BOISE – The surveillance video from the overhead cameras shows Hanni Elabed being beaten by a fellow inmate in an Idaho prison, managing to bang on a prison guard station window, pleading for help. Behind the glass, correctional officers look on, when the attacker sits down to rest, and no one stops him when he resumes the beating.

Videos of the attack obtained by The Associated Press show officers watching the beating for several minutes. ## Jerome woman died Saturday

By Amy Huddleston Times-News writer

Noted Magic Valley historian and author Virginia Ricketts died Saturday at age 85.

Ricketts, of Jerome, played a prominent role in documenting area history through her books and work with other historians. Her friends and counterparts said Tuesday that her efforts to bring Idaho history to life will be greatly Ricketts served as Jerome County deputy clerk and as county clerk in the 1970s, which sparked her interest in the little details that shaped the area, she said in a previous interview with the Times-News.

She and her husband, Clair who died in 2009 - helped found the Jerome County Historical Society, its Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum and the Friends of Stricker Ranch.

Friend and current curator of the Jerome County Historical Museum, Peg Roberson, said that without Ricketts' efforts, Jerome would probably not boast a museum.

"I was hoping she could celebrate with us in our new building." Roberson said. "I'm going to miss her smile and her don't-give-up."

Ricketts wrote three books: "Then and Now in Southern Idaho," "The History of the Northside, the First 75 Years," and "Shoshone Falls the Magnificent Spectacle." She also authored a series of articles about local history for the Times-News.

Ricketts taught a local history class through the College of Southern Idaho's community education program and gave various tours around the Magic Valley.

Retired history professor Jim Gentry said Ricketts was fascinated with the possibilities of local history because of her time spent as Jerome county clerk.

"She brought an enthusiasm to local history, which is really important," Gentry said. "Virginia

"Seinfeld," there was a character named Mr. Lippman whose politeness drove him to bankruptcy.

The owner of a publishing company that was about to go down for the third time, he found a Japanese businessman willing to bail him out.

Trouble was, Mr. Lippman had a cold and was spewing viruses right, left and sideways. Out of the goodness of his heart, he declined to shake hands with his venture capitalist benefactor who, offended, swiftly called off the deal.

So Lippman moved on to his next career: making muffin stumps.

Nobody's that honest. I'm in the fourth week of a cold that has morphed into bronchitis, and I've never stopped glad-handing everyone I meet.

Yes, I wash my hands, as public health experts advise. Notwithstanding, I know I'm about to put perfect strangers through the same upper respiratory hell I've just experienced.

My mother-in-law, who is a microbiologist specializing in the viruses, explained it to me.

Rhinovirus, the microscopic critter responsible for the common cold, is one of the most contagious pathogens known to science. Some rhinoviruses bind with surface receptors in your nose and throat within 15 minutes of exposure.

You remember your mother telling you that after the third day of a cold you aren't contagious anymore? Mom was a gifted storyteller.

anyone - and I do mean anybody — with who you come into close contact can get sick.

So what do we humans do about that?

We carry around handkerchiefs - Typhoid Mary in Madapolam linen – in our hip pockets or our handbags, where it's usually just the perfect temperature to incubate rhinoviruses. A study done a couple of decades ago showed that some rhinoviruses can survive three launderings in bleach.

But more remarkably still, we go to work sick.

My stepdaughter is employed at a Boise call center at which there's no such thing as paid sick leave. If you're ill, you have to take unpaid time off and then you must bring a note from your doctor attesting that you weren't faking it.

As a consequence, from November to April everybody who works there is sick all the time. Imagine what that does for productivity.

In classical times, those ill with contagious diseases essentially segregated themselves from society. They kept themselves and their handkerchiefs to themselves, crying "unclean" to all the uninfected who drew near.

They either lived or they died, but they did their darndest not to create fresh corpses.

All airlines flying to U.S. to get watch list information

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - All 197 airlines that fly to the U.S. are now collecting names, genders and birth dates of passengers so the government can check them against terror watch lists before they fly, the Obama administration announced

Tuesday. Getting all air carriers that travel to or through the U.S. to provide this information marks a milestone in the government's counterterrorism efforts and completes one of the 9/11 Commission's recommendations. The program, called Secure Flight, has been delayed for years because of privacy concerns and went through three versions before it was approved. It's designed to give U.S. authorities more time to identify and remove suspected terrorists from flights and reduce instances when passengers are mistaken for people on terror watch lists. Misidentification of passengers has been one of the biggest inconveniences in post-Sept. 11 air travel, and widely known for putting thousands of innocent travelers and well-known figures like former Sen. Ted Kennedy, through extensive searching and questioning before they were allowed to Previously, airlines have been responsible for checking the passenger lists against terror watch lists. But the airlines did not have any information other than a name. Now the screening is done by the Transportation Security Administration.

Heralding a new era of divided government, President Obama and congressional Republicans pledged warily to seek common ground on tax cuts and reduced spending Tuesday in their first meeting since tumultuous midterm elec-

"The American people did not vote for gridlock. They didn't vote for unyielding partisanship. They're demanding cooperation and they're demanding progress," the president told reporters, referring to elections that gave the GOP control of the House and a stronger say in the Senate.

Back at the Capitol after the meeting, Boehner said, "I think that spending more time will help us find some common ground," and he credited Obama with opening the session by saying he had not reached out enough in the past to Republican

Even so, there was little or no attempt to minimize the differences that divided the parties during the election campaign, including a disagreement on legislation to extend Bush-era tax cuts due to expire at year's end.

"It is the view of 100 percapital blend of substance cent of Senate Republicans, and style, offering a chance and a number of Senate House Democrats as well ... that we Speaker-in-waiting John ought to treat all taxpayers Boehner and Senate GOP the same," McConnell told Obama and most in one another's presence Democrats, by contrast, despite their obvious policy want to extend existing tax differences and history of cuts to all workers with family incomes under $250,000 but allow them to expire for those at higher levels.

In a sign of urgency, Obama and leaders of both parties appointed a small group to begin talks immediately on resolving the issue so lawmakers can approve a compromise before wrapping up their work. The White House said late Tuesday that the group would meet for the first time Wednesday.

One possible compromise is for Democrats to agree to extend the tax cuts for all, and for Republicans to drop their insistence that the lower tax rates be made permanent. An extension for a few years would allow both sides to claim victory while limiting the cost to the government at a time when deficit reduction is a major priority of both

Officials said there was relatively little discussion of another major issue confronting lawmakers in the current postelection session, the need for a new spending bill so the government can run without interruption.

BOISE — Idaho wildlife officials say they are investigating former gubernatorial candidate Rex Rammell for illegally killing an elk in eastern Idaho.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game says Rammell placed an invalid hunting tag to an elk he was found dragging behind a swowmobile in the Tex Creek Wildlife Management Area Tuesday morning.

refusing to accept a citation. Rammell ran in the Republican primary for Governor this year and two years ago as an

Cassia patrons can invest in tomorrow at today's prices

hy wouldn't some of Idaho's most frugal taxpayers jump at the chance to take advantage of what the Cassia County School District is proposing?

On Thursday, the district will ask taxpayers to approve a $41.5 million bond issue to fund facility improvements.

Construction costs and interest rates are lower now than in 2008, when the district tried basically the same proposal and voters rejected it. And Idaho's Bond Levy Equalization Program will repay 17 percent of the bond, while the federal government will cover 32 percent of its interest. The district will also be eligible for at least $10 million at zero interest through a state program.

Long story short: If Cassia patrons don't accept this proposal, they'll pay a lot more for the same improvements in the not very distant a new computer lab.

