are reducing the speed limit on a stretch of Idaho Highway 44 where a student was killed after being hit by a motorist.

The Idaho Transportation Department also signed off on a plan this week to install a pedestrian crossing signal at an intersection near Middleton High School.

In September, 15-year-old Colton Mackey was killed while crossing a section of the highway en route to school. Speeds along that stretch are now 25 mph, effective Tuesday.

After the accident, a group of concerned Middleton mothers worked to raise awareness, lobby for safety upgrades and help students cross safely each morning.

Concerned Moms of Middleton leader Tammy Dittenber says the reduced speeds and safety crosswalk should make a big difference at the intersection.

Idaho man found guilty of assaulting state trooper

LEWISTON — A northern Idaho man has been convicted of assaulting a state trooper during an attempted traffic stop last year that resulted in one death.

Ricardo Daniel Rodriguez faces up to six months in prison at a Dec. 6 sentencing hearing.

Authorities say 39-year-old Rodriguez and 50-year-old Randall Vernon Ellenwood got out of their car and confronted Trooper Jeffery Talbott during an attempted traffic stop for drunk-driving in May 2009.

Police say Ellenwood and Rodriguez were "seriously physically battering" Talbott when the officer fired his weapon at the unarmed men. Ellenwood died at the scene.

The FBI investigated the shooting because the chase began on the Nez Perce Reservation and Ellenwood and Rodriguez are tribal members. Talbott was cleared to return to work.

Suspect dead, officer wounded in Riggins shooting

RIGGINS — Idaho County officials say a 47-year-old man wanted in Colorado is dead and a deputy sheriff was injured during a shootout early Wednesday in Riggins.

Curtis Scrivner was killed in a gun battle with a deputy at about 7:30 a.m. about five miles east of Riggins, county commissioner Jim Rehder said.

Deputy Fred Carey was shot twice and taken by ambulance to a McCall hospital. Carey was later flown by helicopter to a Boise hospital, where he was listed in stable condition late Wednesday, according to the Idaho County sheriff's office.

Authorities say Scrivner was contacted by Riggins Deputy Jonny Wilson the day before the shootout for failing to appear on a felony warrant from El Paso County, Colo.

At that time, Scrivner reportedly displayed a firearm and fled. Additional law enforcement back-up was summoned because Scrivner had made previous threats to officers.

The Salmon River Joint School District went into lockdown Tuesday while officers searched for Scrivner, and classes were canceled Wednesday.

County says tax notices, colonoscopy hints don't mix

GRANGEVILLE — An Idaho treasurer resisted a doctor's push to include colonoscopy reminders in annual tax notices, fearing some taxpayers would find the notes "ironic."

Idaho County Treasurer Sharon

Cox denied the request from Dr. Andrew Jones in a letter Tuesday.

Cox says she does not find colon cancer humorous, but given many taxpayer opinions of taxes, "recommending a colonoscopy in the same envelope as the tax notice may be considered ironic."

Jones asked the county last week for help in reminding residents about the importance of the screenings.

Jones says Idaho County has one of the lowest colon screening rates in the state and one of the highest rates of colon cancer.

Ketchum explores fostering economic development

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM—Ketchum took the first step toward preparing a road map for economic development Tuesday night by bringing together a variety of organizations in an exercise to find common ground.

The idea: to get everyone agreeing on the end goals before tackling the nuts and bolts of how to achieve those goals.

The strategizing, to take place over the next five months, will aid the city in updating the 10-year-old Economic Development Chapter of its comprehensive plan.

“It’s really about who we are and where we’re going to go — an incredibly difficult subject in a very difficult time,” said Tom Hudson, principal of planning, urban design and sustainable development for the Seattle-based CollinsWoerman, who is working with chapter.

Hudson shared some horror stories of communities whose efforts at economic development were wracked with conflict. Then he pointed to Twin Falls as an example of wonderful collaboration.

“Two-hundred twenty communities competed for the Dell call center. But Twin Falls had it so much together they were able to land them. Twin Falls had a 3 percent vacancy rate in housing — essentially no housing — yet they still pulled it together. They had a weekly luncheon in which everyone came together and asked, ‘What’s going on? How are we doing?’

“You need to get over old agendas and start pulling together,” he added.

Jon Duval, speaking on behalf of the Ketchum Community Development Corporation, lamented Ketchum’s downward spiral over the past decade during which the town lost 310 hotel rooms and numerous businesses.

“The town is in a death spiral,” he said. “We’ve got to give up our attachment to the way it was.”

Duval said the town needs to maintain its quality of life, provide long-term economic stability, increase the time part-time residents spend in the valley, increase the population base by offering more workforce housing and increase the number of people walking in Ketchum by presenting a more visually inviting town.

Toni Bogue, speaking on behalf of the Chamber, said the Chamber wants to do fewer events “a lot better” and elevate the level of service to ensure a great visitor experience.

Doug Brown of Wood River Economic Partnership said his group would like to see government agencies do what they can to foster a business-friendly environment.

And Jima Rice, who founded a business-nurturing organization called Jigsaw, expressed hope the valley could build an entrepreneurship culture.

“Only 30 percent of our economy is based on tourists and second homeowners. We need to build small businesses.”

Transforming a city

Google creates its own real estate boom

By Mike Swift
San Jose Mercury News

SAN JOSE, Calif.—Google’s aggressive online growth increasingly has a counterpart in bricks and mortar, with the company’s Mountain View, Calif., headquarters mushrooming over the past four years to occupy more than 4 million square feet, or the equivalent of about 40 Home Depot stores.

But that’s just a start. On Silicon Valley’s NASA base, Google is preparing to build a new corporate campus with fitness and day care facilities and — in a first in Silicon Valley — employee housing, adding 1.2 million square feet of space to Google’s real estate holdings.

While other tech giants also occupy vast amounts of real estate, Google is growing in a way that is distinct, remaking its surroundings according to its own values. In addition to buying and leasing buildings and squeezing out some of its neighbors, it is prodding the city of Mountain View to transform the area around its headquarters, adding housing and retail to create an environment more like a town center.

The company’s goals are to build a headquarters that would be “nurturing and regenerative to the environment, provide a vibrant community and work/life balance for all,” Google real estate chief David Radcliffe wrote in a letter to city officials earlier this year.

City officials are considering where housing could be built and how much of it is needed as part of the new citywide general plan. The City Council could endorse basic concepts for that plan this month.

“I don’t want to say it’s the new company town,” Gregory M. Davies, a vice president with commercial real estate firm Cassidy Turley CPS, said of Google’s role, “but it’s not far from it.”

In the past five years, as Google’s global work force has expanded by sevenfold to more than 23,000 employees, the Internet giant’s Mountain View holdings have grown to at least 4.2 million square feet and include more than 65 buildings, according to the company’s securities filings and county tax assessment data analyzed by the San Jose Mercury News. That is more than double the amount of space Google owned or leased in 2005.

Google does not disclose the number of workers it has in Mountain View, and a Google spokesman also declined to discuss the size of the company’s local real estate holdings. But given a commercial real estate benchmark of 200 to 250 square feet per worker, the company’s Mountain View domain now likely accommodates 17,000 workers or more. Documents detailing the NASA project, made available under the federal Freedom of Information law, have been redacted to remove details such as how many Googlers would live and work at its Ames Research Center.

Walmart drug plan for seniors may not be best deal

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A new Medicare drug plan with the lowest upfront cost in the country may not be for everyone, experts say.

Medicare’s open enrollment season just started, and the plan from insurer Humana and retail giant Walmart is getting attention. At $14.80, the monthly premium is the lowest of any national plan, about half the average. And Humana and Walmart are advertising savings of more than $450 a year for the typical Medicare recipient.

But experts say if you can’t get to a Walmart easily and need costly medications for intractable conditions, it could be a disappointment. You could face copayments as high as 50 percent for drugs purchased at local independent drugstores, “non-preferred” pharmacies as far as the plan goes.

“It may well be a good bargain, but people have to do the research,” said Jack Hoadley, a research professor at the Georgetown Health Policy Institute. “It’s not just the premiums. It’s the premiums plus the drugs they take, and then they have to take into account the pharmacy: Is it practical for them to use the Walmart pharmacy?”

Plan members can choose to fill their prescriptions at more than 60,000 pharmacies nationwide, but only about 4,000 — Walmart, Sam’s Club or Neighborhood Market stores — are “preferred,” and offer the lowest copayments.

Hoadley, who in an earlier government career helped lay the groundwork for the Medicare drug benefit, said he believes regulators should take a second look at the network. Residents of metro areas, for example, may have to drive miles to find a preferred drugstore. Consumer advocates say that’s unusual.

Representing both companies, Humana spokesman Tom Noland said Medicare officials undertook a

Home ownership gets tougher as lenders restrict FHA mortgages

By Jody Shenn and John Gittelsohn
Bloomberg News writers

NEW YORK — Home ownership may be falling out of reach for more Americans as lenders toughen their standards for Federal Housing Administration-insured loans beyond what the agency itself requires.

Mortgage lenders including Wells Fargo and Bank of America, the two largest, have raised the minimum credit score on FHA-insured loans that they will buy to 640 from 620. About 6.3 million people fall within that range, according to FICO, which created the formula for the ratings.

The higher hurdles for FHA loans, used in about a fifth of U.S. home purchases, add to challenges for a housing market already struggling with record-low sales and surging foreclosures. While lax lending fueled the bust that led to the recession, the new requirements will stifle the real estate recovery needed to revive the economy, said Ron Phipps, president of the National Association of Realtors.

“We’ve gone from silly to stupid,” Phipps, principal partner of Phipps Realty Inc., said in a telephone interview from his home in

Warwick, R.I. “People who should be getting credit can’t get it. To have a healthy real estate market, you need activity. You need transactions.”

The FHA, which previously didn’t have minimums for FICO scores, began in October to require grades of at least 500, and more than 580 for loans with down payments of as little as 3.5 percent. Borrowers with scores between those levels must put 10 percent down. In 2009 several lenders moved minimums to about 620.

