

Congress remains divided over jobless benefits

By David Lightman
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Voters clearly want lawmakers to ease the nation's unemployment pain, but a sharply divided Congress is still balking at extending jobless benefits for those out of work a long time.

Unless Congress acts by Nov. 30, an estimated 2 million people slated to receive extended benefits will not get them on time, if ever. And Congress is taking this week off for a Thanksgiving recess, reconvening on Nov. 29.

If lawmakers don't extend the benefits, it will be the third time this year that they will have missed a deadline to do so, even though the nation's unemployment rate, at 9.6 percent, hasn't budged since May. Earlier this year, after Congress failed to extend benefits before deadlines, jobless workers got retroactive benefits once legislation was passed.

The average benefit-receiving family gets about "Those who are spewing the hot air have a job, the security of a job and the security of health care. So they don't really understand what real people are living through."

— Sen. Bob Casey, D-Pa.

$290 a week from the program, which can last up to 99 weeks, depending on a state's jobless rate. State employer taxes pay for the first 26 weeks. In weeks 27 to 99, a federal program funds most of the benefits; that's what could be affected if Congress doesn't act.

The drama has two new wrinkles: Without congressional action, the jobless workers would be without the extra money during the holiday season — which would make the political stakes even higher.

Countering that sentiment, though, is that Republicans paid no political price for leading the effort to delay benefits earlier this year. Then, as now, they insisted that the benefits' costs must be offset by spending cuts elsewhere in the budget. And voters rewarded their party on Nov. 2.

When the 112th Congress convenes in January, the GOP will take control of the House of Representatives after gaining 63 seats; they also added to their ranks in the Senate by gaining six seats, for a total of 47.

Polls leave no doubt that Americans' top priority is job growth, yet last week, the first time Congress convened since the election, the House fell short on a vote to extend benefits, and the Senate didn't try.

"Those who are spewing the hot air have a job, the security of a job and the security of health care," said Sen. Bob Casey, D-Pa. "So they don't really understand what real people are living through."

Optimist program jackets kids against the cold

The noon bell rang and children streamed out of the classrooms at I.B. Perrine Elementary School. Principal Bill Brulotte watched as the children swarmed through the halls. Responsible for student safety, he's learned to look for signs of children in tough situations.

Some have problems not easily solved. But when he sees children who regularly wander outside without warm coats, he has a solution: He sends a request to the Twin Falls Optimist Club's Coats for Kids program.

"If we see a pattern of no coat, we'll pull the child aside to find out what's going on," Brulotte said. "In a small place like Twin (Falls), you usually know who the families are and who's going through hard times."

Brulotte estimated that he

Thrift stores claim record business on Black Friday

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Retail stores weren't the only businesses encouraging turkey-gorged customers to darken their doorsteps on Black Friday — some thrift stores offered bargains that took their rock-bottom prices below the rocks.

The economy is just beginning to show signs of recovery but many are still turning to secondhand stores for savings on smaller items or basic clothing. Goodwill industries reported that sales have risen 10 percent a year since 2008.

To encourage further sales, some local thrift stores joined in the Black Friday sales craziness. It paid off in spades this year.

The Idaho Youth Ranch Thrift Store on Main Avenue in Twin Falls had a half-off sale on Friday and Saturday, something it tried for the first time last year. Area manager Christi Sigglin was in her office Saturday morning balancing the books for her stores in Twin Falls, Rupert and Burley and was thrilled with Friday's numbers.

"All year we've been doing good but yesterday was our best day ever," Sigglin said. "Burley did $400 worth. That's a lot for any thrift store but that's really a lot for Burley."

The Mustard Seed Thrift Store on Main Avenue in Twin Falls was also in on the action, offering two bags of clothing for $5 on Friday and Saturday. Manager Stephanie Van Diest echoed Sigglin, saying Friday was one of the best days ever for her store, which has had a post-Thanksgiving sale for a number of years.

"We made around $1,000 Friday as opposed to $800 last year," Van Diest said. "That's a lot of bags."

Not all the purchases were made by bargain hunters and the recent storm may have played a part. Van Diest said she saw some people buying things they really needed, such as snow boots, outerwear and blankets that weren't included in the sale.

Manager Peggy Williams noted a similar trend at the Salvation Army Thrift Store on Second Avenue West. Williams said she saw a number of people buying blankets.

Although the Salvation Army store didn't have a special sale, Williams said employees chose Friday to do their tag shift,

One dies in I-84 wreck near Hazelton

Times-News

One person died Sunday after he was hit by car while trying to dig another one out of the snow on Interstate 84 near Hazelton.

Dallin Briner, 22, of Meridian, was digging out the 1998 Toyota Corolla he was riding in when David Newey, 22, of Orangevale, Calif., lost control of his 1992 Toyota 4Runner and hit Briner and the Corolla. The 4Runner slid back into traffic where it was hit by a 2007 Mercury Montego driven Francois Rook, 62, of Sandy, Utah.

The Corolla, driven by Caleb Cornaby, 22, of Clinton, Utah, had slid into the interstate’s median.

Idaho State Police gave Briner rescue breathing, but Briner died on the scene.

None of the other occupants were injured in the crash. All were wearing their seatbelts.

Others insist that the nation can’t wait any longer to make tough budget choices. That’s why Sen. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, who’s sided with Democrats in the past on this issue, was more circumspect this time.

“The pending expiration of unemployment benefits should be a signal and a wake-up call for Congress to finally focus like a laser,” she said, on developing “an environment that will provide certainty and stability with respect to tax and regulatory policies in order to foster economic growth and spur job creation.”

The House last week got a 258-154 majority for a $12.5 billion jobless benefits extension through Feb. 28, but the measure failed because it was brought up under a special rule that required a two-thirds majority of those voting, or 275 votes, for passage.

Many Republicans saw the vote as a cynical Democratic ploy.

“Are you listening to the American people?” asked Rep. Charles Boustany Jr., R-La., saying that voters had sent a message in the elections that they want more fiscal responsibility.

“The fact is that we can both provide this help and pay for it by cutting less-effective stimulus spending,” he said, citing one GOP plan to pay for the jobless aid.

Democrats countered that the nation is experiencing a true emergency, and this was no time to quibble over spending off-sets.

“Any family receiving unemployment insurance would tell you that these benefits do not provide for a luxurious lifestyle without financial worries,” said Rep. Betty McCollum, D-Minn. “These same families would tell you that without these benefits, they would lose their home, lose their car and lose the ability to feed their children.”

The National Employment Law Project, which studies jobless trends, estimates that the benefits cover about half an average family’s routine living expenses. That family spent about $1,408 a month on housing, $531 on food and $638 on transportation, a total of $2,577 – but they’re getting $1,257 monthly in jobless aid.

The hardest hit state would be California, where about 410,000 people face a cutoff, followed by New York, Pennsylvania, Texas and Illinois.

No T.F. council meeting tonight

Times-News

The Twin Falls City Council will not meet tonight, as it does not typically meet on the fifth Monday of a month.

Its next meeting is set for Monday, Dec. 6. During that time, the council should announce the candidates to replace departing Councilman Lee Heider. Heider is departing the council at the end of the year to better focus on his new spot as a state senator.

The Twin Falls City Council meets at the City Council Chambers, 305 Third Ave. E., Twin Falls.

Schools close in wake of winter weather

Valley School District in Hazelton won’t hold classes today.

Road conditions following weekend snow and freezing temperatures are the reason for the cancellation, said Brian Hardy, principal of the middle school.

Also closed are North Valley Academy, a charter school in Gooding, and the entirety of the Cassia County School District. School officials blamed drifting snow for the closures.

when they mark down the clothes that haven’t sold for a few months. And Williams said she has some leeway on prices.

“One lady came in and got some winter clothes that came to $8 or $9,” Williams said. “But then she realized she had only $6. I discounted them so she could have them. She needed them.”

Deseret Industries didn’t have a sale but manager Wayne Tonge said his store did well Friday also.

Thrift stores aren’t just owned by charities. Sherry Hansen has run two other thrift stores and opened her third, Third Times A Charm, on Main Avenue in July.

Hansen’s clothes are a little more select than charity donations but she put them on sale at $10 and under on Friday.

“I sold 35 coats alone,” Hansen said.

“I had the best day I’ve ever had. I did it last year and I didn’t do as good.”

But the third time was not the charm for Hansen; she has to close for good in December because of health problems. But thanks to the recent popularity of thrift stores, she gets to go out on a high note.

Coats

“Sometimes adults do sketchy things and it’s the kids who have to deal with it,” Bland said.

If a child needs a coat, parents can request one through either a school or Head Start program. Bland receives the requests and selects the right sizes from her collection. If she doesn’t have the right size, she will buy a coat from Sears, which gives her a generous discount, she said.

Then the club members distribute the coats.

“There is no way one person could do this,” Bland said. “Last week, we had requests for 70 coats.”

Another club member plays a big role. Laura Davis bought Babbel’s Cleaners from another Optimist who cleaned the coats, and she has carried on the tradition. One of the drop boxes sits in her lobby, so she has a feel for how the drive is going.

“I wish I had to empty it weekly,” Davis said. “We haven’t seen that many

Bland doesn’t get to see the children receive the coats she collects, but she said the club has received hundreds of little handwritten thank-you notes. Brulotte, on the other hand, does see the results of Bland’s labor.

“There’s nothing like being able to give a child a brand-new coat and see them take off with a big smile on their face,” Brulotte said.

Idaho State alum recalls Fort Hood rampage

By Sean Ellis
Idaho State Journal

POCATELLO — Army Staff Sgt. and former Idaho State University psychology student Shawn Manning was texting his wife when Maj. Nidal Hasan opened fire in a crowded medical building at Fort Hood, Texas, last year. Manning was one of dozens of witnesses who testified last month that he heard someone yell “Allahu Akbar” and then heard gunfire. Manning was one of the first people shot in the Nov. 5, 2009, rampage, during which 13 people were killed and 32 wounded. He was hit in the chest and knocked hard to the ground. But his ordeal wasn’t over. He would be shot five more times at close range by Hasan, who is accused of carrying out the deadly rampage at the country’s largest military base. “When he opened fire, I was one of the first people that got hit,” Manning told the Journal in a recent interview. “I thought it might be a drill but then I looked down at my chest and I knew it wasn’t. Then he kept shooting.”

Manning said the first shot felt like someone had hit him in the chest with a baseball bat. After falling to the floor, he tried unsuccessfully to take cover.

“When I went to the ground, he aimed at me and he shot me another five times,” says Manning, who celebrated his 35th birthday Nov. 15 in Lacey, Wash., where he lives with his wife, Autumn.

Manning survived despite being shot six times: once in the chest, three times in the abdomen, once in the leg and once in the foot.

He said he definitely considers his survival a miracle, especially since one bullet went through his lung, another pierced his liver and another missed his heart by centimeters.

“Statistically, I should be dead,” he says. “Some people who didn’t make it were shot a lot less times than I was.”

A Twin Falls native, Manning graduated from ISU in 1999 with a bachelor’s degree in psychology. He joined the Army in 2000 and served twice in Iraq. He was called back to active duty last October and was preparing to deploy to Afghanistan as a mental health professional. He had only been at Fort Hood for less than two days before the shooting took place.

As he lay on the ground wounded, Manning, a trained medic, knew his lung was starting to collapse and he knew it would eventually fill up with blood and he would drown if he didn’t get assistance quickly. He also knew help wouldn’t arrive until Hasan was dealt with, but he didn’t know how long that would take.

