Idaho delegation takes position against earmarks

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Idaho's congressional delegation has come out in favor of a two-year moratorium on earmarks, a shift that reflects the growing tide of public opposition to anything with even a hint of federal waste.

This week, the Republican conferences of both the House and Senate approved resolutions calling for a two-year moratorium on earmarks. The calls to end so-called "pork barrel" spending also come with an acknowledgement that earmarks — federal funding targeted toward specific projects, usually within the sponsor's district — have been a useful tool that gives Congress more control over the budget instead of federal agencies.

With the House gaining a GOP majority in the Nov. 2 election, an earmark moratorium is more certain there than in the U.S. Senate, which is still controlled by Democrats.

Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, is in favor of the moratorium along with Rep.-elect Raul Labrador, the incoming GOP freshman in Idaho's 1st Congressional District.

That doesn't mean Simpson has always avoided the practice of earmarks himself. In fiscal years 2008-10, for example, Simpson was the sole sponsor for 27 earmarks totaling $15.5 million, according to Taxpayers for Common Sense, a nonprofit, nonpartisan budget watchdog. In that same time period, he also co-sponsored an additional 132 earmarks totaling $144.5 million.

"Congressman Simpson has said all along that by earmarking the budget, you're allowing some members of Congress to have a say over spending," said Nikki Watts,

Fish and Game aborts wolf change

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

JEROME — If the commission had heard the wolf report even an hour earlier, its decision may have been different.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission spent Thursday at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game office near Jerome, listening to reports and voting on policies on everything from fishing regulations to bighorn sheep management. But an expected change to wolf policy, including what strategy to pursue to delist wolves, was aborted by unexpected news.

As commissioners prepared to make a motion, they were handed information that a Wyoming district court judge had just told the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to re-evaluate Wyoming's wolf management plan because the federal agency did not provide a reasoned justification for rejecting the plan.

NO FIX FOR FERAL FELINES

With spay-and-release illegal, some turn to gray area of feeding wild cats

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Ted Talbot patted his bag of cat food, clicked his teeth and hollered, "C'mon, babies!"

And like that, a handful of kittens crawled from an alcove and the caves at Rock Creek Park in Twin Falls. He dumped some food and stepped away, trying to give the skittish cats an opening to eat. Another pile of kibble was closer to the alcove, and several of the dozen or so cats in the colony dug in throughout the morning.

Talbot said he's been going to the park almost daily for the nearly three years he has lived in Twin Falls, feeding cats and reading books. He knows of about six other people who do the same thing.

It eases the animals' lives, he says, and really doesn't hurt anything — making it all the more infuriating when he sees workers in the park sweep away the food, when people torment the animals, or when the animals he traps to be spayed and released are turned away from animal hospitals because of legal questions.

Feral-cat caretakers like Talbot are in a tough spot with those animal populations — Twin Falls County Animal Control doesn't want them fed, because it may grow the population and any disease it carries; animal shelters are hesitant to take the cats because they are unadoptable; and trap-neuter-release can be construed as animal abandonment, a crime under Idaho law.

"It's not enough to feed a stray, you have to spay a stray," said Debbie Blackwood, director of the Idaho 12th-graders perform above average in reading

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Idaho's high school seniors' reading scores were above the national average in an assessment that measures how students fared across different states.

In the 2009 National Assessment of Educational Progress, 78 percent of the state's high school seniors scored at or above grade level in reading, while the national average was 73 percent, according to the Idaho State Department of Education. In the mathematics portion of the assessment, 66 percent of Idaho high school seniors scored at or above grade level, which isn't statistically different from the 63 percent national average.

The NAEP results were released differently this year. For the first time, Idaho and 10 other states participated in a pilot program that allowed the release of state-level NAEP results for 12th-graders.

grade was the highest out of all 11 states.

Twin Falls High School Principal Ben Allen said that the state's reading initiative program has been a help in recent years, noting that reading instruction in the earlier grades is crucial for students to be prepared in high school.

"There's nothing that takes the place of reading," he said.

Allen said that for students who are behind, there's a program at the school that focuses on reading skills, pronouncing words correctly and putting phrases together.

Other states that participated in the pilot program are Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, South Dakota and West Virginia.

In a statement, Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna said that participating in the program will enable the state to gather data on its high school seniors' performance for future improvements.

"Now, in future assessments, we have the initial data we need to begin to identify changes or trends in the reading and math achievement of our seniors," Luna said.

The NAEP 12th-grade assessment happens once every four years. The next assessment will be in 2013. Idaho fourth- and fifth-grade students take the NAEP once every two years.

Twin Falls Animal Shelter. But since spay-and-release is illegal and people can only help feral cats with food, "there's just more breeding and more to suffer. It is a horrible dilemma."

Last legislative session, a bill to allow for trap-neuter-release was introduced but ultimately went nowhere, said Lisa Kauffman, Idaho state director of the Humane Society of the United States. She said several legislators treated the proposal as a joke.

"Most people who do care for colonies, they don't really ask anything from the cities," Kauffman said, adding that most feral-cat caretakers are willing to pay to spay or neuter feral animals.

But since feeding is allowed, it is what people like Talbot do, though he says he absolutely supports spaying and neutering cats because "just look around," he said, waving at the feral colony.

"When we're hungry, we eat," he said. "These cats don't have that option."

Lori Stewart, spokeswoman for the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, which handles animal control for the county, said feeding the animals probably just prolongs their suffering — an answer no one wants to hear.

Blackwood wouldn't condemn Talbot or other caregivers; they are giving from the goodness of their hearts. But it was more a bandage, she said, than a long-term fix like stopping animal abandonment or allowing trap-neuter-release.

"No, (people who feed feral cats are) not bad, but we need to really look at this problem from its roots," Blackwood said. "It's like putting a Band-Aid on the problem. There's nothing wrong with a Band-Aid, but maybe we should find out what is causing the hemorrhaging."

For Talbot, he'll keep applying bandages if that's all he can do. Meanwhile, he and others just don't want more animals abandoned to the wilds.

"This is the 20th century. If you don't want a cat, take it to a shelter," said Talbot, who has three cats at home. "Don't just dump it."

Traffic commission holds off on Falls Avenue West school zone

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

It's too soon after the end of Falls Avenue West construction to say if the road needs to become a school zone, the city of Twin Falls Traffic Safety Commission decided on Thursday.

The road is a 35-mph zone with two four-way stops on it to slow traffic. It lies about a block north of Robert Stuart Middle School and I.B. Perrine Elementary School, while a Head Start campus is located along it. A citizen made the suggestion to reinstate its past school zone status to the commission.

"It's so new, let's give it a chance to work," Commission Chairman Dave Snelson said.

Because the widened road is new and was engineered for 35 mph traffic, the commission came to a verbal agreement not to suggest any changes. Mike Sullivan, a city traffic technician and liaison to the commission, said a traffic study had 90 percent of drivers on Falls Avenue West going no faster than 36 or 37 mph.

Aside from the one citizen, even the commission members said they haven't heard much about the issue.

"I haven't had one complaint since we opened Falls up," said Kirk Brower, a commission member and the director of operations for the Twin Falls School District, at the beginning of the discussion.

He ended with "If it becomes a problem, we'll revisit it."

BPA proposes 8.5% rate increase

A week after advising its Idaho municipal customers to expect an increase, the Bonneville Power Administration on Thursday proposed raising its wholesale power rates by an average 8.5 percent.

The increase is needed primarily for much-needed maintenance and refurbishment of the nonprofit federal utility's hydroelectric and nuclear facilities, according to a press release. It would affect consumer-owned utilities that BPA is legally required to serve, such as municipalities, public utility districts and tribal utilities. In Idaho, the utility contracts with 11 cities, including several in Minidoka and Cassia counties.

The increase would have been more, the release states, but for BPA taking a pass for now on rebuilding its financial reserves. Such a move could mean more volatile rates in the future if the utility is forced to turn to short-term borrowing to meet its financial obligations.

The rate proposal will now go through a public rate-setting process, with a final decision in July taking effect on Oct. 1, 2011.

T.F. to test fire hydrants

The Twin Falls Fire Department will test about 550 fire hydrants along downtown and presidential streets through the end of November.

A Thursday city release states that firemen will flow the smallest amount of water possible to test each hydrant. Testing will ensure the hydrants work properly, test the water system's capability and will provide a step needed in keeping the city's current insurance service rating steady, which can affect homeowner's insurance rates.

Fire hydrants that have been repaired or replaced during the past year will also be tested.

A 33-year-old Twin Falls man died Thursday from injuries suffered in a three-vehicle crash in Jerome County on Nov. 12, according to Idaho State Police.

Adrian Jensen was driving southbound on U.S. Highway 93 in a 1995 Subaru Legacy when he crashed 10 miles south of Shoshone at around 1 p.m. Jensen crossed into northbound traffic for unknown reasons, according to an ISP release, and slammed into a 2002 Ford pickup truck hauling a utility trailer. The truck was driven by Paulo Pereira, 23, of Shoshone.

The impact caused Jensen's Subaru to spin. A semitrailer carrying beets, driven by Yevgenee Solnyk, 27, of Lisle, Ill., then struck the Subaru.

Jensen was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, while the other two drivers were uninjured.

That complicates the legal backdrop the commission is working against. Commissioner Fred Trevey motioned that commissioners wait to learn the ramifications of the ruling and make their decision via conference call on Dec. 8. Commissioner Randy Budge clarified that they'd review acceptable wolf population levels and the motion passed unanimously.

Based on Wednesday night's public comment session, the wolf situation was one of the top concerns for the 20 people sitting through Thursday's itinerary — and they expected some action from the commission.

Last to address the commission before the mid-afternoon break, Jeff Gould, IDFG wildlife chief, highlighted department expenses related to the wolf program. The agency spent $1.7 million on wolf management in the 2010 fiscal year, including more than $558,000 in sportsmen's license fees.

Gould then suggested which wildlife programs should be the beneficiaries of the funds freed up when the state stopped monitoring wolves on Oct. 18.

IDFS submitted a 10(j) proposal on Sept. 24 that would allow the state to kill wolves in the Lolo elk management area, in order to meet state established management goals for elk and deer. Gould said an environmental assessment of the proposal should be published by mid-December. He said the state agency wants to submit one for the Sawtooth area, but must prove that it has tried to mitigate other factors that could be diminishing herds.

"We're also waiting to see what kind of success Montana has with their Bitterroot 10(j) proposal," Gould said.

Commissioner Cameron Wheeler questioned the wisdom of spending 55 percent of sportsmen's license fees on elk research when Montana could make 10j proposals without spending as much money. Gould said Montana used some of Idaho's Lolo data.

The commission also heard the following:

overspending that is happening in Congress," Crapo said in a statement.

Lindsay Nothern, Crapo's spokesman, said that a ban on earmarks won't stop agencies or President Barack Obama's administration from prioritizing spending requests.

"We will work within that framework if need be," he said.

Risch said: "It is time we get serious about our spending and this moratorium on earmarks is a first step in reforming a system that is out of control."

Western Governor's Association Pilot Projects, two of which involve Idaho. The IDFG is working with other states for one year to determine if they can develop maps of critical habitat and migration corridors crossing state boundaries. Such tools would be helpful to those developing renewable energy facilities and transmission lines.

- The commission heard options related to wildlife salvage and voted to get more information. While current statutes could allow personal salvage of animal carcasses with some tweaking, salvage for commercial uses would require special rulemaking.

- The commission unanimously voted to accept the state bighorn sheep management plan.

Twist and shout: A short history of Idaho cyclones Think Idaho's not exactly tornado country? You're not exactly right.

There have been 188 of them reported since 1950, and four of the 10 worst happened in the Magic Valley.

Here's the list:

1. Ruebens (Lewis County), June 7, 1936 — A tornado hit northern Idaho's Camas Prairie. A house and a barn were nearly leveled and two people were killed. This was a Category F3 storm on the Fujita Scale that meteorologists use to describe twisters; that means winds between 158 and 206 mph, roofs and some walls are torn off well-constructed houses, trains are overturned and most trees are uprooted.

2. Gooding, April 26, 1940 — A widely visible funnel cloud struck five farms west of town. Three homes were destroyed in the only other known F3 whirlwind in Idaho history.

3. Pinehurst (Shoshone County), June 5, 1987 — A funnel cloud briefly touched down at a street fair in the northern Idaho town of 1,600, injuring three people. The storm was a small one — Category F0, meaning winds between 40 and 72 mph, with some damage to chimneys, broken tree branches and damage to sign boards.

4. Idaho Falls, April 7, 1978 — A Category F2 storm hit the edge of town, damaging nine homes and 23 businesses. One person was hurt. F2 storms pack winds of between 113 and 157 mph. Roofs are torn off frame houses, mobile homes are demolished, boxcars pushed over, large trees snapped or uprooted and light object missiles generated.

5. Arbon (Power County), Aug. 17, 1990 — An F2 tornado struck a farming area south of Pocatello, doing $250,000 in damage. It was described as four miles long and 100 yards wide.

6. Minidoka County, May 18, 1991 — Another F2 twister with a funnel 50 yards wide and two-tenths of a mile long. Did $250,000 worth of damage.

7. Cocolalla (Bonner County), April 9, 1991 — An F2 storm touched down on the western shore of Lake Pend O'Reille, doing $250,000 in damage. It was described as a mile long and 100 yards wide.

8. Minidoka County, Sept. 11, 1968 — A Category F2 storm described as 440 yards wide and half a mile long.

9. Jerome County, June 9, 1990 — Another F2 storm with a funnel 10 yards wide and two-tenths of a mile long. Caused $25,000 worth of damage.

10. Inkom (Bannock County), June 5, 1993 — Two people were hurt as a Category F1 storm struck south of Pocatello. F1 storms have winds from 73 to 112 mph, peeling shingles off roofs, pushing mobile homes off foundations, pushing moving automobiles off the road and destroying attached garages.

Jerome OKs design-review ordinance

Debate over utility liability continues

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome officials are breathing a sigh of relief after the City Council passed a long-planned design-review ordinance at Tuesday's meeting.

The process to form guidelines for downtown business design was started a year ago and was approved by the city's planning and zoning commission on Oct. 26. The new ordinance requires business owners to apply for a design-review permit before acquiring a building permit.

Markings that display a businesses' individuality will still be encouraged. But Micah Austin, assistant city administrator, said businesses on Main Street and Lincoln Avenue should be aesthetically pleasing for customers and Jerome residents.

A number of Jerome residents have voiced their wish that the ordinance had been passed earlier.

Hayze Days — a Lincoln Avenue smoke shop affiliated with Allen Nagel, owner of the Hayze Spice Co. — sports neon orange, yellow and green colors. While Nagel said he thinks the building is nice, it has been called an "eyesore" and a "disgrace" by Jerome residents.

Austin said any new downtown business alterations will need the permit but it's not legal to make the ordinance retroactive, which means that while Hayze Days doesn't have a certificate of occupancy yet, it most likely won't be required to change its paint job.

In other business, discussion about a proposed ordinance to make landlords responsible for their tenants' final unpaid water bills was continued. The city has seen a large increase in delinquent accounts in the past year. Normally $5,000 to $7,000 in water bills have gone to collections each year, but the city has seen that amount triple. City water bills are charged based on usage, making it more difficult for landlords to include city utility costs in their monthly rental prices.

"We have a choice to raise the rates and make everybody pay or make the people who are ultimately responsible for the property pay," Mayor John Shine said. "The easy way would be to raise the rates but the council is interested in putting responsibility where it lies."

The city's task to provide water to residents and keep a balanced budget brings a tough decision to the council, according to Shine. Although a town hall meeting and a public hearing have both been conducted, Shine opened the floor to residents who attended Tuesday's meeting. About seven landlords and property managers voiced their concerns with the proposed ordinance.

"We have been landlords for a long time and when I saw this my first thought was 'Here we go, another city ordinance to screw the good citizens of Jerome,'" Linda Ekron said. "It's passing the buck is what I feel." Shine said the money has to come from somewhere and the city can't absorb the lost revenue.

"I feel bad for the landlords but the city is not in the business of assuming that risk for them," he said. "We will continue to discuss this and do everything we can to mitigate the burden on the landlords."

The council also approved a resolution to support the conditions and terms of a collective bargaining agreement with the Jerome Local 4589 Firefighters.

'Barefoot bandit' angles for a plea deal

By Mike Carter
The Seattle Times

SEATTLE — Colton Harris-Moore, the teenage "Barefoot Bandit" who was the subject of a two-year manhunt, pleaded not guilty Thursday morning to five federal charges in U.S. District Court in Seattle.

Magistrate Judge Mary Alice Theiler scheduled Harris-Moore's trial for Jan. 18 before U.S. District Judge Richard A. Jones.

Afterward, Harris-Moore's attorney, John Henry Browne, said he hopes a plea deal can be struck that would limit the 19-year-old's time in prison. He suggested that Harris-Moore's family might be interested in selling his story and using the proceeds to pay restitution to the dozens of victims.

Harris-Moore is suspected of dozens of burglaries and the thefts of autos, boats and five airplanes in several Washington counties as well as Oregon, Idaho, Wyoming, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana. He was indicted last week on five criminal counts, four of which are punishable by up to 10 years in prison and fines of up to $250,000.

With Harris-Moore seated at a table, Assistant U.S. Attorney Darwin Roberts read the charges:

- Interstate transportation of a stolen aircraft, stemming from the Sept. 29, 2009, theft of a Cessna from Bonners Ferry, Idaho. The plane was abandoned near Granite Falls.

- Interstate and foreign transportation of a stolen firearm, stemming from the theft of a .32-caliber pistol in Canada. Harris-Moore is accused of taking the handgun into Idaho, and then on the plane he flew to Granite Falls.

- Fugitive in possession of a firearm, after Harris-Moore allegedly carried a Jennings .22-caliber pistol between Oct. 1, 2009, and May 6.

- Piloting an aircraft without a valid airman's certificate, stemming from his alleged theft of an airplane from Anacortes, which was flown to Eastsound, Orcas Island, on Feb. 10, 2010. The charge is punishable by up to three years in prison.

- Interstate transportation of a stolen vessel, involving the theft of a 34-foot boat from Ilwaco, which was sailed to Oregon on May 31.

Harris-Moore spoke only twice during the hearing, once in response when asked to confirm his identity, and again to say "yes" when asked if he understood the charges against him. There was no discussion about releasing him from custody.

Browne said after Thursday's arraignment that he hoped that a plea agreement would cover the federal as well as state charges the teen is facing. A number of jurisdictions have already agreed to not to charge Harris-Moore providing he receives an adequate federal sentence and pays restitution, Browne said.

Others — in particular Island and San Juan counties — have balked at a consolidated resolution to the case, he said.

Browne said Harris-Moore would not take any of the money if his story was sold in a book or movie deal.

A plea deal like that, Browne said, could optimistically mean that Moore might serve as little as four years in prison. "That would be a best-case scenario," Browne said.

The U.S. attorney's office declined to comment on whether such a plea agreement was being discussed.

Harris-Moore allegedly stole an airplane in Indiana and crash-landed it in the Bahamas on July 4. Bahamian police captured him a week later after a boat chase off Eleuthera, one of two sparsely populated tourist islands where he was accused in a string of burglaries.

Former Senate Democratic leader Kelly joins EPA

BOISE — Idaho's outgoing Senate minority leader is taking a job with the Environmental Protection Agency in Seattle.

Sen. Kate Kelly, a Democratic senator since 2004, will be director of the Office of Ecosystems, Tribal and Public Affairs at the EPA's regional headquarters.

