For all his life, Vaughn Smith of Twin Falls worked and had never been laid off.

That changed this year. Smith, 44, was laid off from his job building recreational vehicles at Jayco in September, and turned to South Central Community Action Partnership for help in paying his utility bills.

This holiday season, he has plenty to be thankful for: the Twin Falls nonprofit also provided him with a box of Thanksgiving food and a job in its warehouse.

"It's helped me out so much," said Smith, who was helping load up families on Tuesday with packages of Thanksgiving turkey dinners.

There's still plenty of time to help the partnership, which offers help to the less fortunate in a variety of ways: assistance with housing and heating, home weatherization, food and aiding other efforts like the Toys for Tots program. Although Community Action doesn't provide Christmas-themed services, it has traditionally helped others who do through donating extra turkeys to other food distributors or helping wrap toys.

"People are really struggling and when you're trying to make the choice of what bill to pay, sooner or later you're getting an eviction notice or a termination notice," said Leanne Trappen, community services director.

This Thanksgiving season, the organization has distributed hundreds of turkey dinner packages, which include all the trimmings: pumpkin pie mix, stuffing, potatoes, cranberries and yams.

Those who give financially can earmark their gift toward a specific purpose or leave it unmarked, in which case the funds will go toward the areas of greatest need.

Trappen stressed that the dollars donated go directly toward the purpose intended.

"We take no administrative money out of any donation," she said. "Every penny of that goes where it's intended."

The programs can also help save money in the long run, Trappen said. For example, with the homeless prevention program, it costs far less to keep someone from becoming homeless than it does to help someone who is homeless try to get into housing, she said.

As for Smith, he was more than happy to work on a cold, blustery day and give back to others.

Tradition of giving

Christmas in the Nighttime Sky celebrates 20 years

By Amy Huddleston

Times-News writer

The day after Thanksgiving is often a time when Christmas trees are decorated and holiday lights go up. In Twin Falls, it's also when fireworks will deck the sky above Kimberly Nurseries in celebration of the holiday season.

Christmas in the Nighttime Sky, hosted by Kimberly Nurseries, has become a tradition for many. More than 2,700 people attended last year and 2,180 toys were brought in to benefit disadvantaged children in the Magic Valley.

The event encourages the spirit of giving. Admission per family is a new, quality unwrapped toy for children age 16 and younger, which will be given to the KMVT Christmas for Kids program.

"We kind of expected a drop in gifts last year but it was actually up from the year before," said Dave Wright, Kimberly Nurseries president. "I don't see any reasons why it won't be as good this year."

The annual event has raised more than 100,000 toys over its 20 years and Wright said he has a goal of collecting 1 million toys. He views the event as the kickoff for Christmas, and with $11,500 worth of fireworks, a free chili and potato dinner and a chance to donate to a good cause, many Magic Valley residents agree with him.

"People always have family in town and they are blown away by how it goes," Wright said.

Parking is available at the Kmart parking lot on Addison Avenue and free shuttle buses will be provided from 5 to 7 p.m.

Jerome teachers to get raises

By Amy Huddleston

Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome's schools will use $125,000 in federal money to restore some teacher compensation lost to state budget cuts.

Jerome School District received $604,000 of $10 billion slated for teacher salaries as part of a $26 billion federal spending package passed in August.

Last year, district staff took a 1 percent salary cut and 10 furlough days, which totaled a 6.25 percent pay reduction. Superintendent Dale Layne said the $125,000 — authorized Tuesday by the district's board of trustees — will be used to restore the 1 percent in cut pay.

"We are replacing the 1 percent but will still have furlough days in place," Layne said. "The rest will be used for next year, which isn't looking any better than this year."

Saving the remaining $479,000 from the jobs bill will put the district in line with Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's recommendation to spread the federal funding across two years.

Otter agrees: No tax or fee hikes for roads in 2011

By Ben Botkin

Times-News writer

Idaho residents have one more reason to be thankful.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter won't seek any tax or fee increases for 2011 to pay for the state's transportation system. Otter made the announcement on Wednesday, one day after his task force on transportation funding wrapped up its work.

The 15-member task force, which began its effort 18 months ago, made recommendations that include delaying any new taxes or fees until the economy rebounds. The task force was formed in 2009 after the governor and Legislature failed to reach an agreement on raising the gas tax to pay for roads needs.

"Our transportation needs are real and growing, and the safety of Idaho citizens remains one of our highest priorities. But too many people remain jobless, under-employed or on the ragged edge financially to impose higher costs on them right now," Otter said in a statement. "I won't ask the Legislature to approve any funding increases in 2011, but the task force has provided us with a path forward while we keep doing all we can to get people back to work by growing our economy?"

The task force's findings were that some critical maintenance and safety needs of the state's highway system could be temporarily delayed. But when it's realistic economically, an array of options to consider include fuel tax increases, registration fee increases and a rental car excise tax, according to the recommendations.

The task force also found that:

- Without additional revenue, there won't be money for capacity improvements.
- Relying on the federal government won't do, and the state also risks not qualifying for the federal funds available without more state revenue.
- Public transportation is crucial for efficiency.
- Costs should be passed on to all classes of highway users in a "fair and competitive manner."

Kimberly Nurseries, a 102-year-old Magic Valley business, shut down its retail and garden shop last year. Wright said the event is a good way to let people know his business is still operating and wants to keep the tradition of the fireworks alive.

“Every kid should have an opportunity to get a gift for Christmas,” he said. “It’s a good way to fill in much of the need. There’s that much of a need here locally and we fill a lot of that.”

Snow stops, but accidents on roads continue

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Blame it on the blizzard. A snowy four-day stretch contributed to downright awful road conditions, more than 100 slideoffs, dozens of vehicle crashes around south-central Idaho and hundreds of extra man-hours for emergency responders and highway workers.

The National Weather Service reported a snowfall accumulation of 10 inches for the region, with about half of it dumping in a 12-hour span early Tuesday. As temperatures plummeted and the wind howled, the bed of snow on many roads hardened, sending drivers skating down the asphalt.

Since Friday evening, Twin Falls police responded to 54 collisions, 16 motorist assists, nine hit-and-runs and one injury accident through 1 p.m. Tuesday. The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office responded to 38 slideoffs, 14 calls for motorist assistance and at least seven accidents, one with injuries. But Capt. Tim Miller of the sheriff's office said he's seen worse storms.

"I thought the hype was too much," he said. "It was the first time I've seen (Idaho State Police) send out a notice to close down schools and businesses."

The state agency was still counting its incident reports for Region 4 on Wednesday afternoon, but a rough count was more than 100 calls for service through four days. The Jerome County Sheriff's Office responded to 44 slideoffs Saturday through Wednesday.

Calls are still coming in to all agencies, and dispatchers with Twin Falls city, the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center and ISP say the frequency hasn't diminished by much. Fortunately, there have been no reports of serious injuries.

Snow drifts and poor visibility forced many road closures on Tuesday, including Interstate 84 between the Interstate 86 junction and the Utah state line. The nearly 60-mile stretch was closed around 1 p.m. Tuesday and reopened at 11 a.m. Wednesday. U.S. Highway 30 between Twin Falls and Burley was also closed, starting with the portion between Murtaugh and Burley on Tuesday. The road re-opened at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Twin Falls announced Wednesday that Shoshone Falls Road is closed due to treacherous driving conditions. While workers continue to clear as much snow and ice as possible, the city asks residents to shovel snow from their driveways and sidewalks onto their lawns and not into the road.

Health trust doles out grants despite less money

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

The interest earned by Twin Falls Health Initiatives Trust investments isn't going as far as it used to. But next year, it will help a few more recipients carry on a little further.

Last Thursday, the county-operated trust's board of directors awarded grants totaling more than $211,000 to 12 area nonprofit health organizations. The amount was half of what the board awarded last year.

Misti Lockie, the trust's administrative assistant, said the award money comes from interest earned by an eventual $20 million managed by the trust. The sum, set aside during the 2006 sale of the former county-owned Magic Valley Regional Medical Center to St. Luke's Health System, wasn't as much as last year. "The board has to make safe investments to preserve the trust but they don't earn as much interest," Lockie said. "And right now, interest rates are way down."

The board spread the money it had over a few more groups this year.

The College of Southern Idaho Head Start program was one of six groups to receive about $27,000 each, the largest amounts awarded.

Brad Eslinger, Head Start children's service specialist, said the grant will pay for family counseling and cover additional counseling for children not covered by Medicaid. CSI Head Start applied for similar funding two years ago but then missed last year. Eslinger said parents need the services because most of them aren't covered by Medicaid.

The state will announce the selected school districts on Jan. 14. Each district was allowed to submit one proposal. The winners will be selected from all regions of the state.

Each system will be 20 to 100 kilowatts and provide electricity aimed at reducing the school's energy bills and providing educational opportunities for students.

The Office of Energy Resources has received 43 proposals seeking grants for the Idaho Solar Panels for Schools Program, which will be used to purchase and install solar panels on six to 15 public schools in Idaho.

The program's funding is coming from $2.75 million in federal stimulus money. The 43 proposals seeking funds

"We serve 11 centers in nine counties," Eslinger said. "This grant is just for three local centers but it helps us spread the rest of our money around to the rest."

The Castleford Men's Club was another large award recipient. President Rick Rodgers said the grant will help buy supplies and equipment to allow a nurse practitioner to conduct weekly clinics in the new Castleford community center.

"Right now, people have to drive to Buhl or Twin Falls to see a doctor," Rodgers said. "That can get challenging if you're elderly or if the roads are bad like they've been. This should help."

South Central Community Action Partnership received almost $6,000 for its emergency medical program. The program helps low-income individuals get their first prescriptions while they're waiting for long-term funding for medication.

Leanne Trappen, SCCAP community services director, said the program has run mostly on donations for most of its 20-plus years but she's had to turn to new sources of funding. Even so, Trappen said she asked the board only for what she knew she could spend.

"Seven or eight years ago, I started applying for United Way funding," Trappen said. "But they've told us they're cutting back, and we are just not able to keep up with the need."

Lockie said that with indications that the economy is improving, board members hope they can grant more next year.

Burley teacher requests change of venue for sex crime trial

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A judge will decide in December whether the jury trial for a teacher accused of sex crimes will be moved out of Cassia County.

Michael Scott Brinkerhoff, the suspended Burley Junior High School teacher accused of trading sexually charged Internet messages with a female student, made the request Wednesday to have the trial moved. Cassia County 5th District Judge Michael Crabtree said he will render a decision regarding the request on Dec. 6.

Brinkerhoff's attorney, Kent Jensen, cited extensive local media coverage in his client's request to move the venue, as well as comments posted on a website designed to expose bad teachers.

"Unless the defense can make a more specific showing of some kind of prejudice in the community, I think the motion should be denied," said Cassia County Deputy Prosecutor Blaine Cannon.

Jensen also suggested placing a gag order on certain unnamed individuals affiliated with the case as an alternative to changing the Dec. 13 trial's location.

Brinkerhoff, 42, was charged in August with felony sex abuse against a child under 16 and felony enticing a child over the Internet. He has pleaded not guilty to both charges.

The charges stem from incidents in which Brinkerhoff allegedly posed as a teenage boy in order to Jensen said another recent Cassia County teacher sex-crime case had generated only 22 such comments and several other similar Idaho cases had generated anywhere from three to 52 comments.

"Judging from the comments, a fair majority of them are coming from people in this area," Jensen said. He said some of the comments seem to stick up for Brinkerhoff, although the majority could poison potential jurors.

Cannon said there has been a lot of media coverage of the case, but that can be dealt with during jury selection.

"The defense has not shown the court that his client can not receive a fair and impartial trial here in Cassia County," Cannon said. "I don't think he's giving credit to prospective county jurors when he suggests that they can't listen to the evidence, when he suggests that they won't be fair."

T.F. man may be deported

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A 25-year-old Twin Falls man will serve six months in jail before possibly being kicked out of the country.

Jesus Calvo-Jimenez was sentenced Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court and received up to 180 days in Twin Falls County jail and a 10-year suspended state prison stint for aggravated assault. But he faces a U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement hold, meaning he could be deported.

According to the court record, Calvo-Jimenez was charged with aggravated assault and attempted strangulation after his pregnant wife filed a complaint against him in early September. He pleaded guilty later that month to the assault charge, while the strangulation charge was dropped as part of a plea deal.

Calvo-Jimenez was also fined $1,000.

Miguel Hurtado, 17, is now charged with aiding and abetting robbery after prosecutors dropped one count of robbery Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Hurtado, along with Jessica Parsons, 33, Michelle Daniels, 26, and Anthony Talamantes, 21, are accused of kicking in a hotel room door and stealing personal items from people they allegedly knew. Parsons pleaded guilty Nov. 22, while Daniels and Talamantes are set for arraignments on Monday and Dec. 6, respectively.

Northern Idaho man pleads guilty to weapons charge

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) — A northern Idaho man with militia ties has pleaded guilty to unlawful possession of a firearm and attempting to make a firearm in violation of the National Firearms Act.

Kenneth B. Kimbley Jr., 58, pleaded guilty Monday in federal court. He faces up to 10 years in prison at a sentencing scheduled for Feb. 22, The Spokesman-Review reported.

"There was no plea deal," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Traci Whelan.

Kimbley and Steven Eugene Winegar, 52, were taken into custody in July after a federal investigation into illegal explosives led to the seizure of firearms, 20,000 rounds of ammunition, and components to make hand grenades.

Kimbley is prohibited from possessing firearms because he was convicted of felony aggravated assault in 2004.

An undercover federal agent said Kimbley described himself as the leader of the "Brotherhood of America Patriots" and talked about bombing local bridges and made threatening statements toward President Barack Obama.

Kimbley's public defender, Kim Deater, wrote in court documents that Kimbley is a nonthreatening man who has passionate political views, and that he "made absolutely no threats to harm anyone at anytime."

"In fact," Deater wrote, "everything said by Mr. Kimbley is no different than what his idol, TV commentator Glenn Beck, typically states on the air and is protected free speech."

Winegar has been on house arrest in Harpster. His trial is scheduled to begin Jan. 25.

Soldier in Afghan slayings case waives right to hearing

By Gene Johnson
Associated Press writer

SEATTLE — A U.S. soldier who told his family of an alleged plot to kill Afghan civilians for kicks — only to be charged in the case later — has waived his right to a preliminary hearing, meaning his case will likely go straight to military trial, his lawyer said Wednesday.

Spc. Adam Winfield of Cape Coral, Fla., is one of five soldiers charged in the deaths of three civilians during patrols in Kandahar Province this year.

Prosecutors said he willingly participated in the final killing, but his lawyer, Eric Montalvo, has argued that Winfield feared he'd be killed by one of his co-defendants if he didn't follow an order to shoot at the victim.

Duress is not a legal defense to a murder charge.

Winfield was set to have an Article 32 hearing next Tuesday at Joint Base Lewis-McChord south of Seattle to help decide whether there's enough evidence for a court martial. But he waived it because "it would have been a waste of time," Montalvo said. He said he and prosecutors have already discussed the case during plea negotiations and each side is aware of the other's legal position.

If a plea agreement can't be reached, Winfield would refuse to testify against any of his co-defendants, Montalvo said.

"We're trying to resolve this in a way that allows Adam to help the government convict those we believe to be truly responsible," Montalvo said. "As of today those efforts have failed."

Winfield, 22, told his parents in Internet messages on Feb. 14 that members of his unit had deliberately killed a civilian — "some innocent guy about my age just farming" — and planned to kill more. His colleagues threatened him to keep quiet, Winfield wrote, according to copies of the messages provided to The Associated Press.

An undated photo shows U.S. Army Spc. Adam Winfield, who tried to blow the whistle on an alleged plot to kill Afghan civilians for sport.

He also told his parents he didn't know what he should do: "Should I do the right thing and put myself in danger for it. Or just shut up and deal with it," he wrote. "There are no more good men left here. It eats away at my conscience every day."

His father, a former Marine named Chris Winfield, made several calls to Joint Base Lewis-McChord that day and said he asked the Army to intervene on his son's behalf. His phone records show a 12-minute call with someone at the base, and Chris Winfield said he was told that unless his son was willing to come forward while in Afghanistan, he should keep his head down and report his allegations once the deployment ended.

The Army is investigating how that call was handled.

The second killing occurred about a week after Chris Winfield's call, and the final one occurred in May.

No suspects were arrested until that month, after military police learned that a witness in a drug investigation in the unit had been beaten and threatened with fingers severed from Afghan corpses. The witness told them that some of his colleagues had unjustified kills.

In statements to investigators, soldiers described a plot led by Staff Sgt. Calvin Gibbs of Billings, Mont., to murder civilians. Much of the case is based on statements from Spc. Jeremy Morlock, of Wasilla, Alaska, who acknowledged participating in the killings.

The other defendants are Spc. Michael Wagnon of Las Vegas, and Pfc. Andrew Holmes of Boise, Idaho. Charges against all five include murder and conspiracy to commit murder.

Powerful storm to bring snow and ice to Dakotas

By James MacPherson
Associated Press writer

BISMARCK, N.D. — A powerful storm that pummeled much of the West is promising to bring its chaotic mix of snow, sleet and ice to much of the Dakotas on Thanksgiving Day.

The system closed roads and delayed flights from Anchorage to Salt Lake City on some of the busiest travel days of the year.

Meteorologists warned residents in the Dakotas to expect a range of messy wintry weather, from freezing drizzle in the eastern two-thirds of South Dakota to a possible blizzard in eastern North Dakota.

“Like the Boy Scouts, you’ve got to be prepared for a North Dakota winter or you’re asking for your own problems,” said Gerald Miller, 52, who plowed roads on his farm just east of Bismarck on Wednesday.

Miller has spent every winter of his life in North Dakota except for one in 2003 when he served in Iraq with the National Guard. “After Iraq, I promised I’d never complain about the weather in North Dakota again,” he said.

Blowing snow was likely to cause problems for holiday travelers even in areas not expected to get significant amounts.

“We have snow on the ground in many areas, and any snow on top of that will combine for the potential to blow around, reduce visibility and drift, and cause problems for people trying to drive,” meteorologist Jeff Savadel said.

State officials in both Dakotas issued statements urging people to be cautious.

In South Dakota, truckers carefully navigated the icy roads, with snow expected later in the day.

“It’s getting bad,” said Bob Grape, who had stopped at a gas station in Sioux Falls on his way north. Grape said he would keep moving through the weather unless it got significantly worse.

“There isn’t a load of freight that’s important enough to risk your life,” he said.

The storm system buried Seattle in snow, causing at least three deaths, and shut down highways for a time in Idaho, Wyoming and Utah. It also brought high winds on Wednesday to New Mexico and northern Arizona.

Idaho County OKs new guns for deputies

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Idaho County commissioners have approved spending $13,400 to replace weapons carried by sheriff’s deputies that were confiscated as part of an investigation involving a fatal shooting last week.

The Lewiston Tribune reports Chief Deputy Jim Gorges told the commissioners Tuesday that the investigation by the Idaho State Police is expected to be finished in 60 days, but could take as long as a year.

But he said the weapons could be out of service for as long as 10 years if litigation is involved, and that they must be available for an appeals process.

He said county officers buy their own guns, and that all four officers involved in the shooting were carrying a handgun and a rifle.

He said the sheriff’s office has a limited arsenal to replace the weapons.

Deputy Fred Carey was shot in the abdomen and ankle and 47-year-old Curtis Scrivner was killed Nov. 18 in a shootout east of Riggins. Sheriff Doug Giddings said Carey was expected to be able to return home this week.

Salazar vows to speed offshore wind energy

By Matthew Daly
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Ken Salazar vowed Tuesday to spur offshore wind projects in the Atlantic Ocean by expediting permits and identifying promising areas for wind power.

At a speech in Baltimore, Salazar said he will institute a “smart permitting process” that could result in leases issued within two years, instead of seven years or more.

Salazar said he and other federal officials will work with governors in 11 Atlantic Coast states to identify promising areas for wind development. If no serious problems are identified, leases could be issued late next year or in early 2012.

Salazar said he hopes to pursue offshore wind power along the Atlantic Coast in the same way officials are pushing solar power in the Southwest.

“These are areas with high wind potential and with fewer potential conflicts with competing uses,” he said. “If we are wise with our planning, we can help build a robust and environmentally responsible offshore renewable energy program that creates jobs here at home.”

The announcement comes as Internet giant Google and other investors have pledged up to $5 billion for a network of deepwater transmission lines to bring power from offshore wind farms to homes and businesses along the East Coast. The first phase is expected to cost $1.8 billion and run 150 miles in federal waters from New Jersey to Delaware.

Salazar and developers of the nation’s first offshore wind farm signed a lease last month launching the 130-turbine Cape Wind project off the Massachusetts coast, following an eight-year federal review.

Salazar called the Cape Wind lease “historic,” but he said a more efficient permitting process is needed to fully harness potentially vast economic and energy benefits of wind power off the Atlantic Coast.

Shoppers stroll through Chandler Fashion Square in Chandler, Ariz. There will be no shortage of shopping stops for people who want to start their own Black Friday tradition — or get an early jump on everyone else Thursday.

Tips: How to plan for Black Friday and win big

By Emily Fredrix
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK—Die-hard shoppers dream of Black Friday months in advance, but if you don’t plan your shopping adventures or let yourself get overwhelmed, you could miss the best bargains.

Experts recommend setting clear priorities for what you want to buy and where, crafting a plan for the day, shopping in teams with friends and shopping the Web by smart phone while standing in line.

Here are some tips on making the most of the day:

MAKE A LIST: Black Friday is not the day to cruise the aisles, hoping you’ll stumble onto the perfect gift idea. Ask family and friends for wish lists so you can plan ahead, said Kevin Strawbridge, president of discount aggregator DealTaker.com.

Also, think beyond the holidays. If you find a gift for a relative’s birthday in the spring or that new coffeemaker you’ve wanted, you may be taking better advantage of the deals than if you’re doggedly seeking presents just for December.

“It’s like investing, almost. If it’s a good deal, you want to be able to take advantage of it,” says Strawbridge, whose site makes money when people click through its specials to shop online.

RESEARCH: Start by knowing what the items you want generally sell for.

Then, Strawbridge recommends, visit websites like his, dealnews.com and offers.com that post Black Friday ads in advance for major retailers.

Check the website for each store you plan to visit on Friday for coupons you can use on top of Black Friday deals. A $100 sweater might be 20 percent off but also qualify for a $15 coupon you find online, says Dan de Grandpre, editor in chief of discount guide Dealnews.com. Among chains he’s seen that allow this are clothing stores Gap, Aeropostale and American Eagle, plus office retailer Office Depot.

SET A GAME PLAN: Team up with friends. If you all want the same thing, say the new Kinect video game system for Microsoft Corp.’s Xbox, have one person buy several, but be sure to check return policies first.

