More people accessing Blaine County food bank

By Ariel Hansen

Times-News writer

HAILEY - There has always been a need for a food bank in Blaine County. But lately, the people accessing it have had a different look in their eyes.

"We are seeing those people who have had too much pride before to walk through our doors," said Jeanne Liston, executive director of The Hunger Coalition. "People don't realize it could be their neighbors, and very well might be their neighbors, who are coming."

As the national economic troubles have continued, many families have depleted their savings and run out of relatives and friends who can help.

"They're down to nothing. All of their crisis backup plans are gone," said Naomi Spence, food program manager for the agency. "We're seeing families that have never asked for help and are using us as a last resort."

Last year, for example, the agency distributed 175 baskets full of Thanksgiving goods; this

The mother of all snow days?

It happened in Sun Valley WHERE IT SNOWS, WHERE IT DOESN'T

hink you've seen snow? You ain't seen nothin? On a perfectly ordinary Wednesday in mid-February, Sun Valley got nearly 3 1/2 feet of new snow in 1959 - a state record. Compared with the 29 inches already on the ground, that meant undrifted snow lav 5 1/2 feet deep.

Even in a valley expert at digging out, nothing moved for days. What was then U.S. Highway 93 - now Idaho Highway 75 – was closed for the better part of a week. Among those snowed in was Ernest Hemingway, who was house-shopping in Ketchum after fleeing Cuba in the wake of the Fidel Castro revolution.

Sun Valley received 60 inches of snow that month, but remarkably just 5 inches in March. In all, 109 inches fell that winter. Since 1948. there have been 28 winters that were snowier.

depth in Sun Valley (elevation 5,945 feet) is 8 inches, factoring in all 12 months of the year. The snow lies more than 2 feet deep, on average, in January, February and March.

But it's not even in the top 20 among the snowiest cities in the West. Climax, Colo. (elevation 11,360) gets that honor: 273 inches, or about 23 feet, a year. Island Park (elevation 6,293 feet) is the reigning Idaho state champion with nearly 220 inches of snow a year, on average. Excluding Alaska, I've

"The second that we got the early snow and freeze, all of the landscaping was over," Spence said. Jerome County considers starting forestry cooperative

By Laura Lundquist Times-News writer

JEROME – A cooperative effort to grow some trees may add greenery and goodwill across Jerome County.

Fifteen community leaders from around Jerome County gathered at the Best Western Sawtooth Inn Convention Center on Thursday for an environmental brainstorming session organized by the North Side Soil and Water Conservation District. For the district's third-annual roundtable, District Manager Terry Halbert chose trees as the focus because they can conserve soil by acting as windbreaks and they improve the appearance of towns and roads.

But Halbert also wanted to propose a dream: the Jerome Urban Forest. It's one of the ideas he's had since he read about the rebuilding of Greensburg, Kan., after it was destroyed by a 2007 tornado. The people of the town liked being farmers but didn't beimportant," said Hazelton like their children leaving to find jobs.

Halbert said Arlen owner Crouch. Crossroads Point Business Center, offered the district reached at llundquist@magup to 122 acres of land. icvalley.com or 735-3376.

Halbert's concept is to plant 25 acres with four or five varieties of trees, five acres each year, so at the end of five years he can start rotating trees out. "We'd never sell a tree so we're not competing with nurseries," Halbert said. "But you need to tell me what kind of information you need to be able to successfully propose this to your people."

Halbert had the participants break into discussion groups, whose representatives later presented each group's concerns. City council members and recreation department managers from Jerome and Hazelton and county planners and commissioners put their heads together - and occasionally butted heads - as they tried to flesh out possibilities.

This wouldn't be the first time this was tried in the Magic Valley; Burley has maintained a grove of a couple of hundred trees for about seven years.

Snowman with noose appalls Idaho home's neighbors

HAYDEN (AP) - A whiteseparatist drew complaints from neighbors and a visit from law enforcement officers after building a snowman shaped like a member of the Ku Klux Klan on his front

Kootenai County sheriff's deputies told Mark Eliseuson Wednesday that he could be charged with a crime because who were appalled by the pointyheaded snowman with two dark eves.

Hayden for decades earned notoriety for being near the former rural compound of the Aryan Nations. Eliseuson could have been charged with creating a public nuisance. Idaho law defines such a nuisance as anything "offensive to the senses" or that interferes with the comfort of an entire neighborhood. Eliseuson removed the noose and toppled the snowman after he talked with officers.

By Jessie L. Bonner Associated Press

Attorney General Lawrence Wasden ment of Lands director should give up his legal battle to block a new rental policy for homes on hundreds of state-owned lake shore sites, a state Board of Land commissioner said.

Public schools chief Tom Luna, who serves on the land board with Wasden, voted for the increased rents and argues that the state has already spent too much taxpayer money on the lawsuit.

Wasden plans to take his challenge to district court, after the Idaho Supreme Court tossed out his case Wednesday. Justices did not dispute Wasden's argument but ruled the case should have gone to the lower court.

The attorney general should bring his own rental proposal to the land board, Luna said.

"We've already spent too many tax dollars on this matter and going to district court without first putting a proposal on the table will just continue to cost taxpayers;" Luna said in a statement.

Wasden claims the policy approved by the land board sets rent at below-market value and in violation of the state constitution, which requires the property to be managed for maximum profit over time.

The land board approved the new formula to raise rents for owners of cabins and vacation homes built on hundreds of state-owned lots on the shores of Payette and Priest lakes. The rents would raise the amounts that tenants pay by 9 percent in 2011 and by 54 percent over the next five years, under the new policy.

With implementation of new rents slated for next year, Wasden went to the state high court in hopes of a quick answer to his question over the constitutionality of the land board's decision.

While Wasden now plans to continue his legal fight in district court, the new leases will still be issued on Jan. 1 in accordance with the land

Sitter to face manslaughter charge in boy's death

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) -A northern Idaho judge ruled that a baby sitter accused of killing a 3-year-old boy will face a lesser charge of involuntary manslaughter rather than murder.

The actions of Amanda L. Skogen, 26, had "incredibly grievous" consequences but did not amount to murder, First District Court Magistrate Judge Clark A. Peterson ruled Wednesday.

Kootenai County prosecutors say Skogen was on her knees when she violently shoved Cohen Johnson on Oct. 4, causing him to fall back and hit his head.

The Coeur d'Alene Press reported that she acknowledged shoving the boy after he wet his pants.

In his ruling, Peterson quoted a comment Skogen allegedly made to Post Falls police: "I hurt a poor little defenseless boy ... And it was all my fault?"

Still, the judge said he didn't believe one push amounted to murder, especially because Skogen would not have anticipated the boy's death to be the result of the action.

Peterson said Skogen likely would do anything for "a doover on Oct. 4;" the newspaper reported. But he added. "There's a 3-year-old boy who should not be dead."

Cohen died several days after the incident when he was taken off life support at Providence Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane, Wash., where doctors said he was brain dead.

Fault line could boost fed disaster funds for Blaine Co.