There, she'll work on programs including National Environmental Policy Act, the Clean Air Act, wetlands management and ocean disposal.

She'll supervise a staff of 87 in Alaska, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

Kelly, elected as Senate minority leader in 2009, didn't run for re-election this year.

Before becoming a state senator, Kelly was a former administrator at the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality.

A lawyer, she also served as a deputy in the Idaho attorney general's office for six years.

IRS has nearly $500,000 in undeliverable Idaho refunds

NAMPA — The Internal Revenue Service is looking for 408 Idaho taxpayers — and it's actually good news.

The Idaho Press-Tribune reports the agency has tax refund checks totaling nearly $500,000 to deliver to those people. The average refund is just over $1,200.

Nationwide, nearly 112,000 taxpayers had about $164 million in refunds returned to the IRS as undeliverable.

Refund checks are mailed to the address listed on a taxpayer's return. But those checks can be returned as undeliverable if a taxpayer moves without updating his or her address with either the U.S. Postal Service or the IRS.

Taxpayers can update their addresses on the "Where's My Refund?" tool on the IRS website. Those without Internet access can call 1-800-829-1954 for instructions on how to update their mailing information.

Group: Poll shows support for cigarette tax hike

BOISE — An anti-smoking group aiming to convince Idaho lawmakers to raise tobacco taxes has released a poll showing residents favor hiking the 57-cent-per-pack cigarette tax.

The American Cancer Society and Campaign For Tobacco-Free Kids-led coalition said Thursday 50 percent of 500 people queried "strongly favor" raising the state tobacco tax, with another 22 percent "somewhat" favoring the move.

On a separate question, 73 percent would back a $1.50 tax hike on every cigarette pack.

The groups argue every 10 percent hike in cigarette prices would cut youth smoking by 6.5 percent.

But they also say increasing the tax by $1.50 could raise $52 million more to address Idaho's budget deficit.

By contrast, only 42 percent strongly favored increasing beer and wine taxes.

A proposal to do that failed in the 2009 Legislature, a conservative body leery of raising taxes — regardless of the product.

Bonneville Power seeks 8.5 percent rate increase

PORTLAND — The Bonneville Power Administration is seeking an 8.5 percent increase in the average wholesale rate for power it sells to local utilities and industrial customers in the Northwest.

The agency filed the proposal Thursday in the Federal Register.

BPA says it needs more money to upgrade the aging hydroelectric dams it depends on for power, buy fuel and do repairs at its nuclear power plant in Washington, and make dam modifications that help endangered salmon.

Administrator Steve Wright says Bonneville is trying to balance the desire to keep rates low against the high costs of maintaining a valuable source of power.

The proposal was greeted with some concern by the Public Power Council, which said it leaves the door open for another increase later this year.

Federal judge rules for Wyoming in wolf lawsuit

By Ben Neary
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — A federal judge on Thursday ordered the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to reconsider whether Wyoming's wolf management plan is adequate to meet recovery goals for the species.

U.S. District Judge Alan B. Johnson of Cheyenne said the federal agency was wrong to insist that Wyoming agree to change its management plan to give wolves more protection before it would end federal oversight of the species.

Wyoming proposes to classify wolves as predators that could be shot on sight outside of Yellowstone National Park and the surrounding area.

The federal government had rejected that management plan while accepting less harsh wolf management plans in Idaho and Montana. The Fish and Wildlife Service turned wolf management over to those states while leaving endangered species protections for wolves Wyoming until a federal judge this summer ruled the species could not be divided along political lines.

Gray wolves are now considered an endangered species across the northern Rockies.

Wyoming Gov. Dave Freudenthal, a Democrat in the final weeks of his second term, had pressed the lawsuit against the federal agency.

"There's a point to be made here, which is that the Fish and Wildlife Service is certainly allowed to make a decision and change their mind, but when they do it, they have to do it on good science and good reasoning," Freudenthal said Thursday.

Jenny Harbine, an attorney with Earthjustice in Bozeman, Mont., noted the judge did not rule on the management plan itself, but said the federal agency did not provide a reasoned justification for rejecting it.

"He did not say Wyoming's management plan is sufficient, and any management scheme that leaves wolves in 90 percent of Wyoming subject to 'shoot on sight' hunting is on its face insufficient," she said.

Harbine represents a group of wildlife advocates who sued to reinstate federal protections for wolves in Montana and Idaho.

"Wolves remain subject to federal protections under the Endangered Species Act and the Wyoming court's decision doesn't change that," she said.

The federal government originally said it wanted to achieve a wolf population of 300 animals when it started its wolf reintroduction program in the Northern Rockies in the 1990s. Biologists say there are now at least 1,700 wolves in parts of six states.

Both Freudenthal and Wyoming Attorney General Bruce Salzburg said they expect the federal government to appeal the ruling. The governor said he doesn't expect the ruling will have any immediate effect on wolf management in the state, which he said will continue to be in the federal government's hands.

Leith Edgar, spokesman for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Denver, said Thursday that the agency is still reviewing Johnson's decision, weighing its options and considering what its next steps will be.

The Fish and Wildlife Service itself helped Wyoming to draft its disputed state plan in 2007 and approved it the next year. However, the federal agency repudiated the plan after U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy of Missoula, Mont., criticized it later that year in a lawsuit brought by environmental groups.

Johnson's ruling may further complicate the issue if it conflicts with Molloy's ruling.

"It appears that there are two different district judges with potentially differing opinions on Wyoming's plans," said Ron Aasheim, spokesman for Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks.

Salzburg, however, said he doesn't see any conflict between the two rulings. "The Wyoming decision and the Montana decision can coexist," he said.

While environmental groups have criticized Wyoming's plan, ranchers and outfitters in Wyoming have sided with the state, saying it's critical to reduce the growing wolf population to protect other wildlife and livestock.

In response to Wyoming's lawsuit, the Fish and Wildlife Service argued in Johnson's court in January that it rejected the state's plan because it didn't guarantee a continued minimum wolf population.

Johnson stated in his ruling Thursday that the agency needs to consider whether the state plan would be sufficient to preserve genetic connectivity among wolves in northwestern Wyoming and the greater Yellowstone area.

While Johnson's ruling was pending, Molloy this summer ruled it was improper of the Fish and Wildlife Service to retain federal wolf management in Wyoming while turning wolf management over to state governments in Idaho and Montana. In response, the agency took back authority over wolf management in those states, angering state officials and blocking wolf hunts that had been scheduled for this fall.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission plans to discuss the implications of Johnson's ruling on Dec. 8, spokesman Mike Keckler said.

Idaho taxpayers still giving to charities, causes

BOISE (AP) — Despite the economic recession, Idaho taxpayers are still giving to a handful of charitable groups and organizations that appear each year on state income tax forms.

Idahoans can donate to a variety of causes while filling out their annual tax forms simply by marking checkoff boxes affiliated with groups like the Idaho Children's Fund, the Idaho Food Bank or Red Cross.

So far, taxpayers have donated more than $354,000 in 2010 to the seven groups and charities, according to figures compiled by the Idaho Statesman. The 2010 total is not yet final and does not include late or amended tax forms.

But the financial data also shows a decline in giving over the last two years.

For example, the Idaho Children's Fund raised more than $88,900 in 2006, but that total has dropped to more than $55,000 in 2010. Figures also show declines the last two years for the Idaho Fish and Game's Wildlife Conservation Fund, the Idaho Guard & Reserve Family Support Fund and Special Olympics Idaho.

The leading fundraiser is the Idaho Food Bank, which so far this year has brought in more than $113,800. This is the first year for the organization to appear on the tax form.

The Idaho Division of Veteran Services has raised more than $43,000 this year, on par with its total from a year ago.

Idaho's incredible disappearing voter

Now we know who won the Nov. 2 election in Idaho: Indifference, apathy and couldn't-be-bothered.

The Idaho Board of Canvassers reported Wednesday that just 58.1 percent of registered voters took the trouble to cast ballots this month, the lowest percentage since 1978.

And the percentage of the voting-age population who went to polls? Less than 40 percent, according to the Idaho Secretary of State's Office — the worst showing in nearly 50 years.

That's pathetic.

It's not as if they're wasn't anything of interest on the ballot this year. The state's economy is in the deepest trough since the Great Depression, the Legislature slashed 7.5 percent from the public school budget and 8.5 percent from higher education this year, and every state agency is struggling to provide basic services in the wake of record budget cuts.

There was a white-hot race between Republican Raul Labrador and Democrat Walt Minnick in the 1st Congressional District, a matchup between two strong candidates for governor and more than a dozen highly competitive legislative contests.

But six-tenths of Idahoans 18 and older found something better to do than vote. That's equivalent to the population of the state's three largest counties.

Look at it his way: Just 23.9 percent of eligible voters cast ballots for Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, who won reelection. In the 1st District, 22.3 percent voted for Labrador, who beat Minnick. Only 20 percent of those eligible voted to change Idaho's Constitution to allow airports to take on debt without taxpayer approval; the measure passed by 29,000 votes.

In Idaho's most competitive legislative district, south Boise's District 18, nearly 5,000 fewer people voted this year than in 2006, the year of the last gubernatorial election. Democrats lost two of the three legislative seats in that district.

According to the blog interstices.com, there were 4,000 fewer Democratic votes cast in that single district than there were four years ago.

The past two years have been gut-wrenching in Idaho, so why were so many fewer of your fellow citizens — 305,801, to be exact — motivated to vote in 2006 but not this year?

That's a mystery. It's actually easier to vote now than it was four years ago through vote-by-mail, voting ahead and absentee ballots. Secretary of State Ben Ysursa and the 44 county clerks have bent over backwards to increase turnout.

What's certain is that the 688,617 Idahoans would could have voted but didn't will have no cause to complain about what happens in the next two difficult years.

Democrats and the great state of denial

When the rules of the House of Representatives forced the Democrats to confront a painful choice among their leaders, they did what Democrats are often inclined to do. They changed the rules.

Usually, such a stunt would matter only to the members affected by the change. But this one sends a dangerous signal at a crucial moment, when both parties are being tested on their willingness to respond to the lessons of the last election. This is a disquieting development.

When the Democrats lost their House majority in the political upheaval on Nov. 2, they also lost one of their four leadership posts. Since the speaker would no longer come out of their caucus, House rules required them to yield it to the Republicans, who will use it to elevate John Boehner.

Instead of having four people in the formal leadership of the House, the Democrats should have three — a minority leader, a deputy or whip, and the chairman of the Democratic caucus.

It has always worked this way whenever an election shifts control on the House between the parties. Someone on the losing side loses his leadership job.

Republicans have established a pattern and precedent of trimming their leadership from the top, either by deposing the outgoing speaker or encouraging him to leave the House. When Republicans lost their majority in 2006, Speaker Denny Hastert took it as a cue that it was time to go home to Illinois.

There was ample precedent for firing from the top on the Democratic side as well. Speaker Tom Foley lost his seat when home district voters rebelled in the Republican rout of 1994. Speaker Jim Wright was forced out after being investigated for financial ethics violations.

But Speaker Nancy Pelosi lost no time after the returns came in this month in signaling that she would not go gently. Within 24 hours of learning that she would no longer be speaker, she informed her caucus that she would run for minority leader — a post she won on Wednesday.

Except for a few disgruntled members of the conservative Blue Dog caucus and some Republicans, no opposition surfaced. Pelosi has been the best fundraiser on the Democratic side, funneling money to both liberals and moderates. And she has been President Obama's loyal lieutenant in the legislative fights of the past two years.

Her decision triggered other battles. When she claimed the minority leadership, Steny Hoyer was demoted one level to whip, and he in turn bumped Jim Clyburn from that job.

Hoyer had no problem in accepting the change; he had been No. 2 to Pelosi before. But Clyburn was not as accommodating, and suddenly, the Democratic caucus faced a crisis.

The two men who both aspired to remain in the leadership were no ordinary players. Hoyer, who once challenged Pelosi unsuccessfully for the top leadership post, had close ties to moderate and conservative Democrats already devastated by their election losses. Clyburn is a senior member of the Congressional Black Caucus, in many ways the most loyal and dependable bloc in the party.

Neither man was willing to step down, and Democrats could not afford to have either of them humiliated. So what to do? Change the rules. Invent a new job of assistant leader, which no specific duties, and slot Clyburn for that post.

Normally, this would not matter much. But we are about to start a new Congress where everything depends on the willingness of the leadership in both parties to face up to hard choices — on the budget, Afghanistan and a dozen of other issues.

Too often in the past Democrats have avoided making hard choices by throwing more money in the pot or taking similar self-indulgent steps. Way back in Lyndon Johnson's time, a well-conceived and carefully targeted Model Cities program was disgraced when the chairman of an appropriations subcommittee saw to it that Smithville, Tenn., his hometown, become one of the recipients. Some laboratory for urban policy.

The Democrats' unwillingness to face the hard choice in this internal fight sends exactly the wrong signal.

Kids lose if evaluators lose sight of big picture

I'd like to add my two bits on child custody evaluators. Some of the evaluators seem to have forgotten that they are trying to find a solution to help children. It should not be their sole agenda to create winners and losers. This philosophy is filled with damaging results for the children.

An old adage comes to mind, "Winner takes all," when certain child custody evaluators are appointed by the court. These evaluators can offer up no evidence of child abuse, neglect or even legal issues, but their evaluations create a winner-takes-all game that severely punishes both the losing parent and the child. The end result of these winner-takes-all evaluations encourages further fighting, bitterness, with the child caught in the middle. A winner-takes-all approach guarantees either of two results: continued costly litigation or the losing parent giving up. Neither results in the best interests of the child.

Another adage comes to mind, "All power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely." When a winning parent is assured sole legal and physical custody, that parent can become (or remain) insensitive to the rights and involvement of the other parent. The winner-takes-all recommendations continue to intensify negative emotions by the "winner" being encouraged not to attempt to cooperate with the "loser." Again, the child is being victimized by this approach to evaluations. This practice leads to a process of ongoing issues and no process for resolution. Children never win if court-appointed evaluators create this sort of environment where someone is destined to be destroyed and someone else is destined to be rewarded!

The final adage that we need to remember, "Let the buyer beware" bodes true when considering hiring child custody evaluators. Some evaluators have reputations. For the sake of your child, avoid evaluators who advocate the winner-take-all approach, which only exacerbates the conflict and your child's suffering.

Why can't we just eat our Big Mac in peace?

We, the people, need to get some more laws on the books so we can better police our constituents.

There are a number of issues that need addressed, so make sure that you read the letters to the editor.

First, now that we have succeeded in eliminating that terrible secondhand smoke problem from smokers, let's consider an equally terrible problem. It's called noise pollution. How many times have you gone to a nice eatery, you know, McDonald's, Burger King, etc., thinking you could enjoy a nice, quiet, hearty meal — you might even be celebrating an anniversary, birthday or any number of important joyous times that we have to celebrate — you only have some inconsiderate, yes, inconsiderate family with their kid or kids come in and sit down next to you. What happens? You guessed it! The kid or kids start crying, screaming, whining — you name it.

Now this is real noise pollution. Very disturbing. We shouldn't tolerate it! They might even change a diaper on those kids while sitting next to you.

So why don't we have our public servants; yes, the stupid ones that go to Boise and rubber-stamp those stupid laws that we have on the books, pass a law that forces, yes, forces, I mean with some vicious teeth in it, man, that all public places are to have separate places for those noise polluters. Maybe we could split the week up to give those noise polluters three days, the last three days. We, the people without kids would take Sunday, Monday and Tuesday; the noise polluters would get Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. We would close for business on Saturday. That way, we could be sure there was no carryover noise on Sunday morning for us.

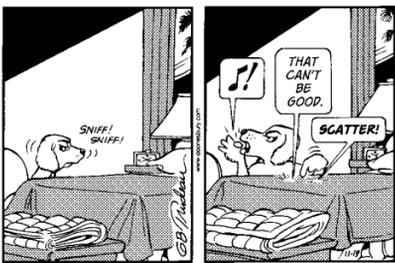

So come on, people. Call! Write! Badger your public servants to pass another law. We need some more.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... neglecting pre-K education

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Pre-kindergarten in Idaho is pretty much a matter of parental choice: Attendance depends on whether moms and dads value early education enough to pay for it.

During the current economic downturn, some parents are saying no, out of necessity. That's understandable, but it shows what happens when early education rides the ebb and flow of the economy — and when politicians come up with excuses instead of investing in children.

Consider some anecdotal evidence ... At Hugs Development Center in Boise, enrollment is at 37, which is actually up from a low of 22. The center once had an enrollment of 72 kids and a waiting list. This doesn't appear to be isolated. While statewide figures aren't available, enrollment evidently has been dropping thing more than crocodile tears from some quarters at the Statehouse.

Idaho has precisely the kind of improvised, ad hoc early education system some legislators have wanted from the start. But decisions tend to have hidden costs, and sometimes, those costs come due years after the fact.

... the death of Common Interest

Post Register, Idaho Falls

Vanquished Democratic gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred issued one of those "I'm doing fine" news releases (last week). That's nice to hear. Allred is a good guy and somebody had to take the bullet for an Idaho Democratic Party that was not going to overcome policies drafted by politicians in our distant federal city.

What's sad, however, is a Nov. 5 Idaho Reporter.com story with the headline: "Keith Allred has no plans to resurrect interest group."

The group in questions is, of course, The Common Interest, the nonpartisan nonprofit that, despite Republican claims to the contrary, did a world of good during its six-year run.

Allred had no choice but to mothball the Common Interest. The Idaho Republican Party is a little like the mafia. Once you're against it, you're against it. Allred is no longer the disinterested representative of public opinion, but a member of the "Democrat Party" — enemy to motherhood, apple pie, baseball games and church picnics.

Don't shed any tears for Allred. He knew full well what he was getting into. And if he didn't, he should have. The real losers here are Idaho's residents. The Common Interest began as an interesting anomaly in a state dominated by Republican politicians and their financial benefactors and evolved into a difference-maker. ...

With one party now possessing an overwhelming legislative majority and every statewide and congressional office, Idaho desperately needs the kind of fact-driven, dispassionate research Allred's group conducted. But, that's a creature of the past, which raises two questions.

For Allred: Was it worth it?

For the rest of us: Will anybody step in to replace what has been lost?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Child custody evaluator undercut due process

I had an occasion to observe a court-appointed child custody evaluator in action. Through this observation, I learned what an evaluator should not do. I became aware that the court-appointed child custody evaluators are not to have extra communication with either attorney. If the neutral evaluator does, it is called ex parte communication. Ex parte communication should not be allowed because it ruins the validity and reliability of the evaluator's information. In the court case I observed, ex parte communication ran unchecked with the sanction of the judge.

I am aware of the following ex parte communication that was allowed to take place in a child custody case.

It is on record that this court-appointed evaluator spent two hours in one attorney's office listening to evidence.

During a court lunch break, one attorney, her client and the evaluator were observed communicating, discussing and strategizing the case together.

The same attorney requested that the evaluator be allowed to listen to another expert witness for the sole purpose of refuting the testimony for her client. The judge not only allowed the evaluator to listen to the testimony but allowed them to later discuss that witness's testimony ex parte.

The collusion of the court-appointed evaluator and this attorney was observed several other times during courtroom breaks. It was obvious what they were discussing as they made no attempt to hide their ex parte communication.

This type of communication is highly inappropriate and not allowed except in at half-day preschools.

"We believe parents are making other choices than preschool or their child's extracurricular activities with their limited funds," said Melissa Bandy of the Idaho Association for the Education of Young Children.

Presumably, these parents still believe exactly what many experts firmly believe. Early education makes a modest but important down payment on the future, by investing today to better prepare tomorrow's students.