He also figured it was a matter of time before Hasan realized he wasn’t dead and shot him again, this time in the head.

“I knew my time could be numbered if I didn’t get a stroke of luck and get out of there,” he says.

When someone yelled “run,” that was all the prodding Manning needed. “I got up and ran out of the building through the front door,” he says.

Manning didn’t know Hasan but ironically, the two would have worked together had the shooting not taken place because Hasan was set to be the psychiatrist in his unit.

Manning believes he got shot so many times simply because of his size — he’s 6-foot-2 and 230 pounds — and the fact he was in Hasan’s initial line of fire.

“I’m a tall guy and I went down in his line of fire,” he says. “I think I was a target of convenience.”

In an Article 32 hearing that has been under way since October to decide if Hasan should face trial in a military court, the prosecution presented 56 witnesses to support its claim Hasan acted with premeditation.

Army officials have not said whether they would seek the death penalty if the case goes to trial.

Hasan, who was left partially paralyzed after being shot by Fort Hood police the day of the shooting, remains in jail.

Prosecutors said Hasan fired more than 200 rounds during his attack.

He could face the death penalty if convicted, which is OK with Manning, who feels no sympathy or forgiveness toward the man accused of mowing down his friends and fellow soldiers and trying to kill him. Several medical health professionals from his unit were among those killed.

He told prosecutors during the trial he would support the death penalty if it came to that.

“He killed my friends and he could have killed me,” Manning says. “Hopefully, he gets what he deserves.”

He also says he doesn’t even particularly care if he ever hears an answer from Hasan as to why he carried out the shooting.

“I don’t know if I would even understand,” he says. “There really isn’t any justification I can think of for what he did. It’s pretty senseless.”

After the shooting, Manning was moved between several hospitals in Texas before being transferred to Madigan Hospital at Fort Lewis, Wash., where he worked as a civilian before being called back to active duty.

After undergoing a medical discharge, Manning will resume work at Madigan as a civilian.

Manning says he is about 80 percent recovered, though he still has a bullet in his leg and one in his back, and it hurts to walk a long ways because of the bullet that went through his foot. He also sometimes

Leaked U.S. cables invoke diplomatic controversy

By Matthew Lee
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of thousands of State Department documents leaked Sunday revealed a hidden world of backstage international diplomacy, divulging candid comments from world leaders and detailing occasional U.S. pressure tactics aimed at hot spots in Afghanistan, Iran and North Korea.

The classified diplomatic cables released by online whistle-blower WikiLeaks and reported on by news organizations in the United States and Europe provided often unflattering assessments of foreign leaders, ranging from U.S. allies such as Germany and Italy to other nations like Libya, Iran and Afghanistan.

The cables also contained new revelations about long-simmering nuclear trouble spots, detailing U.S., Israeli and Arab world fears of Iran’s growing nuclear program, American concerns about Pakistan’s atomic arsenal and U.S. discussions about a united Korean peninsula as a long-term solution to North Korean aggression.

There are also American memos encouraging U.S. diplomats at the United Nations to collect detailed data about the U.N. secretary general, his team and foreign diplomats — going beyond what is considered the normal run of information-gathering expected in diplomatic circles.

None of the revelations is particularly explosive, but their publication could prove problematic for the officials concerned. And the massive release of material intended for diplomatic eyes only is sure to ruffle feathers in foreign capitals, a certainty that prompted U.S. diplomats to scramble in recent days to shore up relations with key allies in advance of the disclosures.

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange in Stockholm, Sweden on Aug. 14.

The documents published by The New York Times, France’s Le Monde, Britain’s Guardian newspaper, German magazine Der Spiegel and others laid out the behind-the-scenes conduct of Washington’s international relations, shrouded in public by platitudes, smiles and handshakes at photo sessions among senior officials.

The White House immediately condemned the release of the WikiLeaks documents, saying “such disclosures put at risk our diplomats, intelligence professionals, and people around the world who come to the United States for assistance in promoting democracy and open government.”

It also noted that “by its very nature, field reporting to Washington is candid and often incomplete information. It is not an expression of policy, nor does it always shape final policy decisions.”

“Nevertheless, these cables could compromise private discussions with foreign governments and opposition leaders, and when the substance of private conversations is printed on the front pages of newspapers across the world, it can deeply impact not only U.S. foreign policy interests, but those of our allies and friends around the world,” the White House said.

State Department spokesman P.J. Crowley spoke down the spying allegations.

“Our diplomats are just that, diplomats,” he said. “They collect information that shapes our policies and actions. This is what diplomats, from our country and other countries, have done for hundreds of years.”

On its website, The New York Times said “the documents serve an important public interest, illuminating the goals, successes, compromises and frustrations of American diplomacy in a way that other accounts cannot match.”

In a statement released Sunday, WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange said, “The cables show the U.S. spying on its allies and the U.N.; turning a blind eye to corruption and human rights abuse in ‘client states’; backroom deals with supposedly neutral countries and lobbying for U.S. corporations.”

Their release — the first in a series of planned releases over the next few months — “reveals the contradictions between the U.S.’s public persona and what it says behind closed doors,” Assange said.

The documents were again available on the WikiLeaks website Sunday afternoon. The site was inaccessible much of the day, and the group claimed it was under a cyberattack.

But extracts of the more than 250,000 cables posted online by news outlets that had been given advance copies of the documents showed deep U.S. concerns about Iranian and North Korean nuclear programs along with fears about regime collapse in Pyongyang.

The Guardian said some cables showed King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia repeatedly urging the United States to attack Iran to destroy its nuclear program. The newspaper also said officials in Jordan and Bahrain have openly called for Iran’s nuclear program to be stopped by any means and that leaders of Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Egypt referred to Iran “as ‘evil,’ an ‘existential threat’ and a power that ‘is going to take us to war,’” The Guardian said.

Those documents may prove the most problematic because even though the concerns of the Gulf Arab states are known, their leaders rarely offer such stark appraisals in public.

The Times highlighted documents that indicated the U.S. and South Korea were “gaming out an eventual collapse of North Korea” and discussing the prospects for a unified country if the isolated, communist North’s economic troubles and political transition lead it to implode.

The Times also cited diplomatic cables describing unsuccessful U.S. efforts to prod Pakistani officials to remove highly enriched uranium from a reactor out of fears that the material could be used to make an illicit atomic device. And the newspaper cited cables that showed Yemen’s president, Ali Abdullah Saleh, telling U.S. Gen. David Petraeus that his country would pretend that American missile strikes against a local al-Qaida group were from Yemen’s forces.

The paper also reported on documents showing the U.S. used hardline tactics to win approval from countries to accept freed detainees from Guantanamo Bay. It said Slovenia was told to take a prisoner if its president wanted to meet with President Barack Obama and said the Pacific island of Kiribati was offered millions of dollars to take in a group of detainees.

It also cited a cable from the U.S. Embassy in Beijing that included allegations from a Chinese contact that China’s Politburo directed a cyber intrusion into Google’s computer systems as part of a “coordinated campaign of computer sabotage carried out by government operatives, private security experts and Internet outlaws.”

Le Monde said another memo asked U.S. diplomats to collect basic contact information about U.N. officials that included Internet passwords, credit card numbers and frequent flyer numbers. They were asked to obtain fingerprints, ID photos, DNA and iris scans of people of interest to the United States, Le Monde said.

The Times said another batch of documents raised questions about Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi and his relationship with Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin. One cable said Berlusconi “appears increasingly to be the mouthpiece of Putin” in Europe, the Times reported.

E. Idaho police looking into suspicious death

POCATELLO (AP) — Police in eastern Idaho are investigating what is being described as a suspicious death of a 45-year-old man at an apartment complex in Pocatello.

Capt. Terry Felsman of the Pocatello Police Department says officers were called about 3 p.m. Saturday to perform a welfare check and found a man dead inside with a gunshot wound to the head.

Felsman says the man was taken to Portneuf Medical Center where he died Saturday evening.

His name has not been released.

Felsman says all available detectives were called in to begin the investigation.

Felsman says no gunshot was heard, but that loud music was playing at the apartment complex when officers arrived.

He says no one else was in the apartment when police arrived.

Ore. fire raises Muslims' fears of attack backlash

By Jonathan Cooper and Nigel Duara
Associated Press writers

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Someone set fire to an Islamic center on Sunday, two days after a man who worshipped there was accused of trying to blow up a van full of explosives during Portland's Christmas tree lighting ceremony. Other Muslims fear it could be the first volley of misplaced retribution. The charges against Mohamed Osman Mohamud, a Somali-born 19-year-old who was caught in a federal sting operation, are testing tolerance in a state that has been largely accepting of Muslims. Muslims who know the suspect say they are shocked by the allegations against him and that he had given them no hint of falling into radicalism.

The fire at the Salman Al-Farisi Islamic Center in Corvallis was reported at 2:15 a.m., and evidence at the scene led authorities to believe it was set intentionally, said Carla Pusateri, a fire prevention officer for the Corvallis Fire Department. Authorities don't know who started the blaze or why, but they believe the center was targeted because Mohamud occasionally worshipped there. Arthur Balizan, special agent in charge of the FBI in Oregon, said there's no conclusive link to the bombing in Portland or specific evidence that it's a hate crime, other than the timing. U.S. Attorney Dwight Holton vowed to prosecute the case aggressively. "The fact is that violent extremists come from all religions and no religion at all. For one person to blame a group, if that's what happened here, is uniquely anti-American and will be pursued with the full force of the Justice Department," he said. Mohamud was being held on charges of plotting to carry out a terror attack Friday on a crowd of thousands at Portland's Pioneer Courthouse Square. He is scheduled to appear in court on Monday, and it wasn't clear if he had a lawyer yet. On Friday, he parked what he thought was a bomb-laden van near the ceremony and then went to a nearby train station, where he dialed a cell phone that he believed would detonate the vehicle, federal authorities said. Instead, federal authorities moved in and arrested him. No one was hurt. There were also no injuries in Sunday's fire, which burned 80 percent of the center's office but did not spread to worship areas or any other rooms, said Yosof Wanly, the center's imam. After daybreak, members gathered at the center, where a broken window had been boarded up. "I've prayed for my family and friends, because obviously if someone was deliberate enough to do this, what's to stop them from coming to our homes and our schools?" said Mohamed Alyagouri, a 31-year-old father of two who worships at the center. "I'm afraid for my children getting harassed from their teachers, maybe from their friends." Wanly said he was thinking about temporarily relocating his family because of the possibility of hate crimes. "We know how it is, we know some people due to ignorance are going to perceive of these things and hold most Muslims accountable," Wanly said. But he said said Corvallis, a college town about 75 miles southwest of Portland, has long been accepting of Muslims. "The common scene here is to be very friendly, accepting various cultures and religions," Wanly said. "The Islamic center has been here for 40 years, it's more American than most Americans with regards to age." In Portland, residents are alarmed by the terror plot, but Mayor Sam Adams said they are "not going to let this change our values of being an open and embracing city." He said that he beefed up patrols around mosques "and other facilities that might be vulnerable to knuckle-headed retribution" after hearing of the bomb plot.

South Korea leader feels responsible for North Korean attack on island

By Kim Yong-Ho and Hyung-Jin Kim
Associated Press writers

YEONPYEONG ISLAND, South Korea — South Korea's president on Monday took responsibility for failing to protect South Koreans from a deadly North Korean artillery attack last week, even as he vowed that the North would face consequences for future aggression. Lee Myung-bak didn't offer specifics about those consequences nor did he say what actions South Korea will take in response to the artillery barrage on Yeonpyeong Island that killed four, including two civilians, and sent tensions soaring in the region. "I feel deeply responsible for failing to protect my people's lives and property," Lee said. He said he was "very sorry and regretful" for the death of innocent people. "Launching military strikes against civilians is an inhumane crime that is even banned during wartime," Lee said.

