First-responders stay vigilant

These are the folks who respond when your 20-year-old Christmas lights start an electrical fire. They're the people you call when you collide with another vehicle on an icy road. They're the ones who patrol the streets around the clock.

Firefighters, law-enforcement officers, emergency dispatchers, ambulance drivers and hospital workers don't always get holidays off, as calls for service don't magically disappear just because the day on a calendar has a special name.

"The holiday is the same as any other day," said Twin Falls Fire Department Capt. Rob Wade.

Holidays bring a heavier work load for first-responders, as the number of people traveling for family get-togethers increases. This week provided an additional challenge as scores of motorists slid all over city, county and state roadways during the blizzard.

In fact, just as the firefighters at Fire Station No. 1 in Twin Falls were ready to serve their Thanksgiving meal at around 1 p.m., they were dispatched to a crash scene. At around 10:15 a.m., they were on the scene when a beet truck overturned on Eastland Drive North near the LDS Twin Falls Temple, dumping a trailer while the cab stayed upright.

Police were staffed and working as well. Twin Falls had 10 officers on the Shawn and Shannon Kenney didn't have a place to cook a Thanksgiving meal this year.

The couple lives in a borrowed recreational vehicle, as they don't call Twin Falls home. A heart attack and stroke have left Shawn unable to control his left leg or find work, which is what brought the couple to town in the first place. Unable to leave, as doctors haven't cleared Shawn for travel, they face a holiday season with little money.

For the Kenneys and others pushing their way through hard times, New Hope Christian Fellowship of Twin Falls and the College of Southern Idaho Chi Alpha club provided free Thanksgiving meals and a bit of fellowship on Thursday.

"It's a great way to love people and show them God's love," said Pastor Jeff Humphrey.

Humphrey went from pastor to pitmaster on Wednesday, as he started slow-cooking 24 turkeys and 20 hams through the evening, using a smoker donated from Brizee Heating, Air Conditioning and Fireplaces in Twin Falls. In addition, more

A home for the holidays

Habitat for Humanity dedicates new homes

Madison, Shelby and Ella Spratt can't wait to decorate their new rooms.

They have aspirations of rain-bows, elephant accents and a black-and-white comforter. Their parents, Bruce and Charee Spratt, are just excited to be in a new home in time for the holidays, thanks to Habitat for Humanity of the Magic Valley and a group of volunteers with big hearts and willing hands.

Each home was stocked with food from Grocery Outlet and owner Craig Hawkins presented both families with $100 gift certificates to buy fresh produce and meat for the holiday season.

Both homes were purchased by Habitat after they went into fore-

M-C nonprofit still seeks Christmas box applicants

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Mini-Cassia Christmas Council, which has been delivering a little extra holiday cheer to disadvantaged Mini-Cassia families for more than three decades, could use a few more toy donations this year.

The council's boxes, which will be distributed Dec. 11, contain food, meat certificates, blankets and gifts for each family member.

Rupert resident Norma Charles said her brother, who passed away last year, received the boxes.

"He was a bachelor and he really appreciated the coats and food that he got," Charles said.

Charles, who volunteers for the organization, said looking down the line of people waiting for boxes on distribution day can be a little overwhelming.

"There is this big long line of people and you're filling the boxes and you just hope that

Volunteer organizer Mary Young said the council had good volunteer turnout this year and actually had to turn some people away.

Mini-Cassia Christmas Council volunteers Barbara Mai, right, and Verlee Frost sort bags of toys that will be packed in the nonprofit's Christmas boxes this year. Those wishing to apply for the boxes can do so from 2 to 6 p.m. Tuesday in Burley.

Volunteers are especially needed earlier in September through October, Young said.

Frost said the Christmas Council will hold an additional registration day, as only 450 of an expected 600 applications for boxes have been received. Due to a glitch at one area school, registration information wasn't distributed.

Registration will continue from 2 to 6 p.m. Tuesday at the council's building, 1256 Overland Ave. Applicants need to bring a completed referral form from any Mini-Cassia school or from the offices of South Central Community Action Partnership, Idaho Head Start or the Community Council of Idaho.

Frost said applicants can list items they need or want. Often, she said, requested items are what others would consider necessities.

Christmas Council volunteer Verlee Frost said the nonprofit is especially short on dolls and toys this year. Items for teen boys are also needed.

Frost said tax-deductible cash donations would also be timely after the council had to replace a furnace in its Burley building.

Charles said that 99 percent of people who pick up a box are very generous in their gratitude.

"It's really heartwarming to see people receive something they might not have otherwise," Charles said.

Linda Short, a 25-year volunteer, said that the council often receives notes and cards from people who have received boxes.

"When you are appreciated you don't mind doing the work," Short said.

Donations can be dropped off from 3 to 6 p.m. Tuesdays and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays at 1256 Overland Ave., Burley. Cash donations may be sent to Mini-Cassia Christmas Council Inc., P.O. Box 332, Heyburn, ID 83336.

Severe winter weather can complicate health needs

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

For those whose lives depend on regular trips to a medical facility, severe winter weather can be worrisome. But a little preparation can help patients survive a travel delay.

With the severe storms that rolled across the U.S. this week, health groups warned people suffering from illnesses to keep sufficient medication on hand, such as inhalers and insulin, in case they could not reach a doctor or pharmacy.

Dialysis provider DaVita said patients with impaired kidneys, in particular, are at high risk during storms or natural disasters because they require dialysis at least three times a week.

Kidneys filter waste out of the blood so people with kidney problems must use machines to filter their blood or problems develop, such as swelling, cramps, paralysis and eventually death. The process takes three to four hours.

Denise Stanzack, Twin

Falls DaVita facility administrator, said Tuesday was a tense day for about eight or nine of her patients who couldn't reach the facility for their scheduled appointment.

Stanzack said she sent drivers in an effort to pick patients up but some ended up in a ditch or snowbank. So by adjusting appointments, she managed to fit everyone in on Wednesday.

"We're working a longer day, and we can shorten the process by 30 minutes to create holes," Stanzack said.

"We just crammed them in where we could."

In the event that the next storm causes longer delays, DaVita recommends dialysis patients create an emergency kit that includes:

- Emergency phone numbers of doctors and the dialysis center
- At least three day's worth of medications, as well as a list of the dosage amounts
- If diabetic, a week's worth of supplies (syringes, insulin, glucose monitoring strips) streets and two dispatchers to take calls.

Most calls on holidays are for crashes or for motorist assistance, but there is some truth to the lore of deep-fried turkey fires, according to TFFD Capt. Doug Moore. Both he and Wade acknowledged that while fires from cooking are reported, most winter holiday mishaps are the result of Christmas light hazards, unattended candles and ill-maintained fireplaces.

"We start thinking about that stuff" during the winter, Wade said.

Hailey animal shelter bids for BLM land

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

The Animal Shelter of the Wood River Valley learned that it can be good to have the Bureau of Land Management as a neighbor.

The BLM has started a 30-day comment period on a proposal to sell 17 acres of public land to the Hailey shelter.

Director Joanne Dixon said the shelter wouldn't have been interested in buying the land if it had not accidentally squatted on a small portion of it.

"We inadvertently built a concrete pad and storage shed on the BLM side," Dixon said. "We didn't want to move it and the BLM said we could buy it."

The BLM listed the land as disposable in 1982 and is now willing to sell the land for less than $19,000.

Dixon said both the shelter's 5 acres and the BLM land to the west are on a hillside that limits what they can use the land for. The shelter handles small animals only so it doesn't need much extra space, and Dixon said she's struggling to support the animals she has now.

Dixon said she doesn't know how she'll pay for the land. But she said she's not worrying about that yet because it's been a lengthy process — two years — that isn't finished yet.

"If it finally happens, we'll look into what we can do with the land," Dixon said. "If nothing else, it protects the edge of our property."

Motorist sentenced in N. Idaho

SANDPOINT (AP) — A Washington state motorist has been sentenced to a year in prison following a crash that killed a cyclist and injured a runner competing in a relay race in northern Idaho last summer.

Bowdeen S. Kahuhu of Newport, Wash., was sentenced Wednesday in 1st District Court for vehicular manslaughter.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports that Kahuhu was taken into custody immediately to begin serving her sentence.

Idaho State Police say Kahuhu hit a 17-year-old Spokane-to-Sandpoint relay runner and her 46-year-old chaperone, Patricia Ann Lambie of Greenacres, Wash.

The teen survived the early morning crash on Aug. 14, but Lambie was killed.

Kahuhu says she fell asleep.

their volunteer hours. Three hundred hours of "sweat equity" is required of each family before they can get into a home that is financed through an affordable, zero-interest loan through Habitat.

Her 10-year-old daughter, Shelby, said she couldn't wait to have her own room, while Bruce Spratt added that they planned to move in on Thanksgiving Day.

Sara and Jason Brown agreed to sell the property that their dilapidated home sat on to Habitat as a down payment on their new home. Their old home will be taken down and two more Habitat homes will be built next year, according to Habitat Executive Director Linda Fleming.

"It means so much to have a safe and warm house for my kids and be able to provide for them," Sara Brown said at the dedication, her two blond-haired boys, ages 1 and 3, sprawled out on the floor.

Habitat has dedicated six homes to families this year, five of which have been a part of the Neighborhood Stabilization Program which uses federal funding to buy homes in foreclosure and infuse money into local communities.

"We put two families in a neighborhood that have worked together to get into a home," Fleming said. "That's what it's all about — getting people in a home and creating a neighborhood."

than 50 dessert pies were donated by area restaurants.

This is New Hope's third year to offer a Thanksgiving Day meal. Last year it served more than 400 people, Humphrey said. He estimated that this year's count might be higher.

"It's hard to tell," he said. "With the economy getting worse, we're preparing for more."

More than 50 volunteers from the Chi Alpha club, church members, the Idaho Foodbank and KMVT helped cook, serve hot food, brew fresh coffee and wait tables for the meal. There was also an area where people could have their pictures taken next to a Christmas tree and other festive decorations as another free service.

Many volunteers were members of the community, like Frank Ortiz, who gives his time to any organization that could use another set of hands.

"You've got to do something for your community in these hard times," said Ortiz, who was there with his wife and granddaughter to have a meal, but not before helping others. "The only way we'll make it is to pull together."

Wood River's gold preceded its Hollywood glitterati

The Wood River Valley looks as it does today because of the great silver rush of the 1880s. But apart from the movie stars who now frequent the place, that isn't all that's glittered in Blaine County.

The region was also the site of a major — and nowadays, little-known — gold rush in the three decades after the Civil War.

Eight prospectors from Rocky Bar located two lodes in what became known as the Hailey Gold Belt in 1865. Two of them eventually settled in Broadford and Bellevue, according to the Idaho State Historical Society, but development of these properties was delayed until after the 1880 silver rush to Wood River made work more feasible there.

By the summer of 1883, a 450-foot tunnel had been driven to cross-cut the Camas lode without actually reaching it. So at that point, mining of the outcrop was chosen as a way to get started. This proved to be relatively simple at first: An 800-foot vein of $15 ore projected several feet above ground over a width of up to 50 feet, so surface operations began more as a quarry than a mine.

Then an investor from Saint Joseph, Mo., bought a major property there for $10,000 in the summer of 1884, according to the historical society's reference series. Milling began June 1, 1885, with a 10-stamp outfit that was soon doubled in capacity. An initial cleanup yielded only $605 on June 17, but within two years, a 20-stamp mill was grinding out concentrates of $40 to $350 a ton for shipment, in addition to free gold recovered at the site, according to the historical society's reference series.

To improve shipment facilities for concentrates, a Hailey, Gold Belt, and Western Railway Company was organized June 16, 1887, and a line was surveyed immediately. More than surveys were needed, though, to offer much service to that district. But a new town of Gold Belt was started anyway, complete with a saloon and restaurant, a blacksmith shop, carpenter shop, livery stable, and other modern conveniences.

A decade later, recovery from the Hailey Gold Belt was increased by introduction of a cyanide process on Oct. 1, 1897. Jerome B. Frank of Denver succeeded eventually in reworking all the tailings from the Camas concentrator, raising production there to 102,000 ounces of gold.

Eventually, the price of gold tailed off so much that commercial production wasn't economically feasible. But there's still gold to be found in the Big Wood River drainage.

Report: Student debt up by half

By Diane Stafford
McClatchy Newspapers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The average student debt for bachelor's degree graduates mushroomed 50 percent from 1996 to 2008, according to a new report.

Over the same time frame, debt for associate-degree graduates grew to twice the amount of their 1996 counterparts.

Analysis of National Center for Education Statistics data by the Pew Research Center's Social & Demographic Trends Project found that the higher debt loads were driven by three trends:

- More students borrowed — 60 percent of graduates in 2008, compared to 52 percent of graduates in 1996.

- Students borrowed more — 2008 bachelor's degree recipients borrowed an average of $23,000 compared to $17,000 in 1996 (inflation-adjusted to 2008 dollars), and associate degree recipients borrowed an average of $12,600 compared to $7,600.

- More students attended for-profit schools that had higher tuition.

The final point indicates loan-repayment difficulty.

The Pew study found that, over the past decade, enrollment in private, for-profit schools outpaced enrollment in public or nonprofit schools and that students enrolled in for-profit schools were more likely to borrow money.

For-profit schools granted 18 percent of all undergraduate degrees in 2008, up from 14 percent in 2003.

The report said one-fourth of for-profit school graduates borrowed more than $40,000, compared with just 5 percent of public school graduates and 14 percent of nonprofit school graduates.

One takeaway from the study:

"Generally, private for-profit school graduates have lower incomes and are older, more likely to be from minority groups, more likely to be female, more likely to be independent of their parents and more likely to have their own dependents," Pew reported.

"For almost every field of study at every level, students at private for-profit schools are more likely to borrow and tend to borrow larger amounts than students at public and private not-for-profit schools."

U.S. set to surpass Soviet occupation of Afghanistan

By Patrick Quinn
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — The Soviet Union couldn't win in Afghanistan, and now the United States is about to have something in common with that futile campaign: nine years, 50 days.

As of today, the U.S.-led coalition will have been fighting in this South Asian country for as long as the Soviets did in their humbling attempt to build up a socialist state. The two invasions had different goals — and dramatically different body counts — but whether they have significantly different outcomes remains to be seen.

What started out as a quick war on Oct. 7, 2001, by the U.S. and its allies to wipe out al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden and the Taliban has instead turned into a long and slogging campaign. Now about 100,000 NATO troops are fighting a burgeoning insurgency while trying to support and cultivate a nascent democracy.

A Pentagon-led assessment released earlier this week described the progress made since the United States injected 30,000 more troops into Afghanistan earlier this year as fragile.

The top U.S. military commander in Afghanistan, Gen. David Petraeus, has said NATO's core objective is to ensure that Afghanistan "is never again a sanctuary to al-Qaida or other transnational extremists that it was prior to 9/11."

He said the only way to achieve that goal is "to help Afghanistan develop the ability to secure and govern itself. Now not to the levels of Switzerland in 10 years or less, but to a level that is good enough for Afghanistan."

To reach that, there is an ongoing effort to get the Taliban to the negotiating table. President Hamid Karzai has set up a committee to try to make peace, and the military hopes its campaign will help force the insurgents to seek a deal.

When the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan on Dec. 27, 1979, its stated goal was to transform Afghanistan into a modern socialist state. The Soviets sought to prop up a communist regime that was facing a popular uprising, but

In 1992, the pro-Moscow government of Mohammad Najibullah collapsed and U.S.-backed rebels took power. The Taliban eventually seized Kabul after a violent civil war that killed thousands more. It ruled with a strict interpretation of Islamic law until it was ousted by the U.S.-led invasion.

Nader Nadery, an Afghan analyst who has studied the Soviet and U.S. invasions, said "the time may be the same" for the two conflicts, "but conditions are not similar."

More than a million civilians died as Soviet forces propping up the government of Babrak Karmal waged a massive war against anti-communist mujahedeen forces.

"There was indiscriminate mass bombardment of villages for the eviction of mujahedeen," Nadery said. "Civilian casualties are not at all comparable."

Michael O'Hanlon, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution think tank and Afghanistan expert, said NATO forces have killed fewer than 10,000 civilians and a comparable number of insurgents.