Projects funded by the bond would include a new Raft River High School with improved athletics and agriculture facilities, and an upgrade to the auditorium and library in Malta.

Oakley is scheduled for a new junior high school to be added to its high school, along with new athletics facilities. A music room would be remodeled and the shop area would be doubled.

Albion Elementary School would receive upgraded heating and ventilation systems.

In Burley, two new elementary schools would be built and Mountain View Elementary School would become an alternative school and central office. The district has already purchased a total of 28 acres in Burley to build new schools on.

Dworshak Elementary School in Burley would receive a heating upgrade, while both Dworshak and White Pine elementary schools would receive new student drop-off areas.

An expanded automotive bay would be built at Cassia Regional Technical Center. The tab: $2.87 per month on residential property worth $100,000. Yes, it's a tough economy. But a significant portion of the funding would come from sources other than taxpayers. Cassia patrons were wise enough to opt for a consolidated school district more than a halfcentury ago. That was a visionary concept that made truly efficient government possible. Simply put, the Cassia district provides quality education using economies of scale that simply aren't possible in most surrounding districts. It's one of the models for the future of public education in Idaho. On Thursday, voters will get a chance to endorse a more efficient way of government.

5 myths about reducing the deficit

udgets may be boring, Budgets may be boring but the stakes before us are exceedingly high. As we go about reducing the deficit, who will pay which taxes? How will we defend our country? And how will we treat our elderly? Unfortunately, questionable thinking and outright distortions by critics from across the political spectrum are getting in the way of these and other difficult decisions.

1. The United States is on the verge of a fiscal crisis. Not really. Greece faced a fiscal crisis earlier this year when it had to slash its deficit immediately or risk capital flight and economic collapse. Ireland is in the same straits now, and Portugal may soon be headed that way. The United States faces a very different situation. Long-term interest rates on government debt are low. Investors are not fleeing U.S. capital markets; instead, America continues to be a magnet for capital from around the world.

Of course, the lack of an imminent crisis hardly means there is no problem. If our current policies continue, by 2020 net interest payments on the national debt will exceed $1 trillion, 20 percent of federal revenues, annually — enough for rating agencies to downgrade the quality of U.S. debt, which in turn would raise borrowing costs and increase the deficit further.

Even in the absence of a crisis or a downgrade, the effects of persistent deficits are substantial. The International Monetary Fund has found that for every 10 percentage-point increase in the national debt relative to the size of the overall economy, economic growth in an industrialized country will fall by 0.15 percentage points.

2. The deficit commissions should propose reforms that are politically viable.

No solution to this problem is going to be politically popular. But even if Congress disregards the current proposals, dismissing them as politically unfeasible, that will not mean the commissions' efforts will have failed.

William

Gale

By publicly proposing deficit solutions, these commissions already have fulfilled their main function: to start a serious national conversation.

3. Social Security has a surplus, so it shouldn't be cut.

Supporters of Social Security argue that the program's 2010 surplus, combined with its projected 27-year solvency, should exempt it from the budget ax. But ruling out cuts is a bad idea. First, Social Security faces a long-term deficit. And even if the program were running a longterm surplus, the simple arithmetic of the overall fiscal situation dictates that everything - everything should be on the table.

Simply reducing earmarks; limiting waste, fraud and abuse; or cutting back on government workers won't come close to solving the problem. Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, defense and net interest payments typically account for 70 percent of federal spending and are on course to account for 80 percent by 2020. Any serious effort on the spending side needs to address each of these items.

4. We can balance the budget without raising taxes.

Although it is mathematically possible to balance the budget without raising taxes, it is impossible in a political sense.

Budget discipline works only when it is imposed on both sides of the ledger. In 1990 and 1993, the last time we faced a serious fiscal crunch, Congress did just that, slashing spending and raising taxes. In contrast, in 1981 and 2001, massive tax cuts did not lead to reduced spending, despite the hopes of those who espouse the "starve the beast" theory of fiscal reform. Instead, the tax cuts were accompanied by big increases in spending, thus boosting the deficit from both sides. The logic is clear: If some politicians reward their constituents through tax cuts, other politicians will see no reason that they can't reward their own constituents through more spending.

5. A new short-term stimulus would be fiscally irresponsible.

A plan proposed by economist Alice Rivlin and former Sen. Pete Domenici envisions higher near-term deficits as a means of economic stimulus, to be followed by cuts down the line. Some may see this as Washington-style "business as usual" — always putting off cuts until tomorrow but it makes sense economically. With the recovery stalling, spending more and taxing less now to get the economy going is perfectly consistent with the need for medium- and long-term fiscal discipline. A strong economy can do the budget a lot of good by boosting tax revenues and reducing spending on unemployment benefits and other need-based programs.

William Gale is a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution and co-director of the Urban-Brookings Tax Policy Center. He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

he international controversy generated by leaks from German journalist Peter Seewald's book-length interview with Pope Benedict XVI - officially issued last week as Light of the World – may be a publicist's dream, but what does it really signify?

Benedict's thoughts on the morality of condom usage don't go nearly as far as those of us who feel that the Roman Catholic Church's absolute prohibition of artificial contraception is a moral disaster would like, but they push church doctrine a good bit further than the traditionalists want to acknowledge.

Here's the pope's controversial remark, which came in response to a question about the use of condoms to prevent the spread of AIDS in Africa: "There may be a basis in the case of some individuals, as perhaps when a male prostitute uses a condom, where this can be a first step in the direction of a moralization, a first assumption of responsibility, on the way toward recovering an awareness that not everything is allowed and that one cannot do whatever one wants."

If you're having difficulty

parsing that, there's no need to adjust your set. To understand what's being said, it's important to remember that Benedict is, in a formal academic sense, the most rigorously trained and sophisticated theologian to occupy the throne of Peter in many centuries. It's also important to recall that, in Catholic moral reasoning, intention is crucial when it comes to assessing the quality of an individual act.

Theology may be - as was said in the High Middle Ages — the "queen of the sciences," but unlike physical science, it does not proceed by experimental proofs. Thus, theologians love thought problems such as the one the pope posed and answered here.

All the back and forth over translations, including whether he meant to make a point that applied only to gay sex, is irrelevant, particularly because he subsequently said through his Vatican spokesman that his point also applied equally to female and transsexual prostitutes. That point does not involve the permissibility of condom use per se; rather, the pontiff is arguing that if an HIV-positive person put on a condom so as not to infect a partner, the act could indicate the first moral stirrings of a desire to behave more responsibly.

The reason this remark, which must seem self-evidently sensible to most people, went off like a bomb among Catholics is that, for years, Catholic bishops, theologians and health care workers fighting sub-Saharan Africa's AIDS epidemic have urged such a view and received either stony silence or condemnation from Rome. In fact, as prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger ordered the suppression of a book by two Jesuit theologians arguing the morality of using condoms to halt AIDS transmission. In his remark. Benedict at the very least reopened the door to a discussion of the matter. That's obvious if you look at the actual question from Seewald that evoked the thought problem:

"On the occasion of your trip to Africa in March 2009, the Vatican's policy on AIDS once again became the target of media criticism. ... In Africa you stated that the church's traditional teaching has proven to be the only sure way to stop the spread of HIV. Critics, including critics from the church's own ranks, object that it is madness to forbid a high-risk population to use condoms."

Some clerics and Catholic health workers long have argued that telling HIVinfected patients, particularly those married to an uninfected partner, not to use condoms essentially turns normal conjugal relations into a suicide pact. These advocates may find new encouragement in Benedict's musings.