But parents are being forced to make tough personal decisions during tough times because the state has made short-sighted public policy decisions during good times.

In the winter of 2007, before the Great Recession, the Legislature considered a simple bill to encourage voluntary pre-K programs (in other words, no school district would be mandated to provide pre-K, and no parent would be required to enroll their child). These programs would not have been eligible for a dime of state funding. But lawmakers said no anyway.

Part of the objection was ... grounded in values. Some conservative lawmakers believe young children should be kept at home.

Well, at least they're getting their wish.

By slamming the brakes on voluntary pre-K programs, which would at least qualify for local funding or federal grants, the lawmakers left parents to shoulder the burden of costs of early education. No one can be surprised that some parents are opting out. Meanwhile, no one should expect any-unusual and emergency circumstances. Few things so completely undermine the due process and the right to an impartial trial judge as does ex parte communication between someone appointed as an officer of the court and only one attorney or one side of the case.

I would encourage the attorneys, judges and child custody evaluators to hold themselves and the process to a higher standard. The "best interest of the child" can never be determined when judges, evaluators and attorneys willingly and knowingly engage in ex parte communication. GAYLE MARTENS Burley

Recession erodes Idaho's gross state product

Production higher than original estimates

Times-News

The worst recession since World War II bit into Idaho's productivity in 2009, cutting gross state product by 3 percent.

But dramatic upward revisions in gross state product for the three previous years muted the 2009 decline in the value of all goods and services produced in Idaho.

The U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis on Thursday estimated Idaho's 2009 gross state product at just over $54 billion.

While that was 3 percent below the revised 2008 figure of nearly $55.7 billion, it was more than 2.4 percent higher than the original 2008 estimate of $52.7 billion.

Thirty of the 50 states showed losses in gross state product from 2008, and 14 more were essentially stagnant.

The government only estimated the aggregate value of 2009 economic activity, not the components of wages, profits and taxes and imports. But published wage information showed Idaho payrolls declined by more than $2.1 billion between 2008 and 2009. Wages and salaries account for nearly 60 percent of gross state product.

In revising Idaho gross state product figures, the Bureau of Economic Analysis found the state economy had been more productive than originally believed. It increased the annual estimates back to 1963 except for 1998, which was reduced $230 million. Estimates since the 2001 recession were increased by at least $1 billion and by $3.4 billion in 2007.

The new estimates reflect what has been occurring in the Idaho economy since the recession took hold in mid-2008. Construction and manufacturing combined for a reduction of $1.1 billion. Agriculture, which saw a drop in livestock prices in 2009, posted a $750 million decline, and retail trade was off $200 million.

But financial and professional services along with health care were up a combined $500 million.

Nancy King embraces her dog Buzz, a 15-year-old dachshund, at her home in Elk Grove, Calif. King had an attorney draft a 'pet trust' outlining how her beloved dogs will be cared for after her death.

Legal trusts can ensure devoted pets' comfort

By Claudia Buck
McClatchy Newspapers/MCT

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Buzz and Hilda love to ramble around their Elk Grove home, taking naps or chasing after their chew toys by day, curling up in the family room recliner at night.

Nancy King, their devoted owner, doesn't want that routine to change much once she's gone. So King, a librarian for the California Energy Commission, set up a pet trust, which spells out exactly how and where her dachshund duo will be cared for, if they outlive her.

King, 67, wanted to ensure that her pets have "as little disruption as possible" once she can no longer care for them.

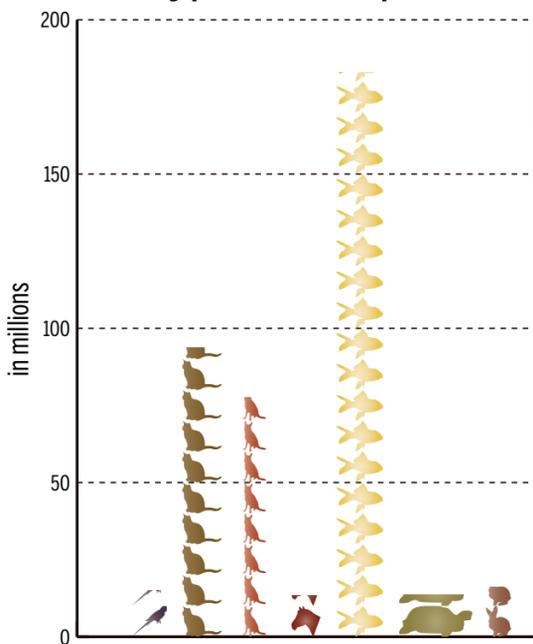

With an estimated 71.4 million U.S. households home to at least one bird, fish, reptile, cat, dog or bunny, pets are definitely our beloved companions in life. But what happens to them after we're gone?

Some wind up in animal shelters. Some are put to sleep. Others are farmed out to willing family or friends.

But to ensure there's no uncertainty, it appears more Americans are specifying exactly what happens to Fido and Fluffy when they're gone. That arrangement can be as casual as a friendly agreement with a grown child, a sibling or friend, or as concrete as a legal-drafted trust.

Two more execs nabbed in connection to Madoff fraud

By Tom Hays
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK— Two longtime back office employees of Bernard Madoff were arrested Thursday on charges that they helped the disgraced financier dupe investors for decades by making fictitious investments — and that they cashed in on the epic Ponzi scheme themselves.

FBI agents arrested Joann Crupi at her house in Westfield, N.J., while Annette Bongiorno was picked up at her home in Boca Raton, Fla.

An indictment unsealed in federal court in Manhattan alleges Crupi, 49, and Bongiorno, 62, "executed" trades in the accounts of (wealthy clients) only on paper ... and that achieved annual rates of return that had been predetermined by Madoff."

Prosecutors, citing internal communications, say Bongiorno used a computer program designed to backdate trades and manipulate account statements.

"I need the ability to give any settlement date I want," she wrote to a manager in the early 1990s, according to the indictment.

Crupi was charged with creating false records to cover Madoff's tracks amid reviews by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Prosecutors say that as the scheme unraveled, she "became aware that client redemption requests bore no relationship to (the business') cash on hand, which by late 2008 was woefully insufficient to meet those requests," the indictment said.

Seized records show that Bongiorno deposited about $920,000 in her own Madoff account from 1975 to 2008 and withdrew more than $14 million over the same period, the indictment said. Crupi received hundreds of thousands of dollars in "off the books" income, it added.

The women "protected and perpetuated the Madoff mirage while putting very real money in their own pockets," U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara said in a statement.

Both are charged with conspiracy, securities fraud and falsifying records.

Crupi was due in Manhattan court Thursday. Her attorney did not immediately respond to comment requests.

Bongiorno appeared in court in West Palm Beach, Fla. A bail hearing was scheduled for Monday, meaning Bongiorno will spend at least the weekend in jail.

She was asked by U.S. Magistrate Judge Ann Vitunac if she understood the charges.

"I understand most of it," she replied. "I don't understand all of it."

Authorities filed civil papers in June seeking to recoup $5 million from the two employees. The government said in August that it had traced houses in Manhasset, N.Y., and Boca Raton, Fla., and other assets to Bongiorno.

Businesses should hire financial help carefully

One of the most important decisions a small business owner makes is who they should hire for financial advice. Choosing the right accountant or tax attorney can help a company grow and be profitable.

But too often, owners decide to hire a friend of a friend, or someone they heard about third-hand.

SMALL TALK

Joyce Rosenberg

They don't take the time to research and interview different prospects to determine who would be the best fit.

Just as bad, some don't even seek out the help of an accountant. They might decide to make do with a paid tax preparer who can help at tax time, but who probably isn't qualified to help with year-round business planning.

One size doesn't fit all

You might hear of an accountant or attorney who's just brilliant. But if he or she knows nothing about your kind of business, you won't get the best advice possible. You could even lose money.

Marcia Suelzer, a senior tax writer with Business Owner's Toolkit, a division of Wolters Kluwer, noted that the government has tax breaks for specific industries. For example, "if I'm a restaurant owner, there are tons of exceptions for the normal inventory rules that I can take advantage of, but my buddy who has a local gift store, they can't," she said.

So if you hire an adviser who's unfamiliar with the restaurant industry, you won't be able to take advantage of those tax breaks.

Many companies do business in more than one state, particularly when they're located near the border of another state. Suelzer said an adviser who's well versed with one state's tax laws but not another's won't be able to help the multistate company.

And you probably want to

Obama: GM stock sale a success for his policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama on Thursday celebrated the return of a reborn General Motors to the U.S. stock market, saying it shows some of the “tough decisions that we made” during the financial crisis were beginning to pay off.

“American taxpayers are now positioned to recover more than my administration invested in GM, and that’s a good thing,” Obama said, speaking of his administration’s $50 billion taxpayer-backed rescue of the venerable automaker.

Trading the new stock is a milestone for both the corporation and for the Obama administration.

The stock rose sharply at first, rising to nearly $36 per share from the $33 price GM set for the initial public offering before pulling back and closing at $34.19.

The trading — more than 400 million GM shares traded hands during its debut on the Big Board — helped reduce the federal government’s stake in the company from 61 percent to about 36 percent.

For the U.S. to break even on its investment, it must sell its remaining stake for about $50 a share.

Obama said estimates indicate that actions by his administration helped save more than 1 million jobs across 50 states.

The Center for Automotive Research estimated that aid to GM and Chrysler saved more than 1.1 million jobs in 2009 and 314,000 jobs this year. The third Big Three automaker, Ford Motor Co., did not accept federal assistance and stayed out of bankruptcy.

With its first day of trading, the once near-death automaker “took another big step toward becoming a success story,” Obama said.

Obama said the revitalized GM proved that “doubters and naysayers” were wrong.

Pets

“It’s definitely a trend, and it’s caught on because people understandably value their animals and want to make sure their pets are looked after,” said Mary Randolph, publisher of Berkeley, Calif.-based Nolo and author of “Every Dog’s Legal Guide: A Must-Have Book for Your Owner.”

Some 43 states and the District of Columbia now have statutory pet trust laws on their books, according to attorney Dan Meeks, who runs a Florida website, <http://www.pet-trustlawblog.com>.

He said there’s been increased interest in pet trusts over the past couple of years, partly due to several “outlandish” pet-care cases, such as the $12 million trust fund left by real estate mogul Leona Helmsley to care for her Maltese poodle (later reduced to $2 million in court).

Or Florida heiress Gail Posner, who died in March, leaving her $8.3 million Miami mansion and more than $3 million for the care of Conchita, her pampered Chihuahua, and two other dogs.

In Elk Grove, librarian King doesn’t have anything quite so posh in mind for her beloved pooches. At her death, Buzz, a 15-year-old “senior citizen” and Hilda, an 8-year-old “doxie-wawa” (a dachshund-Chihuahua mix), will be adopted by a volunteer chosen by the Sacramento Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Her pet trust specifies organic food and regular teeth cleaning every eight weeks for both dogs. King, who is setting aside about $150 a month to cover the dogs’ food and vet bills, also gave the SPCA her recipe for home-cooked organic pet food.

Financial

avoid big accounting firms whose clients tend to be larger corporations. They may not be able to give you the one-on-one attention that many small business owners need.

How to shop for an accountant or tax lawyer

Suelzer advises business owners to approach hiring a financial adviser in the same way they’d hire an employee.

“Start thinking, what do I need from this person,” she said. “If you want tax planning and business advice, you don’t want someone who’s just a tax return shop.”

Start by asking other business people, particularly those in your line of work, for recommendations. You probably want to meet with several.

Suelzer suggests asking these questions:

- How many clients do you have in my line of work?
- How up to date are you with the latest technology and government requirements for electronic filing? (The IRS is increasingly requiring companies to file tax forms online.)
- In the case of a large accounting firm, will I work with one accountant, or will I have to deal with someone new each time I call?
- How are you going to save me money on my taxes?
- How much will working with you cost me? What is your entire fee schedule?

“If they’re worth their salt, they’re going to be able to answer those questions,” Suelzer said.

A prospective adviser should also be asking you questions about you and your business, to get a sense of your needs. And ask to see your prior year’s tax return, to get a sense of your company’s finances.

A caveat about paid preparers

If you do decide you just want help in preparing your taxes, you should know that the IRS is starting to regulate paid preparers.

A paid preparer can be any of the following: a certified public accountant, tax attorney or someone known as an enrolled agent. An enrolled agent is someone who can prepare returns and represent taxpayers in matters involving the IRS. But a paid preparer can also be someone who took a course in tax preparation. He or she may work for a company like H&R Block or Jackson Hewitt, but there are paid preparers who work independently.

Starting with the coming tax season, paid preparers will be required to obtain ID numbers from the IRS, said David Williams, director of the agency’s return preparer organization.

And in the coming years, preparers will have to pass a competency exam. Those who are CPAs, attorneys and enrolled agents will be exempt from that requirement because they have already passed exams to qualify for their professions.

Preparers will also need to take continuing education courses each year, Williams said.

GOP governors: Deep budget cuts are coming

By Liz Sidoti
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Incoming Republican governors from Pennsylvania to New Mexico are vowing to keep campaign promises to slice already cut-to-the-bone budgets and balance them without raising taxes.

In doing so, GOP leaders intent on conservative governance signaled a desire to try to fundamentally change state government, shrinking it significantly. And they acknowledged that could mean more job losses and service cuts to recession-hammered states anticipating more budget trouble ahead.

"While we're all facing these challenges, there are incredible opportunities for us to go look at what the core missions of government were, and redefine the role," said South Carolina Gov.-elect Nikki Haley, adding that the institution was never intended to be all things to all people. "We're going to have to scale back."

"We have to be honest with the people of our states and say, 'This is going to hurt. We're going to struggle,'" Haley added. But she said she was confident that the GOP's remaking-government approach ultimately would make Republicans — and their states — stronger.

At the annual Republican Governors' Association conference this week in California, incoming and current GOP governors insisted that their methods — which Democratic critics deride as draconian — would prevent another bout of catastrophic fiscal conditions over the long term.

"Our foremost issue is certainly to close the deficit in a long-lasting way," said New Mexico Gov.-elect Susana Martinez, who said her state faces a roughly $452 million budget gap. For starters, she's proposed reducing the state employee payroll by 5 percent through attrition.

From Washington, D.C., to the states, Republicans are trying to regain the mantle of smaller government and fiscal discipline, principles GOP leaders acknowledge the party strayed from when it controlled the White House and Congress. Two weeks ago, voters fired Democrats up and down the ballot, betting on Republicans to fix the sluggish economy, rein in budget-busting deficits and limit the government's reach.

Come January, Republican governors will be in charge in 29 states, including some of those hit hardest by the recession. Nevada, Florida and New Mexico are among them.

"We have a two-year time window, basically until the 2012 elections, to prove ourselves, if we're going to do what we talked about doing," said incoming Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin, who aims to "right-size government" to fix a $650 million shortfall.

Although the federal government reports signs of economic growth, state fiscal conditions are expected to continue to deteriorate further after two straight years of crisis. The nonpartisan Center on Budget and Policy Priorities in Washington forecasts combined state deficits topping $140 billion in what could be the worst year yet.

Governors already have repeatedly cut budgets. Some have raised taxes.

Now billions of dollars in federal stimulus money is drying up, and states are fretting about the impact of Obama's sweeping health care law. Incoming GOP chief executives are left with few options to balance budgets without raising taxes.

Echoing many other GOP governors-elect, Nevada's Brian Sandoval called that option "the worst possible thing you can do" in the aftermath of recession.

So, some are eyeing changes to public employee pension systems. Others are considering selling state assets. Cutting the state payroll, too. And privatizing services the states now offer — like school busing in South Carolina — also is on the table.

In Wisconsin, with an estimated $2.7 billion shortfall, Gov.-elect Scott Walker wants to cancel a federally financed rail project. He calls it a boondoggle that will cost the state money to operate.

In Ohio, where a projected $8 billion gap looms, Gov.-elect John Kasich has called for shuttering the state Development Department in favor of a private, nonprofit board of corporate executives.

Pennsylvania's incoming governor, Tom Corbett, has proposed selling state-run liquor stores and cutting the state-vehicle fleet to fill a budget gap that could run as high as $5 billion.

Grim end to Ohio mystery: Three bodies in hollow tree

By Ann Sanner
Associated Press

MOUNT VERNON, Ohio — An unemployed tree-trimmer arrested after a teenage girl was found bound and gagged in his basement pointed the way Thursday to the bodies of her brother, mother and another woman, stuffed into garbage bags and hidden in a hollow tree, authorities said.

The three victims and the rescued 13-year-old disappeared more than a week ago from a blood-spattered home. Authorities said all three were killed there, though they did not say how, and that the tree-trimmer, Matthew Hoffman, gave investigators information through his attorneys that led them to the bodies in woods in central Ohio.

"The tragedy today is just devastating," said Knox County prosecutor John Thatcher. "The results aren't what we wanted them to be."

Knox County Sheriff David Barber said part of the tree had to be cut away to remove the remains.

"The tree was hollow to a point," the sheriff said, adding it would be speculation to understand how the remains were put into the tree.

Hoffman, an ex-convict who spent six years in a Colorado prison on arson and other charges, remained jailed on charges of kidnapping the girl, Sarah Maynard, and is the only suspect in the killings, Barber said.

The 30-year-old has appeared in court but has not entered a plea. Knox County Public Defender Bruce Malek, who is representing Hoffman, said Thursday that he could not comment.

Sarah, her mother, Tina Herrmann, her 11-year-old brother, Kody Maynard, and family friend Stephanie Sprang were reported missing after Herrmann failed to show up for work at a local Dairy Queen on Nov. 10.

A day later, a deputy found what authorities called an unusual amount of blood inside her home, and her pickup truck was found near the campus of Kenyon College. Hoffman was questioned that same day — Barber said police found him sitting in his car near a bike trail near where the pickup was found.

A SWAT team found Sarah over the weekend in the basement of Hoffman's home in Mount Vernon, about 40 miles northeast of Columbus. Investigators would not discuss details of her ordeal but have said she is doing well, considering the circumstances.

"We're inspired by Sarah's bravery," Barber said. He said Sarah was home at the time of the killings but added, "What she saw, I can't speak to that."

A day after finding Sarah, authorities conceded that the others were likely dead. Still, volunteers and authorities on the ground and in the air continued to search ponds, vacant buildings and bike trails for Kody, 32-year-old Herrmann and 41-year-old Sprang.

The remains were found in a wildlife preserve in Fredericktown, about a 15-mile drive from Hoffman's home and about a 20-mile drive from the Herrmann home. The rural site is about a quarter-mile from two churches, and an Amish horse-drawn buggy passed after three white hearses had driven away.

An officer remained at the site with a sheriff's cruiser and an Ohio Department of Natural Resources vehicle as darkness began to fall.

At the Herrmann home Thursday, three purple, star-shaped helium balloons had been left in the yard and two bouquets of flowers were resting against a tree. County Coroner Jennifer Ogle said the bodies have been taken to the coroner's office in neighboring Licking County and that results would be released from her office as early as Saturday.

At the Columbus home of the Maynard children's father, four men stood in the yard and asked a reporter to stay off the property. At the home of Sprang's father, a group gathered on the front porch declined to comment.

Barber declined to speculate on a motive. It was unclear how well Hoffman knew the four, but the sheriff suggested that the defendant had been watching them. He lived about 10 miles from Herrmann's home — a split-level house surrounded by a big yard, trees and two country roads — but his mother and stepfather own a home less than a mile away.