Know when to go. Many stores open early (or late, if you’re watching from Thursday’s perspective). If the thought of waking up that early doesn’t appeal, try arriving around lunchtime, by which time stores will have time to replenish stock and shoppers who were out early take a break, Strawbridge says. Stores may also put out new deals as the day wears on.

SHOP ONLINE: Staying at home to shop online is increasingly popular, especially because some online deals start Thursday, de Grandpre says. Most stores won’t say in advance exactly when they plan to start sales online. Some will do it at midnight, and many between 3 a.m. and 5 a.m.

“Before you put the turkey in the oven on Thanksgiving Day, you really should go online,” he says.

Check your stores’ websites again before you go to bed and when you get up on Friday.

FINE PRINT: Always check with each retailer what you can return and when. And watch out for the rules on mail-in rebates. If you don’t get a separate copy of your receipt for this purpose, request one.

New skills, more staff needed to help jobless

By Carol Lawrence
The Record writer

HACKENSACK, N.J.—A psychologist in Ridgewood, N.J., finds herself hunting down job resources for patients who are out of work. A law firm in Hackensack has hired staff to help with a rise in severance package negotiations. A psychologist in Summit has had to take courses on treating sleep disorders after patients began losing sleep over layoffs and job insecurity.

While the grim job picture has brought them more business, it also has challenged their skills.

“I’m finding myself overwhelmed with people who want to be seen because they’re anxious and depressed over the economy,” said Sheryl Thailer, a clinical psychologist in Ridgewood. “You have to be a jack-of-all-trades and provide all types of services.”

Unemployment and the fear of it continues to wreak havoc on the mental health of the nation, experts say, two years after the first effects of the recession.

The National Alliance on Mental Illness in Washington, D.C., released startling figures on the effects of the economic downturn in an October 2009 survey, calling the situation a “mental health crisis.”

The unemployed are four times as likely as those with jobs to report symptoms consistent with severe mental illness, the organization said. And those with jobs who have experienced changes such as pay cuts or reduced hours are twice as likely to have these symptoms.

Thirteen percent of those without jobs say they’ve thought of harming themselves, four times more than those employed. The unemployed are twice as likely than those with full-time jobs to report abusing alcohol or drugs within the six months prior to the survey.

Similarly, in 2009 the 150,000-member National Association of Social Workers in Washington said economic-related stress causes increased domestic violence, substance abuse and depression and could lead to suicide. Its members “were seeing increasing effects of the economic crisis in their work,” said the organization.

Thailer said she has numerous patients reacting in some of those negative ways to the added stress of losing their jobs or fearing they will lose them. In addition to her treatment, Thailer now also recommends job resource organizations, such as a vocational rehabilitation agency in Hackensack.

“These are things I was never trained for when I went to school,” said Thailer.

“I am not a job coach or a vocation counselor, yet I do have to come up with creative ideas.”

Small businesses reach a small milestone

NEW YORK— There was a tiny sign of hope in a monthly survey of small business owners recently, one that could mean they’re getting ready to hire.

But that doesn’t mean economists expect a big shift upward in the job market, and in turn, the rest of the economy, anytime soon.

SMALL TALK
Joyce M. Rosenberg

The National Federation of Independent Business, which assesses the optimism of its members each month, said the average employment change per company was zero in October. In other words, small businesses overall weren’t cutting jobs. Since April 2007, there have only been two quarters when the NFIB employment change was positive. That means that except for those two quarters, small businesses have been laying off workers.

So reaching zero was a bit of a milestone. But the key words in that sentence may be “a bit.”

“There’s small improvement going on, sure, but it’s nowhere near where we should be in an

Alaska’s Best owners open their doors for Thanksgiving

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

If you don’t have a place to go today for Thanksgiving dinner, Ron and Deb Anderson, owners of Alaska’s Best in Rupert, have solved the problem. Their meal will be served from noon to 4 p.m. at the Rupert Elks Lodge, 85 S. 200 W., Rupert.

This is the ninth year the Andersons are offering a free Thanksgiving dinner to anyone who wants it. Ron’s sister and brother-in-law, Betty and Leonard Martin, co-sponsor the affair. “Every year it gets bigger and that’s why we had to move it to the Elks dining room,” Ron Anderson said. “We also have live music to dine by. several other local performers will be entertaining during the dinner.” Ron will serve a traditional Thanksgiving dinner — turkey, dressing, potatoes, yams, pumpkin pie, the works. He said last year they served 65 to 70 turkeys and he expects they will offer up that many again this year. “A meal this large takes 100 pounds of mashed potatoes, 20 to 25 gallons of gravy and about 90 pies,” he said. Ron said he will have about 35 to 40 people helping him with the event this year. Many of them will deliver meals. “We will deliver to home-bound people who would like a meal. Or if anyone would like a ride to the Elks we will pick them up and take them home after they’ve eaten,” he said. “We also deliver to the Meals on Wheels shut-ins that day.” The meal is a way of saying thanks for the community’s support, and give back to local residents, Ron said. “We enjoy doing it,” he said. “... Some people want to donate and that money goes to a charity. Last year we gave $1,000 to the Veterans and $2,000 to Meals on Wheels.” If you are homebound or would like a ride to the dinner, call 260-1848 or 436-2447.

Girl Scouts visit Twin Falls senior center

Kimberly fundraisers helps student trips

Members of the Kimberly High School Debate Club recently attended the Novice Debate Tournament in St. Anthony. Kimberly School District students will be able to continue to participate in such extracurricular activities thanks to the Oct. 2 Wheels on the Bus Dinner and Auction. The event raised nearly $24,000 used to restore this year’s travel activity budget for students from preschool through grade 12. The district had to cut that budget due to reduced state funding. Parents and district patrons organized the dinner and auction. The money donated will allow students to participate at

10 years of woe for cardiac patient following angiogram

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have never seen a column about someone who has a 100 percent blocked artery. I was diagnosed in 2000 after an angiogram as having a right artery that was 100 percent blocked. I was told by the surgeon not to eat more than three eggs a week. I’ve had to find all information on my condition all by myself. I watch my saturated fat and cholesterol intakes and walk 2 miles every other day. I’ve been to the VA doctors. They say whatever I’m doing, I should keep it up. I have no symptoms, none! When you quit smoking, they have classes and support. When you get cancer, they have classes and support. When you have diabetes, they have classes and support. When you have heart disease, there is silence. I don’t know what or how much to eat. Can I run or lift weights? I’m taking a baby aspirin and 40 milligrams of Zocor. I’ve gone 10 years with worrying and waiting for the big one. What’s your advice?

ASK DR. GOTT

DEAR READER: My initial guess is that your doctor either misspoke or you heard him incorrectly. I don’t doubt you one bit, but I think you were misled. I’ve not known anyone with even potential cardiac problems who was not referred to a cardiologist for regular follow-up. The decision of whether to perform bypass surgery or angioplasty would have depended on your general overall condition and the extent of the heart disease. That leads me to believe you were not a candidate for surgery at that time. Part of heart health is exercise and a healthful diet. Therefore, include fresh fruits and steamed vegetables, broiled fish and chicken. If you are a beef eater, cut away the fat prior to cooking the meat. Switch to fat-free milk. Substitute low-fat or frozen yogurt for iced cream. Avoid fried foods, hot dogs, sausage, lunchmeats from the deli case of your local grocery store and tropical oils readily found in cookies and pastries. Your total cholesterol intake should be less than 200 milligrams daily. Read labels. Become a savvy shopper. If you haven’t had any symptoms of a cardiac disorder for 10 years, the condition probably didn’t or doesn’t exist or isn’t/wasn’t as severe as you believe. However, to play it safe, make an appointment with a new physician for a complete physical examination and appropriate laboratory and X-ray testing. After all this time, I am sure you are convinced there is an underlying cardiac issue. Request a referral to a cardiologist. Present your problems and ask for answers. If additional testing is called for, have it scheduled. If something comes to light, pursue it. If not, get on with your life and put this 10-year nightmare behind you. To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Reports “Understanding Cholesterol” and Coronary Artery Disease.” Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order for each report made payable to Newsletter and forwarded to PO Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title(s) or print out an order form from my website www.AskDrGottMD.com. Peter H. Gott is a retired physician and the author of several books, including “Live Longer, Live Better,” “Dr. Gott’s No Flour, No Sugar Diet” and “Dr. Gott’s No Flour, No Sugar Cookbook.”

Minidoka County teacher selected for conference

Debrah Roundy, a special-needs teacher with the Minidoka County School District, was invited to present at the Institute for the Advanced Studies of Health (IASH) conference, held Oct. 18-Nov.1 in San Francisco. Roundy spoke about the positive effect on her students' health achieved through the teaching of psychoneuroimmunology, the study of the interaction between psychological processes and the nervous and immune systems of the human body.

Students in the special-needs class were ill less often than students in the mainstream population, as measured in terms of days of school attended last year.

Roundy's students are taught skills to be healthy, including 10 factors to create plump, healthy, germ-fighting T-cells. Roundy added to the curriculum handwashing, eye care while on the computer and other similar things to encourage optimum health in her students.

Roundy also worked with Xavier Lee of California to develop and teach a tool — Xavier's Strategy — that has been particularly valuable for special-needs students, giving them a new, hands-on way to help them organize for new school trimesters. The students now are generalizing the strategy to other places they need to organize their lives.

Roundy's primary private practice focus is children, and she has especially enjoyed empowering youth seeking new outcomes.

She has received grants from the National Education Association to develop curriculum for special-needs students, and an Idaho Governor's Initiative grant to develop and teach psychoneuroimmunology to her students.

NEW MATERIALS AT AREA LIBRARIES

DeMary Memorial Library

New items at the DeMary Memorial Library in Rupert include:

Adult fiction: “Don’t Blink” by James Patterson

Reporter Nick Daniels witnesses a gruesome murder of an infamous mob lawyer and unwittingly captures a key piece of evidence that lands him in the middle of an all-out war between Italian and Russian mafia forces.

“Santa Fe Trail” by Stuart Woods

Ed Eagle, the 6-foot-6, take-no-prisoners Santa Fe attorney, has recovered from his encounters with Mexican organized crime and — more treacherously — his ex-wife, Barbara. Now a mysterious new client has come his way, one who may shed light into some dark corners of Ed’s past ... and put him in danger once more.

“American Assassin” by Vince Flynn

Flynn reveals how a college student named Mitch Rapp was recruited into the CIA. Before he became a CIA super-agent, he trained for his first assassination mission — to kill the Turkish arms dealer who had sold the explosives used in the Pan Am flight 103 attack.

“Chasing the Night” by Iris Johansen

Eight years after her 2-year-old son was kidnapped and never found, CIA agent Ling cannot escape the torment of not knowing. Eve Duncan understands, since she too had no closure after the disappearance and murder of her daughter.

“Prostitutes’ Ball; A Shane Scully Novel” by Stephen J. Cannell

Responding to a call at a mansion in the Hollywood Hills, Detective Shane Scully finds three bodies — two women and an acclaimed film producer. Scully and his new partner Sumner begin investigating, which leads to video footage appearing to show an angry husband as the shooter. It seems to be an open-and-shut case. There’s no such thing for Scully

“The Confession: A Novel” by John Grisham

After committing a horrific murder, Travis Boyette is thrilled as he watches authorities charge and convict Donte’ Drumm, an innocent man, with his crime. Nine years later, four days away from Donte’s execution, Travis decides to do what is right and confess, but will authorities believe him?

“Christmas Odyssey: A Novel” by Anne Perry

Ten days before Christmas, wealthy James Wentworth feels not joy but grief. His reckless son, Lucien, has been lured into a deadly world of drugs and wild passion. Wentworth’s only hope is his old friend Henry Rathbone, who volunteers to search for Lucien.

“Call Me Mrs. Miracle” by Debbie Macomber.

For Jake, his holidays were destroyed in a Christmas Eve tragedy years before. Now Christmas means just one thing to him — profit. But he needs a Christmas miracle for his business to stay afloat. Holly Larson needs a miracle, too. She wants to give her nephew, Gabe, the holiday he deserves.

Junior paperback fiction: “Guardians of Ga’Hoole,” books 11-15 by Kathryn Lasky, “To Be a King,” “The Golden Tree,” “The River of Wind,” “Exile,” “The War of the Ember.”

Youth: “Guardians of Ga’hoole” books 1-10 by Kathryn Lasky, “Ranger’s Apprentice” books 7-9 by John Flanagan.

U.S. may scrap color-coded terror alerts

By Eileen Sullivan
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Goodbye danger defined as yellow, orange and red. The Homeland Security Department is looking to scrap the five-tiered color-coded terror warning system in favor of a streamlined one with as few as two alerts. The post-9/11, Bush-era system has been criticized as too vague to be useful in communicating the terror threat to the public, either ignored or the butt of jokes.

One option under consideration is to go to two threat levels instead of five: elevated and imminent. When the threat level would change to imminent under the new model, government officials would be expected to be as specific as possible in describing the threat without jeopardizing national security. And an imminent threat would not last longer than a week, meaning the public wouldn't see a consistently high and ambiguous threat level.

The 8-year-old alert system, with its rainbow of colors — from green, signifying a low threat, to red, meaning severe — has become a fixture in airports, government buildings and on newscasts.

Over the past four years, millions of travelers have begun and ended their trips to the sound of airport recordings warning that the threat level was orange, an alert that has become so routine that many now simply tune it out. This could be the last holiday season they hear the monotonous message.

U.S. officials confirmed the recommendation for a change had been made to President Barack Obama,

Threat level

The Homeland Security Department hopes to replace the color-coded terror alert system that became a symbol of the country's post-9/11 security efforts.

who has final say in the matter. The details of the proposal were described to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because no final decisions have been made.

The current system was one of the Bush administration's most visible anti-terrorism programs.

The color has stayed the same since 2006: yellow for the country as a whole, meaning an elevated or significant risk, and orange for the aviation sector, a high risk. But the government has changed security protocols during that time without changing the color of the threat. For example, new airport security measures were introduced after a terrorist tried to bring down a Detroit-bound jetliner last Christmas.

The Homeland Security Department would not discuss the specific recommendations or estimate when a new system might be rolled out. The current color system remains in place.

"The overall sense is that we can do a better job of helping inform the public," Transportation Security Administrator John Pistole told the AP.

White House warns of threat from new WikiLeaks release

By Robert Burns
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration said Wednesday it has alerted Congress and begun notifying foreign governments that the WikiLeaks website is preparing to release sensitive U.S. diplomatic files that could damage U.S. relations with friends and allies. Officials said the documents may contain everything from accounts of compromising conversations with political dissidents and friendly politicians to disclosures of activities that could result in the expulsion of U.S. diplomats from foreign postings.

U.S. diplomatic outposts around the world have begun notifying other governments that WikiLeaks may release these documents in the next few days.

“These revelations are harmful to the United States and our interests,” State Department spokesman P.J. Crowley said. “They are going to create tension in relationships between our diplomats and our friends around the world.”

Crowley said the public airing of what were supposed to be private communications will likely erode trust in the U.S. as a diplomatic partner. And he said they could cause embarrassment if the files include derogatory or critical comments about friendly foreign leaders.

“When this confidence is betrayed and ends up on the front pages of newspapers or lead stories on television or radio, it has an impact,” Crowley said. The release is expected this weekend, although WikiLeaks has not been specific about the timing.

Officials speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss sensitive internal matters said the administration believes that the diplomatic fallout could be substantial. Many of the cables are believed to date from the start of the Obama administration, meaning that the White House won’t be able to distance itself from any disclosures.

U.S. officials are concerned that some of the leaked cables could include details of conversations in which senior foreign politicians offer candid appraisals of their governments. Those assessments could prove embarrassing, not only to the United States but to the politicians and governments concerned.

North Korean shelling killed 4, gutted homes

By Hyung-Jin Kim and Kwang-Tae Kim
Associated Press writers

INCHEON, South Korea — As they left behind gutted homes, scorched trees and rubble-strewn streets, residents of the tiny South Korean island shelled by North Korea told harrowing tales Wednesday of fiery destruction and narrow escapes.

Ann Ahe-ja, one of hundreds of exhausted evacuees from Yeonpyeong Island arriving in the port of Incheon on a rescue ship, said Tuesday’s artillery barrage that killed four people — two of them civilians — had caught her by surprise.

“Over my head, a pine tree was broken and burning,” Ann told AP Television News. “So I thought ‘Oh, this is not another exercise. It is a war!’ I decided to run. And I did.”

U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon called the shelling of the island near the two nations’ disputed maritime border one of the “gravest incidents” since the Korean War.

South Korean troops remained on high alert. In Washington, President Obama pledged to “stand shoulder to shoulder” with Seoul and called upon China to restrain its ally, North Korea.

The U.S. has more than 28,000 troops in South Korea to guard against North Korean aggression, a legacy of the bitter three-year conflict that ended in a truce, not a peace treaty, in 1953.

Seoul and Washington reaffirmed plans to hold joint military exercises later this week in the Yellow Sea, just 70 miles south of Yeonpyeong. The White House said the aircraft carrier USS George Washington would take part.

About 10 homes suffered direct hits and 30 were destroyed in the midafternoon barrage, according to a local official who spoke by telephone from the island just seven miles (11 kilometers) from the North Korean shore. About 1,700 civilians live on Yeonpyeong alongside South Korean troops stationed there.

South Korean survivors of the North Korean attack on Yeonpyeong Island arrive at the port of Incheon, South Korea, Wednesday.

“I heard the sound of artillery, and I felt that something was flying over my head,” said Lim Jung-eun, 36, who fled the island with three children, including a 9-month-old strapped to her back. “Then the mountain caught on fire.”

Many of those evacuated from Yeonpyeong had spent the night in underground shelters and embraced tearful family members on arrival in Incheon.

The shower of artillery from North Korea was the first to strike a civilian population. In addition to the two marines killed, the bodies of two men, believed in their 60s, were pulled from a destroyed construction site, the coast guard said. At least 18 people — most of them troops — were injured.

Officials in Seoul said there could be considerable North Korean casualties. North Korea’s main Rodong Sinmun newspaper published a military statement accusing South Korea of triggering the exchange, but did not mention any casualties.

The skirmish began after North Korea warned the South to stop carrying out military drills near their sea border, South Korean officials said.

When Seoul refused and fired artillery into disputed waters — away from the North Korean shore — the North retaliated by shelling Yeonpyeong.

Seoul responded by unleashing its own barrage of howitzers and scrambling its fighter jets.

Few fliers opt out

Airport lines move smoothly despite warnings

By Michael Tarm
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — The lines moved smoothly at airports around the country Wednesday afternoon despite an Internet campaign to get Thanksgiving travelers to gum up the works on one of the busiest days of the year by refusing full-body scans.

The Transportation Security Administration said very few passengers opted out. And there were only scattered protesters — including, presumably, a man seen walking around the Salt Lake City airport in a skimpy, Speedo-style bathing suit, and a woman wearing a bikini in Los Angeles.

After days of tough talk on the Internet and warnings of possible delays, some passengers decided to go to the airport especially early and were pleasantly surprised.

Retirees Bill and Margaret Selfridge arrived three hours ahead of schedule at the Minneapolis-St. Paul airport for their flight to Washington. It took only 10 minutes to get through the checkpoint at 8 a.m.

“Now we get to drink a lot of coffee,” Bill Selfridge said.

Catherine Pfeiffer, 40, of Austin, Texas, changed planes at the Atlanta airport and said she had no major objection to the security screenings: “If you don’t want to go through the hassle, don’t fly.”

A loosely organized effort dubbed National Opt-Out Day planned to use fliers, T-shirts and, in one case, a Scottish kilt to protest what some call unnecessarily intrusive X-ray scans and pat-downs. The security screenings have been lampooned on “Saturday Night Live” and mocked on T-shirts, bumper stickers and underwear emblazoned “Don’t Touch My Junk,” from a line uttered by a defiant traveler in San Diego.

But the weather was shaping up as a much bigger threat, especially in the West: A ferocious, early-season snowstorm pummeled the Rockies, bringing whiteout conditions to parts Activist Lori Lamb distributes stickers to travelers to protest against the TSA’s new security procedures, Wednesday at Los Angeles International Airport.

“Just because you buy a plane ticket doesn’t mean you have to subject yourself to awful security measures. It’s not a waiver of your rights. The TSA is security theater. They’re not protecting us.”

— Airport security protester Patricia Stone of Chandler, Ariz.

of the region and closing roads. It was expected to delay air travelers and people who probably thought they were doing the smart thing by driving. Also, heavy rain was forecast in the Midwest. And windy weather in New England could create snags.

More than 40 million people plan to travel over the Thanksgiving holiday, according to AAA, with more than 1.6 million flying — a 3.5 percent increase from last year.

Two protesters at the Phoenix airport held signs decrying “porno-scans” and drew sidelong glances from some passengers but words of support from others, who told them, “Thank you for being here.”

The protesters, husband and wife Patricia Stone and John Richards of Chandler, Ariz., said the TSA has taken security too far.

“Just because you buy a plane ticket doesn’t mean you have to subject yourself to awful security measures. It’s not a waiver of your rights,” said Stone, 44. “The TSA is security theater.

They’re not protecting us.”

But at security lines at the airport, one of the nation’s 10 busiest, lines were moving quickly and steadily. In fact, wait times for security checks at major U.S. airports from San Francisco to New York were 20 minutes or less Wednesday morning, according to the TSA, and no serious disruptions were reported.

Asked early Wednesday if the protests were having any noticeable effect, TSA chief John Pistole told The Associated Press, “Not that we’ve seen overall. I mean we’ve, you know, had a couple of one-offs here and there.”

“So far, so good,” he said. “No long wait times or anything.”

Earlier Wednesday, Pistole told ABC’s “Good Morning America” that his agency is fully staffed to deal with problems and that travelers should be prepared for delays because of the threatened protests. For days, he has pleaded with Thanksgiving travelers not to boycott the body scans and delay other people.

“I just feel bad for the traveling public that’s just trying to get home for the holidays,” Pistole said, noting that TSA screeners “just want to get you through.”

At least some passengers brushed aside claims the screenings were needlessly intrusive and too cumbersome.

Greg and Marti Hancock of Phoenix, on their way to a vacation in California, breezed through security after going through the body scanner.

“It was a day at the beach, a box of chocolates,” said Greg Hancock, 61, who was chosen for the scanner after a golf ball marker set off the metal detector.

Marti Hancock, 58, said ever since she was in the air on Sept. 11, 2001, and thought there was a bomb on her plane, she has been fully supportive of stringent security: “If that’s what you have to do to keep us safe, that’s what you have to do.”

At Denver International Airport, Chris Maj, a 31-year-old computer programmer, carried a sign that read, “END THE TSA ASK ME HOW!” He and three others handed pocket-size copies of the U.S. Constitution.