As Lee spoke, a nuclear-powered U.S. supercarrier and a South Korean destroyer participated in joint military exercises that were a united show of force aimed at the North. North Korea, meanwhile, threatened another "merciless" attack, as South Korean protesters begged Lee to find a way to resolve the tension and restore peace. China, the North's only major ally, has belatedly jumped into the fray. Beijing's top nuclear envoy, Wu Dawei, called for an emergency meeting in early December among regional powers involved in nuclear disarmament talks, including North Korea. Seoul gave a cool response to Beijing's proposal, saying it should be "reviewed very carefully" in light of North Korea's recent revelation of a new uranium-enrichment facility. The troubled relations between the two Koreas, which fought a three-year war in the 1950s, have steadily deteriorated since Lee's conservative government took power in 2008 with a tough new policy toward the North. Eight months ago, a South Korean warship went down in western waters, killing 46 sailors in the worst attack on the South Korean military since the Korean War. Then, last Tuesday, North Korean troops showered artillery on Yeonpyeong, a South Korean-held island that houses military bases as well as a civilian population of 1,300 — an attack that marked a new level of hostility. Two South Korean marines and two civilians were killed and 18 others wounded in the hailstorm of artillery that sent residents fleeing into bunkers and reduced homes on the island to charred rubble.

U.S. nonprofits report improvement in donations

By Donna Gordon Blankinship
Associated Press writer

SEATTLE — U.S. nonprofit organizations are seeing a slight increase in donations — a sign they hope is the beginning of economic recovery — but the turnaround hasn't been strong enough to keep up with higher demand for charitable services, a national report released Monday said. About a third of America's charities reported an increase in donations during the first nine months of 2010, and they said they expect more good news in the fourth quarter. Another third said giving to their organization continues to drop and the remaining nonprofit groups are holding steady, according to data collected by a coalition called the Nonprofit Research Collaborative. One-fifth of the nonprofits surveyed said they would have to cut their budgets for 2011, possibly leading to both staff and service cuts. Another 7 percent reported their organizations are at risk of folding next year because of finances. Charitable giving fell by 3.6 percent in 2009, when Americans gave $303.75 billion, the second-worse year since 1956, according to the Giving USA foundation. About half of American charities reported a decrease in donations in 2009.

Donation figures for 2010 won't be available until early next year, but one organization tracking charitable giving — Blackbaud, a Charleston, S.C., company that sells nonprofit software and other services — reported charitable donations were up 4.3 percent for the three months ending with September 2010. "Technically, we're in a recovery," said Patrick M. Rooney, executive director of the Center on Philanthropy at Indiana University, which lead the coalition. "We are beginning to see some positive signs. But despite that, giving still has a long way to go to return to the levels it was at three or four years ago." The coalition also includes GuideStar USA, the Foundation Center, the Urban Institute's National Center for Charitable Statistics, the Association of Fundraising Professionals and Blackbaud. More larger charities reported increases in donations than smaller ones. Rooney said larger charities have more people focused on fundraising, so they're likely to recapture charitable attention more quickly. International charities — those spreading American dollars around the globe — were the most optimistic about increases in donations this holiday season. Despite donation increases and an improvement in investment income, charities are still hurting financially because of an increase in demand for services plus an ongoing drop in government dollars, he added. "It's a tougher time to be not-for-profit," Rooney said. The slow recovery mirrors the nation's recovery cycle, in addition to some factors unique to nonprofits. Continued high unemployment and slow recovery and uncertainty in the housing market are hurting charities.

Uncertainty is the enemy of nonprofit organizations, Rooney said. People are more likely to make charitable gifts and more likely to give significant amounts of money when they are confident in the economy, he said. Most high income households continue to give to charity, Rooney said, but their gifts are smaller and people whose families make below $100,000 a year are focusing more on paying off credit cards and putting money aside for emergencies than giving to charitable organizations. Meanwhile, a recent survey of the general public has found that the bad economy may be leading more people to think about giving charitable gifts this holiday season instead of spending money at the mall. About half of American adults say they're likely to give a charitable gift for the holidays this year, according to a random telephone survey conducted in November by Harris Interactive, which was paid for by World Vision of Federal Way, Wash. That survey also found that more Americans have gotten or received charitable gifts since the economic downturn, which World Vision says is a sign that Americans are becoming more charitable.

Stanford, Wisconsin, Oklahoma are big BCS winners

Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Stanford was the big winner in the latest BCS standings. The Cardinal, along with Wisconsin, all but locked up bids to the Bowl Championship Series, and Oklahoma earned a spot in the Big 12 title game by out-pointing Oklahoma State and Texas A&M on Sunday. Auburn and Oregon also switched places at the top of the standings, with the Tigers slipping by the Ducks into first place — but that hardly matters. Both are still on track to play for the national championship on Jan. 10 in Glendale, Ariz. Auburn needs to beat South Carolina in the Southeastern Conference championship game on Saturday to lock up its spot and Oregon needs a victory at Oregon State in the Civil War rivalry. The only difference between one and two in the BCS is No. 1 gets to wear its home jerseys. TCU is third and in position to grab an automatic bid — possibly to the Rose Bowl — now that Boise State is no threat to swipe it from the Horned Frogs. The Broncos lost to Nevada 34-31 in overtime on Friday night. TCU is also on-deck for a spot in the national championship game if one of the top two teams trip up. But Stanford made the most important jump of all this week, taking the fourth spot after completing its season 11-1 with a 38-0 victory against Oregon State. BCS rules ensure the top four teams in the final standings a bid to the five big-money games. Stanford was in danger of getting left out altogether because its fans generally don't flock to long distance bowl sites. As long as the Cardinal don't fall when the final standings are released next week — and there's no good reason why they would — one of the bowls will be forced to take them. The BCS standings also broke the Big Ten's three-way tie at the top in favor of Wisconsin, which is fifth in the standings, a spot ahead of Ohio State. Unless some strange voting takes place in the Harris and coaches' polls after Championship Saturday, the Badgers are headed to the Rose Bowl. The Buckeyes are a good bet to land an at-large bid, but the Big Ten's other tri-champion, Michigan State, will have to settle for a second-tier game. The Spartans were eighth in the BCS standings.

Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Texas A&M finished tied at 6-2 in the Big 12 South, but the BCS tiebreaker went the Sooners' way. Oklahoma was ninth in the standings, Oklahoma State was 14th and Texas A&M was 18th. The Sooners beat Oklahoma State 47-41 on Saturday night to make the jump up the standings. The Sooners will play Nebraska in the conference championship game and the winner lands a Fiesta Bowl bid. Virginia Tech and Florida State will play in the Atlantic Coast Conference championship, with the winner getting an Orange Bowl bid. Connecticut is in command of the Big East race. The Huskies will clinch the league and a BCS bid by winning at South Florida on Saturday. If UConn losses, West Virginia could win the league and the BCS bid by beating Rutgers. Arkansas was seventh in the standings and the Razorbacks seem to be in good shape to receive their first BCS bid after beating LSU 31-23 on Saturday. If Auburn goes to the national title game, Arkansas is a good candidate to be selected by the Sugar Bowl.

SEAHAWKS STUMBLE

Kansas City Chiefs Dwayne Bowe breaks a tackle from Seattle Seahawks Kelly Jennings to drive in for a touchdown in the second half of an NFL football game, Sunday in Seattle.

Cassel, Bowe lead Chiefs past Seattle 42-24

By Tim Booth
Associated Press writer

SEATTLE — Six years later, Matt Cassel got a chance to show Pete Carroll firsthand how good he can be as a starter. With the help of Dwayne Bowe and Kansas City's run game, Cassel and the Chiefs made it look easy. Cassel tied his career high with four touchdown passes, three of them to Bowe and the Chiefs stayed on top of the AFC West with an impressive 42-24 win over the Seattle Seahawks on Sunday. Cassel finished 22 of 33 for 233 yards, finding Bowe 13 times to match his career-best set just two weeks ago against Denver. Bowe had 170 yards receiving and caught touchdowns of 7, 36 and 9 yards. Jamaal Charles ran for 173 yards on 22 carries, topping 1,000 yards for the season, and added a 3-yard TD run on the first play of the fourth quarter that gave the Chiefs a 28-17 lead. Bowe extended his streak of at least one TD catch to seven straight games. Cassel's 129.3 passer rating on Sunday was the third best of his pro career. Not too shabby for someone who was Carroll's backup at USC. "I knew that this was a big game for the Kansas City Chiefs and this by no means was about Coach Carroll and myself," Cassel said. "I played for him six years ago, I've had some time to move on from there. At this point,

I'm just really proud of how our team came out and played today." If Cassel's passing wasn't enough of a problem for Seattle's defense, there was the Chiefs running game that backed up their ranking as the best in the NFL. So too is Bowe, who has 32 receptions for 465 yards and seven touchdowns the past three games. Cassel completed 15 of 20 in the first half, picking apart Seattle's pass defense, connecting with Bowe in the first quarter, then on a 36-yard TD in the second when Seattle secondary blew coverage. The pair hooked up one more time in the fourth quarter when Cassel threw a quick slant to Bowe for a 9-yard TD, sending much of Qwest Field to the exits. And if his day wasn't complete, Cassel added a 6-yard TD pass to tight end Tony Moeaki late in the fourth quarter. It was the final indignity for a Seattle defense that was shredded for more than 500 total yards for the third time this season. Seattle (5-6) still has the benefit of playing in the mediocre NFC West, but even that margin of error is closing. Seattle dropped its fourth in the past five games after a 4-2 start to fall into a tie with St. Louis, and was booed in the closing moments for a second straight home game. Matt Hasselbeck threw for 282 yards and two touchdowns, but was intercepted twice. Ben Obomanu had five catches for 159 yards.

St. Louis adds to Denver's woes, with 36-33 victory

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press writer

DENVER — Busted one day, beaten the next. By the time the Denver Broncos' 20-point fourth-quarter rally fell short in a 36-33 loss to the St. Louis Rams on Sunday, Invesco Field was mostly empty, and dark storm clouds hung over both the city and its tarnished football franchise. A day after the NFL fined the Broncos and their coach in a videotaping scandal, Rams rookie Sam Bradford had his first 300-yard game and team owner Stan Kroenke — whose Denver-based sports empire includes the Nuggets, Avalanche and the MSL champion Rapids — had a game ball courtesy of Steven Jackson. With the win, St. Louis (5-6) moved into a tie with Seattle for first place in the NFC West. "This was a huge step for this team, taking it to the next level," Bradford said of his first road win. "It's obviously something we've struggled with earlier in the year. But to finally clear that hurdle, I feel like only things can get better now."

St. Louis Rams quarterback Sam Bradford looks to pass against the Denver Broncos during the second half of an NFL football game Sunday in Denver.