Ethics panel recommends censure for Rep. Rangel

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House ethics committee on Thursday recommended censure for longtime Rep. Charles Rangel, suggesting that the New York Democrat suffer the embarrassment of standing before his colleagues while receiving an oral rebuke by the speaker for financial and fundraising misconduct.

Censure is the most serious congressional discipline short of expulsion. The House, which could change the recommended discipline by making it more serious or less serious, probably will consider Rangel's case after Thanksgiving.

The ethics committee voted 9-1 to recommend censure and that Rangel pay any taxes he owes on income from a vacation villa in the Dominican Republic. The five Democrats and five Republicans on the panel deliberated for about three hours behind closed doors.

In a report, the committee said that censure had been recommended in the past in cases of lawmakers enriching themselves. In Rangel's case, the committee said, its decision was based on "the cumulative nature of the violations and not any direct personal financial gain."

Earlier, at a sanctions hearing, the 20-term congressman apologized for his misconduct but said he was not a crooked politician out for personal gain. He was in the House hearing room when the ethics committee chairman, Democratic Rep. Zoe Lofgren of California, announced the recommendation.

Rangel faced Lofgren after the verdict and said, "I hope you can see my way clear to indicate any action taken by me was not with the intention of bringing any disgrace on the House or enriching myself personally."

Democrats to hold votes on middle-class tax cuts

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After meeting with President Obama on Thursday, Democratic leaders in Congress said they plan to hold a series of politically charged votes to extend middle-class tax cuts while letting tax cuts for the wealthy expire.

Republicans are expected to block the plan, leaving both sides back at square one as they try to negotiate a deal to spare families at every income level from a big tax increase in January.

Democratic officials said Obama did not embrace a particular approach to the tax cuts in his Oval Office meeting with Democratic leaders. He indicated he wanted to wait for a meeting with Democratic and Republican leaders on Nov. 30 before staking out a position.

"I think there's a reality here which is that while it might be best to continue the middle-class tax cuts and raise taxes on higher income people, the votes are not there to do that," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, a Connecticut independent who caucuses with the Democrats. "I think everybody's got to deal with a stark reality which is, are we going to leave here knowing that we haven't come to an agreement and that everybody's taxes are going to go up Jan. 1?"

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said he would like to schedule competing votes on the Senate floor. One would be on Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell's bill to make all the tax cuts permanent; the other would be on a Democratic plan to extend only the middle-class tax cuts. Neither is expected to pass.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said she plans to hold a similar vote on extending the middle-class tax cuts in early December.

"We're united in recognizing we have to protect the middle class," Reid said of Senate Democrats.

McConnell said, "Votes structured for symbolic reasons in December won't prevent a tax hike in January. It's not enough to talk about the problem of the looming tax hike on families and hundreds of thousands of small businesses across the country, we have to fix it."

Obama and Democratic leaders in Congress want to extend the tax cuts for individuals making less than $200,000 and married couples making less than $250,000. Republicans and a growing number of rank-and-file Democrats want to extend them all.

ISDB students resurrect superintendent initiation

The Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind Student Council led a special Oct. 18 ceremony to officially welcome the school's new superintendent, Brian Darcy, to the campus.

The council was assisted by Ron Darcy, former ISDB superintendent and Brian Darcy's father. Back in 1996, Ron Darcy was initiated into his new appointment by the council with a unique ceremony — council members ceremonially cut his necktie with a pair of scissors.

This type of official welcome was lost when the last few superintendents arrived on the campus, but resurrected for Brian Darcy, who started as superintendent on Aug. 30. At that time, Cami Wilding, a former student who is now on the ISDB staff, suggested bringing the practice back.

council's junior-class representative, explained the background of the ceremony to current students and faculty. Then, in lieu of council members cutting the necktie, Ron Darcy grinned as he reached over with the scissors to cut the tie of his son.

Doctor unsympathetic about chronic gallbladder pain

DEAR DR. GOTT: Five years ago, I complained to my doctor about serious pain in the area of my gallbladder. The pain also extended around to my back. A sonogram was taken and the report came back normal.

I went back to the same doctor two weeks ago to prepare for a colonoscopy. I complained about the same pain. He thrust his hand into that area; I screamed and my legs flew up. Another sonogram was taken and came back normal.

Well, there is nothing normal to me about having this endless pain and discomfort. Is there a more in-depth examination? Can a gallbladder really hurt this long and still be normal?

DEAR READER: It

ASK DR. GOTT

shouldn't, but apparently it can if a physician is unable to get to the bottom of this or any other issue. If surgery is performed and the gallbladder is not removed, there is a probability that additional stones will form.

The gallbladder is a small muscular sac located under the liver and near the upper portion of the small intestine. The liver produces bile, a substance that aids digestion. The bile is then sent through to the gallbladder, which contracts when food enters the digestive tract. Unfortunately, some of the components of bile crystallize to form stones, a condition known as cholelithiasis. These stones may flow along with the bile but can become trapped in the duct, causing severe pain. When the stones pass through the duct or fall back into the gallbladder, the pain subsides. When blockage occurs, surgery may be necessary to prevent serious damage to the liver and other organs.

Symptoms present with intermittent nausea, vomiting and pain in the upper right abdomen near the rib cage; radiation to the upper back is common. Acute cholecystitis presents with severe upper abdominal pain, fever, chills, nausea and vomiting. Pain may radiate to the back or under the shoulder blades or appear on the left side of the body. Chronic cholecystitis can present with gas, nausea and abdominal pain following meals.

Diagnosis might be made with the assistance of liver function tests, amylase or lipase levels and a complete blood count blood. Abdominal X-rays, ultrasound, CT and MRI may also be helpful. An oral cholecystogram can help determine whether the gallbladder anatomy is normal, allowing it to function properly. A HIDA scan can help determine how well the gallbladder is functioning. Testing is painless and should not add to your stress level.

There are alternatives to surgery, including lithotripsy and dissolution therapy. ERCP (endoscopic retrograde cholangio-pancre-atography) can be used if stones are suspected. Surgeons have routinely performed laparoscopic surgery when blockage occurs. There are two methods of removing the gallbladder — laparoscopically or through open (traditional) surgery. However, a newer — albeit experimental — procedure is available that allows removal of the gallbladder without external incisions. It is known as natural orifice transluminal endoscopic surgery (NOTES). This advancement substantially reduces both pain levels and recovery time; however, further testing and documentation is necessary before adequate data can be documented.

Measures to reduce the possibility of developing stones include the avoidance of alcohol, large meals, fatty foods and crash diets. Obesity and yo-yo dieting contribute to gallstones. Therefore, a careful weight reduction plan is appropriate.

NY Gitmo trial spurs fresh debate over detainees

By Larry Neumeister and Tom Hays
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The near-acquittal of the first Guantanamo detainee tried in federal court is reigniting the debate over whether to bring terrorism suspects to justice in the civilian legal system. The Obama administration made it clear Thursday that its position has not changed.

Justice Department spokesman Matthew Miller said in Washington that the administration will continue to rely on a combination of civilian courts and military tribunals to handle terrorism cases.

His comments came a day after Ahmed Ghailani was acquitted in federal court in New York on all but one of more than 280 charges that he took part in the al-Qaida bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa. The twin attacks in 1998 killed 224 people, including a dozen Americans.

Miller described the conspiracy conviction as "another in a long line of verdicts where federal civilian courts have shown the ability to deliver fair trials and long sentences." White House spokesman Robert Gibbs pointed out that Ghailani still faces a heavy penalty that will ensure he "isn't going to threaten American lives" — a minimum of 20 years in prison and a maximum of life.

Still, the outcome turned up the volume on the chorus of Republicans and other opponents of civilian trials for terrorism suspects picked up on the battlefield and sent to Guantanamo after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks. Among those awaiting trial is the professed mastermind, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed.

Some legal experts warned that Wednesday's verdict damaged the argument for trying detainees in civilian courts. They said the case could make the Obama administration more selective in deciding which suspects to put on trial, because of the risk that someone branded dangerous by the government could be acquitted.

"They really needed this case to go off without a hitch, to be a showcase. Instead, you have the opposite," said Aitan Goelman, a former federal prosecutor in New York now in private practice in Washington. "Civilian juries do screwy things," he said. "There's horse trading in jury verdicts."

Michigan Rep. Pete Hoekstra, the top Republican on the House Intelligence Committee, said the verdict confirms that the Obama administration's decision to try Guantanamo detainees in civilian courts "was a mistake and will not work."

"This case was supposed to be the easy one, and the Obama administration failed — the Gitmo cases from here on out will only get more difficult," he said in a statement.

Civil rights groups and Democrats countered that the prosecution proves the civilian legal system works, even for Guantanamo detainees.

Laura Pitter, a counterterrorism adviser for Human Rights Watch who monitored the Ghailani trial, said the verdict "will have finality and be viewed as credible and legitimate by observers and the rest of the world."

David Kelley, who served as U.S. attorney under President George W. Bush after successfully prosecuting 1993 World Trade Center bombing mastermind Ramzi Yousef, called some of the initial reaction to the verdict misguided.

"This was a win by the government," said Kelley, who now is in private practice. He said he supports civilian trials for Guantanamo detainees and believes the Ghailani case proved such trials could take place without disrupting the community.

responsibility for the epidemic.

Standing before the thick black smoke of blazing tires Thursday, protesters yelled "We say no to MINUSTAH and no to cholera" and carried signs reading "MINUSTAH and cholera are twins." The windows of several cars belonging to the U.N. and humanitarian groups were broken.

Haitian police fired tear gas at the protesters on the central Champ de Mars plaza, and clouds of choking irritants blew into nearby tent shelters of thousands made homeless by the Jan. 12 earthquake.

"I survived the quake but the police are going to kill me with gas," Marie Paul Moses said as she fled the white cloud.

Aid workers, including U.N. humanitarian agencies that are structurally separate from the peacekeeping force, called for calm, saying the violence is hampering efforts to treat the tens of thousands of people stricken with cholera.

The disease is spread by contaminated fecal matter. Health experts say it can be easily treated with rehydration or prevented outright by ensuring good sanitation and getting people to drink only purified water.

But after years of instability, and despite decades of development projects, many Haitians have little access to clean water, toilets or health care.

Silent film star Marie Osborne Yeats of 'Little Mary Sunshine' fame dies

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Silent film child star Marie Osborne Yeats, who was known as Baby Marie Osborne in films such as "Little Mary Sunshine," has died in California. She was 99.

Irene May (Jones) Surface

Irene May (Jones) Surface, a wonderful mother, grand-mother, friend — woman went to be with the Lord on Sunday, Nov. 14, 2010.

Irene was born March 14, 1928, in Mars Hill, Maine, to Thomas and Annie Jones. They later moved to Hamden, Conn., where she graduated from high school. She married in 1947 and, to this marriage, came three children. The family subsequently moved to northern California and expanded their family with two more children. Irene divorced in 1965. In 1984, Irene moved to Twin Falls, Idaho, to be with her daughters and many of her grandchildren. Irene lived in the Magic Valley until she moved to Meridian in 2009.

Irene will be best remembered for her altruistic demeanor. She quietly lent a hand to her elderly neighbors and friends by shoveling snow, giving them rides, offering companionship. She volunteered delivering groceries to the homebound, office work at LINC, St. Luke's Magic Valley Home Health and Hospice and then with her daughter, Trish, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Infection Prevention.

Irene was preceded in death by her parents; two brothers, Tommy and Johnny; and her loyal dog companion, Buddy. She is survived by her children Dan (Kim) Surface, Eileen (John) Newman, Wayne (Diane) Surface, Trish (Robert) Heath and Beverly Fisher; 17 grandchildren; 21 great-grandchildren; and her beloved sister, Nancy Hendricks.

Mom, we loved you for your quiet strength, parenting skills (all on your own!), spirituality, loving and giving personality and steadfast work ethic. Even though you've left us, we all have a lifetime full of fond, sweet memories: Smells of homemade coffee cake, chocolate chip cookies, chili, macaroni casserole; stuffed Christmas stockings; barbecues in the backyard; crying with us when we were hurt (sometimes more than we did); creative handmade gifts; beautiful gardens; Lawrence Welk; ironing using the white water bottle with the rose top; the beautiful poems written for our special occasions and SO much more. Thank you for being both Mother and Father to us — we each can only hope to be half the person you were. Enjoy heaven — they're lucky to have you.

A memorial service will be held at a later date. If desired, memorials can be made in Irene's name to any Animal Humane Society or St. Luke's Magic Valley Home Health and Hospice.

In breakthrough, scientists trap antimatter atoms

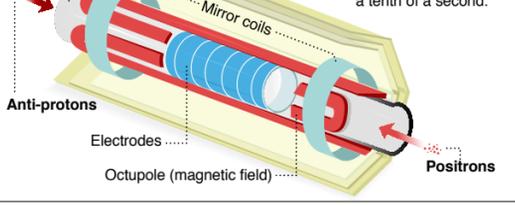

By Frank Jordans Associated Press

GENEVA — Scientists may have been able to capture elusive atoms of antimatter, but don't expect that to lead to interstellar rocket engines or powerful bombs anytime soon — if ever.

Shedding light on antimatter

Scientists have successfully trapped antimatter atoms for long enough to study them. For years, they had the ability to create antimatter, but couldn't study it because it is annihilated upon contacting and its counterpart, matter.

- 1. Anti-protons and positrons are mixed in a vacuum to create anti-hydrogen atoms. 2. Temperature is slightly above absolute zero, which extends the life of the antimatter. 3. Strong magnetic fields also preserve anti-hydrogen atoms by preventing them from contacting matter.

to disappear so fast that scientists don't have a chance to study them.

But in a report published online by the journal Nature, the scientists said they'd been able to trap individual atoms and keep them around for a bit more than one-tenth of a second.

To a particle physicist, that's a pretty long time. "For us it's a big breakthrough because it means we can take the next step, which is to try to compare matter and antimatter," the team's spokesman, American scientist Jeffrey Hangst, told The Associated Press on Thursday.

Hangst and his colleagues, who included scientists from Britain, Brazil, Canada, Israel and the United States, trapped 38 anti-hydrogen atoms individually.

Hangst says that since the experiments they reported in Nature, they've been able to hold on to the atoms even longer.

"Unfortunately I can't tell you how long, because we haven't published the number yet," Hangst told the AP. "But I can tell you that it's much, much longer than a tenth of a second. Within human comprehension on a real clock."

Studying such trapped atoms could help answer basic questions in physics, like why antimatter has disappeared from the natural universe while ordinary matter abounds in the stars, planets and galaxies.

Theorists say both must have been created in equal amounts in the Big Bang.

Two teams had been competing to trap anti-hydrogen atoms at CERN, the world's largest physics lab best known for its $10 billion smasher, the Large Hadron Collider. The collider, built deep under the Swiss-French border, wasn't used for this experiment.

Hangst's team beat a rival group led by Harvard physicist Gerald Gabrielse, who nevertheless welcomed the result.

"The atoms that were trapped were not yet trapped very long and in a very usable number, but one has to crawl before you sprint," he told the AP.

FBI: Aruba studies missing teen's dental records

By Danica Coto Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Dutch authorities are reviewing the dental records of missing U.S. teen Natalee Holloway as they analyze a jawbone with a tooth in it that was found in Aruba last week, the FBI told The Associated Press on Thursday.

The girl's father, Dave Holloway, said earlier that he provided the records but added that he had received no new official information on the investigation on the Dutch island in the Caribbean.

"The authorities haven't confirmed anything with me," he told the AP in a telephone interview. "It's pretty much total silence."

Paul Daymond, an FBI spokesman in Birmingham, Alabama, said the agency sent some records electronically Wednesday and shipped the remaining dental impressions. It is unclear when those would arrive.

A tourist found a jawbone last Friday and took it to the front desk of the Phoenix Hotel, said Ann Angela, spokeswoman for the Aruba prosecutor's office. It was then sent to the Netherlands for analysis, though there has been no announcement on whether the bone is human.

"If it turns out to be a human bone, the investigation will continue," Angela said. "We cannot say when the results will be in."

A forensic scientist in Aruba, however, has said that the bone is from a human female, Dave Holloway told the AP.

Holloway said he received the information from a friend who spoke to the scientist. He did not identify either the friend or the scientist, and did not say whether the scientist is involved in the investigation or otherwise is in a position to know details of the case.

Natalee Holloway, of Mountain Brook, Alabama, was 18 when she disappeared while on a high school graduation trip to Aruba in 2005.

She was last seen leaving a bar with Dutchman Joran van der Sloot, the prime suspect in her disappearance, on the final night of her trip.

Twin Falls' Ethan Tucker worked on his new album for the past couple of years, and his distinct singing style shines through on 'Lost Between.'

Soulful and private

Popular young musician launches second solo album

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

When Ethan Tucker sings, people listen. On Monday morning, he played a song outside Java in Twin Falls, his bare feet tapping as he strummed his acoustic guitar. His soulful, gravely voice turned the heads of those walking by. One barista cheered as she took out garbage.

What sets him apart from other Twin Falls musicians? His adaptable style is at home at bars, coffeehouses, festivals. And at 20-something, his resume already includes a tour with Cas Haley of "America's Got Talent" and plentiful radio play in southern Idaho.

Now his fans can rally around him at his Twin Falls CD release party Saturday. The new album "Lost Between" features music he has written over the past few years. It's been a long time coming.

This is Tucker's second solo album — the first, "Take Me To The Mountains," was released in 2007. The release date for "Lost Between" has been pushed back about eight times, Tucker said, because of scheduling conflicts between him and the person who helped him record it. Tucker was anxious to get the album out, but the delays gave him more time to put together all the pieces of his "Lost Between" has the same acoustic reggae feel as "Take Me To the Mountains," but the lyrics and vocals are more mature. Tucker's fans agree, he said. One of his friends specifically commented on how Tucker has grown in the three years since "Take Me To the Mountains" came out.

What happened to the Confederate Treasury? What's the symbolism behind the Statue of Liberty's torch? Where is the White House cornerstone?

Former Sun Valley resident Buddy Levy hopes to help answer those questions.

Levy, an author and English professor at Washington State University, is one of the stars in the new History Channel series "Brad Meltzer's Decoded," which premieres Dec. 2.

Levy's family moved to Sun Valley in 1970, and he graduated from Wood River High School in 1978. He received a bachelor's degree in English literature from University of Idaho in 1986 and a master's in English with a creative writing emphasis in 1988. Since then, he has freelanced for magazines like Adventure Sports Magazine, Field & Stream and Discover Magazine, and has written three books: "American Legend: The Real-Life Adventures of David Crockett," "Conquistador: Hernan Cortes, King Montezuma, and the Last Stand of the Aztecs," and the forthcoming "River of Darkness: Francisco Orellana's Historic Descent of the Amazon," which will be released in 2011.

The 10 episodes of "Brad Meltzer's Decoded" follow Levy and his teammates, Scott Rolle and Christine McKinley, as they visit historical sites, dig through archives and conduct interviews to look at the other side of commonly accepted historical narratives. They also try to solve mysteries, like what happened to the missing White House cornerstone. The trio is sent on adventures by author Brad Meltzer, whose works include "Heroes for My Son" and "The Book of Lies."

Levy isn't sure why he was chosen for the show, he said — all he knows is he got an e-mail one day — but suspects it's because of his background with outdoor adventures and historical writing.

Whatever the reason, his experience has paid off. While researching his three books, he learned how to navigate archives and historical documents. He is also able to synthesize information quickly, a skill he honed through writing.