But for those who believe that Pope Paul VI's 1968 reaffirmation of the church's condemnation of artificial contraception, including condoms, began a process of estrangement that fundamentally alienated millions of Catholics from the church, there's really nothing new in Benedict's remarks.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

Obama's rebound may turn on picking a fight

hese days, everyone has advice for President Barack Obama. Some urge compromise with the Republicans. Others demand he fight back. Actually, both camps are right - and wrong. To survive, revive and even prevail, Obama must do two things at once. Sometimes, he must work with Republicans. Other times he must pick sharp, partisan fights that highlight his agenda and isolate foes. So far, Obama has proven adept at neither. A president most comfortable in muted tones must learn to govern in Technicolor.

In any White House, it's no fun after a shellacking.

Michael Waldman

Harry Truman lost the Congress in his first midterm in 1946. Richard Nixon never controlled Congress in the first place, but lost many seats in 1970 and was considered a sure loser for reelection. Ronald Reagan lost 28 House seats, was crushingly unpopular, and faced 10.8 percent unemployment. Clinton, of course, lost both houses of Congress in a sharp repudiation.

These chief executives found a way to reassert leadership and win reelection. How?

All pressed forward with issues where it was actually easier to succeed with opposition help. For Truman, it was the Cold War policy against the Soviet Union. For Nixon, it was domestic environmental regulation and detente. Only Nixon could go to China, but it helped to have Democrats cheering. Reagan immediately embraced a bipartisan plan, created with Democratic House Speaker Tip O'Neill, to save Social Security.

But then every one of these presidents drew sharp, partisan lines of conflict. As we all know, Truman launched his whistle stop tour to denounce the "do nothing Congress." He called lawmakers into special session and demanded they pass their own platform, then mocked them when they failed. Nixon stepped up cultural assaults on behalf of his "silent majority."

Clinton vetoed the Republican budget on behalf of "Medicare, Medicaid, education and the environment." His standoff with House Speaker Newt Gingrich during the government shutdown boosted him nine points in the polls and propelled him to re-election.

These were not muddled attempts to find common ground. Nor were they blunderbuss opposition. At any moment these successful chief executives chose clear cooperation — or picked a fight. Observers were rarely confused about which was which.

Does Obama see this? Early omens are mixed.

For starters, few of his own major goals will be better accomplished with Republican help. Education reform may thrill conservatives more than teachers unions, but that issue rarely rises to the top tier of federal concerns. Long-term deficit reduction or tax reform may unite Obama with the opposition party, but neither has been a core part of his public philosophy.

In coming months, Obama will have to find a way to seem enthusiastic about long-term deficit reduction even as he urges short-term action on jobs. And he will need to unveil both personas with gusto at his State of the Union Address in January.

Hitting back at North Korea

Sung-Yoon

Korea's attack last week on the island of Yeonpyeong was the first time since the Korean War that is has directed artillery fire on South Korean land, targeting civilians and homes, it follows a long pattern of calculated acts designed to compel South Korea and the United States to resort to crisis management; that is, to reward the North for little more than temporarily backing down. The response by Seoul and Washington this time should be to impose a palpable penalty on

Pyongyang. North Korea, by its own choice, is unique in the world. It is the world's sole communist dynasty, the sole industrialized-cumliterate but famine-stricken society, the most militarized country, arguably the most systematic violator of human rights and the most isolated economy. Yet, this nation of singular category — a "G-1" − has again, with another deadly attack on South Korea, managed to make itself relevant to the world's major nations. To ascribe Pyongyang's actions primarily to puerility or perversity would be to repeat the errors of taking a one-dimensional, patronizing view of the Kim Jong Il regime. The North Korean leadership, as outlandish as it is, resorts to periodic confrontations based on a careful calculation of potential costs and benefits. And very little in the response from South Korea or the United States to past offenses would strike the Kim regime as a deterrent to further provocation.

In fact, if the past is any guide, Pyongyang's aggressive actions have a high probability of pushing its adversaries to engage the provoker even more vigorously.

It's time to abandon the patronizing view that North Korean strategists merely "react" to signals from Seoul or Washington, and instead focus on Pyongyang's unique points of vulnerability. The Kim clan must cope with four systemic problems: dynastic succession, an inherently challenging task for a regime beset by severe economic stresses; the long-term dependency on foreign aid because of the inability of its economy to feed the population; the dependence on illicit international transactions to maintain Pyongyang's palace economy that supplies the elites, which means having to commit resources to evade U.S.-led financial sanctions; and the increasing information flow into > tarian control of the public. The only way to end North Korea's cycle of provocation-negotiationcompensation is to apply concerted force on these four pressure points. These systemic weaknesses should give those who wish to exercise power over Pyongyang substantial leverage. What has been lacking is the will the country, which undermines the regime's totalito push that lever in full force for fear of destabilizing the Kim regime.

They should ask: Why is the continued survival of this great outlier to these global goals really necessary?

That's a question that even China may in time come to consider in earnest. As North Korea continues to march to its own tune against a concerted show of force by South Korea and the United States, the choice for all the regional powers will become clear. They can go on delivering

Cut-off of jobless aid may hamper economic growth

By Paul Wiseman Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON-If Congress lets unemployment benefits expire this week for the long-term unemployed, they won't be the only ones to feel the pain. The overall economy would suffer, too.

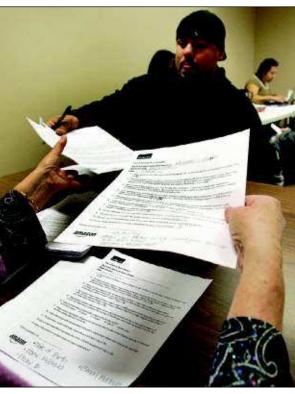

Unemployment benefits help drive the economy because the jobless tend to spend every dollar they get, pumping cash into businesses. A cut-off of aid for millions of people unemployed for more than six months could squeeze a fragile economy, analysts say. Among the consequences they envision over the next year:

- Annual economic growth could fall by one half to nearly 1 percentage
- Up to 1 million more people could lose their
- Hundreds of thousands would fall into poverty.

Analyst Mark Miller of William Blair & Company figures that, in particular, discount retailers like Dollar General and Family Dollar will see their revenue pinched by a couple of percentage points next year if extended unemployment benefits expire.

In July 2008, Congress began extending unemployment benefits, which can now last for up to a record 99 weeks: 26 weeks of regular benefits from the states, plus up to 73 weeks in federal aid in states with high unemployment rates. As of last week, about half the states offered the maximum 99 weeks of benefits. The extended federal benefits will start phasing out on Wednesday if Congress doesn't act.

The long-term unemployed — those out of work for more than six months - hit a record-high 6.8 million in May this year. Those people represented 46 percent of all unemployed Americans. That's the highest such proportion on record dating to Unemployment peaked at 10.1 percent in October 2009. It's been stuck at 9.6 percent the past three months.

At its peak in the first week of this year, just over 12 million people were receiving unemployment benefits - the most on records dating to 1986. The Labor Department estimates that if Congress lets the aid run out, nearly 2 million people will lose their benefits Christmas.

Commission's new deficit plan still eyes Social Security trims

By Andrew Taylor and Jim Kuhnhenn Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The co-chairmen of President Barack Obama's deficit commission are sticking with politically explosive proposals to raise the Social Security retirement age and curb benefit increases in a revised plan to wrestle the deficit under control.

The new plan by Erskine Bowles and Alan Simpson, to be publicly unveiled today, faces an uphill slog because of proposals to curb Social Security and Medicare costs, curtail a breaks like the deduction for mortgage interest and almost double the federal tax on a gallon of gas.