The Broncos (3-8) are feeling the same way. Embattled coach Josh McDaniels spoke about his team's 16th loss in 21 games, but declined to say much more about the scandal that resulted in $50,000 fines for him and his organization and cost video operations director Steve Scarnecchia his job. Scarnecchia, who taped San Francisco's walk-through a day before Denver's loss to the 49ers in London last month, was part of the New England video staff that was involved in the original Spygate scandal. McDaniels declined to respond to new reports he told his staff on Friday that the Broncos' videotaping troubles weren't on the same magnitude as the systemic illicit videotaping that happened in New England. "I'm not going to talk about any reports or anything like that," McDaniels said, cutting off the question. "We addressed that all yesterday. I'm done with that. I'm done talking about that. OK? Thanks." His players said they weren't bothered by the scandal enveloping the embarrassed organization. "There wasn't one bit of distraction. We had one team meeting over it and it was pretty much over after three minutes," quarterback Kyle Orton said after Denver's six loss in its last seven home games. "There's stuff that happens throughout an entire NFL season and as pros and as men you worry about your own business." It clearly left others befuddled, however. "Nobody really knows how to take it," Champ Bailey said. "Obviously, we didn't see any tapes. And if we did, it didn't work." Bailey said he felt bad for team owner Pat Bowlen because the scandal stained the organization. Justin

Williams leads Jazz to 109-97 win over Clippers

LOS ANGELES — Deron Williams had 26 points and nine assists, and the Utah Jazz got significant contributions from reserves C.J. Miles and Francisco Elson down the stretch to beat the Los Angeles Clippers 109-97 on Sunday for their fifth straight victory. Miles scored 10 of his 14 points in the fourth quarter for the defending Northwest Division champions, who won for the 13th time in 16 games after opening the season with one-sided losses to Denver and Phoenix. And they've done it without center Mehmet Okur, who has been sidelined because of a torn Achilles tendon he sustained during the playoffs. Rookie Blake Griffin had 35 points on 13 for 21 shooting, grabbed 14 rebounds and dished out seven assists for the Clippers, who have lost nine of the past 10 meetings with the Jazz. Eric Gordon added 21 points and nine assists. SPURS 109, HORNETS 95 NEW ORLEANS — Manu Ginobili scored 15 of his 23 points in the second half, and the San Antonio Spurs

Tim Duncan scored 21 points and Richard Jefferson added 19 for the Spurs, who matched a franchise-best 7-0 start on the road, set in the 2006-07 season. KNICKS 125, PISTONS 116, 207 AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Amare Stoudemire had 37 points and 15 rebounds, and Raymond Felton added 23 points and 11 assists for New York.

"In March of 2008, I decided to have my heart tested when HealthFair was conducting tests near my home. The procedure was fun and painless, but the technician told me I had a problem. My Aorta was 5.7 cm, not in the danger zone, but way above normal. I went to a cardiologist to confirm these results and yes indeed I needed surgery. Three months later and I am already back at work. While I am grateful to the surgical team, I owe a big thank you to HealthFair. My father actually suggested I go for the test, and I am glad I did. I felt fine and there were no symptoms, but yet one day in the near future I would have died.

Funny thing is, I just had an annual checkup and was told I was fine. I suggest everyone reading this to get checked out with HealthFair. This test saved my LIFE!

ULTRASOUND TESTS OF THE HEART & ARTERIES

Heart Disease, Stroke, & Aneurysm Prevention Package

Echocardiogram
Ultrasound Test

♥ Echocardiogram is a video ultrasound of the heart. It may detect enlargement of the heart, valve abnormalities, blood clots and tumors.

Electrocardiogram
(EKG) Test

♥ EKG may detect ischemia, silent heart attack and atrial fibrillation. EKG provides a picture of the electrical activity of the heart.

Hardening of the Arteries
(ASI) Test

♥ Hardened arteries cause the heart to work harder, which leads to vascular disease. ASI test shows the degree of hardening of the arteries.

Stroke/Carotid Artery
Ultrasound Test

♥ Many strokes are associated with blockages in the carotid arteries that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Abdominal Aortic
Aneurysm Test
(4-hour fast required)

♥ Abdominal aortic aneurysms form as a result of a weakness in the lining of the artery wall that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Peripheral Arterial
Disease (P.A.D) Test

♥ Many adults have leg cramps due to poor circulation. ABI screening measures extremities for peripheral arterial disease.

Going on to college? Don't bet the tuition money

By long tradition, every time a college announces it's going to raise tuition and fees, it tacks on a disclaimer: “The university is committed to providing financial assistance to qualified students who demonstrate need.”

Idaho's colleges may not be able to say that much longer.

State funding for scholarships and other aid programs administered by the Idaho Board of Education has dropped from $10.2 million to $7 million in the past two years, the Lewiston Tribune reported this week.

This in a state that has slashed spending on higher ed by 24 percent — $61 million — in two years. State funding for the College of Southern Idaho has declined 19 percent in the same period.

Our view:
Priced out of college? For many students, it could happen next school year.
What do you think?
We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

That, of course, has meant much higher tuition — up 15 percent at the University of Idaho in two years, 14 percent at Idaho State and 13 percent at Boise State. At CSI, it's increased 10 percent since 2009.

All of which means that for many students, the difference between going to college and not going to college will be the amount of assistance available through need-based programs such as Idaho Opportunity Scholarships. But Promise Scholarships have lost funding amid budget cuts for higher education.

... For many students, the difference between going to college and not going to college will be the amount of assistance available through need-based programs such as Idaho Opportunity Scholarships. But Promise Scholarships have lost funding amid budget cuts for higher education.

The Idaho Legislature created the scholarship program in 2002, limiting the stipends to $600 a year to high school grads in their first two years of college. Last year, awards were reduced to $400 a year.

Idaho lawmakers need to make funding for scholarships a bigger priority if they are going to tackle a dismal college enrollment rate, said Dan Davenport, admissions director at the U of I.

They need to do more than that. The quality of Idaho's higher education — and who can access it — will directly determine the number and quality of jobs we have in this state 20 years from now.

A majority in the Legislature still doesn't get it: Higher ed isn't a discretionary investment.

What if neither party can solve America's problems?

WASHINGTON — Suppose he is serious.

What if Barack Obama is telling the truth about his own beliefs when he says that neither party by itself can realistically hope to solve the challenges facing the United States?

Suppose he means it when he says that after the shellacking he and his fellow Democrats received in the midterm elections, he is ready and willing to hear the Republicans' ideas for dealing with jobs, taxes, energy and even nuclear weapons control.

I know that is supposing a lot — so much that it seems impossible. It's more like the script for a Broadway musical than a plausible plotline for Washington. But nonetheless, suppose that he is serious when he says, over and over, as he did on Thanksgiving Day, that if we want to “accelerate this recovery” and attack the backlog of lost jobs, “we won't do it as any one political party. We've got to do it as one people.”

Should Republicans in their expanded ranks in Congress believe this? Perhaps one or two may remember that back in 2004, when Obama was free to speak his own mind as the newly nominated Democratic candidate for senator from Illinois, he told the Democratic National Convention exactly the same thing.

In the normally partisan keynote address that launched him on the path to the White House, the young state legislator chose to address himself not to his fellow Democrats but to his fellow Americans. And to challenge them to seek and find what they have in common, not simply what divides them.

Suppose there is a chance that he is serious — that after two years of trying to govern through one party, a party that held commanding majorities in the House and Senate but now has lost them, two years with landmark accomplishments but ultimate frustration of his hopes to change Washington, he has reverted to his original philosophy of governing.

What would Republicans do if they thought there was a chance of that being true? They would do what Ronald Reagan always recommended in dealing with the Russians: Trust but verify.

They would test him. As they should.

When the leaders of the congressional Republicans meet this week with Obama at the White House bipartisan summit he proposed immediately after Election Day and they asked to postpone, John Boehner and Mitch McConnell should be prepared with a set of challenges to Obama's seriousness.

They might start with an area that traditionally has been beyond politics: national security. The president has said it is a high priority for him to see the New START treaty with Russia ratified during this lame-duck session of Congress.

Jon Kyl, the Republican No. 2 man in the Senate and its lead voice on nuclear policy, has raised a number of issues he says must be resolved before such approval is given. Kyl and Obama have been negotiating through intermediaries and have satisfied each other on most but not all points.

The Republicans could ask Obama to sit down directly with Kyl and see if they can compromise on the rest. That would be a fair first test of Obama's sincerity.

Another involves the soon-to-expire Bush tax cuts. Almost everyone agrees they should be renewed for the 98 percent of American families earning below $250,000 a year. The president opposes, but Republicans support, extending them also for the top 2 percent.

That is another issue on which Boehner and McConnell would be justified in challenging Obama and Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner to negotiate with them and the top Republicans on the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees. And they could ask that the newly confirmed administration budget chief, Jacob Lew, fresh from his experience as deputy secretary of state, be added to the mix, with hopes that his diplomatic skills can help find a way to close the gap.

Those would be two ways of testing whether Obama is serious, as I believe the evidence shows that he is.

Trust but verify. A good Republican approach.

Elected officials must uphold their Constitutional oath

Thank God we have a Constitutional Republic where we can exercise our civic responsibility to vote for those persons who will uphold and restore the Constitutional limitations of government and our individual God-given rights to liberty and freedom.

The Tenth Amendment states, “The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.”

The past election showed that informed voters rejected socialism by collectivist elitists of both parties. Remember, Vladimir Lenin said, “The goal of socialism is communism. Both have always resulted in slavery and the loss of freedom.

Pro-constitutional roadblocks are a socialist president's executive orders and veto power, a socialist controlled Senate, a very liberal Supreme Court and a huge unelected bureaucracy including the EPA which is implementing unscientific cap and trade carbon regulations which are destroying our economy and jobs.

Obamacare must be repealed as controls and costs are rising rapidly. Also death panels for seniors and abortion are included. We have a federally controlled education system where students are indoctrinated with world government and unscientific, radical environmental propaganda. We must stop amnesty for illegal aliens and anchor baby automatic citizenship.

The solution is to stop funding unconstitutional agencies and programs. For starters, eliminate funding for the Dept. of Education, the unscientific EPA and stop foreign aid to dictators. Get informed by reading “The 5,000 Year Leap” by Cleon Skousen outlining the 28 principles of freedom and The New American maga-

EU agrees on $89 billion bailout loan for Ireland

By Gabriele Steinhauser and Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press writers

BRUSSELS — European Union nations agreed to give $89.4 billion in bailout loans to Ireland on Sunday to help it weather the cost of its massive banking crisis, and sketched out new rules for future emergencies in an effort to restore faith in the euro currency.

The rescue deal, approved by finance ministers at an emergency meeting in Brussels, means two of the eurozone's 16 nations have now come to depend on foreign help and underscores Europe's struggle to contain its spreading debt crisis. The fear is that with Greece and now Ireland shored up, speculative traders will target the bloc's other weak fiscal links, particularly Portugal.

The rest of the loans will be used to cover Ireland's deficits for the coming four years. EU chiefs also gave Ireland an extra year, until 2015, to reduce its annual deficits to 3 percent of GDP, the eurozone limit. The deficit now stands at a modern European record of 32 percent because of the runaway costs of its bank-bailout program.

Irish Prime Minister Brian Cowen said the accord — reached after two weeks of tense negotiations in Brussels and Dublin to fathom the true depth of the country's cash crisis — “provides Ireland with vital time and space to successfully and conclusively address the unprecedented problems that we've been dealing with since this global economic crisis began.”

However, in a surprise accounting move, European and IMF experts decided that Ireland first must run down its own cash stockpile and deploy its previously off-limits pension reserves in the bailout. Until now Irish and EU law had made it illegal for Ireland to use its pension fund to cover current expenditures.

The three groups offering funds to Ireland — the 16-nation eurozone, the full 27-nation EU, and the global donors of the International Monetary Fund — each have committed $29.8 billion. Extra bilateral loans from Sweden, Denmark and Britain are included within the EU contribution totals.