"They drew on my research skills because I'm able to find things," Levy said in a telephone interview Wednesday. "I've spent the last 10 years in dusty archives, wearing white gloves, thumbing through crumbly parchment paper. I know my way around research facilities and archives and microfilm."

One of the episodes touches on a mystery dear to Idahoans — the circumstances surrounding Meriwether Lewis' death. Lewis, one half of the Lewis and Clark expedition, died of gunshot wounds in 1809. Whether those wounds were self-inflicted is a question historians have struggled to answer.

"We fixate so much on his role in the expedition, but what history tends to overlook is what happened to him in his final days," Levy said.

Levy wouldn't give away whether his team solved the mystery, saying only they

Author's Parma memoir invites Idaho connections

I have already made a New Year's resolution, and it is one I am fairly certain I will be able to keep (unlike the one about purging my basement): For every novel I read, I am going to read two nonfiction books.

In fact, my to-read list is already loaded with titles: "The Warmth of Other Suns," "Last Child in the Woods" and "97 Orchard: An Edible History," to name a few. Perhaps my favorite nonfiction genre is the memoir; and there are already many titles on that list, too: "Still Alive: A Feisty Bohemian Explores the Art of Growing Old," "Bonobo Handshake: A Memoir of Love and Adventure in the Congo" and "My Reading Life."

Idaho author Angie Sarich has written a memoir; the fact that she is just in her early 30s makes it that much more interesting. The back cover of the book "Leaving Parma" (Colonus Publishing, $17.95) states: "Taking the combat death of her uncle as the beginning point, Angie investigates in her memoir the nature of loss and its effect on the human spirit by exploring the stories of three generations of her family and of the people of Parma."

Sarich

The book had its beginnings 12 years ago in a non-fiction workshop at Eastern Washington University, and it was a fellow classmate who became a friend, cheerleader and ultimately publisher of Sarich's book.

"Richard (Skalstad) was a crucial part of me finishing the book," Sarich said in an interview. "He had been wanting to start his own press, and he had such confidence in the book and my writing. So about a year ago, he took the step and founded Colonus Publishing."

So why would a memoir about growing up in Parma and having a favorite hometown boy killed in Viet Nam appeal to readers who may not even know the town exists? "In any small town," explains Sarich, "when there is a traumatic event, people come together to support each other. Even after all these years, people (in Parma) still talk about my Uncle Craig; they have kept his memory alive. I think readers will find the commonality."

Sarich said that people who have read the book often experience this commonality and have stories to share with her. I discovered my own connection: One of my sorority sisters at the University of Idaho was from Parma; I knew she would have been a friend of Sarich's Uncle Craig. And, indeed, she was. She is mentioned in the book, and Sarich wonders if it was actually a love interest. My college friend still lives in Parma, is still an integral part of that community's fabric and undoubtedly was, in some way, also affected by Craig Emery's death.

I found Sarich's book to be thoughtful and thought-provoking, her writing at times eloquent as in this paragraph: "Barbara Tuchman once said about history that it is like the lamp on the stern of a ship: it shows us where we've been. Every memoir should be that, a hope flickering somewhere in the dark at sea for someone to see - and that's why we tell the truth in a memoir, for unless the story is a true flickering of light and not mirage, it tells us nothing, not where we've been, not even where we are."

I did find the copious quantity of footnotes to be very distracting; indeed, I have never read a memoir that had them. For me, one of the greatest joys of reading this genre is hearing the author's voice. Sarich's references to numerous writers' work - from Norman Maclean to Willa up than your last album," Tucker said.

In his music, he pours out his heart. "Lost Between" is largely autobiographical, with several tracks about someone who played a big role in his life for a few years, he said. (Tucker plays coy with details about his personal life, like who that influential person was. Now that his fan base is growing, he maintains two separate Facebook pages - one public and one for friends - to keep curious eyes away from family photos.) Other inspirations include the news and current events, like in his song "Paradise."

"And I see the pope up in New York riding around in a million-dollar bullet-proof limosine," he sings. "At the same time there's children starving on the steps of a cathedral down in Mexico City."

The album came out earlier this month and is already getting great reviews. Tucker didn't know exactly how many MP3s he has sold between the multiple sites they're listed on, but said he has received notes from listeners across the country who have downloaded his music. "Angel By the Lake" is getting regular play on KSKY.

Tucker declined to give his booking fee, saying only that it starts at $100 and varies depending on whether the show is public or private and how long he'll play for. Besides a few odd jobs, he is doing music full time, living off music sales and gigs.

"I'm hustling 10 times harder," Tucker said. "I have to pay my bills, man." It's not easy, but it forces him to focus on his music. He stays busy enough that he doesn't have a girlfriend - something that catches him grief from his bandmates.

"Dude, I don't have time for that," he said.

His dedication is paying off. On top of his local shows - some solo and some with his band, Ethan Tucker & The Grassroots All-Stars - he is touring in Washington and Montana in January. The tour includes a stop at Seattle's Hard Rock Cafe on Jan. 7.

Lebron Burton of Twin Falls recently heard Tucker play his song "Stop and Run" at Hands On. Since then, he has looked forward to hearing Tucker's new CD.

"I think he's a one-of-a-kind artist and definitely unique to the area for sure," Burton said.

Pierre Tusow of Twin Falls band Alpenflow heard bits of the album while his bandmate Brady Devey engineered and recorded Tucker's album. Tusow said Tucker's authenticity makes him stand out.

While other musicians put out songs to please their audience, Tucker's music is genuine.

"His stuff comes from the heart," Tusow said.

found intriguing evidence. "Decoded" breaks new historical ground on this one," Levy said.

Gary Williams, chairman of the English department at University of Idaho, worked with Levy in the '80s as Levy completed his master's. Since then, the two have stayed in touch, and Williams praised Levy's ability to sift and interpret historical facts.

"It's one thing to sort of learn to access hard-to-find material or material that's never been published," Williams said. "It's another thing to turn that material into readable prose."

Will those skills translate to an entertaining show? Tune in to see, Levy said.

"It makes history fun," he said. "It makes you realize that history is in no way this static compilation of dates and facts and figures."

Lighting up downtown

Newspaper steps in to save holiday parade

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

The lights will keep twinkling.

The Times-News is hosting the 19th annual Festival of Lights Parade on Dec. 3 in downtown Twin Falls. The theme, "Making Merry Memories," sets the mood for a festive community celebration and kicks off the Christmas season.

The Business Improvement District, which traditionally organized downtown events like the after-dark holiday parade and Oktoberfest, dissolved earlier this year. When no one took over Oktoberfest planning, it was replaced by a number of smaller events put on by private businesses.

After seeing Oktoberfest's demise, the Times-News stepped in to keep the parade rolling.

"It's part of Twin Falls," said Times-News marketing manager Susan Nickell. "It's a wonderful, long-standing tradition, and we just simply couldn't let it go away."

Although the organizers are different, the parade won't be.

"We won't try to change anything," Nickell said. "We just want to see it happen."

The $25 entry fee covers event costs.

"We're not doing this to make money," Nickell said.

Downtown business owners have reacted positively to news that the parade isn't Want to sign up for the parade? The entry fee, which covers event costs, is $25 per group and is limited to the first 40 entrants. Floats, marching bands, youth groups, 4-wheelers and businesses are all welcome. Sign up by Nov. 26. Information: Susan Nickell, 735-3227 or susan.nickell@magicvalley.com.

The Times-News will present the annual Festival of Lights Parade at 6 p.m. Dec. 3 along Main Avenue in Twin Falls. Floats will assemble at 5 p.m. in the parking lot at Krengel's True Value Hardware, 628 Main Ave. S., and the parade ends near Magic Valley High School, 512 Main Ave. N.

co-owner Darla Himple said she likes the atmosphere it brings to downtown.

"It's always kind of fun," Himple said, adding she serves hot chocolate to customers that evening.

Susan Buhler, owner of Poindexter's, loves that the event brings people to her store. She serves cider and cookies and stays open later, hoping to bring in new faces.

"Those are the kind of things I think we need for downtown," she said.

Part poetry slam, part traveling medicine show

Wood River grad brings Gringo Choir poets to Hailey

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Max Kessler knows that it's difficult to pull people away from a night of ESPN football to take in an evening of poetry.

That's why he and his Gringo Choir have fused poetry into a multimedia show combining music, art and costumes with cutting-edge comedy and — alas — tragedy, as well.

The end product, "A Taste of Atlantic," has been described as "Prairie Home Companion meets Def Poetry." And as part poetry slam, part traveling medicine show.

"It's a way to trick the audience into coming to a poetry slam," said Kessler, a Ketchum native and 2005 Wood River High School graduate. "So often when you say the word 'poetry,' people run and hide. But once we get them to listen to us, they realize this is not the poetry they listened to in high school!"

The show, which is on a coast-to-coast tour, will be presented at 8 p.m. today and Saturday at The Liberty Theatre in Hailey.

Traveling poets Carrie Rudzinski, left, Steve Subrizi, Carlos Williams and Maxwell R. Kessler are the Gringo Choir, formed at Emerson College in 2008. They'll perform in Hailey today and Saturday.

The performance is held together by a storyline of a traveling troupe that proffers to be selling a magical elixir of the entire Atlantic Ocean in a tiny fish tank.

It includes such morsels as this: "When I told my parents I was going vegan they didn't say 'Good for you.' They reacted as if I was fashioning myself a pillow out of paper clips. 'That sounds like a pain. Is it even safe?'"

The Gringo Choir was formed in 2008 to represent Emerson College in a regional collegiate poetry slam at Boston University. The troupe made it to the semifinals of the 2009 College Union Poetry Slam Invitational in Albuquerque, N.M., and the finals a year later.

The four poets decided to take their show on the road after receiving numerous invitations to perform at college campuses.

"The show is very unique, and all four of the performers have tons of experience in writing and performing," said Max's mother, Cherie Kessler.

Max Kessler said audience members should expect loud rock 'n' roll — poetry style. "It's so very fun, and that's what we hope to show people Friday and Saturday night."

Skating stars help Sun Valley launch anniversary season

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — A star-studded cast will skate under the stars in Sun Valley on Dec. 21 to celebrate the 74th anniversary of the opening of the Sun Valley Lodge.

The Silver and Gold Ice Show is one of a handful of events in December that Sun Valley is using to usher in its 75th anniversary season.

The 45- to 50-minute show will feature Olympic gold medalists Brian Boitano and Evan Lysacek, Olympic silver medalist Sasha Cohen, U.S. silver medalist Ryan Bradley and Nathan Chen, the child prodigy who was 10 last year when he won the 2010 U.S. gold medal in the novice division.

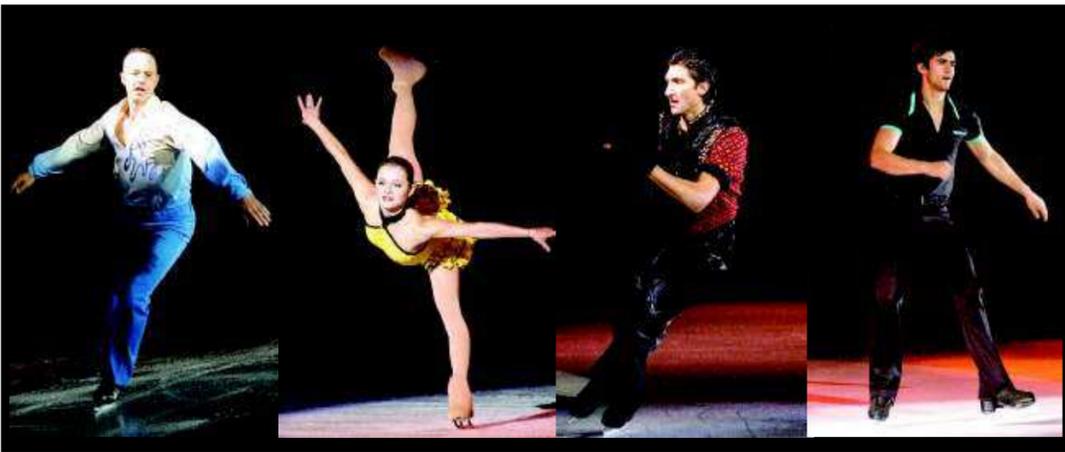

Chen appeared in a handful of Sun Valley Ice

Shows last summer, mesmerizing the crowds with his youthful enthusiasm and highly polished skills.

"We're showcasing skaters who have been instrumental in our success. Brian Boitano, for instance, has been coming here 15 years. Evan has been coming a long time, and Sasha Cohen has been coming since she was a youngster. Nathan represents our new generation of skaters," said Lana Breazeale, who organized the show.

The stars seem jazzed about the opportunity to take part.

"Sun Valley has been one of my favorite places to skate ever since I was 13," Boitano said in an e-mail. "I have so many wonderful memories of Sun Valley — among them, making my professional debut there after winning the Olympics."

Brian Boitano, Sasha Cohen, Evan Lysacek and Ryan Bradley.

The ice show will be followed by a torchlight parade and fireworks.

And the Lodge Dining Room is preparing a special dinner, using in part a menu from the Lodge's opening night in 1936. That menu includes American beef and haricot vert — French for green beans.

Tickets for the 6 p.m. ice show are $45 for reserved seats and $75 for the show and a cocktail reception following with the skaters in Sun Valley's Limelight room. Tickets: 622-2135 or seats.sunvalley.com.

The show is one of several big parties Sun Valley will throw in December to kick off the resort's year-long anniversary celebration, said marketing director Jack Sibbach.

A bevy of star athletes will show off tricks on Sun Valley's new terrain park rails during a Season Rail Exhibition on Dec. 17. The resort also will host an expanded tree lighting and caroling show on Dec. 18.

'Cool It!,' showing in Hailey on Sunday, features Bjorn Lomborg, pictured here in Greenland.

Developer brings controversial climate-change movie to Hailey

Times-News

HAILEY — It's billed as the antidote to Al Gore's "An Inconvenient Truth."

And, while it doesn't question that climate change is real and potentially serious, it does caution against what it calls "devastatingly expensive reductions in carbon emissions."

The movie is "Cool It!," showing at The Liberty Theatre in Hailey at 3 p.m. Sunday. Film producer Terry Botwick, who also produced the "Star Trek," "X-Men" and "Wolverine" movies, will participate in a question session and a reception afterwards. He will be joined by his 1019 executive Whitney Thomas.

The movie, directed by Ondi Timoner, features Bjorn Lomborg, the Danish-born author of "The Skeptical Environmentalist."

An adjunct professor at Copenhagen Business School and former director of the Environmental Assessment Institute in Copenhagen, Lomborg campaigned against the Kyoto Protocol.

Lomborg advocates putting money instead toward researching and developing non-carbon-emitting technologies that enable people to switch to cheaper-than-fossil-fuel technologies sooner. That is, things like solar, wind, carbon capture, fusion, fission and even technology that would make clouds whiter to reflect more heat.

"The movie is very controversial, but it has a message that's worth listening to," said Ketchum developer Jack Bariteau, who is bringing the movie to Hailey. "It offers balance, especially when it comes to looking at how to apply our money to solving the problem."

The film, which premiered in September at the Toronto International Film Festival, opened in 400 theaters across the nation Nov. 12. Ordinarily it would be impossible to bring a movie like this to the Wood River Valley, Bariteau said.

Tickets are $15 at the door with the proceeds going to Wood River Middle School technology lab and sixth-grade science camp.

Ballet Conservatory in Burley performs 'Hansel and Gretel'

Times-News

For the second year, audiences can enjoy the local talents of 99 Burley-area children performing "Hansel and Gretel" with The Ballet Conservatory.

"The production includes state-of-the-art scenery and beautiful hand-made costumes," said artistic director and choreographer Katriina Beck, who adapted the Brothers Grimm tale into a ballet.

Characters include the children Hansel and Gretel as well as gingerbread cookies, fairies, trolls, a witch, forest animals, goblins and — new this year — ghosts, bunnies and fireflies in the forest. The music compositions include Engelbert Humperdinck's operatic score of "Hansel and Gretel," plus other classical music.

Connor Hansen starred as Hansel and Kamryn Durfee as Gretel in The Ballet Conservatory's 2009 performance; the troupe brings 'Hansel and Gretel' to the stage again tonight and Saturday in Burley.

Performances are at 7:30 p.m. today and 2 p.m. Saturday at the King Fine Arts Center in Burley.

Tickets are $8 for general seating and $10 for VIP; purchase from cast members, The Book Plaza, Welch Music, Rupert's Book Store, at the door or at 260-0048 or 670-5730.

Broncos focused on Fresno St., not looking at Nevada

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — When No. 3 (No. 4 BCS) Boise State hosts Fresno State tonight in a WAC tilt, Bronco head coach Chris Petersen knows peeking down the schedule could ruin a potentially historic season for his team.

Boise State (9-0, 5-0 WAC), sitting on the precipice of possibly playing in the BCS title game with a couple of breaks, needs another impressive win at home on national television before an epic showdown with Nevada next week.

“Everybody understands what’s at stake and the kind of team that

Fresno St. at
No. 3 Boise St.

we’re playing,” Petersen said. “And I think that’s a good thing.”

While Petersen jokingly said he wished his toughest games were behind him instead of ahead of him, he knows the “good thing” is a challenging November stretch that keeps his team focused.

INSIDE

Breaking down the matchup.

See Sports 5

For the Broncos, priority No. 1 in beating Fresno State is stopping its sophomore dynamo, running back Robbie Rouse.

Rouse has come on strong for Fresno State (6-3, 4-2) over the past two weeks, rushing for over 200 yards in consecutive games.

However, Boise State has seen the likes of Rouse before — a 5-foot-7 speedy running with good power and breakaway speed — in Oregon State’s Jacquizz Rodgers.

The Broncos’ run defense held Rodgers to his lowest output of the season at 46 yards in their September meeting.

“We thought Robbie Rouse was good last year,” Petersen said. “He just had a first round draft pick in front of him (in Ryan Matthews). He was banged up early this season, but what he’s doing right now isn’t all that surprising.”

Boise State won’t be caught flat-footed against Rouse whose offensive output in the past two games eclipsed what he had done in his first six. But Fresno State has a more balanced offense led by senior quarterback Ryan Colburn — and it could very well lead to a classic WAC shootout like last year’s 51-34 Boise State win.

However, the Broncos’ have more than enough firepower to counter the Bulldogs should the game devolve into a track meet behind quarterback Kellen Moore and his stellar wide receiver duo of Austin Pettis and Titus Young.

Moore was nearly flawless in torching Idaho for 216 yards and three touchdowns in a short night. Young and Pettis have 824 and 595 yards, respectively, along with six touchdowns each.

Then there’s Doug Martin, the hard-nosed running back who has eight touchdowns and is averaging nearly 100 yards per game.

CSI pulls out 87-77 win over Sullivan

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

The Golden Eagles started and ended strong Thursday night. It was the in-between that needed some work.

The 13th-ranked College of Southern Idaho men’s basketball team opened the 34th annual K&T Steel Tournament with an 87-77 win over Sullivan (N.Y.) County. But it was a win that left CSI’s players and coaches frustrated.

CSI scored the first 13 points of the game but wound up trailing 43-40 at halftime.

“We had a good 10 minutes,” said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. “And then we made a couple of substitutions and we lost our intensity. To (Sullivan’s) credit they kept fighting and they kept coming back. ... They got some easy baskets to get them going because we were gambling on defense and not getting back in transition.”

After arriving in Twin Falls at midnight, Sullivan struggled to handle the ball early and missed its first six shots. They settled in and the Eagles saw their 13-0 lead dip to six at 24-18. CSI led 34-24 on a jumper by Pierre Jackson with

Lavarias shines for Vandals

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Aaron Lavarias was just beginning an interview with a reporter this week when Idaho football coach Robb Akey walked past the Vandals’ most productive defender and offered the simplest of compliments.