The Associated Press

KETCHUM - A previously unmapped fault line that runs for about 40 miles the Sawtooth along Mountains in central Idaho likely improves Blaine County's chances of being awarded federal funding for earthquake preparation, a state official says.

Mark Stephensen, a mitigation officer for the Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security, said a note of the fault line has been included in the county's application for a FEMA Pre-Disaster Mitigation Grant that is due Friday.

The program gives states money to prepare for disasters to reduce the amount of potential damage and death.

"It's going to have to be considered," Stephensen told the Idaho Mountain Express. "Any additional information that would indicate that the earthquake hazard is clearly present would increase the urgency or necessity of the project."

Officials say a large earthquake in the area could significantly damage the county courthouse, built in Hailey in 1883.

The county can apply for up to $3 million in federal funding to strengthen the building to withstand an earthquake. It would have to match 25 percent of the federal money. The county, which includes the resort areas of Ketchum and Sun Vallev, is eligible to apply for the money because of several major active faults, including the Lost River Fault about 50 miles northeast of Hailey. That fault line caused the 1983 Borah Peak earthquake near Challis. The new fault is also considered a major, active fault capable of producing an earthquake with a magnitude up to 7.5. Such an earthquake would cause the partial or total collapse of the county courthouse roof, according to a seismic evaluation report done by Boisebased McClendon Engineering.

Strengthening the building could help it withstand an earthquake.

"We as (the bureau) believe this project to be necessary," said Robert Feely, a spokesman for the state Bureau of Homeland Security.

Feely said it's unclear when a response to the application can be expected.

Glenn Thackray, an Idaho State University geosciences professor, announced the finding of the fault line earlier this year. Thackray said researchers believe the fault triggered two major earthquakes during the past 10,000 years.

Repenting in leisure: Idaho's stuck with Molina, CCA n 1997, Gov. Phil Batt signed off on a $49 million contract with Tennessee-based Corrections Corporation of America to build a prison in Kuna and operate it at a cost of $38.42 an inmate per day.

There were a few critics. Wrote the Post Register of Idaho Falls: "Idahoans have been subjected to one negative headline after another about private prisons in the months since the state launched its own bid to contract out prison services."

Thirteen years later, the Idaho Correctional Center is a bad caricature of a prison. Meanwhile over at the Department of Health and Welfare, the providers.

Our view:

In the future, Idaho public officials should be careful what they wish for: They might end up with Molina and CCA.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

state's new Medicaid billing and payments contractor, California-based Molina Healthcare, is still struggling to catch up on payments to 20,000 Medicaid

As of mid-November, about 94,000 claims remained unpaid. For that kind of service, Idaho is paying Molina $115 million with a possible three-year, $51 million extension.

"That's my new favorite curse word, 'Molina,'" Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, chairwoman of the Idaho House Appropriations Committee, said last month.

Bell was a skeptic of private prisons in Idaho as well. More of Idaho's movers and shakers should share her caution when it comes to signing contracts the state will be stuck with at its peril.

For now, Idaho doesn't have any realistic alternatives to CCA and Molina. It doesn't have anyplace else to put the 2,000 minimum- and maximumsecurity prisoners at ICC, and no other private contractor wants to take over for Molina at Health and Welfare - even if the state had the money to pay one.

The Legislature shares some of the blame for the Molina debacle. Lawmakers opted to delay $70 million worth of last year's Medicaid claims until the current budget cycle began July 1. For some providers, that required waiting two months to get paid.

Then, to save $1 million a month, Health and Welfare opted against keeping its old computerized billing system up and running while it launched a new computerized program operated by Molina.

The result? About 1,400 employees of Medicaid providers have had their pay cut, delayed or withheld. A few operators have gone out of business, and many others have resorted to loans or second mortgages.

For all its comedy of errors, the Molina mess was at least driven by the bad economy. It's harder to explain why Batt didn't take a harder look at the CCA contract, which was signed when times were good in Idaho.

Two companies that lost the bidding to CCA had offered to build and operate a new prison for less money. And Idaho had experienced a string of problems in the mid-1990s with its inmates housed in privately run, out-of-state lockups.

Now the 10-year ICC is the source of a $155 million lawsuit filed by inmates who allege guards routinely permit prisoners to attack each other. On Monday, The Associated Press released a video it obtained on one inmate, James Haver, pummeling another while guards looked on through a security window.

CCA's response? It was "highly disappointed and deeply concerned" over AP's release the videos.

Let's hope the next major commitment by the state to outsource services to the private sector gets much closer scrutiny.

Obama still unaware he's in a fight

ASHINGTON -'Stop it." That's the message Rep. Eric Cantor of Virginia said voters wanted him to carry to President Barack Obama at the White House Slurpee Summit, an appropriate name for something momentarily colorful and tasty with no nutritional value.

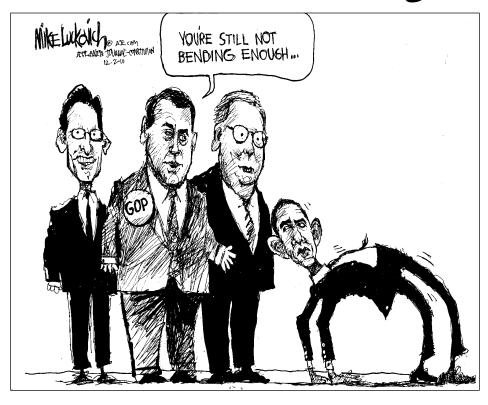

In my parental playbook, "Stop it" is often followed by "Go to your room," which in Obama's case is the Oval Office, an inconvenient fact for Republicans reluctant to acknowledge that he's president.

The way Republicans see it, the results of the midterm elections put them in charge. Now the president must pay deference even to get a meeting with them. When he didn't send a proper "Save the Date" card for a proposed summit last month, the entire Republican leadership turned him down without a compelling reason. Those with hair had to wash it that evening. The rest had headaches.

You don't need WikiLeaks to know where Republicans stand. Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky was happy to announce that the top priority for Republicans during the next two years is to defeat Obama in 2012.

Republicans were a bit more subtle as Obama prepared to take office two years ago. The new president didn't know until much later that McConnell had called a play in the huddle to hang tough on everything. Republicans wouldn't be just the Party of No, but the Party of Hell No. The lack of a single Republican vote in the House for the desperately needed economic stimulus in February 2009 was an early application of this strategy.

Republicans interpreted the midterm results to mean that their just-say-no strategy is a winning one. While unlikely to pursue a shut-down-the-government course, they're not really seeking common ground. Wednesday, just one day after the White House meeting, all 42 Republican senators pledged in a letter to block all legislation until the president and Congress figure out a way to extend the tax cuts and fund the government into next year.

Obama so prefers Kumbaya bipartisan process over getting something done that he's singlehandedly resuscitated an opposition party that looked dead after the 2008 elections. After Republicans rebuffed him on the stimulus, Obama called himself "an eternal optimist" but added, "That doesn't mean I'm a sap."