Ireland's finance ministry said the interest rates on the loans would be 6.05 percent from the eurozone fund, 5.7 percent from the EU fund and 5.7 percent from the IMF. That's higher than the 5.2 percent being paid by Greece for its own May bailout.

Irish Finance Minister Brian Lenihan arrives for a round table of eurozone finance ministers at the EU Council building in Brussels on Sunday. Finance ministers from the eurozone and the EU met in Brussels on Sunday to agree on a financial aid assistance package for Ireland.

Ajai Chopra, deputy director of the IMF's European division who oversaw the Dublin negotiations, confirmed Ireland's government would have freedom to set its own spending and tax plans.

He said Ireland will have 10 years to pay off its IMF loans, and that the first repayment won't be required until 4 1/2 years after a drawdown. Greece, in contrast, has three years to repay its loans.

Chopra said Ireland's decision to use its pension reserve fund had helped win the confidence of those who offered help. He declined to say if negotiators had demanded Dublin use its reserves under terms of the deal.

“It makes total sense to use them at this time. I think this is quite unique in this type of arrangements and it will be taken as a sign of underlying strength,” he said.

Embattled Prime Minister Cowen told a press conference that Ireland had no choice but to take help, because international investors had decided that lending to Ireland was too risky and were demanding unreasonable returns. The yield on 10-year Irish bonds rose Friday to a euro-era high of 9.2 percent.

“If we didn't have this program, we would have to go back to the markets, which as you know are at prohibitive rates,” Cowen said. “We would pay far more.”

Still, analysts and opposition leaders in Ireland warned that the country of 4.5 million was taking on a bill it couldn't afford to repay at rates exceeding 5 percent.

Michael Noonan, finance spokesman of the main opposition Fine Gael party, said he believed that fellow EU members — particularly Germany, the eurozone's bankroller — didn't want to give money too cheaply to Ireland, for fear that Dublin would grow addicted to it.

Noonan said the loans were “pitched high to drive us back into the market,” and would encourage Ireland to pursue maximum austerity measures in hopes of reassuring the bond markets.

Cowen told reporters there had been no support in talks to ask senior bondholders to lose part of their stake on loans made to Ireland's debt-crippled banks.

“There was no agreement from the European Union for such a proposal, because of the impact it could have in the relation to the stability of the entire banking system,” he said.

Cowen has only a two-vote majority in parliament. Last week he pledged to dissolve parliament for early elections next year — but only after the budget is fully enacted. Opposition leaders won't say if they will support the budget, leaving Cowen vulnerable to losing a key budget-related vote within the next two months.

To shore up longer-term confidence in the euro, EU finance ministers also agreed on a permanent mechanism that from 2013 would allow a country to restructure its debts once it has been deemed insolvent.

Jean-Claude Juncker, the head of the Eurogroup, which represents the 16 euro nations, said private creditors would be forced to take losses only if ministers agreed unanimously that the country had run out of money.

He said that if a country is merely facing a crisis of liquidity, it would get financial help similar to the bailout agreed for Ireland.

European Central Bank chief Jean-Claude Trichet said making senior bondholders — chiefly banks that loan to other banks — suffer losses when a nation's finances head toward bankruptcy would be “fully consistent” with existing IMF policies.

Swiss voters stand in a voting booth inside a school in the center of Geneva, Switzerland, voting in a referendum on deporting criminal foreigners from Switzerland on Sunday. Switzerland goes to the polls to decide whether foreigners who commit serious crimes in their country should be automatically deported.

Voters in Switzerland approve foreigner deportation plan

By Frank Jordans
Associated Press writer

GENEVA — Swiss voters on Sunday approved a plan to automatically deport foreigners who commit serious crimes or benefit fraud, in a significant victory for the nationalist party that pushed the proposal against the will of the government.

Some 52.9 percent of voters backed the proposal put forward by the nationalist Swiss People's Party. The plan was opposed by 47.1 percent of voters.

A government-backed counterproposal failed. It would have required case-by-case review by a judge before an individual was deported.

The government will now have to draft a law requiring automatic expulsion of foreigners found guilty of crimes such as murder, rape, drug dealing or benefit fraud.

“The majority of voters have sent a clear signal that they consider foreign criminality to be a serious problem,” Justice Minister Simonetta Sommaruga said in a statement. “The Federal Council respects the will of the people and will set to work on putting the task confided in it into practice.”

Under Switzerland's unique political system, any group wanting to change the law can collect 100,000 signatures to force a referendum. Last year the country drew international condemnation after voters defied a government recommendation and approved a law to ban the construction of minarets.

Concern about a perceived rise in crime led a majority of voters to approve the deportation plan in Sunday's referendum.

“I'm totally for it,” said Emma Link after casting her vote in Geneva. The 86-year-old said she had recently been robbed on her way home from a nearby store.

But legal experts say the law could breach offenders' human rights.

Marcelo Kohen, a professor of international law at the Graduate Institute in Geneva, said people who had lived all their life in Switzerland, married Swiss citizens and had children, but never obtained Swiss passports, would be unusually hard hit by expulsion.

Kohen predicted the law would be challenged before the European Court of Human Rights.

Likewise, the European Union — with which Switzerland has signed a bilateral treaty guaranteeing freedom of movement — would probably object to its citizens being automatically deported without the chance of judicial review, he said.

During the run-up to the vote, anti-racism groups bemoaned that the People's Party's posters showed white sheep kicking black sheep off a Swiss flag, saying it played on stereotypical images of foreigners as criminals.

Virginie Studemann voted against the plan. “I think it's sad for our country,” she said outside a polling station in the center of Geneva. “It's part of a concerted attack against foreigners.”

Also Sunday, voters rejected a proposal to revise the country's tax system.

Swiss news agency SDA reported that 58 percent of voters opposed the plan, while 42 percent backed the proposal by the Social Democrat party to introduce a minimum tax across all Switzerland's 26 cantons, or states.

Polling group gfs.bern said earlier this month that initial enthusiasm for the plan evaporated after heavy campaigning by business groups, who warned it could harm the Swiss economy.

Several prominent billionaires also spoke out against the proposal and threatened to move abroad if it was accepted.

U.S. troops in convoy kill Iraqi civilian driver

By Saad Abdul-Kadir
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — U.S. troops who thought they were under attack killed an Iraqi airport employee Sunday as he drove near a military convoy on his way to work, officials said.

The driver, identified by colleagues as Baghdad International Airport worker Karim Obaid Bardan, failed to heed repeated signals to slow down or turn on his headlights as he neared the military convoy, said U.S. and Iraqi security officials.

“As a result, the vehicle was perceived as a threat and a decision was made to engage it with small-arms fire in order to stop it and to protect the convoy from a possible attack,” said Army Col. Barry Johnson, a U.S. military spokesman in Baghdad.

“Iraqi drivers know that they must use caution and avoid threatening behavior when approaching military vehicles,” Johnson said.

The shooting comes a day after Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki said U.S. troops would not be needed in Iraq beyond a December 2011 withdrawal deadline already in place between the two nations.

An Iraqi policeman confirmed the driver did not stop or slow. Two other Iraqi officials said the pre-dawn shooting happened near a security checkpoint on the road to the airport and described the shooting as a mistake.

All three Iraqi officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to brief the media.

The shooting is under U.S. investigation, and Johnson said the military “deeply regrets” the driver's death.

Such so-called “escalation of force” self-defense shootings were common in the years immediately after the 2003 U.S.-led invasion, and inflamed tensions between American forces and Iraqis who saw them as occupiers. But the tactic has been less frequent since U.S. soldiers scaled back their presence around Iraq, starting in June 2009, when they stopped patrolling cities without Iraqi forces with them.

Meanwhile, in a shocking killing north of Baghdad, police said gunmen wearing Iraqi security forces uniforms invaded the home of a Sunni sheik in a pre-dawn raid and shot him and his 15-year-old son.

A police officer in the village of al-Meshahda, about 31 miles (50 kilometers) north of the capital, said Sheik Abdul Kerim Talab Mutlak al-Halbussi was a leader of the local Sahwa, or Awakening council. The councils are the government-backed Sunni militias that joined forces with the United States against al-

Qaida in one of the turning points of the war.

Two other people in the house were wounded in the shooting, said the police officer. A local hospital official confirmed the casualties. Both spoke on condition of anonymity.

Also, two high-profile officials were killed in separate attacks Sunday night in Baghdad, police officials said. The training and development director of the Sunni Endowment, a publicly funded religious organization, was killed when a bomb hidden on the underside of his car exploded. And an Iraqi army brigadier general was slain in a drive-by shooting.

Major candidates call for halt to Haiti election

By Jonathan M. Katz and Ben Fox
Associated Press writers

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haitians wrapped up their election in discord Sunday, with nearly all the major presidential candidates calling for the vote to be voided over fraud and reports that large numbers of voters were turned away across the quake-stricken country.

The day ended with crowds surging through the streets protesting problems with the balloting, while others held impromptu celebrations to cheer for their candidates.

Twelve of the 19 candidates for president endorsed a joint statement denouncing the voting as fraudulent and calling on their supporters to show their anger with demonstrations against the government and the country's Provisional Electoral Council, known as the CEP.

The statement included all of the major contenders but one: Jude Celestin, who is backed by the Unity party of President Rene Preval.

"It is clear that Preval and the CEP were not prepared for elections," said candidate Anne Marie Josette Bijou, who read the statement to a cheering crowd that sang the national anthem and chanted "Arrest Preval!"

The CEP had earlier acknowledged problems with the voter lists but said immediately after the candidates' news conference that the election would continue.

Even so, the united front of so many candidates could cast doubt on the legitimacy of the election, the first since a January earthquake destroyed much of the capital, leaving more than a million people still stranded in crowded tent encampments.

The call for protests could also spark violence, especially with tensions already high following a series of deadly clashes earlier this month between U.N. peacekeepers and demonstrators who suspected them of bringing a rapidly spreading cholera outbreak.

Thousands of people surged onto the streets of Port-au-Prince and Cap-Haitien, the second-largest city, after polls closed. People danced in the streets, carrying posters of their candidates and chanting their names. Most of the people in both cities seemed to be celebrating presidential-candidated-turned-musician Michel "Sweet Micky" Martelly.

Police fired tear gas to disperse demonstrators near an electoral office in the Delmas section of the capital but there were no immediate reports of major violence. As darkness fell, there were still thousands of people marching in the streets. U.N. peacekeepers stood guard in trucks near the ruins of the National Palace.

Lawyer Jean-Henry Ceant, running for president on the "Love Haiti" ticket, dismissed the notion that the calls for protests could result in bloodshed. "The only one responsible for the violence is President Rene Preval," he said.

The Haitian government had no immediate response to the criticism.

Wyclef Jean, the Haitian-American singer whose own bid for president ended with an August disqualification, joined a convoy led by two candidates — Martelly and factory owner Charles Henri-Baker — to CEP headquarters, where they hoped to meet with officials. U.N. peacekeepers and police deployed extra forces and barricades ahead of the march.

Representatives of the major international donors, including the ambassadors of the U.S., Canada, France and the European Union, met after the candidates' declaration to discuss the situation, said Organization of American States Assistant Secretary-General Albert Ramdin, who is in Haiti to monitor the elections.

"We are all concerned about the possibility of violence because we don't want to see people lose lives in a process that should be democratic," Ramdin said.

An OAS report on the elections would not be released for several weeks, he said.

Bijou told The Associated Press that she had photos and "documentary evidence" of election fraud but walked away when asked for further details.