“Good work,” Akey told the fifth-year defensive end shortly after practice had ended.

It was apt praise for Lavarias, who goes all-out on the football field no matter the occasion. But Akey isn’t the only one who’s taken notice of one of the Western Athletic Conference’s marquee pass rushers.

“I think Lavarias, he’s big time,” Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore said last Friday night, following the Broncos’ 52-14 rout of Idaho. “He’s a very good defensive end. We’ve seen him for a couple years. From last year to this year, you’ve seen a big change in him.”

Lavarias, a 6-foot-3, 255-pound senior from Woodinville, Wash., continues to shine after transitioning from a smallish defensive tackle into a high-energy end before the start of the 2009 season. He’s third in the WAC in sacks with eight and tied for fourth in tackles for loss with 13.

Lavarias has shown a knack for maneuvering into opposing teams’ backfields — albeit at a slower clip than earlier in the year — even while he’s become the focal point of Vandal opponents.

During Idaho’s current three-game losing skid, the team has given up 160 points to the WAC’s three top teams.

Twin Falls girls rout Buhl 73-24

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

It’s games like these elite teams figure out how much depth they have.

The Twin Falls girls basketball team handily defeated Buhl Thursday night in its home-opener 73-24.

Jumping out to a 16-2 lead in the first quarter, the Bruins put this one away early, prompting the emptying of the bench.

And the team didn’t miss a beat with the second unit on the floor.

Sophomore guard Jasmine Robertson dominated the defensive side of the ball, pressuring the Buhl guards into turnovers that created easy points for the Bruins.

Robertson

The spark plug off the bench wasn’t afraid to shoot either.

Robertson scored 11 points, from a variety of shots around the court.

“It felt good out there. It was a lot of fun,” Robertson said.

“Defense is my favorite part of the game. I like getting steals and pressuring the other team.”

Robertson, who played for Buhl last year, is happy to be playing for the 3-0 Bruins this season.

“It’s been a lot of fun. This is a great group of girls who have been really accepting and made the transition a lot easier,” Robertson said.

Four CSI baseball players sign at four-year schools

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Four of the College of Southern Idaho baseball team’s most important players from 2010 won’t have to deal with the distraction of trying to gain attention from four-year schools in the 2011 season.

Three Golden Eagle pitchers — staff ace Mike Renner, setup man Tyler Duffin and closer Travis Huber — and catcher Parker Morin confirmed Thursday their signings to continue their college baseball careers after they leave CSI next summer.

Duffin

Huber

Morin

Renner

“It’s definitely a lot of stress that’s gone,” Morin said about signing before the new season starts.

Renner (North Florida), Huber (Nebraska) and Morin (Utah) all signed this week with NCAA Division I programs, while Duffin inked last month with Lewis-

Clark State College, a NAIA program that’s as good as they come outside of the NCAA’s top tier. The NAIA doesn’t have the same signing periods as the NCAA, which saw its one-week early period for all sports but football close on Wednesday.

Morin committed to Utah in August after hitting .255 with two home runs and 20 RBIs during his freshman season. The bulky catcher finished his prep career at nearby Park City, making the Utes an easy fit.

Utah will switch conferences during the summer, joining what will be called the Pac-12 conference along with Colorado and the current members of the Pac-10. It will be a step up from the Mountain West for the baseball program, but Morin said he’s looking forward to the challenge.

“I’m really excited to get to go face all that good pitching (as a hitter),” he said. “I’m looking forward to the road trips to a lot of those new places, too.”

Huber was drafted by the Florida Marlins late on Day 3 of the Major League Baseball amateur draft in June, but didn’t sign with the club as he wanted to improve his draft stock for 2011.

The stout, hard-throwing stopper dealt with shoulder trouble during the summer and into the fall. While that put off a handful of other schools, the Cornhuskers remained committed and Huber returned the sentiment in September after his one and only official visit.

“It was just an overwhelming visit, and I knew it was the right place for me,” Huber said of joining a program that like Utah is changing conferences. Nebraska will join the dozen-strong Big Ten, leaving the Big 12.

Duffin was the Scenic West Athletic Conference’s reliever of the year a season ago, leading the league with a 1.06 ERA in 34 innings pitched. He went 1-2 with two saves.

6:50 left in the half, but went more than 4 minutes without scoring and Sullivan ripped off a 13-0 run, taking its first lead at 35-34 on a Cleanthony Early 3-pointer with 3:31 left in the half.

"We just got comfortable and thought we had the game," said Jackson, who scored 17 points. "They came back and gave us a run for our money."

CSI trailed 61-58 midway through the second half before Jackson scored four quick points to ignite a 10-0 spurt that put CSI up for good. Jerrold Brooks, who finished with a game-high 23 points and knocked down five treys, hit some key triples as the Eagles pulled away.

But the big key down the stretch was defense. Mitch Bruneel and Kenny Buckner each had blocks, the Eagles forced a shot clock violation and Fabyon Harris took a charge. Darius Smith also snatched a few of his seven steals.

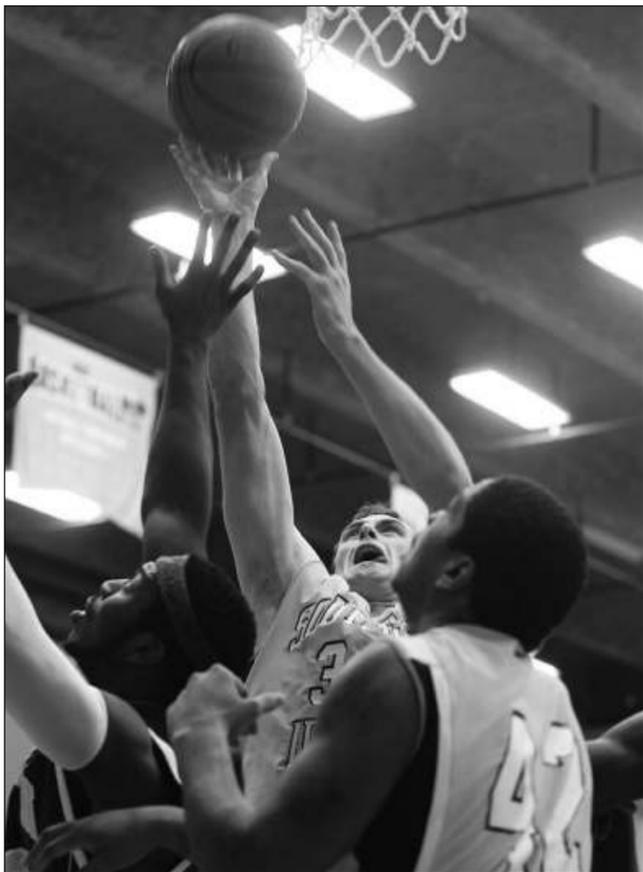

"We just stayed down and made them score over us and through us," said Gosar. "When we do that, teams don't get the good looks they get when we're gambling."

Sullivan County (4-1) got 22 points, 11 assists and eight rebounds from point guard Dashawn Joyner, while Kenneth Bradshaw added 17 points. Early had an 11-point, 12-rebound night before fouling out.

CSI hosts Taag Academy at 8 p.m. today and hopes to start fast and keep rolling from there.

"When we get off to that lead in the beginning, we need to keep pushing it," said Bruneel, who had 12 points and 11 boards.

Added Jackson: "We finally came out swinging.

CSI women stumble in Texas

Times-News

The eighth-ranked College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team needed certain things go right because of its size disadvantage against No. 9 Midland (Texas) Thursday in the opener of a weekend tournament in Texas.

They didn't.

Nety Sousa scored 18 and added nine rebounds to lead four Midland players in double figures as the host team cruised to a 79-62 win over CSI.

Jessi Cowden added 16 points, while Lindsay Ansley had 12 and Tanica Anderson scored 10.

"With their size they got some easy buckets inside. We tried to help but they're pretty deadly from the perimeter too," said CSI coach Randy Rogers. "It's just a tough matchup for us. We're going to get better, but to put us at No. 8 in the country was overranking us a little. That's just not where we're at right now."

Guili El-Mir led CSI with 13 points, while Laurel Kearsley had 12 and seven rebounds. Taylor Altenburg had 10 to crack double figures for the Golden Eagles.

CSI trailed just 32-29 at the half but a 14-point second-half scoring edge paced Midland to the win, on the strength of a 63-45 rebound advantage.

The Golden Eagles shot just 28.2 percent from the field, and 60 percent from the foul line.

CSI plays Cloud County, Kan., today at 3 p.m. MST on the second day of the tournament. While the Golden Eagles match up better with today's opponent than Midland, Rogers cautioned that nothing was easy in this field.

"All eight teams are amazing," he said.

the Bruins' bench: Brylee Bartlett (10), Caitlyn Neville (2) and Alex Simmons (4).

The unit, including senior Alexin Clark, played most of the second half after the Bruins took a 45-9 lead into halftime.

"Our bench is stacked," Clark said. "We showed tonight that we can get in there in a game if our starters get tired and not miss a beat. Tonight was a good opportunity to practice our plays and learn how to play with each other."

In limited playing time, senior Jazlyn Nielsen led the Bruins with 13 points and Mallory Jund added 11.

Allie Kelsey scored 10 to give the Bruins five players in double figures.

Buhl struggled to get open looks all night and turned the ball over 24 times.

Katherine Hunter led the Indians with seven points.

First-year coach Kaleen Goedhart said the team will have some growing pains early in the season.

"We knew tonight would be tough for us. Twin Falls is a great team," Goedhart said. "We're still learning and are going to struggle a bit here in the beginning of the season, but we will turn it around."

Buhl (0-1) hosts Declo on Tuesday, while Twin Falls (3-0) hosts Minico tonight in Great Basin Conference play action.

Bears shut out Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — The Chicago Bears had a ready response for Brandon Marshall's taunting.

Julius Peppers and a swarming defense allowed only 187 yards and a single third-down conversion Thursday night, and the Bears won 16-0 to send the injury-ravaged Miami Dolphins to their second home shutout in 40 years.

Marshall drew a flag for taunting when he flipped the ball at former Denver teammate Jay Cutler, standing in front of the Bears bench. Marshall also was penalized for an illegal block and dropped two passes before he left the game in the second quarter after aggravating a sore right hamstring.

Miami's already depleted offensive line lost center Cory Procter with a left knee injury. And with third-string quarterback Tyler Thigpen taking six sacks in his first NFL start since 2008, the Dolphins were no match for a Bears defense that took over the NFL lead in points allowed per game.

Playing in Miami for the first time since losing Super Bowl 41 to Indianapolis, the Bears (7-3) won for the third time in 12 days and moved a half-game ahead of Green Bay atop the NFC North.

The Dolphins (5-5) lost at home in prime time for the third time this season.

Peppers had three sacks for the Bears, who earned their first shutout since Nov. 19, 2006, against the Jets. The Dolphins were blanked for the first time since a 3-0 loss at Pittsburgh during their one-win season in 2007. Their only other home shutout since the first year of the Don Shula era came in 2001.

Matt Forte carried 25 times

Chicago Bears defensive back Daniel Manning (38) celebrates after a pass was broken up during the Bears' game against the Miami Dolphins on Thursday in Miami.

for 97 yards and a score for the Bears, who converted 10 of 18 third-down situations and controlled the ball for nearly 38 minutes. Miami went 1 for 12 on third down.

A 46-yard kickoff return to start the game gave the Dolphins their best scoring threat. They moved inside the Bears 35 for the first time on the game's final play.

Thigpen, pressed into duty after Chad Pennington and Chad Henne were hurt in Sunday's game, finished 17 for 29 for 187 yards, and he had 27 of the Dolphins' 39 yards rushing. But he found himself scrambling often and fell to 1-11 as an NFL starter.

With 2 minutes left, the crowd was down to mostly Chicago fans, and they chanted "Let's go Bears!" as the clock wound down. The chant continued after the game.

Robbie Gould put Chicago ahead 9-0 by finishing three short drives with field goals, one after the Bears' NFL-best 25th takeaway this season. A 7½-minute touchdown drive midway through the second half sealed the win, with Forte running 2 yards up the middle to score standing up on third down.

AFC sack leader Cameron Wake reached Cutler on third down in the opening period, which forced the Bears to settle for a 46-yard field goal.

The Bears got the ball back when Charles Tillman intercepted a tipped pass, and Gould kicked a 24-yarder for a 6-0 lead.

Hawaii in talks to join MWC for football

HONOLULU (AP) — The University of Hawaii says it's in talks to join the Mountain West conference for football.

School President M.R.C. Greenwood said Thursday the Mountain West Conference has asked the school to enter discussions about membership.

Hawaii has been part of the Western Athletic Conference for 32 years, but it could become the latest school to bolt for the Mountain West, joining Boise State, Nevada and Fresno State.

The WAC announced last week it would add Texas-San Antonio, Texas State and the University of Denver. Denver doesn't have a football team.

Other WAC members are San Jose State, Idaho, New Mexico State, Louisiana Tech and Utah State.

Washington grinds past listless UCLA

SEATTLE — Jake Locker scored on a 3-yard run in the first half, and Quinton Richardson returned an interception 28 yards for a touchdown with 6:22 left to help Washington keep its bowl hopes alive with an ugly 24-7 win over UCLA on Thursday night.

With Locker trying to protect a cracked rib, the Huskies (4-6, 3-4 Pac-10) turned to the combo of running back Chris Polk and freshman Jesse Callier. Polk carried 25 times for a career-high 138 yards and capped the second-best night of his career with a 2-yard TD plunge with 4:24 left.

Callier added 110 yards as the Huskies ran for a season-high 253 yards against the Bruins (4-6, 2-5).

Erik Folk kicked a 27-yard field goal on the first possession of the second half to give Washington a 10-7 lead. That remained in jeopardy until Richardson stepped in front of Darius Bell's pass.

Playing a prime-time Thursday game, the Huskies broke out all black uniforms for the first time in school history, even going as far as painting the end zones of Husky Stadium black.

They might want to consider doing it again.

In the final home game of his career, Locker was just 10 of 21 passing for 68 yards and an interception. He carried just four times for 9 yards as Washington coach Steve Sarkisian tried to protect the quarterback's tender ribs that kept him on the sideline Nov. 6 against Oregon.

Locker left to a huge ovation with 2 minutes remaining, replaced by freshman Keith Price.

But Washington's run game did more than enough to the Huskies' bowl hopes alive. Washington need to win at California on Nov. 27 and in the Apple Cup at Washington State on Dec. 4 to get the six wins needed to become bowl eligible.

Meanwhile, UCLA's hopes of going to a bowl game for the second straight season took a major hit.

NO. 10 ALABAMA 63, GEORGIA ST. 7

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Greg McElroy completed 12 of 13 passes for 159 yards and two touchdowns and No. 10 Alabama routed fledgling Georgia State 63-7 on Thursday night.

It was the most points for the Crimson Tide (9-2) since a 66-3 win over Vanderbilt in 1979.

The game against a Football Championship Subdivision team competing in its first year of college football was predictably little more than a warmup for next week's showdown with No. 2 Auburn. The Panthers (6-5) are led by former Tide coach Bill Curry, who was more accustomed to being on the other side of Bryant-Denny Stadium abuse.

McElroy set an Alabama single-game completion percentage mark of 92.3 with a minimum of 10 attempts. Mark Ingram ran for 86 yards and a touchdown and Julio Jones caught seven passes for 86 yards and two scores before the stars yielded to the backups in the second quarter.

Hamilton leads Texas to OT win over Illinois

NEW YORK — Jordan Hamilton scored 25 points and Texas scored the first eight points of overtime in a 90-84 victory over No. 13 Illinois on Thursday night in the semifinals of the 2K Sports Classic.

Freshman Tristan Thompson had 20 points for the Longhorns (3-0) and Gary Johnson finished with 16, including four in the opening run of overtime.

Texas will play No. 5 Pittsburgh in tonight's championship game of the tournament that benefits Cancer. The Panthers advanced with a 79-70 victory over Maryland at Madison Square Garden.

Demetri McCamey had 22 points to lead Illinois (3-1).

NO. 3 KANSAS STATE 76, PRESBYTERIAN 67

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Jacob Pullen scored 15 points, leading No. 3 Kansas State to a tough, 76-67 victory over Presbyterian on Thursday night.

Up 14 at the half, Kansas State (3-0) couldn't shake Presbyterian. The Blue Hose (0-2) opened the half with 13-7 run and then kept chipping away. Jake Troyli and Khalid Mutakbbir hit 3-point shots to cut the Wildcats' lead to 63-60 with 9:35 to play.

NO. 5 PITTSBURGH 79, MARYLAND 70

NEW YORK — Freshman Talib Zanna had 14 points and 12 rebounds to lead No. 5 Pittsburgh to a 79-70 victory over Maryland on Thursday night in the semifinals of the 2K Sports Classic.

The 6-foot-9 Zanna, who averaged 8.3 points and 8.0 rebounds in his first three games, led the Panthers (4-0) on a night when their backcourt of Ashton Gibbs and Brad Wanamaker barely combined to match the 19.3 average they both came in with.

NO. 8 NORTH CAROLINA 107, HOFSTRA 63

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Harrison Barnes scored 19 points in No. 8 North Carolina's win in the opening round of the Puerto Rico Tip-Off.

Barnes made all four 3-point attempts and scored all his points in the first half to help the Tar Heels (2-0) storm out to a 25-point lead.

NO. 9 FLORIDA 105, N. CAROLINA A&T 55

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Chandler Parsons and Kenny Boynton led eight players in double figures with 16 points apiece, and No. 9 Florida beat North Carolina A&T.

The Gators bounced back from an 18-point loss two nights earlier to fourth-ranked Ohio State and eclipsed the 100-point mark for the first time since 2007.

NO. 15 MISSOURI 66, W. ILLINOIS 61

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Laurence Bowers had nine points, 10 rebounds and four blocked shots, and No. 15 Missouri overcame opener free throw shooting in its opener to hold off Western Illinois.

Phil Pressey, Marcus Denmon and Steve Moore also had nine points apiece for Missouri (1-0), which won its 48th consecutive non-conference home game despite going only 14 for 27 from the line.

NO. 17 BAYLOR 63, JACKSON ST. 49

WACO, Texas — Star freshman Perry Jones had 20 points and eight rebounds, helping 17th-ranked Baylor beat Jackson State.

Fred Ellis hit a 3-pointer on the game's first shot and the Bears (3-0) never trailed. But they had 26 turnovers in a sporadic performance in their last game before the return of suspended guard LaceDarius Dunn.

NO. 20 GEORGETOWN 80, COASTAL CAROLINA 61

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Jason Clark hit five 3-pointers and scored 22 points for No. 20 Georgetown.

Georgetown improved to 3-0 for the fourth straight season and nearly shot the Chanticleers (2-2) out of Carolina First Arena, going 14 of 30 from behind the arc.

Nash sits out while Magic roll past Suns

ORLANDO, Fla. — Jameer Nelson had 15 points and a season-high 12 assists, and the Orlando Magic easily handled a Phoenix Suns team playing without Steve Nash in a 105-89 win on Thursday night.

Dwight Howard added 20 points and 12 rebounds, and every starter scored in double digits for the Magic, who built a 32-point lead and blew past the Suns from the opening tip.

Orlando (8-3) has won three straight.

With Nash sidelined because of a sore groin, backup point guard Goran Dragic had 10 points, four assists and four rebounds.