The allied military presence has also been far smaller and more targeted. Even now, nearly all operations are restricted to the south and east of the country where the insurgency is most active.

Judge has many options in sentencing DeLay

By Juana A. Lozano
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Former U.S. House Majority Leader Tom DeLay argued throughout his trial that the deck was stacked against him by a politically motivated prosecutor and a jury from the most Democratic city in one of the most Republican states.

But following DeLay's conviction Wednesday on money laundering and conspiracy charges, some legal experts say the edge may now shift to the Republican who represented a conservative Houston suburb for 22 years.

Before DeLay's inevitable appeal, which his lawyers predict will be a far friendlier process than his trial, he faces sentencing next month from Senior Judge Pat Priest.

While technically the money laundering charge carries a punishment of up to life in prison, the judge has wide latitude and could end up just giving him probation.

"It is absolutely impossible he would get anywhere near life," said Philip Hilder, a Houston criminal defense attorney and former federal prosecutor. "It would be a period of a few years, if he gets prison."

Barry Pollack, a Washington-based lawyer who represents clients in white-collar and government corruption cases, said the judge may not feel the need to throw the book at DeLay, figuring the conviction itself is severe punishment for someone who once ascended to the No. 2 post in the House of Representatives.

For example, as a convicted felon, DeLay won't be able to run again for public office or even be able to cast a vote until he completes his sentence.

"I think in a lot of cases a judge wants to make an example, but I don't see that happening here," Pollack said.

Prosecutors accused DeLay of conspiring with two associates to use his Texas-based political action committee to send $190,000 in corporate money to an arm of the Washington-based Republican National Committee. The RNC then sent the same amount to seven Texas statehouse candidates. Under Texas law, corporate money can't go directly to political campaigns.

The money helped Republicans take control of the Texas House in 2002, and once there, they were able to push through a DeLay-engineered congressional redistricting plan that sent more Texas Republicans to Congress in 2004, strengthening DeLay's political power.

While the string of alleged events may have been difficult for jurors to follow, outside legal observers said prosecutors were able to prove that DeLay had an undeniable motive for breaking the law.

BLM to give wild horses fertility-control drugs

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — The U.S. Bureau of Land Management plans to step up temporary roundups of wild horses to treat the animals with fertility control drugs before releasing them back to the range instead or permanently removing them from public lands.

The agency plans 11 gathers of wild horses on federal land in Nevada, Idaho and Utah in the coming year for the primary purpose of applying the vaccine to about 890 mares.

“If these fertility control treatments prove successful, we can lengthen the time between some gathers, saving taxpayer dollars,” BLM Director Bob Abbey said Wednesday.

Horse protection advocates said the temporary roundups are a step in the right direction but complained that the strategy will be used in less than one-fifth of BLM gathers planned in the coming year.

Suzanne Roy, campaign director for the American Wild Horse Preservation Campaign, said the federal agency failed to mention in its announcement that it intends to round up an estimated 47 other herds and permanently remove over 11,000 wild horses from the range after removing about 10,000 this year.

“Unfortunately, the department is continuing business as usual and ignoring tens of thousands of citizens who have voiced their opposition to the mass roundup and removal of America’s wild horses from the West,” Roy said.

Roy said the majority of the horses are warehoused in government long-term holding facilities, costing American taxpayers tens of millions of dollars annually.

The BLM says permanent roundups also are needed because the 38,000 wild horses and burros that roam public rangelands in 10 western states cannot be sustained by the land.

The agency maintains the appropriate number of horses and burros is about 26,600.

BLM officials said the population of wild horses on public rangeland doubles about every four years because the animals have virtually no natural predators.

The agency said in the case of the temporary gathers, it will be using the fertility control vaccine Porcine Zona Pellucida, or PZP, which makes mares temporarily infertile.

PZP is not available commercially, but the BLM uses it in cooperation with the Humane Society of the United States under Food and Drug Administration rules that apply to research on new animal drugs.

Agency officials said PZP was first tested on the wild horses of Assateague Island off the coasts of Maryland and Virginia, where a reduction in mare pregnancy rates was observed.

Most of the “catch, treat and release” gathers in the coming year are planned in horse management areas in Nevada. One is planned in Utah and two in Idaho.

Prosecutor: Idaho trooper to face poaching charge

SANDPOINT (AP) — An Idaho state trooper will be prosecuted for killing a bull moose out of season, authorities said.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reported that prosecutors had not yet decided whether to charge Cpl. Jeff Jayne with a misdemeanor or felony.

“We haven’t finalized a decision on the exact nature of the charge, but it will be for violations of the Fish and Game code,” Latah County Prosecutor Bill Thompson told the newspaper.

Investigators said Jayne killed the moose four days before hunting season opened.

Jayne told the newspaper he incorrectly memorized the dates of the hunting season.

“I am facing stiff scrutiny from the public and the judicial process — a challenge I am willing to accept in exchange for my mistake,” Jayne said. “I wish to put this behind me, move on, and make changes to ensure this will never be repeated.”

Thompson was waiting for additional information from Jayne’s attorney James Siebe before making a decision on a charge.

New chair of Congressional Sportsmen’s Caucus vows to push wolf, hunting issues HELENA, Mont. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Jon Tester said he has been named the next chairman of the Congressional Sportsmen’s Caucus, taking over as the wolf issue looms large for Western lawmakers.

Tester will assume his role over the bipartisan Congressional Sportsmen’s Caucus, which has about 300 members from many states, when the new Congress convenes in January.

He said it will be a good platform to push on issues like wolves, and to make sure hunting access issues like access and habitat are dealt with in the new farm bill that includes the budgets of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and U.S. Forest Service.

But Tester said he thinks there is still a chance that the wolf issue could be dealt with this year. He favors some plan that puts management of the wolf back into state management in Montana and Idaho.

Salazar, a key Obama administration official when it comes to the issue, and believes Salazar is open to the idea of a hunt.

“He never came out and said that, but that’s the impression I got,” Tester said.

There are several pending bills aimed at getting gray wolves off the endangered species list, and they have been given very little chance by some of getting done this year.

With little time left this year, lawmakers have been focusing on issues like unemployment, Medicare and nuclear proliferation.

There are now more than 1,700 wolves in Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, Washington and Oregon.

The animals have twice been removed from the endangered list since 2007, only to be re-listed under court order following lawsuits from wildlife advocates.

“That is one I would like to get done this lame duck session,” Tester said. “I think the state of Montana had a pretty good plan.”

Montana’s planned hunt for the animals was stopped after a judge ruled management of the endangered species couldn’t be divided by state lines.

Tester said there is resistance to the wolf hunts from lawmakers from urban areas.

“It’s going to be my job, our job, to educate people on what the facts are,” Tester said. “There is plenty of room for a hunt.”

Tester said he spoke with U.S. Interior Secretary Ken

Fix the roads, says task force, but not now

Idaho Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter asked for a to-do list from his Task Force on Modernizing Transportation. What he got was some suggestions.

We agree with state Rep. Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot, who was the only member of the 14-member committee to vote against those recommendations on Tuesday.

“I wanted the task force to come up with specific recommendations to fund enhancements for the Department of Transportation — we didn’t do it,” Lake said. “I think that we chose a cautious way out.”

Instead, the task force offered two dozen “prioritized” proposals, starting with high fuel taxes, rental car taxes, registration fee increases, local-option registration fees and a new weight-distance tax for heavy trucks. Further down the list are things like an excise tax on tires, a local-option fuel tax and a tax based on miles traveled.

So what did it tell us that we didn’t already know? Two things, chiefly:

- An independent cost allocation study commissioned by the task force found that cars, light trucks and SUVs are paying far too great a share of the cost for maintaining Idaho’s highways, and trucks are paying far too little.
- Idaho needs to spend $543 million a year more on its roads.

The latter figure is stunning, given Otter’s previous estimate for $240 million. The task force reckoned that Idaho requires more than $262 million to operate, preserve and restore the current road system, both at the state and local level; plus $281 million needed for “capacity and safety enhancement” at both levels.

“I think it’s the first time that the total numbers really have been presented in a way that the public can understand it,” said task force member Sen. Chuck Winder, R-Meridian. “$240 million ... was a maintenance budget. I think these numbers indeed reflect a more accurate picture of what the need is.”

But two years ago, Keith Allred and The Common Interest, the public interest group he then headed, ran the numbers and concluded that Idaho’s highway needs were closer to $150 million than $240 million. The governor’s estimate included wish-list, blue-sky guesstimates from every corner of the state, said Allred, who was the Democratic nominee for governor this year.

Yet whether the actual shortfall is $150 million or $240 million or $543 million, it’s not going to get funded anytime soon. The task force didn’t propose doing so for now, and Otter on Wednesday agreed.

But the panel did make three important recommendations:

- It backed permanently restoring a 3 percent share of gas tax that’s long gone to the state Department of Parks and Recreation for trails, reflecting the amount of gas that’s burned off-road in ATV’s, boats, snowmobiles and the like. An end-of-session compromise on transportation funding two years ago sought to shift that money to the Idaho Transportation Department for roads, but after an outcry from recreationists, lawmakers agreed to put the shift off until July 1, 2011; this recommendation would reverse it permanently if the Legislature agrees.
- The task force endorsed a larger shift back to ITD of millions a year that now help fund the Idaho State Police. Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, co-chairman of a legislative committee that’s studying how to fund ISP without the gas tax money, said a dollar-per-month surcharge on car insurance is one option that would raise $19 million a year and more than cover the loss to the state police.
- It called for re-examining funding distribution formulas to local highway jurisdictions to make sure they fit the needs.

On balance, the task force’s 18 months of work simply bought political cover for the governor and the Legislature, which certainly won’t do anything substantive about highways in the coming session and probably not in 2012 either.

Somehow, we were expecting more.

Our view:

Idahoans already knew their highways needed work. Did a governor’s task force really need 18 months to reach the same conclusion?

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

TSA: Federal govt. on steroids

The latest controversy to envelop the Obama administration is only partly about the specific rules governing body scanners and pat-downs. It has to do, too, with the federal agency Congress created to deal with airline security and the tension that has been building for years between its latex-gloved employees and the traveling public.

In this way, the “Don’t touch my junk” fiasco raises, yet again, what has become the central theme of Obama’s presidency: America’s faltering confidence in the ability of government to make things work. From stimulus spending and the health care law to the federal response to oil in the Gulf of Mexico, Obama has continually stumbled — blindly, it seems — into some version of the same debate, which is about whether we can trust federal bureaucracies to expand their reach without harming citizens or industry.

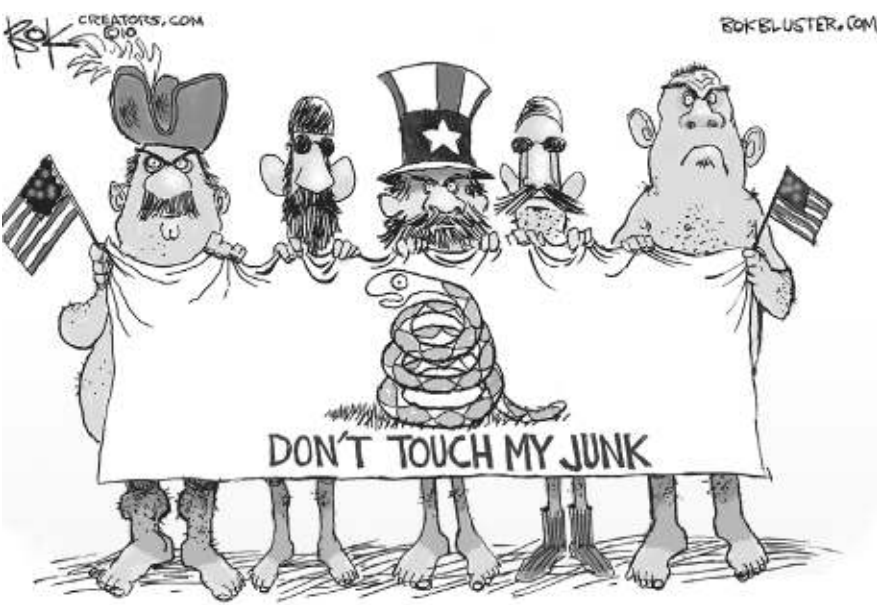

Matt Bai

Not long ago, this question seemed to have been mostly settled in American politics. The triumph of Ronald Reagan and his conservative argument throughout the 1980s had the effect of discrediting the liberal notion of sprawling government that had dominated the 20th century. Even Bill Clinton succeeded by incorporating this argument, vowing to reform unwieldy bureaucracies and to bring “the era of big government” to its close.

Then came the unraveling of the second Bush administration and the 2008 election, which persuaded a lot of long-dispirited liberals that their philosophy, and not simply their party, had been restored. The election of Obama and his formidable majorities in Congress, installed over the course of successive elections, was seen in some quarters of the Democratic Party as an ideological vindication — a sign that voters had judged rigid conservatism a failure and were at last ready to embrace a more expansive government.

These Democrats subscribed to the historical frame put forth by the liberal academic Sean Wilentz, who in 2008 published a book titled The Age of Reagan: 1974-2008. Wilentz afforded Reagan significant credit as a pivotal American president, but the very title of his book advanced the case that Reaganism as a political philosophy was on the wane. In this interpretation of events, Wilentz and other liberal thinkers seemed to cast the entire era as something of an interlude, an ideological detour on the way from Lyndon Johnson’s Great Society to Obama’s modern brand of liberalism — whatever that ultimately turned out to be.

The problem with this interpretation, it turns out, is that the elections of 2006 and 2008 were not a resounding mandate for some new (or old) ideological direction, but rather a rejection of the governing culture in Washington — partisanship, extremism, pettiness.

Consider a survey last month conducted by the Democratic pollster Stan Greenberg for the liberal Campaign for America’s Future, which the group has cited to buttress its case that voters are prone to accept liberal arguments. Even in this poll, 76 percent of voters agreed that the top priority in Washington should be to “reduce the size of government and the deficit.” And a plurality of voters (50 percent) said they were more worried about government spending and taxes than they were about government failing to invest in job creation.

For all its proposed expansions of government at a time of economic crisis, the White House has only sporadically and in limited ways focused its attention on reforming bureaucracies in the way that Clinton did. And even in their policy successes, the administration and its Congressional allies have sometimes furthered the image of government as less than ruthlessly efficient.

Take the “cash for clunkers” program last year, which Democrats considered a masterstroke, since it led to a spike in sales for domestic automakers and made some modest contribution to air quality to boot. At the same time, though, the program almost immediately exceeded its $1 billion budget, causing lawmakers to scramble for more money while car dealers, already struggling to pay their bills, waited in vain for the government to reimburse them for their rebate checks.

The program may have been an economic success, but it had to be shut down months ahead of schedule. To a lot of casual observers it probably came across as a classic case of bureaucratic confusion involving a few billion dollars — at exactly the moment that the administration was making its case for a $1 trillion overhaul of the health care system.

It’s not hard to see how the sudden uproar over body scanners — however critical for airline security — plays into this larger mistrust. The Transportation Security Administration grew out of a moment in 2001 when Americans seemed open to the notion of a more expansive federal presence. But as memories receded and no other planes became weapons of mass destruction (a testament, in part, to the TSA’s diligence), the urgency of that moment gave way to frustration with a constantly changing array of orders — “Hand over the toothpaste! Lose the baby milk!” — meant to thwart one new threat or another.

White House aides expressed shock this week at how controversial the TSA has now become. They seem to regard this latest argument as a distraction from the security issues that matter more, not to mention a showcase for hypocrisy, since a lot of the Republicans now attacking them have called in the past for stricter screening.

But this is just the latest iteration of a larger debate that surrounds much of what Obama does. And, just as with the health care protests and the reaction to the BP oil spill, the administration’s surprise seems to indicate that it still doesn’t quite get what that debate is really about.

Kids are a part of restaurant business

I would like to respond to last Friday’s letter, “Why can’t we eat our Big Mac in peace?” I have been in the restaurant business for over 20 years. Places like Burger King and McDonald’s are geared towards children. That is why they have Kid Menus, Happy Meals and Toy Lands. As a parent, am I supposed to buy a muzzle for my kids when I take them out for lunch at their favorite places? Or better yet, “Sorry kids, It’s not our day of the week to go to McDonald’s.”