Voters throughout the country showed up at polling stations only to find them closed hours after their scheduled opening, or to be turned away because their names were not on lists. At one station, even Celestin was turned away.

There were also sporadic reports of violence and intimidation, as well as a ballot box being stolen and its contents strewn about in the capital's Cite Soleil slum.

It was not yet clear whether the problems were the result of orchestrated fraud or merely disorganization made worse by the Jan. 12 earthquake.

Voters and candidates said Preval, who was barred from running for re-election, was trying to sway the vote in favor of Celestin.

"Preval did this on purpose because they know we want to vote for Martelly," said Fanes Francky, a voter turned away from his voting station in the Delmas section of the capital.

Voter rolls were filled with the dead, and many living citizens were struggling to figure out if and where they could vote.

Observers from dozens of parties crowded voting areas and furious voters were turned away from stations where poll workers could not find their names on lists.

"I don't know if I'm going to come back later. If I come back later it might not be safe. That's why people vote early," said Ricardo Magloire, a Cap Haitien radio journalist whose polling station at a Catholic school was still not taking ballots after people had waited more than an hour.

At another voting place in the St. Philomene neighborhood, a woman complained that young men were taking advantage of the chaos to vote multiple times. The allegation could not be confirmed because a crowd of one candidate's supporters swarmed around two AP journalists and forced them to leave the area, threatening a photographer.

One man was shot to death at a polling place in rural Artibonite, Radio Vision 2000 reported, though no details were available.

Ninety-six contenders were competing for 11 Senate seats and more than 800 more were seeking to fill the 99-seat lower house.

But the focus is on the presidential contest. Nineteen candidates were on the ballot, though many Haitians believed the race came down to a man who was not: Preval.

The laconic leader twice sailed into office bolstered by supporters of his former ally, ousted former President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. But in Preval's second term, those voters branded him a traitor for not returning Aristide from exile.

Frustrations also grew among the jobless masses as Haiti's economy continued to be one of the world's worst. When the earthquake struck on Jan. 12 and a stunned Preval hid from sight, impatience turned to anger that has fueled anti-government protests.

As his replacement, Preval backed Celestin, the little-known head of the state-run construction company whose dump trucks carted many of the quake's estimated 300,000 dead to mass graves. His well-funded campaign included airplanes trailing banners with his name and dropping leaflets that flutter like yellow-and-green birds over tent camps for people made homeless by the quake.

A text message sent to Haitian cell phones Saturday summed up the primary message of Celestin's campaign: "Let's assure stability." His campaign workers already refer to him as "The President."

Ethel Catherine Dunn

Ethel Catherine Dunn, 94, of Twin Falls, passed away Nov. 27, 2010, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

She was born on July 1, 1916 and later adopted in Minneapolis. She was raised as a single child in the family of Herbert E. and Lillian (Lanterman) Tedman. Ethel was most pleased to discover her birth mother's maiden name (Eliase Oebser) in 1994. After a couple years of searching, she was excited to find that she had four half-sisters that were born to her birth mother after she subsequently married a gentleman from central Minnesota. Through repeated travels to Minnesota, she was able to meet three of the four women. They had many enjoyable story-telling hours together.

Ethel was a quiet person who loved to read, write poetry, watch television and complete word-search and crossword puzzles. She loved to be part of family gatherings where she could listen to and chat with people. She was very proud of being part of the World War II support generation as a P-38 blue-print reader/assembler. Being a contributor to the World War II Memorial in Washington, D.C., was a large part of her conversation over the past several years.

Surviving are her children: Loren J. Randolph of Meridian; Joseph E. Randolph of Olympia, Wash.; Frances E. Wedell of Cedar River, Mich; Colin M. Randolph of Twin Falls; and Norris D. Randolph of Blackfoot; her six grandchildren: Sara Wilson, Scott Randolph, Allyson Randolph, Hale Powers Benton, Benjamin Benton and Mary Ann Wedell; and five great-grandchildren. Additional survivors include her sisters: Isabel Knosalla of Staples, Minn.; Betty Dahlvand of Wadena, Minn.; and Bethel Rogers of Oakdale, Calif. She was preceded in death by her parents, two husbands — Robert Randolph in 1960 and Roy Dunn in 1969 — and one sister, DeEtta Fisher. She will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved her.

Private family services will be held at Dry Creek Cemetery in Boise. Services and arrangements are under the careful direction of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls. Those who wish may leave condolences at www.magicvalley-funeralhome.com.

Australian PM to price carbon pollution next year

By Rod McGuirk
Associated Press writer

CANBERRA, Australia — Prime Minister Julia Gillard said on Monday her government would decide next year how to charge Australia's major polluters for the carbon gases that they emit in a bid to curb the nation's greenhouse gas emissions.

Gillard's plan to fast-track Australia's introduction of financial penalties for polluters came hours ahead of a United Nations climate change summit in Mexico starting on Monday that will consider how the Kyoto Protocol on reducing greenhouse gas emissions will be replaced after 2012.

Australia and the United States had been the only industrialized countries to refuse to accept their Kyoto targets on reducing their carbon emissions until Gillard's center-left Labor Party was elected to govern in 2007.

The new Labor government under then-Prime Minister Kevin Rudd immediately signed up to Australia's reduction target, but Rudd said this year shelved until 2013 his plan to make polluters pay for permits to emit carbon gases.

Gillard, who replaced Rudd in an internal Labor coup in June before the party was returned at August elections to govern for another three years, said she was confident that her government would decide next year how to make polluters pay after a committee of lawmakers and experts reports on the best strategy to do so.

"2011 is the year Australia decides on carbon pricing,"

Gillard told an economics think tank.

Labor's previous attempts to make polluters pay have been thwarted in the upper house, the Senate, where the government does not hold a majority. The conservative opposition argues that families would pay the cost of pollution and has promised to never charge polluters.

Australia is one of world's worst carbon polluters per capita because of its heavy reliance on abundant coal reserves for power generation.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's federal police have captured a presumed leader of a cross-border drug gang suspected in dozens of killings, including the slaying of a U.S. consulate worker, authorities announced Sunday.

Arturo Gallegos Castrellon, 32, was arrested Saturday in the border city of Ciudad Juarez, which is considered the most violent city in Mexico.

Gallegos is suspected in last January's killing of 15 youths at a party, a massacre that shocked even the violence-hardened people of Ciudad Juarez, and in the March murder of a U.S. consulate employee in that city, regional security chief Luis Cardenas Palomino said.

The alleged gang leader is also accused of killing five federal agents in unrelated attacks.

Gallegos is purported to be one of the leaders of the Aztecas gang that operates both in Ciudad Juarez and across the border in El Paso, Texas.

Mary Ordway, owner of Sta-Well Health Food Store in Twin Falls, shows a bottle of Yeast Control Plus at her store Tuesday evening. People take the supplement to fight what they believe is an overgrowth of candida yeast in the digestive tract.

Some Idahoans swear by candida diet, but science doesn't support it

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

When Tara Abbott was feeling sluggish and tired, she temporarily dropped sugar, carbs and wheat from her diet in an effort to kill the candida yeast she thought was overrunning her system. After three weeks of living on protein and vegetables, the Twin Falls massage therapist had more energy. The candida diet — a sugar-free, fungus-free, dairy-free, low-carb eating plan meant to kill yeast in the body — is increasing in popularity, say Magic Valley alternative health practitioners. But as more people are giving the diet a try, the medical community remains skeptical in the face of a lack of research. So if the science isn't there, why does the diet help people feel better? The idea behind the diet is this: An overgrowth of candida yeast, which occurs naturally in everyone's bodies, can make the intestine more permeable, resulting in what the alternative medicine community calls leaky gut syndrome. When proteins and other particles enter the blood stream from the gut, a person feels fatigued, irritable and achy. The problem? Those symptoms are non-specific, said Dr. Seth Wheeler of St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center's gastroenterology clinic. Any number of ailments cause fatigue and irritability. There are also no controlled studies to prove that candida overgrowth is a widespread problem. "We go by a lot of scientific studies," Wheeler said. "Everything we do, we try to have some sort of proof to it." Candida feeds on sugars and fungus, so a diet low on carbs and sugar and high in vegetables and protein will starve the yeast, alternative practitioners claim. Mary Ordway, owner of Sta-Well Health Food Store in Twin Falls, has seen an increase in candida inquiries in the past year. Customers have come back and told her how much better they feel after following the diet. Ordway also sells supplements, like Yeast Away and Syntol, that hasten the death of yeast. The supplements also have enzymes that Ordway says move the dead yeast cells out of the system, preventing them from fermenting and emitting toxins into the blood. "You can starve (the yeast), but it's going to take a lot longer to get the same effects as it would if you were using supplements that were going to kill off the cell," Ordway said. Ordway has also tried the candida diet after fighting a chronic rash. Not only did the rash clear up, but she had more energy and an easier time digesting food. Other

Sta-Well customers have seen weight loss and a boost in energy, she said. Besides the diet and supplements, Opal Mortensen of Alternative Times — a Twin Falls massage and colon hydrotherapy business — recommends colon hydrotherapy to combat candida. "You need the flush," Mortensen said. "You gotta clean that colon out." When you go on that diet, number one, you are eliminating a lot of junk food," Wheeler said. With empty calories and sugar-heavy foods off the plate, "that by cleanses specifically for candida. How do you know if you have too much candida? Spit into a cup full of water when you first wake up, Ordway said. If the saliva turns stringy and sinks to the bottom, you have a candida problem. That diagnosis has no scientific backing, Wheeler said. "They have this diagnosis, this pseudo-diagnosis of candida, but there's really no way to actually prove it," Wheeler said. Candida overgrowth can occur in immunosuppressed patients, like those who are undergoing chemotherapy or people with HIV or AIDS, Wheeler said. But there is no research that suggests this is a widespread problem among people who don't have compromised immune systems. So why does the diet help people feel better? "When you go on that diet, number one, you are eliminating a lot of junk food," Wheeler said. With empty calories and sugar-heavy foods off the plate, "that by itself will make people feel better." The gluten and wheat avoidance that goes hand-in-hand with the low-carb aspect of the diet also helps with digestion, Wheeler said, even if the patient doesn't have a gluten intolerance or celiac disease. "That effect is usually temporary," he added. So if you're feeling sluggish but are wary of the candida diet, what should you do? Wheeler doesn't want to make a blanket recommendation for everybody, especially because the symptoms aren't specific, but exercising and eating right are usually the first steps to feeling better. "Just like everybody else," he said. But scientific studies — or lack thereof — don't mean much to Abbott, who isn't feeling as fatigued as she did before. "It went really well," she said. ## Winter's limited light darkens mood for many

By Leslie Tamura
The Washington Post

The weather is gray and cold, and that summer sense of excitement has melted away. It's dim in the morning when you get up and dark in the evening when you come home. And it's all making you feel downright blah, maybe even teetering on depressed. Sounds like the wintertime blues. "It doesn't necessarily mean you're sad or down, you're just lacking in the push that all people need to get through the day," said

Norman Rosenthal, a Maryland psychiatrist who studies seasonal conditions such as the winter blues. In the mid-1980s, Rosenthal and his colleagues at the National Institute of Mental Health coined the term "seasonal affective disorder," or SAD, for an extreme form of the wintertime blues. About 20 percent of Americans start to feel down as the days get noticeably shorter, Rosenthal said. Some people start feeling their mood change as early as July, when daylight begins to grow shorter after the summer solstice on June 21. Most, however, first notice the change after they move their clocks back into standard time, which this year occurred on Nov. 7. It's a little lighter in the early morning for a few weeks until the days shorten even more, but it's nearly nighttime for the post-work commute home. Psychiatrists and chronobiologists — scientists who study organisms' internal rhythms — say exposure to light, morning light in particular, is what makes the difference to mood. "Light during the middle of the

Most common

Foot blisters

A person with tender feet and ill-fitting shoes can develop a blister after playing tennis or basketball for just a few minutes.