FICO scores range from 300 to 850. The grades are based on data such as whether borrowers have missed debt payments, balances on their credit cards relative to borrowing limits, and the length of their credit history.

After crash and government control, rebirth for General Motors

By Sharon Silke Carty
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — The last time General Motors threw a big party was two years ago, for its 100th birthday. Two months later, its CEO was before Congress, begging for bailout money. Now GM is getting ready for another celebration — this time for its future.

GM will be reborn as a public company today with a stock offering, ending the government's role as majority shareholder and closing a remarkable chapter in American corporate history.

The U.S. government should make about $13.6 billion when GM shares start trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The federal Treasury is unloading more than 400 million shares of GM, reducing its stake in the company from 61 percent to about 33 percent.

The IPO will wind up as the fifth-largest in American history. Investor demand is already so high that the company raised both the number of shares it will offer and the range for the initial price. GM set a price of $33 per common share on Wednesday. When the U.S. government and other owners sell those shares, they'll raise $18.2 billion in the stock sale. GM will raise $5 billion by selling 100 million preferred shares at $50 each. Together, the sale of common and preferred stock will bring the deal's value to $23.2 billion.

The stock offering is the latest in a series of head-spinning developments over the past two years for an American corporate icon.

In September 2008, to mark the beginning of its second century, the automaker celebrated in the grand three-story atrium on the ground floor of its Detroit headquarters. GM had seen a lot of changes in its 100 years, said then-CEO Rick Wagoner.

"In fact, it's changed a lot in the last 100 hours," he said, referring to the banking crisis, which was just starting to unfold. Two months later, Wagoner found himself in front of members of Congress, begging for money to keep GM alive. Four months after that, he was ousted by President Barack Obama.

By June 2009, GM had filed for bankruptcy. It emerged relieved of most of its debt but mostly owned by the government and saddled with a damaging nickname: "Government Motors." The value of its old stock was wiped out, along with $27

AROUND THE NATION

WASHINGTON

Feds holding firm on intrusive airport security

Despite a deluge of complaints over intrusive pat-downs and revealing airport scans, the government is betting Americans would rather fly safe than untouched. "I'm not going to change those policies," the nation's transportation security chief declared Wednesday.

Responded a lawmaker: "I wouldn't want my wife to be touched in the way that these folks are being touched."

The debate over where to strike the balance between privacy and security, in motion since new safety measures took effect after the 2001 terrorist attacks, has intensified with the debut of pat-downs that are more thorough, and invasive, than before, and the spread of full-body image scans.

A week before some of the busiest flying days of the year, some passengers are refusing the regimen, many more are complaining and the aviation industry is caught in the middle.

In Florida, the Orlando Sanford Airport, which handles 2 million passengers a year, now plans to replace "testy" Transportation Security Administration screeners with private contractors, and two veteran commercial pilots are refusing to fly out of airports using the procedures.

"The outcry is huge," Texas Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison told the TSA administrator, John Pistole, at a Capitol Hill hearing. "I know that you're aware of it. But we've got to see some action."

Pistole conceded "reasonable people can disagree" on how to properly balance safety at the nation's airports but he asserted the new security measures are necessary because of intelligence on latest attack methods that might be used by terrorists.

Uneasy House Democrats keep Pelosi as their leader

House Democrats gambled Wednesday they can return to power under the same leaders who just oversaw a 61-seat election loss, choosing Nancy Pelosi to remain their party chief when they become the minority in January.

Moderate Democrats pleaded for a change to show voters they understand the anger and unrest registered two weeks earlier on Election Day. And Pelosi didn't retain her leadership without a fight, defeating Rep. Heath Shuler of North Carolina, 150-43, in secret balloting in a lengthy closed-door gathering on Capitol Hill.

In a contrast befitting the Nov. 2 election results, House Republicans kept Rep. John Boehner of Ohio as their leader without opposition, and he will become speaker in the new Congress. Eric Cantor of Virginia will retain the second-ranking party position, which will be majority leader, and Kevin McCarthy of California will be the party whip.

Boehner, who turned 61 on Wednesday, told his colleagues they will usher in "the dawn of a new majority," which he said will be "humbler, wiser, and more focused than its predecessors on the priorities of the people."

Pelosi, the nation's first female House speaker, will become minority leader when the 112th Congress convenes.

Experts: BP ignored signs of danger on doomed well

A new report from an independent scientific panel says BP and its contractors missed and ignored key warning signs and failed to fully recognize important risks in the days and hours leading up to the massive Gulf of Mexico oil well blowout.

Some of the panel's conclusions appear more critical of BP, the owner of the well, than preliminary findings issued last week by the presidential oil spill commission.

That commission said while BP made decisions that saved time it found no evidence that employees consciously chose saving money over safety. The National Academy of Engineering, which issued the latest report, said BP and others involved in the disaster failed to manage risks and didn't even have a system in place to weigh safety against costs.

Several entities, including the Coast Guard, the Justice Department, Congress and BP itself, also are looking into the causes of the worst offshore oil spill in U.S. history.

The various inquiries have so far come up with similar core findings: That BP and its partners misread critical pressure tests, that the cement job meant to seal the well didn't work, and that the blowout preventer failed to stop the gusher as designed.

Yet the investigations vary sharply in emphasis and tone. BP's internal investigation spread the blame around, saying its partners on the doomed rig shared responsibility. The presidential panel said a cascade of failures, not any single decision, led to the disaster.

Air Force warns troops Facebook could give them away

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force is warning its troops to be careful when using Facebook and other popular networking sites because some new features could show the enemy exactly where U.S. forces are located in war zones.

In a warning issued on its internal website earlier this month, the Air Force said that "careless use of these services by airmen can have devastating operations security and privacy implications." The message was also sent to senior commanders, who were asked to get the word out to their forces.

The sites are a concern for U.S. military services, which have 95,000 troops in Afghanistan and roughly 50,000 in Iraq. The Army, which provides the bulk of the battlefield forces, said it intends to circulate a similar warning about location services to key personnel next week.

The applications, which are offered by a variety of services including Facebook, Foursquare, Gowalla and Loopt, can identify a person's location, even pinpoint it on a map.

A key concern is that enemy forces could use such features to track troops in the war zone who have a Blackberry or other smart phone and use those networking services.

Location services have grown in popularity as more people get smart phones that have GPS and other means of determining the user's location.

In most cases, however, users have to go into the program manually and check in — or list a location — in order for that location to show up.

According to Facebook's practices, for example, users must either download the Facebook application and then check in to a location, or go to the mobile Facebook page to check in.

New drug produces steep drop in bad cholesterol

CHICAGO (AP) — For more than a decade, millions of lives have been saved by statin drugs like Lipitor and Zocor, which lower bad cholesterol and the risk of heart attacks.

The drugs were so safe and worked so well that deaths from heart disease began falling dramatically. Doctors only partly joked about putting statins in the water supply.

Now they think they may be on to something even bigger.

An experimental drug boosted good cholesterol so high and dropped bad cholesterol so low in a study that doctors were stunned and voiced renewed hopes for an entirely new way of preventing heart attack and stroke.

"We are the most excited we have been in decades," said Dr. Christopher Cannon of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, who led the study of the novel drug for Merck & Co. "This could really be the next big thing."

The drug, anacetrapib, will not be on the market anytime soon. It needs more testing to see if its dramatic effects on cholesterol will translate into fewer heart attacks, strokes and deaths. Merck announced a 30,000-patient study to answer that question, and it will take several years.

But the sheer magnitude of the new medicine's effects so far excited lots of doctors at an American Heart Association conference in Chicago, where results were presented Wednesday.

"The data look spectacular, beyond what anybody would have expected," said Dr. Robert Eckel, a University of Colorado cardiologist and past president of the heart association. "It's like a rocket to Jupiter versus one to the moon. I can think of many of my patients who could use the drug right now."

Merck's Dr. Luciano Rossetti agreed.

"We are trying not to be too giddy. The potential benefit is enormous," said Rossetti, senior vice president of global scientific strategy at the company, based in Whitehouse Station, N.J.

It was one of two studies that caused unusual optimism and buzz at the heart meeting. The other tested a new procedure to lower blood pressure in patients whose pills failed them.

The new method uses a tube through a blood vessel to zap nerves near the kidneys, which fuel high blood pressure. Its success offers hope for a possible permanent fix for people with very high blood pressure despite taking fistfuls of pills each day. Only about a third of the millions of people worldwide with high blood pressure are able to control it well with pills.

AN OUTING GONE WRONG

Saint Alphonsus teaches skills at ski and mountain trauma conference

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Nate Ostis, who heads up the McCall-based Wilderness Rescue International 1, recently came head to head with a startling revelation as he talked with a NASA doctor at a recent medical conference.

A worker needing emergency care can be evacuated from the International Space Station in just 90 minutes, he was told.

Can you imagine such a speedy rescue in Idaho's backcountry, which sports 4.5 million acres of wilderness, including the second largest wilderness area in the Lower 48? Ostis asked.

The problem is compounded in winter when deep snow, threat of avalanche and other hazards make rescue efforts even more challenging.

That's why Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center has put on The Ski and Mountain Trauma Conference each year for the past five years.

The conference, held recently at Sun Valley Resort, brought together 400 ski patrollers and medical personnel from Idaho and its surrounding states to learn about such widely differing subjects as assessing patients in the wilderness to avoiding complacency in swiftwater rescues.

Here's a look at some of the things that might help you survive an outing gone wrong.

SURVIVAL KIT

No single first-aid kit will serve for all your outdoor activities. Portneuf Medical Center LifeFlight EMT Lance Taysom keeps several different bags ready to go — one for day hiking, another for backpacking, still others for activities like whitewater rafting and climbing. Check your kit before you go out on each activity, he advises. You don't need to tote along a spare ski basket, for instance, for a hiking trip in July. Organize medicines in clear plastic bags labeled with dosages and cautions. And replace them as you use them.

Know where things are stored in your bag so you can retrieve a Band-aid or safety pin in the dark without dumping everything on the ground. And take your kit with you — it does you no good sitting in the car.