“They’re touching breasts, they’re touching buttocks, all of these places that if you or I were to touch, we’d go to jail,” he said.

New Zealand mourns miners after second blast ends hope of rescue

By Tracy Withers and Chris Bourke
Bloomberg News

GREYMOUTH, New Zealand — New Zealand is mourning 29 men presumed dead in the nation’s worst mining tragedy in almost a century after a second blast at a South Island coal mine Wednesday ended hope the trapped miners would be rescued.

There had been no contact with the men since the initial Nov. 19 blast at the Pike River Coal Ltd. mine, about 30 miles north of Greymouth.

The second, more severe blast in the shaft at around 2.40 p.m. local time Wednesday led New Zealand police to say the men are unlikely to have survived.

For five days, families and friends kept a vigil for the trapped men, ranging from a 17-year-old on his first day in the mine to a 62-year-old near retirement. Their plight had prompted hope of a recovery effort akin to the October rescue of 33 miners in Chile, brought to the surface after being trapped in a shaft below the Atacama desert for 70 days.

“We are a nation in mourning,” Prime Minister John Key told a news conference in Wellington Wednesday. “This is a national tragedy. To lose this many brothers at once strikes an agonizing blow.”

The government is likely to confirm the details of an inquiry at its next meeting on Monday, as well as other inquiries that may “be deemed appropriate,” Key said. All flags on government buildings are flying at half-mast Thursday.

“Once again mining is mourning,” Laurence Golborne Riveros, Chile’s mining minister, wrote on social networking site Twitter Wednesday. “My condolences to the 29 families that are suffering in New Zealand.”

New Zealand’s national rugby team, the All Blacks, are to wear white arm bands in Cardiff on Saturday when playing Wales as a show of respect to the miners, Juli Clausen, a spokeswoman for the New Zealand Rugby Union, said in an interview.

The Union will request a minute’s silence before the game, she said.

Britain’s Queen Elizabeth, her son Charles Prince of Wales, and Italy’s Pope Benedict XVI have sent condolences to the country, according to Television New Zealand.

The Pike River disaster is New Zealand’s biggest mining accident since 43 men died in a Huntly mine on the North Island in 1914. The worst tragedy was in 1896 when 65 workers lost their lives in a coal dust explosion at the Brunner mine five miles north of Greymouth. In 1967, a fire in the nearby Strongman mine claimed 19 lives.

On the road to the Pike River mine, a statue of a miner stares out over the Grey river, commemorating the men that died at the Brunner mine and other pits in the district.

Study: Best diabetes fitness plan is aerobics plus weights

By Carla K. Johnson
AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO — People with diabetes should mix aerobics with weight training to get the best results in lowering blood sugar, a new study suggests. The combination worked best for weight loss too, compared to aerobics or weight training alone.

Blood sugar is fuel to muscles, and more sugar is burned during aerobic activity. Weight training builds more muscle, and both activities change muscle proteins in ways that enhance the process.

"It's clear that doing both aerobic and strength training is superior to either alone," said lead author Dr. Tim Church of Pennington Biomedical Research Center in Baton Rouge, La. "It's almost like taking two different drugs."

Patients in the study, published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association, achieved the results over nine months, exercising three days a week for about 45 minutes each session.

"People can manage this amount of exercise," said Laurie Goodyear of Joslin Diabetes Center in Boston, who wasn't involved in the new study but does similar research. "They didn't have to go on a diet. This was purely an exercise effect."

The researchers' goal was to test three exercise programs that doctors could realistically recommend and patients could stick with. They compared aerobics alone, weight training alone and a combination. U.S. guidelines recommend aerobics and weight training combined for all adults.

All three groups worked out for about the same amount of time. A fourth group of patients was offered only weekly stretching and relaxation classes for further comparison. The study was completed by 245 people with diabetes.

Led by trainers, patients walked on a treadmill that raised the uphill grade by 2 percent every two minutes for the aerobics. Weight training, also supervised, was done on machines that worked muscles in the upper body and legs, with more weight added as participants increased their strength.

"It gave me a lot more energy. That was one of the first things I noticed," said Deidra Atkins-Ball, 44, a biology professor, diagnosed with diabetes a year before she joined the aerobics-weights group.

The researchers found that only the group that combined aerobics and weights both lowered their blood sugar and lost weight, although all three fitness groups reduced their waist sizes.

Fewer patients in the combo group started taking new diabetes drugs than in the other groups. Decisions on medications were left up to the patients' regular doctors during the study.

Forty-one percent of the patients in the combo group either decreased their diabetes medications or lowered their average blood sugar as measured by a common blood test, compared to 26 percent for weights only, 29 percent for aerobics only and 22 percent in the non-exercise group.

The blood sugar reduction achieved by the combo group was enough to reduce the risk of heart attacks, strokes and other complications, the researchers wrote, citing earlier studies.

Atkins-Ball's results were good, if not long-lasting. She dropped 4 pounds and saw her blood sugar reach near normal levels. When the program ended, she joined a gym and kept exercising — for a while.

Then she got busy, let her gym membership lapse after a year and has seen her blood sugar levels climb. She's now taking two diabetes drugs, instead of the one she took during the study.

Her advice for others with diabetes is to get into a structured exercise program.

"That's what helped me the most," she said.

Deidra Atkins-Ball, 44, walks Tuesday at Forest Park in Baton Rouge, La. Atkins-Ball, who has diabetes, took part in a nine-month fitness program combining aerobics and weight training.

December 10 & 11 - 3rd Annual Wreaths Across America – From Arlington to Across America Wreaths Across America™, was formed as an extension of the Arlington Wreath Project. The Arlington Wreath program was started by Morrill Worcester in 1992 with the donation and laying of 5000 Christmas wreaths to Arlington National Cemetery. This became an annual journey for Mr. Worcester.

The project received National attention. Thousands of requests poured in from all over the country from people wanting to emulate the Arlington project at their National and State cemeteries spurred the creation of "Wreaths Across America™". The ceremony includes 7 wreaths (one for each branch of the military as well as POW/MIA), along with a presentation promoting Veterans Remembrance honoring each fallen serviceman as an individual is stressed. The wreath laying ceremonies is held simultaneously across America the second Saturday of December.

On December 10 approximately 350 wreaths will be laid on Veterans graves at the Wendell cemetery. On December 11, the national wreath ceremony begins at 10 am at the Veterans Park. All are invited to come remember and honor our fallen serviceman. If you would like to sponsor a wreath the cost is $15. Please call Jim to be a sponsor or for more information at 536-6358.

Steroid use rises among troops headed to war

By Hal Bernton
The Seattle Times

SEATTLE — Just weeks before his battalion of some 700 soldiers departed for Afghanistan in summer 2009, Lt. Col. Burton Shields had a disconcerting visit from an Army investigator.

The agent said several soldiers under Shields’ command at Joint Base Lewis-McChord had admitted to illegal use of steroids. One of the suspected users was a battalion captain.

Shields, who led the 4th Battalion, 23rd Infantry Regiment, was skeptical. He questioned whether Army investigators might have mistaken legal dietary supplements for steroids.

But in the days that followed, the captain, as well as a lieutenant, first sergeant and nine other soldiers, admitted using steroids, according to investigative documents that offer a rare look at illegal use of those drugs in the military.

Steroid use in the Army has been on the rise amid a prolonged period of warfare. To prepare for — and perform — on combat tours of duty, some soldiers told investigators they turned to steroids to boost their brawn.

The latest Defense Department survey — conducted in 2008 — found that 2.5 percent of Army personnel had illegally used steroids within the past 12 months, a jump from three years earlier, when 1.5 percent said they had used these drugs illegally.

The percentage of infantry soldiers taking steroids may be higher than for the overall Army.

Several soldiers from the 4/23 Battalion who confessed to using steroids estimated that more than half the unit of some 700 soldiers had sampled steroids, according to investigative documents obtained by The Seattle Times under the federal Freedom of Information Act. One soldier had a scheme for continuing steroid use in Afghanistan through the receipt of mail order packages that would disguise the drugs in lotion packets.

Anabolic steroids can increase muscle mass and strength.

But to achieve these effects, the steroids are typically taken at much higher levels than those prescribed by doctors. These drugs can raise the risk of high blood pressure, heart and liver disease, and side effects can include mood swings, irritability and increased aggression, which can be a volatile attribute for soldiers headed off to battle.

“The use of steroids is a short-term gain for long-term problems that individuals are going to have, and we cannot tolerate them in any way, shape or form,” said Gen. Peter Chiarelli, the Army’s vice chief of staff, who has taken a leadership role in Army efforts to reduce drug use among soldiers.

ANABOLIC STEROIDS

How are they used?

• Anabolic steroids are taken orally or injected, and abusers normally take them in cycles of weeks or months, rather than continuously, in patterns called “cycling.” Cycling involves taking multiple doses of steroids over a period of time, typically eight weeks, stopping for a period and then starting again. Users frequently combine several types of steroids to maximize their effectiveness while minimizing negative effects, a process known as “stacking.”

What are the effects?

• Reports indicate that use of anabolic steroids can increase lean muscle mass, strength and an ability to train longer and harder. Steroid use can cause short-term effects that include baldness and reduced sperm counts. Steroid use can increase the risk of liver tumors, jaundice, fluid retention and high blood pressure. Researchers report that some users may experience mood swings, extreme irritability and impaired judgment.

Source: National Institute on Drug Abuse

Soldiers may be tested for steroids when a commander has probable cause to suspect abuse.

But since 2008, only about 300 soldiers have been tested for steroids, according to Army statistics provided by Chiarelli. In contrast, the Army conducts random testing of more than 450,000 soldiers each year for use of marijuana, cocaine, heroin and other narcotics.

Army officials say the steroid analysis is too expensive to be included in the random drug testing. The Army cost for a steroid urinalysis ranges from $240 to $365 per sample, which compares with a cost as low as $8 per sample for marijuana, according to Army statistics.

At Joint Base Lewis-McChord, steroid use in Shields’ battalion might have gone undetected if not for a tip in June 2009 from the Seattle Police Department. While investigating illegal gambling, a Seattle undercover detective encountered a battalion soldier who talked about steroid use and distribution. The Seattle police tipped off the Army Criminal Investigative Command, which had agents interview soldiers.

In the documents released to The Seattle Times, the names of battalion soldiers who admitted to using steroids were blacked out because none of the soldiers were convicted of any crimes. The soldiers were subject to other disciplinary actions, including an Article 15 punishment slapped on the captain, who was subject to pay forfeiture and up to 30-day confinement to his quarters.

Shields, the battalion commander, declined to be interviewed for this story.

But Maj. Kathleen Turner, a Joint Base Lewis-McChord spokeswoman, said the captain, first lieutenant and first sergeant who used steroids were subject to disciplinary actions and did not deploy to Afghanistan.

In the nine years since the Sept. 11 attacks, Joint Base Lewis-McChord has sent tens of thousands of troops to Iraq and Afghanistan.

In Iraq, some soldiers say steroid use was no secret.

“No one really hid this,” said Seth Manzel, an Army veteran who served from 2004-05 in Mosul, Iraq, with the 1st Brigade, 25th Infantry Division. “I walked into a squad leader’s room one time, and he was with another soldier who had his pants down around his ankle. He had a needle and was injecting that soldier.”

Upbeat Avery is ready for Wolf Pack

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Boise State running back Jeremy Avery is a glass half-full kind of guy.

It would've been easy for him to look at his senior season with the Broncos as a glass half-empty — and one that was leaking, too.

After all, Avery was coming off a junior campaign in which he emerged as the team's leading rusher in the absence of the injured D.J. Harper. Avery even had a great fall camp before he received the news.

Avery was No. 3 on the depth chart behind the anointed starter, Doug Martin, and Harper.

"He was really very good about taking that news," Petersen said of telling Avery of his pecking order with the team's offensive plans at the beginning of the season. "I don't mean that he was happy by any means. He wasn't.

"I think ever since he's been here he's been wondering why he's not getting the ball more. And sometimes those are tough things to answer as a coach."

Not once did Avery complain. He continued to work hard and remained prepared for when his number was called. And when Harper went out with another season-ending injury, Avery was ready to step up.

"Playing at Boise State has been a real dream," Avery said. "There have been a lot of curves, too, that have built my character — and that's a blessing. It's all turned out good."

Avery bought into the team-first mentality that Boise State preaches religiously to its players. And before he knew it, that status quo was disrupted.

"We told him things might change and we need him," Petersen said. "And sure enough, we're not even halfway through the season and things started changing."

"It's pleasing to see Jeremy get this opportunity. We've got a lot of guys like him who do what we ask them to do no matter what."

Whatever the assignment, Avery has excelled this season. The proof is showing up in the scoring column, where

Area athletes draw power from faith

Hayli Worthington crouches in her starting blocks with her fingers sitting flush along the white starting line.

She stares down the track at the 10 hurdles she must conquer.

Her spikes tied on tight, hair pulled back, her Idaho State jersey clinging tightly to her body.

Sweat falls down her fiery-eyed face, but she's calm — she's an Idaho Class 4A state champion, all her worries before stepping foot on the track are gone.

But Worthington isn't only running to win the race, she's running for God.

"I take the focus off myself and focus on running for God and glorifying God with the talents that He's given me," Worthington said.

She's not alone in that quest.

Something felt different for her on the field that day after she prayed.

"You feel like you can do anything," Bartlett said. "That day, I could tell that it did something."

Erik Harris, a junior cross country runner at Twin Falls High School, frequently mentions the Almighty into his post-run interviews.

"I just said a prayer and went for it,"

"I take the focus off myself and focus on running for God and glorifying God with the talents that He's given me."

— Hayli Worthington, Idaho State athlete

Harris said after winning the Class 4A state championship in October.

Worthington, Bartlett and Harris represent just a small snippet of the thousands of athletes who run, throw, catch, hit, kick, punch, swim, jump and shoot with a higher purpose — and a higher power — in mind.

Tim Tebow, the Denver Broncos quarterback and former Florida Gator — one of the greatest college players of all time — would inscribe Bible passages in his eye-black on game days.

The first time he wore John 3:16 or Philippians 4:6-7, thousands of people picked up their dusty Bibles and looked up the verses after seeing him on TV.

A great missionary tool many Christians would say.

But does the Lord care about who wins and loses on the playing field?

Is God a Utah Jazz fan who cringes thinking of Michael Jordan and those Chicago Bulls teams which kept Karl Malone and John Stockton ring-less?

Doesn't the Almighty have more important things in the world to worry about?

What about when Lighthouse Christian and Twin Falls Christian Academy face-off? The team that prays more wins?

"I don't necessarily think God has a winning team. He gives you the strength to maximize your talents and whatever happens happens," Harris said. "There are a lot of guys who are my religion and I know that they're praying to God as well. I think it's 'give me strength so that I can do my best' and then if that happens, it's just whoever is in the best condition runs the best that day."

Randy Simonson, professor of psychology at the College of Southern Idaho, studies religiosity — a sociological term used to refer to the numerous aspects of religious activity, dedication and belief.

He said there are a couple of different perspectives to believing in and praising God.

"It's a healthy thing to recognize that I am not the Supreme Being, but I can accomplish much," Simonson

Idaho O-line finally coming together

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — When the Idaho football team conjured up a breakthrough last year after a decade of losing, the Vandals had the luxury of banking on a solid-as-granite offensive line.

The same five players started every game, and four of them were seniors. From the start, no one questioned the group's durability or consistency.

"I tell people all the time: Last year I was very, very spoiled," offensive line coach Dan Finn said. "I had five guys that played every snap together through spring ball all the way to the bowl game. We didn't have any injuries."

Finn knew this season would be much more taxing than 2009, and that's been the case since the start of spring camp. Injuries, inexperience, miscommunication — the Vandals (5-6) have dealt with those issues and more while breaking in four new starters up front.

Finally, in a 28-6 win at Utah State last week, the offensive line came together like Finn and coach Robb Akey had hoped they would all along. Quarterback Nate Enderle was sacked just once and the Vandals churned out their most rushing yardage (112) since Sept. 25 at Colorado State.

"I was happy with the fact that I think we ran the ball better," Akey said, "and only getting put on the ground at quarterback one time was certainly an improvement. I thought we had more time to throw the ball consistently. ... And I want to see us build off of that."

With an unsettled and still-meshing O-line, the Idaho offense hasn't been as high-powered or balanced as it was in '09. Consider:

- The Vandals have yet to have a 100-yard rusher. Kama Bailey came the closest with 92 yards against Boise State, but he had two runs on fake punts that accounted for 39 and 54 yards.

- Last year the Vandals allowed 25 sacks in 13 games. This year they've given up 37 sacks, sixth most among FBS teams.

Filer basketball coach Allen Kelsey, who coached for many years in Wendell, jokes with Logan Beard during practice last Friday. Kelsey is excited about his opportunity to coach in Filer.

3 A BOYS BASKETBALL PREVIEW

Kelsey returns to coach Filer in wide-open SCIC

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

Allen Kelsey just couldn't stay away from the basketball court.

The 26-year coaching veteran returns to the sideline to coach the Filer boys basketball team after retiring as Wendell's head coach in 2006.

"After lots of reflecting, I thought I would come back and try it again," Kelsey said.

"I got the urge to come back and this is a great opportunity."

He takes over a program that graduated seven seniors from last year's Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference championship team, including leading scorer Bryce Beard.

But Kelsey has some experience with rebuilding projects.

The coach won only 13 games in his first three seasons at Wendell, the low-point coming with a 1-21 mark in his third season.

The next 15 seasons, however, the tide turned as the Trojans claimed 18 or more wins each season and won the state championship in 2004.

"It took a little while to develop our culture and attitude, but we were consistent every day in practice and said. “But if I run around saying I’m not responsible for anything or that success is my doing and failure is someone else’s — that’s bad news.

“Or someone may say that failure is my fault and success is someone else’s and that gets twisted the other way. The idea is to have balance.”
That balance is outlined in one of Simonson’s favorite sayings: “Pray like it all depends on God and act like it all depends on me.”
“If I have my belief, I’m going to give credit where it belongs,” he said.

Who deserves the credit?

Worthington attends Idaho State University on a track and field scholarship after her stellar career at Minico High School.
A devout Christian, Worthington grew up in a Baptist home and learned at an early age to give praise to God.
“Many people understand the talents that they have and understand what they can do,” Worthington said. “I understand what I can do by myself, but with God, I can do so much more.”
Like win state titles.
This May at the Class 4A state track championships, Worthington prayed like she always does before her race in the 300-meter hurdles, and distinctly remembers saying, “There is no way I can win this race on my own.”
As she rounded the final corner and sprinted down the home stretch, legs tired, lungs burning, competition breathing down her side, Worthington inexplicably sped up.
“I didn’t feel too tired. I felt like I could run faster than I ever had at the end of the race,” she said. “I felt like I could just keep going.”
She surged across the finish line in a personal-best time of 44.25 seconds for the state title.
“I just started crying. It was a really exciting experience,” Worthington said.
Simonson said that a euphoric feeling similar to Worthington’s is very common in athletics — but is it faith or physiology at work.
“The first thing that comes to mind is the runner’s high. It’s those endorphins rushing in,” Simonson said. “You exert yourself and leave it at that.”

In his most fanciful dreams, Avery admits he couldn’t have imagined Boise State doing what it has done this season when he was a freshman.
“When I came here, I knew Boise State was a good program but I didn’t think we would be on the national stage,” Avery said. “I just liked the coaches and the players and the scenery here, is averaging 3.1 yards per rush. But the Vandals have also fallen behind quickly against their toughest opponents and abandoned the ground game.

That wasn’t the case last week, and the Vandals prospered as a result.
“We had 37 carries,” Finn said. “You’re not going to be sacked when (your QB doesn’t) have the ball. That helps tremencountry stand-out Brian Crane and 6-2 guard Dalton Harmon, the Bulldogs are a guard-oriented team that plans on beating opponents on the perimeter.

“Last season every team that played us yelled, ‘Shooter! Shooter!’ every time Brian touched the ball, and I expect that to be the same this season,” said Kimberly coach Marvin Mumm.
The 6-foot-7 Derek Maloney also returns for the Bulldogs, who finished 9-12 last season and fell to Filer in the SCIC tournament.
“Maloney has grown a couple inches since last seayour body is going to start responding chemically. You exert yourself and you’ve done a good thing, you’ve exercised your abilities in a good cause, you feel good about that. If you put your energy into something and you’re exhausted, you’re drained and you’ve done a good thing, honestly that’s exhilaration.”

Harris, who is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, felt that same sort of exhilaration after winning the cross country title in October. “It felt like a long-awaited success. Then I felt gratitude for God helping me,” he said.
Harris put in his own work, too.
When other student-athletes went on summer breaks filled with family vacations, parties and junk food, Harris went running. The junior logged more than 400 miles last summer in preparation for the cross country season.
But he also uses his talents to glorify God.
“He blessed me with these talents, so how could I not give credit to Him,” Harris said.

But what happens when we lose?

Every athlete knows the feeling of defeat.
Whether it’s a two-point loss at the buzzer or a 50-0 blowout, that sinking feeling rests in your gut for hours.
Bartlett has experienced that feeling too many times the past two years.
A sophomore forward at Canyon Ridge High, Bartlett has endured the growing pains of a soccer program building from scratch.
With only five wins this season, soccer at Canyon Ridge is a far cry from her competitive club team, which finished first or second in four of its tournaments.
“There have been times when I get frustrated and I just thank God, just help me to stay calm and do my best,” said Bartlett, who attends Grace Alliance Church in Filer. “But I’m thankful that He’s given me these talents to play.”
But why aren’t more athletes as willing to praise God after a loss?
Is God not on their side?
Kurt Warner, a retired quarterback who won Super and that’s why I came. I don’t think any of us ever really imagined it would be like this.”

However, the “like this” could come crashing down on Friday night with a loss to Nevada if the Broncos aren’t up for the stout challenge. And Avery knows it.
“It’s going to be a big game — I can feel it,” Avery said. “I feel like Nevada brings it on offense and defense. They dously. When you don’t have 50, 60 pass attempts in a game, that helps out a lot.”

In contrast to last season’s veteran offensive line, this year’s unit has just two seniors — center Clell Hasenbank and right guard Tevita Halaholo — and has relied on redshirt freshman Jordan Johnson as the first reserve off the bench. With the in experison and will grab the rebounds for us,” Mumm said.

In Buhl, the Indians also bring in a new coach as Dan Winn takes over, making the move from Castleford.
A 1990 Buhl graduate, Winn led the Wolves to a 35-16 record in two seasons, including back-to-back Class 1A Division I state tournament appearances and a Snake River Conference championship and second-place state tournament finish in 2010.
Buhl finished 10-10 last season and was swept by both Filer and Kimberly.
“Kimberly and Filer have Bowl XXXIV with the St. Louis Rams and carried the Arizona Cardinals to another is one of the most outspoken Christians in sports, openly talking about God after his victories.