What happens

- Friction pulls top layers of skin loose from lower layer
- Fluid from broken cells fills space between layers

Blood blister

Small blood vessel breaks, leaks blood into space between layers

Deciding whether to break it

Some doctors advise puncturing blister with sterilized needle

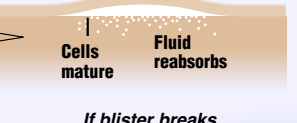

Reduces pain, lets roof adhere to floor temporarily, preventing infection (roof eventually dries out and comes off)

Draining blister

Some say leave it intact

Fluid reabsorbs, cells on floor have time to mature, become less vulnerable to infection

In either case:

- Keep skin around blister clean
- Protect with small adhesive bandage fessor and president of the nonprofit Center for Environmental Therapeutics.

According to Rosenthal, in the evening our brains start secreting melatonin, a hormone that signals to our bodies that it's dark outside. That happens a few hours before an individual starts feeling sleepy.

Melatonin does not induce sleep, Terman says, but it appears to signal to the rest of the body that it is about time to rest.

In most people, sunrise often cues the brain to gradually stop secreting melatonin, Lewy says. Although that is not an immediate wake-up signal, once the hormone recedes from the system, we may tend to wake up spontaneously.

Because winter days are primarily dark, we want to sleep more and wake later. Life's morning obligations, however, don't change with the season. We may wake before we're biologically ready, then feel groggy and moody throughout the day.

Getting off daylight saving time can help, but symptoms may worsen after a few weeks of standard time. "It's like having jet lag for four to five months," Lewy said.

An estimated 14 million people in the U.S. suffer from SAD, and for them the wintertime blues tip into something quite debilitating.

ple of hours later; the light is about 15 times more intense than a typical fluorescent bulb. Rosenthal eats breakfast in front of another bright-light box and has another light box in his office. He also tries to take morning walks outside.

"Light therapy is the treatment of choice," Lewy says, because this noninvasive approach has been shown to relieve winter symptoms.

A light therapy box emits 2,500 to 10,000 lux (the latter is about equivalent to a bright sunny day seen through window) and typically costs $75 to $475. The smaller the light, the longer you should sit in front of it while doing your daily activities. Most who use the 10,000-lux lamps use them for about 30 minutes.

If lights do not relieve your symptoms, a physician may prescribe antidepressants or psychotherapy.

The nonprofit Center for Environmental Therapeutics has an online self-assessment to help determine whether your experience is more than a general case of winter blues. The survey is based on criteria for major depression from the fourth edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders and the National Institutes of Health criteria for seasonal variation in mood.

Treating the blues

The Washington Post

With several months ahead of short days and long nights, what can you do about the winter blues?

Experts say the best place to start is by exercising and limiting your carbohydrate and sugar intake. Although people may crave serotonin-boosting carbohydrates, bingeing on high-caloric foods will lead to the winter weight gain common to those who suffer from seasonal affective disorder that often takes a toll on self-esteem.

Brighten your environment: Add extra lights to rooms, and open your blinds. Take a lunchtime walk in the sun. If you have the resources, vacation in a tropical location.

Increased light exposure may trick your body clock that it is a long, bright, summer day. If you start getting more light on early autumn mornings, your internal clock may never get out of sync. "I try to simulate summer in the winter," psychiatrist Norman Rosenthal says. "I try to move seamlessly from one illuminated place to another."

Around September, Rosenthal uses a "dawn simulator" alarm clock that starts to light up his bedroom around 5 a.m. A bright-light therapy lamp turns on a cou-

Why might the waning light cause lethargy, depression, social withdrawal and even hunger?

Some scientists suggest that those who experience the winter blues are simply more sensitive to light and light deprivation. Others have shown that, in people with the blues, serotonin, the brain chemical involved in feeling satisfied, dips excessively when there is less daylight.

A widely accepted theory is that the limited winter light alters our biological clocks.

Humans run on an approximately 24-hour cycle that sets us up to be active during the day and to rest at night, says Michael Terman, a Columbia University psychiatry pro-

How to bust stress with food

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

The holiday season often brings stress along with fun, but certain foods may help your nerves — without packing on pounds. “There are foods that really do have calming properties based on how their specific nutrients are used by the body,” says Gloria Tsang, a registered dietitian and founder of the online nutrition site HealthCastle.com. Here are five smart moves:

Work citrus fruits into your meals. These fruits are rich in vitamin C, which research has shown may help lower blood pressure and other physiological reactions during stressful situations. Oranges, grapefruits, lemons, limes and kiwis are all good choices.

Switch to whole-grain carbohydrates. All carbs temporarily boost levels of the “feel-good” brain chemical serotonin, but many of these “comfort foods” — think cookies and chips — aren’t so good for the rest of you. Go for healthier options such as whole-wheat pastas and whole-grain, air-popped popcorn.

Brew a mug of hot tea. Green, black and white teas have half the caffeine of coffee but offer the same comforting warmth. They also are packed with flavonoids, natural antioxidants that may help blood vessels relax and lower blood pressure (dark chocolate and blueberries are other flavonoid-rich foods).

Pick dark green vegetables. Produce such as broccoli, collard greens, spinach and kale are high in B vitamins, which may help fight anxiety. Research suggests people with low levels of these vitamins are more likely to have depression than those with normal levels.

Snack on nuts. They’re also high in B vitamins, as well as magnesium, a mineral involved in production of serotonin. Almonds and cashews are particularly rich sources of magnesium; they’re also packed with protein to keep hunger at bay. Just watch your portion sizes.

Hopkins study looks into fitness guidelines for pregnant women

By Meredith Cohn
The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE — Her Asics laced up and her water bottle at her side, Meredith Dobrosielski stepped onto the treadmill for a robust half-hour walk.

For the Towson, Md., runner, this wasn’t just any trip to the gym. The session took place in a lab at Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center in Baltimore. And each step offered information on the impact of exercise on her fetus. Dobrosielski is about 8 months’ pregnant.

Doctors expect the information collected to fill in some gaps in the data on how much pounding is OK for a developing baby. Eventually, they hope to be able to develop personalized workout schedules for women in different states of fitness.

“We do know that not only can exercise be done, it should be done,” said Dr. Andrew J. Satin, professor and vice chairman of the department of gynecology and obstetrics for the Hopkins School of Medicine. “But the level of fitness should impact the individual’s prescription.”

Not too long ago doctors used to tell all women not to exercise when they became pregnant, but that advice has changed, said Satin and Dr. Linda Szymanski, a fellow in maternal fetal medicine helping conduct the research. But there still is little data about what’s too much for the elite athlete verses the couch potato and those in between. Satin said much is based on “opinion and common sense.”

They believe research is limited because doctors fear testing pregnant women. But nine months into the study, there have been no adverse reactions. As a precaution, the hospital’s labor and delivery area is close by.

About 60 women in their third trimester of pregnancy take turns on the treadmill. Some are regular runners and others are sedentary. Everyone takes a moderate walk, and the regular runners also run until they hit their peak capacity but don’t linger there. Several measurements are taken over the sessions from fetal heart rate and blood flow to the womb to fetal movement and amniotic fluid levels. The fetuses are examined by ultrasound before and after treadmill work.

Over time, the doctors plan to measure the impact on fetuses; partner with biomedical engineers to develop new ways to monitor the fetus, perhaps wirelessly during exercise; and collect long-term data on the pregnancy outcomes. The treadmill tests are the first step and some solid data should be available in a couple of months.

Doctors and groups such as the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and the American Pregnancy Association now give blanket advice to pregnant women to get 30 minutes of exercise a day.

Potential benefits include improvement in general health and a decreased chance of gestational diabetes and hypertension, among others. Also, these groups say, that labor, delivery and recovery can be easier.

But the advice is based on recommendations from government and groups such as the American College of Sports Medicine that non-pregnant people get such exercise. And it’s filled with notes of caution for those who are just starting and those with certain conditions. The college suggests seeing a doctor first, starting slow and stopping when there’s pain or bleeding — advice Satin doesn’t dispute.

He added that doctors do know driving up a heart rate

EXERCISING WHILE PREGNANT

Several medical organizations recommend 30 minutes of exercising a day for pregnant women.

- If you’re just beginning or have a condition, consult your doctor. Start slow and stop if you have pain or bleeding.
- Don’t get overheated, stay hydrated and take breaks.
- Your joints may be lax and your balance off, particularly in later months, so avoid unstable ground or consider a stationary bike or running in a pool.
- No contact sports, but some weight training is OK. Avoid lying on your back after the first trimester.

and maintaining it there for too long can cut off blood flow to the fetus. Getting overheated and dehydrated are also problems. Joints also can become lax and balance may be off, so some exercises should be avoided, such as street biking late in pregnancy. Contact sports, horseback riding and downhill skiing also may cause injury from blows or falls.

But he and others say not everyone has gotten the message that exercise is beneficial.

Regular exercise, fewer colds

By Jerry Jackson
The Baltimore Sun

A study published in the British Journal of Sports Medicine suggests that a penchant for exercise may have a lot to do with me making it to work on a daily basis.

Dr. David Nieman, a professor in the College of Health Sciences at Appalachian State University, says, “Exercise is probably the most powerful thing you can do to reduce your sick days this winter.”

Nieman and his colleagues have spent more than 20 years studying the effects of exercise, diet, weight, gender and education levels on one’s health. Regular exercise was shown to have the greatest influence.

A brisk walk for 30 to 45 minutes a day increases the number of immune system cells that circulate in the body, Nieman said. Although these levels decline within a few hours, each bout of exercise is likely to enhance surveillance of harmful viruses and bacteria, and reduce the number and severity of upper respiratory infections, such as the common cold.

Playing outdoors can supply a world of benefits

By Julie Deardorff
Chicago Tribune

Want to nurture a healthy, motivated student? Send your child outside for a daily dose of nature, say advocates of the No Child Left Inside movement.

Once the school year starts, kids tend to hibernate indoors, but studies suggest that giving children access to green spaces, sunlight and fresh air can do everything from reduce symptoms of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder to improve mood and academic performance. Spending time in nature makes us feel more alive, according to research published in the Journal of Environmental Psychology; some say this vitality can translate into increased motivation and capacity for learning.

Each day, try giving kids one hour of unstructured play in the natural world, suggests the National Wildlife Federation, an advocacy group. For children who live in areas where unsupervised outdoor play isn’t safe or accessible, a “green” hour can take place in a park, backyard, even on a porch.

Some tips to encourage outdoor play:

Go with them. If you’re excited about going outside, your kids will be, too, said Tanya Berry, a physical education researcher at the University of Alberta. She suggests limiting media use to reduce the pull from the indoors.

Adopt something. My boys love picking up “treasures” (aka garbage) in the alleys, so we recently signed up for an “adopt a beach” cleanup program. Parks, forests, highways and yards all need cleaning up.

Find an event. Children are enthusiastic detectives; check out local nature or ecology centers for scavenger hunts, which help develop problem-solving and visual-discrimination skills. Or try naturerocks.org to find activities close to home and tailored to your child’s age.

Get gadgets. Transform the yard by equipping your children with headlamps or flashlights and letting them explore at night. During the day, pitch a tent in the yard or give them a small magnifying glass to watch bugs and other creatures. Try binoculars and compasses, too.