I am appalled that this suggestion even arose. As the manager of a fine dining restaurant, kids are an important part of our establishment. Next time, get it “to go.”

Grandmother living a nightmare in Burley

I am writing this letter to the person or people that are harassing my grandmother. My grandma is almost 95 years old. She lives on the east side of Burley. If you are the one that is harassing my grandma by destroying her decorations outside, stealing her flag and knocking on her door/window, knock it off! Why do you think it is entertaining to scare a little old woman? Can't you find something else to do to entertain yourself? It is scary enough for a widow to live by herself than to be harassed by someone. I want it stopped. When I was raised, I was taught to respect the elders in the community. I was taught to always open the door for them, mow their lawn, shovel their sidewalks, etc. Why are we not teaching our children to respect and serve the elderly of the community? Why are we not teaching our children it is not appropriate to harass the widows in the community? We need to make sure that the elderly of our community feel safe and are taken care of. I sure hope whoever is doing this will leave my grandma alone and find something else to do to entertain themselves. I know there is not a lot to do in Burley but I guarantee there is something you can do instead of scaring and destroying a grandma's property. Just remember, that is someone's grandma you are stealing from and harassing. Would you like someone to treat your grandma like that?

There were cheaper ways to deal with arsenic levels

A $33 million project now underway will eventually bring water with little or no arsenic content from Pristine Springs to Twin Falls to blend with local well water containing arsenic levels believed to be marginally unsafe. Thus, this $33 million project will hopefully lower arsenic concentration in city water for safer drinking, cooking, etcetera. In the meantime, water users can do the same by mixing 89-cent supermarket jugs of distilled water with local water. Some of us are doing so.

If not already in use in our schools; small, inexpensive devices to make distilled water are available to mix with local water for safer drinking.

For larger industrial water users, such as Glanbia Foods, up to 6000-gallon units are available to produce distilled water for direct use, or for mixing with local water, to produce safer food. Ideally, arsenic-free water should be used to make food anywhere.

It appears that folks with diabetes 2, or folks at risk for it, may be in danger from even small concentrations of arsenic. The tap water available to them after the $33 million project is eventually completed may not be sufficiently arsenic-free. Hopefully, they can afford to substitute arsenic-free water.

It's moot now, but how many distilled jugs could have been bought with the $33 million (plus interest)? Project cost will significantly increase our monthly water bills. But, City Hall had no choice; clean water standards are mandated from D.C.

Were there cheaper technology choices? Perhaps, but the horse is out of the barn: the $33 million project is happening!

Folks that are fearful of incremental socialism and nanny government must be apoplectic over this $33 million government project to "do for us what we could do for ourselves"! Sorry! Just kidding!

School bond issue a boost for kids' education

I am writing in support of the upcoming school bond vote in Cassia County. Having been a lifelong resident of the county, a graduate of Oakley High School, and a parent that has had five children graduate from Oakley, I have recognized that it is important to continually upgrade our educational facilities and be able to have the schools grow with the communities. When it comes to maintaining quality schools, it is a "pay me now" or "pay me later" proposition. With new economic development in the Mini-Cassia area come additional students in our schools. There is already need for more classrooms in all of our area communities. In my many years of involvement in bond issues such as this one, I have never seen a proposal that makes more sense than this one, as it provides for needs that have been recognized within each community by committees made up of respected individuals, working with the townspeople and the teachers and administrators of each school. The architects that have been enlisted have listened carefully to the needs and desires in each area and understand the importance of building quality facilities. I fully understand that it's difficult to ask for more money from property owners when the economy is down, but as a homeowner and landowner, the benefits of passing this school bond now far outweighs the additional cost on our property taxes. Due to the economic conditions of the past couple of years, construction costs, and the cost of money to fund it will never be cheaper. The old saying goes, "You can never save yourself into prosperity." We can bury our head in the sand and hope the problem goes away, or we can step up and make our area a better place to live and raise our families. Modern efficient schools are something that we can all be proud of. Please join me in supporting this effort.

What's really wrong with America

For me, the most frightening news this week not about North Korea's stepping up its nuclear program, but an article about how American kids are stepping up their use of digital devices:

"Allison Miller, 14, sends and receives 27,000 texts in a month, her fingers clicking at a blistering pace as she carries on as many as seven text conversations at a time. She texts between classes, at the moment soccer practice ends, while being driven to and from school and, often, while studying. But this proficiency comes at a cost: She blames multitasking for the three B's on her recent progress report. 'I'll be reading a book for homework and I'll get a text message and pause my reading and put down the book, pick up the phone to reply to the text message, and then 20 minutes later realize, 'Oh, I forgot to do my homework.'"

I don't want to pick on Miller. I highlight her words only because they're integral to a much larger point: Our unemployment today is not only because of the financial crisis. There are some deeper problems. If we're going to get more Americans back to work, we will need more stimulus from the USG — the U.S. government — from the top down. But we will also need more stimulus from the PTA's — the Parent Teacher Associations — from the bottom up.

The deeper problems fostering unemployment in America today can be summarized in three paragraphs:

Global competition is stiffer. Just think about two of our most elite colleges. When Harvard and Yale were all male, applicants had to compete only against a pool of white males to get in. But when Harvard and Yale admitted women and more minorities, white males had to step up their game. But when the cold war ended, globalization took hold. As Harvard and Yale started to admit more Chinese, Indians, Singaporeans, Poles and Vietnamese, both American men and women had to step up their games to get in. And as the education systems of China, India, Singapore, Poland and Vietnam continue to improve, and more of their cream rises to the top and more of their young people apply to Ivy League schools, it is only going to get more competitive for American men and women at every school.

Then, just as the world was getting flattened by globalization, technology went on a rampage — destroying more low-end jobs and creating more high-end jobs faster than ever. What computers, hand-held devices, wireless technology and robots do in aggregate is empower better-educated and higher-skilled workers to be more productive — so they can raise their incomes — while eliminating many lower-skilled service and factory jobs altogether. Now the best-educated workers, capable of doing the critical thinking that machines can't do, get richer while the least-educated get pink slips.

Finally, just when globalization and technology were making the value of higher education greater than ever, and the price for lacking it more punishing than ever, America started slipping behind its peers in high school graduation rates, college graduation and global test scores in math and critical thinking.

As Education Secretary Arne Duncan put it to me in an interview, 50 years ago if you dropped out, you could get a job in the stockyards or steel mill and still "own your own home and support your family." Today, there are no such good jobs for high school dropouts.

Beyond the recession, this triple whammy is one of the main reasons that middle-class wages have been stagnating. To overcome that, we need to enlist both the USG. and the PTA. We need teachers and principals who are paid better for better performance, but also valued for their long hours and dedication to students and learning. We need better parents ready to hold their kids to higher standards of academic achievement. We need better students who come to school ready to learn, not to text. And to support all of this, we need an all-society effort — from the White House to the classroom to the living room — to nurture a culture of achievement and excellence.

Thanksgiving Day sales bring out early bird shoppers

By Mae Anderson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Not all Americans tucked into turkey with their families on Thanksgiving. Some were out shopping, hitting sales ahead of the crowds expected Friday.

After a year of cautious spending and worry over an uncertain economy and high unemployment, more stores this year extended hours into Thanksgiving Day, a day when stores are traditionally closed.

Many grumble about the relentless march of commercialism creeping into the holiday. But at least some shoppers took the bait.

While crowds appeared relatively light compared with the weekend ahead, the extended hours drew in overseas visitors, those who have to work Friday and some who couldn't resist a good deal.

Sears, Kmart and some Sports Authority, Gap, Old Navy and Banana Republic stores were among those open Thursday.

At an Old Navy in Lutherville, Md., Brenda Tarver, 65, a retired postal employee from Baltimore, was dragged out of the house by her daughters, but was finding good deals on clothing.

"They've got good prices and a variety of items. A lot of things are 50 percent off," she said.

Willy Gerelbest, 45, a counselor from Brooklyn, was shopping at Kmart in New York for sneakers on sale for $9.99.

"I saw the advertising and just wanted to check it out," he said. "Tomorrow I have to work."

David Friedman, president of marketing for Sears Holdings

Corp. said the decision to open 7 a.m.-noon on Thanksgiving Day stemmed from positive response to a similar "early Black Friday" sale in November, as well as success with Kmart, which Sears also owns and has been open on Thanksgiving for 19 years.

Workers will earn holiday pay and still be home in time for a Thanksgiving meal, Friedman said.

12 holiday money mistakes to avoid

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The holiday season is full of pitfalls that can drain your bank account.

If you're not careful, you can end up taking a year to pay for all the spending. More than 13 million shoppers are still paying off last year's holiday debts, according to Consumer Reports.

It's fine to cut back on gifts if your finances are stretched thin. But if you plan to join the holiday shop-a-palooza, remember that it's not going against the holiday spirit to keep your bottom line in mind.

"You have to be smart," says Gail Cunningham of the National Foundation for Credit Counseling. "Know how much you can spend in advance and don't get caught up in the holiday moment."

Here's a look at 12 holiday money mistakes to avoid:

1. Discount fixation.

Retailers advertise deep discounts to get you to bite. But don't take them at their word without comparing prices. A store's sale price may reflect a markdown from the regular price, but there's no guarantee the manufacturer's suggested retail price isn't actually lower.

"Especially on Black Friday, you see really low prices because in many cases it's cheap stuff," says Dan de Grandpre, editor-in-chief of Dealnews.com.

2. No budget.

Skipping a holiday spending budget is a surefire way to overspend. Make a list that includes amounts for each person you want to buy a gift for and stick to it. Be sure to create an overall budget that factors in other holiday-related expenses. Without a plan, you'll get caught up in the hype and go for the feel-good purchase.

3. Debit dangers.

Debit cards carry the advantage of taking money from your account and not saddling you with future payments. But using them on big items is risky because they don't offer the purchase protections that credit cards do. For instance, if you fail to report any misuse of your bank account within two days, you may be liable for the first $500 billed to your debit card instead of the first $50.

4. Return policy missteps.

Tossing away receipts can be costly. Their obvious value is for exchanges or returns, but there's another plus too: If the price is lowered after you buy an item, a receipt should enable you to get a credit for the difference.

5. Being low-tech.

Smart phones are changing how we shop. Scores of consumers are following their favorite brands and retailers on social networking sites like Twitter and Facebook, and retailers are taking full advantage. It's much easier for businesses to launch and retract deals online where matching inventory with demand is less of a challenge. Coupons and last-minute offers can arrive as e-mail alerts or through social network accounts.

6. Extended warranties.

Here's when to buy an extended warranty, says Greg Daugherty, executive editor of Consumer Reports: "Basically never." The manufacturer's warranty should protect you against any defect for up to a year.

7. Black Friday blunders.

Black Friday can be a shopper's dream. But long lines and overzealous crowds can really wear you down and make it harder to spend wisely. So map out a plan in advance and read the fine print on early-morning doorbuster deals. Check the website of each store you plan to visit for the latest bargains, and make a list of what you want to buy from each store.

8. Gift card gaps.

Give gift cards another look if you've spurned buying them because of fees and other issues. Thanks to recent rule changes, this is the first holiday season in which any gift card purchased cannot expire for at least five years. What's more, inactivity and other fees are banned in the first year.

9. Shipping costs.

Free shipping is easier than ever to find. Giant retailers are dangling it as an inducement to spend. More than 1,000 merchants also are participating in Free Shipping Day (www.free-shippingday.com) on Dec. 17.

10. Store credit cards.

Saving 20 percent on a single large purchase might sound worth it. But remember that retailers promote their store cards because they come out ahead on interest and late fees. Interest rates of more than 20 percent are quite common.

11. Exposing your ID.

Grab deals from the comfort of your living room but take precautions to avoid becoming a victim of identity theft, which costs U.S. consumers more than $50 billion a year. Only do business with websites that are properly secure. A common indicator that it's OK to enter confidential information is the presence of a padlock in the address bar on the checkout page.

12. Fear of negotiating.

Prices frequently are negotiable in electronics, jewelry and department stores. Consumer Reports surveys on haggling have found that shoppers are successful more often than not when they ask for a better price. Along the same lines, ask the cashier if there's a discount on your big item even if you don't have a current coupon.

Kanye West, cartoon heroes star at NYC parade

President Obama calls troops with holiday greetings

By Karen Matthews
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A high-kicking Kung Fu Panda and a diary-toting Wimpy Kid joined the giant balloon lineup as the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade unfolded Thursday, drawing tens of thousands of spectators to the annual extravaganza on a chilly, overcast morning.

Emily Rowlinson, a tourist from London, squealed and snapped pictures with her cell phone as the massive Smurf balloon floated by a packed sidewalk along the route.

"We don't have anything like this in England," she exclaimed. "We have parades. We don't have any sort of huge, floating beasts. It's very cool!"

As millions more watched the live broadcast on television, revelers gathered nationwide for other parades in Detroit, Chicago and Philadelphia. The parades headline observances across the nation that also feature football and family dinners with too much food on the table.

In his weekly radio and Internet address, President Obama called on Americans to help each other through tough times.

"This is not the hardest

Thanksgiving America has ever faced," Obama said. "But as long as many members of our American family are hurting, we've got to look out for one another."

He later telephoned 10 U.S. servicemen and women stationed around the world to thank them for their service and sacrifice. He wished them and their families a happy Thanksgiving, before joining his own for the holiday.

The Macy's parade featured an eclectic lineup of entertainers including Kanye West, Gladys Knight and Colombian rocker Juanes. The Broadway casts of "American Idiot" and "Elf" performed, along with marching bands from across the United States.

Perched on her father's shoulders, 16-month-old Stella Laracque wriggled and danced with excitement as SpongeBob SquarePants, Hello Kitty, Shrek and other beloved figures wafted past.

"She doesn't really know the characters, but she's loving it," said her father, Mike Laracque of Manhattan.

Another new balloon was Virginia O'Hanlon, the 8-year-old girl whose letter to the editor elicited the response, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus."

Santa Claus closed the parade as always. A cheer erupted as he passed by on his sleigh, shaking his enormous belly.

Find the ‘magic’ at Caring & Sharing Festival

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

It's a winter wonderland this week in Rupert. Minidoka County Health Care Foundation's 2010 Caring & Sharing Christmas Festival starts today at the Rupert Civic Auditorium, 505 Seventh St. Free to the public, it continues through Monday. The theme this year is "Unwrap the Magic," said foundation Executive Director Tammy Hanks. Organizers hope to raise $40,000 for health care and local scholarships this year, bettering last year's result of $30,000. Hanks said there seems to be a lot more community participation in this year's festival.

"The volunteers are really wanting to get involved this year. It's always nice to have someone come in and take ownership of it," Hanks said. No new new features have been added this year, as the present ones seem to be working, she said. "We see the Teddy Bear Breakfast growing each year and we expect that to be well-attended Saturday morning," she said. "Then, Santa comes in and has breakfast with the kids and they can have their picture taken with Santa. There is no charge — all you have to do is bring a new, unwrapped gift which will be given to the (Mini-Cassia) Christmas Council." Today's Festival Gala from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. opens the event. Those attending get first peek at the delights of the festival. Catered by Thomas Cuisine, the luncheon features hot and cold finger foods, fruits and vegetables, desserts and drinks. The festival then opens to the public from 3 to 9 p.m. and will feature entertainment after the lighting on the Rupert Square. Saturday's Teddy Bear Breakfast will start at 9:30 a.m., followed by the Santa breakfast at 11:30 a.m. People can also pay $3 for breakfast if they don't bring a toy. The festival will then be open to the public from 11:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., with non-stop live entertainment. On Sunday, the festival will be open from noon to 5 p.m., and will feature church choirs and religious music. Monday's festival hours will be 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. The Senior Social will be from 1 to 3 p.m. and there will be free refreshments for seniors. "It's an opportunity to stroll leisurely among the trees and Santa will visit with the young-at-heart seniors," Hanks said. Local quilt artist Cynthia Mickelsen has provided a raffle quilt for the festival for 12 years, including this year. Tickets for this year's quilt are $1 each or six for $5. Purchased trees will be delivered from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Tuesday. "As usual, the entertainment is outstanding," Hanks said. "I think it's going to be a great festival."