Instead of scanning the want ads, she decided to start her own business — Lizzy's

The business has taken her to the lush green hillsides of Colombia where she participated in a cupping contest. It has outfitted a team of Third World soccer players in uniforms. And it's provided her customers with coffee blends and labels that are uniquely theirs.

The spark of ingenuity and perseverance that has made Roquet so successful can be found among dozens of food entrepreneurs ranging from Twin Falls to Ketchum who have thought out of the box to get that extra edge. Here's a look at four of them.

Liz Roquet

Roquet has had a love affair with coffee dating back to the days she still drank Kool-Aid. She recalls mixing the drip coffee her father brewed in Pendl's Pastries with chocolate and topping it with peaks of whipped cream.

When she started treating friends to fresh coffee made from beans she roasted in her home roaster, she started getting questions: How is it that freshly roasted coffee is better than what you buy at the store? What's the secret to a good latte?

"I love talking about coffee and educating others about it, and I thought I could do that in my business," she said. "I want people to realize that coffee can taste so much better than junk in a can."

Roquet starts by selecting favorite beans from an importer she trusts to buy top-notch beans. She then experiments with them in her roaster, which is the size of a water heater, to determine what degree of roasting makes a particular bean taste best.

She holds free tastings from noon to 4 p.m. Wednesdays at her shop at 971-4 N. Main St. across from Ketchum's Knob Hill Inn, showing people how the coffee they're tasting goes from scratch to finished product.

Her coffees are also available online at

Adding liquor to mix takes the cake

By Michelle Locke

For The Associated Press

BERKELEY, Calif. – Classic cake-making calls for eggs, flour, butter and sugar. But some bakers are juicing up the flavor by throwing liquor into the mix.

Or, as Terry Lee Stone, co-author of the recently published "Booze Cakes" cookbook puts it, "Baking is fun and drinking is fun - let's combine them!"

Stone and Krystina Castella, friends from teaching at a design college in Pasadena, started working on the book after Stone was inspired when making an old cake recipe of her mother's that called for adding alcohol.

But the concoctions they came up with for their book go well beyond the typically tame "add a tablespoon of kirsch" school of cooking with liquor.

"It was really important to us that you tasted the alcohol,"

Castella says. "When we first developed the idea, there really wasn't much out there. We found people adding different liquors and alcohols to food, but not much in baking."

The recipes they did find generally used liquor as a substitute for vanilla. "So we would find (recipes calling for) one teaspoon of rum. One teaspoon of rum is not going to really give it a rum flavor. You might need 1/4 cup of rum and then soak it in rum and having rum frosting."

Castella and Stone have invited readers to explore variations on their themes and bloggers have enthusiastically taken to it, posting their results on the "Booze Cakes" Facebook page.

In fact, there seems to be a surge of interest in baking with libations. A second book, "The Boozy Baker," by the aptly named Lucy Baker, also was released this year.

Baker sees a general trend toward slow-paced activities like baking that she views as a reaction to a high-speed, 24-7 world. "People are looking for ways to relax, to kick back, to reconnect. Having a speakeasy inspired cocktail is one way to do that and another way to do ing that it really worked well." The alcohol enhanced the flavor and made dessert "seem a little more indulgent."

Her book covers pies, cookies and other desserts as well as cakes, and recipes include a margarita meringue pie with a boozy hard cider kick.

BRANDY APPLE CHAI CAKE

Chai is a rich, spiced drink from India that lends deep flavors and aromas to this easy apple cake from Krystina Castella and Terry Lee Stone's cookbook, "Booze Cakes."

Most grocers carry chai concentrates that can be diluted with milk and heated for a comforting beverage. If you can't find the chai cream liqueur called for in this recipe, substitute an equal amount of the concentrate. Start to finish: 11/2 hours. Servings: 10.

For the cake:

11/2 cups canola oil

2 cups sugar 3 eggs

2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour 1/8 teaspoon ground cloves

11/4 teaspoons cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon nutmeg

1 teaspoon baking soda 3/4 teaspoon salt

11/4 cups walnuts, coarsely chopped

3 1/4 cups apples, peeled, cored, and chopped 1/4 cup brandy

For the chai glaze:

2 cups powdered sugar

1/4 Voyant Chai cream liqueur OR 2 tablespoons heavy cream mixed with 2 tablespoons chai concentrate Heat the oven to 325 degrees. Coat a 10-inch Bundt cake pan with cooking spray and flour (or baking spray).

In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to beat the oil and sugar until thick and smooth. Beat in the eggs one at a time. Mix in the flour, cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg, baking soda and salt. Stir in the walnuts, apples and brandy. Pour into the prepared pan. Bake for 1 hour and 15 minutes, or until a knife inserted at the center comes out clean.

Let the cake cool in the pan for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, prepare the glaze. In a small bowl, whisk together all ingredients. Remove the cake from the pan by inverting onto a plate

This booze infused take on the classic New England dessert from Lucy Baker's "The Boozy Baker" gets extra kick by simmering the apples in hard cider before baking them into the crust. She says raisins also can be added. And if you prefer, beer or lambic (Belgian raspberry beer) can be substituted for the hard cider.

Start to finish: 4 hours (1 hour active). Servings: 8.

For the crust:

2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour

2 tablespoon granulated hard cider, divided sugar

3/4 cup (1 1/2 sticks) unsalted butter, well chilled and cut into 1/2-inch cubes

Roll the second half of the dough into a 12-inch circle and transfer it to the top of the pie. Pinch the edges of the top and bottom crusts together. Trim any excess dough, leaving 1/2-inch overhang. Crimp the edges decoratively with a fork and cut three 2-inch vents in the center of the top crust. Transfer the pie to the freezer and chill for 1 hour, or until it is very cold and the crust is firm to the touch.

Heat the oven to 425 degrees and arrange a rack in the lower third.

Brush the top of the pie with the heavy cream and sprinkle with the raw sugar, if using. Bake the pie for 20 minutes, then reduce the oven temperature to 375 degrees and bake for another 40 minutes, or until the crust is golden and the filling is bubbling. If the edges of the pie brown too quickly, cover them with foil.

DIY hot cocoas — not much harder, a lot better

By J.M. Hirsch Associated Press writer

Admittedly, crafting your own hot cocoa is slightly more work than popping open a can of powder and mixing it with hot milk (or worse ... water).

But it is so worth the effort. If nothing else, at least doctor the powdered stuff with a dash of cinnamon, a spoonful of marshmallow Fluff, a spoonful of whipped cream or a quick grate of nutmeg (or ever better, all of them).

If you are willing to go to a bit extra trouble, there are numerous ways to crank out a fantastic cocoa that will still have you snuggled in front of the fire in no

Why cookies spread

The Washington Post

I just made the worst batch of chocolate chip cookies of my baking

All the ingredients were at room temperature, and the batter chilled in the refrigerator a day before baking. Then, they all just melted on the sheets; they were thin and turned into one glob after I (optimistically) stored them in a container.

What did I do wrong?

A. The main culprit of spreading cookies is overbeating the butter and sugar. Excessive whipping incorporates too many air pockets into the dough; they expand during baking and can cause the cookies to spread. So if a recipe says to "cream the butter and sugar," mix them only until thoroughly blended (unless the recipe says otherwise).

Be sure also to measure flour correctly; different people use various methods for measuring, and in a cookbook, the author will usually note in the fore matter the method that was used when creating the recipes.

Another cause of spreading cookies is greased baking sheets. Parchment paper or a silicone baking mat tend to help cookies hold their shape and not spread out.

Turning cake pops into fame in the blogosphere

By Michele Kayal For The Associated Press

When Angie Dudley launched her baking blog three years ago she never imagined it would lead to an appearance on Martha Stewart and an invitation to the Emmys.