I wonder. Consider the still-unresolved fate of the George W. Bush tax cuts, set to expire Jan. 1. Obama is in such a defensive crouch, he doesn't recognize the winning hand he holds. He wants to let the breaks expire for the wealthiest 2 percent of Americans and leave them intact for everybody else, meaning households that take in less than $250.000 a vear blowing another $700 billion hole in the deficit to help the richest taxpayers while saying that lowering the deficit is the most important thing in the world to them.

They have no spending cuts to make up for it. There's no proof that extending the tax cut for the wealthy will do anything to create one job or induce one bank to start lending again. The wealthy have largely bounced back from the economic crash.

Why wouldn't Obama just battle to the bitter end on this one, leaving Republicans to defend their willingness to stop everything else if he doesn't capitulate?

But no. He's signaled he'll agree to extend tax cuts for the wealthy to preserve those for the middle class. He'll do it temporarily, as if not doing it permanently is a defeat for Republicans.

He's not getting anything so far for the middle class in exchange for what he's prepared to give up. He unilaterally announced a twoyear freeze on federal pay, without bargaining for an extension of unemployment benefits - or, for that matter, passage of well-reasoned immigration legislation, or ratification of the START Treaty, or repeal of Don't Ask, Don't Tell.

Obama acts as if he believes Republican rhetoric that the election put them in the driver's seat. Polls show a modest difference in approval ratings for Republicans over Democrats. The mandate they have is the one Obama gives them.

Republicans are wilier than Obama, who should see that reaching out is for chumps. His recent busted lip, the result of sharp elbows on the basketball court, seemed an apt status report on his presidency.

Rather than give Republicans another dinner date to turn down, Obama should start playing hard to get.

T.F. needs program of trap-neuter-return

Alley Cat Rescue is glad to hear the city of Twin Falls allows the feeding of community cats; however, like Debbie Blackwood said, "It's not enough to feed a stray, you have to spay a stray."

Outlawing trap-neuterreturn will not help the situation but only make it worse. Trap-neuter-return gets to the root of the problem; it stops the breeding cycle and stabilizes populations. If Twin Falls is to decrease its community cat population, it will need to adopt a trap-neuter-return program.

Trap-neuter-return reduces populations to manageable levels and eliminates common neighborhood complaints associated with mating behaviors like spraying and fighting. Trapneuter-return programs are also more effective and less costly than repeated catchand-kill attempts. With catch-and-kill, other cats quickly enter the vacated territory and start breeding all over again. And this method is carried out with tax dollars, unlike trapneuter-return which operates on private funding. In addition, trap-neuterreturn is humane to the animals and fosters compassion within the community.

Trap-neuter-return not only prevents cat homelessness and feral colonies from forming but also reduces euthanasia rates at local animal shelters by preventing unwanted litters of kittens from being born. Cats who are trap-neuterreturned receive vaccinations which prevent the spread of diseases to humans and to other cats. Overall, sterilized (and fed) cats are healthier and make for much better neighbors, leaving little "gray area."

Why the health of pregnant women matters to everybody

regnant Is the New Sexy," read the T-shirt a friend gave me when I was a few weeks away from my due date. Glossy magazines flaunt celebrities' half-clad bellies and chronicle the pregnancies in breathless detail, from the first "bump" sighting to the secondtrimester weight gain to the baby-gear shopping spree.

There's something wrong with this picture. An emerging science known as the developmental origins of health and disease is revealing that the conditions we encounter in the womb can have a lifelong impact on our health and well-being.

The more we learn about these effects, the clearer it becomes that investing in maternal health would return larger and longerlasting dividends than almost any other comparable public health investment. But as a nation, we're spending more of our limited resources on the later stages of life instead of where they can make the most difference: at the very beginning.

Take obesity. Many anti-

obesity initiatives concentrate on trying to persuade us to eat less and exercise more. But research shows that these efforts have limited effectiveness. A recent analysis of U.S. obesity-prevention campaigns, conducted by Olaf Werder of the University of New Mexico, concluded that their "overall impact on obesity has been negligible."

What if before conceiving, overweight women were routinely counseled by their doctors about the effects of their weight on future offspring? And what if women who were gaining weight too rapidly in pregnancy were offered more help in controlling it?

The results might look something like those found in studies of diabetes treatment during pregnancy. Research shows that the children of diabetic women are more likely than others to develop diabetes – seven times more likely. Like obesity, diabetes has a strong genetic component, but scientists are also beginning to focus on the effects of a diabetic intrauterine environ-

A pregnant woman's diabetes can also affect the odds that her child will become obese. In a study of almost 10,000 motherchild pairs, researchers from the Center for Health Research at Kaiser Permanente Northwest found that women who developed diabetes during pregnancy and were not treated had children who were twice as likely to become obese as the children of women without that illness. Simply by controlling their mothers' blood sugar during pregnancy, the expected doubling of these children's obesity risk was completely reversed.

Even a pregnant woman's mental health can have a long-term impact on her offspring. A 2008 study by researchers at the Kaiser Permanente Oakland Medical Center in California found that women with even mild symptoms of depression are 60 percent more likely to deliver early than other women; those who are severely depressed have double the risk of premature birth.

These complications may come about in part because many depressed women may eat poorly, smoke or drink alcohol, or fail to get prenatal care. But depression itself may shift the biochemical balance in a woman's body in a fateful manner.

The case seems pretty clear: We should make a nationwide effort to ensure that every obstetrician checks every pregnant patient's mental state, along with her weight and blood

Adult behavior can be difficult to change, but pregnant women are a special case: They're usually highly motivated and in regular contact with healthcare providers, and they have to maintain their efforts for only nine months. Pregnancy therefore offers a singular opportunity to improve lives for decades to come.

So why isn't this critical window one of our top health-care priorities?

Part of the reason may simply be our preference for quick fixes and for dealing with only existing problems. But there's a less obvious reason that resistance to maternal health initiatives might crop up among the liberal-leaning individuals who typically support public health initiatives and women's health-care issues: abortion politics.

Caring for the fetus, protecting the fetus from harm to abortion rights advocates, such measures sound like the steps antiabortion forces have taken to try to establish a fetus's rights. What's the difference between telling an obese pregnant woman that her weight may predispose her child to obesity and requiring a woman to look at an ultrasound of her fetus before proceeding with an abortion?

The crucial difference lies in the intent behind the intervention and in the way it's carried out. Help in achieving a healthy pregnancy must be offered to pregnant women, not forced upon them.

Document collection contains history

In the mid-'80s, I was asked to prepare a documented grant for the Twin Falls South Side Canal Company, which was applying for federal funds to repair Milner Dam, the south side canal and also build a power plant to be managed by Idaho Power Co. The grant had to meet state and federal requirements. My work was sent to state historian Dr. Merle Welles, who, after accepting now part of the Twin Falls or rejecting each item, sent it on to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's permitting process. This was done by the National Park's Historic American Engineering Record Department, which had sent directives to the canal company for my writing of the historical grant and photography requirements. The research was accepted and funding permitted. The documents have been copied and collated by Mareda Wright for inclusion in the Twin Falls City Library, history divisio The originals are with the canal company.