Presentation to focus on birding in Costa Rica

Kathleen Cameron of Bellevue will present a multimedia program about birding at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Rupert United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall, 605 H St. The public is encouraged to attend. Cameron has organized birding and natural history tours in Costa Rica since 2009. Her program will focus on the vital eco-connections between North America and Central and South America, with an emphasis on Costa Rica. The program will include a screening of her movie about birding in Costa Rica, past tour participants who have joined Kathleen and Edwin Ramirez for 12 days of birding in Costa Rica, and shots of the bird life of Costa Rica. Cameron will also announce the dates and details of the 2011 Majestic Feathers tours with Edwin Ramirez to Costa Rica and beyond.

Cameron is a professional photographer and filmmaker, as well as an avid birder with a passion for organizing tours. She grew up in Rupert and is the daughter of Bob and Margaret Cameron. Information: 436-3354 or majesticfeathers.com.

Suggestions for warts remedies pour in

DEAR DR. GOTT: How do you remove a family of plantar warts off the bottom of a big toe? My 10-year-old daughter has had them for a couple of years (shortly after starting gymnastics). There are about six or eight on her big toe right where it joins her foot. Please help!
DEAR READER: Since my last column about plantar warts, I have received many letters about various treatments. Many of the readers claim that over-the-counter and physician treatments offered limited success, with the warts either returning or never completely disappearing. Many also complained of the pain associated with these treatments, which is why they turned to alternative and home remedies. By far the most common remedy I received was iodine. The wart is first pumiced to remove the layers of dead skin and then the iodine is applied. One reader suggested Cassia bark oil applied once a day after removing the dead skin with a razor. She warned that it should be applied only to the wart because it can damage normal skin. She also recommended tea tree oil for common warts on the hands. Another reader took one 500-milligram capsule of olive leaf extract three times a day and was wart-free in three months. Another person reported success treating her boyfriend's plantar warts with a cotton ball soaked in apple cider vinegar applied to the wart and secured with duct tape each night. After a few weeks the warts were gone. A physician wrote in suggesting soaking the foot in hot water and gradually increasing the water temperature until the skin turns cherry red. He says that two or three treatments are usually successful in eradicating the virus, thus causing the wart to disappear. A final reader, attempting to avoid surgery to remove her son's wart, was advised by a friend to use an herbal product known as Wart Wonder. I cannot recommend or condemn any of these approaches because I have no experience with them. Please let me know if you and your daughter try any of these options and what your results are. DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently read your column about the person suffering from plantar warts. My son had a number these (large and small) a few years ago. I took him to a dermatologist, who looked at his foot and told us to use over-the-counter Duofilm. He said to apply the product twice a day, and every three days either scrape or pumice the wart and start the process over again. A month later, I took my son back, and the doctor declared the process was working and to keep at it. He then proceeded to charge us $80 for the five-minute visit. The doctor didn't even do anything! I would like to say — save your money, folks, and do the removal yourself. DEAR READER: Unfortunately, this situation is becoming more and more common. As you saw in my last column and in the above letter, many readers are frequently dissatisfied with the care they get from a doctor for common and plantar warts, not to mention how painful some of the procedures can be. Remember, readers, that warts are caused by a virus and are commonly acquired by touching other warts (such as those on the hands), or by being barefoot in public showers or pool areas. Simple precautions such as hand sanitizers, wearing flip-flops or water shoes, and using warm soap and water can help prevent outbreaks. Peter H. Gott is a retired physician and the author of several books, including "Live Longer, Live Better," "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Diet" and "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Cookbook," which are available at most bookstores or online.

ASK DR. GOTT

Nursing homes: Submit your gift lists soon

As is custom, the Times-News will again this year run lists of Christmas gifts requested by residents of Magic Valley nursing homes. Nursing homes wanting to submit wish lists should send them to frontdoor@magicvalley.com by 5 p.m. Dec. 6. The lists will start running in the Times-News' Community section on Dec. 9.

Irrigation pioneer Robert Daugherty dies

By Nelson Lampe
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Robert Daugherty, the Nebraska pioneer of center pivot irrigation who left his imprint on agriculture worldwide, died Wednesday, according to officials at his company, Valmont Industries, Inc.

Daugherty died at home in Omaha after a short illness, company spokesman Gene Hinkle said. Daugherty was 88 years old.

Valmont Chairman and CEO Mogens Bay described Daugherty as “a wonderful human being, an entrepreneur extraordinaire.”

“He was a visionary and he was a great philanthropist,” Bay said of Daugherty. “He was the whole package.”

A company obituary said Daugherty was born in Omaha in 1922 and eventually graduated from Carleton College in Northfield, Minn.

After Daugherty’s World War II service in the Marines, he acquired a half interest in a farm machine shop near Valley, Neb. Over the years, Daugherty helped build the business into what became Valley Manufacturing. In 1967 it became Omaha-based Valmont Industries.

The company said that in 1953, Daugherty obtained a patent license to the center pivot irrigation system developed by Frank Zymbach, further developed the idea and brought it to the market. Valmont said the system made more efficient use of water and cut labor costs 90 percent because it could operate unattended.

The system proved a catalyst for the company’s growth and made a lasting mark on agriculture. According to Valmont, its systems are irrigating more than 10 million acres in the United States and across the world.

Daugherty retired from Valmont’s board of directors in 2004, but he remained active in civic and philanthropic affairs.

Valmont CEO Bay said Daugherty “was right in the core group of community leaders for decades in Nebraska.”

In 2009 Daugherty committed $50 million toward the establishment of the Global Water for Food Institute at the University of Nebraska. The institute will be a center for research, education and policy analysis relating to use of water for agriculture.

“At the very end of his life he was worried about how the world would continue to feed itself and stretch the limited resources of water,” Bay said.

Oregon technology wiz Norm Winningstad dies

NEWPORT, Ore. (AP) — C. Norman “Norm” Winningstad, a computer entrepreneur and philanthropist considered to be Oregon’s “grandfather of technology,” died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound at his Newport home, police said Thursday. He was 85.

Winningstad, who had been ill, died Wednesday of the wound, Newport police Lt. Dave Teem told The Associated Press.

Winningstad started computing company Floating Point Systems of Beaverton and was a co-founder of high-tech firms Lattice Semiconductor Corp. and ThrustMaster, a company that makes joysticks.

He and his wife Dolores were major donors to arts and education in the state. The Dolores Winningstad Theater at the Portland Center for the Performing Arts is named for her.

“Norm used his business skills and technical knowledge to successfully plant the seedlings for what we now call the Silicon Forest,” Gov. Ted Kulongoski said in a statement. “Norm will be forever remembered as the grandfather of technology here in Oregon and his contributions and legacy will be realized for generations.”

Raised in California, Winningstad graduated from the University of California, Berkeley in 1948 with an electrical engineering degree.

“I graduated an expert in vacuum tubes, and that’s the year Bell Labs announced the transistor,” Winningstad told The Oregonian in 2007. “I graduated technically obsolete.”

After several years at Lawrence Radiation Laboratory in Berkeley, he moved to Oregon in 1958 to work for electronic instruments manufacturer Tektronix and became one of its chief innovators.

An avid helicopter pilot who once owned four Ferraris, Winningstad “was more flamboyant than the Tektronix type,” Chuck Frost, Tek’s former vice president of administration, told the newspaper. “It fit him well. It didn’t look bad on him.”

In 1970, he started supercomputing company Floating Point Systems. A decade later he helped launch Lattice Semiconductor, which remains one of Oregon’s largest tech companies, and in 1990 helped start joystick manufacturer Thrustmaster.

Carla Perry, who helped write Winningstad’s book, “Area of Enlightenment: Don’t Confuse Me With the Facts; I’ve Already Made Up My Mind,” told The Oregonian he “happened to have a great brain and became an electrical engineer at a time when electrical engineering was changing.”

Perry said Winningstad had recently undergone spinal surgery.

“I know he was in a lot of pain,” she said.

The Winningstads moved to Newport in 1989 and kept a house near Portland. Winningstad would fly his helicopter back and forth.

Teem said Winningstad was known in Newport as a friendly man active in the community who frequently could be found walking his two bulldogs.

“We’d run into each other and sit and chat,” Teem said. “He was just a really nice guy.”

When Winningstad’s wife stepped out to get the mail just before noon Wednesday, she returned to find he had locked himself in a bathroom. Teem said. She called police, who found him dead.

Family friend Carol Gardner told The Oregonian that Dolores Winningstad had e-mailed her earlier this week to say her husband was not doing well.

“He loved life so much that he wanted to leave it in a good way and not in a way that would be long-suffering,” she said.

Epic power struggle over, Iraqi PM must form new government

By Shashank Bengali and Sahar Issa
McClatchy Newspapers

BAGHDAD — Iraq’s incumbent prime minister, Nouri al Maliki, was officially tasked Thursday with forming a new government to lead the country through a pivotal four-year period marked by the planned withdrawal of the last American troops.

With 30 days to name his Cabinet, al-Maliki will need to assemble a team that comprises all of Iraq’s squabbling factions in order to break an eight-month political impasse that has fueled insurgent violence and widespread public dissatisfaction.

“I call on all political blocs, politicians and the people of Iraq to work toward looking past their differences in order to

Insurer predicts $3.4-trillion diabetes decade

By Pat Wechsler
Bloomberg News

NEW YORK — Diabetes or prediabetic conditions will strike half of all adult Americans by the end of the decade unless people lose weight, said UnitedHealth Group, the largest U.S. health insurer by sales.

The disease will cost the nation almost $3.4 trillion in the 10 years through 2020, with more than 60 percent paid for by the U.S. government, according to a study released Tuesday by the Minnetonka, Minn.-based insurer. The number of Americans with high blood sugar will rise 44 percent to 135 million in 2020, from 93.8 million in 2010, researchers said.

Diabetes is growing as the U.S. population skews older and fatter, said Simon Stevens, executive vice president of the company’s Center for Health Reform & Modernization. About 28 million adult Americans, or 12 percent, are currently diabetic while 66 million others, or 28 percent, are prediabetic, according to the study. Prediabetics can lower the odds of getting diabetes by losing weight, he said.

“There is nothing inevitable” about the rise in diabetes, Stevens said in a telephone interview. “Even quite modest changes, like losing five percent of body weight, have the potential of producing decreases. If we don’t take obesity seriously, we risk our children living shorter lives than we parents have lived.”

UnitedHealth is developing programs to reduce spending for chronic diseases. Showing ability to combat costs benefits UnitedHealth by driving enrollment into its health plans, generating business for its disease management and prevention services and reinforcing its leadership on the topic, said Ana Gupte, an analyst at New York-based Sanford C. Bernstein & Co.

“This is a way of ensuring its role as a leader, not just an insurance company that sells health benefits,” Gupte said in a telephone interview. “By demonstrating tangibly that they can do something to moderate the cost trend, they show their value to Congress and the White House.”

The U.S. government has issued similar predictions about the growth in the disease. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, based in Atlanta, issued a study on Oct. 22 saying new cases will more than double by 2050, afflicting at least 1 in 5 adults. That amounts to as many as 75 million by mid-century. The CDC’s estimate of the number of adults with diabetes now is at least 32 million, according to the study.

“I can’t comment on the differences in the numbers, but both show a growing problem,” said Ann Albright, director of the CDC’s Division of Diabetes Translation. “The message for everyone is that we need to take this issue seriously as a country.”

Diabetes limits people’s ability to make or use insulin, which helps convert blood sugar into energy. About 90 percent to 95 percent of the cases are Type 2, which is caused by a combination of genetic and lifestyle elements, such as being overweight, Albright said Tuesday in a telephone interview. The less-common Type 1 diabetes is an autoimmune disease, seen in children, that destroys the body’s natural insulin, she said.

People with diabetes often develop other diseases such as heart attack, stroke, blindness and kidney disease, Albright said.

“Diabetes is like dropping a rock in a pond and watching the ripples flow out from it,” Albright said. “It’s the No. 1 cause of blindness, the No. 1 cause of kidney disease and a huge contributor to heart attack and stroke.”

S. Korea defense chief fired; North warns of new attacks

By Hyung-jin Kim and Foster Klug
Associated Press

YEONPYEONG ISLAND, South Korea — South Korea's president ordered more troops to a front-line island and dumped his defense minister Thursday as the country grappled with lapses in its response to a deadly North Korean artillery strike.

In scenes reminiscent of the Korean War 60 years ago, dazed residents of Yeonpyeong island foraged through blackened rubble for pieces of their lives and lugged their possessions down eerily deserted streets strewn with bent metal after Tuesday's hail of artillery. The barrage darkened skies, set off fierce blazes, killed four South Koreans and raised fears of an escalation that could lead to full-scale war.

"It was a sea of fire," resident Lee In-ku said, recalling the flames that rolled through the streets of this island that is home to military bases as well as a fishing community famous for its catches of crab. The spit of land is just seven miles from North Korea, but had only six pieces of artillery.

Despite warnings from North Korea that any new provocation would be met with more attacks, Washington and Seoul pushed ahead with plans for military drills starting Sunday involving a nuclear-powered U.S. aircraft carrier in waters south of this week's skirmish.

The exercises will likely anger the North — the regime cited South Korean drills this week as the impetus behind its attack — but the president said the South could little afford to abandon such preparation now.

"We should not ease our sense of crisis in preparation for the possibility of another provocation by North Korea," spokesman Hong Sang-pyo quoted President Lee Myung-bak as saying. "A provocation like this can recur any time."

Washington and Seoul also ratcheted up pressure on China, North Korea's main ally and biggest benefactor, to restrain Pyongyang.

Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao responded by calling on all sides to show "maximum restraint" and pushed again to restart the six-nation talks aimed at persuading North Korea to dismantle its nuclear programs in exchange for aid. Foreign Minister Yang Jiechi canceled a trip to Seoul this week.

The heightened inter-Korean animosity is taking place as North Korea undergoes a delicate transition of power from leader Kim Jong Il to his son Kim Jong Un, who is in his late 20s and is expected to eventually succeed his ailing father.

On Thursday, Lee accepted his defense minister's offer to resign after lawmakers lashed out at the government, claiming officials were unprepared for Tuesday's attack and that the military response was too slow. Even those in Lee's ruling party demanded the dismissal of Defense Minister Kim Tae-young.

At an emergency meeting in Seoul, Lee ordered reinforcements for about 4,000 troops on tense Yellow Sea islands, top-level weaponry and upgraded rules of engagement that would create a new category of response when civilian areas are targeted.

Skirmishes between the Korean militaries are not uncommon, but North Korea's heavy bombardment of Yeonpyeong Island was the first naval skirmish since the Korean War to kill civilians.

South Korean troops returned fire and scrambled fighter jets in response, but two South Korean marines and two construction workers were killed and at least 18 others wounded. South Korea has said casualties on the North Korean side were likely significant, but none were immediately reported by the secretive regime.

Marine Lt. Col. Joo Jong-wha acknowledged that the island is acutely short of artillery, saying it has only six pieces: the howitzers used in Tuesday's skirmish.

"In artillery, you're supposed to move on after firing to mask your location so that they don't strike right back at you," he told reporters. "But we have too few artillery."

A South Korean police officer patrols near destroyed houses on Yeonpyeong Island, South Korea, Thursday.

After 50 days adrift, 3 teens rescued in S. Pacific

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Three teens who have been missing in the South Pacific for 50 days — and were already eulogized in a memorial service — have been found alive by a New Zealand fishing boat.

The boys — two 15-year-olds and a 14-year-old — disappeared while attempting to row between two islands in the New Zealand territory of Tokelau in early October and were given up for dead after an extensive search involving New Zealand's air force.

Their craft had drifted 800 miles to a desolate part of the Pacific northeast of Fiji, when the crew of a tuna boat saw them frantically waving for help on Wednesday afternoon.

"All they could say was 'thank you very much for stopping,'" Tai Fredricsen, first mate of the San Nikuna, said.

"In a physical sense, they look very physically depleted, but mentally ... very high," told New Zealand's National Radio on Thursday.

The boys, Samuel Pelesa and Filo Filo, both 15, and Edward Nasau, 14, will be taken to a hospital in the Fiji capital of Suva on Friday.

The rescue came not a moment too soon: Fredricsen said they had begun to drink sea water because it hadn't rained in the past few nights.

He said that the boys survived by catching fish and eating a seagull that had landed on their boat.