And now she has a new accomplishment to add to the list - a spot on the New York Times Best Seller list for her new book based on that blog, "Cake Pops: Tips, Tricks and Recipes for More than 40 Irresistible Mini Treats" (Chronicle Books, 2010).

The Atlanta-based graphic designer – better known online "Bakerella" - began blogging as a way to save the photos and recipes for her cake balls, bite-sized confections made by mixing crumbled cake and frosting. One day, she shaped a cake ball into a cupcake, put it on a stick and posted the photo on her blog. The image went viral.

"People saw them and went crazy." Dudley says. "Everyone who had a blog and liked cupcakes posted the picture of those cupcake lollipops."

cake pops that looked like smiley faces, lambs, graduation caps, soccer balls, puppies and other insanely cute items. Today, she says, her blog gets nearly 3 million page views a month.

to quit her day job, she does have some advice for fellow food bloggers who aspire to mega-fame:

- Be nice. "I spent a lot of to prevent this. time in the beginning answering every single person that left a comment,"
- Take good photos. "Most of the time people don't read," she says, "they just look at the pictures."
- community site, like Flickr. If you post your photos on group sites, Dudley says, people will follow them to your blog. "I didn't know was the result," she says.
- Comment on the blogs of others and they'll start called for by the cake mix) coming to yours to do the same. "I'll see a name several times on my blog and I'll go see their site, and if it melts interests me I'll hang out there," she says.

Chasing your buttercream dreams

The Washington Post

I love really sweet, thick vanilla buttercream icings, the kind you get from a bakery. What makes them taste so good, and how can I recreate them at home? Also, do they get their luscious taste from lard, trans fats, coconut oils etc.? If so, is there a yummy healthier alternative?

I've tried many recipes, but most of my icings come out a bit grainy. I'd love to hear what you have to say and any tips you have about the ultimate vanilla butter-

Matt Lewis and Renato Poliafito: We hear you when it comes to sweet and lovely buttercream. It is the stuff of dreams.

Before we get into what makes a good buttercream, let's go over what makes a bad frosting/icing so we know what to avoid.

Very, very rarely would we advocate a recipe for frosting that calls for just butter and confectioner's sugar. The latter is used all too frequently in some bakeries, and if it is used, it is usually piled on. The effect of this frosting is a sugar bomb without elegance.

It can be used sparingly, and it can be used on occasion (sheet cakes come to mind, though you have to spread it super thin). We don't much play with it these days.

Now, if a recipe calls for some amalgam of sugar, butter and shortening, we suggest you burn the book. We have yet to find any icing that shortening can improve. If a recipe calls for sugar, butter and cream cheese, I suggest you keep it away from me. It is usually way too addictive, and and I am embarrassed to admit that I love it; but again, use it in small doses. The rich and velvety recipes you refer to are probably either a Swiss meringue type frosting, a whipped ganache or some variation thereof (i.e., a seven-minute frosting). Buttercream is a fairly generic term these days and can be used to describe most cooked frostings.

Some amazing boiled frostings are butter-free (and probably should not be called buttercreams), yet they still make a nice marshmallow-y type of frosting. Buttercream recipes usually are smooth, not as sweet and, well, buttery. True, they take more prep time, but they are well worth the effort. I have converted many "I hate frosting" people to believers. They just need the right frosting.

Would it be horrible to suggest using our base frosting recipe? We promise you it is heaven on a cake. There are many others that are just as good (just Google "Swiss meringue frosting" for a few ideas), but this one is quite hard to beat. Our frosting starts out almost like a roux and turns into a heavily adaptable buttercream in just 20 to 30 minutes. You can add flavors via extracts or liqueurs or caramel, and you can color the frosting with gels with Happy decorating.

Matt Lewis and Renato Poliafito have written two cookbooks, including their latest, "Baked Explorations" (Stewart, Tabori and Chang, 2010).

If you've strolled past the dairy case lately, you might have noticed that it has grown to ranch-size proportions. Dozens of products are labeled "milk," and they spill over onto the nonrefrigerated shelves.

Gone are the days when selecting a carton of milk was simple: whole or skim.

Just look at the choices. Low-fat hemp milk for your cornflakes? Omega-3 organic in your coffee? How about some grass-fed goat milk?

For their part, milk producers are not happy with all the beverages that call themselves "milk" on shelves. The nation's dairy farmers have asked the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to require nondairy products to be labeled something other than "milk?" "We're not saying products that come from grains, seeds, nuts and so on shouldn't be on the shelves, only that they be labeled 'artificial milk' or 'imitation milk;" says Chris Galen, spokesman for the National Milk Producers Federation. (The federation has a Facebook page devoted to the effort, called "They Don't Got Milk.") A spokesman for the Texas Association of Dairymen says that although he doesn't see the proliferation of "milk" products as a positive development, he tries to look on the bright side. "It's almost like flattery — they want to be related to the natural goodness of milk, but milk alone has it," Darren Turley

Meanwhile, the FDA recently responded to the milk producers federation with a letter saying that the agency is currently focusing its efforts elsewhere.

In any case, for consumers, sorting through the health claims is enough to make you feel cowed. You could spend a whole morning reading labels.

We've taken a look at 11 popular "milk" beverages. We've noted their major ingredients, whether they're a dairy product, calories, calcium, cholesterol, price and what registered dietitians have to say about them.

WHAT DIETITIANS ARE SAYING

We asked two dietitians about milk and your health. Here are answers from Emily Haeussler, a Fort Worth, Texas, nutrition counselor, and Lona Sandon, who is an assistant professor of clinical nutrition at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School-Dallas and a spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association. Both women are registered dietitians.

Any truth to the idea that cow's milk isn't good for people?

Reliable research doesn't support this idea, Sandon says.

Q Does drinking milk increase congestion in the nasal passages? Some pediatricians say yes, but some research says milk

A"Some pediatricians say yes, but some self an unrefriger Why are some dairy milk products sold on unrefrigerated store shelves? Won't they spoil?

No. The milk has been ultra-pasteurized, says Sandon, meaning heated to a very high temperature for a short time, so "there's nothing living in it to become rancid or sour." This type of milk has been sold in Europe for years, but it's a fairly new phenomenon in the States.

One brand offers three 8-ounce cartons of organic 2 percent for

"It's the milk industry's way of competing with soda and juice boxes" for space in lunch bags, Sandon says. But even this type of milk must be refrigerated after the container is opened.

Why can't some people tolerate cow's milk?

Two big reasons, says Sandon: lactose intolerance and milk allergy.

About 2 to 3 percent of the population has an immune-system reaction to milk. They may develop a rash, respiratory trouble or gastrointestinal problems like diarrhea or constipation. An alternative such as soy milk can work for them, although Sandon points out that a large number of people are allergic to soy. Lactose intolerance is different, and is caused by a lack of the lactase enzyme which is essential for digestion of lactose, the sugar found in milk.

How many people are lactose-intolerant?

"It's hard to get at," Sandon says. Some people have the prob-A lem only sometimes, she says. "Older adults sometimes lose the ability to tolerate. It may be a natural product of aging," Sandon says. People of any age who aren't accustomed to consuming milk may not produce as much lactase as if they drank milk regularly, she says. 'Some can tolerate small amounts with other foods, but not milk by itself. Milk such as Lactaid, with lactase enzymes added, can help the

Should people with lactose intolerance drink "raw" milk?