In many ways, the collection is unique in that minutes of State Land Board meetings are included explaining the rejection of early filings and that the Twin Falls Land and Water Company's secretary, James Harrison Lowell, came to Milner and re-staked the site for the proposed dam on Oct. 11, 1900, and properly filed the stake that same date in Cassia County with Judge Lawrence Hansen, who then filed it with Cassia County Judge John Hansen on Oct. 30, 1900, well within the 60 days allowed by the stake document. Oct. 12, Lowell gave the new document to State Engineer D.W. Ross. That same date Ross called a meeting of the State Land Board, which made valid the conditional permit of Oct. 8, 1900.

Bank records and corporation meeting minutes are available with both state historical societies and secretaries of state. The mortgage made necessary by the probate at P.L. Kimberly's

Officials condone cats' suffering

Kudos to Ted Talbot and shame on the officials of Twin Falls and the legislators that cannot be bothered to help innocent animals.

It seems that the Humane Society of Twin Falls has double standards. It is all for adopting out kittens, two for the price of one. That is good, but they allow the cats in Rock Creek Park to die of starvation or freeze. Of course, those cats are going to procreate and the kittens will die because of the weather.

The Humane Society is apparently very limited by funds. So why can't these officials go out and place humane traps and take the cats in? At least they could euthanize them humanely if they are not able to feed, give out for adoption or neuter and turn loose.

It appears that only Mr. Talbot and a few others are really concerned about the cats not suffering. The officials are condoning the cats' suffering, not the "feeders."

The animals in that park must face winter alone. I see on the Animal Channel that various humane societies go out and pick up strays. Is Idaho that far behind in animal protection and the lack of funds to care for them? Why aren't the legislators doing more to help these animals?

T.F. lawn service finds holiday niche

"Although we aren't looking at making a lot of money the extra cash flow does help."

Business looks at Christmas to boost spirits, sales

By Blair Koch Times-News writer

With area trees going into dormancy for the winter and lawns covered in sheets of snow, people must wonder why a sign at Local Lawn and Tree Spraying says they are open for business.

Typically, owners Louis and Renee Lopez would be settling into the company's slow winter period.

Naturally, their company is busy while grass is growing.

Like many area landscapers, they were eager to take on a project to carry the company through winter. Local Lawn and Tree Spraying is part of a growing number of seasonal businesses looking for ways to diversify their services and work through the winter.

This July the couple came across a large stash of Christmas decor supplies and Renee Lopez was inspired. "I'm the decorator for all my family and friends," Renee Lopez told the Times-News. "So when we found an auction for a Christmas decor store going out of business we decided to buy the supplies."

The couple's Christmas store front is located at 126 Locust St. S.

RALEIGH, N.C. – If you think inflatable snow globes are tacky, prepare to hold your well-mannered tongue. This year, it's going to seem like "Tim the Toolman" Taylor has moved in next door.

Outdoor holiday decorations, widely known as "yard art" and beloved of the main character from sitcom Improvement," are going even bigger this year.

Negotiators work on tax deal as House passes bill

By Stephen Ohlemacher Associated Press writer

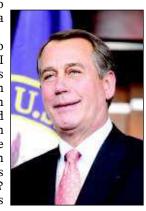

WASHINGTON – The House passed a bill Thursday to extend middle class tax cuts while letting those for the wealthy expire, even as talks continued on extending them all.

The House bill was a political maneuver to satisfy Democratic lawmakers' supporters who oppose extending tax cuts for the wealthy. It has no chance in the Senate, where Democrats need Republican support to pass tax legisla-

House Republican leader John Boehner of Ohio used barnyard language to describe the House vote to reporters during a news conference.

"I'm trying to catch my breath so I don't refer to this maneuver going on today as chicken crap, all right? said Boehner, who is in line to become House speaker in January. "But this is nonsense, all right? The election was one month ago. We are 23 months from the next election, started trying to set Hill. up the next election."

House Minority Leader John and the political Boehner of Ohio takes part in games have already a news conference on Capitol

Sweeping income tax cuts enacted under former President George W. Bush are to expire at the end of the year. If Congress does not act, taxpayers at every income level would be hit with a significant tax increase.

President Barack Obama and Democratic leaders in Congress want to extend the tax cuts only for individuals making less than $200,000 and married couples making less than $250,000. The bill passed by the House would do that.

The vote was 234 to 188. All but 20 Democrats voted in favor of the bill: all but three Republicans opposed it.

Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky has indicated he is open to a temporary extension of all the tax cuts.

Obama said Thursday he's optimistic Democrats and Republicans can reach agreement on critical issues in the coming weeks, including the tax controversy.

Speaking to more than 20 newly elected governors, Obama said making sure tax cuts don't increase for the middle class is his priority.

"I believe it will get resolved," Obama said. "That doesn't mean there might not be some posturing over the next several days. But I'm confident in the end people are going to recognize that it's important for families who are still struggling to have some relief and it's important for our economy to make sure that money is still out there circulating."

The White House is pressing Congress to extend jobless benefits and other tax credits enacted as part of Obama's massive economic recovery package last year. Those proposals could form the basis of a compromise on the Bush tax cuts.

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and White House Budget Director Jacob Lew began holding closed-door meetings Wednesday with a small group of lawmakers from both parties to negotiate a deal on the Bush tax cuts. Those talks continued Thursday, even as the House voted on the Democratic plan.

Can toothpaste cause Burning Mouth Syndrome?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have suffered with Burning Mouth Syndrome (BMS) since 2001. I have worked with my doctor and have had every test the Mayo Clinic recommended, to no avail. Recently, my sister called and told me of an article she read where the patient had suffered for 20 years with the condition and found the cause in toothpaste.

Could you please send me any information you have on BMS, including this article with the name of the toothpaste?

DEAR READER: Burning Mouth Syndrome causes searing pain that can spread throughout the entire mouth — from the lips, gums and tongue to the insides of the cheeks. It can cause a loss of taste, increased thirst, dry mouth, tingling and more. The pattern may be constant, or it might come and go. When the specific cause cannot be diagnosed, it is believed linked to problems with the sensory nerves of the peripheral or central nervous system. There may be a nutritional deficiency or an underlying medical condition.

The condition may be related to medications, primarily those taken for hypertension. It may be caused by hypothyroidism (an underactive thyroid) taminants or allergies to food additives. As I am sure you can attest, it can be extremely frustrating when the specific cause cannot be identified. When a diagnosis is found, it is often accomplished through a process of elimination, ruling out other possible causes. That is to say, blood tests might be normal, you may not be allergic to food additives, you may not have an oral fungal, bacterial or viral infection, and so forth. As you can appreciate, this makes treatment difficult. People who suffer from BMS should begin by seeing their primary-care physician, who may refer them to a dentist, otolaryngologist or other specialist. Possible ciencies, exposure to con-

causes include oral-thrush medication, lozenges, oral rinses or mouthwashes, a trial with the B vitamins or cognitive behavioral intervention.