Grant Hill scored 21 points in the lone bright spot for the Suns, who lost on consecutive nights in Florida by a combined 43 points. Phoenix (6-6) was routed by 27 a night earlier at Miami.

Suns coach Alvin Gentry said Nash probably could have played but there was no reason to push the injury this early in the season, especially with Phoenix playing its fourth game in five nights. Gentry said he expects to have Nash back in the starting lineup Saturday at Charlotte.

And could they ever have used him.

The Suns were embarrassed and exposed for the second straight night, and their flaws shined even brighter in Orlando without Nash. They had no flow offensively and played with a slow and stagnant pace that never resembled their usual up-tempo style.

Undersized and undermanned, Phoenix was forced to double-team Howard, freeing Orlando's shooters for wide-open looks. Before the first quarter even ended, the Magic made four 3-pointers — two from Vince Carter and one each from Quentin Richardson and Mickael Pietrus — to sprint out to a 31-12 lead.

PACERS 107, CLIPPERS 80

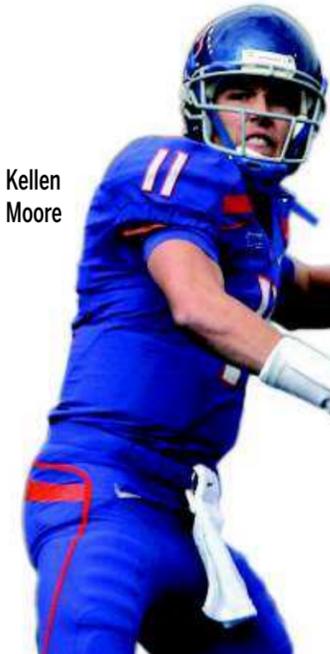

INDIANAPOLIS — Danny Granger scored 22 points and Roy Hibbert had 18 points and eight rebounds for short-handed Indiana.

Brandon Rush and A.J. Price each added 14 points for the Pacers, who shot 51 percent from the field to make up for the absence of starters Darren Collison and Mike Dunleavy. Collison sat out with a sprained ankle, while Dunleavy missed the game because his wife was in labor.

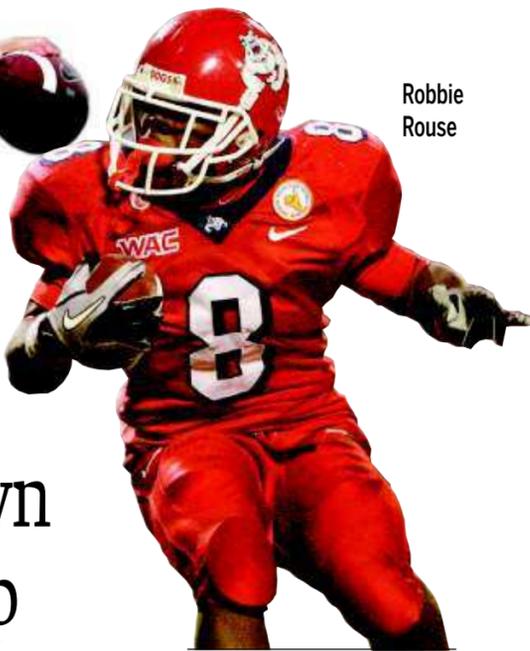

Indianapolis native Eric Gordon had 19 points and Blake Griffin added 12 for the Clippers.

Fresno State at No. 3 Boise State

Kellen
Moore

Robbie Rouse

Breaking down the matchup

7:30 p.m. (ESPN2)

Line: Boise State by 30.

Series Record: Boise State leads 8-4.

Last Meeting: 2009, Boise State 51-34.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

Oregon, Auburn and TCU are resting this week, leaving the national stage to Boise State (9-0, 5-0 WAC) as it continues pitching its case for BCS inclusion. Boise State has won eight of its last nine against Fresno State, the only setback a 27-7 loss in Fresno in 2005. The Bulldogs (6-3, 4-2) had won three straight and four of five overall before falling 35-34 at home last week to No. 19 Nevada.

KEY MATCHUP

Fresno State's run game vs. Boise State's defensive front. The Bulldogs are averaging 180 yards per game on the ground, 35th in the country, highlighted by the efforts the past two weeks of sophomore Robbie Rouse (503 yards in those two games). Getting that many won't be easy against a Broncos defense that ranks second in the country in yards rushing allowed.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Fresno State: Rouse has written himself into the Fresno State record books. He rumbled for 286 yards against Louisiana Tech, the second-highest total in school history, then had 217 last week against Nevada. Another huge day is just what the Bulldogs need.

Boise State: QB Kellen Moore can officially take hold of every major passing record in school history, needing 209 yards to surpass Ryan Dinwiddie for the most yards passing in school history. Moore is likely to hit 10,000 by the end of the regular season.

FACTS & FIGURES

Boise State is the highest ranked team Fresno State has played since nearly upsetting No. 1 USC during the 2005 season. ... Fresno State DE Chris Carter and DT Logan Harrell are tied for sixth in the country with nine sacks each. ... Boise State has led for 481 straight minutes, dating to the fourth quarter of its opener against Virginia Tech.

Boise State

The one weak spot in the Boise State offense as of late has been at tight end.

With the season-ending injury to Tommy Gallarda, Boise State hinted that defensive end Ryan Winterswyk might see a growing role at tight end after playing him in that position sparingly against Idaho last week.

While Boise State and Fresno State will meet for the last time as WAC conference foes, the Broncos continue to torch the conference record book — and Fresno State would like to put a stop to the unprecedented winning streak.

But Petersen insists those records are meaningless to him and his team.

"I think more so than rewriting records, we're just trying to win another WAC championship," Petersen said. "I think that's where all our focus is. It's going to come down to two hard games for sure."

Pressure on points leader Hamlin going into finale

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Look out, Denny Hamlin. Jimmie Johnson and Kevin Harvick are right behind you — and they're making sure you know it.

With the title up for grabs in Sunday's season finale, Johnson and Harvick are doing their best to turn up the heat on NASCAR's points leader.

Johnson, the four-time defending series champion, was his usual model of California cool during Thursday's news conference to preview the closest title race in Chase for the Sprint Cup championship history.

Harvick was his typically mischievous self, facing every question with blunt honesty and never passing on an opportunity to needle the competition — well, mostly just Hamlin.

"This has been one of the most awkward 30 minutes

"For us, I mean, we have nothing to lose.

This guy does."

— Jimmie Johnson, talking about Denny Hamlin

I've been through," Hamlin squirmed about halfway through the session.

Stuck on a podium between the two drivers trying to stop him from winning his first NASCAR title, Hamlin didn't participate in the generally good-natured — but pointed — mudslinging being tossed at him from both sides.

What a way for Hamlin to spend his 30th birthday!

"He definitely seems like the most nervous," Harvick said, nodding at Hamlin.

"For us, I mean, we have nothing to lose. This guy does," Johnson said, putting his arm around Hamlin.

On and on it went for more than an hour, as reading body language became important during the many awkward silences.

Harvick made at least two jokes about Hamlin using the same carburetor he had last week in Phoenix, when his car was unable to make it to the finish on fuel. The gaffe cost Hamlin a more sizable lead in the standings heading into Sunday's race at Homestead-Miami Speedway.

Had Hamlin not needed to make a late fuel stop, he likely would have taken a lead of almost 60 points into the finale. Instead, he's up by 15 over Johnson and 46 over Harvick in the closest race since the Chase made its debut in 2004.

Hamlin recognized the lost opportunity immediately after Sunday's race, and still showed the marks of his frustration four days later.

"It was frustrating for a little while. I got the bloody knuckles to prove it," he said. "We're all going to have emotions on those kind of days."

He insisted, though, there are no lingering issues from the disappointment in the desert and he came to Miami with a clear head, focused on the task at hand.

"When I said I was leaving Phoenix, I left Phoenix, it was over with," he said. "It was completely over with. The only time I relived it is when I got home, I do my normal thing, always rewatch the races no matter what to learn as much as I can.

"Once that I was done, turned the TV off, thought about it a little bit before I went to bed. When I woke up the next day, just kept myself busy."

combinations and what he does, that's part of understanding your position."

His mixture of quickness and strength have caught the eye of NFL scouts. Lavarias — who graduated with an accounting degree last spring — has heard favorable things about his prospects for the next level, most likely as an outside linebacker.

Ena, among others, doesn't doubt Lavarias' potential.

"With the work ethic that young man has, he can do anything," Ena said. "When you embrace things, when you've got a guy who's going to work his tail off to do everything right, he's going to succeed."

King Felix!

Seattle Mariners starting pitcher Felix Hernandez won the AL Cy Young Award for the American League's best pitcher, winning by an easy margin in results released Thursday by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Hernandez wins AL Cy Young

NEW YORK (AP) — For once, Felix Hernandez got all the support he needed for a big win.

The Seattle ace earned the AL Cy Young Award on Thursday despite a modest 13-12 record. His major league-leading 2.27 ERA and superior stats put him far ahead of Tampa Bay's David Price and the Yankees' CC Sabathia and their impressive win-loss numbers.

Victimized by the Mariners' poor hitting all season, Hernandez found ample backing with the voters in this pitchers' duel. They clearly recognized how little the last-place Mariners helped him — in 10 starts, they were either shut out and held to one run.

"This confirms the Cy Young is an award not only for the pitcher with the most wins, but the most dominant," a teary-eyed Hernandez said while celebrating with relatives at the family home in Valencia, Venezuela.

King Felix got 21 of the 28 first-place votes and 167 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America. The 24-year-old right-hander led the league in innings (249 2-3), was second in strikeouts (232) and held AL opponents to the lowest batting average (.212).

Price, who went 19-6 with a 2.72 ERA, was second with four first-place votes and 111 points. Sabathia, who was 21-7 with a 3.18 ERA, drew the other three first-place votes and finished third at 102.

"I feel like they got it right," Price said on a conference call from Nashville, Tenn. "Felix, I thought he deserved it, even though he didn't have a lot of wins. You can't really control all that. You can't control the offense, and the hitters and stuff like that."

"The numbers he put up — those were pretty ridiculous numbers outside of the won-loss column," he said. "I feel as if Felix was on a different team — if he was on the Yankees or something like that — he's going to win quite a few ballgames."

The 13 wins by Hernandez marked the fewest for a Cy Young starter in a full season — Tim Lincecum set the record last year with 15 victories for San Francisco.

Fernando Valenzuela won the NL award in strike-shortened 1981 after going 13-7. His mark of six games over .500 had been the lowest for any Cy starter until Hernandez.

"It's not only the wins, it's the whole stats," Hernandez said.

A month after the All-Star break, Hernandez appeared to be a long shot for the award.

He was 8-10 on Aug. 15 after 26 starts, but a debate had already begun to brew about his Cy Young candidacy. Many fans who rely more traditional numbers — win-loss record for pitchers — didn't think he rated at the top of the list.

Others who count on baseball's newer math pointed at how well Hernandez had done on the things he could fully command. He led AL pitchers in a stat that matters a lot to the sabermetricians of the sport — Wins Above Replacement.

Pop Warner: Doctor's OK needed for concussed kids

The Associated Press

Pop Warner, the nation's oldest and largest youth football organization, is requiring a note from a doctor before letting anyone who's suffered a head injury back on the field.

"It takes all the pressure off a coach," said Jon Butler, Pop Warner's executive director. "There is no decision — the child is out until being signed off by a trained medical professional."

The organization also announced Thursday the creation of a national medical advisory board. The chairman is Dr. Julian Bailes, who works with the NFL Players Association on concussion-related issues and is chairman of neurosurgery at West Virginia University's medical school.

"The NFL, NCAA and national federation for high schools have all made changes, and we want to carry that down to youth football," Bailes said. "We want to be responsible and responsive."

Lavarias

Lavarias is more exasperated than anyone by the defensive swoon, but he remains a standout along the line.

Last week, he chased Moore around the field numerous times and had a sack wiped away by a personal foul penalty after getting his index finger caught in Moore's face mask. BSU has allowed just five sacks this season, so the missed opportunity still stings.

"After watching the film, I thought from the games we had on film, I thought we gave (Moore) the most pressure," Lavarias said. "We were in his face for the most part of the game."

Lavarias has matured under Akey and his staff's tutelage while maintaining what coaches and teammate describe as a good-natured, always-upbeat personality. He shared a laugh last week with Akey over the coach's bobblehead doll — given away to fans before the Nevada game.

Lavarias made sure his mom, Kerstin, came early enough to the Kibbie Dome to snag one of the bobbleheads for herself and her son.

"He's one of those guys that just has fun on every play during the game," defensive tackle Michael Cosgrove said. "He has a lot of competitiveness and a lot of compassion for it. He's not one of the guys out there looking at the score."

After redshirting in 2006, Lavarias began his career at defensive tackle because the Vandals were short on bodies up front. He still values those two years inside, even against interior lineman much bigger than him.

But Lavarias didn't complain when the coaches made the switch last fall, putting him at end to take advantage of his speed and power on the edge.

"He has a deceptive speed rush," defensive line coach Eti Ena said. "And he can go to speed to power fast. So his

While it doesn't carry the same clout as a NCAA Division I label would provide, LCSC has a baseball pedigree that few can match. The perennial NAIA powerhouse hosts that level's World Series on a yearly basis and had 11 players drafted in the 2010 MLB draft.

"They've got history. The coaching staff is great and the talent is beyond any other NAIA program," Duffin said. "It's going to be a definite test for me."

Renner anchored CSI's rotation last season with a 7-6 record that belied his real impact. The Chatsworth, Calif., product posted a 2.09 ERA with seven complete games and 76 strikeouts in 90 1-3 innings pitched. He also threw a no-hitter.

The small, crafty south-paw hasn't even visited North Florida yet, but he said he didn't need to. Michael Wesner, a current UNF player and a member of CSI's 2010 team, did all the convincing Renner needed to sign for the school sight unseen.

"He did everything," Renner said of the former CSI first baseman. "He told me how much he loved it down there and how he's having a great time, and how the weather was really helping him (physically). It's going to be a lot of fun."

Our "Cat and Kitten Special" is going on now.

Cats and kittens are half price or $26.50. They are spayed or neutered, vaccinated for Feline Leukemia combo, wormed, and a rabies shot.

WHY ADOPT FROM A SHELTER AND PAY A PET ADOPTION FEE?

It may be tempting to look for a free pet in your local classifieds rather than pay a pet adoption fee. But the reality is, no pet is free: You'll be responsible for their spaying or neutering, vet care, food and supplies for the rest of her life. Pet adoption fees vary by organization, but often cover the basic veterinary care you would have to pay for with your "free" pet.

Where does my adoption fee go?

Ask your local shelter, but fees usually include:

- Spaying/neutering • Canine Distemper vaccination • Feline Leukemia combination vaccine • Rabies vaccination • Flea/tick treatment if needed

Chevrolet's popular Impala sedan continues to win customers and influence people for 2011 with a new Luxury Package. Combining a number of popular comfort and convenience items the new package includes a full year of XM Satellite Radio instead of the customary three-month trial; a Bose eight-speaker audio system; front bucket seats with leather appointments; front driver and passenger heated seats and a rear spoiler.

Available in LS, LT and LTZ trim levels, the Impala models have varied exterior trim cues that identify each model including unique 16-, 17- and 18-inch wheel designs. For 2011, body-color bodyside moldings are standard. A rear spoiler is standard on the LTZ model and included in the available LT models' Luxury Package.

Standard power for the Impala sedan is a FlexFuel-capable 3.5L V-6 engine. The LTZ is propelled by the 3.9L V6 prime mover which is also Flex-Fuel capable. This compatibility allows the engine to run on any combination of regular gasoline or E85 fuel. Torque for both Impala engines is communicated to the pavement via a Hydra-Matic 4T65 electronic four-speed automatic transmission. Upmarket 2LT and LTZ models feature StabiliTrak electronic stability control as standard equipment.

Quiet, smoothness and refinement are the ride and handling traits conveyed through Impala's chassis and suspension systems. This componentry includes: a robust front-end structure provides a firmer foundation to help reduce noise, vibration and harshness (NVH) while also enhancing steering and handling performance; fully boxed upper frame rail assemblies feature a wide, deep and structurally strong upper front tie bar; a strong front-of-dash panel is constructed of Quiet Steel laminated steel which reduces resonant sound; and an extruded aluminum engine cradle contributes to a vibration-free ride.

Front suspension hardware consists of an independent MacPherson strut coil-over-spring setup with gas-charged struts, taller jounce bumpers and a stabilizer bar. The rear suspension uses a trailing arm, tri-link set up with gas-charged struts, coil springs and a stabilizer bar. Based on the basic front and rear suspension designs, the Impala offers two levels of suspension tuning, each matched to the power and expected performance level of each model.

The base suspension tuning package is the FE1, which provides improved control over previous base models without compromising ride quality. It uses stiff, constant-rate front springs and variable-rate rear springs to provide higher roll rates. The Goodyear P225/60R16 Integrity radial tires are moved a 5-mm each outboard (10-mm total) for a wider track.

The Impala LTZ is equipped with a FE3 performance suspension which includes 18-inch W rated P235/50R18 performance tires. A 34-mm hollow front stabilizer bar and 19.4-mm solid rear stabilizer bar combine to provide more roll control than the standard FE1 suspension. The resulting increased stiffness helps reduce body lean and contributes to greater high-speed stability.

The Chevrolet sedan's instrument panel design wraps around into the door panels and has a double-hump design reminiscent of early Corvettes. A wood trimmed appearance is standard, while a sportier, brushed sterling-appearance trim is optional.

All of Impala's seating features clean, simple and tailored appearances. Firm cushions and good lumbar support across all models provides more comfort, especially during long drives. The LTZ model features clever flip-and-fold rear seats that consist of forward-flip rear seat cushions that create a covered storage area beneath the seat with the cushions down. When the cushions are flipped forward, they offer convenient grocery bag hooks. The seat back also folds down to create a generous pass-through from the trunk when seat back are folded flat – an exclusive feature in the midsize segment.

Today is Friday, Nov. 19, the 323rd day of 2010. There are 42 days left in the year.
Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 19, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address as he dedicated a national cemetery at the site of the Civil War battlefield in Pennsylvania.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1600, King Charles I of England was born in Dunfermline, Fife, Scotland.
In 1794, the United States and Britain signed Jay's Treaty, which resolved some issues left over from the Revolutionary War.
In 1831, the 20th president of the United States, James Garfield, was born in Orange Township, Ohio.
In 1919, the Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles (vehr-SY') by a vote of 55 in favor, 39 against, short of the two-thirds majority needed for ratification.
In 1942, during World War II, Russian forces launched their winter offensive against the Germans along the Don front.
In 1959, Ford Motor Co. announced it was halting production of the unpopular Edsel.
In 1969, Apollo 12 astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean made the second manned landing on the moon.

In 1977, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat became the first Arab leader to visit Israel.
In 1985, President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev met for the first time as they began their summit in Geneva.
In 1990, the pop duo Milli Vanilli were stripped of their Grammy Award because other singers had lent their voices to the "Girl You Know It's True" album.
Ten years ago: President Bill Clinton ended a historic visit to Vietnam. Attorney Charles Ruff, who'd represented President Clinton during the Monica Lewinsky scandal and his impeachment trial, died in Washington, D.C., at age 61.
Five years ago: Two dozen Iraqi men, women and children in Haditha were killed by U.S. Marines after a Marine was killed by a roadside bomb; the squad leader, Staff Sgt. Frank Wuterich, is awaiting trial on charges of voluntary manslaughter. President George W. Bush arrived in Beijing for talks with Chinese leaders. For the first time in 58 years, Indians legally walked into Pakistan after a landmark decision to temporarily open divided Kashmir's heavily militarized border following a major earthquake. Tropical Storm Gamma deluged the coast of Central America.
One year ago: President Barack Obama wrapped up his weeklong Asia trip in South Korea, where he said the United States had begun talking with allies about fresh punishment against Iran for defying efforts to halt its nuclear weapons pursuits. President Hamid Karzai pledged to get tough on corruption and strengthen security in Afghanistan as he started a second five-year term. Artist Jeanne-Claude, who helped create various "wrapping" projects with her husband Christo, died in New York at age 74.