The term means the milk hasn't been pasteurized to kill germs,

A The term means the milk hash t been pasted 1250 to him general Sandon says. Many people who are otherwise lactose-intolerant do say they can tolerate raw milk. 'There might be some reason — maybe the bacteria in the milk help to break down lactose — but I don't recommend this because the potential for food-borne illness is higher, and for this reason it can't be sold across state lines," Sandon says. "Most health professionals say the trend toward unpasteurized dairy products isn't good. There was a reason, 50 or 60 years ago, that we started pasteurizing. That reason is the potential for illnesses caused by E. coli and salmonella."

Canyon Ridge tops Filer 54-50 in season-opener

By Stephen Meyers Times-News Writer

First-game jitters and sloppy offensive play were found in abundance, but the Riverhawks and Wildcats still put on a good show at Canyon Ridge High School Tuesday night.

Austin Thomas hit a crucial free throw with 1.8 seconds remaining to put the Riverhawks up by four and seal a 54-50 win for Canyon Ridge, putting a stop to a furious Filer comeback.

Trailing by seven with less than 10 seconds remaining, Filer's Austin Beard drove the lane and found Logan Beard for a layup. Logan Beard stole the inbounds pass and scored the easy two to bring Filer within 53-50.

Filer's meaningless fullcourt 3-point attempt fell well short after Thomas' free throw and Canyon Ridge promptly celebrated.

"It feels so good to get this first win," said CRHS guard Alex Ridgeway. "It's a big monkey off our back."

Canyon Ridge (1-0) didn't get its first win until midway through its inaugural season a year ago.

"We started to come along late last season and we were hoping we could use that momentum here to start this season," said Canyon Ridge coach Mike Ridgeway. "This is a great feeling."

Declo boys run past Oakley

DECLO — The Declo boys basketball team hit the ground running — literally.

Declo run-and-gunned Oakley out of the gym Tuesday in the seasonopener for both teams, winning 74-46.

points, five rebounds, three assists and three steals to lead Declo (1-0) to the nonconference rout. Declo did most its damage in the middle two quarters, scoring 24 and 29 points, respectively.

"The kids play so well together and they have that attitude to run that I really like," said Declo coach Dee Lewis. "It's almost reckless at times, but it causes other teams to play at a level they're not comfortable and gives us more possessions."

Oakley used its size advantage early as 20 of its first 26 points came in the paint. But Declo was quicker and bombed away the 3pointer — draining 9 of 19 for the game — to help open up a 15-point halftime lead.

Midway through the second quarter Declo began to pick up the pace, which carried over to the third quarter where Declo went on a 27-4

"They wanted to run and gun and they did and we didn't react to it, we let them," said Oakley coach Tyler Matlock. "We need to get back on defense. We stood around and watched."

Seth Baker scored 15 for Erik Henrickson had 16 Declo, while four other players scored eight or more.

> "The first quarter was a little shaky, but in the second half we really picked it up and played like we can." Baker said. "It's just get the rebound and go. We're a fast-paced team, we wear teams down and that's how we got our easy buckets. We're looking to share the ball a lot."

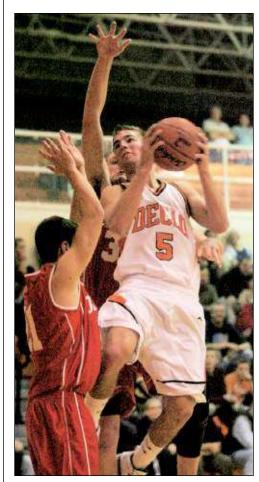

> Senior center Garrett Critchfield led Oakley with 15 points and seven rebounds and fellow center Eddie Setoki scored 14. "We knew that our posts > needed to play strong. We have to build on that, get better in the post and keep going there," said Matlock. Despite Oakley's size advantage inside, Declo

LeBron James not sure what to expect in return to Cleveland

By Tim Reynolds Associated Press writer

MIAMI - There's not much LeBron James can absolutely say about what awaits when he returns to Cleveland as an opponent on Thursday night.

Fun, weird, tough, draining. James cites them all as expectations.

He's likely right on each count, and who knows how many more ways the emotional gamut will swing on Thursday when the Miami Heat visit Cleveland, the city James scorned on July 8 when he announced in a nationally televised special that he was "taking my talents to South Beach."

It'll be James' first time back as a visitor, and Cavaliers fans have been waiting months to not welcome him home.

"It's going to be tough, but I'm there to win a basketball Tuesday's Heat practice and preparing for Wednesday's game against Detroit - almost forgotten given the magnitude of what looms Thursday. "I understand. I understand how passionate fans are about sports. I'm ready for whatever response game," James said after that I'm going to get. It's going to be very emotional."

Miami Heat forward LeBron James (6) returns to Cleveland tonight as the Heat visit the Cavaliers.

True, for all parties involved.

But the NBA might have helped James out a bit with this trip.

Because Miami plays at home Wednesday night, the Heat will not arrive in Cleveland until early Thursday morning. The team won't practice that day, just have meetings and a walkthrough at its hotel, which will be teeming with security - like always. They'll bus to the arena, play the game, head to the airport and leave for Miami.

No time to visit old haunts or old friends. A business trip, nothing more, nothing less, and James seems relieved by that.

"I think it's going to be very emotional for myself," James said. "I've got a lot of great memories in that city. # Buckner still out for CSI men

Eagles up to No. 16 in poll

By Mike Christensen Times-News writer

For the second straight week, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team could take the floor without its starting center.

Sophomore Kenny Buckner sat out last week's two wins for the Golden Eagles (9-1), who moved up two spots to No. 16 in this week's NJCAA Division I poll. Buckner had X-rays on a sore back on Monday and is sitting out practice as CSI prepares to host the Rocket Classic Thursday through Saturday.

"We're just trying to stabilize his back, get him to feel a little bit better," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "I think it's a situation where we'll manage it throughout the year, but with a bad back, you never know when that things going to act up."

Reserve guard Issiah Grayson also sat out last week as he continues to strengthen a surgically repaired knee. Grayson is questionable this week, but is more likely to play than Buckner, who is leading CSI in rebounding at 10.3 per game, while adding 13.0 points a night.

"Unless I see some dramatic improvement, we'll sit (Buckner) and try to get him ready for conference next week," said Gosar. CSI's first Scenic West Athletic Conference games are Dec. 10-11 at Salt Lake Community College and Snow College, respectively.

The 15-game league slate and the Region 18 Tournament are the real focus for the Eagles. That explains why Gosar, when asked if his team's No. 16

*A*LL 1 ight be more to Tom Brady's hair than eye can see

after all.

With his chiseled good looks. Super Bowl trophies and supermodel wife, the New England Patriots quarterback sure seems to have hit the genetic jackpot. According to one report, though, Brady is facing the same struggle as millions of ordinary Joes.

Hair loss.

The National Enquirer reported that Brady's car was spotted outside Leonard Hair Transplant Associates in Cranston, R.I., on Nov. 9. That would be the office of Dr. Robert Leonard, described on his website as "New England's foremost authority on hair restoration."

"Guvs just don't want to be bald," said Dr. Raymond Konior of Premiere Hair Restoration in Chicago. "Great heads of hair are perceived as being stronger people, better-looking people."

Leonard's office wouldn't confirm if Brady was a patient, saying in a statement that, to protect patients' privacy, "We don't comment on, confirm, deny or otherwise discuss matters related to our client list." But if Brady is having hair restoration, Konior said it's highly unlikely he's doing it with five weeks left in the regular season and the playoffs looming.

A call to Brady's agent, Don Yee, wasn't immediately returned. Hair restoration is a surgical procedure and, like any other, requires recovery time. While it varies by procedure and patient, it's usually at least a week.