On the home front, you should avoid eating spicy foods, or those that contain cinnamon or mint. Refrain from tobacco products, reduce your stress level, and perhaps my most important suggestion — use toothpaste and soaps that are free of sodium laurel sulfate (SLS). This ingredient is used extensively and can cause adverse reactions in some people. Stress can be a factor. Consider practicing yoga, tai chi or another form of relaxation exercise.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report

"Managing Chronic Pain." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order payable to Newsletter and mailed to Newsletter, P.O. DEAR DR. GOTT: Your article in March 2010 about retinal detachment saved my sight. I had the symptoms described in the article and have had two reattachment surgeries. I also will have cataract surgeries on both eyes and cannot thank you enough.

DEAR READER: I have always felt that if I can help just one person through what could be a difficult situation, then I have accomplished something good. I am glad that you had the foresight to associate your symptoms with a problem that required the services of a doctor. There isn't much of a second chance when it comes to our eyes. It's not like losing baby teeth and having new ones appear. Eyes are precious and should be protected and cared for in the same way as the rest of the body. Thank you for taking the time to write. Good luck with your upcoming cataract repair.

IVORY COAST Ivorian opposition leader named winner of vote

ABIDJAN — The head of Ivory Coast's electoral commission on Thursday declared opposition leader Alassane Ouattara the winner of the West African country's contested presidential election in comments that were not broadcast on state TV, before ruling party loyalists called the announcement an 'attempted coup' and took to the airwaves to denounce them as unofficial.

Election commission chief Youssouf Bakayoko said Ouattara had won with 54.1 percent of the vote, compared to 45.9 percent for incumbent Laurent Gbagbo after days of backroom wrangling during which the ruling party had physically prevented other commission members from announcing the outcome of the vote. Bakayoko left the commission's headquarters unannounced and slipped into the fancy Golf Hotel, where he made the announcement.

The hotel then replayed his declaration on the large speakers on the hotel's lawn, blasting the news as crowds gathered and opposition supporters began running through the streets in celebration.

ISRAEL Israeli forest fire kills dozens

MEGADIM — The worst forest fire in Israel's history on Thursday devastated one of the country's few forested areas, killing at least 36 people as guards raced to rescue inmates at a prison in the fire zone, destroying homes and forcing the evacuation of

The fire ripped through the Carmel forest in Israel's Galilee, reaching the coastal city of Haifa, jumping from place to place in the forest left tinderdry by a lack of rain and unseasonably hot weather.

Israel appealed for international assistance, a measure of the severity of the disaster, and Turkey put aside recent tensions to pledge aid.

Investigators speculated that the fire could have been set accidentally, or it might have been a criminal act, but pretty much ruled out some sort of attack by a Palestinian group.

'This is a disaster of unprecedented proportions," Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said. The fire was still burning out of control as midnight approached.

Most of the dead were Prison Service guards racing through the fire toward a prison to evacuate the inmates, most of them Palestinians. A tree fell across the road, blocking their bus. Some guards were burned alive inside, while others died as they tried to flee. Fourteen bodies were found near the charred skeleton of the bus 10 hours after the fire started.

Noose tightens around Assange

LONDON — The law is closing in on Julian Assange. The former computer hacker who has embarrassed the U.S. government and foreign leaders with his online release of a huge trove of secret American diplomatic cables suffered a legal setback when Sweden's Supreme Court upheld an order to detain him — a move that could lead to his extradition.

Meanwhile, Assange continues to leak sensitive documents. Newly posted cables on WikiLeaks' website detailed a host of embarrassing disclosures, including allegations that Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi accepted kickbacks and a deeply unflattering assessment of Turkmenistan's president.

Assange is accused in Sweden of rape, sexual molestation and coercion in a case from August, and Swedish officials have alerted Interpol and issued a European arrest warrant to bring him in for question-

AUSTRALIA Engine failure blamed on oil fire

SYDNEY — Investigators have confirmed that an oil fire is the most likely cause of the disintegration of an engine on a Qantas superjumbo last month.

The Australian Transport Safety Authority today released its preliminary report into the problem that caused the A380 to make an emergency landing on Nov. 4 in what was the most significant safety issue for the world's newest and largest jetliner.

The ATSB confirmed earlier suggestions that oil leaking from tubes in a super-hot part of the engine caused a fire than eventually caused a turbine disc to fly apart and send shrapnel slicing through a wing of

CONNECTICUT Home invasion defendant: Death will be a relief

NEW HAVEN — A Connecticut man sentenced to death Thursday in the killings of a woman and her two daughters said his execution will be "a welcome relief," while the only survivor of the gruesome home struggled with suicidal thoughts, nightmares and flashbacks.

Steven Hayes made his first public comments about the case before being formally sentenced by New Haven Superior Court Judge Jon Blue. A jury last month determined Hayes should die.

"I am deeply sorry for what I have done and the pain I have caused," Hayes told Blue. "My actions have hurt so many people, affected so many lives, and caused so much pain. I am torabout what happened in that house."

Hayes, who did not testify during his trial, said he wanted money for drugs but makes no excuses for what he did.

"Death for me will be a welcome relief, and I hope it will bring some peace and comfort to those who I have hurt so much," Hayes said.

WASHINGTON McCain criticizes military gays study

A doubting John McCain led Republican opposition Thursday to letting gays serve openly in the military, sternly clashing with the Pentagon's top leaders and warning that troops would quit in droves if Congress repealed the "don't ask, don't tell" law.

In tense exchanges with Defense Secretary Robert Gates and Adm. Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, McCain and other Republicans dismissed a Pentagon study on gays as biased and said objections by combat troops were being ignored.

Gates and Mullen defended the study, but McCain blamed politics for pushing the matter forward during wartime. He predicted that Marines and soldiers assigned combat duties, in particular, would abandon their service if they had to serve along with gays open about their sexual orientation.

McCain, R-Ariz., also said the study was flawed because it asked troops what impact repeal would have, instead of whether they wanted the law repealed at all. The study found that two-thirds of troops predicted few problems, but those who did were mostly assigned to combat roles.

invasion told a judge he had Microbe found that can live on arsenic

The discovery of a strange bacteria that can use arsenic as one of its nutrients widens the scope for finding new forms of life on Earth and possibly beyond.

While researchers discovered the unusual bacteria here on Earth, they say it shows that life has possibilities beyond the major elements that have been considered essential.

'This organism has dual capability. It can grow with either phosmented and have nightmares phorous or arsenic. That makes it very peculiar, though it falls short of being some form of truly 'alien' life," commented Paul C. W. Davies of Arizona State University, a coauthor of the report appearing in Thursday's online edition of the journal Science.

Six major elements have long been considered essential for life carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, oxygen, phosphorus and sulfur.

But the researchers found that the bacteria, discovered in Mono Lake, Calif., is able to continue to grow after substituting arsenic for phosphorous.

House censures veteran Rep. Rangel

Veteran Rep. Charles Rangel, the raspy-voiced, backslapping former chairman of one of Congress' most powerful committees, was censured by his House colleagues for financial misconduct Thursday in a solemn moment of humiliation in the sunset of his career.