Create or join a family nature club. When families get together — to hike, garden or even take part in a stream reclamation — the kids tend to play more creatively by themselves or with others than during single-family outings, said Richard Louv, author of “Last Child in the Woods” (Algonquin, $14.95), who coined the phrase “nature-deficit disorder” to describe our modern disconnect with the natural world. The Children & Nature Network promotes nature clubs for families and has a free guide on how to start your own; go to childrenandnature.org.

Play games. Create a backyard obstacle course and time each participant. Or play the alphabet game by finding letters hiding on the ground, in the trees or in the sky, suggests the National Wildlife Federation, which encourages outdoor activity in its Be Out There campaign; go to nwf.org. A branch can form a “y”; a blade of grass can be an “i.” Have older children spell words.

AMENDED NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Wednesday, March 2, 2011 at the hour of 10:30 o'clock A.M., of said day, in the office of Alliance Title & Escrow Corp. located at 1411 Falls Avenue East #1315, Twin Falls, ID 83301,

Alliance Title & Escrow Corp., as successor trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, cashiers check, certified check or tellers check, (from a bank which has a branch in the community at the site of the sale), money order, State of Idaho check or local government check, or cash equivalent in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the same time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to wit:

The S½ of Lot 3 Block 1 Final Amended Munyon's Subdivision, Twin Falls County, Idaho filed in Book 2 of Plats Page 22.

THE TRUSTEE HAS NO KNOWLEDGE OF A MORE PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION OF THE ABOVE-DESCRIBED REAL PROPERTY, BUT FOR PURPOSES OF COMPLIANCE WITH IDAHO CODE, SECTION 60-113, THE TRUSTEE HAS BEEN INFORMED THAT THE STREET ADDRESS OF: 722 Stevens Street, Filer, ID 83328, MAY SOMETIMES BE ASSOCIATED WITH SAID REAL PROPERTY.

If the successful bidder cannot provide the bid price by means of one of the above means of payment, the sale will be postponed for 10 minutes only to allow the high bidder to obtain payment in a form prescribed herein above. If the high bidder is unsuccessful in obtaining payment as directed within 10 minutes, the sale will be re-held immediately and any bid by the high bidder from the previous sale, will be rejected, all in accordance with Idaho Code 45-1502 et. Sec.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by David J. Short and Shawn Addey-Short, Husband and Wife, as Grantor to Alliance Title & Escrow Corp., as Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of Metlife Home Loans, a division of Metlife Bank, N.A. as Successor Beneficiary, recorded December 31, 2008 as Instrument No. 2008-027083, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is failure to:

Make principal and interest payments as set forth on said Deed of Trust and Promissory Note. The original loan amount was $162,291.00 together with interest thereon at the rate of 5.750% per annum, as evidenced in Promissory Note dated December 24, 2008. Payments are in default for the months of October 2009 through and including March 2010 in the amount of $1,138.21 per month and continuing each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reinstatement. The principal balance as of February 25, 2010 is $160,910.02 together with accrued and accruing interest thereon at the rate of 5.750% per annum. In addition to the above, there is also due any late charges, advances, escrow collection fees, attorney fees, fees or costs associated with this foreclosure.

The balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $160,910.02, excluding interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder or in this sale, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.

Lots 9, 10 and the South 15 feet of Lot 11 of Block 15 of the Original Townsite of Heyburn, Minidoka County, Idaho, according to the official plat thereof, now on file in the office of the County Recorder, Minidoka County. Idaho

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of 1940 "N" Street, Heyburn, ID, is sometimes associated with the said real property.

This Trustee's Sale is subject to a bankruptcy filing, a payoff, a reinstatement or any other conditions of which the Trustee is not aware that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, this sale may be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Trustee and the Beneficiary shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possessions or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Charline Linæe Clark, a married person as her sole & separate, as Grantor(s) with Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc. as the Beneficiary, under the Deed of Trust recorded August 28, 2007, as Instrument No. 492670, in the records of Minidoka County, Idaho. The Beneficial interest of said Deed of Trust was subsequently assigned to Suntrust Mortgage, Inc., recorded July 21, 2009, as Instrument No. 503465, in the records of said County.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay the amount due under the certain Promissory Note and Deed of Trust, in the amounts called for thereunder as follows:

Monthly payments in the amount of $1,133.02 for the months of November 2008 through and including to the date of sale, together with late charges and monthly payments accruing. The sum owing on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $110,998.00 as principal, plus service charges, attorney's fees, costs of this foreclosure, any and all funds expended by Beneficiary to protect their security interest, and interest accruing at the rate of 6.875% from October 1, 2008, together with delinquent taxes plus penalties and interest to the date of sale.

The Beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

Dated this 2nd day of November, 2010.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Today is Monday, Nov. 29, the 333rd day of 2010. There are 32 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 29, 1910, British explorer Robert F. Scott's ship Terra Nova set sail from New Zealand, carrying Scott's expedition toward Antarctica on what turned out to be a futile — as well as fatal — race to reach the South Pole first.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1530, Cardinal Thomas Wolsey, onetime adviser to England's King Henry VIII, died.

In 1864, a Colorado militia killed at least 150 peaceful Cheyenne Indians in the Sand Creek Massacre.

In 1924, Italian composer Giacomo Puccini died in Brussels before he could complete his opera "Turandot." (It was finished by Franco Alfano.)

In 1929, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Richard E. Byrd, pilot Bernt Balchen, radio operator Harold Gurne and photographer Ashley McKinney made the first airplane flight over the South Pole.

In 1947, the U.N. General Assembly passed a resolution calling for the partitioning of Palestine between Arabs and Jews.

In 1961, Enos the chimp was launched from Cape Canaveral aboard the Mercury-Atlas 5 spacecraft, which orbited earth twice before returning.

In 1967, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara announced he was leaving the Johnson administration to become president of the World Bank.

In 1981, actress Natalie Wood drowned in a boating accident off Santa Catalina Island, Calif., at age 43.

In 1986, actor Cary Grant died in Davenport, Iowa, at age 82.

In 1990, the U.N. Security Council voted to authorize military action to free Kuwait if Iraq did not withdraw its occupying troops and release all foreign hostages by Jan. 15, 1991.

Ten years ago: Bracing the public for more legal wrangling, Vice President Al Gore said in a series of TV interviews that he was prepared to contest the Florida presidential vote until "the middle of December." Lou Groza, the Cleveland Browns' Hall of Fame kicker and lineman affectionately known as "The Toe," died at age 76.

Five years ago: Al-Jazeera broadcast video of four Western peace activists taken hostage in Iraq by a previously unknown group, the Swords of Righteousness Brigade. (Three of the hostages were later released, but one of them, American Tom Fox, was killed.) The Vatican issued a document defending a policy designed to keep men with "deep-seated" homosexual tendencies from becoming priests, but said there would be no crackdown on gays who were already ordained. Actress Wendie Jo Sperber died in Sherman Oaks, Calif. at age 47.

One year ago: A gunman shot and killed four Lakewood, Wash. police officers at a coffee shop (Maurice Clemmons, the accused gunman, was shot to death by a Seattle police officer two days later). Iran approved plans to build 10 industrial scale uranium enrichment facilities in defiance of U.N. demands it halt enrichment. Swiss voters approved a constitutional ban on minarets, barring construction of the iconic mosque towers. Tiger Woods canceled yet another meeting with Florida state troopers but, for the first time, talked about his car crash on his Web site, saying it was his fault, that his wife acted courageously and that remaining details were private. Francesco and Edoardo Molinari of Italy became the first brother combination to win the World Cup of Golf.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"No man lives without jostling and being jostled; in all ways he has to elbow himself through the world, giving and receiving offense."

— Thomas Carlyle

Today's deal, from a team game, demonstrates the danger of thinking by rote instead of finding the right moment to break the rules.

Declarer knew that the textbooks said to cover an honor with an honor. When West led the heart jack against three no-trump, declarer covered in dummy. East won with the ace and returned his second heart. Declarer ducked in dummy but won the next heart.
When West turned up with the diamond ace and an original five-card heart suit, the game had to fail.

Unlucky — but the contract was the same at the second table, after a similar bidding sequence.
This declarer was prepared to give the deal the proper amount of attention. Again, the lead was the heart jack, but South ducked in dummy. He had reasoned that if hearts broke 4-3, he would have no problems, but if they were 5-2 with East holding the heart ace and West the diamond ace, the hearts needed to be blocked before the opponents could set them up. Right he was. And note that if the red aces were switched, West would get a cheap trick, but the contract would not be jeopardized since West would not have a re-entry.

Declarer's line would lose if West had led from a heart holding of A-J-10-9-6 and held the diamond ace, but South correctly reckoned that had that been the case, West would surely have overcalled at his first turn.

ANSWER: Declarer has suggested six clubs and only three spades (or he would have bid spades at his previous turn), while your partner rates to have only two or three small hearts.
My instinct would be to lead the diamond eight — the heart lead seems too likely to give up our side's trick in that suit.

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old daughter married her high school sweetheart whom she has been with for nine years. He was unfaithful to her while they were dating. They have been married a year now, and he has been unfaithful several more times during their married life.

She has left him twice.
The second time she filed for divorce, but he talked her into taking him back. He promises to be faithful to her now.

They are so young, and I hate to see her live a life with a man who is a cheater.
There are no children, and my daughter has a college education. Abby, my question is: After repeated cheating, do men ever become faithful husbands?

— SICK WITH WORRY
IN MONTANA
DEAR SICK WITH WORRY: Because your son-in-law continued being unfaithful to your daughter more than once, I seriously doubt that he's going to quit. When a man — or woman — forms a pattern of cheating, it rarely stops. I hope your daughter understands that BEFORE having children.

DEAR
Jeanne
Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My 6-year-old daughter "Kaylee"
recently spent a weekend with her grandparents.
While she was there, they bought her several gifts.

Today her grandmother called and asked to have one of the gifts back. A friend of hers would like to have the decorative musical instruments she gave to Kaylee.
Grandma's idea is to offer to buy something else for my daughter and "trade."

I don't know how to handle this. I can't imagine asking someone to return a present I had given him or her. Kaylee loves the instruments and has been playing with them every day since she received them.
However, I think her grandma (my stepmother) will be upset if I don't go along with her plan. Abby, help!

— AGHAST IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR AGHAST: Once a gift is given, it belongs to the person who received it. Of course, your stepmother can offer your daughter the idea of a "trade." However, if Kaylee isn't keen on the idea, then you must tell Grandma her idea went over like a lead balloon and her friend is out of luck.

DEAR ABBY: It will soon be that time of year when adult children will wrack their brains to find Christmas gifts for their elderly parents. Two years ago, my daughter gave me the gift of a lifetime — my pets' lives.

Knowing how much my dog and cats mean to me since I live alone, she and my son-in-law called to say that instead of giving me another knickknack for Christmas, my birthday or Mother's Day, they would pay all my veterinary bills for the life of each pet. It was a welcome surprise and a special, thoughtful gift.

Pets bring companiship and comfort to those of us who live alone on fixed incomes. Knowing they will have the proper veterinary care is, indeed, the gift of a lifetime. Even if you can't assume all the costs of your parents' pets, chipping in on holidays would help a lot.

— APPRECIATIVE
MOM IN ILLINOIS

DEAR APPRECIATIVE MOM: I agree, and that's why I'm printing your letter.
With so many people feeling stressed economically, your letter may provide the "purr-fect?" solution to what to get for an older relative.

Get the habit..