But when the Cardinals lost Super Bowl XLIII, he didn’t say anything about God.
Tom Krattenmaker, the author of “Onward Christian Athletes: Turning Ballparks into Pulpits and Players into Preachers,” said in an interview with NPR about Warner and his post-Super Bowl remarks: “I frankly wish that he would have (praised God) because there is a lot that religion has to say about losing and about the consolation that God can bring to those who are on the losing side of a game or the losing side of life. I think the religious expression in sports would have more credibility if athletes would bring their faith into it when they lost.”
“I suspect it has something to do with the idea that we’re going to use the sports platform to evangelize and in the moment of winning, that’s when you have the most credibility, the most attention.”

Running for the prize

The New Testament spurs many athletic images: “I have fought the good fight. I have finished the race, I have kept the faith” (2 Timothy 4:07), “Let us run with perseverance the race that is set before us” (Hebrews 12:01).
In each case, the apostle Paul exhorts Christians to use their physical gifts, literally and metaphorically, for religious aims.
Harris reads from 1 Corinthians 9:24 for inspiration: “Do you not know that in a race all the runners run, but only one gets the prize? Run in such a way as to get the prize.”
With religion intertwined so tightly in sports, high school athletes learn the admirable traits of gratitude, sportsmanship, grace, teamwork and goal-setting. Religion also has taught thousands of athletes there is more to this world than hitting .300, scoring a touchdown, nailing a perfect dive or serving an ace — it’s about serving God.
And as athletes like Worthington, Harris and Bartlett serve God, they feel the sustaining power prom-bring it every single year and we’re excited about this game.

“Our series with Nevada has been two good teams that like to compete — they’ll give their all and we know that. Both parties know that that game will be a hard-fought game and strive to do their best in it.”
Avery certainly will — and whatever happens, the glass will be undoubtedly half full.

ence comes flagging confidence, something Finn has noticed at different times.
But he’s also hopeful the Utah State performance will serve as a momentum-changer heading into a pivotal game Saturday night at Fresno State.
“If we get it done once, we can get it done every time,” right tackle Tyrone Novikoff said.

the leg up on us. We would like to re-establish basketball here in Buhl,” Winn said.
“We’ve got a lot to prove, but we’re here to compete.”
The Indians return three starters in Scott Harris, Matt Hamilton and Markus Lively and will rely on the trio for scoring and leadership.
With the SCIC down to three teams this season and only one berth to the state tournament, competition between Filer, Kimberly and Buhl is going to be fierce.
“We probably have some of the best teams in the state and only one of us goes to the state,” said Mumm. It’s going to be interesting.”

ised in Isaiah 40:31: “They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint.”

Boise State president responds to Ohio State slam

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Boise State's president said his counterpart at Ohio State's claim that Big Ten and Southeastern Conference teams play a "murderer's row" schedule "is the greatest exaggeration I think we've heard this year in college football."

In an interview with The Associated Press on Wednesday, Bob Kustra angrily responded to Ohio State President Gordon Gee's statement that TCU and Boise State don't deserve to be in the Bowl Championship Series title game even if they run the table.

Gee said of the power conferences' schedules: "We do not play the Little Sisters of the Poor."

Kustra had Ohio State's last two schedules in front of him — the Buckeyes have played Southern California and Miami, in addition to several mid-majors and directional schools — and said, "If they're not playing the Little Sisters of the Poor, they're playing the Little Brothers."

TCU sports information director Chris Del Conte also stepped into the fray, defending the Horned Frogs' unblemished record.

"We only worry about our house and what we do at TCU," he said. "I'll put our record up against anybody."

The controversy began when Gee defended the BCS and the current bowl system earlier in the day in an interview with The AP.

"Well, I don't know enough about the Xs and Os of college football," said Gee, formerly the president at West Virginia, Colorado, Brown and Vanderbilt. "I do know, having been both a Southeastern Conference president and a Big Ten president, that it's like murderer's row every week for these schools."

Referring to TCU and Boise State, he added, "I think until a university runs through that gauntlet that there's some reason to believe that they not be the best teams to (be) in the big ballgame."

That left both TCU and Boise State angry.

"We go through the gauntlet every single day," Del Conte said.

Kustra said he it was hypocritical of Ohio State and all of the major BCS conferences to demean teams like Boise State. He said most of those conferences refuse to schedule his school.

"It's easy for the presidents to talk, but ask the ADs when's the last time that they seriously entertained taking requests or inviting Boise State to (play them)," Kustra said. "If you're Boise State or TCU, they're going to want to steer way clear of you."

He said he had phone records that would prove that Boise State had tried to schedule home-and-home games with Top 25 teams from the BCS conferences, but that they would not play the Broncos anywhere but at their home stadium.

Gee, long a proponent of the BCS and the bowl system, said the current format to decide a national champion is superior to other options.

"If you put a gun to my head and said, 'What are you going to do about a playoff system (if) the BCS system as it now exists goes away?' I would vote immediately to go back to the bowl system," he said.

Gee called a playoff system "a slippery slope to professionalism."

Kustra said most teams from the power conferences follow a simple blueprint when scheduling these days.

"The formula these days for BCS teams is get seven or eight home games, play one non-conference game against a team from another BCS league, schedule three or four patsies and try not to leave the state if you can help it," he said.

He also said that the SEC's Florida Gators have not left the state to play a non-conference, regular-season opponent since 1991.

Gee said that it was some of the quirkiest moments in the BCS which made it endearing. He cited 2007 when Ohio State lost its final home game of the season to drop to eighth in the BCS rankings, then benefited from a long series of upsets to make it into the national championship game, where they lost to LSU 38-24.

"You know, it's a mystery," Gee said. "We were No. 1 then No. 11 then No. 7 and we ended up playing for the national championship. I think I kind of like that mixed-up mystery."

TCU has earned an opportunity to at least be considered to play in the national championship game, Del Conte said.

"We have a wonderful coach, a great football program and at this point in time, we're undefeated heading in the right direction," he said. "Look at our overall body of work the last 10 years — it stacks up against anybody."

Mamie Wilhelmina (Avelar) Smith

Mamie Wilhelmina (Avelar) Smith was born Oct. 8, 1918, to Joaquina Jerome and Joseph Machado Avelar at their home in Paul, Idaho. She passed away Saturday, Nov. 20, 2010, in Spokane, Wash.

She was an only child. She spent her first two years traveling in a sheep caravan wagon in the Mountain Home area of Idaho. Mamie attended school in Paul, where she was a member of the State Champion Girls Basketball Team as the starting center. Mamie attended Albion Normal School (teacher's college) and Salt Lake City Business College. She taught school in Jerome, Idaho, where she met her husband of 49 years, Norman D. (Dale) Smith. They made their home in Burley, Idaho. Together they raised four children, Norman Joseph, Jerome Earl, Tamara Claire and Marshall Avelar.

The family moved to Ellensburg in 1956, where Mamie worked in a paint store and was recruited to teach for the Kittitas School District.

She attended Central Washington State College to complete her teaching certificate and master's degree. Mamie taught at Kittitas Elementary school for many years.

After retiring, Mamie and Dale moved to Centralia, Wash., where she enjoyed traveling, clam digging, church activities, the senior center and playing Bingo. For the past seven years, Mamie resided at Royal Park Care Center, where she happily lived out her life. Mamie was always proud of her Portuguese heritage and the fact that she was the first generation of her family to be born in America, her family having emigrated from the Azores.

Mamie was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Norman (Dale); and her son, Jerome (Jerry). She is survived by her children, Norman Smith (Sue Perkins) of Spokane, Wash., Marshall Smith of Spokane, Wash., Tamara Hinck (Roger) of Onalaska, Wash.; and granddaughters, Morgan Gabbert Culver and Meghan Perkins Wienker.

A memorial Mass will be held at 1 p.m. Monday, Dec. 6, at the St. Mary Catholic Church in Centralia, Wash.

Please visit Mamie's online tribute page and leave condolences at www.hennesseyfuneralhomes.com. Arrangements are in care of Hennessey-Smith Funeral Home in Spokane, Wash.

Larry D. Craggs

WEST LINN, Ore. — Larry D. Craggs, 73, of West Linn, Ore., died Thursday, Nov. 11, 2010, at his home.

Larry, the eldest child of Gilbert and Dorothy Perkins Craggs, was born in Twin Falls, Idaho, on July 5, 1937, where he grew up and graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1956. Upon graduation, he enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps, serving two years in Camp Pendleton. After discharge, he returned to Twin Falls, where he worked in construction, played semiprofessional baseball and met Judy Anderson. Six months later, they married. Larry then attended Idaho State University and earned his Bachelor of Arts and a Master of Arts in education.

A call from University of Oregon's Center for Advanced Study of Education sent Larry to Eugene where he worked on and co-authored a study on the politics of de facto segregation of Portland schools published in May 1969. At the end of the study, Larry began his teaching career — first at Central Linn School District in Brownsville, and retiring from Lake Oswego High School in 1996. Larry enjoyed sailing his sailboat on the Columbia, growing a Rose Society champion rose garden (three-year winner), reading and studying Civil War history, riding his Harley and being at the beach.

He is survived by his wife, Judy; son, Joshua; sister, Sharon McClain (Clyde); and brother, Walter (Pat). He was preceded in death by his son, Daniel, in 1996. A private burial was held. An open house will be from 2 to 5 p.m. on Nov. 17 at the family home.

Joshua James Kimball

JEROME — Joshua James Kimball, 24, of Jerome, went home to be with his Lord and savior Jesus Christ on Sunday, Nov. 21, 2010, at his home surrounded by his loving family.

He was born in Twin Falls, Idaho, on March 12, 1986, the son of James and Michelle McCall Kimball. In 2004, Joshua graduated from Jerome High School. He later attended Boise Sate University. He worked as an IT Technician for Dell from his graduation to its closing in 2009. Josh loved football and many sports activities as a youth. He served a church mission in El Salvador in 2003 for the First Assembly of God Church. He also enjoyed playing the drums and the guitar. He was friend to everyone and a stranger to none; his loving spirit was known to all. The last few months have been a struggle for Josh since losing the love of his life, Taya O Shanick, in February of 2010. Their spirits are now reunited in our Father's heavenly home.

Surviving are his parents, Jim and Michelle Kimball of Jerome; grandparents, Jim and Ann Kimball of Hansen, Idaho; brothers, Justin (Michelle) Kimball of Kimberly, Idaho, Jay (Suzanne) Kimball of Nampa, Idaho, and Jason (Raelynn) McLemore of Twin Falls; and a sister, Denise (John) Lloyd of Twin Falls; along with Taya's parents who have been a second Mom and Dad since he met Taya, Mike and Kyiah Shekanna Evans, and good friend Ashley Burgoyne all of Boise and many nieces and nephews.

A celebration of life will be held at 4 p.m. Monday, Nov. 29, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. Those who wish may make memorial contributions in his name to Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls. Please share condolences at www.magicvalleyfuneral-home.com.

Reta Lou Gee

FEDERAL WAY, Wash. — Reta Lou Gee passed away Thursday, Nov. 18, 2010.

She was born October 17, 1933, in Wenatchee, Wash., to Robert and Edwina Kerr. She married Bruce Gee in 1952; they had four children, Richard, Randy, Becky and Ron. They lived in Renton, Wash., until 1963, when they moved to Twin Falls, Idaho. Reta's passion was being with her children and was always involved in their school, sports and enjoying times in the parks. Her children's smiles and lack of fear; those she said were her golden years.

Reta encountered many friendships working for the state in Twin Falls. She moved to DesMoines, Wash., in the early '80s, where she and her sons operated a limousine service. Reta retired to Shelton, Wash., where she became active in the Elks volunteering her time baking her wonderful breads, cakes and rolls to help raise money for charity. Everyone called her mom or grandma. Her love for her family and close friendships will be greatly missed.

Reta is preceded in death by her parents; daughter, Becky; and brothers, Frank, and Jimmy. Survivors include her children, Richard (Billie) Gee of Tacoma, Wash., Randy Gee of Lacey, Wash., and Ron Gee of Sumner, Wash.; grandchildren, Misty, Randy, Chase, Alysha, Erin, Kassidy and Levi; great-grandchildren, Randalee, Kcee, Cheilynn and Alayla; sisters, Linda, Judy and Susan; and brother, Bob.

A service will be held in the spring.

Mike and Catherine Parke and the staff of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home and the Twin Falls Cemetery would like to extend a personal invitation to you and every member of your family to attend our

OBITUARIES

Roberta Joyal Wagner

BOISE — Roberta Joyal Wagner, 63, passed peacefully Thursday, Nov. 18, 2010, surrounded by her children and loved ones in her home in Boise, Idaho.

Roberta's joy in life came from raising her children and sharing her love of life with them. She was a generous, giving woman who was always thinking of others. Her sense of humor and good nature endeared her to those around her.

Roberta is survived by her four children, six grandchildren, nieces, nephews, two brothers and three sisters.

She lives on in the hearts of everyone who knew and loved her. Her spirit in life and words of wisdom will be passed down for many generations to come.

Roberta was born to Philip and Arleen Joyal on May 10, 1947, in the Panama Canal Zone. Roberta married Peter Josef Wagner in 1966. She raised her family in Elko, Nev., for 14 years. She moved to Pinkafeld, Austria, for two years and moved back to America in 1987, where she resided primarily in Twin Falls and finally settled in Boise, Idaho.

Her family will have an open house celebration of her life from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 28. Please join her children at 2590 N. Sweetwood Ave., Meridian, ID 83646.

Three Turkey Tales | Wild turkeys can run 25 mph and fly twice that. What modern farm birds do fastest is gain weight.

Wild turkeys

As human clans gather for the holidays, wild turkey families split apart. Young males have left the brood, but their sisters will stick with mom for the winter. Dad gobbler was never part of the family — just a fleeting spring fling for the hen.

By autumn, turkeys have moved into the deep woods, where they wander in flocks and fatten up on acorns and other tree fruits.

Native Americans managed their forests to accommodate large populations of wild turkeys, which were an important source for food and feathers for adornment.

A radical transformation of the American landscape had almost eradicated wild turkeys by the 1930s. Since then, protection, reforestation and restocking efforts have made them plentiful enough to hunt again.

Obama pardons turkey, says it won't get shellacking like he did in elections

By Darlene Superville
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Barack Obama performed an annual rite of presidents on Wednesday, pardoning a pair of turkeys on Thanksgiving Eve and cracking jokes about the competition that brought them to his famous doorstep.

"For the record, let me say that it feels pretty good to stop at least one shellacking this November," Obama said in the White House Rose Garden, where he was flanked by daughters Malia and Sasha. A "shellacking" is how Obama described the beating Democrats suffered in elections earlier this month; the party lost control of the House and saw its Senate majority trimmed by six seats.

Apple and Cider, two 21-week-old, 45-pound turkeys raised on a farm outside Modesto, Calif., were plucked from a group of 25 birds during a competition "that involved strutting their stuff before a panel of judges, with an eclectic mix of music playing in the background," Obama said.

He called it a "turkey version" of "Dancing With the Stars," the program that crowned its newest winner Tuesday night.

"Except the stakes for the contestants was much higher," Obama said, laughing. "Only one pair would survive and win the big prize. Life."

Apple and Cider bring Obama's pardon total to four — four turkeys, that is. Last year, he pardoned a pair of turkeys named Courage and Carolina. He has not yet issued any pardons for humans.

A live turkey stands in front of a waxwork of President Obama at Madame Tussauds in London, Tuesday ahead of the annual pardoning of the turkey at the White House.

The president wished America's families, including many buffeted by the economic slump, a safe and happy holiday. He also thanked the men and women of the U.S. military for serving "bravely and selflessly" in places far away from home.

Afterward, Obama approached the table where Apple was positioned and stroked the bird's head. When finished, he said: "All right, have a good life," then he and his daughters walked up the steps and into the Oval Office.

Apple and Cider were then driven to the home of George Washington, the nation's first president, in nearby

U.S. cracks down on fake pot as health threat

By Alicia A. Caldwell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Cracking down on fake pot, the government began emergency action Wednesday to outlaw five chemicals used in herbal blends to make synthetic marijuana. They're sold in drug paraphernalia shops and on the Internet to a burgeoning market of teens and young adults.

The Drug Enforcement Administration responded to the latest designer drug fad by launching a 30-day process to put these chemicals in the same drug category as heroin and cocaine. The agency acted after receiving increasing numbers of bad reports — including seizures, hallucinations and dependency — from poison centers, hospitals and law enforcement, .

It was the fastest action the agency could take to get these products off the legal market. DEA spokeswoman Barbara Carreno said makers of fake pot blends like "Spice," "K2," "Blaze," and "Red X Dawn" label the mixtures as incense to try to hide their intended purpose.

Meantime, there were indications the producers were already moving to reformulate their products using chemicals not covered by the impending ban.

The fake pot — smokeable plant leaves coated with chemicals — has been the target of lawmakers and law enforcement around the country. At least 15 states have moved to regulate or ban one or more of the chemicals, as have some European and Scandinavian countries.

The man who created three of the chemicals as part of his government-sponsored research nearly 20 years ago said, "They are dangerous and anyone who uses them is stupid."

John W. Huffman, a retired organic chemistry researcher from Clemson University, said in a telephone interview from his Sylva, N.C., home, "They seem to be pretty toxic."

He said the reported medical problems have included overdoses, cases of addiction and even suicide.

As of Sept. 27, the American Association of Poison Control Centers had reported receiving more than 1,500 calls from 48 states and the District of Columbia about products spiked with these drugs, the Drug Enforcement Administration said.

The DEA first became aware of the new designer drugs in November 2008 when the U.S. Customs and Border Protection agency analyzed "Spice!"

Sometimes the chemicals are produced abroad and shipped into the United States; earlier this year Customs seized a more than 110-pound load of two of the chemicals.

White House Drug Policy Director Gil Kerlikowske said that with youth drug use rising, "it is critical that parents act today to talk to young people about the harms of drug use, including synthetic marijuana products like Spice and K2 that are marketed as 'incense!'"

In a statement, Kerlikowske added, "Until the risks associated with ingesting these products and chemicals can be studied and understood, there is no place for them on the shelves of any legitimate business."

Ingrid Pitt, doyenne of Hammer horror films, dies

The Associated Press

LONDON — Ingrid Pitt, who survived a Nazi concentration camp and dodged Communist police to become one of Britain's best-known horror stars, died Tuesday, her daughter said. She was 73.

Steffanie Pitt said her mother collapsed while on her way to a birthday dinner due to be held in her honor over the weekend. The cause of death wasn't known, although Steffanie Pitt said her mother had recently been in poor health.

Known in Britain principally as the buxom blood-sucker in "Vampire Lovers" and "Countess Dracula," Ingrid Pitt's acting career very nearly wasn't.

Born to a mother of Jewish descent, Pitt was interned in a Nazi concentration camp at the age of five. She survived the war, but was forced to flee Communist Berlin on the night of her planned stage debut, plunging into the River Spree in a bid to escape East German authorities. In a twist which easily surpassed the drama of the camp horror films in which she starred, she was rescued by an American soldier who would go on to become her husband.

Her movie career was jump-started by her role in the 1968 action-adventure movie, "Where Eagles Dare." The World War II drama would eventually lead to her being taken on by Britain's Hammer Films — home to Christopher Lee's "Dracula." She would play alongside the horror legend in 1971's "The House That Dripped Blood" and 1973's "The Wicker Man."

Steffanie Pitt told The Associated Press that her mother was a determined woman and that "acting was in her blood from the word 'go.'" It seems her mother would have agreed, writing in her autobiography, "Life's a Scream," that she had a "strong sense of the dramatic even before I was born."

ATV group meets with reps of China Mountain project

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

The expansive sagebrush steppe and canyon lands along the Brown Bench area straddling the Idaho/Nevada border are just a couple of reasons it's become a popular draw for all-terrain vehicle riders.

The site also is home to the proposed China Mountain Wind Project, developed by a subsidiary of Renewable Energy Systems America Developments and NV Energy.

Company representative Laurie Lickley met with about 100 members of the Magic Valley ATV Riders club during its Nov. 10 meeting in Twin Falls to discuss the project. The meeting gave the company an opportunity to discuss the project with another community group, said Development Manager Susan Leta Liou.

"What we're doing is reaching out to a wide variety of individuals and communities," Leta Liou told the Times-News. "In general, people are supportive of the project, and while I wasn't at the meeting my understanding, from talking with (Lickley), is that the ATV Riders seemed to be pretty supportive as well."

She said access to the area is the biggest concern.

"The entire Brown Bench area is such a unique area geologically and very pretty as a whole area. I wouldn't say there is one spot in particular that draws riders but rather the entire landscape," said Club President Stan Mai, noting that riders often spot wildlife in the vicinity, such as deer and elk. The area also is critical sage grouse habitat.

The development area is on about 30,000 acres consisting of Bureau of Land Management and Idaho Department of Lands property and private land. Access currently is available across publicly-held and private areas and that won't change, she said.

The company expects to wrap up the permitting process by fall 2011 and begin construction the following year. The first phase of the project, constructing 100 wind turbines that produce up to 200 megawatts of energy, should be completed by the end of 2013.

The company's long-term plan is to build 200 wind turbines producing up to 400 megawatts of energy — enough to power 100,000 homes — according to American Wind Energy Association statistics.

Access will be limited for safety reasons during construction, Leta Liou said.

"Obviously we have to allow public access but we have to make sure people are safe," she said, "including landusers and construction workers."

The specifics of access availability during construction will be ironed out during the permitting process.

Leta Liou said the company is committed to making sure the area remains a draw for recreationists, hunters and other landusers.

"China Mountain Wind, LLC and NV Energy will voluntarily institute a comprehensive conservation plan designed specifically to protect the sage grouse from any potential negative impacts associated with the China Mountain Wind Project," reads the development's website, www.chinamountain.gorillartsgroup.com. The plan includes a multimillion-dollar conservation plan that "will provide on-site restoration activities and avoidance and minimization efforts to protect existing habitat."

"The company seems very multi-use friendly," Mai said. "Obviously, the landscape's look will be altered by the turbines but our club is very pro multi-use of public land and this project falls within proper use of our lands."

Mai said other concerns by club members include increased ATV usage due to road improvements necessary for construction and management of the turbines that will dot the landscape.

"Access will improve and that may increase the number of people going back into the area," he said.

James Allinen, owner of LBZ Racing in Jerome, has organized an activity that involves customizing a sand rail to honor sponsors and help youth. Here, a dune buggy is seen taking air at sand dunes.