New Mexico senator seeks football helmet review

SANTA FE, N.M. — New Mexico Sen. Tom Udall has

Take heart, guys. Tom Brady may not be perfect, investigate whether safety standards for football helmets are adequate to protect players from concussions and other head injuries. The Democratic senator made the request in a letter Tuesday to the commission's chairman. Udall serves on the U.S. Senate Commerce Committee, which oversees the commission. In his letter, Udall said manufacturers voluntarily adopt the current safety standard, which evaluates a helmet's ability to withstand a direct blow. But Udall said the standard doesn't assess whether a helmet is adequate to prevent concussions from hits that spin a player's head.

Udall also said the standard doesn't distinguish between helmets used by younger players or those for stronger professional players. Helmets used in the NFL — and NCAA or high school football, for that matter — are supposed to pass a test developed by the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment (NOCSAE), a nonprofit corporation. The group's website notes that it establishes "voluntary test standards," that "manufacturers test their own helmets" and that "NOCSAE does not possess a surveillance force to ensure compliance with the standards.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL Former North Idaho College player ineligible at Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana thought it finally had a 7-footer to compete in the Big Ten. Now the Hoosiers must fill a big void.

School officials said Tuesday that Martinique native and former North Idaho College player Guyasked the Consumer Product Safety Commission to Marc Michel had been declared ineligible by the NCAA after playing five games with a professional French club team in 2007-08. The school's appeal also was rejected because the committee determined Michel had accepted a professional contract and had enrolled in college in 2006, meaning he would not have enough time to regain his eligibility before his five-year college career ended after this season.

"For his amateurism issues, typically the penalty is to sit out one year," said Julie Cromer, Indiana's senior associate athletic director for compliance and administration. "We knew he had been over there for three years, so we spent a considerable amount of time trying to figure out what level of competition he was at and that sort of thing. He did many things right."

The ruling is a major blow to the resurgent Hoosiers who, at 6-0, are off to their best start since 2002-03.

U.S. awaits 2022 World Cup with big hopes for soccer

NEW YORK (AP) - As Americans celebrated the Fourth of July in 1988, a present arrived from Zurich: The World Cup was headed to the United States for the first time.

"The richest land in the world simply cannot be allowed to remain a blank spot on the world map of soccer any longer," Hermann Neuberger, president of West German soccer's governing body, said at the time.

Since that watershed 1994 World Cup the global game is now very much a part of the country's sports landscape. There's a national team that's played in six straight World Cups, three television networks that are pretty much all soccer, constant additionstill struggling to gain attention in a market dominated Baseball and the NBA.

Bidders promise another FIFA's executive committee awards the 2022 tournament to the United States when it votes Thursday in Zurich. Australia, Japan, Qatar and South Korea are the compe- have spent months lobbying as

"We've got all of the infrastructure in place, and it's extraordinary infrastructure, which allows us to focus on growing the game and using the World Cup to do that in the United States and have the U.S. become an important part of the global community in this," U.S. Soccer Federation President Sunil Gulati said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I think it changes the economics in a positive way for FIFA and other associations."

The 1994 World Cup transformed FIFA's business side. Names on the backs of players' jerseys?

It started in the U.S. Corporate tents? First made in America. All-Star teams and relentless promotion?

Ditto. Much of soccer has never suites ringing five levels - seen anything like Dallas Cowboys Stadium, with its 50-yard-wide video screen hovering above field, 10,000 club seats and 300 luxury the expensive seats alone just about match the 20,224 total capacity of Portsmouth's Fratton Park.

Hard to compare that with those in the original bid presented by the U.S. 22 years ago, which included such antiques as Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium in Annapolis, Md., John F. Kennedy Stadium Philadelphia and Palmer Stadium in Princeton, N.J.

"We've got all of the infrastructure in place, and it's extraordinary infrastructure..."

FIFA's technical report the 22 voters. They'll bring Barcelona and AC Milan says attendance at a U.S. World Cup could average 76,000, breaking the record of 68,991 set in 1994. It says there is medium legal risk because of a lack of government guarantees, which would require federal legislation after a bid is awarded.

"Clearly for us, there is nothing that we could do in the United States, whether it be our federation or Major League Soccer, that would be more important than al exposure on ESPN2 and a having the World Cup here growing league preparing for in our country," MLS its 16th season — albeit one Commissioner Don Garber said.

"Hosting the World Cup in minute." by the NFL, Major League the U.S. is by far the biggest opportunity for our league to 2018 site that day, picking capitalize on the growing burst of explosive growth if interest for the sport and ultimately convert that interest to a deeper connection with our league, our clubs and our players."

"It's an election," Gulati said. "And in some sense, in elections you never know where you are until the very last minute, until the vote is taken. There's not accurate polling, per se. So we'll continue to work until the last FIFA also is selecting the among England, from Russia, Spain-Portugal and Belgium-Netherlands.

USSF officials hope to one day have a team that wins World Cups, a league that Gulati and his delegation produces clubs as strong Manchester United, likely the three most popular teams in the United States.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"I ... hold there is no sin but ignorance." – Christopher Marlowe

The main point in defending against four hearts in today's deal is that East must try to kill the diamond suit. If declarer wins the spade lead and takes out all the trumps, then East should hold up the diamond ace until the third round (and West should cooperate by playing high-low to show two diamonds). If declarer tackles the diamonds before exhausting trumps, so as to leave a trump reentry in dummy, East must win the second diamond and lead a third, giving West a ruff. Thus the defenders should win either a trump or a club in addition to two

Can South do better? Yes, if he spades and a diamond.

reads the position. South ducks the opening lead and wins the second spade, West having led a low spade to East's king. Now South plays one round of diamonds. As West will show an even number of diamonds, East holds up the diamond ace. Declarer draws trumps, and reverts to diamonds, East ducking again. Declarer now exits with a spade. West does best to win and lead out his remaining spade winner since he cannot afford to open up the clubs, but South discards a diamond from hand and from dummy on the 13th spade. West now has to lead a club and declarer should guess what to do. (If West had the high club, maybe the defenders would have arranged for East to win the third spade.)

ANSWER: Is two clubs natural or artificial? You would get many loud opinions on either side of this issue, but fortunately you do not have to commit yourself. Simply raise to three clubs and let partner tell you how he meant his call. If he intended it as artificial, he will doubtless describe his hand-pattern. If natural, you are in your side's best strain.

DEAR ABBY: My 1-yearold son and I spent the weekend at my parents' house. We had a wonderful time. Mom and Dad showered us with love and attention. It was like being at a resort even though their house is small. The size didn't matter until, at 4:30 a.m. through paper-thin walls, I was awakened by my parents making love.

Unfortunately, this was a familiar sound from my childhood. I didn't know how to handle it when I was growing up, and it appears, at 34, I still don't know what to say. I'm glad my parents still enjoy each other. My mother is sweet but becomes very defensive when confronted, and my dad is painfully shy. Should I talk to them about this, or just make arrangements to stay elsewhere the next time I visit?

- I CAN HEAR YOU IN MICHIGAN

DEARICAN HEAR YOU: The next time you plan to visit, make reservations at a nearby hotel. If you are asked why, just say that you are all adults and you all need your privacy. It's a tactful way to deliver the message without being "confrontational."

 ${f A}$ BBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Back in 1961 some neighborhood kids were showing off their "battle scars." The three children (who lived across the street) were certain they deserved a beating, but were clueless about why. It kept happening. The practice of keeping secrets was common back then, but I knew the beatings were wrong.

Decades later, I was visiting the now-grown daughter and her mother when the subject turned to child abuse. The mom turned to her daughter and commented, "You probably don't remember because you were only 6, but your dad used to get drunk and beat up you and your younger brothers. A neighbor found out, so your dad stopped drinking."