Some key items to have:

- Multifunction tool, such as a Leatherman, with a sharp knife and tweezers.
- Super glue for closing wounds
- Safety pins, wire, duct tape, zip-ties
- Pencil and note pad

- Nylon cord for splinting or making shelter
- Sewing kit with heavy-duty needles and thread
- Latex gloves
- Bandages, including sterile gauze pads
- Water purification tablets
  - Acetaminophen, such as Tylenol, for fever or pain
  - Aspirin for cardiac, dental and anti-inflammatory purposes
  - Ibuprofen, such as Motrin or Advil for pain
  - Benadryl or some other form of antihistamine
- Map, compass, GPS uni.
- Headlamp with extra batteries
- An emergency bivy sack or, at the very least, a car tire bag
- Fire starter
- Signaling mirror and whistle
- High-calorie snacks, pot, stove with fuel
- Antiseptic wipes, chemical hand warmers, candle
- Sun screen, insect repellent
- Extra gloves and hat

SURVIVAL FACT OR FICTION

Here are some questions LifeFlight EMT Lance Taysom suggests people ponder around the campfire some night:

True or false? High ground is better than low for sleeping.
It depends. You don't want to make camp in a creek bed or place where flash flood could cause problems. Low-lying draws or valleys tend to be colder as the night air settles. But ridge tops tend to be windy and less sheltered. The ideal spot: on a south-facing slope out of the wind and protected from flooding.

True or false? Eat potato chips rather than salt tablets.
True. Using salt tablets can lead to gastritis and renal failure. Replacing lost electrolytes is easily accomplished by eating salty snacks.

True or false? In extreme survival situations, do like "Man vs. Wild" Bear Grylls and drink your urine.
Never. Urine is toxic and will cut down your survival time.

True or false? Eating snow is a safe, effective way to stay hydrated.
It depends. If you're warm and have a good source of calories, eat all the snow you want as dry snow will give you some liquid. But if you're cold or out of food, eating snow can sap your energy and put you at risk of becoming hypothermic. If the sun is shining, put a plastic bag or dark tarp over a dark background and spread out a thin layer of snow to melt on your solar "hot plate." Or, fill a sock with snow and hang it near the fire, catching the water as it drips.

True or false? Boiling water for five minutes kills organisms harmful to humans.
True, but you don't need five minutes. Once water reaches a rolling boil, it's safe to drink.

True or false? Drinking alcohol will keep you warm.
False. Alcohol gives a false sense of warmth. In reality it causes blood vessels in the skin to open up, radiating heat away from the body at a much faster rate.

True or false? If you are cold, put on a hat, as most body heat is lost through the head.
True, if your head is the only part that's uncovered. Only the hands and feet are good at vaso-constricting to conserve heat. If your torso or some other body part is uncovered, it's just as important to cover it as the head.

True or false? You can warm up a hypothermic person by putting a second naked person in the hypothermic person's sleeping bag.
False. Skin to skin is okay for warming cold feet and hands but not the most efficient method for transferring heat to a cold person. If you put a second person in the bag, keep at least one dry layer on. Better yet, get that extra rescuer out of the bag to do some useful work like getting firewood or improving the shelter.

True or false? Keep your head inside your sleeping bag when it's cold.
Partly true. While you need to keep your head insulated, it's important not to exhale warm moist breath into the insulation of your sleeping bag. Draw your bag over you like a mummy to keep your head in and face out.

True or false? In a survival situation, you may die from hypothermia in your sleep if you go to sleep when you're cold.
False. Unless you're severely hypothermic, uncontrollable shivering will wake you up before you get too cold. When that happens, run around or do some jumping jacks or something else to warm up before trying to catch another nap.

True or false? Dehydration and fatigue contributes to frostbite.
True. Dehydration affects blood flow through capillaries. And fatigue clouds our judgment and decreases our vigilance.

DREAM FULFILLED

86-year-old Montana woman finally shoots bull elk

By Brett French
The Billings Gazette

BILLINGS, Mont. — Living and ranching in the rugged badlands of south-central Montana takes determination and grit dusted with a whole lot of hope, qualities exemplified in 86-year-old Decker-area resident Mary Jo Reavis.

So it's no surprise that on Nov. 1, after a lifetime of hunting, Reavis finally fulfilled one of her long-held dreams — she bagged her first bull elk.

"I've wanted one ever since they've had a bull elk season," Reavis said.

This year, Reavis was lucky enough to draw one of the 175 either-sex tags offered in Hunting District 704. Last year, more than 1,500 people put in for the tag, meaning there was only an 11 percent chance of drawing a tag.

Dream hunt

Even before she started hunting this season, Reavis had decided she didn't want one of the bigger bulls she'd spotted, but she didn't want a young spike bull, either. Like Goldilocks finding just the right porridge, the 5x5 bull she shot on Nov. 1 was just right.

The bull didn't come without some work, though. Reavis is still willing to walk a bit in search of game.

"On Sunday I think I walked 2 inches off of my feet," she joked.

Then around noon on Monday, while hiking along the Deer Creek divide, she found the five-point bull of her dreams. It was napping. Using her Savage Model 99 in .300 Savage, she shot the bull.

Mary Jo Reavis, 86, of Decker, Mont., shot her first bull elk, a 5x5, on Nov. 1. The longtime hunter had almost given up on bagging a bull elk.

"That's the thrill of my life," she said. "I saw some others, but I didn't want a big one. I'd have to have another room to put the antlers in. This one is just perfect."

Persistence pays off

Reavis used to plead with her father, Enoch Westman, to take her along on his elk hunts near Dillon. But he turned her down, saying it wouldn't be proper for one woman to tag along with a tent full of men.

So she bided her time, as patient as the time-worn sandstone bluffs near her home. In 2001, at the age of 77, Reavis shot her first cow elk at the end of an airstrip near her home. It had been only two months since she'd had knee replacement surgery.

Since then, she's shot two more cow elk.

She has the game meat ground into hamburger, since dental work has made it difficult for her to eat steak.

"That hamburger is great," she said. "I have 10 percent beef tallow put in it."

The bull will meet a similarly chilly fate, packaged neatly in Reavis' freezer.

Finally, the feisty hunter's dream hunt has been realized, a hope she'd almost given up on.

"This one is the thrill," she said.

Trophy place

Her friend will mount the elk antlers European-style — the top portion of the bleached skull attached to the antlers, a lean style appropriate for the stark country Reavis calls home.

She'll hang the antlers over the stairs that lead to her basement, which contains the other trophy antlers she's collected from years of hunting mule deer.

Despite the success and final realization of a long-held dream, Reavis is still itching to return to the field this hunting season.

"I want to get a whitetail deer," she said. "I've never got a whitetail."

Anglers hook several steelhead moments after their release November 2009 in the Boise River.

Steelhead to be released in Boise River today

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is bringing more steelhead to the Boise River this week.

Fisheries managers plan to release two loads of steelhead — about 660 fish — in the river today. They plan to release another load next week.

The fish will be stocked between the Glenwood Bridge and Barber Park.

Fish and Game stocked 333 steelhead in the Boise River on Nov. 10.

Besides a fishing license, anglers hoping to tangle with one of the hatchery steelhead need a $12.75 steelhead permit, which is good for 20 fish. Though required in other steelhead waters, barbless hooks are not required for Boise River steelhead angling.

All steelhead stocked in the Boise River will lack an adipose fin — the small fin normally found immediately behind the dorsal fin. Boise River anglers catching a rainbow trout longer than 20 inches that lacks an adipose fin should consider the fish a steelhead.

Any steelhead caught by an angler not holding a steelhead permit must immediately be returned to the water. Steelhead limits on the Boise River are three fish per day, nine in possession and 20 for the fall season.

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Fish and Game is seeking help in identifying the person who wrote to the agency bragging about recently poaching a deer.

On Nov. 12, the agency received a letter from "Poacher X" that included photos of a buck the writer reported poaching in northern Idaho.

"Poacher X" wrote of plans to illegally kill a

WHEN YOU'RE STUCK

Mountaineer Lou Whittaker, who lives in Ketchum, has a three-word definition for bivouac: "The great screw-up." Certainly you don't want to get stuck outside, either because your car's slid off the road in the snow or because you're lost or injured. But in a place like Idaho, it's not too far-fetched to think you might have to spend an unexpected night out some time.

Here are a few ideas for surviving "the big screw-up" from Portneuf Medical Center LifeFlight ENT Lance Tayson:

- Practice survival situations ahead of time by practicing constructing a snow shelter or a dry-weather shelter. And don't always practice on nice sunny days, either. Practice building a fire when it's wet and windy.

- Keep a to-go pack for outdoor expeditions and never go without it. Carry what you can see yourself using and know how to use it. If you choose to buy a ready-made survival kit, check it before heading out. You may find that the "emergency food" in it is nothing more than a breath mint.
- If lost, blow your whistle three times at a time to indicate that something's not right.
- Carry a glass signal mirror rather than plexiglass — plexiglass tends to get scratched and therefore does reflect as well.
- Eschew waterproof matches or cigarette lighter for a magnesium fire starter. It starts every time with a cotton ball and Vaseline.
- In a pinch you can wear plastic grocery bags over a thin liner sock and under a thick wool sock to keep sweaty feet from soaking the insulation of your waterproof boots and stealing your warmth.
- Cotton is a no-no when conditions are apt to get wet. Cotton is a great insulator when dry but loses nearly all its ability to retain heat when it gets wet. And it's difficult to dry — jeans can take up to three weeks to dry out in some circumstances.

Dollar for dollar, wool is still the best bet to keep you warm when wet. It's safe around campfires, too.