"I brought it onto myself," Rangel told the House. But he also said politics was at work. After the 333-79 vote, the 80year-old Democrat from New York's Harlem stood silently at the front of the House and faced Speaker Nancy Pelosi as she read him the formal resolution of cen-

Congress acts to stifle loud TV ads

The days of getting blasted out of the easy chair by blaring TV commercials may soon be over.

The House on Thursday gave final congressional approval to a bill that would prevent advertisers from abruptly raising the volume to catch the attention of viewers wandering off when regular programming is interrupted.

The bill's House sponsor, Rep. Anna Eshoo, D-Calif., said it was her own "earsplitting experiences" that got her involved, recalling how the ads "blew us out of the house" when she watched television, already set at a high volume, with her parents.

When the law goes into effect, "consumers will no longer have to experience being blasted at," Eshoo said after the House passed the bill on a voice vote.

Under the bill, now heading to President Obama for his signature, the Federal Communications Commission would be required within one year to adopt industry standards that coordinate ad decibel levels with those of the regular program. The new regulations, applying to all broadcast providers, including cable and satellite, would go into effect a year after that.

more than 200 people auditioned for the talent contest, and the church expects even more this year, said organizer Marsha Holloway. Instead of doing time-restricted live auditions, organizers thought video auditions would speed along the process while giving contestants adequate time to present their talent, said judge

Travis Johnson. Johnson, who won third place at last year's event as a vocalist and guitarist, is one of the judges for both the auditions and the gala event this time around. First-place winner last year was singer Jennifer Jorgensen, with a

No video camera? No problem. You can schedule an appointment with Lighthouse folks to have them tape your audition for you.

Among other changes: There is more prize money for the winners. First place will receive $3,000, second gets $1,500 and third, $500.

From the auditions, judges will choose the top 30. Those 30 entrants will perform at Lighthouse on Feb. 11. That live performance will air on the CW on Feb. 26, and Lighthouse will announce the top 10 on Feb. 27. The top 10 perform again at a March 12 gala dinner, where judges pick the top three acts. The top three perform a second time that evening — while airing live on KMVT — and audience members vote for their favorite.

There are no age limits, Holloway said, and any talent is welcome.

"The competition is going to be really fierce, so bring your A game," Johnson said.

Performances of note Classical guitarist opens Sun Valley Artist Series

By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - The Sun Valley Artist Series is embarking on just its second year. But already it has lined up some stellar performers.

Its Winter Concert Series will kick off Dec. 11 with the dazzling artistry of threetime Grammy Award winner guitarist Sharon Isbin. And it will conclude in April with the celebrated St. Petersburg String Quartet in a performance "that has had audiences on their feet throughout the world," said executive director Steve Gannon.

In between it will feature Italian Saxophone Quartet, which will play classical selections during its first half and return after intermission to perform the music of Joplin, Gershwin and contemporary international composers.

"Sharon Isbin is the biggest name in the classical guitar world right now," said series founder Susan Spelius Dunning. "You look at all of the magazine covers she's been on and it's really pretty shocking. There will be many people at that concert who have never heard a classical guitarist play solo — it's a rare event, so pure, so transcendental in its purity. I think they will be amazed."

Dunning said landing the St. Petersburg Quartet was just as much a coup - one which prompted the concert series to extend its season this year from four concerts to five.

"St. Petersburg is a city of such historical significance. It's had so many famous composers. And to think our small town is having the ultimate crown come perform here is so cool," she said.

Both Isbin and cellist Ben Hong cited the lure of Sun Valley as one of the reasons for performing at a much smaller venue than they usually play.

"I've heard so many good things about Sun Valley through my colleagues who play with the Sun Valley Symphony," Hong said. "It will be special to play in such an intimate setting?

One concert will be held each month through April at the 400-seat Presbyterian Church of the Big Wood in Ketchum. Here's a look at what's ahead:

Guitarist Sharon Isbin, 7 p.m. Dec. 11

Isbin is a frequent guest on national radio programs such as "All Things Considered" and Garrison Keillor's "A Prairie Home Companion." She has been profiled on TV programs including "CBS Sunday Morning" and the A&E network. She was a soloist for Martin Scorsese's "The Departed" and has performed at the White House for President

Obama. In Ketchum, she will play Enrique Granados' "Spanish Dance No. 5," Isaac Albeniz's gypsy-inspired "Mallorca" and "Asturias," Spanish composer Francisco Tarrega's "Capricho Arabe" and Paraguay troubadour Agustin

Let wine barrels inspire your art

Roll out the barrel — and turn it into art.

To celebrate the 30th anniversary of its Wine Auction fundraiser, the Sun Valley Center for the Arts is inviting artists to submit proposals for artwork made from wine barrels.

Proposals are due Feb. 15. Ten artists will be chosen to execute their projects, which will be displayed in Ketchum in July and sold to the highest bidders during the Wine Auction, July 21-23.

The 10 artists chosen will each receive $500; one "people's choice" winner, chosen by popular vote, will receive $1,000.

Artwork must use at least one of the barrel heads and one of the hoops, must be portable and must be able to be displayed outside. The center will supply the barrels.

Local dance students to perform 'Nutcracker' with Eugene Ballet

Danced to Tchaikovsky's memorable score, Eugene Ballet Co.'s "Nutcracker" is a holiday show to see.

Now in its 32nd year, Eugene Ballet has performed "The Nutcracker" in 32 states and seven countries. On Dec. 10 it returns to the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium with a cast of nationally and internationally acclaimed dancers, and the performance was almost sold out by Thursday.

"Korean principal Yun-Kyung Kim brings technical aplomb and flair, while Russian Petr Orlov explodes onto the stage," artistic director Toni Pimble said in a press release. "Venezuelan Gilmer Duran brings character and magnetism; Leoannis Pupo Guillen acts the role of the Nutcracker with style. Juan Carlos Amy-Cordero's technical prowess is astonishing, while longtime principal dancer Jennifer Martin combines maturity with grace and technical acuity."

But the real stars in Twin Falls? Dozens of local dance students will perform with the ballet company as mice, angels, party children, flowers and ladybugs. Students were selected by audition and have been rehearsing under Gina Stonebraker.

"Involvement of local dance students is something that we have always encouraged," Pimble said. "Their experiences with a professional ballet company will be something they will remember for years to come, giving them inspiration beyond their dance studies."

The performance is at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 10, and only a few tickets remain. Tickets are $19 for adults and $13 for children, at tickets.csi.edu, 732-6288 or at CSI's Fine Arts box office (8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Mondays through Friday).