Jerome dirt bike team to build sand rail

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

James Allinen is always coming up with something to help youth while promoting his dirt bike team, LBZ Racing.

This time around he wants to build a sand rail, which he calls the "Yamaduner."

Named after his primary dirt bike sponsor, Yamaha, the machine is a dune buggy-type that will feature the ideas of a number of youth.

So far about five youth and a number of adults are involved with the project, which involves getting into teams to customize different portions of the machine.

For these dirt bike fans, Allinen said, it's a bit of a challenge learning about how another off-road machine works.

"We know that they are fun and they are fast," he said, noting that the project will involve kids in learning organizational skills, team work, and identifying parts of a buggy.

"It is definitely the hardest project we've ever come across," he said.

Allinen will travel to Denver this week, where he'll pick up the sand rail. He didn't say how much it cost to purchase the machine, but, hopefully with help from area businesses, he expects to put around $6,000 into customizing it.

Once finished, Allinen will take the buggy to Yamaha Motors in Cypress, Calif., and then to Climb USA in Rigby. He's trying to create interest from Dirt Rider Magazine and other parties in hopes of auctioning it once it's finished. Money raised will go toward helping fund a youth center that'd offer counseling, tutors, and more awareness about the ill-effects of drugs. It'd be the first of its kind, he said.

"It'd be something akin to the Boys and Girls club or the YMCA but with a motocross theme," Allinen said in a previous Times-News article.

His goal all depends on funding, and auctioning the finished sand rail — somewhere in the neighborhood of $10,000 to $15,000, he said — could help. The group currently is seeking grant status.

Actual work on the machine won't start for a while yet, Allinen said, but he hopes to see it finished by early summer.

"If you think winter will put down us motorcycle riders, you're wrong," he said. "The educational experience of this will be awesome ... and then optioning off our work, letting it go for a good cause."

Tips for storing your bike for the cold months

Look outside, it's that time of year again — time to store your motorcycle for winter's long sleep.

It doesn't seem like a whole year has gone by already, but the cold weather tells me it has.

Here are some tips from the good folks at Action Cycles 'N Sleds in Twin Falls, who gave me good advice last year in an article about winterizing off-road machines.

The three main things to storing your motorcycle: remove the battery, stabilize the fuel, and put fresh oil in the engine, said shop Vice President Rob Glodowski.

If the bike is unused for more than a month, old oil can cause contaminants and condensation in the engine, he said. Fresh oil will help prevent this from happening.

Draining the fuel from your machine is a good idea. Or you can use a stabilizer in the fuel that will help keep it from varnishing inside the tank. It also is important to remove the battery to help preserve its life.

"Freezing will shorten the life of the battery by quite a bit," Glodowski said. "There's a fair chance that (after freezing) it might not even bring a charge back the following spring. And if it freezes hard enough, it can break the battery."

Batteries should be removed and stored in a dry, warm place, he said.

There also is another option, according to Jamey Wills, the shop's sales manager. Bikers can buy a self-metering charger that will help protect the battery through Jack Frost's yearly visits.

The charger plugs into the battery and keeps it charged through the winter. When temperatures drop, batteries can discharge. When that happens the charger's sensor kicks in and keeps the battery at full charge.

A self-metering charger retails for about $50, Wills said, and is available at most motorcycle shops.

Wills also recommends draining water from and checking the antifreeze levels of liquid-cooled machines before storing them away. Otherwise, damage caused by ice formed in the radiators and elsewhere on the machine can lead to hefty repair costs. This is especially important for watercraft that will be stored during the cold months, he said.

"Make sure your antifreeze has a freeze rating of 30 below," Wills said. Don't remove spark plugs from your machine, as this can cause dirt to get into the carburetor.

And don't let your tires go completely flat. Remember, cold temperatures cause them to lose air.

Fish and Game changes fishing rules

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

JEROME — Anglers in Idaho will have new fishing rules to abide come January. The Fish and Game Commission ruled in favor of the changes last Thursday morning, when the commission gathered for a day-long meeting at the Magic Valley Region office.

Proposed changes to the rules were suggested in all regions of Idaho. The public's response was for the most part positive, said State Fisheries Manager Bill Horton.

"We received a lot of comment," he said. "By and large anglers said yeah, go ahead and do it."

Two major changes include making year-round seasons and a new format for the rules brochure.

Having year-round seasons is a way to limit the number of rule exceptions, Fisheries Chief Ed Schriever told commissioners. Waters that have special seasons will now be listed as exceptions. Special seasons and gear restrictions were maintained in rivers and streams where continued protection remains necessary to meet fishery objectives.

Two other changes: ending the harvest season on Oct. 15 in the Snake River below American Falls Dam with a catch-and-release season to follow Oct. 16 through the Friday before Memorial Day weekend, and extending the ice fishing season on Henry's Lake.

RULES & RESPONSE

Rules in the Magic Valley Region, and the public's response to the proposals include:

- Opening the general stream season to all year: 411 support; 63 not support; 22 neutral.
- Changing the daily bag limit for walleye from "no limit" to six fish: 420 support; 32 not support; 47 neutral.
- Adopt a year-round stream season on the Malad River; increase bag limit: 359 support; 66 not support; 67 neutral.
- Extend the stream season on all Big Wood River tributaries: 406 support; 60 not support; 45 neutral.
- Remove the 16-inch length limit from cutthroat trout in the Snake River upstream of Shoshone Falls: 317 support; 146 not support; 41 neutral.
- Adopt a year-round stream season on Vinyard Creek: 200 support; 96 not support; 105 neutral.

Nearly every comment dealing with fish during a public comment period the night before at the region office was against season extensions at both American Falls Reservoir and Henry's Lake.

Gary Peck, 46, from Pocatello spoke in opposition to the extended season at American Falls Reservoir. He said the town of American Falls wanted the longer season just for economic reasons.

"When they reduce the flow, the fish are vulnerable," Peck said. "People can take big fish that are stuck in the deep pools because there's no enforcement."

American Falls Mayor Amy Wynn showed up to defend her town's request. Wynn said the city council met with Fish and Game biologists because they care about the integrity of the fishery.

"Yes, it would have a positive economic effect," Wynn said. "But we are requesting an Oct. 15 start date for catch-and-release instead of Oct. 31, because Oct. 15 is usually when they start the draw-down. We agree fish are vulnerable and when you're fishing with bait, it's not fair and ethical"

Proposals in the Magic Valley "sailed through" with little controversy, Horton said Thursday morning.

About 7,000 randomly-selected anglers from all regions of the state received letters explaining the proposals, he said. Another 1,000 steelhead anglers also were contacted. About 45 percent responded to the proposals. The public also had the opportunity to comment online, he said.

Report: Feds failed to properly monitor deadly off-road race

By Phil Willon
Los Angeles Times

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — The federal Bureau of Land Management failed to follow its own procedures for overseeing an August off-road desert race in San Bernardino County in which eight spectators were killed when a racer crashed into a crowd, an internal agency report released Friday determined.

Similar failures for permitted off-road events occurred throughout the 11 million acres of California desert under the agency's control, the report found.

"This tragic accident was a call for us to take an unvarnished look at what went wrong and what BLM can do to improve safety and oversight of these types of races," acting BLM State Director Jim Abbott said in a prepared statement released Friday.

"We are cooperating fully with the California Highway Patrol's ongoing investigation into the accident, but our own internal review found we did not follow agency procedures in permitting and overseeing the event," he said. "We have swiftly taken corrective action by implementing the recommendations of the review team, raising the bar for oversight and safety at all such events, and moving forward with a sense of shared responsibility and accountability."

Newton, gravity, and the ubiquity of natural laws

In 1666, so the story goes, Isaac Newton saw an apple fall from a tree on his family farm, and suddenly understood the moon's motion.

Prior to Newton, it was widely believed that stars and planets obeyed unknown physical laws, different from those on Earth. Newton realized that gravity, the same force that pulled apples to the ground, was the force responsible for keeping the moon in orbit.

We now know that all physical forces, not just gravity, are universal.

The same electromagnetic attraction that holds the molecules of a terrestrial rock together holds rocks together on Mars. Thus, the results of experiments in a lab are applicable to the farthest reaches of the universe.

Of the four known forces (gravity, electromagnetism, and the strong and weak nuclear forces), the weakest is gravity. (Consider that, despite Earth's enormous size, its gravity is too feeble to overwhelm the electromagnetic attraction that bonds the molecules of a tissue dangling from your hand.) Gravity seems strong because the nuclear forces' range is restricted to the atomic nucleus, and electromagnetism can be either attractive or repulsive, allowing positive and negative charges to cancel. Gravity's range is infinite, and all matter is attracted by gravity, so it can never be canceled out.

Before Newton, astrologers postulated causal connections between puzzling events — like earthquakes and weather — and the wandering plants' enigmatic motions. Newton ushered in the possibility of understanding these mysteries as the consequence of knowable forces, relegating astrology to an ever-narrowing range of phenomena, including human capriciousness.

Which leads me to reason No. 12 why astrology is bunk: Unlike all other known forces, why aren't astrological forces (which even astrologers can't identify, let alone quantify) universal, acting on anything other than humans?

When an outing goes wrong

Survival tips for when you're in the wild

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center has put on the Ski and Mountain Trauma Conference each year for the past five years.

The conference, held recently at Sun Valley Resort, brought together 400 ski patrollers and medical personnel from Idaho and its surrounding states to learn about such widely differing subjects as assessing patients in the wilderness to avoiding complacency in swiftwater rescues.

Like the first part of this story that ran last week, here's a look at some more of the things that might help you survive an outing gone wrong.

USE YOUR NOGGIN'

Environmental factors alone don't cause accidents. Human factor is always involved, as well.

Here are some cautions from Nurse Lance Taysom and Mike Morgan, Costa Mesa fire chief who helped oversee firefighting efforts in the 2007 Catalina Island fire off the California coast:

- If someone in the group thinks you're going into a high risk situation, stop and talk about it.
- Have a "This is stupid rule." Consider: Is it necessary? Is there a better way? Should we slow down? Have we identified all the hazards? Have we broken any cardinal rules of backcountry survival? Are we deviating from our original plan — say, ignoring our turn-around time by trying to summit after 2 p.m. in the afternoon?
- If something happens, remain cool and confident. Establish priorities. Hope for the best and prepare for the worst by gathering stuff to build a fire.
- Establish a leader to bring the group together, gather information, prioritize tasks, delegate responsibilities and maintain clear communication with everyone involved.
- Will yourself to stay positive — calm, collected behavior is contagious and, unfortunately, so is panicked behavior.

Be a problem solver, not a finger pointer.

While exuding a positive attitude, plan for the something that will go wrong. Always think: "What will I do if...?"

- Take care of yourself first. You're either an asset or a liability to the group — there's no middle ground. And if your hands are too cold to zip a jacket it's no good to anyone.

- Use your clothing properly. Dress in layers so you don't get sweated up and wet while building a snow shelter. And don't get your inner gloves wet so you don't have anything to keep your hands warm.
- Be vigilant to the end. Often bad things happen, just when it looks as if the crisis is over because people are tired and letting down their guard.
- Don't give up.

PROTECT THAT NOGGIN'

Minor head injuries are more common and insidious than we used to think-and the danger doesn't just extend to football players, even though football concussions have been getting all the press.

Most susceptible: Cowboys, professional athletes, children and seniors.

Andersen, for instance, recalls a skier who got his bell rung and dropped out of school because of subsequent problems that were left untreated. If two snowboarders collide, ask them questions to see how cognizant they are. Do balance tests, making them stand heel to toe with their hands on their hips and eyes closed for at least 20 seconds.

Symptoms to watch out for: Headaches, loss of consciousness, nausea, visual changes, drowsiness, sadness.

The next level would be sustained headaches short-term memory loss, decreased concentration and problem solving skills, sleep deprivation, mood changes and lightheadedness.

Get them to the ER immediately if they're suffering from a worsening headache, weakness, repeated vomiting, persistent lethargy, persistent confusion, decreased balance, blurred vision, seizures and fever.

Those who have suffered a concussion should have complete rest at least 24 hours. Don't even use the computer since that requires thinking.

Resume activity slowly, starting with walking and working up to activities like running that get the heart rate up.

Fish and Game drafting road kill salvage rules

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Fish and Game officials are developing new rules that would allow residents to salvage road kill wildlife.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission last week directed agency staff to research and draft rules that would allow public salvage for personal use and commercial salvage, such as selling pelts.

Existing state rules do not allow for personal or commercial use of accidentally killed wildlife.

Earlier this year, Fish and Game officials opposed a bill that would have allowed the public to snatch up roadkill found along the side of the highway. At the time, the agency said it collected information about animals killed on roads to help determine the length of hunting seasons.

St. Maries Republican Rep. Dick Harwood introduced the bill, saying it didn't make sense to ban people from using dead animals.

Sun Valley skiing opens today

Turkey Day means skiing at Bald and Dollar mountains. The plan is to open the following lifts from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. today, unless otherwise noted.

Bald Mountain: No. 1 Lower River Run High Speed Quad; No. 2

Dollar Mountain: No. 19 Quarter Dollar Quad; No. 17 Accelerator Carpet.

Plans also are to open the following terrain:

Bald Mountain: Upper College, Roundhouse Lane, Mid River Run, 42nd Street and Lower River Run

Dollar Mountain: Quarter Dollar Bowl, Poverty Flats, Race Hill, Cabin Practice

Additional terrain expansion will happen as weather permits.

Question: After accepting my money and working on my case for over a month, the attorney I retained to file a Chapter 7 bankruptcy told me that the "Means Test" indicated that I must file a Chapter 13 bankruptcy case and that he doesn't handle Chapter 13 cases. What is the "Means Test" and what can I do about my attorney? Mary?

Answer: Mary, I will answer your question about the means test in subsequent columns. Right now, you need to understand that bankruptcy law is highly technical and that some attorneys are unwilling to file Chapter 13 cases because they simply are not competent to do so. You should ask yourself why, if your attorney is not capable of handling a Chapter 13 case, you would choose that attorney to handle a Chapter 7 case for you? There is no need to accept 2nd best. You want to pick the most competent and experienced attorney available to help you. Consider contacting Consumer Credit Management Services at 733-2227. They can recommend an attorney capable of handling your case, no matter what chapter you need to file. There are several competent attorneys in your community; you don't need to settle for one that only knows part of the law.

Blaine and Custer Counties, Idaho
Salmon River Electric Cooperative, Inc. Special Use Permit
Reissuance Proposal

The Forest Service, Sawtooth National Forest, Sawtooth National Recreation Area, is preparing an Environmental Assessment for the Salmon River Electric Cooperative, Inc. Special Use Permit Reissuance Proposal. Salmon River Electric is a rural electric cooperative that provides retail electrical service for approximately 2,000 customers in portions of Custer, Lemhi and Blaine Counties. Salmon River Electric operates and maintains approximately 14 miles of underground and 57 miles of overhead power lines across Federal lands in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area (Sawtooth NRA). A special use permit is needed to authorize the continued presence and operation of this power transmission and distribution network on US Forest Service lands within the Sawtooth NRA. The existing permit term has expired.

The proposal is for the US Forest Service to issue a special use permit authorizing continued operation and maintenance of the existing transmission and distribution lines within the Sawtooth NRA for a term of 50 years. No new line construction or service upgrades are currently proposed.

The proposed action description and other information are available for review at the Sawtooth NRA Headquarters office, the Sawtooth NRA Stanley Ranger Station, and the Sawtooth National Forest Supervisor's office. Additional information regarding this action may be obtained from: Dave Fluetsch, 5 North Fork Canyon Road, Ketchum, ID 83340 (phone: 208-727-5000). The purpose of this comment period is to provide an opportunity for the public to provide early and meaningful participation on a proposed action prior to a decision being made by the Responsible Official.

How to Comment and Timeframe
Written, facsimile, hand-delivered, oral, and electronic comments concerning this action will be accepted for 30 calendar days following the publication of this notice in the Twin Falls Times-News. The publication date in the newspaper of record is the exclusive means for calculating the comment period for this analysis. Those wishing to comment should not rely upon dates or timeframe information provided by any other source. The regulations prohibit extending the length of the comment period. Written comments must be submitted to: Sara Baldwin, Area Ranger, Sawtooth National Recreation Area, 5 North Fork Canyon Road, Ketchum, ID 83340. The office business hours for those submitting hand-delivered comments are 8:30am 5pm, Monday through Friday, excluding holidays (Sawtooth NRA Headquarters, 8 miles north of Ketchum). Oral comments must be provided at the Responsible Official's office during normal business hours via telephone (208-727-5000) or in person.

Electronic comments must be submitted in a format such as an email message, plain text (.txt), rich text format (.rtf), and Word (.doc) to <comments-intermtn-sawtooth-nra@fs.fed.us>. In cases where no identifiable name is attached to an electronic message, a verification of identity will be required for appeal eligibility. A scanned signature can be used for verification.

Appeal Eligibility
It is the responsibility of persons providing comments to submit them by the close of the comment period. Those who provide comments during this comment period are eligible to appeal the decision under the regulations. Individuals and organizations wishing to be eligible to appeal must provide the following information:
1. Name and Address;
2. Title of the proposed action;
3. Specific facts or comments on the proposed action, along with supporting reasons that the Responsible Official should consider in reaching a decision;
4. Signature or other verification of identity upon request; identification of the individual or organization who authored the comments(s) is necessary for appeal eligibility;
5. For multiple names or multiple organizations, a signature must be provided for the individual authorized to represent each organization, or for each individual that wishes to have appeal eligibility, and
6. Individual members of organizations must submit their own comments to meet the requirements of appeal eligibility as an individual, comments received on behalf of an organization are considered as those of the organization only.

Administrative Office 237

Notice is further given that only qualified electors of the District, being United States citizens eighteen (18) years of age or older, who have resided in the District for thirty (30) days preceding the Bond Election and who are registered or who register at the polls on the day of the Bond Election, as provided by law, are entitled to vote at said election.

Any registered elector of the District may make written application to the Clerk of the District in accordance with law for an absentee ballot, provided that an absentee ballot must be received by the Clerk at the above Absentee Address not later than 8:00 P.M. on the day of the election in order to be counted.

If at said Special General Obligation Bond Election two-thirds (2/3) of the qualified registered electors eighteen (18) years of age or older voting at such election assent to the issuing of negotiable bonds, and the incurring of the indebtedness thereby created for the purpose of financing the costs of the projects described in the above Question, such negotiable bonds shall be issued for such voted purposes in the manner provided by the Idaho Code. Said negotiable bonds, or any series thereof, shall mature over a period commencing at the expiration of not more than two (2) years from the date of each series, and ending not more than twenty (20) years from the issue date of each series, and shall bear interest and be payable from ad valorem taxes in accordance with the provisions of Section 33 1107, Idaho Code.

As of December 2, 2010, the total existing bonded indebtedness of the District, including interest accrued, is $10,064,100.02.

The interest rate anticipated on $10,000,000 of the principal amount of the proposed negotiable bonds to be designated qualified school construction bonds ("QSCBs") is zero percent (0.00%). The range of anticipated rates for the QSCBs is from zero percent (0.00%) to two percent (2.00%). The total amount to be repaid over the life of the proposed QSCBs, based on the anticipated interest rate, is $10,000,000.

The interest rate anticipated on the approximate principal amount of $31,500,000 of the proposed negotiable bonds is approximately three and eight-tenths percent (3.80%). The range of anticipated rates is from three percent (3.00%) to five percent (5.00%). The total amount to be repaid over the life of the proposed $31,500,000 principal amount of negotiable bonds, based on the anticipated interest rate, is $43,262,342.29.

BILL NO. 563
ORDINANCE NO 1079

AN ORDINANCE OF THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF JEROME, IDAHO, AMENDING TITLE 17 OF THE JEROME MUNICIPAL CODE BY ESTABLISHING A DESIGN REVIEW OVERLAY DISTRICT; DEFINING THE ORIGINAL AREA WITHIN THE DESIGN OVERLAY DISTRICT; REQUIRING DESIGN REVIEW OF ALL DEVELOPMENT, AS DEFINED BY THE ORDINANCE WITHIN THE DESIGN REVIEW OVERLAY DISTRICT BEFORE ISSUANCE OF A BUILDING PERMIT AND PROVIDING EXCEPTIONS TO SUCH REQUIREMENT; ESTABLISHING PROCEDURES FOR DESIGN REVIEW; SPECIFYING CONTENTS OF APPLICATIONS FOR A DESIGN REVIEW PERMIT; ESTABLISHING CRITERIA THAT MUST BE MET FOR THE ISSUANCE OF A DESIGN REVIEW PERMIT; PROVIDING FOR PERMITS AND FEES FOR PROCESSING APPLICATIONS AND ISSUING PERMITS; PROVIDING FOR PENALTIES FOR NONCOMPLIANCE; PROVIDING FOR AN EFFECTIVE DATE.

WHEREAS, the aesthetics of building structures and other improvements adjacent to Main and Lincoln Streets within the City of Jerome are important to maintain an atmosphere that will permit appropriate economic development for the betterment of all citizens within the City of Jerome; and, WHEREAS, the aesthetics of building structures and other improvements within those areas enhance the quality and enjoyment of life of the citizens of Jerome; and, WHEREAS, existing buildings and structures, and later development, within the areas adjacent to Main and Lincoln Streets be consistent with the intended character of the areas where they are found; and,

WHEREAS, a public hearing on this ordinance was held before the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission on the 26th day of October, 2010; and,

WHEREAS, a public hearing on this ordinance was held before the City Council on the 16th day of November, 2010; and,

WHEREAS, on the 16th day of October, 2010, the City Council determined that this ordinance was not in conflict with the City's Comprehensive Plan,

BE IT THEREFORE ORDAINED by the Mayor and Council of the City of Jerome, Idaho, as follows:

1. Title 17 of the Jerome Municipal Code is amended by adding Chapter 17.10.020 Jerome Municipal Code as follows:

Section 1. The Design Overlay District is hereby created. The real property within the Design Overlay District shall consist of the following real property:
All real property parallel to and within one hundred fifty feet (150') of the rights of way for either Main Street or Lincoln Street within the boundaries of the City of Jerome, excluding any property used for residential purposes, or which is occupied by the owner as a personal residence.

Section 2. Amendment of Zoning Map. The Official Zoning Map of the City of Jerome is hereby amended to include the above real property, described in Section 1 above, within the Design Overlay District.

Section 3. Prior to obtaining a building permit as required by the International Building Code or any successor uniform code adopted by the City of Jerome, any person shall, prior to obtaining a building permit for structures within the Design Overlay District, apply for, and obtain, a Design Review Permit. Additionally, a Design Review Permit shall be obtained by any person prior to painting or modifying the exterior façade of any structure or building facing Main or Lincoln Streets, or altering any sign, which sign faces either Main or Lincoln Streets within the Design Review Overlay District. The following activities shall be excepted from the requirement to obtain a Design Review Permit:

A. Interior remodeling of a building or structure which does not impact its exterior appearance or significantly impact the parking, landscaping or other exterior uses of the property on which it is located; or

B. Repairs to an existing building or structure if the exterior appearance is not significantly altered; or,

C. Improvements to, or modification or maintenance of, undeveloped property which does not significantly alter the outward appearance of the property.