- If you're stuck or stranded in snow, stay with your car. Keep the painted surfaces free so searchers can find you. And if your car is white, tie something bright to the antenna (if you're not one of the hundreds of Bronco fans with pennants already flying on the car).
- If you're stuck outside, commit yourself early to spending the night so you can build a shelter. Line your shelter with live pine and fern boughs, rather than dry twigs and branches to provide better loft. And stuff dead grass into your clothing for added insulation.
- If you hear a helicopter overhead at night, swing your headlamp or flick your fire starter. Rescuers are now equipped with night vision goggles that should spot those lights.
- If you're out during the day signal with a large smoky fire — blackening the smoke with things like green pine boughs.
- If you're using snowmobile or ATV to get you farther than you can walk out, make sure you have what you need to survive should you run out of gas or get stuck.

WHAT'S THE RISK?

In 2007, there were 3,593 search and rescue incidents in the United States, resulting in 136 fatalities, according to Portneuf Medical Center LifeFlight EMT Lance Taysom. Thirty-one percent of them were hikers who ended up in trouble due to fatigue or poor physical conditioning; 68 percent were found within a mile of the road or trail; 98 percent were found within 24 hours. The majority of hiking or climbing accidents occur on the ascent, contrary to popular belief.

The most dangerous outdoor activity for the average person is day hiking.

The most common cause of death: hypothermia.

The most important piece of survival equipment: proper clothing.

The most important skill: Good judgment.

Upland game seasons still open

Big game are on the minds of a lot of hunters this time of year, but upland game seasons are still open.

Hunters also may still hunt cottontail rabbits and snowshoe hares. Below are upland seasons that are still open:

- California and bob-white quail through Jan. 31 in northern and southwestern Idaho. Closed in eastern Idaho.
- Chukar and gray partridge through Jan. 31.
- Pheasants through Dec. 31 in Area 1 in northern Idaho and Area 3 in southwestern Idaho; through Nov. 30 in Area 2 in eastern Idaho.
- Forest grouse, which includes ruffed, spruce and dusky (blue) grouse, through Dec. 31 in most of Idaho; and through Jan. 31 in the Panhandle Region.
- Cottontail rabbits through Feb. 28 and snowshoe hares through March 31. The daily bag limit for both is eight, with 16 in possession after the first day.

There is no season on pygmy rabbits. To distinguish, note that cottontail tails are dark above and white underneath and the pygmy's tail is buffy gray with no white. The cottontail is more than a foot long, and the pygmy is less than one foot.

Contact the local Fish and Game office to determine whether pygmy rabbits are found in your hunting area.

- Fall general turkey season runs through Dec. 15 in game management units 1, 2 (except Farragut State Park and Farragut WMA) 3, 4, 4A, 5 and 6 in northern Idaho.

All hunters need a valid 2010 Idaho hunting license. In addition, a separate permit is required for hunting sage and sharp-tailed grouse. Turkey hunters also will need tags.

AN EDUCATION FOR THE AGES

Decades later, students visit sixth-grade teacher

Times-News

Sure, students generally have their favorite teachers. But few teachers presumably make a deep enough impression to draw 15 students back to visit them years later. That's what's happened this week to Keith Turner, 83, a former schoolteacher and principal who now lives in Twin Falls.

Half a century ago, in 1953, Turner was teacher to a sixth-grade class at Lynwood, Calif., a suburb of Los Angeles. His teaching methods then — it was his first teaching assignment — were memorable enough that 13 of the students held a reunion with him in Lynwood before their 40th high school reunion in 1999. Former student John Shaw of Walnut Creek, Calif., organized the 1999 reunion. This week, he arranged for a followup, bringing people from Utah, Arizona, Arkansas and Washington, D.C., together for one more visit with Turner in Twin Falls. In all, 15 former students and five of their spouses spent most of the week exploring the Magic Valley with Turner before departing today. "We thought we'd be thankful for a teacher who changed our lives," Shaw said, noting the coming Thanksgiving holiday. Turner taught the third and sixth grades in Lynwood. He moved to Twin Falls with his wife, Ruth, and their two sons, John and David, in 1958. There, he became principal at Lincoln and Sawtooth elementary schools, where he continued to play soccer and flag football with children. He remained in administration for about 30 years and retired two decades ago. Shaw reconnected with Turner after putting his name into an Internet search engine in the late 1990s. He was driven by strong memories: Turner singing "Red Sails in the Sunset," camping trips the teacher led, football games, and a study ethic Turner imposed deeply enough that many of his students completed college. Looking back, Turner's students now say they see the reason for his success. It's clear, they said in a statement, "that Turner had a unique gift of seeing and developing each student's strength and to develop each student as a person in a positive and memorable manner"

Thanksgiving comes early to Albion school

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

Most schools budget and plan for a Thanksgiving dinner for their students. But few cook for the students' entire families as well — with one rare exception of Albion. Albion Elementary School will again hold its annual school Thanksgiving dinner today. "We do it every year. It is a tradition," said Jan Hartwell, head teacher at the school. "I've been here for nine years and they were doing it before then." As there are only 24 students in the school, the meal really isn't that hard, Hartwell said. But still, throw in their families and you're looking at about 75 to 80 people coming to dinner. "We usually have 25 to 30 extra people after the parents," Hartwell said. "Their parents, brothers and sisters are all invited to come, as well as preschoolers. Sometimes even grandparents come. The kids dress up as pilgrims or Indians. It's a lot of fun." Crystal Warrell is the regular cook at Albion Elementary, and she will prepare the Thanksgiving feast as well. She does a traditional Thanksgiving dinner with turkey and all the trimmings. "This is my second year," said Warrell, who has some help. "Last year a grandmother volunteered to help and this year my mother — also a grandmother — has volunteered to help." Luckily, Warrell won't have to turn around and cook another Thanksgiving dinner a week later. "This Thanksgiving I just have to make pumpkin pies. My in-laws are doing the rest of the cooking," she said. That's not how it's always been. "Last year I fed about 80 people here, then turned around and fed all my in-laws at my house," Warrell said. Warrell will prepare enough food today for five or six extra servings, just to make sure everyone who shows up is fed. "It's quite an event for our little school," Hartwell said.

Proper diet can help prevent another bout of diverticulitis

DEAR DR. GOTT: In November 2006, I was diagnosed with diverticular disease. In October 2009, I had surgery, and the diseased portion of my intestines was removed. Two abscesses were drained, one ovary was removed and a fistula was repaired. I've been pain free since. My question is, could this happen again? I try to consume the recommended amount of fiber, and I drink plenty of water. Your thoughts, please.

DEAR READER: Diverticula are small sacs or pockets in one or more areas of the colon, more commonly in the sigmoid colon. People with diverticula present are diagnosed with diverticulosis. Should bacteria or waste get trapped in these pouches, inflammation and infection can result. When this occurs, the condition is then known as diverticulitis. Both conditions together make up diverticular disease. A diet low in fiber appears to be the main cause of diverticular disease, which can lead to constipation and strain during evacuation. It's the straining that could cause diverticula to form in the colon. Even though you had surgical repair, you could conceivably get diverticulitis again had you not taken positive steps. By modifying your diet to include more fiber, you have gone a long way toward eliminating the problems you had in the past. Whole grains such as found in multigrain or whole wheat breads, fresh fruits such as apples, pears and peaches and vegetables such as broccoli, Brussels sprouts, squash, potatoes and legumes should provide adequate fiber. Between 20 and 35 grams of fiber per day are recommended for a healthful diet. Avoid constipation. Maintain good bowel habits. Drink adequate liquids. Exercise regularly. Obtain adequate sleep. Diverticulosis is common as a person ages. By the time a person reaches the age of 60, it will occur in almost 50 percent of the population. People without symptoms will probably not require treatment; however, they should be on a high-fiber diet to ensure they are taking all possible precau-

Take a break from smoking today

The Great American Smokeout is today, and the South Central Public Health District encourages all cigarette smokers to participate. The event, started by the American Cancer Society and now in its 35th year, encourages the 45.8 million Americans who smoke to quit for 24 hours, a first step toward quitting entirely. This year's theme is "Help create a world with less cancer and more birth-days." Even those smokers who don't quit permanently after today will have learned they can quit for at least 24 hours, and that they aren't alone in their efforts, according to a press release from the health district. Smoking, according to the health district, is the single most preventable cause of death in the U.S. More than 1,500 Idahoans die each year from smoking-related diseases, the release states, and for every tobacco-related death, 20 other people will suffer from various health problems and a decreased quality of life. Smokers who want to quit have several resources:

validity to this advice?
DEAR READER: In answer to your question, I am unaware of any scientific studies to support its use; however, I'd defy anyone to go up against what the Roman Empire began using almost 2,000 years ago as a healing herb for countless maladies. Scientific studies aside, what is valid is what works.

Ginger has been used with success to treat nausea during pregnancy, to prevent car or motion sickness, as an anti-inflammatory for arthritis and joint pain and after imbibing too much alcohol. Even as a tea, its soothing qualities are well known. Give it a try. It won't do you any harm, and, if you fail to improve, you can speak with your physician regarding what he or she might recommend instead.

Dalton Clay Ling

MERIDIAN — Dalton Ling passed away at the age of 18 on Tuesday, Nov. 16, 2010, due to a long-term illness.

A memorial service will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 20, at the Chapel of the Chimes, 105 E. Carlton in Meridian, Idaho, with a reception to follow.

Dalton was born May 8, 1992, in Moscow, Idaho, to Tim and Julie Ling. He began his journey here on earth with a helicopter ride shortly after he was born; it was not his last. Although Dalton was never able to speak, he touched the hearts of all who met him. Dalton attended the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind for 14 years. While attending the school, Dalton was blessed with many phenomenal teachers. Dalton was treated like a normal school kid and even though he never put an apple on the teacher's desk, he was always considered a favorite. Molly, his teacher for the last six years, helped Dalton experience many things that most of us have never had the privilege to do. He ran in a marathon, went snow skiing and flew in a crop duster — amazing for a kid that could never walk or even see. Dalton also was blessed with two families. His immediate family and the family he acquired at his group home in Wendell, Idaho. During his years at the home, Dalton found love in abundance. He was blessed to find his second mother, Cheryl; his best friend, Aaron; and his girlfriend, Mackenzie; a loving nurse named Betty; his long-time advocate, Theresa; and his loving caregivers, Christine, Carol, Sandra and Jill; and the countless others that treated Dalton with love and tenderness.