Abby, I was that neighbor. I was only 7 at the time, but I had read the Dear Abby column, which appeared on the comics page. My solution was to hang on that family's front door your mom's column saying that child abuse required the law's intervention. To the father's credit, the anonymous threat of losing his toddlers got him to stop.

That column was a lifesaver, and I thought you'd like to know.

- FRAN IN HONOKA'A, HAWAII DEAR FRAN: You may

have been young, but you certainly were precocious and proactive. I hope you realize that what you did not only saved the family, but also may have saved some

P.S. And I'm sure the daughter DID remember.

DEAR ABBY: boyfriend and I disagree about giving alcohol as a holiday gift at a company party. He says it's always an acceptable gift, because even if people don't drink they can share it with future guests.

I think many people would be dismayed to receive alcohol. What do you think?

- SUSAN IN SOUTHERN OREGON DEAR SUSAN: I agree

with your boyfriend. The only time that alcohol would be an inappropriate gift is when the giver knows the recipient doesn't use it. If the person is "dismayed," it can always be regifted.

TO MY JEWISH READ-ERS: The eight days of Hanukkah begin at sundown. (I cannot believe how early it has fallen this year.) Happy Hanukkah, everyone. A joyous Festival of Lights to all of you!

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1824, the presidential election was turned over to U.S. House of Representatives when a deadlock developed between John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, William H. Crawford and Henry Clay. (Adams ended up the winner.)

In 1860, the Charles Dickens novel "Great Expectations" was first published in weekly serial

In 1909, the first kibbutz was founded in the Jordan Valley by a group of Jewish pioneers; the collective settlement became known as Degania Alef.

In 1910, Porfirio Diaz was inaugurated for an eighth term as President of Mexico. (He was overthrown in the Mexican Revolution and forced to flee the following year.) The Miami Herald was first published under that name (it was known under previous ownership as the Miami Morning News-Record).

In 1921, the Navy flew the first nonrigid dirigible to use helium; the C-7 traveled from Hampton Roads, Va., to Washington, D.C.

In 1934, Soviet communist official Sergei M. Kirov, an associate of Josef Stalin, assassinated was Leningrad, resulting in a massive purge.

In 1944, Bela Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra was premiered by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky.

In 1969, the U.S. government held its first draft lottery since World War II.

In 1973, David Ben-Gurion, Israel's first prime minister, died in Tel Aviv at

In 1990, British and French workers digging the Channel Tunnel between their countries finally met after knocking out a passage in a service tunnel large enough to walk through and shake hands. Ten years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments on a narrow question of Florida election law while the Florida Supreme Court and a circuit judge denied Al Gore's petitions for immediate recounts. Florida's high court also refused to order a new election in Palm Beach County, where a "butterfly ballot" had drawn protests from Democratic voters. Vicente Fox was sworn in as president of Mexico, ending 71 years of ruling-party domination.

Five years ago: A roadside bomb killed 10 U.S. Marines near Fallujah, Iraq. Pakistani officials reported that Hamza Rabia, one of al-Qaida's top five leaders, was killed by Pakistani security forces near the Afghan border. South Africa's highest court ruled in favor of gay marriage. A jury in Sarasota, Fla. recommended the death sentence for Joseph Smith, the killer of 11-yearold Carlie Brucia. A dog and its owner found the bodies of Sarah and Philip Gehring, two children who'd been fatally shot by their father and buried in rural Ohio.

One year ago: President Barack Obama ordered 30,000 more U.S. troops into the war in Afghanistan but promised during a speech to cadets at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point to begin withdrawal in 18 months. General Motors Co. CEO Frederick "Fritz" Henderson stepped down after the board determined that the company wasn't changing quickly enough.

SUMMARY: The following described public land is being proposed for direct sale to the Animal Shelter of Wood River Valley (Animal Shelter) in accordance with Sections 203 and 209 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, as amended, (43 U.S.C. 1713 and 1719), at no less that the appraised fair market value of $18,700: Boise Meridian, T. 2 N., R. 18 E., Sec. 17, Lots 5, 6, and 7. The area described contains 17 acres in Blaine County.

The public land is identified as suitable for disposal in the 1982 BLM Sun Valley Management Framework Plan, as amended, and is not needed for any other Federal purposes. The Animal Shelter is a non-profit corporation that provides public benefits to Blaine County (County) residents in the form of an adoption center, an impound facility for the County and local cities, administration of the county dog licensing program, and an informational and educational center. The Animal Shelter owns approximately 5 acres of private land abutting the east boundary of the proposed sale parcel. The Animal Shelter was issued a right-of-way for a road and a fence that cross the 17-acre subject parcel in August 1986 for a period of 30 years. Within the last 20 years or so, the Animal Shelter has inadvertently encroached upon a portion of the 17-acre subject parcel with infrastructure and associated uses. The disposal of the 17 acres to the Animal Shelter would allow the BLM to support the local non-profit's and local government's interest in acquiring public lands; to extend community services; to dispose of an isolated parcel of public land; and would formally resolve an inadvertent trespass by the Animal Shelter.

Regulations contained in 43 CFR 2711.3-3 permit direct sales when a competitive sale is inappropriate and when the public interest would best be served by a direct sale, including the need to resolve inadvertent unauthorized use or occupancy of the lands, or when a tract is identified for transfer to State or local government or non-profit organizations. In accordance with 43 CFR 2710, the BLM authorized officer finds that the public interest would best be served by authorizing the direct sale to the Animal Shelter, which would allow the identified lands to be consolidated with their adjacent private property to be used for purposes of an animal shelter and would allow the existing infrastructure and improvements on the 17-acre subject parcel to remain.

has been determined that the subject parcel contains no known mineral values; therefore, the BLM proposes that the the Federal mineral interests occur conveyance of simultaneously with the sale of the land. On January 16, 2009, the above described land was segregated from appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws. The segregation terminates 1) upon issuance of a patent, 2) publication in the Federal Register of a termination of the segregation, or 3) 2 years from the date of segregation, whichever occurs first. The lands will not be sold until at least 60 days after the date of publication of this notice in the Federal Register. The Animal Shelter will be required to pay a $50 nonrefundable filing fee for the conveyance of the available mineral interests.

Any patent issued will contain the following terms, conditions, and reservations:

 A reservation to the United States for ditches and canals constructed by the authority of the United States under the Act of August 30, 1890 (43 U.S.C. 945):

2. A condition that the conveyance be subject to all valid existing rights of record:

3. A notice and indemnification statement under Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (42 U.S.C. 9620(W)), indemnifying and holding the United States harmless from any release of hazardous materials that may have occurred;

4. An appropriate indemnification clause protecting the United States from claims arising out of the lessee's/patentee's use, occupancy or operations on the leased/patented lands; and Additional terms and conditions that the authorized officer deems appropriate. Detailed information concerning the proposed land sale including the appraisal, planning and environmental documents and a mineral report are available for review at the Shoshone Field Office, 400 West F Street, Shoshone, ID 83352. Normal business hours are 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, except for Federal holidays.

PUBLIC COMMENTS: Public comments regarding the proposed sale may be submitted in writing to Ruth A. Miller, BLM Shoshone Field Manager, 400 West F Street, Shoshone, Idaho 83352, on or before January 4, 2011. Comments received in electronic form, such as e-mail or facsimile, will not be considered. Any adverse comments regarding the proposed sale will be reviewed by the BLM Idaho State Director or other authorized official of the Department of the Interior, who may sustain, vacate, or modify this realty action in whole or in part. In the absence of timely filed objections, this realty action will become the final determination of the Department of the Interior.