Section 4. Applications: Fee.

A. A person required to obtain a Design Review Permit under this chapter shall submit an application to the Zoning Administrator:

B. Application shall be made on a form to be provided by the Zoning Administrator, which has been approved by the Commission. No fee for the Application shall be required unless the Council has passed a resolution requiring a fee prior to the filing of the application.

Section 5. Application Review.

When an application for a Design Review Permit has been received with the appropriate fee, if such fee is required, the Zoning Administrator shall review the Application and, if the Zoning Administrator determines that the Application will have no substantial impact on real property within the Design Overlay District adjacent to the real property affected by the application or upon the City itself, the Zoning Administrator may submit findings of the Application and place it on the agenda of the Commission for its next regular meeting.

Section 6. Planning and Zoning Commission; Hearing.

A. The Zoning Administrator shall only have authority to recommend approval of an Application for Design Review Permit to the Commission, or send such Application to the Commission for its consideration without making a recommendation for approval on its consent agenda. The Commission may approve, deny, or conditionally approve any application for a Design Review Permit.

B. At any meeting of the Commission at which the approval of a Design Permit Application is on the agenda, the Commission may approve the application by the unanimous vote of the members present. If no unanimous vote is obtained, a public hearing shall be required on the Application for Design Review Permit at a meeting of the Commission after public notice of such hearing is given pursuant to Idaho Code §67-6509. After the hearing, the Commission may approve, by a majority vote, an application for Design Review Permit.

Section 7. Appeals.

Appeals of the decision of the Commission on Design Review Permit applications may be appealed to the City Council under the provisions of Chapter 17.70.070 Jerome Municipal Code.

Section 8. Permit Issuance.

When an application for Design Review Permit has been approved, an original Design Review Permit shall be issued by the Commission and signed by the Zoning Administrator, setting forth the details of the permit and any conditions thereto.

Section 9. Contents of Application.

The Application for Design Review Permit shall be made to the Commission and shall contain all information which may be required by the Commission including but not limited to:

A. Name and address of Applicant

B. The legal description upon which the project will be undertaken;

C. The street address of the real property upon which the project will be undertaken;

D. The owner of the real property;

E. A narrative statement describing how the application meets the criteria set forth herein.

F. Unless waived for good cause, in whole or in part by the Zoning Administrator, seven (7) copies of the following:

1. Vicinity map showing the property's location in relationship to neighboring properties in the surrounding area.

2. A copy of any existing subdivision design or construction standards then in effect with respect to the property.

3. Elevations of all sides of any new or modified building or structure on the real property;

4. Descriptions or details of all materials proposed to be used for the exterior of the building or structure, including color chips and color swatches;

5. A plan for any landscaping to be modified or constructed, if any; and

6. Details of the placement, height, and specifications for new or modified exterior lighting, if any.

Section 10. Scope of Review.

The Zoning Administrator or the Commission if the Zoning Administrator determines not to make a recommendation, in cases where the sign or façade under Section 3 above involves less than fifty (50) square feet, shall review the application for compliance with the following criteria:

A. Whether the project compromises the health, safety or welfare of the public;

B. Whether the project is in general compliance with the Design Review Guidelines then in force as adopted.

The Zoning Administrator shall report to the Commission at its next ensuing meeting all decisions made by the Administrator under this Section.

Section 11. Revocation of Permit.

A Design Review Permit issued and which has become final and nonappealable, may be subject to revocation if the project described in the Permit is constructed or operated in violation of the Design Review Permit. The Council may initiate procedures for the revocation of a Design Review Permit and require the holder of such a permit to appear and show cause before it why the permit should not be subject to revocation.

Section 12. Penalties for Non-Compliance; Binding on Successors.

No Certificate of Occupancy shall be issued for any new structure or building under chapter 17.50.060 Jerome Municipal Code until full compliance with the Design Review Permit has been demonstrated. Any person no longer in compliance with an issued Design Review Permit may, upon prior notice from the Council, and an opportunity to be heard, have its Design Review Permit revoked. The Certificate of Occupancy shall not be reissued until compliance with the Design Review Permit has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Council. Every Design Review Permit shall be binding upon the heirs, successors and assigns of the person to whom the Design Review Permit was issued.

Section 13. Effective Date.

This ordinance shall become effective upon its passage and publication as required by law.

PASSED BY THE COUNCIL this 16th day of November, 2010.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Thou'lt come no more, Never, never, never, never, never!"
— William Shakespeare

At no-trump a simple rule is that it never makes sense to play on the opponents' suit and set it up for them before you play on your own. But never say never, as demonstrated in today's deal, which comes from last year's Fall Nationals, at San Diego.

Consider the contract of three no-trump on the lead of the diamond four. You take East's diamond jack with your king. What now? A simple approach would be to play a spade to dummy and go after clubs. That covers most of the bases, but not the 4-0 break when West has the length. Since this is a team game, where the object is to insure the contract, better is to lead a low club up to dummy at trick two. Lo and behold, East shows out.

Now you have to be careful. If you cross back to hand with the spade ace to lead a club up, West wins the club king, leaving clubs blocked, and plays a second diamond. Now you can't unscramble your tricks.

Better is to make the somewhat unnatural-looking move of crossing to your diamond ace at trick three. This sets up the opponents' diamonds, but in return you get to play a second club up toward dummy while leaving your entry protected. This lets West win his club king and cash the diamonds. But you can win the spade return in dummy, unblock clubs, and come to hand with the spade ace to claim the balance.

ANSWER: It is rare to find opponents who use natural overcalls of one no-trump. But whatever the meaning of the two-club overcall (unless it specifically guarantees both majors), it is best to use the double of two clubs as Stayman — as if the opponents had not intervened at all — and to play the rest of your normal system as if the opponents had not bid at all. For higher-level intervention, takeout doubles work fine from both sides of the table.

DEAR ABBY: I am a teenage girl about to start looking for my first job. I have four facial piercings and I feel they may be detrimental to finding one.

I have researched effective ways of hiding my choices in jewelry. My question is, during an interview, is it OK to ask about a company's policy on piercings? My mother thinks I shouldn't, but I feel it might be a good idea to be upfront about the way I like to look.

Taking the piercings out is not an option. I have invested too much time, energy, money and pain. The fact that I can keep my piercings clean and healthy should speak for my level of responsibility. I would love some advice, Abby.

— BEJEWELED IN OTTAWA

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR BEJEWELED: Many businesses and companies have strict codes that cover how they want their employees to look while representing them. Regardless of how clean you keep your body jewelry, if you don't fit their "brand" image, you will not qualify.

Because you have too much invested in your piercings to remove them, my advice is to interview with companies that are involved in the arts, fashion, media and Internet technology. They cater to a younger, more liberal demographic, and you will be free to be more yourself than have to project a corporate image.

DEAR ABBY: My question has to do with gift giving and receiving. My mother-in-law has a standard reaction after she is given a gift. She scrunches up her face and starts yelling, "I thought I told you no gifts!" It's not a polite, "I wish you hadn't spent your money on me." She then proceeds to open the package and starts complaining about the tape, ribbons, etc., her standard comments being, "Do you have any tape left at your house?" or, "I know who wrapped this one!" directed at me. Then she says, "What am I supposed to do with this?" or some other put-down.

I have found myself offering gifts at other times of the year — something to keep her warm or that she needs — always unwrapped and casually delivered. My question is, "What's wrong with me?"

— "NO GIFTIES" IN GRAHAM, WASH.

DEAR "NO GIFTIES": What's "wrong" with you is you're a glutton for punishment. This year, take your mother-in-law at her word and "surprise" her by giving her what she has said she wanted all these years: nothing. Then she'll be speechless.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Ronald" exclusively for eight months. I invited him to our family Thanksgiving dinner and he accepted, but then he decided to go to his brother's instead. (They invited him two weeks after I had asked him.)

Shouldn't couples be together for the holidays, or am I asking too much? Ronald has met my parents, but I have yet to meet any of his family. Is this a sign that he just doesn't care?

— DISAPPOINTED IN MICHIGAN

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Let me put it this way: It's a sign that Ronald doesn't care as much as you do.

IF NOVEMBER 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: If you have some important wishes and needs, they are almost sure to be fulfilled between now and early February. The direction of your life can take a decided turn for the better if you accept the wise advice of a friendly benefactor or embrace an unexpected opportunity without hesitation in January. Your happy and secure future rides on the contacts and conditions that you encounter during the next several weeks. This is the time to put the pedal to the metal and make as much progress as possible, even if you feel more like relaxing and enjoying some very happy holiday cheer. In March, April and May use caution, even if you receive plenty of applause in public. Remember that when life hands you lemons it is best to make lemonade.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can give thanks for your dinner as well as your company. Even if you eat a dinner by yourself, you still have people to call or e-mail. Be grateful for the things that you have no matter how modest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Risk not, want not. If you wrestle someone for the wishbone, you might get your wish. However, if you risk large sums of money on the results of a sporting event, or make other bets, you might lose.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take a page from a book about the Pilgrims. Invite someone in the neighborhood or a casual acquaintance to share your bounty. If you can't have someone new at your table, donate to a food bank.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): When something strange is placed on your plate taste a little to be polite. You might be surprised that something new and unusual satisfies your appetite. Broaden your horizons by experimenting.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pass the gravy and mashed potatoes, but don't make that your only participant sport. Get out for a walk or a game of touch football. A little outdoor exercise will clear your head and restore your vitality.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This isn't the time to "talk turkey." Concentrate on being polite and non-committal. When floundering in a quagmire of choices at a meal or in your personal life, test a little of everything.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gardeners know you shouldn't pick crops before they are ripe. You might hope to prematurely harvest rewards that you do not yet deserve. If you are on vacation, relax and quit trying to maneuver.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do your duty when it's due. You might not be overly delighted to attend a family get together but your presence is expected. The pressure may be placed on you to participate against your will.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Slow down the pace. On this holiday, you may be brought closer to old friends or put in contact with the elderly who offer sound advice. Adjust your attitude to meet the expectations of others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do the right thing. Try old-fashioned manners. Take along a "bread and butter" gift if you are invited to someone's home for a holiday celebration. There is no need to wallow in self-doubt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your eyes are bigger than your stomach. Go easy on second helpings and remain skeptical of "fish tales." Don't eat everything that is put in front of you. Get in touch with a new friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Aim for what you really want. Flattery will get you anywhere, but you might be too discriminating to rest content if you end up just anywhere. Focus on creative ideas, hobbies, or holiday entertaining.

Sun Valley Lodge celebrates

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — It was 74 years ago this Dec. 21 that the Sun Valley Lodge opened, cementing Sun Valley’s status as North America’s first destination ski resort.

Sun Valley Resort is using that milestone to launch a year’s worth of special activities commemorating its 75th anniversary season.

The season gets away in earnest today — a feat made possible by snow-making. That’s something that early Sun Valley didn’t have — its celebrity guests had to wait until a New Year’s Eve snow to give them something to slide around on.

The Thanksgiving Weekend includes showings of Warren Miller’s

But the celebration gets under way in earnest on Dec. 17 with a 75th Season Rail Jam Exhibition and barbecue at Dollar Mountain’s Terrain Park where hot shot skiers and boarders are expected to turn out in droves to test the unique Quad Wall especially built for the 75th anniversary season.

A Vintage Ski Party and Contest highlighting Sun Valley’s glamour and style through the decades will be held at 2 p.m. Dec. 18 at River Run Lodge. Prizes will be given for those depicting some of the best ski wear of the decades, said Sun Valley Marketing Assistant Kate Randall.

The day will be capped with Sun Valley’s traditional Tree Lighting Ceremony and Sun Valley Carolers and the arrival of Santa Claus on his sleigh. A Silver and Gold Ice Show featuring Olympic medalists will follow on Dec. 21 — the anniversary of the lodge opening.

One of the highlights of the winter season will be a weeklong celebration with the International Skiing History Association and the U.S. Ski and Snowboard Hall of Fame. The week will climax with the induction of Sun Valley Resort Owner Earl Holding and Paralympian Muffy Davis into the Hall of Fame on April 2.

“As with any sport, being inducted into the Hall of Fame is the biggest honor you can have. We already have a lot of Sun Valley people in the Hall of Fame, including Averell Harriman, Chuck Ferries, Gretchen Fraser and Picabo Street. But to have the induction here will be yet another event that will attract people during our 75th winter season,” said Sun Valley’s Marketing Director Jack Sibbach.

Sun Valley, which introduced limo leaping and pond skimming on Dollar Mountain last year, plans to ramp up the excitement even more this year. The lodge is celebrating 75 years this season.

One of Idaho’s most popular family-friendly ski destinations, Brundage Mountain Resort, celebrates 50 years this season.

To mark the event, the mountain has a number of activities planned, said spokeswoman April Russell.

The highlight comes on Dec. 29, she said, when the mountain will hold a “Light Up the Night” party. The event will feature live music, a torchlight parade — snow buffs will ski down the mountain holding lighted torches — and a fireworks show.

“Everything will be open late and anyone can come to the party for free,” Russell said.

The lifts close at 4:30 p.m., so the celebrations won’t kick off until after that, starting with live music, she said. The fireworks show will start at around 6 p.m.

Brundage, located high in the mountains of central-Idaho near McCall, has 25 year-round employees but that number climbs to between 100 and 145 during the ski season. That might not sound like a lot, Russell said, but when you consider how many people are out of work in the area it matters a great deal.

Russell said she considers the mountain a regional ski destination, noting that season-pass holders represent 42 different states. A few live out of the country.

Its core market, however, is the Treasure and Magic valleys, she said. People love its dry powder.

"We pride ourselves on two things: being family-friendly and the quality of our snow," Russell said. "We're right at a special place where we get an influx of two weather systems ... We get the perfect storm coming from the north and the south. And being just across from Hells Canyon, the high desert areas, the storms tend to really dry out right before they hit us. We don't get the most snow in the state, but we get the consistent dry snowfall that skiers love."

Annually, the mountain receives around 320 inches of snowfall.

Russell said the past two ski seasons have been good for the mountain, and she expects this year to be just as good. Part of that has to do with the economy, she said, which causes families to ski closer to home rather than travel outside the state.

BLUE MOUNTAIN

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

Will Van Ert and Dick Byerley belong to 'The Suits,' as they've come to be called. The Suits, a group that wears the same color apparel, have become a fixture on Bald Mountain.

Suit group a fixture on Bald Mountain

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — If it's Tuesday, you can rest assured it's a blue day on Baldy. Come Wednesday, you'll be seeing red.

Will Van Ert doesn't have to think twice about which ski parka to don whenever he hits Baldy. It's pre-ordained for him, as it has been for years.

Van Ert belongs to "The Suits," as they've come to be called.

The group of men have become a fixture on Bald Mountain for decades, weaving in and around bathtub-sized moguls under the Challenger chairlift and cutting through pristine corduroy on Christmas Ridge.

You can't miss them because they always wear the same colored suits designated according to the day of the week. It's the suits that set them apart. And, probably, the suits that have kept them together.

After all, without the suits they would be just a nondescript group of good friends who enjoy skiing together.

"One of the guys used to sit on the board of Marker clothing and as a result we got new Marker jackets every year," said David Hitchin, a retired strategy professor.

The Suits had their genesis in Sun Valley's Mountain Masters program, which offers high-level instruction for up to a hundred men and women each winter. The skiers split into groups, skiing with Sun Valley's top ski instructors three hours of instruction a day five days a week from January through March.

The Suits clicked and so have been skiing together every year since, some of them flocking back to town every winter just for the program.

The group includes Peter Gray, who remembers entertaining Ernest Hemingway at his house when he was a boy; Van Ert, a former heating and air conditioning executive and father of Olympic snowboard Sondra Van Ert; David Hitchin, a retired professor of strategy; Dick Byerley, a former alfalfa seed salesman and a host of others, including Jim Chalmers, Slim Sommerville, Bill Carson, Michael Suttor and Roger O'Connell.

"Some people ask why someone like myself who has been skiing for 56 years would still ski with an instructor," said Van Ert. "No matter how long you've been skiing you can get into bad habits. If I make a mistake and I'm skiing alone all day, I'm perfecting that error. If I have a ski instructor along, they can look at me and say, 'Did you notice you're letting your pole lag?'"

Skiing together as long as they have, the group has racked up an impressive litany of adventures.

One of the Suits, for instance, became separated from the rest of the group when they decided to ski out of bounds off the backside of Baldy into Greenhorn Gulch. The group was just about to call for a helicopter search when a police radio crackled and a searcher informed them the man had been found nurturing a glass of wine at his home in Greenhorn Gulch where he had skied after he lost track of the others.

"He was worried about the group. He thought we'd gotten lost," said Van Ert.

With so much mountain to be covered each day, there's no time for talking about their Lipitor, even though the guys are in their 60s, 70s and — eek — even 80s. But they do stop for hot chocolate halfway through their class every morning, swapping stories around their table in the Seattle Ridge Lodge just like campers around a campfire.

"When Bill Carson takes a fall, it's monumental," said David Hitchin. "And for years I was his caddy picking up all his things. I remember following him one time on I-80 and he caught an edge and in a split second was over the edge. I was sure he had bitten it big time. But he yelled up, 'Of course, I'm all right!'"

And when their quads can't take another turn, they've parked their skis long enough to get together with their families for Super Bowl and other parties.

"Our wives often have lunch together while we're skiing," said Dick Byerley. "Sometimes they even ski together."

Family fun at Pomerelle Mountain Resort

Times-News

Get your skis on, folks — Pomerelle Mountain Resort is ready to treat you to a season of snow play.

Pomerelle, nestled at 8,000 feet in the Sawtooth National Forest near Albion, is a family-friendly resort with plenty of opportunities for all level skiers.

The southern Idaho resort caters specifically to families (especially those with little ones) enjoying and learning to ski/board.

According to the mountain's website, the resort's 24 slopes are serviced by one triple-chair, one double chair and a 450-foot Magic Carpet boardwalk lift.

There is a "wide variety of terrain with extensive 'gladed' sweet spots, as well as dispersed terrain features" for skiers and snowboarders, according to the website. Nordic loops are located adjacent to the resort.

For more information, including pricing and events: www.pomerelle-mtn.com or 673-5555.

Soldier Mountain offers certified ski school

Times-News

Look no further than Fairfield's Soldier Mountain.

"We have stepped up to provide a full service Winter Sports School," the mountain's website reads. It is a certified full-service ski and snowboard school.

Private and group lessons are available, as is a women's clinic that starts in January and goes to the end of the snow season. The class is open to snowboarders as well, according to the website. Special group packages available.

For more information, including pricing and events: www.skischool@soldiermountain.com or 764-2252.

Dollar Mountain sports new rails

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — You don't need snow to slide around a ski mountain anymore.

Not since jumps and rails and boxes and wall rides and bonks — vertical cylinders, that is — became fun de jour.

Sun Valley is upping the fun quotient at the Dollar Mountain Terrain Park it opened last year with 26 new play features.

Three of its employees began building those features last spring — even as last season's snow was still melting on Baldy.

And the pipe innovators have concocted an impressive array of steel contraptions that go far beyond the simpler flat rails built last year for the terrain park's inaugural year.

The new features include a 40-foot- by 12-inch side-ways pipe line featured in the latest Forum Snowboard film. Another features a vertical choo-choo train-like barrel that riders will be able to hop on top of and hang for a moment.

And, perhaps, the most impressive is a 2,000-pound four-sided wall ride built for Sun Valley's 75th winter season that resembles a pyramid with interior lighting shining through its plexiglass walls. It's designed so riders can schuss up the wall and hit the top of it if they dare.

"The kids are looking at these like, 'Really? That's ours? Do we really get to play on them?'" said Sun Valley's Freestyle Coach Andy Gilbert. "It's been a long time coming, but this winter's going to be a great adventure with all these new features."

Terrain Park Designer Brian Callahan and his crew — Mike Gorman and Chris Shepard — designed many of the new features using recycled snowmaking pipes. They cut the steel in the shops at the base of Baldy's River Run, welding them together and finishing them off with a paint job and stickers featuring Sun Valley's logo.

"Some of the ideas came from things we saw at other terrain parks. A lot of it was Brian's and our ideas," said Gorman.

"It was pretty special being able to work on these since it's not something a lot of people get to do," added Shepard. "Since Sun Valley didn't have a terrain park before last year, we feel like we're creating something completely new. And if these prove popular, we'll keep on building them."

Combined with last year's rails, Sun Valley now sports about 40 steel rides.

A small army that includes the trio who built the rails will also craft jumps and whoop-de-doods or rollers out of snow. They will make over the bumps and jumps throughout the season, offering riders fresh looks and new challenges from one week to the next.

"It's a lot of pushing snow around and shoveling and hand work," said Gorman, who spent 18-hour days building a 30-foot jump with a 110-foot chasm on Lower Warm Springs last spring for the ski movie "Eye Trip." "We cut a jump by hand, straighten the walls with a chain saw, rake it, make sure it's smooth. Then we rearrange fences to make sure it's safe."

A bevy of star athletes will show off the new railings during a Season Rail Exhibition on Dec. 17, commemorating Sun Valley's 75th anniversary celebration.

Sun Valley also expects to have plenty of star athletes vying for prizes during its 2011 Lunar Eclipse Rail Jam Series on Feb. 5, Feb. 19 and March 19. The evening event will feature PBR, brats and discounted hamburgers under the floodlights while nighttime tubers whiz by.

The resort is offering a brand new freestyle camp on Dollar Mountain for skiers and snowboarders ages 6 through 18 who want to take on the rails and jumps. Sun Valley's Snowsports School will offer a new class titled Terrain park 101. And Fridays have been designated "Freestyle Fridays" with the resort's best freestyle instructors taking children from the whoop-de-doods to full-on catching air.

Terrain parks — essentially playgrounds with snow-riding teeter-totters and the like — are a relatively recent addition to ski mountains. Modeled after skateparks, the first was built in 1990 at Vail. They've rapidly become a must-have for any mountain wanting to lure youth and families and a "sick" rating from the kids.

Sun Valley hired Snow Park Technologies, which designs terrain for ESPN's Winter X-Games and the Vans Triple Crown of Snowboarding, to build its park. The firm, considered the best in the business, also designs parks for Vail, Beaver Creek, Copper Mountain, Mount Hood Meadows, Jackson Hole, Theatre-Japan, Northstar-at-Tahoe, Copper Mountain and Keystone.