Dalton is survived by his mother and father, Julie and Tim Ling; his sister, Alec; his brother, Karson; grandparents, Clyde Goding and Roger and Judy Ling; and his great-grandfather, Mervin Ling. He is also survived by three aunts, one uncle and nine cousins.

Through his 18 years, Dalton never spoke a bad word, did a bad deed or hurt any living thing. He is truly an angel. On Nov. 16, Dalton took the hand of the Lord and his grandmother, Kathy, and walked his first walk, ran his first run and said his first words. Finally he is free.

Please visit Dalton's online guestbook at www.chapel-of-the-chimes.com.

Louise Patterson

HAILEY — Louise Patterson passed away Sunday, Nov. 14, 2010, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls from complications of cancer which she had fought valiantly for a number of years.

Louise (Weesee) Patterson was born Edna Louise Broadie to Ada and Ernest Broadie on April 16, 1927, in her Grandma Barker's home near Gannett, Idaho. She was the oldest of three children, Louise, Betty and their younger brother, Jerry. She grew up and attended school in Gannett, later graduating from Hailey High School, Class of 1945. She married Grant Alma Patterson from Carey, Idaho, recently back from the India-Burma Theater of World War II, where he was in a B-24 squadron. They settled in Hailey for a lifetime of enjoying the Wood River Valley and raised two sons, James and Neil.

Louise enjoyed working as a telephone operator for many years in Hailey and later in Sun Valley. She enjoyed the camaraderie of fellow operators and the job allowed her to be connected to the world at large. She was quick to develop a friendship and cultivated many into lifelong friends.

Louise was a product of both the Depression and World War II years and was very conservative in her approach to life; she and her husband both cultivated and enjoyed simple pleasures and loved to camp and fish in the mountains of Idaho. Her mother had been a phenomenal cook and that talent was passed on to Louise; she dearly loved to throw a "feed" for family and friends and her canned goods such as sweet pickles and strawberry jam were special gifts coveted by all who were familiar with them.

Louise was a fierce devotee to family and the love of both close and extended family. To say that she would "give the shirt off her back" if it would assist a family member is an understatement. She was literally tireless in her service to family and loved ones. Louise was devoted to her faith in the LDS Church and served in many capacities; her most beloved involvement was always in the service of youth as she dearly loved them.

Louise was preceded in death by both parents; her husband, Grant; and her dear sister, Betty Watson; as well as her brother-in-law, Rex Watson.

She is survived by her sons, James(Wanda) and Neil; her grandchildren, Georgia, Grant, Michelle, Travis, Katrina, Logan and Colin; and great-grandchildren, Hope, Landen and Hailey; as well as a large extended family of nephews, nieces and cousins.

She will be greatly missed by all who knew her as she was a shining star in the journey that is life.

A service will be at 1 p.m. Friday, Nov. 19, at the Hailey LDS Chapel. Friends may call from 3 to 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 18, at the Wood River Chapel in Hailey, and one hour prior to the service Friday at the church. Arrangements are under the care of Wood River Chapel, and friends are invited to leave condolences and share memories at www.woodriverchapel.com.

Helen Dohse Matthiesen

Helen Dohse Matthiesen, 95, of Twin Falls, passed away Monday, Nov. 15, 2010, at the River Ridge Care Center in Twin Falls.

In 1977, Helen married Marvin Matthiesen in Filer. She was active in several organizations, including the Kimberly School District PTA, LWML, Excelsior Social Club, 4-H Leader and Peace Lutheran Church in Filer. She enjoyed crocheting, knitting and cooking.

Helen is survived by her daughter, Margene (Stan) Bauer of Pullman, Wash.;

daughter-in-law, Carolyn Dohse of Kimberly; six grandchildren; nine great-grandchildren; and one great-great-granddaughter. She was preceded in death by her parents; two husbands; her son, Dale Eugene Dohse; and a brother, Romer Schmidt.

Champagne expert Richard Juhlin samples one of the 168 bottles of champagne salvaged from a 200-year-old shipwreck, Wednesday in Mariehamn, Finland.

Champagne lacks fizz, not flavor after 200 years

By Louise Nordstrom
Associated Press

MARIEHAMN, Finland — Here's what nearly 200-year-old champagne salvaged from the bottom of the sea tasted like to wine experts: lime blossoms, coffee, chanterelles.

Here's what it tasted like to me: yeast, honey and — dare I say it? — a hint of manure.

The antique bubbly wasn't very bubbly after its long sleep in the cold and murky Baltic Sea. But I couldn't help feeling a thrill Wednesday as I took a sip of history captured in that cloudy, golden liquid.

After all, I was drinking what could be the world's oldest champagne. And some of the unopened bottles that are to be auctioned might go for as much as $70,000 apiece.

The shipwreck was discovered in July near the Aland Islands — a wind-swept archipelago between Sweden and Finland — by a group of divers. Researchers say the ship was probably en route from northern Germany to the west coast of Finland with its prestigious cargo when it sank, sometime in the first half of the 1800s.

Connoisseurs haven't been able to date precisely the 168 bottles raised from the shipwreck. All they can say is they are from the early 19th century and astonishingly well-preserved.

I was among 20 people invited to the tasting in Mariehamn, the capital of the island group. After a presentation of the diving operation, an archaeologist wearing white gloves presented two bottles of champagne specialist Richard Juhlin — a Veuve Clicquot and a Juglar, a now-defunct champagne house.

Juhlin sampled both in front of journalists.

"Great! Wonderful!" he exclaimed. Then he paused, soaking in the flavors.

"What strikes you the most is that it's such an intense aroma," he continued. "It's so different from anything you've tasted before."

He found hues of chanterelles, honey, orange and peach in the Juglar; linden blossoms and lime peels in the Veuve Clicquot.

We were given a choice to sample either the Veuve Clicquot or the Juglar.

Easy, I thought. I'll go for the Juglar, since that brand doesn't exist anymore.

I raised a wine glass containing about an inch of champagne, which contained tiny pieces of cork but very little fizz. A mushy, roomy-yeasty flavor soon gave way to sweet notes of honey — much like a sugary dessert wine.

Iraqi president won't sign Aziz's death sentence

By Leila Fadel
The Washington Post

BAGHDAD — Iraq's president said Wednesday that he would not sign an execution order for the foreign minister in Saddam Hussein's government, who was sentenced to death last month.

"I will not sign Tariq Aziz's death sentence," Jalal Talabani told France 24 television during a visit to Paris for the Socialist International meeting. "I will sign no death sentence at all, because as a social democrat, I'm against the death penalty."

The statement by Talabani, who was reelected to the presidency last week, followed calls by the Vatican and Russia to halt the execution on humanitarian grounds. Aziz, 74, is in poor health. He was the most senior Christian official in Hussein's predominantly Sunni government, as well as its international face.

Talabani, a Kurd, told the French news channel that he "sympathized" with Aziz "because he is an Iraqi Christian."

"Moreover," Talabani said, "he is an old man who is over 70."

The president's stand did not come as a surprise and may not prevent the controversial execution. During Talabani's earlier tenure as president, he never signed a death sentence, but Iraqi authorities nevertheless handed several senior members of the former government, including Hussein.

Aziz was sentenced Oct. 26 by a special tribunal set up after the U.S.-led invasion in 2003 to prosecute senior members of Hussein's government. He was convicted of persecuting members of Shiite political parties, including Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki's Dawa party.

Ziad Tariq Aziz, Aziz's son, said in a phone interview that the family has not heard from him in more than a month and is not sure whether his court-appointed attorney has filed an appeal, which must be done within 30 days of sentencing.

Qantas: 40 engines on superjumbos may need to be replaced

SYDNEY (AP) — Up to half of the Airbus superjumbo engines of the type that disintegrated in flight on a Qantas plane may need to be replaced in the fleets of carriers from Australia, Singapore and Germany, the Qantas chief executive said Thursday.

Australia's Qantas, Singapore Airlines and Germany's Lufthansa fly A380s powered by four giant Rolls-Royce Trent 900 engines, with a total of 80 engines on 20 planes. Qantas CEO Alan Joyce said Thursday that up to 40 of them may need to be replaced.

One of the Trent 900s on a Qantas superjumbo caught fire and blew apart shortly after takeoff from Singapore on Nov. 4, in what experts say was the most serious safety incident for the world's newest and largest passenger plane. The Sydney-bound flight returned safely to Singapore where it made an emergency landing.

All six of Qantas' A380s have been grounded while extensive safety checks and fixes are carried out, and the airline says three Trent 900 engines have been removed, in addition to the one that blew out. Singapore Airlines, with 11 A380s, and Lufthansa, with three, briefly grounded some of their planes after the Qantas scare but returned almost all of them to service after conducting safety checks.

Singapore Airlines has said it replaced three Trent 900s. Lufthansa replaced one but said the reason was unrelated to the Qantas blowout.

Hicks resigns as Canyon Ridge football coach

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

When carrying three full-time jobs at the same time, it's difficult to do a great job at any one of them.

Those were the sentiments of Canyon Ridge High School vice principal Bill Hicks, who on Wednesday confirmed his resignation as the school's head varsity football coach.

Hicks said he wants to devote his full attention to his administrative duties at the school. Last month he ceded his role as athletic director as another part of the transition.

"I've been an athletic director for 15 years or more, and I wanted to focus on the academic side of administration to broaden my experience," Hicks said. "As a new coach we'll want someone who has the time and inclination to get out and get involved with the kids from an early age, to get them excited about the program."

Hicks, the only head football coach in the school's brief history, led the Riverhawks to a 3-13 record in two seasons. But the program's performance was not a factor in his decision.

In fact, the change was one that was in the works for some time, but the timetable was accelerated by a larger than anticipated student body at the school.

With few new teaching positions created even with Canyon Ridge's opening, Hicks in essence carried the role of three full-time positions. The goal was for him to get the football program on sound footing and then hand over the reigns. Hicks informed his staff of the decision last week, but he wanted to wait until after the team banquet Tuesday evening to publicly announce it.