Fredricsen said the boys were dehydrated, sunburned and very thin, but otherwise seemed OK. The tuna boat's crew gave them small portions of fruit and fluids.

He said the boat's crew didn't normally travel through that part of the region, but was using the isolated sea route to shorten its return to New Zealand.

The boys come from the atoll of Atafu, one of three that comprises the tiny Tokelau island group where 1,500 people live.

Tanu Filo, the father of one boy, said the news was broken by one of the teens' grandmother after she had a phone call from the fishing boat.

"It's a miracle, it's a miracle. The whole village, the whole village, there were so excited and cried and they sang songs and hugging each other, yeah, on the road. Everybody was yelling and shouting the good news," he told Radio New Zealand International.

Atafu, Nukunonu and Fakaofu, picture-perfect South Pacific islets, lie 300 miles north of Samoa, surrounded by 128 mostly uninhabited coconut palm-covered islets.

Eloquence and a big nose

CSI students take on classic tale of unrequited love

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho is giving new life to an old classic.

On Wednesday, the theater department debuts its production of "Cyrano de Bergerac." The large-scale play is a huge undertaking for the theater program — five acts, fencing, dozens of characters, elaborate set changes.

The 1897 play, penned in French by Edmond Rostand, centers on Cyrano de Bergerac, a flamboyant Frenchman with an abnormally large nose. Cyrano is reckless, bold and witty — traits that disguise his self-consciousness about his appearance. The plot explores Cyrano's unrequited love for Roxane, which he expresses by ghostwriting love letters for her lover, Christian.

To play Cyrano, actor Jud Harmon wears a long prosthetic nose that, from the audience, looks real. He also wears flashy clothes — a cap with huge white plumes, a cape, a fancy shirt with puffed sleeves — that throw him into the character even further.

The other star of the show is the set. It shifts between the five acts, with backdrops depicting forests and fields, and three-dimensional elements dropping down from a pulley system. Props include a life-size firing canon.

During rehearsal Monday, set changes took as long as five minutes. By the time the play opens, the cast wants to get that down to 30 seconds, said actor Nicholas Belnap. Labels on the ropes, color-coded by act, will help them speed up the process.

When you see the play, be prepared to twist and turn

'It's a Wonderful Life' at Twin Falls' Festival of Trees

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

For the past year, the AB Girls have been shopping, gluing, wiring, painting, taping, glittering, sewing, arranging and building.

The Filer First Baptist Church missionary group recently finished its Festival of Trees entry, which features a Nativity scene set in the desert and a tree decked in white and blue. It's also twice as tall as 4-foot-9-inch Megan Jasso, president of the church's American Baptist Girls branch, who often found herself up a ladder to decorate.

"I'm not too fond of heights," she said sheepishly. But all the Sunday afternoons spent on the tree were worth it, she said. "My favorite part was when it was all done and we presented it to the church; everyone was really impressed with it."

The girls and their adult leaders, Cheryl Tuttle and Sue Boehne, will run the coat check at the Black & White Ball at this year's Festival of Trees in Twin Falls, which benefits the Inpatient Rehabilitation Unit at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

"It was close to home and we wanted to do it," said Tuttle — whom the girls call "Mrs. Purple" — describing how the tree fits with the charitable activities of the AB Girls. "We've just had a ball, though we'll probably never do another one."

This year, the festival is returning to downtown Twin Falls, said Rebecca Southwick, programs and events coordinator for the hospital foundation.

"It's a real unorthodox place to have the festival, it's not an empty storefront or a wide-open space," she said of the Pioneer Carpet One sales area on Second Avenue South. "The building is one of the most beautiful in Twin Falls; the outside hides a great secret. It's like breaking open a chocolate and getting your favorite flavor."

Brent Compton, manager and owner of the carpet store, said he was excited when Southwick approached him about using the building. Although it meant moving huge amounts of inventory, including removing light fixtures, Compton said the business was glad to help.

26th Annual Festival of Trees

All events held at Pioneer Carpet One, 326 Second Ave. S., Twin Falls. General admission is $5 for adults, $4 for seniors 60 and older, and $2 for children 12 and younger.

Wednesday: 6 p.m. — Black & White Ball. A social hour followed by dinner and a live auction. Tickets are $100. Reservations: 737-2480.

Thursday: 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. — Seniors' Day. Free admission for seniors 60 and older to the general exhibition. Santa and a photographer available 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Dec. 3: 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. — Family Day. Free admission with a coupon from the Times-News.

Dec. 3: 7 p.m. — Ladies' Night Out, with the theme "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun," featuring a fashion show, no-host bar, complimentary champagne and hors d'oeuvres, and a silent auction. Gentlemen-only silent auction hours are 4:30-6 p.m. Tickets are $50 or $500 for a table sponsorship; event is for ages 21 and older.

Dec. 4: 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. — Children's Day. Free admission for children 12 and younger. Christmas movies will be shown 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Santa and a photographer will be available 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Poetry: The Gringo Choir, featuring Hailey native Max Kessler

Seen Saturday at Liberty Theatre

The entertaining evening was full of engaging performance poetry and improvised set pieces, but thematically it didn't hold together as well as it could have. I especially enjoyed Carlos Williams' works about urban life and Filipino heritage, and Kessler's powerful historical poem about railroad building.

Triple threat musician plays in Ketchum

Times-News

Listen to Raul Midon perform his "State of Mind" and you'll hear silky tenor, jazzy guitar fretwork, syncopated percussion and a bebop trumpet solo.

But it's just one man and a guitar.

Midon will perform Dec. 3 in Ketchum as part of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts' 2010-11 Performing Arts Series. Tickets for the 6:30 p.m. concert at Sun Valley Opera House are $20 for Sun Valley Center members and $30 for others.

Midon startled audiences into spontaneous mid-song applause when he made his network television debut on "The Late Show With David Letterman" in 2006, a center release said. The clip of him singing "State of Mind" is still getting play on YouTube.

Guitarist, vocalist and songwriter, Midon combines fretwork and slapping the guitar, plus his "mouth" trumpet, to create a one-man performance that reflects the influence of jazz, blues, R&B and folk.

Midon was born prematurely in a rural hospital in New Mexico, where he and his twin brother, Marco, were blinded as infants after spending time in an incubator without adequate eye protection. Marco now works for NASA as an electrical engineer, while Raul followed a musical path inspired by his father, an Argentine folkloric dancer.

Midon studied jazz at the University of Miami and became a backup singer, working primarily in the Latin-pop world for such artists as Julio and Enrique Iglesias, Shakira, Ricky Martin and Alejandro Sanz. He has collaborated with Herbie Hancock and Stevie Wonder and has toured in the U.S., Europe and Japan.

He has released three solo albums: "State of Mind" (2005), "A World within a World" (2007) and "Synthesis" (2009). The latter features 11 new songs, including 10 Midon originals and a cover of The Beatles' "Blackbird."

Wander into the past at Gooding's historical museum

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

GOODING — For less than $6, families in the pioneering city of Bliss, in what would become part of Gooding County, could purchase a month's worth and more of groceries and supplies at the Bliss Mercantile Co.

That's according to a 1918 ledger on display at the Gooding County Historical Museum.

Some early settlers were farmers, like Lorna Bard's family, drawn to the land by promises of irrigated fertile fields. Bard's parent, Charles and Ethel Hobdey, settled in Bliss in the early 1900s. Originally from the Midwest, they stopped in Montana and worked on President Teddy Roosevelt's Montana ranch before heading west to Idaho.

Bard is one of several Gooding County residents who contributed items about Bliss that are now on display in the county museum. And this historical museum — like a couple of its counterparts in other southern Idaho counties — is a great place to go for cold-weather entertainment when your family needs to get out of the house.

"It took a long time getting everything organized, cleaned up and ready," said Bard, who still lives in Bliss. "But it's worth it because people should be interested in their history."

Other items include farm and railroad equipment, tack and turn-of-the-century banking equipment, from the now closed Idaho State Bank, to name a few.

"There's an automatic cashier and typewriter on display and they were state-of-the-art, cutting-edge technology back then," Bard said. "The automatic cashier dispensed the correct change."

A Gooding County Historical Museum display about the history of Bliss includes items used by everyday people making a new life on the desert, like this pair of child-sized cowboy boots adorned with silver spurs and engravings. The items are on loan by families whose ancestors were among the earliest Gooding County pioneers.

Gooding County Historical Society member Dorothy Matthews, who volunteers at the society's historical museum, enjoys the barber shop and beauty salon display, donated from a long-shuttered Hagerman hair salon. Old-fashioned permanent setting rods dangle from an umbrella-like apparatus behind the chair.

A WINTER DOSE OF HISTORY

The Gooding County Historical Museum, at 273 Euskadi Lane in Gooding, is open by appointment during winter. Leave a message at 934-5318 or call Sharon Cheney at 749-1003.

On the other side of Magic Valley, Minidoka County's history museum is open noon to 4 p.m. Saturdays, 99 E. Baseline Road in Rupert. Information: 436-0336.

Bard also donated a hand crank sewing machine, the one her mother used to keep the family in clothing, and old horse tack, needed for farming the virgin desert.

The display is the first in a planned series for the museum, said Gooding County Historical Society member Sharon Cheney. The society volunteers its time at the museum, which is open by appointment during winter.

"We'd like to have a display for every city in the county," Cheney said. "We hope to rotate the displays out every six months or so."

Visitors don't have to wait until the display is changed to see different artifacts on display. The museum, which opened at its Euskadi Lane address earlier this year, amassed a collection of several thousand items while open in downtown Gooding.

Society member and volunteer Dorothy Matthews enjoys looking at the barber shop display, donated from a long-closed Hagerman hair salon, complete with a set of old-fashioned permanent setting rods dangling from an umbrella-like apparatus.

A variety of hair-styling equipment and a barber-shop chair from John Braga, who cut hair in Gooding in the early 1900s, round out the display.

"I remember my mother sticking her curling rod in the kerosene lamp, the same lamp we got our light from, and she would heat it in the lamp and then curl her hair," Matthews said, running a finger down the cool metal tool.

Matthews also likes reminiscing about what people paid for goods when the county was in its infancy.

The museum has advertisements next to some of the items on display. A pitcher spout, for instance, cost $1.85 in 1914.

History buffs may enjoy sifting through the museum's collection of newspapers dating back to 1915, said Matthews.

"I think I learn something new every time I come in here," she said. Odds are, so will you.

The class mostly sticks to the script, although director Laine Steel cut out some unnecessary parts. He also added Skyler Cook's character, Rostand. The original script calls for a little boy in the first act, but that's the character's last appearance. Instead of shelving Cook for the rest of the play, Steel turned him into a silent observer in all five acts and named him Rostand, after the playwright. Their idea: Rostand is observing the events surrounding de Bergerac's life and will write about it as an adult.

The real Rostand probably never considered this interpretation, Steel said.

The script translated from Rostand's French uses antiquated English

"Years ago they used to have (the festival) downtown, and I thought that'd be a great opportunity to bring it down to where it used to be," he said, noting that the store will remain open for sales during the festival. "It's been a challenge getting everything ready for them and conducting business, but it'll be worthwhile."

In addition to the AB

Girls' entry, the festival will feature nearly 40 large trees — 6- to 11-footers — and dozens of 4-foot and 2-foot trees. That's a significantly larger selection than last year.

Compton said that although the festival traditionally pays facility owners $5,000 for the use of a space, Carpet One has given that back to the cause, as well as donating thousands of dollars of silent auction items.

The festival keeps growing in size and popularity, Southwick said, particularly the Ladies' Night Out on Dec. 3, which was nearly sold out earlier this week despite a rise in ticket prices.

It features an opportunity for men to come by between 4:30 and 6 p.m. to purchase auction items at "buy it now" prices. Husbands can get their Christmas shopping done Dec. 3 "instead of when they usually do on Dec. 24," Southwick said with a chuckle. At 7 p.m. will be a ladies-only fashion show, silent auction and no-host bar.

As the theme for the event promises, "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun."

Burley High’s original show follows graduates into ‘Daylight’ of digital world

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Burley High School is presenting a new and exciting production.

“Into the Daylight,” opening tonight, is a modern musical about the digital drama that today’s generation faces. Everyone can relate to the characters, and you won’t know whether to laugh or cry. Featuring some of your favorite songs, the play will delight all ages, organizers say.

It’s the end of the world as they know it: Twenty high school seniors find themselves on the edge of a monumental experience — high school graduation. Where do they go from here? How will they respond to the changes and choices they face? Played against the backdrop of pop culture and increasingly overwhelming technology, the class of 2011 decides how to proceed into the daylight.

“It’s not the same type of production. It was more creative than usual,” said Richard Call, artistic director. “The students have written about 60 percent of the show. It speaks to this technology generation that so many of us are so unfamiliar with. It has a lot to say.”

Call said the production was a challenge to direct.

“There isn’t a direct plot line. There are 10 different stories being played out,” he said.

Burley High School student Makena Greener directed the production as well as acting in it. It was her first time directing, and she found it rewarding.

DIGITAL DRAMA

- What: Burley High School production “Into the Daylight”
- When: 7 p.m. today, Saturday, Monday and Dec. 1-4; also, a matinee at 2 p.m. Saturday
- Where: King Fine Arts Center, Burley
- Tickets: $5 each, or $25 for a group of 10

“It was really fun. This was a lot different from being backstage all the time,” Greener said. “I think it was a little more difficult directing when you’re also acting in it. I would do the scenes I wasn’t in, and the scenes I was in, Mr. Call gave directions.”

Regardless, she would do it again.

“I would like to direct again. I definitely enjoyed that,” Greener said.

Greener agreed the play might seem a little difficult to follow at first.

“The plot line is in little scenes telling about little things going on in everyday life,” she said.

Although the play might sound as though it is geared toward the younger generation, Greener said everybody will enjoy it.

Wander into a forest during tonight’s free Gallery Walk

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A forest has sprouted in Gilman Contemporary gallery, one of several upscale stores lining Sun Valley Road.

Aspens brought in from the outdoors are embracing the columns in the art space, accenting 16 mixed-media paintings inspired by the forest. The exhibition is titled “BOSQUE III,” which means “Forest” in Spanish. And it was conceived by artists Luis Garcia-Nerey and Anke Schofield — two Cubans who met in New York and began collaborating on their art.

The exhibition will be on display from 5 to 8 p.m. tonight when Ketchum galleries throw open their doors for their free Thanksgiving Gallery Walk.

The Cubans’ work, which includes resin peeking through paint in some cases, shows the familiar environ of a woods interacting with modern human society. It challenges viewers to examine their perception of what goes on in a forest in a new light.

One painting, for instance, features a bear with what looks like a cocktail glass. Another, called “Twin Peaks,” shows two bears back to back as if they’re mirror images of each other. A hawk dangles a ball of yarn in another.

“It’s interesting because it shows the forests and humans influencing the forest but not necessarily in an environmental way,” said gallery director Casey Hanrahan.

“I like its contemporary take on landscape,” added

'Hide and Seek,' a collaboration between artists Anke Schofield and Luis Garcia-Nerey, is on display at Gilman Contemporary in Ketchum.

Netherlands that features more than 50 life-size ceramic figures on skateboards, tricycles, wheelchairs, motorcycles, shopping carts and a Volkswagen Bug.

He conveys human behavior and expression by defining each figure's energetic outline, leaving viewers to imagine the rest.

“It’s a merge of different people. It’s not the perfect resemblance but the mirror I hold up to myself and the spectators,” he said. “And spectators should not only look at my figures but engage in a dialogue and create a new reality in each one.”

• Gail Severn Gallery, 400 First Ave. N. — Ed Musante’s cigar box paintings and small works are a centerpiece. An exhibition titled “Nature Revisited” features the works of Linda Lowe, Michelle Haglund, Robert McCauley, Chris Reilly, Brad Rude and Allison Stewart. And “A Sense of Place XVIII” features works by Victoria Adams, James Cook, Brad Durham, Tony Foster, Laura McPhee and Theodore Waddell.

gallery owner L’Anne Gilman. “I love the human context in the wild. The imagery is beautiful and the technique innovative. It takes the hierarchy in the forest and shows how it could parallel social dynamics in modern-day society.”