This year's new features put Sun Valley a step closer to its goal of sporting one of the top world-class terrain parks in North America, said Gorman.

"There certainly isn't another mountain in Idaho with a better terrain park," said Shepard. "We're taking care of the basics this year so we can only go bigger and better next year."

5 savvy websites every snow buff should check out

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Winter — it only comes around every nine months. But in that time, winter sports gear is marked by new technology and features.

For the snow buff who wants the best in equipment without taxing their wallet, it can be challenging to choose the right gear.

Thankfully, the perusal of a few websites can help you sift through the options and help you find the gear that best suits your needs.

Here are five savvy websites you might want to visit the next time you're in the market for winter sports gear. Later, after you've tried your new gear out on the slopes, you can go back to some of the sites and rate the product for other potential buyers. Be sure to read users' comments before you buy.

1. On The Snow
(onthe-snow.com)

Not only can you read product reviews on this website, but you can click on a state to read or rate ski resorts. Click on Idaho to see what people say about the Gem State's many snow-play areas.

2. Ski-Review
(ski-review.com)

This site is full of information about ski gear and brands. Give it a read.

3. Rocky Mountain Gear
(rockymountaingear-guide.com)

Register on this website and you can ask an expert your questions. It also has news items to keep you abreast of what's going on in the winter sports world across the country.

4. The Skiing Experts
(theskiingexperts.com)

Want ski advice, or perhaps learn about new places to visit? Check this site out, where you'll find plenty of options.

5. Wild Snow: The Backcountry Ski Blog
(wildsnow.com)

Yes, it's a blog, but a darn good one. Professional backcountry skier Lou Dawson shares experiences, product reviews and other information. He'll even answer your questions, if you leave them as blog comments. It's a personable and fun site, and you won't be wasting your time if you use it.

Celebration

But while Sun Valley is celebrating its history, it's moving forward with a variety of activities to try to create the same kind of buzz for skiers and snowboarders that greeted guests nearly 75 years ago.

For those who like a touch of glamour, Sun Valley is offering evening dining at the historic Roundhouse beginning Dec. 10. Dinner will be served from 6 to 9 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays through March 27 with the experience offering dinner guests a view of the city lights from midway up Bald Mountain at 7,700 feet.

Guests are asked to arrive 15 minutes prior to their scheduled dinner reservation time to ride the Gondola to the restaurant (call 622-2012).

The Sun Valley Snowsports School is offering a variety of new classes and activities revolving around its new Kiddie World and expanded Terrain park on Dollar Mountain. Among them: Terrain Park 101, and Freestyle Fridays.

Thursdays, meanwhile, have been designated Pee Wee Race Day.

"We're really trying to ramp up the energy of our program. Our goal is to be fun and high energy," said Snowsports School Director Allan Patzer.

The school is offering classes for preschoolers for the first time two days a week, along with its Spud sessions (formerly Learn to ski program) for those age 5 through 12 on weekends.

New this year: A freestyle camp for 6 to 18 years old on Dollar Mountain that will tackle the rails and jumps

"We're going to have small and medium sized railings and jumps this year so we can cater to riders of all skill levels," said Children's Manager Dave Bolte. "Last year it seemed the terrain park features were pretty much large and extra large."

Sun Valley also is offering a number of special packages. Through Dec. 20 guests can ski one day and spend one night for $72 per person double occupancy. One child per adult may stay and ski for free when lodging with the parent.

Stay and Ski Free packages will be offered between Dec. 21 and 23 and Jan. 2 through March 27. Reserve any number of nights in the Lodge or Inn during those days and stay and ski for $129 per night per person double occupancy.

The fast and the flurries

Experience Idaho powder on a snowmobile

Times-News

There's a quiet majesty when already-beautiful land is carpeted in snow.

While surely not as quiet, Idaho's elegance isn't lost when exploring the backcountry on a snowmobile. The Gem State is, in fact, one of those places that allows people of different tastes to enjoy the outdoors in whatever way they choose.

For the snowmobile buff, there's nothing quite like zooming through powder at 60 mph. Some prefer slower, more leisurely rides so they can take in the scenery.

Whatever your tastes, the Gem State won't disappoint. Try these trails on for size:

- Diamondfield Jack Snow Play Area in the South Hills offers more than 200 miles of groomed and marked trails on Sawtooth National Forest and Bureau of Land Management land. Two 85-car parking lots provide access to the trails, and nearby is a warming hut with restrooms.

From Twin Falls, take Highway 30 east to Hansen. Turn south on Rock Creek Road and drive about 28 miles into the area.

Information: (208) 737-3200.

- Howell Canyon and Mount Harrison near Albion provide a number of opportunities for snowmobiling.

From Burley, follow Highway 81 east to Declo; drive south on Highway 77 past Albion and turn right on Howell Canyon Road.

- City of Rocks provide snowmobiling on roads when weather permits.

Established in 1988 as a National Reserve, City of Rocks encompasses 14,407 acres of land renowned for its scenic, geologic and historic significance. But there's more to here than climb rocks. The visitor center is open weekdays November through March.

Information and directions: (208) 824-5519 or www.nps.gov/ciro.

- Gooding County Snow Park, located at the Gooding-Camas County line, is 20 miles north of town and includes 150 square miles of both BLM and private land. There are plenty of riding opportunities here.

Information and directions: (208) 732-7200.

- Fairfield's snowmobile trails comprise 220 miles in Camas County. Snowmobilers can warm up at the shelter north of Wells Summit. The area provides quality groomed trails and plenty of open play areas.

Information and directions: (208) 764-3202.

- Lowman Area Snowmobile Trails is a little different, a little more, well ... lonely. A scenic ride, yes, but it's through isolated areas, so make sure you have plenty of fuel and provisions to make it from Lowman to Stanley.

Before visiting you should contact the Lowman Ranger District for Information and directions: (208) 259-3361.

- Shoshone Indian Trail is passable by foot, risky by horse and viewable by all-terrain vehicle or snowmobile.

Sun Valley: Nordic Town USA

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — It's not just Sun Valley, anymore. It's "Nordic Town USA."

That's the new moniker Nordic enthusiasts in the Sun Valley area are claiming as they try to lure Nordic skiers from Chippewa, Wis., and other such places to ski on 200 kilometers of groomed trails.

In fact, the valley's Nordic organizers just unveiled their new NordicTownUSA.com website, which will feature articles from Nordic personalities exhorting the virtues of Nordic skiing in the Wood River Valley, while keeping Nordic skiers apprised of events.

Those events include the second Sun Valley Nordic Festival that will be even bigger and more exciting than last year, according to Blaine County Recreation District Director Jim Keating.

The nine-day festival — Jan. 29 through Feb. 5, 2011 — will again feature a $49 nine-day ski trail pass good for skiing on all the valley's trails, including those at Sun Valley Nordic Center. It will culminate with the 32-kilometer Swix/Boulder Mountain Tour, one of America's longest running and most respected cross country ski races on Feb. 5.

This year the Tour will feature $10,000 in prize money, Keating said. And the Ketchum sprint under the lights in downtown Ketchum will be the real deal this year, as well, with prize money for the winners.

The Nordic Festival will include the Second Annual World Snowshoe Dance Contest, bonfire and music festival. There will also be a new Twilight Ski and Dinner at the Sun Valley Nordic Center and an opportunity to ski with celebrities, in addition to other events.

The Festival also will feature the Sun Valley Snowshoe Challenge, which will serve as a West Region qualifier for United States Snowshoe Association (USSSA) National Championships, on Jan. 29 at Sun Valley's White Clouds trails. The race sponsored by sunvalleyrunning.com and The Elephants Perch, will include a 5K, 10K and a Kids Kilo Fun Run, and snowshoes will be offered free of charge to those who don't have their own.

The Ski the Rails and Hailey Music Celebration, which skis past historic sites like this rare Pegram bridge south of Ketchum, will kick off the Second Annual Sun Valley Nordic Festival on Jan. 29.

Education Foundation is working with the Nordic community to bring in the U.S. Distance National Championships on March 26 and 27 and the "FIS/USSA Super Tour Finals on March 29-April 2.

"The Sun Valley Ski Education is hosting more events this year than the last four or five years — our way to support Sun Valley's 75th anniversary," said Foundation Director Don Wiseman. "The economic impact of our home events alone is conservatively estimated to be in excess of $1 million. And that doesn't take into account the other impacts the junior programs have on the valley in terms of equipment and jobs."

The BCRD, which began grooming North Valley Trails between Baker Creek and Galena Lodge on Oct. 25 this year, worked together with the Forest Service last summer to chisel a little bit of rock out of the cliff face along the Harriman Trail south of Galena Lodge. The work will allow the BCRD to groom the trail without having to run it through a riparian area.

By popular demand Galena Lodge plans to bring back its introductory first-time lessons, which include private lessons, rentals and trail pass for $60, said Erin Zell, who just signed a three-year extension as co-manager of Galena Lodge.

The lodge will also offer its free snowshoe outings at 11 a.m. Wednesday and host the free Snowshoe with a Ranger walks at 11 a.m. Thursday.

Sun Valley Nordic plans to offer more kids activities this year, including a kids park with whoop-de-dooos, a snow castle, and a place to play soccer on skis, said Ivana Radlova, the Nordic Center's new director. The children's area will feature a place for kids to play games, hold birthday parties and pee wee races.

Sun Valley Nordic also plans to add snowshoe cardio workouts to its historic snowshoe tours. And it will offer a full moon ski dinners, along with a costumed Valentine's Day race.

Radlova came to the United States from her native Czechoslovakia to race for the University of New Mexico. She served as race director of Rocky Mountain Nordic Ski Education Foundation in Steamboat Springs, Colo., prior to moving to Sun Valley last year.

"I've seen a lot of Nordic places and this is one of the best because of the amount of trails, quality of grooming and plain ol' beauty," she said. "The skiing is so close to the towns. Even in Hailey, I can get on the cross country trail two blocks from my home and ski nearly all the way to Galena. And the winter is quite bearable here because of the sun. I tell people: Be patient because once you get discovered you won't know what to do with all the people."

Grand Targhee's 2,500 acres of slope is a powder hound's paradise.

Grand Targhee: A powder hound's frigid paradise

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

The Grand Targhee Resort may be one of the best-kept secrets in winter recreation.

Situated outside of Alta, Wyo., in the Grand Teton mountain range, more than 500 inches of snow accumulation transforms Grand Targhee's 2,500 acres of slope into a powder hound's paradise. Opening day for the ski season is Friday.

"You could say we have 60 runs," said Communications Director Shannon Brooks Hamby. "But our open-grade skiing makes us more of a nontraditional destination."

Skiers who have made this corner of the Caribou-Targhee National Forest an annual pilgrimage, and those planning to experience its double-mountain peaks for the first time, will find two new trails connecting the Sacred Forest Chair Lift to the Dream Weaver Lift Line.

"We've also expanded some of the kids and beginning skier area, like the Sacred Forest Mouse House," Hamby said. "The wide-spaced trees lend themselves to teaching and eyeballing the forest."

Once again this year, the resort will offer Powder Day photography. Let a professional photographer capture images of family and friends racing across freshly fallen snow.

Targhee has both $49 half-day and $69 full-day adult lift ticket rates. Senior rates for those 65 years and older are $44 for full-day and $39 for a half-day. Kids 6 to 12 years old can ski a half or full day for $29, and children 5 years old or under ski free. If tubing is more your speed, prices are $10 for three hours or a season pass for $49.

EDITORIAL

A day for being grateful for what we've kept

“Thanks” has become one of those throwaway words, an expression of social congress as meaningless as “How are you?” and “Have a nice day.”

But the word has more meaning than most because it describes, in so many ways, how each of us relates to the world and how our society relates to us.

So on this, the national high holiday of both gratitude and self-indulgence, here are a few things you should be thankful for in this neighborhood in the wake of the Great Recession:

● Neighbors — By in large, folks don't look the other way here in south-central Idaho. When there's a need — for helping out the Salvation Army, as hundreds and businesses and individuals did in Twin Falls in September, or for rescuing Christmas for desperate Magic Valley families as the East End Providers, the Mini-Cassia Christmas Council and other groups do every year — we as a community lend a hand.

● Jobs — In the six counties of the Magic Valley, about 6,700 more people are working this Thanksgiving than a year ago, thanks in part to new businesses — notably the arrival of the C3 insurance call center in Twin Falls — the expansion of food processing and several recently arrived employers in Mini-Cassia ramping up production. And if you don't think that's worth celebrating, consider that Idaho's four largest labor markets — Boise-Nampa, Idaho Falls, Coeur d'Alene and Pocatello — have collectively shed 5,400 jobs since October 2009.

● Health care — Twin Falls is less than a year away from the opening of the new 186-bed, 700,000-square-foot St. Luke's Magic Valley, Gooding has a brand new hospital and big improvements are coming to Minidoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert. Rural health care, long a critical problem for small-town Idaho, is on the upswing here.

● Crime — Compared with five years ago, the crime rate has declined in five of the eight counties of south-central Idaho and in seven of its 10 largest cities.

To be sure, there are challenges ahead — especially in education. Idaho schools and colleges are reeling from record budget cuts by the Legislature, and restoring public education is a task that will involve more than money. Schools are now — or ought to be — every Idahoan's business.

And more than 7,800 of our neighbors in the eight counties — that's a number equivalent to the population of Hailey — are still without work.

Still, considering how things were last year and the Thanksgiving before, we all have reason to say thanks. And not just in passing.

5 myths about hunger in America

Starving Pilgrims, food-bearing Indians — in legend if not in fact, Thanksgiving has always been about keeping hunger at bay. Yet, four centuries after the Mayflower landed at Plymouth, Mass., not everyone in the New World can count on a full cupboard when mealtime rolls around. Since donated turkeys and cans of cranberry sauce solve our hunger problem only one day a year, it's worth taking a hard look at some myths about who's hungry in America and why.

Wildmen of the Big Wood River

By James Varley

Blaine County yesterdays

Editor's note: This is the fifth in a series of articles about the history of the Wood River Valley.

In a previous article, the reader may have met Theophile E. Picotte, the outspoken and frequently assaulted publisher and editor of the Wood River Times, in the early years of Hailey. It seems — as we shall see — that he knew how to liven up a slow news day just as well as he knew how to handle those who tried to horse-whip him.

To set the stage for a sensational story he had in mind Picotte reported in the Times of Sept. 7, 1882, that little jets of flame and smoky columns of sulfurous vapors had been escaping for a week from clefts in the lava fields near the line of the railroad, and that these columns could be seen for miles around.

Then, on Oct. 11, Picotte told his readers about a long-time resident of this flaming and smoky area, whom he called the “Wild Man of Camas.” For years, Picotte wrote, cattlemen, prospectors and others crossing Camas Prairie had told stories about occasionally seeing this strange being, hopping about from crag to crag of lava.

When the Shoshone and Bannock Indians still occupied the region, this creature had been spotted quite frequently, but in recent years, with large numbers of whites invading the area, sightings had so diminished that reports heard about him were being discredited.

However, Picotte said, two cowboys had just come in from the prairie, having had an experience which was sure to rejuvenate the wild man's tradition.

On Oct. 1, while searching for cattle lost in a storm, the cowboys were startled to suddenly see amongst the lava crags the form so often described to them. The two sat on their horses looking at it in dread. In a moment, they mustered the courage to dismount, draw their revolvers and give chase, but the strange being skipped from crag to crag as nimbly as a mountain goat.

After an hour's chase they were worn out. Seeing the cowboys lie down, the wild man gradually approached them and stopped on the opposite side of a gorge in the lava, whence he regarded the cowboys intently.

He stood over six feet high, with great muscular arms which reached to his knees. Muscles stood out in huge knots and his

Help the planet: Stop wasting food

Let me guess: You're concerned about the environment. You recycle, buy the right light bulbs, drink from a reusable water bottle (preferably one made of metal) and wish you could afford a hybrid. You try to remember your reusable shopping bags when you go to the market and feel guilty when you don't.

But there's something you could be doing that would make a much bigger difference, and it's not one of those really hard things like carpooling to work or installing solar panels on your roof.

All you need to do is minimize your food waste. If you buy it and bring it home, eat it. That alone is one of the easiest ways to aid the environment.

About 40 percent of the food produced in the United States isn't consumed. Every day Americans waste enough food to fill the Rose Bowl. And our national food waste habit is on the upswing: We waste 50 percent more food today than we did in 1974.

Squandering so much of what we grow doesn't just waste food; it also wastes the fossil fuel that went into growing, processing, transporting and refrigerating it. A recent study estimated conservatively that 2 percent of all U.S. energy consumption went to producing food that was never eaten. To give you a sense of perspective, every year, through uneaten food, we waste 70 times the amount of oil that gushed into the Gulf of Mexico during the three months of the Deepwater Horizon spill.

That waste of resources continues after we throw away food. There is the energy required to haul the discarded food to the landfill. And once there, food decomposes and creates methane, a greenhouse gas 23 times more potent a heat trapper than carbon dioxide. Landfills are the second-largest human-related source of methane emissions, and rotting food causes the majority of methane there. It's climate change coming directly from your kitchen.

Not only will cutting your food waste help the planet, but it also will make you a slightly more ethical person. The number of hungry people, in Los Angeles and the state, is steadily increasing. From 2005 to 2009, the amount of Los Angeles County residents receiving food assistance swelled by 46 percent. Meanwhile, Angelenos throw away about 18 million pounds of food every day. At supermarkets, restaurants and, of course, our homes, we're discarding a potential solution for our neighbors' needs.

Avoiding waste will also save you money. The average family of four, conservatively, throws out an estimated $1,350 annually. Cutting that food waste in half and giving the money to a soup kitchen would provide 700 meals. Though many of us feel unable to donate much money these days, we could keep the pantries of relief organizations better stocked by keeping ours less full.

Food waste crosses racial, class and gender lines. It's a systemic problem rooted in our culture of abundance and busy lifestyle. But it's also one we can change. And, happily, that change starts with simple actions:

- Buy smarter. Plan the week's dinners and make a detailed shopping list. Stick to the list; don't buy more food than you can possibly eat before it goes bad. When planning meals, consider your reality. If you often don't have time to cook dinner after work, don't shop as if you do. And scheduling a leftover night is always wise.

- Rethink portion size. We have a warped idea of what's a sensible amount to eat, in part because of what counts as a "serving" at restaurants these days. As a result, we often take or receive too much, prompting us to either overeat or scrape the food we don't eat into the trash.

- Love your leftovers. If you've invested the money, time and energy in cooking, why not save the remaining portion? And remember, saving food only to throw it out a week later defeats the purpose. If you're not a leftover lover, try halving recipes to prevent excess or repurposing your accumulated extras into another dish.

A few easy strategic changes in your kitchen will yield a real effect on our world. All that's required is doing the seemingly self-evident: Keep your food out of the trash.

A law we don't need

Oklahomans have a plan to save the country. It doesn't address the reverberations of the financial crisis or outline a way to pay for social services on a limited budget. Instead, they've fashioned a "pre-emptive strike" against Islamic law in the United States. Earlier this month, 70 percent of Oklahoma's electorate approved this amendment to the state's Constitution: "The (Oklahoma) Courts ... when exercising their judicial authority ... shall not consider international law or Sharia Law."

Oklahoma isn't alone. Arizona is considering a bill that would prohibit state judges from "rely(ing) on any body of religious sectarian law or foreign law," and a similar bill has just been introduced in the South Carolina legislature. Whether more states will hop on the bandwagon may depend on the outcome of a lawsuit filed in Oklahoma federal district court that contends that the amendment violates the First Amendment. But the amendment is not just of dubious constitutionality; it's dangerous and unnecessary on the merits.

Rex Duncan, a Republican state representative in Oklahoma and a sponsor of the amendment, has explained that part of its purpose is to ban religious forms of arbitration: "Parties would come to the courts and say we want to be bound by Islamic law and then ask the courts to enforce those agreements. That is a backdoor way to get Sharia law into courts. There ... have been some efforts, I believe, to explore bringing that to America, and it's dangerous."

In reality, such arbitration is well established. For nearly half a century, Jewish, Christian and Muslim tribunals have operated in the United States in concert with government courts. These tribunals preside over matters of religious ritual and also apply religious law to a wide range of disputes between individuals and even commercial entities. Parties, in keeping with shared beliefs and values, can voluntarily agree to submit employment, divorce, contractual and various other types of disputes for resolution. State and federal courts currently treat such religious tribunals as they do all other arbitration panels that litigants can seek out as an alternative to going to court. And, as long as the tribunal and its decisions meet certain standards, government courts routinely "confirm" them — that is, render them legally enforceable.

To some, the prospect that the "Save Our State" amendment could challenge this process would be a positive development. In fact, if we were to buy into some of the characterizations propounded by some pundits and politicians, we might think that religious arbitration could force U.S. courts to allow dismemberment or stoning as a form of punishment.

To some, the prospect that the "Save Our State" amendment could challenge this process would be a positive development. In fact, if we were to buy into some of the characterizations propounded by some pundits and politicians, we might think that religious arbitration could force U.S. courts to allow dismemberment or stoning as a form of punishment. But if the awards of religious tribunals are to be enforced in court, the hearings must comply with various procedural requirements, the arbitration agreements cannot be unconscionable, and the awards cannot contravene state and federal laws. Indeed, under the aptly titled "public policy exception," courts cannot enforce any arbitration award, including one issued by a religious tribunal, that undermines U.S. public policies.

For example, parties before a religious tribunal have a right to an attorney that cannot be waived. The tribunal must give notice to the parties regarding all hearings. And it must accept all relevant evidence and allow parties to cross-examine witnesses.

When it comes to the decisions themselves, just as a court cannot enforce a contract to hire a hit man, a court cannot enforce an arbitration award that requires something such as stoning or caning. Nor could a court confirm a religious tribunal's child custody decision without making its own independent determination as to what was in the best interests of the child. In the words of a New York court, "An arbitration award that deprives a party of a constitutional right to seek redress or protection in a civil or criminal matter is against public policy."

tion. This form of justice sometimes provides legal redress that the state and federal courts cannot.

Consider a case in which a pastor, imam or rabbi is given a lifetime contract (a relatively common practice) that allows his or her congregation to terminate his or her employment only for cause. Somewhere down the line, the congregation decides that its religious leader is no longer doing the job. Accordingly, the congregation terminates the contract. But the pastor, imam or rabbi might very well disagree that there was cause for the dismissal. Where does he or she go to bring that claim?

The answer is not in state or federal court. The establishment clause of the First Amendment prohibits government courts from rendering a view regarding religious doctrine. And deciding what the appropriate responsibilities of a pastor or imam or rabbi are, and whether they have been fulfilled, would generally amount to rendering such a view. As a result, the court could only dismiss the case. However, the pastor, imam or rabbi could turn to a religious tribunal, and a U.S. court could later confirm the decision and give it legal force.