"The important thing for our kids to understand was that this is what's best for the football program, and I think they do," Hicks said. "I think we've got a good foundation. ... it was a tough decision, but it's the right decision in the long run for both the football program and the school."

Canyon Ridge principal

Brady Dickinson said the coaching position is open effective immediately and a committee designed to select Hicks' replacement will be assembled once applications start being received.

The committee will have a similar composition to the one that conducted Canyon Ridge's volleyball coach search last spring. That committee was made up of Jerrold Brooks never envisioned himself playing college basketball in Twin Falls, Idaho. In fact, Brooks never envisioned himself playing college basketball, period.

Football was his primary passion from his Pop Warner days to his starring role as a tailback in high school. For him, basketball was an afterthought — and rightly so, with schools like Syracuse recruiting him for his gridiron prowess.

But today, Brooks finds himself as the leading the scorer on the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team — his success a testament to his ability to roll with life's punches.

Brooks described growing up in Rochester, N.Y., as "hard. A lot of fights, a lot of shooting, a lot of crazy stuff."

He turned to sports as a sanctuary, excelling in football, basketball and track. But his dreams of a college football career took a hit when he suffered a fracture in his foot during a summer basketball tournament. He missed his entire senior season of football and the recruiting attention evaporated.

Brooks recovered in time for basketball season, but tore his meniscus early in the season. His East Rochester team switched to a 2-3 zone defense just to keep him on the floor and he rewarded them by averaging 27.6 points, 7.1 rebounds and 3.3 steals.

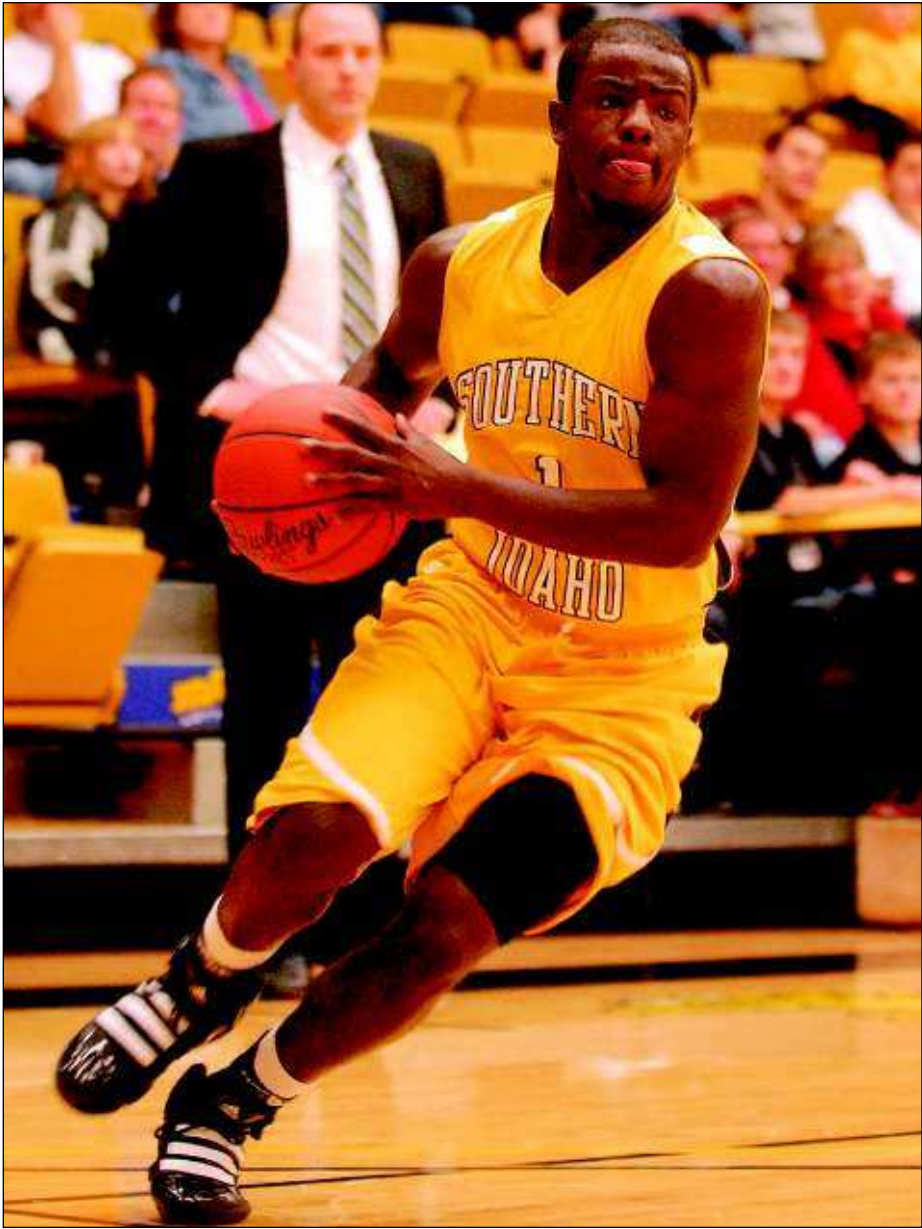

Suddenly, he was being recruited again.

"I was really surprised," said Brooks. "I just thought I was going to help my team win and it ended up this is what I do."

But Brooks wasn't quite ready to drop his football dream. He was told a rule existed

Declo girls hold off Raft River

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

DECLO — Raft River rallied after falling behind 17-0 to start the game, but Declo held on for a 59-48 nonconference victory in the Hornets' season opener Wednesday.

Sydney Webb had 12 rebounds and scored 10 of her game-high 18 points in the fourth quarter for Declo (1-0).

"We started out really good but we let down a little bit in the second quarter," said Webb. "They were on fire so we knew we had to come out strong in the third quarter. They didn't have any shot blockers so we just needed to take our time and run the plays."

Raft River (1-2) came storming back with a 20-point second quarter, led by Hailey Greenwood and Echo Hansen, who each finished with 14 points.

"I wasn't too worried about (the early deficit)," said Raft River coach Garth Steed. "We just weren't playing how we usually play. Once we started taking care of the ball I knew we'd get back in it. These girls won't give up. If you look at them, even when we were down, there was no panic in their eyes. They're a scrappy bunch and they work well together."

The Trojans held Declo without a point for over six and a half minutes, and Wynter Holtman's offensive rebound and putback at the halftime buzzer cut Declo's lead to 30-26.

"They got their second wind and settled in and played a great second quarter," said Declo coach Dennie Smyer. "We started to be overzealous with the fouls and their free throws kept them in it."

Raft River made 20 of 26 free throws. However, the Trojans were outrebounded 40 to 28.

"They're physical," Steed said of Declo. "We got boxed out quite a few times and our girls finally had to figure out they've got to push back."

Raft River made it a two-point game in the third quarter. But a steal and layup by Sierra Zollinger followed by a 3-pointer by Chancey Knopp gave Declo some breathing room and seemed to take the wind out of the Trojans' sails as they ran out of gas down the stretch on the second night of a back-to-back.

Zollinger finished with 15 points, four steals and three assists while Melissa Carson chipped in with 14 points and seven rebounds.

Declo hosts Oakley Friday. Raft River is off until Nov. 30 when it travels to North Gem.

Newman to be inducted in CSI hall of fame during tournament

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

The 34th edition of the K&T Steel Tournament should be one to remember. And not just because of a solid group of teams coming to Twin Falls.

Former College of Southern Idaho star Erick Newman will be inducted into the CSI Athletic Hall of Fame during halftime of Saturday night's game between the No. 13 Golden Eagles and Western Nebraska Community College.

But Newman won't be the only one making a return to CSI Gymnasium. Former CSI assistant coach Russ Beck is now the head coach at Western Nebraska and brings a highly touted team to Twin Falls.

Newman led CSI to a 73-4 record and two NJCAA Tournament appearances, including the 1987 national championship. An undersized player, the 6-foot-3 Newman was a first-team NJCAA All-American at CSI before playing at St. Mary's. He is the first player from the 1987 team to be inducted at CSI.

"I think he's a great person to honor because of the work ethic and commitment he showed here and what he's done with his life," said CSI Athletic Director Joel Bate.

Newman is now battalion chief of the Richmond (Calif.) Fire Department. He will attend Thursday's game between CSI and Sullivan (N.Y.) County and will speak at the K&T Steel Luncheon at noon Friday at the Turf Club.

While Newman played in CSI's glory days, the current Golden Eagles are trying to rediscover that magic and are off to a 5-0 start after rallying for three wins in last week's Gordon Paving/Gold's Gym Invitational.

CSI women take on tough field at Midland College invite

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

It's basically a who's who of NJCAA women's basketball. But the Midland College Women's National Invitational Tournament also represents a first for ninth-year College of Southern Idaho women's basketball coach Randy Rogers.

The eight-team field will play a true tournament today through Saturday, with the winners advancing to face one another. It's the first true tournament format Rogers has participated in during the regular season.

"I think it's exciting unless you're not the good team," said Rogers. "It's a great opportunity for us and these kids."

The 3-0 Golden Eagles are one of five teams in the tournament ranked in this week's NJCAA poll, including No. 2 Central Arizona, No. 5 Trinity Valley (Texas) Community College, No. 8 CSI, No. 9 Midland and No. 23 Chipola (Fla.) College.

Two others — Monroe (N.Y.) Community College and Cloud County (Kan.) Community College — were ranked in the preseason poll, while Odessa (Texas) College rounds out the field.

For CSI to win in Texas, Rogers said his team will have to "handle pressure."

The Eagles may have to do that without starting point guard Mechela Barnes, who is expected to sit out after suffering a concussion in last Saturday's win over Central Florida. Barnes is averaging 11.3 points, 3.0 assists and 2.3 rebounds.

If she can't go, freshman Kyler Paria and Guili El-Mir will likely split time at the point.