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho's Symphonic Band will perform its "Babes in Toyland" concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

The concert will open with "Marche Militaire Francaise" by Camille Saint-Saens, a composer of the late 19th century, said director George K. Halsell, a CSI music professor. Following the march, the band will present Clifton Williams' Symphonic Dance No. 2, "The Maskers." A classic jazz piece from the 1920s, "Varsity Drag," is next up, followed by a delightful march, "Valdres," by Danish composer Johannes Hanssen. The first half will close with "Suite of Old American Dances" by Robert Russell Bennett. The suite's five sections: Cake Walk, Schottishe, Western One-Step, Wallflower Waltz and

The second half opens with Sergei Rachmaninov's "Italian Polka," a work he originally wrote for piano and which was based on a tune he heard played by an organ grinder during a trip to Italy. Next is the "Prelude, Siciliano and Rondo" by the English composer Sir Malcolm Arnold, followed by "Acrostic Song" from the opera "Final Alice," by American composer David

The concert will close with two holiday-themed works. The first is "Dialogues on 'In Dulci Jubilo." written by Minnesota-based composer John Zdechlik and based on the familiar Medieval Christmas melody. The final work is a medley from the 1961 Walt Disney movie "Babes in Toyland." Both the music and the movie are based on the Christmasthemed operetta of the same name that composer Victor Herbert premiered in 1903.

Admission is free, but organizers suggest a donation of $5 to the CSI Music Scholarship Fund - and encourage you to bring a new, quality, unwrapped toy for the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve's Toys for Tots campaign.

Remodeled Senior Connection welcomes Festival of Trees, ice-cream parlor

HAILEY - For a dozen years, the Senior Connection in Hailey has hosted a fundraising Festival of Trees, but held it elsewhere in the community. For the 13th annual festival, though, the senior center's newly remodeled facility in Hailey is hosting the event.

"We want to showcase what every single dollar has gone to, to show people who we are," said Kim Coonis, Senior Connection executive director. "There's such a stigma in the community, people still think we're (nursing home) Blaine Manor. It gives us an opportunity to shine."

CSI cruises over Lethbridge

Golden Eagles dominate fast-paced first half

By Mike Christensen

Times-News writer

The positives: Pierre Jackson had his best performances in weeks and Issiah Grayson's knee looked solid as the reserve guard dished out seven assists after sitting out last week's action.

The negatives: Most aspects of a sloppy second half.

The College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team ran the floor, shared the ball and dominated a first-half track meet en route to a 94-50 win Thursday night over Lethbridge (Alberta) College in the Rocket Classic. From there, the Golden Eagles endured a yawninducing second half lacking any kind of flow as an underwhelming crowd grew sparser.

But for the first 20 minutes, the Eagles were soaring.

"The guys had fun," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar, whose 16thranked team moved to 10-1 overall. "They did what they were supposed to do. I think we got a little bit better, we moved the ball against the zone. I thought Issiah was really good against the zone. He really created offense for other players. ... I loved how our guys shared the ball tonight."

Jackson scored 17 of his gamehigh 21 points in the first half as CSI pushed the pace and opened up a 57-26 cushion.

"I finally got my legs back," said Jackson, who also grabbed six rebounds and had five steals. "It looks like Pierre's finally healthy," said Gosar. "He's jumping,

Intelligence, toughness key Percy's play at BSU

By Jason Chatraw

Times-News correspondent

BOISE – When Boise State's J.C. Percy was in high school, one of his coaches gave him some good academic advice to the competitive linebacker: "Test days are your chance to show off."

It didn't take the star student long to apply that same philosophy on the gridiron.

That's how I got through school," said Percy, who graduated sixth in his class from Blackfoot High School. "I wanted to show people I know what's going on. "And when it comes to game time, it's time to show the world what you've got and how good you are and how you can play."

Percy, second on the team in tackles with 58, has done plenty of that this season, even briefly knocking senior safety Jeron Johnson out of his position as the team's leading tackler.

It's a testament to Percy's hard work after he missed out on all scholarship opportunities with a season-ending injury his senior year of high school. Not even nearby Idaho State felt it had enough game evaluation to extend Percy a scholarship.

Boise State, however, invited him to walk on - and Percy jumped at the opportunity.

"I think the coaches here see potential and give guys a shot," Percy said. "And if they do well, they end up earning a scholarship."

Percy is the latest in an impressive legacy of walk-on athletes in Boise State's football program – and the redshirt sophomore's career is far from over.

Percy's rise from walk-on to starter has been meteoric, even by Boise State standards. That's mostly due in part to his ability to grasp a complex defense so quickly.

"In high school, I never wanted to get anything lower than an A – and that never happened," Percy said. "Here I try to do that as well. On defense, I try to learn the whole concept of what's going on with the entire defense. I know what everybody has to do on every play.

Right-hander Javier Vazquez finalized his $7 million, one-year deal with Florida after passing a physical. He was 10-10 with a 5.32 ERA this year in his return to the New York Yankees, getting dropped from the rotation in the second half.

Utilityman Eric Hinske stayed with the Atlanta Braves for a $1.45 million, one-year contract that includes a team option for 2012. The 33-year-old hit .256 with 11 homers and 51 RBIs last season while playing left field, first base and third base. He provides insurance for rookie first baseman Freddie THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. - Those streaks of good play from Tiger Woods keep getting a little longer.

In one of his most complete rounds of the year, Woods missed only two greens and putted for eagle four times Thursday on his way to a 7-under 65 for a one-shot lead over U.S. Open champion Graeme McDowell and Rory McIlroy in the Chevron World Challenge.

2011 CHEVROLET CAMARO CONVERTIBLE VING A NEW CHAPTER!

First Look! By Ken Chester, Jr. Motor News Media Corp.

he 21st century rebirth of the Chevrolet Camaro opened a new chapter when the 2011 Camaro Convertible premiered at the Los Angeles International Auto Show last month. Arriving in Chevrolet showrooms this February, the 2011 Camaro convertible will have a starting price of $30,000 including a $850 destination charge.

The convertible will be offered in similar model configurations as the Camaro coupe. The new Camaro convertible delivers great refinement, along with uncompromising, coupe-like driving dynamics. Its enhanced body structure helps prevent cowl or steering wheel shake, for a strong, confident feel in all driving conditions. The top has a smooth, tailored fit, with acoustical foam in the headliner that helps deliver a quiet ride with the top up.

Base power for the new Chevrolet ragtop is provided by a 3.6L Direct Injection (DI) V6 engine. Torque is communicated to the street through either a Aisin AY6 six-speed manual gearbox or a Hydra-Matic 6L50 sixspeed automatic transmission. The performance oriented SS model is equipped with a robust 6.2L V8 prime mover. Power for the V8 is transferred to the asphalt through either a Tremec TR6060 six-speed manual gearbox or a Hydra-Matic 6L80 sixspeed automatic transmission.

The Camaro's architecture was designed to accommodate a convertible model, which means customers enjoy the fun of topdown cruising with coupe-like driving dynamics. Four strategic reinforcements enhance the alreadystiff body structure to eliminate common convertible maladies of cowl and steering wheel shake. They include: a tower-to-tower brace under the hood, a transmission support reinforcement brace, underbody tunnel brace, and front and rear underbody "V" braces.