The viewer is presented with a narrative but not a conclusion, said Schofield. “We want to create an interaction between the participants and the works.”

“Our intent is to look past the obvious environmental issues and concentrate more on an existential point of view,” Garcia-Nerey added.

Elsewhere around town during tonight’s Gallery Walk:

• Friesen Gallery, Sun Valley Road at First Avenue — Inspired by Japanese

Bizen ceramic techniques, Ron Ehrlich incorporates three-dimensional qualities onto his paintings with vigorously applied brush strokes. Argentine painter Sebastian Spreng, by contrast, paints semi-abstract landscapes that are gauzy and serene.

• Broschofsky Galleries, 360 East Ave. — A show of new works by Russell Chatham, Michael Coleman, Brandon Cook, Edward Curtis, J.C. Dye, Glen Edwards, Jan Grotenbreg, Tom Howard, Jack Koonce, William Matthews, Gordon McConnell, Theodore Villa and Andy Warhol.

• Kneeland Gallery, 271 First Ave. N. — The gallery is featuring miniature paintings — ideal for the beginning collector or those with limited wall space. Artists include Craig Kosak, Bart Walker, Colin Poole, Lori McNee, Chuck Rawle, Shanna Kunz, Ovanes Berberian, James Palmersheim and Fred Choate. Several will attend during tonight’s reception.

• Gallery DeNovo, Sun Valley Road at First Avenue — Dutch artist Sjer Jacobs will exhibit several figurative works he’s titled “Family and Friends,” portraying people relating to one another in everyday life.

“What better time to showcase this work than the beginning of our holiday season when we are all getting together with family and friends?” said gallery owner Robin Reiners.

ALASKA TO UTAH TO NORWAY

Let Warren Miller's new ski film take you to the world's best snow

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley Olympian Reggie Crist has pitted himself against some of the world's fastest skiers and the avalanches of Alaska.

But nothing prepared him for the nerve-wracking experience of seeing a mother polar bear and her cubs moseying toward his ski camp, her nose on the scent of food. Or the awe of seeing his ski tracks next to those of polar bears.

"I'd say I was as nervous or almost as nervous as skiing among the avalanches in Alaska," he said.

It was an unforgettable experience, however — one which is immortalized in Warren Miller's new film "Wintervention."

The film will show three times today and Saturday at the Sun Valley Opera House and one time Sunday at the Community Campus Theatre in Hailey.

The showings, which will be the only Warren Miller film showings in Idaho this year, are later than usual. But this gives Sun Valley's Thanksgiving guests a chance to catch the movie between making the year's first turns on the hill and stuffing themselves with holiday dinners.

And the movies, which have attracted cult-like following among skiers and snowboarders, will be sprinkled heavily with pre-party giveaways and intermission drawings, including Sun Valley lift tickets, Eddie Bauer First Ascent jackets, "Wintervention" hoodies and a heli-ski trip for four in British Columbia.

Crist, who switched to big mountain skiing after helping to pioneer the exciting new sport of ski cross, made the Norwegian trip in May with Sun Valley native Lexi duPont and Doug Stoup. They snowmobiled 500 miles from Santa's hideout in the North Pole and skied from 8 p.m. until 6 a.m. on what Crist said are the northernmost mountains you can ski on the planet.

"It was like chasing winter to the ends of the earth," said duPont, reached on her cell phone at 1 a.m. in Chile. "It was just magical to be out there so far away from everything."

"With 24 hours of daylight, we didn't sleep much," Crist said. "We were giddy when we finally headed back to the tent."

The movie also features duPont and Reggie Crist skiing with Crist's younger brother Zach, a former World Cup ski racer and medalist with the X Games.

FOUR SHOWINGS

- What: Warren Miller's "Wintervention"
- When: 8 p.m. today; 6 and 9 p.m. Saturday; 6 p.m. Sunday
- Where: Today and Saturday at the Sun Valley Opera House in Sun Valley; Sunday at the Community Campus Theatre, 1020 Fox Acres Drive in Hailey
- Tickets: $18, available at Sturtevant's in Ketchum and Hailey and at the Sun Valley Opera House. Everyone attending "Wintervention" receives a free lift ticket voucher to Soldier Mountain and a coupon worth $25 off a purchase of $100 or more at Sturtevant's. Groups of 12 or more will receive $1 off each ticket plus Warren Miller DVDs and swag by calling 800-523-7117.
- Pre-parties: 4:30 to 6 p.m. Saturday at The Boiler Room in Sun Valley and 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday at KB's In Hailey. Giveaways include Sun Valley lift tickets, Soldier Mountain season passes, Eddie Bauer First Ascent jacket and fleece, Sturtevant's gift certificates, Warren Miller hoodies and more. In addition, there will be a drawing at intermission for a heli-ski trip to Canadian Mountain Holidays in British Columbia for four, plus other prizes.

Together the trio made first descents, threading their way amidst an amphitheater of towering red rocks that stretched 10,000 feet into the sky at an undisclosed location in southern Utah.

The trio spent the first day assessing the terrain and analyzing the snowpack, concluding that it looked like a giant terrain trap with cliffs blocking steep, unmanageable gullies, Zach Crist said. The next day they found an entrance into the giant sand castle, and the race to the bottom was on.

"It was the best skiing of my life," said duPont, who has also worked on short-term projects to help teen girls in Cambodia find work to support their families so they're not tempted to turn to prostitution.

The movie also features ski stars like Lindsey Vonn, Chris Davenport and Jonny Moseley skiing against canyons of white in Austria's Arlberg, British Columbia's Columbia Mountains, New Zealand's Mount Aspiring National Park and Alaska's Isthmus and Carpathian.

One segment takes viewers on a 101-meter ship through the Drake Passage, home to the world's roughest waters, before ending up at an endless expanse of rugged terrain rising abruptly out of the icy sea. Another takes them to the Greater Caucasus Range of Georgia, which until this year was off-limits to foreigners due to political and civil unrest.

"We're still talking about our next adventure," said Reggie Crist. "I'm sure it will be just as exciting as the ones before."

Parade, lights contest, bazaars launch Wood River Valley's Christmas

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The orange and black lights proved so successful that the Hailey Chamber of Commerce is hosting another go-around — this time with red, white and green Christmas lights.

More than a dozen houses pulled out all the stops in the chamber's inaugural Halloween Decorating Contest last month. And more than 1,500 trick-or-treaters took to the streets of the small town for its Halloween Hoopla.

The chamber got so much feedback about how fun the event was that it decided to stage a Hailey Holiday Lights Decorating contest, said chamber director Heather Lamonica Deckard. Prizes will be awarded for first, second and third in three categories: Residence, Most Green and Best Block. The deadline to enter is Dec. 16. Judging will take place Dec. 17-18.

"Lots of people decorate their home anyway. Maybe this will give them a little incentive to do even better," said Anna Svidgal, chamber spokeswoman.

The town has already begun twinkling with the holiday lights.

• Hailey will kick off its holiday season on Thursday with a 6 p.m. parade along Main Street, the lighting of the Hailey Christmas Tree and the arrival of Santa. Friends of the Hailey Public Library will serve cocoa to those awaiting the tree lighting, and there will be caroling and holiday treats provided by South Valley Merchants Alliance after the parade at the Meriwether Building, 111 N. First Ave.

• The Senior Connection will hold its 13th annual Festival of Trees Dec. 1-4 in its newly expanded and remodeled building at 721 Third Ave. S. in Hailey.

The event, which raises money for Meals on Wheels and the Senior Connection, kicks off from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday. Shoppers may check out at least 15 decorated trees, including a Big Bird tree decorated by Sue Bridgman Florists. Chili, hot dogs, hamburgers and other foods will be for sale. Local vendors will sell such Christmas gifts as jewelry, ski hats, scarves and Christmas tree ornaments. Admission is free.

On Dec. 3, Panache will throw its annual fashion show from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the festival, along with soup, salad, wine, coffee and soft drinks. Tickets are $30.

And on Dec. 4, a Gala Cocktail Party and Showcase of Trees will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. It will include two drinks (cocktails, beer or wine), some snazzy hors d'oeuvres, prizes and a live auction featuring at least 15 decorated trees and other auction items. DJ Michael White will spin the music.

There will also be a raffle drawing for two separate $1,000 Atkinson's gift certificates. Admission is $50.

For tickets or information, call the Senior Connection at 788-3468.

• The Barkin' Basement will hold its Bow Wow Bazaar with holiday dishes, tree trimmings and other Christmas decor from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dec. 3-4 at 111 S. Main St. in Hailey. Cookies and cocoa will greet shoppers.

• Twelve miles to the north, the Papoose Club will hold its 2010 Holiday Bazaar from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 4 and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 5 at Hemingway Elementary School, 111 Eighth St. W. in Ketchum. Expect arts, crafts, seasonal edibles and a soup cafe.

• The city of Ketchum plans a Holiday Tree Lighting from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Dec. 9 in the Ketchum Town Square, Fourth and East streets, with music, cocoa, cider and cookies. Revelers will be invited to take a free spin around the ice rink, weather permitting. Santa plans to arrive on a fire engine at 6 p.m., as he gives Rudolph a rest for the big 24th.

• The Croney Cove European Christmas Market will be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dec. 11, about eight miles past the Warm Springs ski lifts at 1024 Warm Springs Road. The annual market features homemade delicacies, ornaments, gifts, collectibles, European antiques, rugs and other items while the scent of hot spiced wine heated over an open fire wafts through the air. Admission is $5 and will include a raffle ticket for prizes. Admission goes to help local kids visit Ketchum's sister city in Tegernsee, Germany.

BSU faces tough test in No. 19 Nevada

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — While shoppers wrestle away coveted sale items from other customers on Black Friday, Boise State hopes to wrestle away a coveted slot in the BCS title game with a victory tonight over No. 19 Nevada.

Of course, in the convoluted BCS system that determines college football's champion, the little engine that could from Boise will need a little help.

The only thing the Broncos can do is beat Nevada — and pray for a miracle in Tuscaloosa or Eugene.

But winning won't be easy. Boise State head coach Chris Petersen spent the early part of the week trying to convince anyone who would listen that Nevada is the best team the Broncos have faced in 2010.

If his players listen, Petersen's troops will have a chance at securing the school's eighth WAC title to move into second place in conference history for most championships.

"There is a lot riding on this game," Petersen said. "I think the one thing our guys have done well is treat every game we've played like it is a big game."

Big game takes back seat for WAC's Benson

With Boise State and Nevada clashing tonight in arguably the biggest Western Athletic Conference game in the past 10 years, you'd think WAC commissioner Karl Benson would be happy.

After all, it's not often that his conference has been on the precipice of cracking the BCS title game.

But Benson is more like the desperate politician in a

Jason Chatraw

lame duck party than he is the proud architect of a fist-pounding BCS controversy. His conference's relevance is quickly fleeting if

Sizing up the Bruins

The Twin Falls varsity boys basketball team poses after practice Wednesday at Baun Gym Wednesday in Twin Falls.

Defending 4A champs rebuild with small lineup

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

As the Twin Falls boys basketball team gathered for a photo Wednesday, the request was made that they put the tallest player in the middle and then fan out.

"We don't have very many tall guys," a youngster watching the practice said.

"Line up short to shortest," one of the players quipped.

It's sure a different Bruin basketball team than the one that won the Class 4A state title in March.

Those Bruins were great athletes, good shooters and good defenders. These Bruins, which coach Matt Harr says are good athletes as well, will need to be great shooters and great defenders in order to do damage in the Great Basin Conference, where they'll be outsized against pretty much every conference rival.

"We're going to have to be creative on defense," Harr said. "Last year we got away with some things because of our athleticism. This year we've got good athletes, but we're going to have to be a lot better at a lot of things."

One of the things they'll have to be better at is shooting, particularly from beyond the 3-point range. Last season Harr imposed what he called a "shooting certificate," in which a player had to hit 20 of 40 3-point attempts on five separate occasions in practice before being allowed to shoot them in a game.

This season, there is no certificate required, primarily because the trey will be a healthy staple of the Bruins' attack.

"We've just got to work a lot harder in practice on shooting, like it's a real game," said junior guard Eric Harr, the coach's son and the team's top returning player. "We're feeling a little short, but with that lack of height comes good quickness and hand speed."

Twin Falls lost seven seniors from the championship team, including all five starters. Along with that went all the Bruins' height. Now in a conference where Minico goes 6-foot-10 with Kevin Jurgensmeier, and Jerome, Burley and Canyon

Ridge all have a player 6-5 or taller, it's going to take a total effort on the defensive side of the floor.

"It's going to be a challenge, but we know we're going to have to play a great defensive game in order to keep teams off the glass and to minimal scoring," said senior Colton Stott, a star defender on the school's boys soccer team and, at just a shade under 6-foot-3, the tallest player in the entire basketball program this season.

"I'm used to playing rough and bumping guys, having to create space for myself. The mindset between defending in soccer and basketball isn't all that different."

Saints rally, hold on for 30-27 victory

By Jaime Aron

ARLINGTON, Texas — Drew Brees was a young Dallas Cowboys fan cheering on Jason Garrett during his amazing comeback victory on Thanksgiving 1994. With Garrett and the Cowboys on the verge of another holiday stunner, Brees and the New Orleans Saints snatched it away.

Brees and the Saints went from leading by 17 to trailing midway through the fourth quarter. The Cowboys were about to seal the victory with a long pass play when safety Malcolm Jenkins swiped the ball back and Brees drove 89 yards for a go-ahead touchdown 1:55 left. Dallas' David Buehler narrowly missed a 59-yard field goal with 25 seconds left that would've tied it, and the Saints held on for a 30-27 victory Thursday.

"It was kind of a gut-check win," New Orleans coach Sean Payton said.

Payton appeared to be trying to call timeout as the ball was snapped for Buehler's kick, which would've given the Cowboys another chance. But the officials didn't give it to him, so the play stood.

CSI men, women hosting invite

By Mike Christensen

This week, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team faced a first for this season: responding to a loss.

Coming off of last Saturday's 89-87 setback against Western Nebraska Community College, CSI head coach Steve Gosar said his team focused on blocking out on rebounds to avoid surrendering the second-chance buckets that hurt them in the loss.

"We grabbed our lunch pail and went back to work," said Gosar. "Our guys are pretty resilient."

They get a chance to demonstrate that this weekend, hosting the Boise Office Equipment Invitational

No. 18 CSI (7-1) will host Treasure Valley (Ore.) Community College tonight and Westchester (N.Y.) College on Saturday. This is TVCC's first game of the season, while Westchester is 3-2 and led by 6-foot-2 guard Clayton Sterling's 22.3 points per game.

CSI could be shorthanded this weekend as centers Paul Bunch and Chris Patton have both been out with illness. Starting center Kenny Buckner is averaging double-double with 12.9 points and 11.1 rebounds per game, but he'll need help from forwards Mitch Bruneel (9.0 ppg, 4.5 rpg) and Gerson Santo (8.9 ppg, 4.5 rpg) up front to complement CSI's talented guard line.

The CSI women, meanwhile, will play with their

Brady lifts Patriots past Lions

QB tosses 4 TD passes in 2nd half

DETROIT — Tom Brady was perfect on the field and his exit was first class.

Brady threw a season-high four touchdown passes, all in the second half, and the New England Patriots routed the Detroit Lions 45-24 on Thursday after trailing by 11 late in the second quarter. “We showed some resiliency, coming out in the second half and playing the way we did when the crowd was into it,” Brady said.

Following Brady’s brief news conference, the former Michigan star jogged out of Ford Field — limping slightly up a steep ramp — hugged Robert Kraft and got into an idling limo with the team owner behind a police escort.

New England (9-2) moved a half-game ahead of the AFC East rival New York Jets — who played Cincinnati on Thursday night — for the NFL’s best record, setting up a showdown at home Dec. 6.

“I don’t think we’re at where we need to be at,” Brady said. “But this is a tough group.”

No one in the red, white and blue is tougher than Brady.

After taking a ton of shots early in the game, the three-time Super Bowl winner and two-time MVP bounced back to complete 21 of 27 passes for 341 yards with no interceptions, giving him a perfect quarterback rating of 158.3 for the second time in his career.

“He’s like a surgeon,” Detroit center Dominic Raiola said.