IF NOVEMBER 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your attentions may shift to compassionate concerns in the year to come, as you become aware of the problems of others and your deepest social sympathies are aroused. Your center of focus could change drastically. In March and April, make no major decisions and do your best to avoid criticism. You may be forced to take on extra responsibilities, but don't use your credit card unless you absolutely must, as debts incurred then might be difficult to repay. Because you will be more sensitive to outside influences, it will be wise to learn how to boost your physical defenses by eating right.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): When you are struggling with unrealized dreams, it could be quite true that "the bigger they are, the harder they fall." You might fight to defend something that will prove to be unfounded or false.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The tried and true may turn into the trying. Old familiar routines could strain your energy levels and the people you thought trusted you might look at you with doubt. Don't make promises or commitments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can run aground over imaginary grievances. Steer clear of the fogbanks of confusion and maneuver toward what is perfectly clear. Pass up the offer of a blind date or introduction.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Watch for a sleight of hand act that involves cash or possessions. Personal negotiations could be subject to mild misunderstandings. Take papers home and read the fine print before signing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A closed mouth gathers no feet. Avoid misunderstandings that revolve around issues of trust. You can't talk your way into someone's good graces, so don't make excuses. A true soul mate will tolerate eccentricities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not let fears or sympathies affect your attitude. This isn't the time to lose sight of the facts or to miss a deadline. The computer or new technology may help you conquer a minor lingering problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Those in close connection could give you a bum steer or attack a sacred cow. Vagueness can lead to confusion and misunderstandings. Hold off on signing important documents or agreements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't look the gift horse in the mouth. The answer to all your prayers might be there for the taking. This is a time when you should go along with the crowd and accept public opinion as gospel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't dabble in dubious investments. You might spend money just to prove what a "savvy" person you are. Refusing to reveal your true intentions can cause a great deal of mistrust and confusion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A look-before-you-leap attitude can be your saving grace. Smile when things go your way or an opportunity knocks at your door. But wait until late next week to put things into motion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take on a gentle challenge. Someone might adopt a fighting attitude. Don't offend the one you love, or leave old friends in the dust, when you speed off in search of adventure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There is a potential for puzzlement. Take a deep breath and go slowly with the unfamiliar or when faced with unfulfilled fantasies. Busy people can waste time hunting for car keys or misplaced files.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Among other evils which being unarmed brings you, it causes you to be despised."

— Niccolo Macchiavelli

Today's deal, from a tournament in England, saw declarer playing well against challenging defense.

South's four-spade bid was slightly aggressive, but he was hoping to find four-card trump support opposite, plus club shortage. Quite often you do not need many more than half the points in the deck to have some play for 10 tricks, especially when you have a nine-card fit and when the bidding has given you some clues you can use in the play.

West led the heart eight, won with dummy's ace. This was revealing, since it marked East with all the missing heart honors, thus placing the diamond ace with West. So at trick two declarer ran the diamond nine to West's queen.

West now found the best switch to a trump, and declarer drew three rounds ending in the dummy. He then played a diamond to his 10 and West's ace. West got off play with a heart, ruffed by declarer, who cashed his diamond king to make sure he had extracted all of West's exit cards. In the five-card ending, a low club toward the jack finished West off. He had to go in with the queen and was left with nothing but clubs. He was forced to exit with the club king, to South's ace. Now, since South had the 9-8 of clubs left, he could take a marked ruffing finesse against West's 10 to set up his 10th winner for himself.

ANSWER: A raise to three diamonds (sometimes described as a courtesy raise) will achieve two things. It will make it harder for the opponents to venture into your auction and will keep the bidding open in case all your partner needed to know about was your trump support. You would perhaps like to do more, but you have no convenient way to invite without going past the safety of three diamonds.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 33-year-old male who has finally found the love of my life. My girlfriend and I have been together for three years. Needless to say, an engagement is right around the corner. I have a sister who has struggled her entire life dating the wrong men. She's beautiful inside and out. She called me last night crying, asking me why men always cheat on her. Most people would assume that the use of the word "always" is an exaggeration. I would have to say that 90 percent of her boyfriends, have indeed, cheated on her one way or another — whether it was in high school, or when she dated a race car driver or, more recently, an acquaintance of mine. What can I say to reassure her that there are some good guys left in this world who won't cheat?

LOOKING FOR ANSWERS FOR SIS

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR LOOKING FOR ANSWERS: Tell your sister that there are men with character who take relationships seriously. They may not be as glamorous as a race car driver, or flashy or glib, but they have more important qualities to offer. Point out that when one man after another is unfaithful, it can damage a woman's self-esteem. And when that happens it can make her insecure and willing to suspend her better judgment out of fear that she'll be alone. Explain that women with high self-esteem receive more respect because they won't settle for less, and that they don't jump into relationships — they wait for a man to prove himself. Men value more highly what they have to work for. Perhaps that will help to set her straight.

DEAR ABBY: I have lived an amazing life surrounded by family, friends and loved ones. My parents and maternal grandparents are still active in my daily life. Because I am so close to all of them I'm scared, worried and sometimes downright depressed at the thought of losing any of them.

I know in the circle of life, death should be accepted as the next great adventure, but I don't know if I can handle that. I'm asking for advice on how to handle these events now. I do not have family near me but an amazing circle of friends for support. I just know that I'm going to slip into a world of sadness that I'm afraid I won't come out of. My problems may seem minor in light of today's issues, but I do need guidance.

SELFISH IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR SELFISH: The concerns you are feeling are not "selfish." They are normal, if somewhat premature. You are fortunate to have your parents and grandparents in your life — if only through phone calls and e-mails. You are also lucky to have supportive friends nearby. The hardest part of grieving the loss of a loved one is regret about words that were never said. So tell your parents and grandparents often how much you love and appreciate them. See them when you can. And continue to be the kind of person of whom they can be proud, because when they are gone, YOU will be their legacy.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me how to tell my husband of 25 years, who has different political views than mine, to shut up during news shows and comedies and mysteries I watch on MY TV — not his — within earshot of his office. He insists on coming in while I'm trying to concentrate and blasting his views whether I want to hear them or not.

FRUSTRATED IN DAYTON, OHIO

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You can't completely ignore your husband's rants — but when you're trying to devote your attention to one of your favorite TV shows, some headphones might lessen the distraction. Contact your local electronics store for suggestions.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Idaho Transportation Department (ITD) announces the availability of FY13 Safe Routes to School funding. Today, fewer than 15 percent of children who live within a mile of school walk or bike, while 30 years ago almost 66 percent of children did both. During the past 30 years children's activity levels have also decreased, this has resulted in an increase in obesity and associated illnesses like Type II diabetes, asthma and hypertension. As a result, this is the first generation of children who have a shorter lifespan than their parents. A 2009 report that studied childhood obesity levels indicates that rates are reaching epidemic proportions with 30 percent of children being overweight. The study also indicates that 26.5 percent of children ages 10 to 17 in Idaho are considered overweight or obese. The decline in children walking to school has contributed to the reduction in children's activity levels, the deterioration in air quality and increased traffic congestion; studies show that 25 percent of morning traffic can be attributed to parents driving children to school. To reverse this trend, in 2005 the Federal government funded the Safe Routes to School program. The ITD receives funding that allows locals to apply for projects that make bicycling and walking to school a safer and more appealing option for K-8 Grade students. SR2S projects are based on the principals of the "5 E's". Education to teach safe pedestrian and bicycling practices, Encouragement efforts to motivate children to walk and bike, Enforcement support of local efforts, Evaluation of projects, and Engineering to make the route to school safer. Projects are selected through a statewide competitive application process. Proposals may request funds for infrastructure projects and education combined, or for non-infrastructure only programs that focus on education combined with encouragement efforts. All proposals must demonstrate the ability to increase the safety and number of students walking and biking to K-8G schools, and have the necessary local partnerships in place to make it possible. The SR2S program is a reimbursement program, not a traditional grant program. No local matching funds are required. SR2S projects must comply with all Federal-Aid (FA) requirements of Title 23.

- Maximum of $100,000 is available for infrastructure, education and encouragement combined projects, they must be submitted to the ITD District office by March 1, 2011.
- Maximum of $50,000 is available for education and encouragement only projects; they must be submitted March 31, 2011 to ITD Headquarters.

NOTICE OF REGULAR MEETING AND PUBLIC HEARING BY THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF THE COUNTY OF JEROME TO CONSIDER THE AMENDED AND RESTATED JEROME COUNTY CROSSROADS URBAN RENEWAL PROJECT URBAN RENEWAL PLAN OF THE JEROME COUNTY URBAN RENEWAL AGENCY OF THE COUNTY OF JEROME

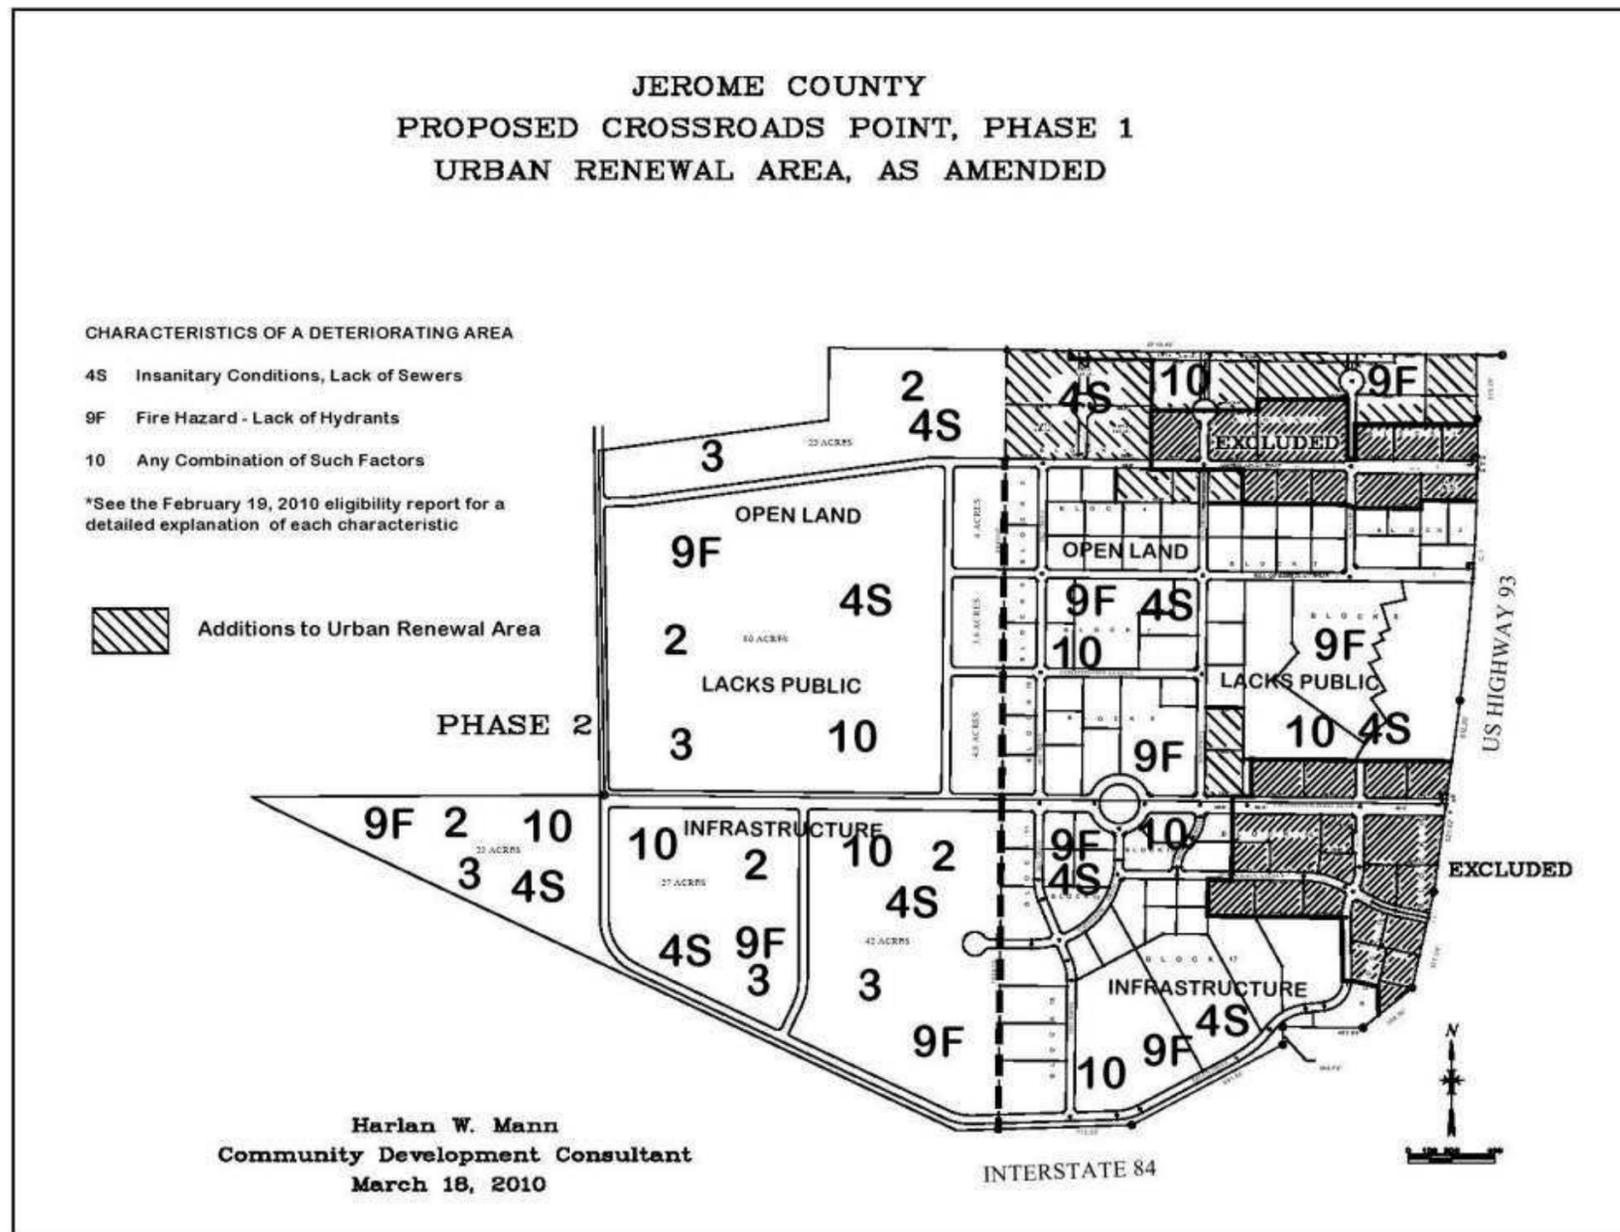

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the County Commissioners of the County of Jerome will hold during its regular meeting, a public hearing in County Commissioner Chambers, 300 N. Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, Idaho, 83338 on December 6, 2010, at 9:30 a.m., to consider the Amended and Restated Jerome County Crossroads Urban Renewal Project Urban Renewal Plan ("Plan"), of the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency. The boundaries of the Plan Area are hereinafter described. The boundaries include both urban renewal and revenue allocation areas. The Plan proposes that the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency (the "Agency") undertake urban renewal projects pursuant to the Idaho Urban Renewal Law of 1965, as amended. The Plan proposes to create an urban renewal area commonly referred to as the Amended and Restated Jerome County Crossroads Urban Renewal Project Area. The Plan being considered for adoption contains a revenue allocation financing provision pursuant to the Local Economic Development Act, Chapter 29, Title 50, Idaho Code, that will cause property taxes resulting from any increase in equalized assessed valuation in excess of the equalized assessed valuation as shown on the original base assessment roll, as of January 2008, and the additional area base assessment roll, as of January 2010, to be allocated to the Agency for urban renewal purposes, subject to certain exceptions as allowed by Idaho Code, Section 50-2908. The boundaries of the revenue allocation area are co-terminus with the urban renewal area. The Agency has adopted and recommended approval of the Plan. The County Commissioners will also be considering a final reading of an Ordinance to adopt the Plan.

The general scope and objectives of the Plan are:

1. The elimination of environmental deficiencies in the Project Area, including, among others, substandard or lack of streets and deteriorated and inadequate public improvements including certain streets, improvements, and extensions to connect major traffic corridors; improvements to public utilities including water and sewer improvements, fire protection systems, railroad crossings; other public improvements; removal, burying, or relocation of overhead utilities; and improvement of irrigation and drainage ditches and laterals;
2. The assembly of land into parcels suitable for modern, integrated development with improved pedestrian and vehicular circulation in the Project Area;
3. The replanning, redesign, and development of undeveloped or underdeveloped areas which are stagnant or improperly utilized because of excessive rock, limited traffic access, underserved utilities, and other site conditions;
4. The strengthening of the economic base of the Project Area and the community by the installation of needed site improvements to stimulate new private development providing, employment, and economic growth;
5. The provision of adequate land for street rights-of-way;
6. The construction and improvement of a major street corridor to allow traffic flows to move through the development along with the accompanying utility connections, through the Project Area;
7. The provision of public service utilities such as water system improvements, main sewer system improvements (which may be located outside the Project Area), and certain pretreatment improvements within the Project Area;
8. The establishment and implementation of performance criteria to assure high site design standards and environmental quality and other design elements which provide unity and integrity to the entire Project, including commitment of funds for planning studies, achieving high standards of development, and leveraging such development to achieve public objectives and efficient use of scarce resources;
9. The strengthening of the tax base by encouraging private development, thus increasing the assessed valuation of properties within the Revenue Allocation Area and the Project Area as a whole and benefiting the various taxing districts in which the urban renewal area is located; and
10. The funding of necessary public infrastructure to accommodate both public and private development.

Any such land uses as described in the Plan will be in conformance with zoning for the County of Jerome and the Comprehensive Land Use Plan as adopted by the County Commissioners. Land made available will be developed by private enterprises or public agencies as authorized by law. The Plan identifies various public and private improvements which may be made within the Urban Renewal Area.

The Urban Renewal Project Area and Revenue Allocation Area herein referred to is located generally as follows:
An area consisting of approximately 429.68 acres at the northwest quadrant of Interstate Highway 84 and United States Highway 93.
The project area is also depicted in the map below.

Copies of the proposed Plan are on file for public inspection and copying at the office of the County Clerk, Jerome County, 300 N. Lincoln, Room 301, Jerome, Idaho, 83338, between the hours of 8:30 o'clock a.m. and 4:30 o'clock p.m., Monday through Friday, exclusive of holidays.

The hearing will be held in a handicapped accessible facility. All information presented in the hearing shall also be available upon advance request in a form usable by persons with hearing or visual impairments, individuals with other disabilities may receive assistance by contacting the County 24 hours prior to the hearing.

At the time and place noted above, all persons interested in the above matters may appear and be heard. Written comments will also be accepted.