Legislation banning religious arbitration is deeply misguided. The decisions of religious tribunals are unenforceable unless they comply with public policy. And we need them to address cases that constitutional doctrine prohibits from being litigated in government courts. In the end, allowing state and federal courts to "consider" the findings of religious tribunals for the purposes of "confirmation" doesn't violate cherished religious freedoms, it enhances them.

Laws like Oklahoma's "Save Our State" amendment pander to unfounded fears. Instead of saving the nation, they merely add to its list of problems.

Hunger

Continued from Opinion 1 happen in other places — in distant countries where droughts or storms or famine compel us to donate money and oblige our government to send relief workers and food aid. In reality, hunger also hits much closer to home.

According to a new report by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, 17.4 million American families — almost 15 percent of U.S. households — are now "food insecure," an almost 30 percent increase since 2006. This means that, during any given month, they will be out of money, out of food, and forced to miss meals or seek assistance to feed themselves.

Even those who get three meals a day may be malnourished. Americans increasingly eat cheap, sugary foods whose production is underwritten by government subsidies for the corn and dairy industries. As the New York Times reported this month, the USDA loudly promotes better eating habits while quietly working with Domino's to develop a new line of pizzas with 40 percent more cheese.

Obesity is related to hunger, too, thanks to our poor food choices and the lack of healthy food options in many communities. Many of us may be packing on the pounds, but they are life-threatening. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, more than 30 percent of adults are obese. The number of children who struggle with their weight is increasing, particularly among Latinos. Diet-related illnesses such as heart disease and diabetes are now on the list of the leading causes of death in America. We are dying not because we aren't eating, but because we're eating the wrong things.

Hunger threatens our economic future and our national security. An astonishing one in four American children — close to 17 million — live in food-insecure homes. A kid who is hungry cannot learn. A kid who can't learn drops out of school. A kid without an education can't get a job and help America compete in a global economy. A kid without a job may turn to crime, get arrested and cost taxpayers $40,000 a year to sit in prison.

Those children who become obese adults, meanwhile, limit our armed forces' ability to protect our nation. Military officers recently warned that more than 9 million young adults — 27 percent of Americans ages 17 to 24 — weigh too much to enlist, shrinking the pool of candidates for service.

Meanwhile, more than 9 percent of medical spending, $147 billion annually, is devoted to treating obesity, and obese people spend $1,500 more per year on health care than people of average weight. The costs of poor nutrition help drag us further into debt and leave us vulnerable. America simply can't afford malnourishment anymore.

The person most likely to be hungry is a single, working mother. Federal programs ensure that low-income children can get free meals at school, but their mothers — many of whom are single and work low-paying jobs in the service sector — often have to make tough choices between food, rent, gas for the car, health care or new shoes for their kids. Millions of American women face this predicament who will feed their children and go without meals themselves.

Another tragedy in America is the rapidly growing number of seniors who have to choose between food, medicine and utilities. Though few of our elders will admit to needing help, a 2007 study by Meals on Wheels indicated that as many as 6 million are going hungry. Meanwhile, that free food-delivery service has waiting lists in many cities. The 80 million baby boomers approaching retirement are expected to live longer than any previous generation, but not all have set aside enough resources for their final years. When that silver tsunami strikes, hunger will come with it.

According to Jonathan Bloom's new book American Wasteland, up to 40 percent of the food we produce is ultimately thrown away. Much of it, such as household waste or decomposing fruits and vegetables, is unfit to eat or impractical to collect. Unnecessary expiration dates, particularly on canned foods, condemn millions of pounds of food to landfills. Logistically, we just can't feed everyone with leftovers.

Still, that doesn't mean we shouldn't use them. Since President Bill Clinton signed the Bill Emerson Good Samaritan Food Donation Act of 1996, initiatives around the country have retrieved millions of pounds of great food from restaurants and hotels and have used it to feed the hungry and provide culinary job training for the unemployed. Food banks have redistributed hundreds of millions of pounds of nonperishable items, and food activists called gleaners have taken to farms to forage for crops that won't make it to market.

Ever since President Lyndon Johnson declared war on poverty in 1964, the government has worked diligently to ensure that no American goes hungry. For years, the USDA flooded communities with surplus commodities such as cheese and butter. Enrollment in the food stamp program (now called the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program), the front-line federal weapon in the fight against hunger, is at an all-time high, with 42.4 million people receiving support.

Yet the number of Americans who struggle to put food on their tables has never decreased. This is because hunger isn't about food. It's about jobs and wages.

The passage of living-wage laws, tariffs that protect U.S. jobs and comprehensive public health care — coupled with consumer support for businesses that pay good wages, reinvest in their communities or embrace green policies — would do more to combat hunger than anything charities have tried in the past five decades.

Getting government out of health care? Yeah, right

There's a certain rational philosophical argument to be found in opposition to the Affordable Care Act if you really believe in a smaller federal government.

Linda P. Campbell

It's that if people increasingly see health care as a fundamental government function, then government's involvement will never go away.

But the federal role in assuring medical care for millions of Americans was already extensive before Congress passed health insurance reform this year. And despite all their saber rattling about dismantling the law, surely Republican leaders don't have the support, the will or the better ideas to change that.

When the Republicans controlled not just the House but also the White House, they didn't shrink Medicare, the program that insures 39 million senior Americans — no, Republicans twisted arms and manipulated voting procedures to add a prescription-drug benefit expected to cost $500 billion over a decade, which even some Democrats said we couldn't afford. How's that smaller government?

Now it seems Republicans want to investigate provisions in the new law designed to save billions of dollars in Medicare and make the program more efficient. Isn't that what Republicans, like all of us, want to see from government: better use of our money?

When Republicans had all the power, they could have made a powerful gesture to underscore their supposed disdain for all things "socialist." But have they ever — ever — considered relinquishing the generous government-administered health insurance benefits that taxpayers provide them through their employment on behalf of the American people?

"If you think it's a socialist plot and it's wrong, for goodness sakes, drop out of the Federal Employee Health Benefit Program," Democratic Sen. Dick Durbin of Illinois helpfully invited his Republican colleagues recently.

It was great political grandstanding — and a video clip was conveniently posted on YouTube — but it also raised a valid point: Government programs are good for the haves but not for the have-nots?

Every time I hear the Affordable Care Act derisively called Obamacare, I get mad. Candidate Barack Obama promised health insurance reform, and President Obama pushed for it and, yes, took credit for the resulting law. But he didn't dictate what would be approved by members of Congress, whom I guess we're supposed to consider merely his puppets and automatons. He was even disparaged for his early disengagement from the drafting process.

Members of Congress decided the parameters — Democrats, yes, but they, too, were elected by the people. And surely it's a fiction that "a majority" of Americans didn't want the law and don't like it. Were that so, it never would have passed.

No doubt many people don't like being required to buy health insurance — even many who already do and would continue to do so anyway.

But who prefers the old status quo: many of the uninsured seeking treatment in emergency rooms, where it's more expensive, resulting in costs being shifted to those who are insured through higher premiums and ridiculously expensive hospital bills?

Of course, another alternative is that the uninsured sick simply don't get treated and get worse, suffer needlessly or pass infectious diseases to those around them. Surely that's not the trade-off we're going to insist on for smaller government.

What many Americans really don't like is having the government tell us to do things we don't want to be told to do.

We might not want to be told to buy health insurance, but we sure want the government telling drug companies not to poison us.

We might not want to be told what we can eat, but we sure want the government telling meat plants and poultry manufacturers and egg suppliers not to sell us food that could kill us.

The Affordable Care Act has its flaws. And though it aims to insure 32 millions more Americans, I fear that predictions about its many other anticipated benefits

But if the law helps improve Americans' health through preventive care, reduce the number of families bankrupted by catastrophic medical bills and use research to make treatment safer and more effective, how is that not progress?

Will abortion become an issue yet again?

As Democrats continue to sift through the electoral ashes of the midterm meltdown, a number of longtime activists have begun to insist that the party needs to reassert more clearly and forcefully its commitment to reproductive rights.

Their argument is that in key states where Democratic senators survived the prevailing anti-incumbent sentiment — notably California and, much more narrowly, Colorado, Nevada and Washington — voters who indicated the greatest concern with a candidate's stand on abortion provided the margin of victory.

It's hard to make a credible case that anything but the miserable economy and joblessness mattered in this midterm, but that hasn't stopped determined culture warriors on both sides of the aisle from arguing that their party's future prospects turn on reviving conflict over the most divisive social issues, including abortion, marriage equality and immigration.

In the Democrats' case, though, it's hard to imagine anything more ill-timed than an attempt to revive abortion as an electoral wedge issue. This midterm reaffirmed a contemporary political axiom: Elections are won among the independents and swing voters whose loyalties are determined by circumstance. Catholics, who now represent one in five Americans, are the biggest bloc of swing voters, particularly in the Rust Belt states, where Democrats suffered dramatic reversals. For four decades, no presidential candidate has won the popular vote without carrying Catholics. Making support for access to abortion a litmus test ignores that historical calculus.

In fact, solving the Catholic electoral equation is likely to become far more difficult for Democrats in the wake of Tuesday's stunning events in Baltimore, where Archbishop Timothy Dolan of New York was elected president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. It was an upset victory for the conservative prelates who've come to dominate the American hierarchy under Pope Benedict XVI and the first time since its reorganization in 1966 that the bishops' organization had not simply elevated the sitting vice president.

Dolan is regarded as an articulate advocate for asserting the church's opposition to abortion ahead of any other issue. He defeated Bishop Gerald Kicanas of Tucson, who is regarded as the leading active disciple of the late Chicago Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, who advocated a so-called seamless garment approach to social issues in which opposition to abortion is considered alongside a range of social concerns. Like Bernardin, Kicanas advocates pastoral dialogue with officeholders who favor abortion rights and who are otherwise disposed to work with the bishops on social justice issues.

Dolan, on the other hand, takes a much more confrontational approach, and many of the bishops who voted for him agree with Denver's Archbishop Charles Chaput and soon-to-be curial Cardinal Raymond Burke that Catholics who hold positions favoring abortion rights or marriage equality positions ought to be denied communion. Burke, who heads the Vatican's equivalent of the U.S. Supreme Court, has called the Democrats "a party of death" and argued that the late Sen. Edward M. Kennedy should have been denied Catholic burial because of his stand favoring abortion rights. As he told one interviewer, "Since President Obama clearly announced during the election campaign his anti-life and anti-family agenda, a Catholic who knew his agenda regarding, for example, procured abortion, embryonic stem-cell research and same-sex marriage could not have voted for him with a clear conscience."

Last week, the bishops elected as their vice president Bishop Joseph Kurtz of Louisville, Ky., the hierarchy's most vocal opponent of marriage equality.

A confrontation at the communion rail between a conservative bishop and a visible Democratic officeholder — say, outgoing House Speaker Nancy Pelosi or Vice President Joe Biden — long has been the holy grail of GOP activists who would like to permanently wean Catholics from the Democratic Party. It's the sort of divisive event with unforeseeable consequences from which nobody ultimately would benefit. Cooler heads in all camps ought to avoid it.

A climate plan for climate-change deniers

In the global-warming debate, scientists are, admirably, still trying to save the day. Earlier this month, the American Geophysical Union announced plans to mobilize about 700 climate scientists to improve the accuracy of media coverage and public understanding of their field. Separately, a smaller group of scientists organized by John Abraham of the University of St. Thomas in Minnesota said it was putting together a “rapid response team” to bring accurate climate science to public debates.

On the face of it, such efforts certainly make sense. The scientists hope, not unreasonably, to bring more attention to the climate-change crisis. More crucially, they seek to halt the slide in public opinion on the issue, with recent polls finding Americans’ belief in the evidence for global warming on the decline, along with their view of the need for immediate action to slow climate change. And it’s true that science education, when done well, may help accomplish these goals.

But will it lead to meaningful policy? Or will this latest round of efforts instead result in another spate of news stories about scary end-of-the-world scenarios, another series of debates over whether global-warming science is a hoax and more wasted time — time we don’t have?

There is good reason to think that those who are worried about climate change would make greater progress if they focused less on arguing the scientific reality and more on building support for specific solutions that all sides can agree on.

Even if climate scientists manage to convince some conservative skeptics that global warming poses an urgent threat, Republican leaders have backed themselves into a corner. The issue has become so politically polarizing that it would be nearly impossible for them to retreat from their stance and to get behind legislation that is thought to concern global warming.

I’m not suggesting that we halt efforts to educate the public about warming. For all sorts of reasons, such initiatives are critical. But we must stop thinking that these efforts are a condition for getting anything done on this issue.

So what’s a conservative politician who secretly cares about climate change to do?

He or she must start by focusing on climate-friendly policies and stop assuming that we must first achieve unanimity on global warming science. People can support the transition to a carbon-free energy future without believing, or even knowing, that it might influence glaciers, coral reefs or Arctic ice.

There is a long list of carbon-reduction measures that strong majorities of Republicans, Democrats and independents firmly support, including mandating better fuel efficiency, increasing federal funding for clean-energy research, spending more for mass transit, raising efficiency standards for homes and other buildings, and requiring utilities to produce more energy from renewable sources. They even support limits on emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases — just as long as they are seen as anti-pollution measures, not “caps.”

For instance, an October poll by the Pew Research Center for the People and the Press found that 73 percent of Republicans favor requiring better fuel efficiency for cars, trucks and SUVs; 64 percent want more federal funding for research on wind, solar and hydrogen technology; and 55 percent favor spending more on public transportation. Pew polls over the summer, meanwhile, found that 74 percent of Republicans favor requiring utilities to produce more energy from renewable sources, while 57 percent back limits on carbon and other greenhouse gas emissions.

Even as avowed a climate-change denier as Sen. James Inhofe, R-Okla., is open to considering action on black carbon, thought to be the second-largest contributor to global warming after carbon dioxide. As he told the Guardian last year, his interest in black carbon stems from concern about poor families in Africa who suffer lung disease as a result of cooking with wood stoves. “I am surprised that anyone would be at all surprised that I would be trying to find out about black carbon while I don’t buy the idea that anthropogenic gases are causing global warming,” he said.

The current political and economic terrain isn’t fertile ground for cap-and-trade or for other comprehensive legislation to address global warming, but that doesn’t mean we can’t make progress on the many solutions that people agree on across party lines. So let’s set a bold target for the clean-energy production we will need in 10 or 20 years and start demanding a plan that will achieve it.

The wary, the unconvinced and the downright skeptical don’t have to be a barrier to change. They might even join in.

Strangling innovation with some red tape

As a Democrat whose politics are undeniably liberal on social issues, I lamented the outcome of the midterm elections. But as an entrepreneur with two software start-ups under my belt, I couldn’t help but celebrate — and more than a little. As the fall campaigns wore on, I had found myself listening closely to the tea party, nursing the hope that its message would push both major parties to change the way they do business.

To understand my motivation, pick up the November issue of Washingtonian magazine. The annual Salary Survey notes on Page 81 that top trade association leaders (industry lobbyists) make multimillion-dollar salaries to “keep tabs on what the federal government was doing or might do.”

These outside earnings are symptomatic of a disease that is slowly killing the American economy. We are creating so much regulation — over tax policy, health care, financial activity — that smart people have figured out that they can get rich faster and more easily by manipulating rules on behalf of existing corporations than by creating net new activity and wealth. Gamesmanship pays better than entrepreneurship.

It is always hard to start a business. It is especially hard to start an innovative business, one that will foster a new technology or business method. Incumbent players in a market have an inherent advantage: Momentum counts for a lot, and it takes tremendous effort to get customers comfortable with a new product — or even to hear about it in the first place.

Given the difficulty of starting a company from scratch, and how economic activity is generated today, you can start to see why, if you were a rational market actor, you would be trying to get a piece of the government action.

The combined expenditures of federal, state and local government are rapidly taking over our economy. At the beginning of President Obama’s term, government spending made up 35 percent of gross domestic product. Now, it is up to almost 45 percent, which puts us seventh among advanced economies.

And the Obama administration’s new regulatory initiatives make this considerably worse in subtle ways.

The two largest pieces of legislation enacted in the past two years — health care and financial reform — are very vague. Take the new Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. It has a broad mandate to protect us from financial abuse, but when it comes to the actual implementation, the Brookings Institution wrote that unelected regulators will decide “almost everything” about how the organization works.

This is highly dangerous to innovation, which depends on clear and transparent rules. The more complexity, the more incumbents are favored. They have the capital to participate in complicated regulatory proceedings. They can hire high-priced lobbyists to present facts in a light most favorable to them. The more incumbents are favored, the harder it is for new companies to gain traction.

For a preview of what a complex regulatory process looks like, consider our tax system. The World Bank ranks the United States 62nd in the world in terms of how easy it is to pay taxes — and with a 16,000-page tax code, this is no surprise. In 2009 and 2010, Capital Tax Partners, a leading lobbyist representing Goldman Sachs, Apple and others, earned about $20 million in fees, according to the Center for Responsive Politics.

So, what is to be done? From an entrepreneur’s perspective, we need a national campaign to create transparency in our legislation and a national moratorium on the creation of commissions, regulators and czars. It is time for Congress to do the hard job of saying what lawmakers mean in clear and easy-to-understand language.

It is also fair to hold our leaders to a standard of transparency. We should reject bills that are thousands of pages or that delegate vast authority to unelected regulators.

Entrepreneurs are in an unusual situation. We are staunchly pro-business, believing that new ideas properly implemented can change the world.

Yet we are hardly represented by the business lobbying interests in Washington. Like most Americans, I recoil at the fact that the man who runs the U.S. Chamber of Commerce earns about $3.9 million a year. He doesn’t represent me.

The next two years will be a critical time to see whether all the promises of a more transparent America are realized. If not, maybe it is time to create an entrepreneurs party, where wealth and value creation are prized above rule manipulation and influence peddling.

Yesterdays

chest was as broad as that of a bear. Skins were twisted about his feet and ankles and a wolf skin hung around his waist. All parts of his body to be seen were covered by long, black hair, while from his head the hair flowed over his shoulders in coarse tangled rolls, and mixed with a heavy beard.

His face was dark and swarthy and his eyes shone brightly while two tusks protruded from his mouth. His fingers were in the shape of claws with long sharp nails and he acted very much as a wild animal would which is unaccustomed to seeing a man. The cowboys made all kinds of noises, at the sound of which he twisted his head from side to side and moaned — apparently he could not give them any “backtalk” so, weary of seeing him, the wranglers fired their revolvers, whereupon the wild man turned a double somersault and jumped 15 feet to a low bench and disappeared, growling terribly as he went.

Picotte was certain that this was the same creature as had been seen so often before, and who lived on Camas roots and stolen livestock.

Not to be outdone by Picotte, Charles Foster of the Ketchum Keystone printed in his Nov. 10 edition a purported letter to the editor from a certain “X. X.” It told of a man from Sawtooth City going grouse hunting a few days earlier on snowshoes. He went up nearby Beaver Gulch, and climbed the peak opposite the Pilgrim mine.

Near the summit the hunter found a cave. He made a torch from pitch pine slivers and went through a long, narrow passage that ended in a large chamber which was “brilliantly lighted by a flame in the center.” The hunter cautiously went toward it and found that the flame was coming from the mouth of an image of a man, made of silver. This figure wore a helmet of a peculiar pattern, in which were three imitation feathers made of gold or copper. “X.X” thought that some prehistoric, intelligent race had made the image after discovering the gas jet that came through the rocks from an immense body of coal oil under the mountain.

On the walls were some undecipherable hieroglyphics. In one corner sat a human skeleton — at least 9 feet high, and by it a stone tomahawk and a large cross bow. Salmon bones were scattered around on he floor, as well as arrowheads, a petrified human hand and some large pieces of silver.

In his next edition, a week later, the Keystone editor said he wanted it understood that “X.X” was solely responsible for the description of that mysterious Sawtooth cave and that, while writing it, the author was probably subsisting on a diet of “printer’s lye and “roller composition.”

Meanwhile, Picotte’s Wild Man story had been published, word for word, on December 2 by the Illustrated Police News, a sensationalistic New York City publication.

Some months later the Bellevue Sun — struggling to stay in business — entered the “Wild Story” competition. On April 1, 1883 it reported that the celebrated “Hairy maniac of the Camas Prairie” had been killed the previous day by a man named Mickelhenny, one of a group traveling across the prairie.

Mickelhenny had just left camp to hunt ducks, when the Wild Man jumped up from a hiding place, and after running away a short distance stopped and looked at Mickelhenny for a moment, then, with a shriek, the beast made for Mickelhenny so fiercely that the duck hunter fired both barrels of his gun into him, and he fell, apparently dead. Mickelhenny went to have a look just as the Wild Man was trying to get up. He put his foot on the creature’s neck and called to his comrades to bring an axe, which they hurriedly did. The Wild Man escaped just as they arrived, and, with a groan, regained his feet and started to run. The axe was thrown at him, and as he turned his head to look back, it struck him in the center of the forehead, and he dropped lifeless to the ground.

On examination he was found to be tall, with full, clear eyes and an extraordinary large head covered with wavy black hair of great length. His bushy beard was about two and a half feet long and the whole body was also covered with a thick growth of fine, black hair about two inches in length.

The fingernails and toenails were two inches long, and resembled claws more than nails. He was wrapped in a long robe made of rabbit skins.

Thus, said the Sun writer, the Wild Man of Camas, who has been dreaded by the lonely traveler and prospector, since first seen in 1873, is now dead.

T. E. Picotte of the Times was furious, complaining that the wild man had been ruthlessly killed by the “Noodle of the Sun.” This “smart aleck” editor had thus “idiotically robbed the press” of Wood River “a prolific source of items.” The Hailey News-Miner suggested that the Sun man now ought to go to Sawtooth and dig up the Keystone’s wonderful cave.

Picotte’s wild man was likely the inspiration for the hundreds of reported sightings of similar apelike creatures, over the years, none of which has ever been captured. The first may have been the Wild Man of Rockaway Beach, Long Island, New York, in 1885.

In the 1960s and 70s there was a veritable flood of alleged sightings — the Abominable Snowman (Yeti) of the Himalayan mountains of Asia, and Bigfoot (Sasquatch) of our Pacific Northwest. These creatures were usually described as having the same general characteristics as the huge Wild Men of the Wood River papers.

In 1967 a rancher took a short movie of what he thought was a female Sasquatch in northern California. It and other photos usually depicted ill-defined shapes that could have been anything, but they were used, nonetheless, in a documentary film shown in theaters. A Big Foot — Sasquatch Exhibition and Information Center was established at The Dalles, Ore., and several extensive search expeditions were made without result. As recently as 2005 there existed a Texas Big Foot Research Center, holding annual conferences on the subject.