Williams, Millsap lead Jazz to win over Nets

SALT LAKE CITY — Deron Williams scored 23 points and dished out eight assists, Paul Millsap had 19 points, 15 rebounds and four assists and the Utah Jazz used balanced scoring and an efficient fast break to beat the New Jersey Nets 98-88 on Wednesday night.

All five Jazz starters were in double figures by early in the third quarter, with Al Jefferson adding 16 points and Andrei Kirilenko 15.

Raja Bell, back after missing one game with a groin injury, also scored 15 for Utah, including a key basket with two minutes remaining that put Utah ahead 93-86.

Anthony Morrow scored 24 points, Devin Harris added 19 and Brook Lopez 17 for New Jersey, which had a 57-44 advantage on the boards.

The Spurs won their eighth straight and improved to 9-1, tying a franchise-best start that even Tim Duncan never saw during any of the four championship runs for the Spurs.

But when Parker arrived at the arena, none of that seemed to matter.

HEAT 123, SUNS 96

MIAMI — Chris Bosh scored a season-high 35 points before sitting out the fourth quarter, LeBron James had 20 and the Miami Heat ran away from the Phoenix Suns 123-96 on Wednesday night.

Dwyane Wade added 17 points, six rebounds and six assists for Miami, which used two big runs — a 24-9 spurt to end the first half, followed by an 18-3 flurry that closed the third quarter — to snap the Suns’ three-game winning streak. James also had nine assists and eight boards.

LAKERS 103, PISTONS 90

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Kobe Bryant scored 33 points without playing in the fourth quarter, and the Lakers took advantage of Richard Hamilton’s early ejection in the easy win.

Bryant scored 24 in the first half, helping the Lakers open a 14-point halftime lead, and the struggling Pistons allowed the first seven points of the third quarter to fall behind 66-45. Pau Gasol added 25 points and 12 rebounds for Los Angeles.

CELTICS 114, WIZARDS 83

BOSTON — Paul Pierce scored 23 points, and Rajon Rondo had 12 points and 13 assists before Boston’s starters sat out the fourth quarter.

Kevin Garnett scored 18 points, Shaquille O’Neal had 13 and Ray Allen 11 for the Celtics, who were ahead 89-69 at the end of three quarters and went ahead by as many as 37 in the fourth.

HORNETS 99, MAVERICKS 97

NEW ORLEANS — David West scored 17 points and stole the ball from Dirk Nowitzki with 2 seconds left to preserve the win for New Orleans.

Dallas, trailing 98-97, was trying to set up for a potential game-winning shot when West stole the ball and made one of two free throws for the final margin.

THUNDER 116, ROCKETS 99

OKLAHOMA CITY — Kevin Durant scored 24 points in only three quarters and Russell Westbrook had 21 points and 12 assists in Oklahoma City’s most lopsided win this season.

Durant came in second in the league at 41½ minutes per game, but played just under 30 with Oklahoma City comfortably ahead.

TIMBERWOLVES 113, CLIPPERS 111

MINNEAPOLIS — Michael Beasley scored 33 points and hit the winning jumper with 2.3 seconds to play to lift Minnesota.

Kevin Love added 24 points and 14 rebounds for the Timberwolves, who nearly blew another big lead in the fourth quarter but held on to hand Los Angeles its seventh straight loss.

RAPTORS 94, 76ERS 86

PHILADELPHIA — Andrea Bargnani scored a season-high 30 points and Sonny Weems added a career-high 25 for Toronto in a matchup of two of the worst teams in the Eastern Conference.

Reggie Evans, who began the night fourth in the league in rebounding at 11.5 per game, pulled down 14 for the Raptors, who improved to 3-9 and snapped a two-game losing streak.

Brooks

that meant he could return to East Rochester as a second-year senior and get another shot at football. But after he pursued it the rule was changed, nixing his plan, and he found himself in school but not allowed to play.

Enter CSI, which discovered Brooks through Syracuse-area AAU coach Mickey Walker, who also coached former CSI player Daequon Montreal.

Brooks signed with the Golden Eagles, arrived on campus last January and made an immediate impact on the scout team, setting the table for this season.

So far, the 5-foot-11 freshman guard hasn’t disappointed, averaging a team-best 16.8 points through five games. He’s also hitting 43 percent from 3-point range and knocked down two late 3-pointers as CSI held off Casper College last Saturday to stay unbeaten.

“J.B. feels like every one’s going in and I’ve seen enough of his shots now that I think every one’s going in too,” CSI head coach Steve Gosar said of Brooks’ outside shooting. “His release and his shot is so compact. It doesn’t take him long to get that off. He has efficiency of motion with his shot.”

Brooks loves his offensive role. “They give me the green light to keep shooting,” he said. “...I’m trying to go undefeated as a team goal the whole season and win Hutch. As a personal goal, I want to get to the next level.”

There’s a good chance he will with his ability to be a lock-down defender. After Casper’s Brandon Walton scored 22 first-half points on CSI, Brooks requested the assignment to guard Walton in the second half. Brooks held Walton scoreless for more than 19 minutes until allowing a layup with 43 seconds left.

“J.B. has great feet and he has a strong body so he can absorb contact,” said Gosar. “It’s really hard to get separation on J.B. because of that. He knows he’s got the ability to be sticky. I think that challenge in the second half kept him focused. He’s as good as any on-ball defender there is.

“Off the ball, he needs to continue to keep finding his line and understand the team principles of defense and helping out your teammates.”

Learning team defense is just one aspect of Brooks’ transition to Twin Falls after 18 years in Rochester.

“It’s a lot different. I’m used to seeing a lot of people, a lot of traffic,” he said. “It’s quiet out here. I like it, but it’s something I had to adjust to.”

Brooks has made the most of his time, working hard in the weight room to strengthen his surgically repaired knee and bulk up his frame. And his on-court success has alleviated his disappointments with football and helped him become a leader on a young CSI team.

“J.B. is a fun guy to be around,” said Gosar. “If I was back in college again, he’d be a guy I’d enjoy hanging out with. He loves to play. He’s got a great sense of humor, he’s always joking around.”

One thing that’s no joke? Brooks is a baller.

“That was a long stressful weekend,” said CSI head coach Steve Gosar, who would prefer his team find some breathing room in this week’s games.

“We need to come out of the gate better and start fast,” he said.

The Eagles have three players averaging 16 points or better in Jerrold Brooks (16.8 ppg), Pierre Jackson (16.6) and Kenny Buckner (16.0), while six others average between 5 and 11 points per game. That depth will come in handy this week.

Sullivan County (4-0) is the No. 1-ranked team at the NJCAA Division III level and is led by 6-8 freshman Cleanthony Early, who averages 18.5 points and 10.5 rebounds. Marvin Jean, a 6-5 guard, scores 15.5 a game, while Kenny Bradshaw is 6-7 and averages 13.75 points.

Friday’s opponent, Taag Academy, is a prep school out of Tampa, Fla., and is led by 6-foot guard Lyle Harris’ 13.5 points a game.

Beck’s Western Nebraska squad is 5-0 and was ranked No. 9 in the Sporting News preseason JUCO rankings. The team is led by freshmen Justin Omogun (19.25 points, 7.5 rebounds) and Hauns Brereton (16.0 points, 7.75 rebounds).

teams are just a little bit quicker than we are and probably a little bit longer than we are,” said Rogers of the challenges that await his team.

But CSI has plenty of balance, boasting nine players that average 5.7 points or more, led by Paria’s 13.7. Chakayla Carthen (9.7 ppg), Felicity Jones (9.0) and Laurel Kearsley (8.0) give CSI plenty of offensive weapons.

The key is making shots, something CSI struggled to

“If we don’t make shots from the perimeter, it gets to be a tough ball game,” said Rogers.

But the Eagles are winning with defense, getting more than 21 steals per game, led by Paria’s 5.3 average.

Tonight, CSI faces a 6-1 Midland squad that has good size and talent. On Friday, CSI will face either Trinity Valley or Cloudy County at 4 p.m. MDT.

Tai Wesley scored 13 of his 19 points in the first half to lead the Aggies. He fouled out with 2:10 left in the game. That foul was ruled intentional and put Chris Collinsworth on the line where he converted both free throws to push the BYU lead to 74-69.

In the first half, Fredette tried to break the game open early by scoring 12 of BYU’s first 15 points to help the Cougars to a 15-7 lead. Brian Green immediately responded for the Aggies by sinking three straight 3-pointers to pull within one at 17-16.

Black, Gardenhire picked as MLB's top managers

NEW YORK (AP) — Bud Black hung on to win this race. Ron Gardenhire became a first-time Manager of the Year, too, after so many near misses.

A month after his San Diego Padres were knocked out of the playoff chase on the final day, Black nudged Cincinnati's Dusty Baker by one point for the NL award Wednesday.

“I guess this vote was sort of like our season, it came down to the wire,”

Black said on a conference call.

Gardenhire was the clear choice in the American League, earning the honor after five times as the runner-up. He led Minnesota to its sixth AL Central title in nine seasons.

“Congrats to the best manager in baseball!” Twins center fielder Denard Span tweeted. “Way overdue!” Span tweeted an apology moments later for misspelling baseball.

Said Gardenhire: “It’s pretty neat to have your name mentioned up there.”

Black was selected after guiding San Diego to a 15-game turnaround despite the second-lowest payroll in the majors. The Padres finished 90-72 and led the NL West until a late, 10-game slump and then a loss to San Francisco on the last day eliminated them.

Black drew 16 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers’ Association of America and got 104 points. Baker had 13 first-place votes and 103 points.

Bruce Bochy of the World Series champion San Francisco Giants, Atlanta’s retiring Bobby Cox and Philadelphia’s Charlie Manuel got the other first-place votes.

“This was a great year in the NL,” said Black, who was on a golf course near San Diego when he got the word. “I guess this vote could’ve gone either way. I feel fortunate that I won. All these guys are so deserving.”

Gardenhire drew 16 first-place votes and 108 points, and was the only AL manager listed on all 28 ballots.