"Our goal in development was to make the convertible match the coupe as closely as possible in ride quality, handling and overall performance." said Al Oppenheiser, Camaro chief engineer. A telling example of the Camaro convertible's strength is evidenced in its suspension tuning specifically, the lack of changes between the convertible and coupe models. "To compensate for the reduced structure of an open car, engineers often will make the suspension softer, making the convertible a boulevard cruiser," said Oppenheiser. "Instead, we took the more difficult, but better path of bolstering structure rather than softening the suspension. We didn't change a strut, bushing or spring rate from the Camaro coupe."

The result is a convertible that preserves nearly all the acceleration, road-holding and performance capabilities of the Camaro coupe. Additional safety structural reinforcements are designed to improve noise and vibration characteristics, while also contributing to the elimination of cowl/steering wheel shake. They include a hydrofromed tube in the A-pillars, an inner reinforcement bracket in the windshield header, a reinforced front hinge pillar and reinforcements inside the rockers. The structural changes to the Camaro convertible body give it superior bending and torsional stiffness than its closest competitor, and better torsional stiffness than the BMW 3-Series convertible.

ABBY: DEAR boyfriend's father is very odd socially. If there is a line, he will unknowingly cross it. He has no sense of what is appropriate when it comes to personal space, and his only friends are teenagers. His wife and two grown children are constantly upset with his bizarre behavior, but dare not bring it up with him for fear of hurting his feelings.

As a health care worker, I suspect he has Asperger's syndrome, for which behavioral treatment is available. Must I "just ignore" this man's odd conduct as well? Or should I speak with my boyfriend about my suspicions in order to get his father help?

- NEW DOCTOR IN NEW ENGLAND DEAR NEW DOCTOR:

Of course you should discuss this with your boyfriend. To do so would be a kindness. Whether his father is open to therapy is not assured – but if he's intelligent, he must be aware that he doesn't fit in with his contemporaries, and he may accept help if it is offered.

 \mathbf{A} BBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: As we head toward Christmas, would you remind people to please treat others as they, themselves, would want to be treated?

I work in retail, and it's amazing how many customers are rude. They don't acknowledge us, they'll talk on their cell phone throughout transactions and become angry at us if something beyond our control goes wrong. If we were to treat them this way, they would surely file a complaint against us.

Abby, can you remind folks to remember what the reason for the season is, and to act toward others with kindness, patience and respect – no matter what?

- MINDFUL IN FAIRBANKS DEAR MINDFUL: There

something about Christmas that can turn the most angelic individuals into gremlins. And that "something" is the pressure to buy, buy, buy - accumulating debt that can't be repaid for months or even longer. Add to that, no place to park and long lines in understaffed malls, and the "joy" of the season can curdle into frustration. But readers, please hang onto your tempers even if those around you are losing theirs. The folks behind the counters are people, too, and they feel as pressured if not more so - than you.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married 40 years. Five years ago, she told me she didn't want me in our bedroom and that she is "off limits." She said she is not interested in me "that way" anymore.

Other than that, we have a great marriage and we're best friends, but I can't go on like this. I have suggested counseling, but she refuses to go. What do you think I should do?

- MISSING THE KISSING

DEAR MISSING: I think you should talk to a counselor without her. You have some important decisions to make about how you will spend the rest of your life, and it's a shame your wife does not want to be a part of the discussion and, possibly, reach a compromise. But unless both of you are happy being roommates, the current situation is unfair to you.

IF DECEMBER 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Between now and late January, you should burn the midnight oil to meet deadlines and avoid taking on extra debt loads. In January your ambitions get a boost, but it isn't the right time to start anything new like a business or major investment. You've got it all together from early February into the first half of March. That is an excellent time to take action to improve your physical surroundings or to embrace an opportunity. Make concrete plans for the future while your business acumen is at a high point then stick to the plan during April and June when alluring amorous entanglements or enticing financial gambles could distract you.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Seek educated opinions from experts before acting. You will find that professional advice will be beneficial and prevent you from making mistakes. Restrain your desire to indulge in the finer things in life.

TAURŪS (April 20-May 20): An unexpected shift in plans could yield positive results. You might stumble into a position of prominence by being at the right place at the right time. Keep in touch with your siblings and neighbors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Set an exemplary example. Someone who is not convinced by words is often swayed by actions. Adhering to financially sound principles makes others respect you and look to you for leadership.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Experience eventually evolves into enlightenment. You may receive a favor or a generous gesture from someone considered miserly. Erase your suspicions, as a bighearted person has a genuine desire to help you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Ignore extremes. What you think is as romantic as Romeo and Juliet the other person could deem to be cheesy. Avoid a tendency to go to great lengths to impress people, as the results won't be satisfacto-

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You might not find the goose if you engage in a wild goose chase. Even though you can be obsessed by something that costs more than it is worth, or pine for luxuries, you will derive some benefit from the process.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discontent with what you have, or don't have, can prompt you to take drastic measures. Rather than being "Sleepless in Seattle," you might be wide awake in Wichita or bored to tears in SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money can't buy you love. No matter how much you spend or invest, it won't guarantee harmony or success. The green-eyed monster might climb into your car and attempt to be a back-seat driver.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Something better is sure to turn up. If you have been discouraged about career, debts or relationships, you will start to see a trend in the other direction. Remain optimistic about finances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The past doesn't always dictate the future. There are times when you must have faith in things that are unseen or invisible or that otherwise defv rational description. Your loyalties will be rewarded.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What you think is true love might only be a fairy tale. This isn't the time to pursue the latest heartthrob, because it isn't affection that is motivating you. You are easily set into action by a challenge.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Consistency is commendable. When at first you don't succeed, try, try again. Persistence and determination are more likely to fabricate favorable results than sudden changes of plan or attitude.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Intellect is invisible to the man who has none."

- Arthur Schopenhauer

With support for both major suits, there is a case for South doubling one club rather than making a one-no-trump overcall. However, if North-South belongs in game, North will be able to look for any major-suit fit in comfort,

On the given auction North was certainly worth at least an invitational rebid since he appeared to have a source of tricks and an entry to them.

even after the no-trump overcall.

With so many values in his short suits, South was probably right to reject the invitation. And indeed, as the cards lay, even the no-trump partscore might have been in jeopardy.

South was allowed to bring home his two-no-trump contract. East won the opening spade lead and shifted to a small club. Declarer flew up with the ace and drove out the diamond ace. The defenders cleared clubs, but South had his eight winners.

East should have recognized the threat of dummy's diamond suit becoming established and have sacrificed his heart king at the second trick to kill dummy's only entry card. Subsequently, East must work out when to take his diamond ace — and note that West can tell his partner that he has three diamonds by playing low-high when the suit is led. East will then know to win the second diamond lead.

If East defends perfectly, he can hold declarer to seven tricks, but if he ducks the second diamond, he lets through the partscore.

ANSWER: Even if you play a new suit as forcing, if West had passed over two clubs, a two-spade call here should show a good suit but not be forcing. You have a minimum in high cards, and while it is tempting to retreat to three clubs, you do have a broken suit. Imagine partner with six spades to the Q-J, and you will see that his hand will play much better in spades. So pass two spades.