New England Patriots cornerback Devin McCourty (32) returns an interception as Detroit Lions wide receiver Nate Burleson (13) gives chase in Detroit Thursday. New England defeated the Lions 45-24.

Brady threw a go-ahead touchdown pass to Deion Branch early in the fourth quarter after connecting with him on a 79-yarder to tie it at 24. Wes Welker’s second TD reception sealed the victory with 6:42 left, putting the Patriots ahead by two TDs and making their double-digit deficit a distant memory.

“When you outscore a team 35-7 in the second half, a lot of things have to go right,” New England coach Bill Belichick said.

The Lions (2-9) are used to things going wrong, especially on Thanksgiving.

Detroit has lost a franchise-record seven straight games — by an average of nearly 23 points — in its annual showcase.

“This one is really tough because we gave everybody so much hope,” Raiola said. “We were up 14-3, Ford Field was going crazy and then boom, boom, boom.”

Brady became the first to have a perfect passer rating this season with a minimum of five attempts, according to STATS LLC. His first perfect game was Oct. 21, 2007, when he threw a career-high six TD passes in a victory over Miami.

“If we give him time, there’s nothing he can’t do,” guard Logan Mankins said. “He’s going to find the guy that’s open, and he’s going to get them the ball. The rest is up to us.”

Brady had plenty of help with Welker and Branch through the air and BenJarvus Green-Ellis on the ground.

Green-Ellis ran for two TDs, matching a career high. His second one capped the scoring with 3:14 left and led to several pushing and shoving matches with the frustrated Lions.

Shaun Hill was 27 of 46 for 285 yards with one TD — to Calvin Johnson at the end of the first quarter that put the Lions up 7-3 — and two interceptions to rookie cornerback Devin McCourty.

Maurice Morris ran for two TDs, matching his total in two seasons in Detroit. Morris’ first score put Detroit ahead 14-3 with 5:58 left in the first half.

Green-Ellis’ 15-yard TD pulled the Patriots within four with 45 seconds left in the second quarter, then they allowed Detroit to drive for a lead-padding field goal to end the first half.

The Lions looked as if they finally might put together a good showing on Thanksgiving, forcing New England to punt on its first drive of the second half.

But Detroit began to fall apart when Hill underthrew Johnson on the ensuing possession and McCourty picked off the pass and returned it 23 yards to set up Brady’s tying pass to Welker.

“That was a big play by Devin that really swung the game,” Belichick said.

JETS 26, BENGALS 10

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Brad Smith’s two long touchdown plays have lifted the New York Jets past the Cincinnati Bengals, 26-10 Thursday night to keep the Jets tied atop the AFC East.

Hours after the New England Patriots beat Detroit to improve to 9-2, the Jets matched them as Smith scored on a 53-yard run two plays into the third quarter, and on an 89-yard kickoff return in the final period. Smith lost a shoe midway through that return, which clinched an eighth straight loss for Cincinnati (2-9).

Santonio Holmes scored on a 13-yard reception from Mark Sanchez after Cincinnati’s Andre Caldwell had a punt deflect off him while he was blocking.

The Jets have beaten Cincinnati three times in less than a year, including the 2009 season finale that got them into the playoffs, then in the wild-card game the following week.

Saints

“Fortunately, I did not,” Payton said.

The Saints, playing on the holiday for the first time, won their fourth straight and fifth in six games to improve to 8-3. Dallas (3-8) lost for the first time in three games since Garrett became interim coach.

“I think we demonstrated again what we’ve done the last few weeks — battle and fight,” Garrett said. “There were a lot of things to be proud of. Guys played with a lot of passion, energy and enthusiasm. ... But you’ve got to get the bottom line right. We didn’t get it done.”

Sixteen years ago, Garrett was a third-string quarterback making a rare start in place of Troy Aikman when the Cowboys fell behind Brett Favre and the Packers 17-3. Garrett rallied them a 42-31 victory that’s among the most stirring in team lore.

This one would’ve been up there, too. Instead, it may go down with Leon Lett’s snowy gaffe in 1993 as one that got away.

“This is a game that, if you let it, it will rip your heart out,” Dallas quarterback Jon Kitna said. “You feel like you played well enough to win — you just didn’t.”

The Cowboys trailed 17-0 after the first three times the Saints had the ball. New Orleans also were up 20-3 just before halftime.

Garrett constantly preaches to his club that they’re going to face adversity, so he wants them to be ready to handle it. The same group that fell apart under his predecessor, Wade Phillips, showed lots of spunk with their response to this challenge.

Buehler made a career-best 53-yarder as the second quarter ended to start a run of points on four straight possession. After a punt ended the streak, Dallas bounced back on the next series, getting a 1-yard touchdown run from Tashard Choice to go ahead 27-23 with 5:51 left.

The Cowboys were on their way to stretching the lead or killing the clock when Roy Williams broke free with a catch and raced 47 yards toward the end zone, following a block by Miles Austin. He switched the ball from one hand to another to avoid a defender he saw. But he didn’t see Jenkins and got the ball plucked from him at the 11.

“I lost the ball game,” Williams said. “I let my teammates down. I need to lay down. We run the clock down and win the game. I was trying to make a play and they did a good job. It’s late in the game. That’s the nail in the coffin. We had the momentum going our way. We were there. That was a W. I get tackled, we get in the end zone and we win. I fall down and we win.”

Jenkins said he chased the play with only one thought — “get the ball out.”

“He didn’t see me from the blind side,” Jenkins said. “A bad play turned good for us. Not only ripped it out, it just kind of fell in my stomach.”

Brees then drove the Saints 89 yards in five plays. He hit Robert Meachem for 55 yards and Lance Moore on a 12-yard touchdown strike.

The Cowboys had one try left, and Kitna got them close enough to give Buehler’s powerful leg a try. The kick had plenty of distance, but fluttered left before reaching the uprights.

Gray, Texas A&M send Texas to losing season

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Cyrus Gray rushed for 223 yards and had two long touchdown runs to help No. 17 Texas A&M beat Texas 24-17 on Thursday night, sending the Longhorns to their first losing season since 1997.

Gray had touchdown runs of 84 yards in the second quarter and 48 yards in the third. Von Miller intercepted a tipped pass at the Texas A&M 11 with 2:37 left to kill what looked like a drive for the tying touchdown.

Jeff Fuller also caught a touchdown pass and Randy Bullock kicked a 50-yard field goal for the Aggies (9-3, 6-2 Big 12).

Texas’ fifth home loss of the season means the Longhorns (5-7) won’t be eligible for a bowl just one season after playing for the national championship.

The Aggies won their sixth game in a row and still have a chance to win the Big 12 South if Oklahoma beats Oklahoma State on Saturday. The Aggies would still be a long shot for the Big 12 championship game because of a tiebreaker based on BCS standings.

Cody Johnson rushed for 107 yards for Texas. Gilbert was 20 of 37 passing for 219 yards.

Gray is the first Texas A&M running back to reach 200 yards since 1995.

Texas A&M scored 17 points off three Texas turnovers and led 24-14 after Gray’s second touchdown. Texas kicked a field goal after a blocked punt and used a long drive to march toward a touchdown before Garrett Gilbert’s pass was tipped at the line of scrimmage. Miller, a defensive end who drifted back into coverage, leaped high to grab it.

Texas A&M punted the ball back to Texas with about 10 seconds left and Ken Wood had to pick the snap off the ground to get it away. Texas tried to block it and freshman returner Adrian Phillips let the ball bounce on the ground.

Time ran out in a mistake fitting of Texas’ miserable season and several players threw up their hands in frustration.

expects a foe that is “patient, plays hard and sets good screens and has two or good shooters.”

Casper (Wyo.) College will face the Eagles on Saturday, but comes in at 4-3 with some losses Rogers called “surprising.”

Casper is led by guards Lindsey Fearing (16.4 ppg) and Rosalie Cutri (13.6 ppg), but has only one player taller than 5-foot-10.

“I think we match up pretty well with them,” said Rogers.

Here’s a look at four of the other GBC teams, in alphabetical order.

Burley

In past years, the Burley Bobcats have benefited from standouts such as Colton Moon, Kyle Hepworth and Bill Blauer. But this season, Burley seems to be lacking that true go-to guy who can go get 20 points on any given night.

However, Burley coach Jack Bagley says that “there are guys who have the potential to step up and do that.”

The Bobcats have about six players who are equal contributors, led by senior wing Alex Greener. Clogging up the inside will be 6-foot-6 Aaron Tolman. The Bobcats also have quick guards in Alex Larson and Jason Boehmer.

“We don’t have very much experience and it may take us a few games to get things going,” Bagley said. “Hopefully when we step on the court we’re able to compete.”

Canyon Ridge

The Riverhawks floundered in their first season, going 5-18. But they return most of their key players, including starters Alex Ridgeway, Austin Thomas, Tyler Myers and Garren Moreno.

Experience and athleticism could help Canyon Ridge in its quest to move up the Great Basin standings, but a quick start to the season will be key as the best way for the players to believe they can win games will be to do so.

Jerome

The Tigers surprised just about everyone last season by nipping past Minico for a state tournament berth. It’ll be tough this year to replicate that feat, however, as they lost all but two of their varsity players.

The two that return, 6-5 post Jake Hollifield and point guard Spencer Parker, gives Jerome state tournament experience. The team will be senior-laden again despite the lack of experience, as eight of the Tigers’ 11 varsity players are coming into their final season in the program.

Wood River

Perennial strugglers in District IV, the Wolverines have to replace two of their top performers from a season ago in Juan Martinez and Keven Abbott, but hope to play a spoiler role in the GBC.

Trying to move on

One year after scandal, Woods ready to put past behind him

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — The dark sedan backed into a spot next to the clubhouse at the Australian Masters, trunk open, waiting to whisk Tiger Woods to the airport. Lingered behind the car was a friend who was still wrestling with divided loyalties — to Woods and his former wife.

They approached each other, awkwardly at first, then shared a quick embrace and quiet words.

Woods believes he finally is ready to move on after a self-destructive year that cost him his marriage, his mystique, millions in endorsements and, lastly, his No. 1 ranking.

What remains are relationships to repair, along with his golf game.

And facing another Thanksgiving.

“I think it’s going to be great,” Woods said in an interview with The Associated Press. “I’m going to be with my family. My mom is going to be there. We’re going to have a great Thanksgiving. We’ve turned the corner, turned the page, and it’s time to move forward.”

He was not playing dumb.

Woods realizes the public might forever connect him and Thanksgiving with perhaps one of the most shocking downfalls in sports.

It started with the National Enquirer story of an affair with a nightclub hostess. Then came the still mysterious, middle-of-the-night accident Nov. 27 when he drove his SUV over a fire hydrant and crashed into a tree beyond his driveway. His wife tended to him in the street, the back windows of the Cadillac Escalade bashed out with a golf club.

On the 911 call was the chilling voice of his mother as she cried out, “What happened?”

One year later, that remains a relevant question.

No one really knew much about Woods except that he dominated golf like no one had before. Within weeks, everyone knew too much.

He was caught in a stunning web of infidelity, each indiscretion played out in public through voicemails, celebrity magazines, TV talk shows and even “sexting” on a porn star’s website. He became a regular in the National Enquirer. He was on front pages everywhere, long after the major championship season was over.

Woods had spent 14 years carefully cultivating an impeccable image that brought him worldwide fame. Just like that, he went from being universally revered to roundly ridiculed.

“That’s fine, totally fine,” Woods said in Australia, leaning forward on a leather sofa, elbows resting on his knees. “I made my share of mistakes. People can look at that as what not to do, and if they choose to make fun of it, that’s fine. I can’t control that. All I know is that I can only control myself.

“And at that point in my life,” he said, “I wasn’t even able to do that.”

...

At a gala dinner in the Crowns Tower, the same hotel where the nightclub hostess was spotted a year earlier, Woods shared the stage with Shane Warne, known as the Tiger Woods of Australian cricket, on and off the pitch.

Warne built his legend as a wicked leg spinner — and a prolific womanizer.

“I think we’ve got a little bit in common,” Warne said with a smile, pausing for effect. “I love golf, too.”

Woods flashed an easy smile, breaking the brief tension in the room, and the audience quickly burst into laughter. It was the first time Woods has laughed publicly about such an embarrassing episode in his life, perhaps a sign that he had indeed turned the corner.

On the golf course? Not quite.

With two eagles on the last four holes of the Australian Masters, he at least managed fourth place, as good as he did all year. For the first time in his career, Woods didn’t win a single trophy. Instead, he shot the highest 36-hole score of his career when he missed the cut at Quail Hollow, and the highest 72-hole score of his career when he nearly finished last at Firestone.

In so many ways, it was a year no one could have predicted.

“Frenetic would be a word that comes to mind,” said Mark Steinberg, his agent at IMG.

Relax, Alabama:

The heat’s all on Auburn

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — No. 9 Alabama can just relax and play ball.

No national championship shot potentially hangs in the balance, no Heisman Trophy chances are on the line. It’s No. 2 Auburn’s turn to feel the heat in Friday’s Iron Bowl.

“Those guys are undefeated and going to the SEC championship game,” Crimson Tide tailback Mark Ingram said. “If they win out, they’re going to play for the national championship. All the pressure is on them. It’s like reversed roles.”

Alabama (9-2, 5-2 Southeastern Conference) entered the last two meetings unbeaten and in national championship contention, winning both times. Now, Cam Newton and the Tigers (11-0, 7-0) are the surprising SEC West champions and two wins from playing for it all.

And once again, this feverishly intense, 365-day-a-year bragfest can captivate much of the college football nation — not just the state. For all its statewide glory, the Iron Bowl hasn’t pitted two top 10 teams against each other since 1994.

For added measure, it also features last year’s Heisman Trophy winner Ingram and this season’s leading contender in Newton, the electrifying Auburn quarterback who injects even more pizzazz into the rivalry.

He has spent the last three weeks under the spotlight for questions about his status amid allegations his father solicited a six-figure payday from Mississippi State when that school was recruiting Newton. It hasn’t kept him off the field, or slowed him down so far.

Assuming his status hasn’t changed, that’s one of those “external factors” Tide coach Nick Saban refers to as potential distractions.

Opposing defenses still haven’t been able to stop the 6-foot-6, 250-pounder, who has been lethal both passing and running, juking and bulldozing defenders.

“Every little crease you give him, he will take it,” Tide defensive end Marcell Dareus said. “He has deceptive speed where he can just get out and then get away from people. He has some moves that he can get away. We are just going to have to try our best to contain him. It’s hard to just stop Cam.”

“The more you win, the bigger they get each week. Now we have the biggest game against probably the best team we’ve played all year.”

If Boise State expects to emerge with a win, it must do one thing very well — contain Nevada senior quarterback Colin Kaepernick.

Kaepernick blitzed Boise State for 177 rushing yards and threw for 243 yards in his first start for the Wolf Pack as a freshman in 2007. Nevada pushed Boise State to the brink before the Broncos emerged victorious with a 69-67 win in four overtimes.

Since then, Boise State has solved the riddle that is Kaepernick. In 2008, Kaepernick rushed for only 70 yards and completed 38 percent of his passes in a 41-34 loss. Then last season, Boise State grounded him for 141 yards passing and 31 yards rushing.

“When I first started playing Nevada, it was more run, run, run,” Boise State defensive end Ryan Winterswyk said. “Now it’s evolved more with a quarterback who can throw the ball. He can really make things happen. He’s a talented guy who does want he wants out there.”

But can Boise State stop him and the rest of Nevada’s vaunted “pistol” offense?

“I think we can by having the whole team step up,” Winterswyk said. “Nevada is like a rival to us. Every time we play them, they are bringing it, and I think guys flying around and knowing what a big game it is — we’re going to be ready. We never overlook Nevada because we know they’re such a huge opponent.”

So far this season, Kaepernick has thrown for 2,412 yards and 19 touchdowns, while rushing for 984 yards.

However, he has some help, starting with running back Vai Taua, who has 1,241 yards and 16 touchdowns and wide receiver Rishard Matthews, who has 38 catches for 616 yards and three touchdowns.

Defensively, Nevada defensive end Dontay Moch is a beast and should make life hard on Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore.

“When you have a good player like Dontay Moch, you’re not going to take them out of the game,” Petersen said. “You have to know where he is and the guys who play against him have to play extremely well. If you focus only on him, you’ve got 10 other guys who can make an impact as well.”