Ron Washington, who started the year with a cocaine admission and ended it with Texas’ first trip to the World Series, was next in the AL with 10 first-place votes and 81 points. Tampa Bay’s Joe Maddon and Toronto’s retiring Cito Gaston drew the other first-place votes.

MIDDLEKAUFF

Ducks fans irate over perceived fake injuries

By John Marshall
Associated Press writer

Coaches across the country spent the offseason trying to figure out a way to stop top-ranked Oregon's bullet-train offense. No matter what they've tried, no one's been able to do it.

A new tactic may be emerging: faking injuries.

Outlandish as it may seem, speculation over fake injuries has been rising over the past few weeks as seemingly healthy players fall to the ground, howling in pain, their season apparently over, only to be back on the field the next play.

Ducks fans have been screaming about this unusual human-speedbumping method almost since the season started, often booing opposing players they believe to be Meryl Streep-ing it up.

Opposing coaches deny it's happening.

Pac-10 officials say not much can be done about it.

This is a gray area hovering out there between the lines of ethics and the rules.

"Obviously, you don't know when a player is really injured and not injured," Oregon coach Chip Kelly said. "I don't know really what can be done about it."

He's right.

The NCAA rulebook frowns upon faking injuries, calling the practice unethical. There are no specific rules to prevent it, though. Officials can't call delay of game or unsportsmanlike conduct if a player claims to be injured. The only recourse is that an injured player has to sit out the next play.

Whether injury faking is actually happening is up for debate.

Oregon fans first raised the issue the second week of the season, when a few Tennessee players suffered what they saw as questionable injuries.

Kelly broached the was-he-really-injured topic Sept. 25 at Arizona State, saying it reminded him of a World Cup game with the atmosphere and the injuries, an apparent intimation that some Sun Devils players were flopping.

The most glaring instance of the fall-down, slowdown

— at least to injury faking theorists — came last Saturday against Cal.

A few times during the game, Cal players went down with injuries, only to return shortly after, if not the next play. The most notable of these injuries came early in the game, when Bears defensive lineman Aaron Tipoti got up from making a tackle, went up to the line, looked to the sideline, then fell to the ground holding his leg, just before Oregon could snap the ball.

Tipoti's seemingly orchestrated collapse made the rounds on YouTube — with look-what-he-did graphics — further fueling the fake-injury speculation, though Cal coach Jeff Tedford said that wasn't the case.

"People get hurt during games and in fast-tempo stuff, there's cramps," he said. "That's not the deal. I know that anytime anybody goes down against Oregon, they always think that's the case. But it's not the case."

Whether it was a rhythm-breaking ploy or not, Cal was one of the few teams able to slow the speeding Ducks.

Oregon entered the game with the nation's best offense, averaging 54.7 points and 567 yards per game. Using a variety of defensive fronts and man-to-man coverage in the secondary, the Bears held the Ducks to a season-low 317 yards and a single touchdown.

Oregon managed to pull out a 15-13 win to keep its national-title hopes alive, but fans in Eugene were outraged by Cal's perceived cry wolf tactics.

Hicks

school administrators and students, while Dickinson said assistant coaches and parents will also have input in the search for a new football coach.

"We want buy-in from everyone involved in the program, not just hire someone who Brady selected," Dickinson said. "Sometimes it's a difficult process and you get some very good candidates, and a broad representation gives people an opportunity to evaluate the options and choose the best candidate."

Dickinson hopes to have a new hire recommendation for the school board in about a month, but noted that the availability of teaching positions could lengthen the process.

Hicks plans to dive full-bore into his administrative duties but wants to remain involved in the football program to some degree, if it works out. At his previous stop in Shelton, Wash., he was the athletic director and varsity offensive coordinator.

"You can do both of those jobs," Hicks said. "If there's a good fit and I can remain involved, I'd like that. But if not, I'm happy to turn it over."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Give me a look, give me a face
That makes simplicity a grace."
— Ben Jonson

The Principle of Restricted Choice (which, like Occam's Razor, says "Always take the simplest path") applies when an opponent plays an honor and you need to find a touching honor by either playing for the drop or finessing. It says that the missing honor is more likely to be in the other hand because with both honors a defender had a choice of which to play.

Say you are missing four cards including the queen and jack. When you play the ace, one opponent plays an honor. Do you play him for Q-J-doubleton or a singleton honor? With Q-J-doubleton, the defender might have played either honor at his first turn; with a singleton honor, the player had no choice. The odds heavily favor finessing on the next round, playing him for a singleton honor.

The same theory can be applied to situations like the one in today's deal, where North-South bid to their best game — four hearts. The defenders started with three rounds of spades. Declarer won and cashed the heart king and ace. When West played the queen, declarer, using the Principle of Restricted Choice, correctly decided that an original holding of honor-doubleton was more likely than Q-J-7.

Accordingly, declarer played a club to dummy's ace, ruffed a club, took the diamond king, crossed to dummy's diamond ace, and played winning clubs through East. It did not matter when East ruffed in. Whether he ruffed high or low, declarer would lose just one trump trick.

ANSWER: Your partner has shown a balanced 18-20 hand and not promised any spade length at all. But the odds strongly favor his having two or three spades, in which case spades will probably play better than no-trump. So bid two spades and apologize if partner has a small doubleton spade.

IF NOVEMBER 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You could feel you are at a cosmic crossroads for the next several months. What is most important to your happiness could change or be subjected to stress. Luckily, you seem to have a guardian angel watching over you to make sure that the only breakups you endure are the ones you need or the ones that will improve your life. Avoid making investment, career or key financial decisions or alterations in March and April. Things smooth out by May.

Horoscope

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Remain skeptical about whatever you feel with your own fingers. People have a tendency to overestimate their abilities or to inadvertently give a false impression. Don't buy clothing or costly items.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Now you see it, now you don't. You could easily become the victim of a quick-change artist or shell-game operator unless you keep your guard up. Don't risk your money, heart, or reputation now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Errors that occur in the minor details can slow you down. Don't work at cross purposes with a partner. Someone close may have a grueling schedule and needs your support, not your disapproval.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stick to what you do well and then do it to the very best of your ability. Quit beating your head against a brick wall. Learn to accept that there are some things you cannot control, overcome or alter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Set off on a quest for the best and highest. Remember that mountain climbers only make it to the very highest peaks when they have help from others. Set the bar high, but not so high that others can't keep up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What you don't know can hurt you. At the moment, your intuitions are not trustworthy and some advisers might steer you the wrong way. It is easy to get totally distracted by a wild goose chase.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can charm them and disarm them, but you simply can't come to satisfactory business terms with them. Even the most powerful paragon of political correctness might end up with his back against the wall.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Mistakes or false starts could be made. If you are going to pencil plans into your appointment book, make sure you have an eraser nearby. You might need to duck for cover to avoid monetary loss.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Dreams speak to you in codes. You could receive some subconscious guidance from deep within if you can merely decipher it. Listen to your intuitions and hesitate if you feel you must.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may get a glimpse of the proverbial carrot and find it difficult to withstand the pressure of desires. Steer clear of any deal or relationship that seems to lead you in endless circles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Waste not, want not. Don't take plans or promises for granted as everything might not work out as anticipated. Avoid a tendency to be reassured by exaggerated claims and to be lulled by false assertions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Strut down the runway. Everyone's on pins and needles to see what you do or say next. Socialize, visit friends or network while your popularity quotient is high. Business worries may distract you.

DEAR ABBY: "Surviving Son in California" (Sept. 20) sought your advice regarding proper protocol in mentioning all surviving relatives when parents had been divorced. You said, "After a couple divorces and one of them dies, the name of the former spouse is usually not mentioned in the obituary." I think your response needs a little tweaking.

My siblings and I faced this same scenario after my father passed away. My parents divorced when I was in grade school, and each parent had remarried by my freshman year in high school. Although their divorce was painful, they remained on friendly terms throughout their lives. I was adamant that my biological mother be listed in my father's obituary for two reasons: First, the obituary serves as a historical document. Second, I did not want people reading the obituary to think my siblings and I were children from my father's second marriage. An obituary should serve as a historical account of our loved one's life — not a battlefield.

— LESLIE IN PORT ANGELES, WASH.

DEAR LESLIE: Thank you for pointing out your valid reasons for including former spouses in an obituary. Allow me to share a few more.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Read on:
DEAR ABBY: I've worked in newspapers on the East Coast for the past 11 years, and I can tell you that mentioning a divorced spouse's name is totally a matter of individual and family preference. It is becoming more common to see "So-and-so" was the former wife and good friend of "the deceased," which is a nice development. It is the right of the surviving family to decide the contents of the obituary. Because some people even include pets among survivors, you would think an ex-spouse would receive the same consideration.

— NAME WITHHELD IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR ABBY: Genealogy researchers often use obituaries to find the parents or children of families. Here in Iowa, it is common for the obituary to show that a couple married, had children and were divorced. I understand how some children might decide to omit a parent if the divorce wasn't a friendly one. I was left out of my first husband's obituary, but I got over it.

— TWO SIDES TO A STORY

DEAR ABBY: There is a difference between an obituary and a death notice. A death notice is a paid announcement, usually in small type and generally placed by the funeral director. It can include, or exclude, anything the family wishes.

An obituary is an objective news story written by a bylined reporter, and it contains the good, the bad and the ugly — including the names of former spouses, whether separated by death or divorce

— FORMER COPY EDITOR IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR ABBY: Here in the South, an ex-spouse is often listed this way: "Jane Doe of Memphis, Tenn., is the mother of his children." The primary reason is so the children feel their surviving parent, and the years their parents spent together, are acknowledged.

— NANCY IN CONWAY, ARK.

DEAR ABBY: You can't erase the years spent together as a family even though a divorce has occurred. I had been married for 30 years at the time of my divorce, and it is important for me to be listed when my ex passes away — and vice versa. My ex and I discussed this and agreed that the obituary would be written this way: "Also survived by the mother/father of his/her children ..." In my mind, divorced or not, you will always be family.

— AN EX WHO IS STILL PART OF THE FAMILY