For Boise State, its hopes of securing the win come down to quarterback Kellen

Moore’s ability to get the ball into the hands of his playmakers and avoid the heavy rush that Nevada should bring.

If power running back Doug Martin can help solidify the Broncos’ ground attack, it should create the space necessary for receivers Austin Pettis and Titus Young to get open and make big plays.

“We know this is a big game and we’re excited about this opportunity,” said Boise State linebacker J.C. Percy, who leads the team in tackles at 51. “This is our chance to show everybody what we’ve got.”

And with a win and a little bit of help from some other teams, it may result in much more than a simple show-and-tell demonstration. It could be a true Black Friday for the BCS.

Prediction: Boise State 51, Nevada 38

If past is prelude, Arizona at Oregon may be wild game

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The wild recent history between Oregon and Arizona seemed to peak last season when overzealous Wildcats fans readied to rush the field to celebrate what looked to be a victory over the Ducks.

Instead, fans left disappointed after Oregon tied it with 6 seconds left and went on to win 44-41 in the second overtime. The loss eliminated Arizona from any chance at the Rose Bowl — the Ducks’ ultimate destination.

In 2007, the Ducks were ranked No. 2 in the nation when they visited Tucson, entertaining whispers about lofty offseason possibilities. But quarterback Dennis Dixon went down with a season-ending knee injury, Arizona won 34-24 and the Ducks spiraled with losses in three of their last four games.

“Every year since I’ve been here our battles with Arizona have been real knockdown drag-outs and that’s what this is gonna be,” Oregon coach Chip Kelly said.

The No. 1 Ducks (10-0, 7-0 Pac-10) can clinch a BCS berth this Friday when the No. 20 Wildcats (7-3, 4-3) visit Autzen Stadium. Oregon can also lock up at least a share of the conference title with a victory.

Oregon, with its famously fast, high-scoring offense, is ranked atop the nation with an average of 50.7 points a game, and the team’s averaging 542.2 yards total offense.

the nation with 158 rushing yards a game.

After Oregon’s last game, a 15-13 squeaker over California, the Heisman Trophy hopeful was on crutches with a leg injury. He was able to rest the injury over a bye week and practiced on a limited basis.

James said earlier this week he was still feeling some pain, but he was not listed on Oregon’s injury report.

Arizona is ranked No. 20 nationally in total defense, allowing an average 319.3 yards, and 14th in run defense, allowing 112.9. And, also coming off a bye, the Wildcats have had a chance to both rest and game-plan for the Ducks.

Defensive coordinator Greg Brown joked when asked how his unit planned to slow down Oregon.

“Thirteen guys,” he said. “We’ve got a special petition into the NCAA to see if they’ll go for it.”

On offense, Arizona’s strength is quarterback Nick Foles, who has thrown for 601 yards with four touchdowns and an interception over his last two games. He is completing a conference-high 71.0 percent of his passes.

But the Wildcats lost those two games, to Stanford and USC — both of whom Oregon easily defeated.

Benson

not disappearing altogether in another Mountain West smash-and-grab robbery with Hawaii as the latest prize.

Over the past six months to no fault of his own, Benson has watched Boise State lead an exodus of his conference’s top tier teams. First the BCS-crashing Broncos. Then Nevada and Fresno State after some messy legal wrangling over contracts.

Now comes the latest report that Hawaii is prepared to ditch the WAC, moving to the Mountain West for football and the California-based Big West (which has no football schools) for everything else.

“We have a handshake but we have yet to agree on the details,” University of Hawaii president M.R.C. Greenwood said last week of the school’s pending move to the Mountain West. “The people of the state of Hawaii should be very positive about this and convinced that we have a bright future.”

Meanwhile, the state of Benson and the rest of the WAC could be described more as upset and desperate. And a bright future? That’s slipping quietly into the night.

Earlier this week, Benson held a major teleconference — but not for the purpose of touting his conference’s two best teams, one of which contains a sure-bet Heisman Trophy finalist. No, Benson simply needed to quell the rumors that the WAC is falling apart and assure all interested parties that it will remain viable.

It’s a hard sell these days. “The purpose of today’s call is to eliminate any of the reports that we aren’t going to survive,” Benson said. “This is a very strong statement that the WAC is prepared to move forward and do whatever it takes to continue our operations.”

Could doing whatever it takes to continue include a

10-paces draw between Benson and Mountain West commissioner Craig Thompson? It seems at this point that might be the only way to keep Hawaii, as these Rainbows believe there’s a pot of gold elsewhere.

While football remains the focus of the discussion, there are also other sports to consider as every sport other than basketball needs at least six schools participating to receive a bid to its sport’s national tournament. Basketball needs either seven total members — or six continuous members, which it wouldn’t have with the exit of Hawaii.

With Hawaii potentially leaving, it puts the WAC in a precarious situation where a member school could miss out on an automatic bid in a sport after winning the conference if one more school left.

Inside the WAC offices, defection alert is code red and Benson remains uneasy. It’s unfortunate for him and the rest of the WAC teams, which have built a competitive conference that sparks fiery talk radio debates on a daily basis.

In 1984, the WAC was relevant in football when BYU won a national title as a member of the conference. It was heralded by the conference — and rightly so. There was no BCS to mitigate validity to BYU’s schedule or national championship.

So consider the flailing WAC merely BCS collateral. Even with the Broncos leaving for the Mountain West, Benson and the WAC would surely display Boise State crashing the BCS title game in future publications.

But don’t blame Benson for struggling to muster a smile for his alma mater should it emerge victorious against Nevada tonight. The BCS that the Broncos might be crashing is the same one that’s relegating the WAC into obscurity.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Today is Friday, Nov. 26, the 330th day of 2010.
There are 35 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 26, 1950, China entered the Korean War, launching a counteroffensive against soldiers from the United Nations, the U.S. and South Korea.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1789, this was a day of thanksgiving set aside by President George Washington to observe the adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

In 1825, the first college social fraternity, the Kappa Alpha Society, was formed at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y.

In 1842, the founders of the University of Notre Dame arrived at the school's present-day site near South Bend, Ind.

In 1910, two dozen young women were killed when fire broke out at a muslin factory in Newark, N.J.

In 1933, a judge in New York decided the James Joyce book "Ulysses" was not obscene and could be published in the United States.

In 1943, during World War II, the HMT Rohna, a British transport ship carrying American soldiers, was hit by a German missile off Algeria; 1,138 men were killed.

In 1949, India adopted a constitution as a republic within the British Commonwealth.

In 1965, France launched its first satellite, sending a 92-pound capsule into orbit.

In 1973, President Richard Nixon's personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods, told a federal court that she'd accidentally caused part of the 18-1/2-minute gap in a key Watergate tape.

In 2008, teams of heavily armed gunmen stormed luxury hotels, a popular tourist attraction and a crowded train station in Mumbai, India, leaving at least 166 people dead in a rampage lasting some 60 hours.

Ten years ago: Florida Secretary of State Katherine Harris certified George W. Bush the winner over Al Gore in the state's presidential balloting by a 537-vote margin. Haiti held its presidential election; former president Jean-Bertrand Aristide won by a huge margin.

Five years ago: Four members of the Chicago-based aid group Christian Peacemaker Teams — an American, a Briton and two Canadians — were taken hostage in Iraq. (The American, Tom Fox, was later killed; the others were released.) Stan Berenstain, who with wife Jan wrote and illustrated the Berenstain Bear books, died in suburban Philadelphia at age 82.

One year ago: An investigation ordered by Ireland's government found that Roman Catholic Church leaders in Dublin had spent decades sheltering child-abusing priests from the law and that most fellow clerics turned a blind eye. A man stuck upside-down in a cave in Utah for more than a day died despite the efforts of dozens of rescuers.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I returned to our hometown and bought a bungalow in a cute older neighborhood. The homes are close together, separated by a single driveway.

Our neighbors on both sides of us are smokers. They smoke on their front porches and flick their smoldering butts onto the driveway and yard. The ground is littered with them, which my two toddlers want to put into their mouths every time they go outside. Often I'll go out with a bag and collect the butts, but it's annoying having to pick up someone's easily discarded trash — particularly trash that has been in someone's mouth.

My neighbors are pretty rough, and I'm afraid a confrontation could result in an escalation of the problem. Should I continue gathering up the butts and keep my mouth shut? Or should I just "butt out"?

— BOTHERED IN MISSOURI

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR BOTHERED: If you are concerned about a hostile reaction from your neighbors, do not approach them — particularly if you're afraid that doing so could become confrontational. Instead, plant hedges or bushes between your property and theirs, and have your children play — under your supervision — in the backyard.

DEAR ABBY: My mom has three sisters, two of whom I am very close to and love dearly. The problem is the third sister, "Aunt Sandy." She had a falling out with Mom a few years ago and is now considered the black sheep of the family.

At my grandmother's funeral, I had the chance to sit and talk with her, and I didn't feel I was doing anything wrong. However, my mom told me later she was "hurt" because I had talked to Aunt Sandy knowing the family is upset with her. Mom said she'd appreciate it if I didn't do it again. I tried to explain that the way she feels about her sister shouldn't have anything to do with our relationship, but Mom refuses to understand. I want a connection with my Aunt Sandy without hurting my mom. Please help.

— WE'RE STILL RELATED

DEAR STILL RELATED: I wish you had told me in more detail why your mother is angry with Sandy, and why the rest of the family is cooperating in isolating her. However, you are an adult. Whom you choose to befriend is your business, not your mother's. If you wish to pursue a relationship with Aunt Sandy, you are free to do so. And if you don't want your mother to be "hurt," don't discuss it with her.

DEAR ABBY: I was walking to lunch a few days ago and approached the entrance of a restaurant a couple of seconds after a man approaching from the opposite direction. He was a gentleman and held the door for me. I said thank you and walked inside.

Even though he was there first, I wound up in front of him in a long line. Are there rules of etiquette for this? I felt a little awkward essentially cutting in line after he was so chivalrous.

— NICOLE IN DENVER

DEAR NICOLE: There is no rule of etiquette that dictates it, but you could have offered the gentleman a chance to be in line in front of you. However, if you did, he might have extended his chivalry further and refused.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"A man must be a little mad if he does not want to be even more stupid."

— Michel de Montaigne

On this deal from the first session of last year's Blue Ribbon Pairs, South, with eight tricks in his hand facing an opening bid, decided to eschew a scientific approach. It is better to play the direct four-no-trump response as asking for aces, but North and South were at least on the same wavelength. After discovering that his partner held the relevant key-cards, South took a shot at seven spades.

At first things were going smoothly, but then came a hitch. Nikolay Demirev (West) rejected the traditional (but perhaps over-rated) lead of a trump in favor of the club king. That appears to be a catastrophic decision when you look at all four hands, as declarer can now ruff two clubs in dummy.

South took trick one with dummy's ace, cashed the top hearts, discarding a diamond, crossed to the diamond ace and ruffed a club. He now played the diamond queen, ruffing it in hand, and ruffed his last club.

He only had to get back to hand to draw trumps to land his ambitious contract, and we can see that a diamond ruff is the way to do it. However, there was a problem, because on the second round of diamonds West had followed with the king!

That brilliant falsecard induced declarer to return to hand by ruffing a heart, which West was able to overruff. How much more satisfying than to lead a trump and defeat the contract in more pedestrian fashion.

ANSWER: Your no-trump response suggested 8-12 points, so you are at the lower end of your range. But your trump support is outstanding. Not only might you make game, but you may not have much defense against a spade or diamond contract. I would raise to three clubs now, which does not promise the earth. (The "impossible" bid of two spades, or a cuebid of two hearts, would show a stronger hand.)

Furnished Apt/Duplex

IF NOVEMBER 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The roller coaster of life might give you a ride to remember this year. Relax and enjoy the best that life has to offer, especially in January and February, when your popularity gets a boost from the stars. That is a time when an intimate relationship could grow closer, when a new love could be found or when you could achieve your highest career aspirations. Your judgment is at its best, so it is a good time to put important plans into motion or implement key changes. Whatever happens, people will trust and admire you more than usual and be more willing to help you achieve your dreams during the next six months.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finders keepers, losers weepers. Business situations teach harsh truths; guard what you have and don't envy the have-nots. You sometimes have more enthusiasm than common sense and can waste resources.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are susceptible to happy ever after comes one day at a time. You might rush headlong into your future vision without taking the time to deal with the problems and conditions of today. Make the best of a current situation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are susceptible to flattery and misdirection. This is not a good time for you to ask for unbiased advice or to converse with salespeople. You have a tendency to only hear what you want to hear.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tread water. You could be disappointed by results if you lock in the terms of a contract or agreement now. Not all promises are backed by a guarantee, so keep your money safely in your pocket.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Meet life without strife. Friendly persuasion in the marketplace should not be paired with flirtation. Friendships may be more valuable than a romantic association at this time, so remain detached and fair.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Realists paint a true picture. However, under today's celestial conditions, the facts may be obscured or difficult to pinpoint. Remain skeptical of promises and hold off on initiating major undertakings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): All incense rises to heaven no matter the scent. You might not feel completely secure about your powers to charm and persuade if you compare yourself to others. However, you still have unique talents.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The tongue can be tangled even if not forked. Someone with powerful linguistic skills can wrap you around his or her little finger. You might be fooled into thinking that black is white – or vice versa.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keeping up with the Joneses isn't all it's cracked up to be. You have a tendency to be attracted to all the wrong people and things for all the wrong reasons. Wait to make important decisions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Carry on and grab the career carrot. Overcome a desire for luxury items and sidestep a flirtation with someone who is all hot air and no substance. Make the best progress by being adept at executive decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A snake-oil salesman might slither past your door. You could meet someone who mesmerizes you with meaningless platitudes and gives empty promises. Wait for a better day to sign agreements.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Look for the good in people and you will find it. It is too easy to debate philosophies now. Don't be so busy looking for excitement that you ignore enduring love right in your own backyard.

PUBLIC NOTICE
Idaho Transportation Department (ITD) announces the availability of FY13 Safe Routes to School funding. Today, fewer than 15 percent of children who live within a mile of school walk or bike, while 30 years ago almost 66 percent of children did both.
During the past 30 years children's activity levels have also decreased, this has resulted in an increase in obesity and associated illnesses like Type II diabetes, asthma and hypertension. As a result, this is the first generation of children who have a shorter lifespan than their parents.
A 2009 report that studied childhood obesity levels indicates that rates are reaching epidemic proportions with 30 percent of children being overweight. The study also indicates that 26.5 percent of children ages 10 17 in Idaho are considered overweight or obese. The decline in children walking to school has contributed to the reduction in children's activity levels, the deterioration in air quality and increased traffic congestion; studies show that 25 percent of morning traffic can be attributed to parents driving children to school.
To reverse this trend, in 2005 the Federal government funded the Safe Routes to School program. The ITD receives funding that allows locals to apply for projects that make bicycling and walking to school a safer and more appealing option for K-8 Grade students. SR2S projects are based on the principals of the “5 E's”. Education to teach safe pedestrian and bicycling practices, Encouragement efforts to motivate children to walk and bike, Enforcement support of local efforts, Evaluation of projects, and Engineering to make the route to school safer.
Projects are selected through a statewide competitive application process. Proposals may request funds for infrastructure projects and education combined, or for non-infrastructure only programs that focus on education combined with encouragement efforts. All proposals must demonstrate the ability to increase the safety and number of students walking and biking to K-8G schools, and have the necessary local partnerships in place to make it possible. The SR2S program is a reimbursement program, not a traditional grant program. No local matching funds are required. SR2S projects must comply with all Federal-Aid (FA) requirements of Title 23.
• Maximum of $100,000 is available for infrastructure, education and encouragement combined projects, they must be submitted to the ITD District office by March 1, 2011.
• Maximum of $50,000 is available for education and encouragement only projects; they must be submitted March 31, 2011 to ITD Headquarters.
• The SR2S program guidelines and project application is available to download at www.itd.idaho.gov/sr2s/howtoapply
• Pre-application training will be held at the following locations.
• Training registration forms can be downloaded at the address above.
• ITD (HQ) D3 Boise, November 30, 2010 and January 20, 2011Boise.
• ITD D4 December 2, 2010 Twin Falls.
